Firſt, That he ſhould call George Fox the Father of many Nations; but what is this more than to ſay, that Men of ſeveral Nations have been begot unto Chriſt through him, Thus Paul was a Father to the Romans, Corinthians, &c. 1 Cor. 4. 15. for though ye have Ten Thouſand Inſtructors, yet ye have not many Fathers; for in Chriſt have I begotten you.

Secondly, That his Life hath reached through his Children to the Iſles afar off, to the begetting of many again unto a lively Hope. But what of all this? The Life of God is one in all; Paul lived by the Life of Chriſt, and ſo did Peter; Paul was preſent in Spirit, though abſent in Body, 1 Cor. 5. 3, 4.

Thirdly, That Generations to come ſhould call him bleſſed: But is not the Memory of the Juſt bleſſed? Prov. 10. 7, and did not God by Iſaiah Promiſe concerning Iſrael, I will make thee an Eternal Excellency, and the Joy of many Generations, Iſa. 60. 37. This belongs to G. Fox, Joſiah Coale, and every Child of God; yea, and J. Faldo too, if he were ſo good as he ſhould be.

4thly, That his Being and Habitation was in the Power of the Higheſt: And ſo it ſhould be; for that is the Habitation of every Child of God; for others dwell in the Power of the World. In ſhort, we are exhorted to ſtand faſt in the Power of Godlineſs; and we read that it was the End of the Evangelical Miniſtry to turn People from the Power of Satan unto the Power of God, which is the Power of the Higheſt.

5thly, That he ruled and governed in Righteouſneſs: This is but what Paul exhorts Timothy to do in the Church of Chriſt, as both his Epiſtles inform us at large; Every Elder, Overſeer or Paſtor in the Church of Chriſt is bound to do ſo; If J. F. can prove he doth otherwiſe, he may then charge him with uncomely walking, but not J. Coal with Blaſphemy for ſaying, that a good Man governs in Righteouſneſs.

Laſtly, That his Kingdom is eſtabliſhed in Peace, and the Increaſe thereof is without End: So is the Kingdom of the Saints of God. That they have a Kingdom and Dominion is clear from ſeveral Scriptures: It is the Father's good Pleaſure to give you a Kingdom, Luke 12. 23. Wherefore we have received a Kingdom which cannot be ſhaken, Heb. 12. 28. The Saints ſhall judge the World, 1 Cor. 6. 3. The Nature of this Kingdom is declared. Luke 17. 12. The Kingdom of God is within. John 18. 36. My Kingdom is not of this World. Rom. 14. 17. For the Kingdom of God is not Meat and Drink, but Righteouſneſs, Peace and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt. The Durableneſs of this Kingdom is laid down by Daniel, and the Time came that the Saints poſſeſſed the Kingdom, whoſe Kingdom is an Everlaſting Kingdom, Dan. 7. 22. 27.

Yet theſe ſo innocent Expreſſions, ſo ſcriptural, and therefore ſo eaſily defenſible, doth this Adverſary of ours call an Evidence of the blaſphemous unheard of Paſſages and Principles among our Miniſtry conceived, vented and allowed, which did the World know, it would make their Ears tingle, and their Hearts ake. But we will ſee if theſe Words belong not of more Right to a Paſſage, that fell from the Mouth of a Court-Chaplain, in the Golden Age of Independency, not in a private Letter, but a publick Auditory, that we may help him to a clearer Sight of his own Folks, and that his ſevere Exclamation better ſuits them than us.

After the Death of O. C. that all due Acknowledgments might be paid to his Memory for the noble Acts he did, of breaking all Oaths he made to God and Men, to advance his own Family and Intereſt, though to the Scandal of Religion and Loſs of the Cauſe, a certain Chaplain of his broke forth with this Extatical and Elegiack Aſſertion, that if that were the Word of God (meaning the Bible in his Hand) then as certainly, that bleſſed Spirit (the Protector) was with Chriſt at the Right Hand of the Father; and if he be there, what may his Family expect from him? for if he were ſo uſeful and helpful, and ſo much Good influenced from him to them, when he was in a mortal State; how much more Influence will they have from him now he is in Heaven? The Father, Son and Spirit, through him, beſtowing Gifts and Graces upon them.

I will omit naming the Party, he is dead, I give the Fact, and it ſpeaks ſo much Idolatry, that nothing Ranker can be produced of the moſt Extravagant Votaries of Rome.

God, if it pleaſeth him of his Great Mercy, give this poor Man Repentance, before that Hour overtake him in which it will be hid from his Eyes, which ends my Return to theſe hard and Evil Speeches.

I ſhall, as my Manner hath been, produce the Teſtimonies of certain conſiderable Men in defence of what we believe, concerning the Light within; and others relating to the Soul of Man, for their Sakes, whom Tradition hath abuſed, and the frequent Clamours and Invectives of many againſt us blinded, ſo as to think we are the Sink of Error and Off-ſcouring of all Hereſy; to the End that they may ſee our ſo much decry'd Doctrine, clearly and abundantly approv'd by ſuch as are of general Reputation among them.

Of the Light ſhining in Man.

Vatablus and Druſius upon Job 24. 13. They are of thoſe that rebelled againſt the Light, ſay, that it is the Light of God, and that it is God himſelf. I ſuppoſe, none will doubt that this Light ſhined in the Conſciences of thoſe that rebelled againſt it, conſequently, the Light that ſhines in the Conſcience is the Light of God, as he is the great Sun of Light.

Munſterius and Clarius upon Job, Chap. 25. 3. Upon whom doth not his Light ariſe? Aſk, Who is there in whom the Light of the Divine Wiſdom doth not ſhine?

Codurcus is of the ſame Mind, ſaying, he enlightneth all Men, referring us to John's Teſtimony.

Druſius upon the ſame Place queries, Who receiveth not his Light, and is not illuminated by his Light?

Eraſmus and Vatablus, on John 1. 9. calls it the Fountain of Light, whence the Light alſo flowed to John himſelf. Now if this Light be in Men, and of the Fountain of Light, which, ſay they, is God, I hope none will deny then the Light that ſhines in Men, is Divine Light, and conſequently God, 1 John 1. 5.

Zegerus on John 1, ver. 4, 5. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men, &c. expreſſeth himſelf thus: That Life by which all Things were made, that which is the Word, yea, which is God the Fountain of all Life, that always was and is the Light of all Men — and it ſhineth in the Darkneſs of our Souls, which the Prince of Darkneſs had darkned.

Cameron on the Place ſaith, It is to be underſtood eſpecially of that Light which is unto Salvation, and whereby it comes to paſs that we are freed from the Darkneſs of Sin and Death.

All which is to ſay, that the Light which ſhineth in Man's Heart is Divine and Saving, therefore God manifeſting himſelf in Man.

Dr. H. Moor, in his Philoſophick Cabal, Page 27, ſays, The Light purſu'd Adam, and upbraided unto him his Caſe after his Tranſgreſſion, and that it was the Divine Light; wherefore he was aſham'd, and hid himſelf at the Approach of the Divine Light, manifeſting himſelf to him to the Reprehenſion and Rebuke of him——And the Divine Light charged all this Miſery and Confuſion upon the Eating of the Forbidden Fruit, and Luſcious Dictates of his own Will———And the Divine Light ſpoke in Adam, concerning the Woman: What Work hath ſhe made here?

Thus doth he make the Light that reproves in the Conſcience to be the Divine Light, and conſequently of the Nature of God, who is the great Fountain of Divine Light; Nay, to put it out of Doubt, he reads thoſe Words, which in Geneſis ſay, It was God himſelf that reproved Adam, after the Manner before expreſſed, to wit, the Divine Light in Adam reproved him; thereby making the Divine Light in Adam and GOD to be ONE and the ſame Being.

Of the SOUL.

Juſtin Martyr brings Trypbon queſtioning thus concerning the Soul, and himſelf allowing it.

Ἡ ψυχὴ θεία καὶ ἀθανατὸς ἐστι, καὶ αὐτῆ ἐκείνου βασιλικοῦ μέρος, &c. That is, Is the Soul Divine and Immortal? Is it a Particle of that Commander himſelf, and as it ſeeth God, ſo is it alſo permitted to contain Divinity in our Mind, and thereby even now to be happy? Yea, altogether, ſaid I.

Tertullian. de Anima, Pag. 297, aſſerts the Immortality and Divinity of the Soul.

P. Fagius in Gen. 2. 7. Rabbi Nehamanides hath obſerv'd, That he that breatheth on any, contributes ſomething of his own to it; whence Chriſt our Saviour, when he would communicate the Holy Spirit to his Diſciples, he did it by breathing upon them, ſignifying that he contributed to them ſomething of his own that was Divine. The Word בשמת ſignifyeth ſomething Divine and Heavenly; ſome think שמים becauſe the Immortal Soul of Man is a certain Divine Thing come from Heaven. And the Poets call the Soul of Man a Particle of Divine Breath בשמת חיים, a Breath or Spiritus, Divine, Heavenly, Vital, Immortal, and enduring for ever. The Soul of Man Divine and Heavenly, conſiſts in a Divine and Heavenly Spirit. The Author Hiſkuni underſtands it to be an Inſpiration from the Holy Spirit of God.

Peter Martyr ſpeaks of the Soul thus in Pſalm 94. We are taught not to withdraw from the Divine Nature thoſe Things that are perfect and abſolute in us, p. 12. and in p. 122. They ſay (ſays he) בשמת doth chiefly ſignify that which is Divine and Reaſonable that God doth give unto us.

Part II.
Chap. XI.

H. Bullenger ſaith, The Soul is a Spiritual Subſtance poured of God into Man's Body; in his 4th Decad. 10 Serm.

Auguſtine ſaith, It is felt in the Life——it is unutterable,—breathed into Man's Body by God of his own Eſſence and Nature——from the ſecret Power of God.

In ſhort, Very various have been the Opinions of the Ancients concerning the Soul: Plato divided it into Two Parts; Zeno into Three; Panætius into Five or Six; Soranus into Seven; Chryſippus into Eight; Apollophanes into Nine; ſome of the Stoicks into Ten; Poſſidonius into Twelve, as Tertullian reports in his Book de Anima, p. 273. and H. Bullenger tells us, That hardly two ſay one and the ſame Thing concerning it.

Seeing then that Men of ſuch excellent Abilities, and niceſt Diſquiſitions both in Nature and Theology, rather prove their own Contradiction and Confuſion, than give us any certain Account of the Soul, what ſhe is; and that the Scripture mentions it ſo rarely and obſcurely, and that J. Faldo denies all immediate Inſpiration, (as he calls it) which is the only Way left us to underſtand it, he hath not ſhewn himſelf a Charitable Divine, but an Impious Wrangler in falling ſo heavily upon us with the opprobrious Name of Idolaters for aſſigning ſomething more of Divinity unto the Soul in it's Primitive Perfection, than his Opinion will allow us.

Chap. XII.

CHAP. XII.

Of the Reſurrection of Dead Bodies, and Eternal Recompence. Our Doctrine maintained by Scripture, Reaſon and Authorities.

IN his former Book he charged us with the Denial of the Reſurrection of the Dead, and Eternal Recompence. The Teſtimonies he brought for Proof were ſuch as render'd him very weak, or ſomething worſe, I hope they were ſufficiently diſengag'd from his Service, unto which, according to his old Cuſtom, he hath not thought fit to reply: He only takes Notice of two or three ſhort Paſſages out of ſix or ſeven Paſſages of Anſwer, on which he beſtows a few Squibs, and concludes with that Contempt and Rudeneſs no Man pretending to Religion or Humanity would have vented, eſpecially againſt a Man that he provok'd to anſwer him, by beginning to abuſe his Friends in general, and him in particular; conſidering withal, that his Profeſſion is to ſuffer, not to inſult. Strange! that my Religion and Conſcience ſhould ſubject me to ſo much Contempt, with a Man that pretends to both. But W. P. I dare ſay, had not been thus treated by J. F. could he threaten the Law, and Flant and Swagger at the Rate J. F. doth. But it is like ſuch Folk, to inſult where they may do it ſafely.

One of his Teſtimonies was this, Chriſt is the Reſurrection, to raiſe up that which Adam loſt, and to deſtroy him who deceiv'd him; So Chriſt is the Reſurrection unto Life of Body, Soul and Spirit, and ſo renews Man, Princ. pap. call. Quak. p. 34. I will not trouble my ſelf, nor ſpend my Reader's Time in tranſcribing what I ſaid in Defence of this Paſſage, as to the End he deſign'd it; Nothing can be clearer, than that this concerns Regeneration, ſo ſays J. F. himſelf, pag. 132. conſequently the Reſurrection of Dead Bodies is not concerned in it.

His ſecond Teſtimony fell from G. Whitehead in theſe Words, if we may believe him; I do not believe this Body ſhall riſe again after it is Dead. I told him of this Diſingenuous Catching, and put him in Mind of the Apoſtle's own Expreſſion that juſtifies the Saying, if it was ever ſaid——Thou Fool—Thou Soweſt not that Body that ſhall be. But unto whatever I urged for the clearing of our Friends Words and Writings from his ill Conſtructions, like an unfair, if not a fearful Adverſary, he makes no Return.

I will now ſet down what he thought fit to give us.

Rep. p. 88. Take W. P's own Words (acknowledging the Truth of my Charge) Either the Reſurrection of the Body muſt be without the Matter, or it muſt not; If it muſt, then it is not the ſame numerical Body, and ſo their proper and ſtrict Reſurrection they muſt let go; although this allows my Charge true, and ſo enough to it's Vindication; yet I ſhall anſwer P's Arguments againſt the Reſurrection, wherein he oppoſes Philoſophical Concluſions to the expreſs Doctrine of the Scriptures.

Rejoyn. If I have herein vindicated his Charge, it muſt follow that he charged us with denying the Reſurrection of the Body without any Allowance of Change as to that Matter and Corruptibility it was buried with; conſequently, That J. Faldo believes a Reſurrection of the ſame Carnal Bodies that are interred without any Alteration whatever; for that allowed, they cannot riſe properly and ſtrictly the ſame Bodies. If our rejecting this Carnal Dream of his, is that horrid Principle he charged us with denying, we have no Reaſon to be much concerned about the Succeſs. But he proceeds.

Rep. p. 88, 89. The latter Part of W. P's Dilemma is the Horn with which he puſhes at the Reſurrection, viz. If it muſt not be without that ſame groſs Matter it died with, then I affirm it cannot be incorruptible, becauſe it will carry with it that which will render it corruptible ad infinitum.

The Body muſt neceſſarily be the ſame Matter is allowed, but W. P. calls it in his Aſſumption of the ſecond Part of his Dilemma, the ſame groſs Matter, which makes his Argument Fallacious in the Form of it. But to let that paſs, it ſhall be the ſame Matter and numerical, though not of the ſame Groſneſs; and ſhall have the ſame Subſtance and Eſſential Form, though not the ſame Accidents.

Rejoyn. Is this the Scripture-Doctrine, he ſays, I oppoſe with Philoſophical Concluſions? Would he would give us but one Scripture that looks but favourably towards this Reply; I never read one yet of a Body's having the ſame Matter, and not the ſame Groſneſs, the ſame Subſtance and Eſſence, and not the ſame Accidents. For Shame; muſt our Denial of Phyſical Niceties, or rather J. Faldo's Abſurdities, be branded for horrid Doctrine. 'Tis true, in Philoſophy, that a Subſtance may loſe it's Accidents and yet remain the ſame Subſtance. Things may be diſcolour'd, yet the ſame Beings they were before: But that Matter ſhould be ſuch, and not groſs, is incongruous with Scripture and Philoſophy. Matter and Groſneſs, or Corruption, are Synonymous in Philoſophy and common Speech: But that Groſneſs, or the Subſtantial Part of any Man's Body ſhould be but an Accident, that the Accidence teaches all Boys in a Noun-Subſtantive, deſerves a Laſh at leaſt. Are Fleſh, Blood and Bones Accidents, or that of them which is groſs and corruptible an Accident? I wonder what a fearful Sort of a Noun-Subſtantive J. F. would be in caſe he were condens'd and rarified of ſuch groſs and corruptible Accidents; Indeed one would think his Head, if not all the reſt, had been near akin to them, when he writ this Piece of New Philoſophy. But this abundantly proveth upon what Foot his Reſurrection ſtandeth, if it may be ſaid to have any, or ſtand at all.

Fallacious is but one of his hard Words; for if the Body riſeth with the ſame Matter it carried to the Grave, it riſeth with groſs Matter, unleſs it carried no groſs Matter thither. Let him chuſe of the two, which to deny. But is this to Anſwer my Argument, to tell us with ſo much unwarranted Confidence, that the Body ſhall be the ſame Matter, Subſtance, and Eſſence, &c. the very Queſtion? What is this but to ſay, It ſhall be ſo, becauſe it ſhall be ſo? If he would have done any thing, he ſhould have demonſtrated how Matter can be without Groſneſs, and the moſt groſs and material Part of the Body to be but the Accidents. But he thinks he hath ſaid ſomething to the Point.

Rep. p. 89. To talk that it (the Body) cannot be incorruptible becauſe beyond the Nature of Matter it ſelf, is to talk like an Atheiſt, making Nature to be God, and not acknowledging the God of Nature.

Rejoyn. Did I dare ſport in Religion, ſcarce ever Man gave a fairer Occaſion in his Compaſs; But he practiſes it, and I abhor it. This is ſuch a riddle me, riddle me, as I never heard of before.

W. P. ſays, The Nature of Matter admits not of Incorruptibility, ergo, W. P. is an Atheiſt, ergo, he makes Nature to be God, and ergo, he acknowledges not the God of Nature.

This is the very Man, that not a Page off, reflects Ignorance upon my Philoſophy: Doubtleſs a Peerleſs Diſputant, one Way or other. May he evermore thus confute me? which is all I will ſay to ſuch ſubtle Reaſoning and lofty Argumentation in this Place. Yet he has not done.

Rep. p. 89. If God be Omnipotent, (which he is, or he is not God) he is able (as the Apoſtle ſpeaks) to ſubdue all Things to himſelf, with which Words he anſwers all Cavils from Impoſſibility in Nature.

Rejoyn. The Queſtion was not about God's Power; nor was it ſo much as any Part of the Queſtion; But whether Matter is not by Nature corruptible, and how that which is corruptible by Nature, may be by Nature incorruptible. This Scripture he urges to prove his Carnal Reſurrection, will as well prove the Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation, or any the moſt unreaſonable Conceit in the World; for it is but ſaying, All Things are poſſible with God, and God is able to ſubdue all things unto himſelf; and the Buſineſs is done at J. Faldo's Rate of arguing. But the Queſtion is not about what God can do, but what he hath done, and has declared he will do.

I know there are Impoſſibilities in Nature, which God's Omnipotency makes poſſible; but if J. Faldo doth not know that there is a Difference between Impoſſibility in Nature, and Contrariety to Nature, I now tell him there is one, and that ſo wide, as though Almighty God frequently ſupplies Nature's Want of Power, yet he rarely, if ever, acts contrary to and inconſiſtent with the Nature of his own Creatures; What is Spiritual, remains Spiritual; what is Material, Material; and what is Corruptible, Corruptible. But let us ſee how much better he acquits himſelf of another Paſſage, which he ventures to cite, and in my Opinion doth no more.

Rep. p. 89. W. P. proceeds farther in this vain Reaſoning, and wicked too, p. 202. I ſay, we cannot ſee how that which is of the Duſt ſhould be eternal, whilſt that from whence it came, is by Nature but temporal; and that which is yet moſt of all irreconcileable with Scripture and right Reaſon, is, that the Loſs and Change of Nature from Corruptible to Incorruptible, Natural to Spiritual, ſhould not make it another Body. That it is according to Scripture I have given large Proofs in my Book, to no one of which he replieth, as alſo how unreaſonable it is to call that a Reſurrection, which is not of the ſame Numerical Body.

Rejoyn. We may gueſs how well he prov'd it in his firſt Book by the Strength he hath employ'd to maintain it in his ſecond. But let all ſober Men judge if this Reply be pertinent to this Part of my Anſwer; yet he promiſed he would anſwer my Arguments. For the Scripture, it is clear, That Corruption ſhall not inherit Incorruption; neither can Fleſh and Blood inherit the Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 15. 50. Thus Annota. cert. Div. Anno 1645, upon the Place; and if he will know the true Reſurrection, let him learn to underſtand this weighty Paſſage: For we know, that if our Earthly Houſe of this Tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a Building of God, an Houſe not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens, 2 Cor. 5. 1. And I cannot but wonder, my Adverſary's Underſtanding ſhould be ſo benighted, as that contrary to expreſs Scripture, he ſhould aſſert a Reſurrection of the ſame Body that is buried, properly and ſtrictly ſo; the Apoſtle teaches us to believe that it is not that ſame Body that is ſown that ſhall be; for though we ſhall be chang'd from Mortality to Immortality, Corruption to Incorruption, 2 Cor 5. 1: and 1 Cor. 15. 37, 50. yet (Men's Bodies of) Fleſh and Blood ſhall not inherit the Kingdom of God: For the Word Reſurrection, Ἀνάστασις doth not ſtrictly imply a taking up of the ſame Numerical Body, as he would have us believe from his new found Relative IT, (firſt Book, 2d Part, p. 103.) for which Beza ſhall give him a Releaſe both from the Latin and original (Greek) there being no Word in either for (his Relative) IT, on which he and his factious Brother Hicks have ſo relatively inſiſted; Indeed as their laſt and beſt Refuge. The Text lyeth thus:

Σπείρεται σῶμα Ψυχικὸν, ἐγείρεται σῶμα πνευματικόν. Seritur corpus animale, reſuſcitatur corpus ſpirituale, i. e. A natural Body is ſown, a ſpiritual Body is raiſed; that is, They lay down a natural, and take up a ſpiritual Body, or in Lieu of a Natural, receive a ſpiritual Body; not that the Natural Body ſhall be tranſubſtantiated into a Spiritual Body, or that admitting of ſuch an Exchange, that the Spiritual is the ſame Numerical Body, that was the Natural; for ſo the Natural and Spiritual Body would be one and the ſame; but ſuppoſe J. Faldo's Relative IT to hold, I do utterly deny that this Text is concerned in the Reſurrection of Man's Carnal Body at all. I will recite it with the five following Verſes as they lie in our Engliſh Tranſlation.

It is ſown a Natural Body, it is raiſed a Spiritual Body; There is a Natural Body and there is a Spiritual Body; and ſo it is written, The firſt Man Adam was made a Living Soul, the laſt Adam was made a Quickning Spirit; howbeit, that was not firſt which is Spiritual, but that which is Natural, and afterward, that which is Spiritual; The firſt Man is of the Earth Earthy, the ſecond Adam is the Lord from Heaven; As is the Earthy, ſo are they that are Earthy; and as is the Heavenly, ſo are they alſo which are Heavenly; and as we have born the Image of the Earthy, we ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly, v. 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49. I ſay this doth not concern the Reſurrection of Carnal Bodies, but the two States of Men under the firſt and ſecond Adam, Men are ſown into the World Naturally, and ſo they are the Sons of the firſt Adam; but they are raiſed Spiritually, through him who is the Reſurrection and the Life, and ſo they are the Sons of the ſecond Adam, the Lord from Heaven, the Quickning Spirit. The very Words of the Apoſtle undeniably prove this to be the Scope; how elſe could the firſt Adam's being made a living Soul, and the ſecond Adam a Quickning Spirit, be a pertinent Inſtance to prove Natural and Spiritual Bodies; upon which follows, that the Natural was firſt, that is, the firſt Adam, and then that which is Spiritual, which is the ſecond Adam, the Quickning Spirit, the Lord from Heaven, who came to raiſe up the Sons of the firſt Adam, from their Dead to his Living, their Natural to his Spiritual Eſtate.

But perhaps it will be objected, that the 47th Verſe, The firſt Man is of the Earth Earthy, and Part of the 9th Verſe, We ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly, ſeem to imply a bodily Reſurrection; But let the whole Verſes be conſidered, and we ſhall find no ſuch Thing. The firſt Man is of the Earth Earthy, the ſecond Man is the Lord from Heaven; who ſees not that this is rather ſpoken of the Earthy-Mindedneſs, than of the Earthy Body of Adam? It was mentioned to ſhew the great Diſparity that is between the Nature and Qualification of the firſt and ſecond Adam; the following Verſe puts this Interpretation out of Doubt, as is the Earthy, ſuch are they that are Earthy; and as is the Heavenly, ſuch are they alſo that are Heavenly.

For thoſe Words, We ſhall alſo bear the Image of the Heavenly. I cannot ſee how they ſhould relate to the Reſurrection of the Carnal Bodies of Men; for the Image of the Heavenly, is a renewed State to God, through the Operation of the Spirit and Power of Chriſt, the firſt Part of the Verſe clears it; and as we have born the Image of the Earthy, we ſhall, (or rather, let us bear) the Image of the Heavenly) as Ambroſe and Theophylact read it, and ſix or ſeven Copies beſides have it) which is as much as to ſay, That as we have born the Image of the God of this World, by becoming his Children, ſo may we bear the Image of the True and Living God, by being redeemed from a vain Converſation, having our Conſciences ſprinkled from dead Works, and being born again of the incorruptible Seed, by the Word of God, which lives and abides for ever. * Had this concerned the Reſurrection in our Adverſary's Senſe, the Image would be changed wholly, (Accidents would not ſerve his Turn) therefore not the ſame Image, unleſs the Earthy could be the Heavenly Image, which were impoſſible; for we ſhould loſe our Earthly Bodies, at what Time we become the Image of the Heavenly, in this World, if this Conceit had any Truth in it, and if of the other, they to be ſure muſt never enter; for another takes Place: But as it was never underſtood ſo by any that I know of, but evermore of that Earthly Image, which came by Tranſgreſſion, and the Heavenly Image that comes in obeying the Truth by the Spirit, according to what the Apoſtle ſaith, Col. 3. 8, 9, 10. But now you alſo put off all theſe, Anger, Wrath, Blaſphemy, filthy Fornication, out of your Mouths, lye not one to another; ſeeing you have put off the old Man with his Deeds, and have put on the new Man, which is renewed in Knowledge after the Image of him that created him: So, 'till the Natural Man that is ſown, comes to die to his own Image, Will and Affections, he can never be quickned into this Glorious Image of the ſecond Adam, the quickning Spirit, who is the Lord from Heaven.

But ſuppoſe it were to be underſtood rather of Bodies than Souls, the Text may be as well tranſlated a Living as a Natural Body is ſown; yea rather ſo, for the Word is not φυσικὸν but ψυχικὸν, or Animale, that imports as much as a Soul's Body, and ſuch an one, I dare ſay, J. Faldo would not be willing to ſow, except he had a Mind to be buried alive: So Clarius both tranſlates it, and interprets it, Corpus animale accipiendum eſt, cui anima vitam præſtat ne intereat. i. e. A Souly or Living Body is that, to whom the Soul gives Life that it doth not die.

Annot. cert. Divin. anno 1645.

* If it be objected, that Adam is not mentioned as degenerated, but as created, and therefore this Interpretation will not do. I anſwer; 'tis true, he is ſaid to be made a living Soul; but firſt, this makes not for the Reſurrection of dead Bodies, and ſo far our Adverſary gets no Strength. 2dly, Though the Apoſtle begins with the firſt Adam's Creation, yet he orderly comes to the Earthly Image, that the living Soul put on by Diſobedience, which introduceth the Neceſſity of the Coming of the ſecond Adam, and his Quickning Spirit to create anew, and bring into the Image of God. So there is Adam, as ſown, and his Poſterity repreſentatively in him, and his and their Lapſe, and then the Reſtoration by him that is the Reſurrection and the Life, the ſecond Adam, the Lord from Heaven however.

But to go farther; ſuppoſe the Apoſtle treated of a Natural Change, and not only of the Spiritual State of the Soul in this Life, yet can it be extended no farther than this; when good Men lay down this Earthly Houſe, or Tabernacle of Clay, the Image that came to us from Adam's Loyns, we ſhall be cloathed upon of Immortality, received into the Building that is Eternal, in the Heavens, and be made like unto his Glorious Body, 2 Cor. 5. 1. Philip. 2. 21. We ſow a Natural, we reap a Spiritual, and we ſow not that Body which ſhall be; but God giveth it a Body as pleaſeth him, 1 Cor. 15. 37. 38.

I alſo parallelled my Adverſary's Change, yet Sameneſs, of Bodies with the Popiſh Tranſubſtantiation, ſhewing, that the Abſurdity Proteſtants Charge upon this, is equally chargeable upon that; only with this Diſtinction, that the Papiſts deny it to continue a Wafer after Conſecration; but John Faldo aſſerts, the Spiritual Body to be the ſame Carnal Body after Mutation, which is a Kind of Conſubſtantiation, and far more ridiculous: But of this he took no Notice, and his Silence is prudent: Things unanſwerable are better unmedled with, than cited and not confuted; He knows who paſs'd for wiſe Men by holding their Tongues; I wiſh that were his greateſt Fault.

I will conclude this Head with a few Teſtimonies in Defence of what we have ſaid againſt J. Faldo's Carnal Reſurrection, referring my Reader to my Chapters of the Reſurrection both againſt him in my Anſwer, and my Book againſt T. Hicks, entituled, Reaſon againſt Railing; and particularly the ſecond Part of a Diſcourſe (that we hope will ſuddenly be publiſh'd) call'd, The Chriſtian Quaker, for his fuller Satisfaction of our Scriptural Judgment, and our Adverſary's fleſhly Apprehenſion concerning the Reſurrection.

H. More, Myſt. God. Page 221, 224, 225.

Dr. H. More, the Cantabrigian Philoſopher, begins his Diſcourſe of the Reſurrection with this Cenſure of J. Faldo's. “We come now to the ſecond Particular “ propounded, the Reſurrection of the Dead, which I dare ſay the Atheiſt will “ liſten to, with more than ordinary Attention, and greedily ſuck in the Doctrine, “ provided it be ſtated with the moſt curious Circumſtances that the RIGIDEST
“ OF THEOLOGERS will deſcribe it by, that we ſhall have the ſame NUMERICAL “ Bodies, in which we lived here on Earth, and that thoſe very Bodies (the “ Mould being turned aſide) ſhall ſtart out of the Grave. This Doctrine the “ Atheiſt very dearly hugs as a Pledge in his bold Conceit of the Falſneſs and “ Vanity of all the other Articles of Religion; wherefore he fancying the Upſhot “ of Chriſtianity to be ſo groundleſs and incredible, he fairly quits himſelf of the “ Trouble of all, and yields himſelf up wholly to the Pleaſures of this preſent “ World.

To the Objection of Atheiſts, who play hard upon J. Faldo's Carnal Reſurrection.

“ Firſt, In that Canibals proper Bodies are made up of the Fleſh of other Men, “ ſo as if every one had his own, he would have never a Body in the Reſurrection.
“ Secondly, That it implies that all Men are buried, when as Myriads are drown'd
“ in the Sea, and eaten by Fiſhes.
“ Thirdly, That Men's Bodies are paſſing like Rivers, conſequently no more the “ ſame Numerical Bodies, than the Water that runs away is the ſame River; and “ upon this Score the Body of an Old Man muſt pay for the Sins of a Young Man, “ whoſe youthful Body felt the Pleaſure, and is gone.

‘ He thus anſwers out of the beſt Sort of Philoſophers, That the Soul of every ‘ Man is his individual Perſon, and that She alone it is that ſees, hears, enjoys
‘ Pleaſures, and undergoes Pain, and that the Body is not ſenſible of any Thing, no
‘ more then a Man's Doublet, when he is well Baſtinado'd; and this Anſwer (ſays he) ‘ Takes away all the firſt and laſt Cavil (he goes on) and why do Men plead for the ‘ Conſociation of the Soul's numerical Body in Reward or Puniſhment, but that they ‘ fancy the Body capable of Pleaſure and Pain; but they err, not knowing the Nature
‘ of Things; the Body being utterly incapable of all Senſe and Cogitation, as not only
‘ the Beſt Platoniſts, but alſo that excellent Philoſopher Des-Cartes hath determined,
‘ and is abundantly demonſtrated in my Treatiſe of the Immortality of the Soul. See ‘ Book 2. Chap. 2. 4, 5, 6. To the ſecond Cavil I anſwer, That the Univerſal ‘ Expreſſion of Men's Riſing out of the Grave, is but a Prophetical Scheme of Speech,

‘ the more ſtrongly to ſtrike our Senſes, as I have already intimated, in my Expoſition on 1 Cor. 15. againſt the Pſychopannachites. See Book 1. c. 6. §. 3. This Succour, ſaith he, we have againſt the Atheiſts out of Philoſophy; but I anſwer farther as concerning the Scripture it ſelf, That I dare challenge him to produce any Place of Scripture, out of which he can make it appear, that the Myſtery of the Reſurrection implies the Reſuſcitation (or raiſing up) of the ſame Numerical Body: The moſt Pregnant of all is, * Job 19. which late Interpreters are now ſo Wiſe, as not to underſtand at all of the Reſurrection: And for 1 Cor. 15, that Chapter is ſo far from aſſerting this Curioſity, that it plainly ſays, it is not the ſame Body. But the Atheiſt will ſtill hang on, and object farther, That the very Term Reſurrectio implies, that the ſame Body ſhall riſe again; for that only that falls, can be ſaid properly to riſe again. (Where let the Reader take Notice, that D. More calls John Faldo, Atheiſt, for it his Objection againſt me, Rep. p. 89.) But ſays D. More, The Anſwer will be eaſie, the Objection being grounded meerly upon a Miſtake of the Senſe of the Word, which is to be interpreted out of thoſe Higher Originals, the Greek and Hebrew, and not out of the Latin, though the Word in Latin doth not always imply an individual Reſtitution of what is gone or fallen; as in that Verſe in Ovid.

Victa tamen vinces ſubverſaq; Troja reſurges.

‘ But this, ſaith he, is not ſo near to our Purpoſe (yet it excludes the ſame Numerical Troja) Let us rather conſider the Greek Word ἀνάστασις, which Reſurrectio ſupplies in Latin, and therefore muſt be made to be of as large a Senſe as it. Now ἀνάστασις is ſo far from ſignifying (in ſome Places) the Reproduction, or Recovery of the ſame Thing that was before, that it bears no Senſe at all of Reiteration in it, as Mat. 22. 24. Καὶ ἀναστάσει σπέρμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ αὐτοῦ; and ſhall raiſe up Seed unto his Brother. Alſo Gen 7. 4. there ἐξαναστάσει, and ἀνάστημα ſignifies meerly a Living Subſtance, and therefore ἀναστασις in an Active Signification, according to this Senſe, will be nothing elſe but a giving or continuing Life and Subſtance to a Thing. The Word in the Hebrew, that anſwers to ἀνάστημα, is יקום which Tranſlators tranſlate a Living Subſtance; whence תקימה according to this Analogy, may very well bear the ſame Latitude of Senſe that תחיה they being both Words that are rendred Reſurrectio, but ſimply of themſelves only Vevification, or Erection unto Life.

Thus far D. H. More, againſt J. Faldo's Carnal Reſurrection, of whoſe Philoſophy, Scripture-Challenge, and Criticiſms, let him clear himſelf if he can. I ſhall alſo produce a Teſtimony out of T. Collier.

T. Collier's Works, Pag. 169.

‘ This Doctrine of the Reſurrection of this Body, is by ſome denied, and by others too Carnally looked upon; ſome thinking, that our Bodies of Fleſh ſhall be raiſed in the ſame Form in which they dyed; others, that they ſhall be Spiritual, yet queſtion, Whether they ſhall be of the ſame Subſtance; therefore it will be neceſſary to conſider Two Particulars for the clearing of it: Firſt, By what Power we ſhall be raiſed. Secondly, With what Bodies.

1. By what Power.

Anſw. ‘ Firſt, By the ſame Power by which Jeſus Chriſt was raiſed, which was by the Power and Spirit of God. Secondly, By the ſame Power and Spirit that the Saints are raiſed from the Spiritual Death of Sin and Self, Phil. 3. 10. Rom. 8. 11. This being a Truth, that they ſhall be raiſed by the ſame Power, it may ſomewhat direct us to the Form in which they ſhall be raiſed, which is the Second Particular; that is, In a Spiritual Form, not in a Fleſhly; for as the Spirit of Chriſt raiſeth us up in the Spirit, while we are here, ſo ſhall it raiſe up our Spirit in the Laſt Day: It is ſown a Natural Body, it is raiſed a Spiritual Body; Our vile Bodies ſhall be changed, and made like His Glorious Body.

D. H. Hammond alſo denies a proper and ſtrict Reſurrection of Bodies, and conſequently is guilty of that horrid Principle, as J. Faldo calls it, which may be ſeen at large in his Comment, 1 Cor. 15. Among other Things, he tells us of one Syneſius out of Voſſius, who was made Biſhop, notwithſtanding he refuſed to Subſcribe the Article of the Reſurrection of the Body, which ſhows how much greater Charity they had for Diſſenters, than our rigid Adverſary, whilſt a Diſſenter; for indeed it was very diverſly thought on, and very obſcurely laid down in the Beginning of the Third Century, ſays P. D. Huetius in Origenianis, p. 132.

* Note, Reader, that our Tranſlation is erroneous, Job 19. 32, whom mine Eyes ſhall behold. In the Hebrew thus, ועיני ראו ולא זר, i. e. mine Eyes have ſeen; the Septuagint ἑώρακε, videt, doth ſee, as Druſius and Cadurem obſerve.

Farrellus, Calvin's Predeceſſor at Geneva, and one to whom that Eminent Reformer writ many Loving and Reſpectful Epiſtles, uſually beginning with Clariſſime, Chariſſime, and ſuch like, did both deny the Reſurrection of the ſame Numerical Body, but defended his Opinion, and diſputed ſtrenuouſly againſt the Vulgar Notion, which plainly oppoſeth J. Faldo's, but more eſpecially * Thomas Vincent's groſs Notion of the Reſurrection, who hath taken upon him in a large Diſcourſe, called, Chriſt's Certain and Sudden Appearance to Judgment, pag. 48, 49, to write the Hiſtory of it, wherein he is ſo punctual, that he doth not only tell them what Bodies they ſhall have, but what Encounters and Dialogues are like to paſs, even to Scolding, Railing, Scratching, and I know not what beſides; ſo Vain and Ridiculous is that Author.

I will wrap up theſe Teſtimonies with two Paſſages out of [Origen in Jerom, Non eaſdem Carnes nec in ijs formis reſtituent quæ fuerunt Semina, i. e. The Seed ſhall not reſtore the ſame Fleſh, nor in the ſame Form ——— Again, Non oculis videbimus, &c. We ſhall not ſee with Eyes, hear with Ears, act with Hands, walk with Feet, in that Spiritual and Æthereal Body that is promiſed, that is, not ſubject to be toucht or ſeen with Eyes, &c. This, and much more, is urgedby Jerome, againſt John of Jeruſalem, Epiſt. cap. 8.

Theſe Teſtimonies I have produced, to ſhew the Arrogancy and Uncharitableneſs of John Faldo, in counting it an horrid Thing to reject his Carnal Notion of the Reſurrection of the Dead, and that to ſuch a Degree deſtroys (if you will believe him) all Hope of Immortality; moſt abſurdly placing Eternal Felicity therein.

The Reſurrection we own, and for the Manner of it, we are not inquiſitive; and as I told him before, ſo again, 'Becauſe theſe Things run Men into unprofitable 'Queſtions, and a Philoſophical Way of Diſcourſing, no Ways tending to God's 'Honour, nor the Soul's Profit and Comfort; I ſhall decline any farther or nicer 'Diſquiſition, and content our ſelves with this, That if we Live Holily, we ſhall Dye 'Happily; and if we walk in His Fear, we ſhall Depart in His Favour; and at being 'Unclothed of Mortality, we ſhall be Clothed on with Immortality and Eternal Life: 'For God will raiſe ſuch into Immortal Life and Glory, who truly Dye in the 'Lord. But we cannot but take Notice of the Subtilty of God's Enemy, who, by 'caſting Curious, Intricate, and Unprofitable Queſtions, about what Bodies the 'Dead ſhall riſe with, and bringing us under Vulgar Reflections by not conſenting 'thereto, endeavours to divert the Minds of People from our moſt frequent and 'fervent preſſing a Part in the Firſt Reſurrection, that only Saves from the Power 'of the Second Eternal Death; of which let my Reader receive this Friendly Warn'ing; for beſides that it is a Satanical Decoy, Thou Fool belongs to none more, than 'him, who acquieſces not with all humble and contented Submiſſion in the Good Will 'of God, whoſe Will be done in Earth as it is in Heaven.

To the Second Part of his Chapter, which concerneth our Denial of Eternal Rewards; although it deſerves not our Notice, for the Folly and Falſhood it contains; yet that he may not make my Silence to yield his Charge, and to ſhow that in every Point he behaves himſelf diſhoneſtly towards us, I ſhall conſider that Little he ſays.

Rep. p. 89. Concerning a Reward in the World to come, which I affirm they did not profeſs, W. P. oppoſes, rather becauſe he would not be thought to ſubſcribe to me, than that he believes not what I ſay to be True.

Rejoyn. This Man pretends to judge Hearts, not only without Words, but alſo contrary to Words. I did moſt expreſly tell him, That though we own the Beginning of Heaven and Hell to be in this World (who charged us with the Denial of them any where elſe) yet that they were but Earneſts of that Compleat Joy or Torment that Men ſhould receive as their Eternal Reward or Recompence hereafter: But this paſſes for Hypocriſie with J. Faldo's preſent Sort of Conſcience: And he proceeds,

* O the Angry Countenance the Wicked will have on that Day!——O the Angry Speeches!—— It may be, from Words they fall to Blows, and tear one anothers Hair, and ſpurn at one anothers Bellies, bite one anothers Fleſh, and even claw out one anothers Eyes.

Rep. p. 89. W. P. tells me, pag. 203. None ever read ſo; J. Faldo quotes no ſuch Thing; Nay, he ſays he hath ſearcht, but to no Purpoſe. My Charge was not, that they deny a Reward in another World, but that they profeſs no ſuch Thing; yet being Silent to it, hath a full Conſequence that it is none of their Belief.

Rejoyn. How could his Charge imply no ſuch Thing, who makes our Silence (upon which he grounded it) to have this full Conſequence, That a future Heaven and Hell are none of their Belief, and if not believed, denyed. However, it makes not a little for us, that he not only never read ſo, quotes no ſuch Thing, and ſays, He hath ſearcht to no Purpoſe, but that he hath made no Reply to theſe Words, he recites out of my Anſwer, which hath this full Conſequence, That for J. Faldo to charge what he has never read, what he hath ſearcht for and could not find (p. 141, 142,) and therefore could not quote upon us to our Scandal) is unworthy of any Man pretending to Common Honeſty.

But what doth he mean by our not profeſſing Eternal Rewards? Our not daring to enter into the Secret of the Almighty? What, how and by whom they are to be diſtributed? What other End have our Meetings, Writings and Sufferings? Muſt I always deny Eternal Recompence, where I do not expreſly declare I own it? How many Times in Religious Diſcourſes will J. Faldo come under the like Imputation? he cannot ſhow me one Book that was ever writ by any of us, in which it is not abundantly implied, if not moſt plainly expreſſed: Were there no ſuch Thing, it would belong to us, above all other People, to uſe the Apoſtles Words, We are of all Men moſt miſerable; but God hath fixed that Hope of Immortality and Eternal Life in our Souls, which all J. Faldo's Clamours will be too weak to ſhake. But were we darker in this Point (than whom none are clearer) we and our Books have Moſes, the Prophets and their Writings to keep us Company, who mention it but obſcurely, and not ſo frequently and unqueſtionably as we do. J. Faldo loves to hear talk of Heaven, but deſpiſes and ſhuns the Way which leads to it; and becauſe our greateſt Pains are imployed in bringing People into that ſtreight and narrow Way that leads thither, rather than by delicious Fables to preach them into an Hope of Heaven, whilſt in a State of Diſobedience to God's Holy Spirit, therefore is it that he concludes us not to believe Eternal Rewards, that is, to deny them. Never did Man catch at ſuch broken Reeds to ſave himſelf from the juſt Abhorrence of all ſober People. We deny his Carnal Reſurrection, therefore we muſt needs deny Eternal Rewards. Again, We do not believe Eternal Rewards (if he may be credited) yet he never read ſo, much leſs found it ſo by his own Confeſſion; and therefore could never quote it ſo. If we ſpeak of Salvation, unleſs we put future or eternal to it, he confines it to this World; he deals ſo with Heaven and Hell; boldly concluding, from what we ſay Men feel and know of thoſe Things here, our diſ-belief of any ſuch Thing hereafter. I told him of B. Hall and T. Brooks, their Books entituled, Heaven upon Earth, but he ſays nothing to that. In ſhort, he ſeems to have made it his Buſineſs to render us but as odious, as his Wits and worſe would let him, but let him go with this Character, no Man having charged ſo home, proved ſo weakly, and abuſed ſo groſly, as this Adverſary hath done.

Becauſe I concluded my Anſwer to the two firſt Parts of his former Book, tho' contrarily to what he did, yet in the ſame Method, he is pleaſed thus to treat me.

Rep. pag, 90, 91. See how good W. P. is at Aping my Logick. If Quakeriſm (ſo called) ſays he, be not another Diſpenſation than that of Chriſt preached and ſetled by the Apoſtles; If it deny not the Scriptures; if it deny not all nor any of the Ordinances of the Goſpel, &c. And ſo he goes on with his Negatives; by the ſame good Logick I will prove Geometry, Logick or Philoſophy to be Chriſtianity. If Geometry, &c. deny none of theſe Things, Geometry is Chriſtianity; but it doth not, therefore Chriſtianity; yea, if we will paſs to the Concrete, you may prove an Horſe or a Gooſe a Chriſtian by the ſame Argument; for they deny none of theſe Things.

Rejoyn. Take away his idle Carps and Cavils, and he would have nothing to ſay, and he rarely ſays any thing, but ſomething is againſt himſelf. Who any whit intelligent or candid, conſidering that I reſumed the Argument in oppoſite Terms, could think I intended it not to oppoſite Ends? That is, when J. Faldo tells us that we deny the Scriptures and all the Ordinances of the Goſpel, and we anſwer, that we do not deny the Scriptures or any Ordinance of the Goſpel, that we thereby do not mean, or theſe Words do not imply, an Acknowledging the Scriptures and every Ordinance of the Goſpel; for Inſtance: Suppoſe any Man charges

Part II.
Chap. XII.

J. Faldo with a Denial of the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and Baptiſm and the Supper to be Ordinances of the Goſpel, and he ſhall anſwer, I do not deny the Scriptures to be the Word of God, nor Baptiſm nor the Supper to be Ordinances of the Goſpel: Are we to conclude, that J. Faldo acknowledged the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and thoſe Ordinances to be Goſpel, no more than an Horſe or Gooſe? I will form it into an Argument for his Sake.

He that denies the Scriptures and Ordinances of the Goſpel, is no true Chriſtian; But W. P. (ſays J. Faldo) denies the Scriptures and Goſpel Ordinances; Therefore W. P. is no true Chriſtian.

I deny the Minor, or ſecond Propoſition; I query then, if I ought not to be underſtood, to own the Scripture and Goſpel Ordinances? If not, there is no Diſputation: If I ought to be ſo underſtood, was it ingenuous or juſt in him ſo to cavil? But that his Honeſty and Logick may yet more clearly appear, I will give his Reply in this plain Argument, wherein I wrong him not one Title. Whoſoever denies not the Scriptures and Goſpel Ordinances is a true Chriſtian: But an Horſe or a Gooſe doth not deny the Scriptutes and Goſpel Ordinances; Therefore an Horſe or a Gooſe, according to J. Faldo, is a true Chriſtian. I know he would fling this Abſurdity upon me; but he right well deſerves it himſelf, who would extend the Major Propoſition beyond it's Bounds; for it was not Who or Whatſoever did not deny Chriſtianity, thereby including all Sorts of Beings and Things (which made a Gap for his Horſe and his Gooſe) but if Quakers or Quakeriſm, ſo called, (of whom was the Controverſy, and who muſt either deny or own) do not deny the Scriptures, &c. it follows, they own the Scriptures, &c. for by the ſame Rule that his owning the Scriptures includes no Denial of the Scriptures, it holds è contra that our not denying of the Scriptures, includes an owning of the Scriptures, or elſe his Argument proves nothing; for if it ſtands not upon the Rule of Contraries, it will follow, that we may deny them, and yet own them; for not denying them (though there be no Medium) is with him no owning them. But what Part is not that Man fitted to act, who can argue againſt his Adverſary at ſuch a Rate as this.

W. P. denies not the Scriptures, yet for all that, he owns them no more than an Horſe or a Gooſe; and why? becauſe they do not deny them.

Next to this Injuſtice, his Logick in theſe Attempts excels. But, above all the reſt, that the firſt Piece of my Argument, as formal as any Thing can be, ſhould not eſcape this Man's Abuſe, viz. If Quakeriſm (ſo called) be not another Diſpenſation than that of Chriſt, preached and ſettled by the Apoſtles, then the ſame, ſaid I; though not another, yet not the ſame, ſays he; Let the Reader judge in this Caſe: My Adverſary, in his firſt Book, 2d Part, Page 144, begins thus: If Quakeriſm be another Diſpenſation than that of Chriſt, ſettled and preached by the Apoſtles: Now what is plainer, than that this is a Negative, as well as mine; for another Diſpenſation is not the ſame. Next doth it not imply, that Quakeriſm (ſo call'd) is not Chriſtianity, if another Diſpenſation? And why may it not follow, If it be not another Diſpenſation, that it is the ſame with that of Chriſtianity? Is not this implied as ſtrongly and clearly as his Conſequence in the contrary Propoſition? Why ſhould his Negative paſs, and mine be ſtopt; or his Conſequence hold, and not mine? He will have, That if Quakeriſm be another Diſpenſation, then not the ſame; but I muſt not be allow'd to infer, If Quakeriſm (ſo call'd) be not another Diſpenſation, it is the ſame; as if it were not alike to ſay, If Quakeriſm (ſo called) be not another Diſpenſation, then the ſame: Or thus; If Quakeriſm (ſo called) be the ſame Diſpenſation, then not another. Our Controverſy lay upon abſolute Contraries, not upon Things only indifferent, as Geometry, &c. for they are neither for, nor againſt Chriſtianity, neither do they own or deny them. But if J. Faldo will be underſtood of his Saying, The Quakers deny the Scriptures, that the Quakers do not own the Scriptures; Why ſhould not we be underſtood, when we ſay, we do not deny the Scriptures, to mean that we do own the Scriptures. His Objection is, we run upon Negatives, whoſe firſt Propoſition, of Nine Parts, hath Eight Negatives in it; unleſs, If the Quakers deny Scriptures, Ordinances, Chriſt, &c. and affect not a future Bleſſedneſs, &c. are no Negatives; or that we muſt not thereby underſtand, They do not own them; for if he ſets it not in Contradiction, but at the Diſtance of Geometry only, how can he conclude, The Quakers deny the Scriptures; yet ſo he concludes per fas, per nefas? What can be ſaid to a Man of this hardy Stamp? whom neither Logick, Reaſon, nor Modeſty can bound, yet a pretended Maſter of them all. Had I uſed him at this toyiſh, gibing and and illogical Rate, I had been an airy Sophiſter, of no more ſerious Conſcience or Religion than Punchanello; but being his Adverſary, I muſt be a Dunce, an Ignoramus, and ſomething elſe (he was ſo wiſe as to hide from us) which are the Epithets he is pleaſed out of his great Store-houſe of Ill Language to beſtow upon me at Parting. But, which is ſtranger, if any thing be ſtrange that he doth, after all the Perverſion, Addition, Diminution, Wreſting, Miſquotation, Evaſion, and School-Boy Puns and Gibes, he hath the Confidence thus to end this Chapter, and his Defence of the firſt and ſecond Part of his Book:

Thus I have honeſtly and clearly vindicated every Charge in that Part of my Book which intends the Proof of Quakeriſm to be no Chriſtianity.

How honeſtly and how clearly he hath vindicated his Charges belongs not to either of us to judge, whatever we think; but is left with every impartial Reader to determine; though, if it be as he ſaith, I am yet to learn what an Honeſt and clear Vindication meaneth; for, according to that Senſe, I have had of him through this whole Controverſy, and the moſt upright Obſervation I could make of his Management, it ſeems to me a moral Impoſſibility that he ſhould not be conſcious to himſelf, of exhibiting Charges he hath not prov'd; of abuſing our Writings to endeavour it; of declining the Strength of our Anſwers, and vilifying of our Perſons for writing them. To the Righteous God I recommend the whole, and according to our Truth and Honeſty in this Matter, may we receive the Sentence of Well or Ill done, &c. I hope my Conſcience will abide the Search; for God, that knoweth all Hearts, is Witneſs, I have not the leaſt Guilt upon me for my Concern and Carriage in this Affair, having done to him, as I would all Men ſhould do unto me, and therein fulfilled the Royal Law.

CHAP. XIII.

Chap. XIII

My Adverſary declines meddling with my Appendix. His Diſingenuity great. His Perverſions and Wreſtings about his Key, pretending to open our Words, Detected.

WE are now come to his Two and Twentieth and laſt Chapter, which for his Truth, Reaſon, Language and Carriage towards me, is an exact Repreſentation of his intire Reply, which will not be hard for any ſerious Reader to obſerve, and make that uſe of it which may for ever diſcard J. Faldo in his Opinion from any future Pretence to honeſty in Writing, till he hath publickly recanted this; but becauſe I always deſire he ſhould ſpeak for himſelf, be pleaſed to hear him this.

Reply, Pag. 91. In W. P*'s Anſwer to the third Part of my Book, he ſays nothing to the Chapter of the Characters of Apoſtolical Perſons and Inſpirations, wherein (it conſiſting of Twenty four Pages) I agitated at large theſe Points, to the Overthrow of their pretended Apoſtolical Miniſtry, and Inſpirations of the ſame kind with theirs, common to all Believers, on which* Quakeriſm is founded.

Rejoyn. This Complaint might have been very allowable in caſe I had not already ſufficiently conſidered and anſwered whatſoever was of Moment in thoſe Twenty Four Pages under the Head of Inſpiration; and that himſelf had not been ſo ſhamefully unjuſt, as after having attackt the firſt Part of my Book, entituled, The Spirit of Truth Vindicated, with Thirty Four Pages, and I replied in an intire Appendix of Thirty Pages, he had not willfully neglected to give us one Word of Rejoynder: I beſeech my Reader to take Notice of this one great Piece of Diſingenuity; for if I muſt be chid, becauſe I did not unneceſſarily repeat Controverſy, having already defended our Doctrine in this Point, under the Head of Inſpiration and Goſpel-Miniſtry, What ſhall be ſaid to him, that unprovokedly fell foul of my fore-named Book, and after I had replied in it's Defence takes no more Notice, than if he were wholly unconcerned in any ſuch Attempts? He muſt either think what he writ irrefutable or indefenſible; If the firſt, then he need not have replied at all, ſince I am perſwaded he believes one Part of what he writ to be as irrefutable as the other: if becauſe indefenſible, he is to be excuſed, yet deſervedly to be blamed for finding that Fault with others which he is much more guilty of himſelf. To ſay nothing of his Pretence of Anſwering Two Hundred Fifty Four Pages within the Compaſs of Ninety Six, and that Skip he makes over my whole Key, conſiſting of about half a ſcore Pages, added for the Opening our true Meaning from that perverted Senſe, ignorant and malicious Perſons have put upon our Principles: And laſtly, his Vindication of his Key in not a page and an half againſt Six or Seven Pages of my Anſwer, wherein, I hope, it was proved abundantly defective. But let us hear what he ſays to remedy thoſe defects I therein charged upon it.

Reply, Pag. 92. In my Key of Two Hundred and Fifty Particulars, he excepts againſt Ten; Five of which he farther explains, the other Five he oppoſes.

Rejoyn. This looks unfair on my Part, till my Reader be informed, that not one of theſe Two Hundred and Fifty Particulars had ſo much as the Name of Man or Book, conſequently no Page, how to find and read any of thoſe Things he affirms to be our Senſe or Meaning, which is enough to diſcredit an Honeſter Writer than J. Faldo; ſo that what I did, was more than could be juſtly expected, much leſs challenged from me: However, I took Ten of the moſt ſuſpicious. If he be diſproved in thoſe, there is great Reaſon to ſuſpect him about the Reſt, till he hath produced more unqueſtionable Evidence. Of theſe he tells us, I explain one Five, and oppoſe the other, Let us hear how he gives my Oppoſition, and what is his Replication.

Reply. The firſt of theſe is in pag. 247. The Will of the Fleſh, i. e. All that is choſen by Man, though he be thereto diſpoſed by the Will of God revealed in the Scriptures. This W. P. calls Falſe, and an Abominable and Notorious Untruth. I have proved at large their calling all Things of a Religious Nature by that Name which are not by Immediate Inſpiration: Although the Scriptures have Precepts and Examples, commanding and preſcribing them.

Rejoyn. If this be not to beg the Queſtion, no Man ever did it ſince the World was. He ſays, he hath proved it at large: And I ſay, I have refuted it at large; and what ſays he to that? No more than this, I have proved it at large, &c. Doth this Man look like an able Diſputant? That he is not an honeſt one, take my Anſwer, by him omitted, with his own Words faithfully cited.

J. F. Page 69. The Will of the Fleſh, i. e. All that is choſen by Man, though he be thereto diſpoſed by the Will of God revealed in the Scripture.

'W. P. This is Falſe; Many things may be and are daily choſen by Man, that is 'not in the Will of the Fleſh, nor by his own Will, much leſs when any ſhould 'be diſpoſed thereto by the Will of God revealed in the Scripture: An Abominable Untruth, and ſo Notorious, that I need ſay no more; only challenge him 'to produce any of us (that is, any of our Sayings or Writings) in Proof of his 'Expoſition, if he can; otherwiſe he hath ſlandered Us and Our Principles: For 'the Will of the Fleſh, is that which is quite contrary to God, and inconſiſtent with 'the Good of the Creature.

How well he hath acquitted himſelf in Point of Honeſty, as well as Ability, firſt, in ſo maiming my Anſwer; and next, in ſaying nothing to it, is ſtill referred to my Reader's Judgment, and ſo we proceed.

Reply, Pag. 92. The ſecond is, Pag. 249. Chriſt the Offering, i. e. the Light within. W. P. calls this no Quakers Expreſſion; that it is, take this Proof. We believe that Chriſt in us doth offer himſelf up a Living Sacrifice to God for us, Smith. Cat. Page 64.

Rejoyn. I ſtill ſay, it is no Quaker's Expreſſion; Though the Light that ſhineth in our Hearts be Chriſt the true Light: But that which I moſt inſiſted on, he hath (as he uſeth to do) quite left out; viz. for he would by this inſinuate, that we deny Chriſt to be an Offering as in the Fleſh, and that Body then offered up to be concerned in our Belief of the Offering; but I do declare it to have been an Holy Offering, and ſuch an one too, as was to be once for all; therefore let none receive his Abuſe of us for our Faith.

He that hath half an Eye may ſee, how poorly and meanly he hath ſhifted off the Weight of my Anſwer. Again, Reply, pag. 92. The third, Men-Pleaſers. Senſe. They who comply with Men though in Things not only Lawful, but alſo to Edification. This W. P. calls an arrant Lye; but the ground is, provided J. F. meaneth by Lawful, unto Edification, what we do. I am not ſo ſilly to put ſuch Bonds on the Truth.

Indeed I never took him to be ſo Silly as Miſchievous in the Matter, not to uſe his own Phraſe more—— than Ignoramus; for inſtead of putting Bonds on the Truth, he hath broken all Bonds of Truth; he pretends to give our Senſe of Men-Pleaſers, and ſubſtitutes his own in the room of it; and when we tell him that if he means by Lawful and to Edification, what we do, he belies us; he confidently replies, I am not ſo ſilly to put ſuch Bonds on the Truth; as if in rendring our Senſe of Words, he were not bound to keep to our Senſe of them; how is it our Senſe, if it be his, and not ours; and how truly ours, if it be putting Bonds on the Truth to render ours truly? But the Man's preſent Hardineſs is beyond wondring at. To the next.

Reply, page 92. Traditions of Men, i. e. The Scriptures or written Word, pag. 250. To this W. P. adds; But to ſay, they are the Traditions of Men, in the ſenſe Chriſt forbad the Phariſaical Religion, God forbid: I had rather my Tongue were cut out of my Head. O baſe Man, to abuſe an Innocent People thus groſly. I have already proved the Phraſe to be the Quakers, viz. Smith's and Naylor's.

Rejoyn. This anſwers it ſelf: If he had taken off the Force of my Words, I might have beſtowed a Rejoynder upon him; in the mean Time, I have diſproved his pretended Proof, where I met with it; and what I find here, is but a meer begging of the Queſtion. The fifth and laſt Particular he thus endeavours to vindicate, is this.

Reply, page 93. The Vail is over them, pag. 251. Their Senſe I give of this, he preſents the greater half of (which explains the other) by an &c. to blind the Reader, and make the Quakers believe, I deſerve the Imputations of Malice and wicked Man, which it ſeems he is reſolved aforehand to beſtow on me.

Rejoyn. The Man is weary of his Work, as we may ſee, by the great haſte he makes over every Particular. No Man living that hath not read both our Books can make any Senſe of this Hodge-Podge Section; that ever any Man ſhould touch with Religious Controverſy, that is ſo viſibly defective in it! My Anſwer ſhall be my Rejoynder: for, ſure I am, he hath overlookt it, and therefore yet to be replied to.

J. F. pag. 89. The vail is over them, that is ſays J. Faldo, the Belief of the Man Chriſt Jeſus, which was of our Nature to be the Chriſt, &c. pag. 251, 252.

‘ W. P. Let this be the laſt (though ſeveral more might be obſerved) which at ‘ this Time ſhall be conſidered, in which we ſhall ſee that J. Faldo has done like ‘ himſelf, and the Man we have all along taken him to be. The Vail is over them,
‘ it is a Scripture-Phraſe, 2 Cor. 3. 15. uſed by the Apoſtle to expreſs the Dark‘ neſs and Ignorance that to that Time remained over the Underſtandings of the ‘ Jews in reading the Law; and this Vail he makes us to interpret after this groſs
‘ and abſurd Manner; namely, that the Vail is the Man Chriſt. Wicked Man!
‘ Did ever Quaker ſo irreverently expreſs himſelf? Give us his Name, or tell us in ‘ what Book we may find it. What greater Malice couldſt thou have ſhown, than ‘ thus unjuſtly to pervert the Scripture in our Name? abuſing both, As if, becauſe
‘ Chriſt's Fleſh is called a Vail, and the Ignorance of the Jews a Vail, that there-
‘ ſecond Senſe; as if the Way to have the Vail rent, were to deny the Man Chriſt ‘ Jeſus.

All this my Adverſary thought fit to conceal, leſt his tranſcribing it unto his Reply, would have made that Diſcovery of his Baſeneſs, which he ſhould never have been able by all his Shifts to palliate. I think I did not nick-name this Chapter, when I called it a Repreſentation of his whole Reply: He ends as he began, with Squibs, Puns, Evaſions and Ill Language; for unleſs the Goodneſs of a Book be to be meaſured by the Paint of a Title-Page, or bare Writing reputed Replying, he might with more Senſe and Reaſon have called it Froth, Folly and Fiction, than a Religious Vindication, &c. No Man I ever read of hath exceeded the Bounds of Truth by obtruding Falſhoods, and wandred from the Decorum of a fair Adverſary, by unfair Citations and obvious Wreſtings, or betaken himſelf for Sanctuary to ſuch ſilly Shifts, and School-boy Jeers, at the rate this Adverſary hath done: And I have no Reaſon to Doubt of others being of the ſame Mind, ſince the World is not ſo deſtitute of Underſtanding, as to be cheated with his hocus-pocus Tricks, to take Tin for Silver, or Copper for Gold, or Froth for Subſtance, or Inventions for Texts, or Wreſtings for Meanings, or Gibes and Taunts for pertinent Replies. I have hitherto abundantly ſatisfied my ſelf concerning him, and I hope all that read me, both of him and his Eſſays againſt the People called Quakers: If not, it ought not to be charged upon me as wanting good Will to do it: I was never more ſedulous, and I think never more faithful in any ſuch Affair. And to the End my frequent Complaint of his unfair Dealing may be farther juſtified and confirmed, and his Deportment in the whole Controverſy more exactly related, I intreat my Reader to conſider what I have now to tell him.

Chap. XIV.

CHAP. XIV.

Of Reflections on Perſons and Things.

IF we will believe J. Faldo in his own behalf, he abhors that ſordid Way of Writing, which ſome Practiſe, of Reflecting, Nick-Naming, giving Ill-Language, &c. either to his Adverſary or his Doctrine. But as it fares with moſt Men, they condemn in others what they indnlge in themſelves; ſo truly, No Adverſary in the midſt of all his ſevere Cenſures of that unchriſtian Way of procedure, hath made more bold with his Reader, nor fallen more fouly upon his Adverſary, yea, Perſons unconcerned, than J. Faldo hath done.

We were as quiet, as Men that had ſcarcely known there was ſuch a Perſon in the World, when our Peace was diſturbed by a great Book, entituled with no more Modeſty nor Mercy, than in plain Terms, Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity. In this he chargeth us at once with whatever all our Adverſaries put together had from Time to Time inſiſted upon to render us Odious; almoſt every Charge as ſcandalous and impious as rankeſt Blaſphemy; and both rendred and called ſo (for ought I know) more than Twenty Times in that Diſcourſe. This Book I thought I anſwered with more Moderation than either it deſerved, or the Law of Retaliation would have granted: At the latter-end of it, I ran up a few of his many unworthy Reflections, Jeers and Scoffs together, that I might the better help my Reader to a true Reliſh of our Adverſary's Spirit. He ſays nothing to them, which makes me conclude, I have not injured him, nor in one Word done him wrong; for had I, without doubt he had not paſt over my Collection with ſo deep Silence. I think it fit to tranſcribe them, that my Reader may ſee what Provocations I met with to draw Rebukes from me.

'Horrid Impoſture; Ditch of Groſſeſt Deluſion; Subverting Chriſtianity; Their 'Feigned Chriſt; Folly, Madneſs; it began in Blaſphemies againſt Chriſt; Gratifying Pride, Idleneſs, Giddineſs; In Profeſſors Prophane, Vanity, Folly, Nonſenſe, Error: Whether it ſmell more of the Fox or the Gooſe; Impoſture; Babble, Blockiſh Perſon; Quakeriſm entered the World as if Satan broke Looſe, and 'Poſſeſſions by Satan were to make way and fit Souls for the Quakers Spirit; O the 'Hell Dark Expreſſions of the Quakers Teachers! What bitter Curſes and Execrations! Diſmal Howling; Horrible Roaring; Blaſphemy; Wretch; Vain Fictions; Quakers Glow-worm; Deck their Idol; Real Non-ſenſe; But 'tis Pity 'not to laſh a little; Idiots, Stark Blind, Steel Hard; Your Crooked, Unholy 'Principles; Their Light grows Wiſer and Wiſer; Opium of Quakeriſm; The 'Quakers Divine Spirit Dumb; Refreſhments at Quakers Meetings, ſo there is at 'Puppet-Plays; Impudent Fore-heads; Non-ſuch Ignorance; Proud, Dreaming, 'Intolerable Notions; Ignorance and Deluſion; Out-ſtrip all in the Crooked 'Way; Blaſphemers of the Lord of Life and Glory; Surely God has given them 'up for their Pride, Giddineſs, or Idle Ignorance, and that in Juſtice; And the Devil hath blinded their Minds with a Witneſs; Horrible Abomination; Groſs 'and Dark Conceits; The Rankneſs of Quakeriſm.

And though I have carefully avoided his ill Example, yet ſuch is my Unhappineſs, that my Reproofs are ſtiled Railing; and Religious Cenſures, given forth from a grieved Spirit, counted Ill-Language. But what ſeems yet moſt inſufferable, this very Man, that calls every ſober Reprehenſion by an Hard Name, is moſt profuſe in his black Epithets upon us; as if notwithſtanding the Circumſtances he moſtly confeſſeth he is under in the World, as his Complaints tell us (which is no Fault laid to his Charge) he thinks it more intolerable that we ſhould cenſure his Domineering, Scoffing Strain, againſt an intire People, be they what they will in Reputation, Merit, Honeſty or Acceptance among Men, than that he ſhould uſe it. What Blindneſs hath ſeized him, that he ſhould not ſee this a Fault in himſelf? Is he fit to reprove, who out-does the Reproved in that for which the Reproof is given?

But before I reflect his Miſcarriages of this Nature upon him, he hath ſomething to ſay to me. It ſeems I have not behav'd my ſelf towards him with that Subjection to his unprovok'd Abuſes, which he thought became me to a Man of his Quality. Let us hear what hath ſtumbled him, and how patiently this pretended Enemy to Perſonal Reflections takes it. The firſt is this.

I happened to let fall in my Anſwer, not material to the Point, this, but as a paſſant Expreſſion, and ſo intended: I find him more in Words than Matter, and I ſuppoſe more are of that Mind; or elſe what means his Pains to be made waſt Paper of already; Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity hath exchanged the Bookſellers Stall for the Tobacco-Shops.

This ſo harmleſs and true Saying hath given him great Offence, at leaſt he hath taken it; what had become of me, had I been either as petulant or vain-glorious? I will give his Words, that my Reader may judge if the Man have any Vanity. After this Debate of ſerious Matter; Now, Reader (ſays he) I am come to a Paſſage which makes me conclude it's Author deſperate.

As if all the Error and Blaſphemy he laid at my Door in his foregoing five Chapters had been Toys and Trifles, but dark Conjectures and meer Gueſſes to this great Diſcrimen of my deſperate Condition. O monſtrous Vanity of Vanities! But he goes on.

A Paſſage (ſays he) that renders W. P. careleſs how juſtly odious he becomes with Thouſands, ſo he may but leſſen the Reputation of my Book, Better and better, or worſe and worſe, which my Reader will. Doth my Reputation depend upon the Good-liking of J. Faldo's Ungodly Charges, propt with falſe Citations, Perverſions, &c? I am miſerable then. No Head, not empty, would make ſo great a Sound. It ſeems his Books have Thouſands of Votaries: Hundreds are a Number too diminutive to vow Maintenance to his Labours. Theſe Words ſhow the great Vanity of the Author, or the Debility of his Cauſe, that muſt have whole Regiments of Auxiliaries to his Protection, chuſe him whether. But that he may leave no part of his Picture undrawn by his own Hand; for who can (or will) do it ſo well? hear him yet farther.

The Acceptation my Book hath had in the World becomes not me to expreſs.

A clever Way to tell us both his Book's Acceptance, and his own Modeſty: Yet he ſo loves the Theme he can't give over.

The ſecond Impreſſion of above 1250 may be abroad e're this comes to Hand.

And how ſhould they chuſe, ſince the New Cabal, contriv'd to over-throw the Quakers, have taken a way of packing ſuch Books into the Country as a new ſort of Manufacture, where long before the ſecond Impreſſion came out, in ſeveral Parts of England, they lay ſo heavy upon hand by the peaceable Diſpoſition of both Preachers and Hearers, that (as I have been credibly informed) ſome better affected to ſuch Work than ordinary, have gone from Houſe to Houſe, offering, yea, preſſing them upon the People, as if it had been an Alms to buy them. Yet he goes on ſtill.

I cannot yet find by enquiring that any of W. P's Anſwers to my Book have come to the Preferment to adventure that Paſſage.

It ſeems he hath enquired; Strange Vanity! But what then? Therefore unworthy? So was W. Tindal's then in Henry the Eighth's Days; H. Barrow in Q. Elizabeth's; from whom deſcended thoſe that are undeſervedly called his Followers; I mean, ſuch Independents as J. Faldo is become. Had it been a good Argument againſt Luther's Books, that they were not ſold at Rome? Or what Preferment had it been to deſpiſed Truth to lie upon the ſame Stall by Error and Impoſture? It's well our Books eſcape Burning, and our ſelves too, amidſt ſuch ill Neighbours as J. F. Conveniency to diſpoſe of our Defences we like, and ſometimes want. His Attempt is a Licenſe to lye upon any Stall without fearing a Search: But he ſhould not inſult over that low Condition God is pleaſed to exerciſe us in: Though we think it no Preferment to our Books to keep Company with J. Faldo's at any Time; nor ſhould we deſire it, but to diſprove their black Charges.

But as if I had committed the moſt enormous of all Crimes, in ſaying, That his Book had exchanged the Book-ſeller's Stall for the Tobacco-ſhops, he cautions me, not to paſs yet a while by the Book-ſellers Shops, for fear they ſhould point at me, and do ſomething elſe for a Non-ſuch.

I know not what, unleſs he had ſome private Intelligence, that they intended to break my Head with ſome of his Books, to prove to me by the Experience of Battery, that they had not left the Book-ſeller's Stall.

But this is not all; he tells me on this only Occaſion, I have not the Fear of God before mine Eyes; The Words of my Mouth are Iniquity and Deceit; That I left off to be wiſe and to do good; that I ſet my ſelf in a Way that is not good, and abhor not Evil, Pſal. 36. 2, 3, 4.

Upon this Text he preaches my Infamy and Diſgrace, but with an Abuſe to the Text as well as to me, and all for that only Paſſage. Nay, the Book-ſellers, J. Robinſon at the Sign of the Golden Lyon in Paul's-Yard, and R. Boulter at the Sign of the Turks-Head in Cornhill, are brought forth with a Fearful Whereas againſt W. P. upon no other ſcore then to buoy up the Book's Sale and the Author's Credit; And by this pair of Book-ſellers, whom I know not (and I ſcarcely think ever heard of, eſpecially the latter) much leſs had I ever harmed them, am I call'd all to naught, unleſs Notorious, Falſe, Diſhoneſt, Impudent, Brazen-faced Detractor are no ſuch Thing, and this in one Page, and that in a Certificate too, as if they had not been giving meer Teſtimony but Sentence, and that after a municipal Procedure of a Billingſ-gate Judicature. But I forgive them; beſides, the Words call neither of them Author.

Two Things I ſhall obſerve: Firſt, That his Book has had general Acceptance by Learned Divines, both of Conformiſts and Non-conformiſts. Secondly, That we have endeavoured to prevent the Sale of J. F's Book.

To the firſt I anſwer, their Learned Divines I know not; and how ſhould I, their Names are concealed? But granting what theſe Men ſay, it proves nothing: I could produce the Letters of Men, of known Honour, Learning and Quality, not only in England, but abroad in the World, to Balance the Scale, who condemned his Enterprize of Weakneſs, Uncharitableneſs and Wickedneſs; heartily embracing the Anſwer as a Check but due to his Exorbitances. But let it be as it will in the Eſteem of Men; we the poor traduced Quakers have a farther Appeal and expect an higher Judgment: In the mean Time, we reſt in good Providence, and deſire to purſue our Chriſtian Duty.

In the ſecond Paſſage I do aver, they have wronged us; for we never endeavoured any ſuch Thing as to prevent the Sale of our Adverſaries Book, therefore in ſo many Words they have certified an abſolute Untruth; which ill becomes Men pretending to Conſcience, as the latter of them doth, going under the Name (as I take it) of an Anabaptiſt, but I ſuppoſe ſomewhat Becalmed.

This I thought to have prefixt in Form of a Certificate under ſeveral Hands, after their Example; but I had more Regard to the Weight and Gravity of my Diſcourſe, than to ſeem ſo concerned for my Reputation about a very Trifle, wherein, had they what they deſire, J. F's Book would appear never the leſs impious, nor my Anſwer one Jot leſs formidable; and ſo I end with him upon this Score.

His next Diſturbance at me, is in pag. 43, 44, 45. of his Reply; on this Occaſion: He would needs turn Hangman to us in his former Book, ſaying, That now he was come to the higheſt Round of the Ladder, I preſume, in order to execute us: But I was ſo modeſt, as to uſe no Word ſo groſs to him, only inverted the Alluſion, and turned his Simile back upon him, thus: I will not ſay for what an Army-Chaplain might deſerve to be ſo highly exalted; but ſince his eager Purſuit after an innocent People, hath brought him actually thither, and it falls to my Share to be his Executioner, I ſhall take all the Care I can, to acquit my ſelf well of my Employment. At this he rages beyond meaſure, though he be only entangled in a Rope of his own providing. He muſt needs be medling with Ladders, and truſſing up the poor Quakers and their Principles, without all Civility, Mercy or Juſtice; and becauſe I improved his own Similitude to the Diſpatch of his Cauſe, that he had deſigned to illuſtrate the Execution of us and ours by; He, as one beſide himſelf, calls me Hangman, Bungler, infallible Stager, and in plain Terms Fool. But this is little to what is behind; for it ſeems, I am not enough for him to wreak his Diſpleaſure upon, and therefore of all others my deceaſed Father, whoſe Grave with Heathens had been a Guard from all Reflections (eſpecially, when as unconcerned as what was never born, in the Controverſy) muſt be fetcht up to anſwer for his Sons Miſcarriage (if ſuch had been) his Words are theſe.

But why an Army-Chaplain deſerves that Preferment more than a military Sea-Captain, his Father's Character.

Inſolence and Pride! for ſhame, John Faldo, ſhall the moſt barbarous Nations make it a ſtanding Axiom, De Mortuis nil niſi bonum; And doth J. Faldo, a Nonconforming Miniſter, that ſhould be more humble from his Profeſſion and Meanneſs, break that laudable Saying by De mortuis nil niſi malum. Strange! But why my Father of all others? Did he ever wrong him? But had he; where is J. Faldo's Chriſtianity in the Point? Is this the Way to prove Quakeriſm none? One would have thought I had been enough to ſatiate the revengeful Stomach of this Canibal, bal, without haling him out of his Grave, whom Death hath freed from the Concerns of the Living, and the Earth intombed out of their Sight.

What kind of Sea-Captain he was, becomes not me to tell, nor need I; the World knows it: Neither ſhall I ſtomach his Compariſon or diminutive Epithets. His Queſtion I therefore refuſe to anſwer, becauſe every obſerving Perſon may eaſily ſatisfy himſelf, as to the vaſt Diſparity that is between the Station and Service of every ſuch one and an Army-Chaplain; for it is but to diſtinguiſh between the Preſervation of a Man's Country from the Rapes and Spoils of Foreigners, and the ruining it by turning Incendiary, kindling Animoſities, and blowing them into Domeſtick Wars, and the Queſtion is fully anſwered. However, I would have J. F. be more careful how he meddles with the Men of that Element; for if they ſhould know of his baſe Reflections and Compariſons, they would, I aſſure him, do more than point at him, as he ſaid of his Bookſellers to me.

The next Paſſages in my Anſwer which trouble him not a little, are theſe two, that I ſhould ſay to theſe Words, poor Non-Conformiſts; 'but why poor Nonconformiſts, after all their preach'd up Battles, Spoils, Plunders, Sacrileges, Decimations, &c. as Rich and Covetous as ever. Again, Upon the Deſcription of the True Miniſtry, I ſaid, 'No, they are true Goſpel-Miniſters, and their Feet truly beautiful, whoſe Goſpel is Peace on Earth, and Good-will towards Men; and not Garments rolled in the Blood of Kings and Princes, Rulers and People. No Worldly Armies, Battles, Spoils, Sequeſtrations, Decimations, &c. in which J. Faldo and his poor Non-conforming Miniſters have had their Hands, &c. p. 52, 53, 62.

This may perhaps ſound harſh; but I ſhall eaſily take that off by declaring the Occaſion. My Adverſary muſt needs reflect upon me, and ſome other of my Friends, for our Eſtates, Houſes, and plentiful Subſiſtences; and having firſt abuſed us by making it neceſſary to a True Miniſter after our Principle, to have no Houſe, jeers at our Poverty, and envies our Proſperity; bidding ſuch as had no dwelling Places, to repair to William Penn, and ſuch other Quakers, for an Anſwer, who have large Poſſeſſions and brave Habitations, ſuch as few Miniſters, eſpecially the poor Non-conformiſts enjoy. Upon this I depainted what ſome of their Miniſtry had been, and what it is; not varying one Tittle from the true Character of them, ſo far as I know it. What had he to do with our Livings? What with our Miniſtry? Shall he rant uncontroulably? Has he a Privilege to make us Fools and Knaves at Pleaſure without Contradiction? Is there no Superſedeas to ſuch Unchriſtian Procedure? We muſt be abuſed if Poor, and jeered or envied if Rich; and that by a Man, who is one of that Tribe which hath given the ſignalleſt Proof of a falſe Miniſtry, by the great Degeneracy of the late Times, whereinto they were not only fallen, but have been the Ring-leaders unto others corrupted by it. But I beſeech my Reader to conſider his Reply to what he thus drew upon his own Head.

1. That my Accuſations are falſe, which is ſooner ſaid than prov'd; twenty Years have made them good.

2. That I have, like an accurſed Ham, diſcover'd by Father's Nakedneſs. No ſuch Matter, J. Faldo, That Fig-leaf will not cover thine. My Father was no Domeſtick Incendiary, much leſs an Army-Chaplain or Parſon; of ſuch I ſpoke. He complotted none of thoſe Tragedies, nor was his Eſtate advanc'd by any of the conſequential Gains: His Family never ſaw Two-pence of any Sequeſtration or Decimation-Money, nor poſſeſt one Foot of King's, Queen's, or Church-Lands, though perhaps ſome honeſt Men did. Accuſe that can, provided he will prove, or elſe he had better hold his Tongue. I can ſay, and that with Sincerity to God and Man, that after twenty five Years of publick and very eminent Sea and Land Employs (requiring much Time, Prudence, Care, Faithfulneſs, Government) and the many great Opportunities he had to ſwell his Eſtate to a very conſiderable Bulk, and that as laudably as any publick Officers raiſe themſelves, he departed this World with a moſt clear Conſcience in all thoſe Reſpects, leaving not half that which many London Shop-keepers arrive at by their private Acquiſitions. Baſe then, and unworthy with a Witneſs, to bring him or me into your Society; We are unconcern'd in thoſe Enormities, for which I juſtly made the Reflection.

3. But he ſays, that I ſpit Defiance againſt the King's Gracious Laws, and Act of Oblivion; that if I be diſpleaſed, I will call for Fire from Heaven to devour the whole Stock and Kindred of one that offends me.

1673. Part II. Chap. XIV.

God forbid, and forgive him. I would rather die my ſelf than bring any ſuch Damage upon any of you: But you are to be put in Mind of old Times, to humble you; Some of you perk up ſo high, as if none were fit Guides for Heaven but your ſelves; would ſit Inquiſitors upon other Men's Religion without Contradiction, and yet have given ſuch eminent Proofs of your Degeneracy, freſh in our Memory. I have not ſaid half ſo much as John Cann, the old Independent Paſtor, left behind him in his little Treatiſe, called, The Time of finding, which is an entire Teſtimony againſt your Apoſtacy, for ſo the old Man calls it, and the ſecond ſince his Day, preferring the worſt of the former Biſhops before you. See his Epiſt. Dedicat. Moſt ſharp are his Reprehenſions of you in the Diſcourſe it ſelf.

To talk of the Act of Oblivion, is not ſo pertinent, as to live that humble Life your former Miſcarriages ſhould in very Prudence engage you to. This were a better Uſe of the King's Clemency, than to trouble the World with ſuch unneceſſary Conteſts, eſpecially when they expoſe other more harmleſs Diſſenters to the Severity of the miſinformed Magiſtrate, and rude Vulgar, and prejudice the Minds of ſober Inquirers againſt them: This is to be as bad out of Power, as you were in it.

Neither would I be underſtood to have ſpoken of all Sorts of Non-conformiſts, (having always been one my ſelf and a true Lover of the Honeſt of them) which J. Faldo takes great Pains to inſinuate; No: Nor of all called Miniſters, neither. I aim'd at ſuch only who remain in their Partial, Narrow, Bitter Spirit, unfit for God and Men. 'Tis notorious to all inquiſitive Minds, what Miſery theſe Nations have been reduc'd to, through the pernicious Councils, horrid Flatteries, and moſt partial and ambitious Practices of many of the Non-conforming Clergy when Time was; They always ſtood in the Way of whatever tended to the true Freedom of this Mighty Nation from greateſt Thraldom. I could particularize in twenty great Inſtances, and bring the Complaint of many conſiderable Perſons againſt them. Many Pamphlets are extant that loudly ſpeak the ſame, eſpecially two, call'd, The firſt and ſecond Narrative of the late Parliament's Proceedings, &c. Printed Anno 1658 and 1659, as I take it, in which the greateſt Hypocriſy, the moſt deteſtable Falſeneſs to God and Men, and a Sort of Flattery to their New Monarchy, exceeding all modern Idolatry, yea, Blaſphemy it ſelf, are brought to Light, and laid at the Doors chiefly of the Prieſthood among all Perſwaſions, in any Power, at that Time; Out of which and ſeveral others, I have extracted about one Sheet, which I intended for the Preſs, but pure Tenderneſs to thoſe that acted with Integrity and Conſcience, ſtopt it's Publication: I was careful not to give any Occaſion for them to be born hard upon by ſuch as knew not well how to diſtinguiſh between Perſons and Things that differ; though ſuch as I meant, well deſerve it from us, that when in Power perſecuted us, contrary to their own Engagements, and now out of Power, malign and abuſe us by ſlanderous Reports and invective Libels: Nor is it wholly laid aſide, though pro tempore ſuſpended; New Provocations may give Occaſion for their Hiſtory to come Abroad to the Nation more compendiouſly than ever. A Work I take no Pleaſure in, but am heartily ſorry, that ſuch as have given that juſt Occaſion for Rebuke, ſhould (as not having their Fill of us before) fall ſo ſeverely on us now about Religion, who have ſo eminently prov'd themſelves falſe to God, Religion and the Kingdom; and thereby neceſſitated us to rip them up and ſhew how nauſeous this Officiouſneſs of theirs is; as if they thought to expiate old Crimes and prove themſelves zealous for Religion, by perverting, abuſing and gainſaying ours.

This is the preſent Plague that infects the Families of but too many, through the ſecret Inſtigations of their Miniſters, yet too inward with them: And I know, that the moſt honourable left among the Diſſenters, lament at this Day the Stingineſs of their Clergy, whoſe Fierceneſs is rather encreaſed (than leſſen'd) with their Loſs of Power. But ſuch generous Perſons, as have acted truly upon Conſcience, according to the beſt of their Underſtandings, and have ever continu'd immoveable for General and National Good, no Man holds in greater Value than my ſelf; I wiſh for every ſuch one, the King and Kingdom had a Thouſand. It is an Abuſe therefore in my Adverſary to extend my Words to all Non-conformiſts, which only relate to the Narrow-Spirited, Angry and Imperious among their Teachers. And if it be for my plain Dealing with them, he (like himſelf and his Cauſe) threatens me with the Puniſhment of the Judge, Law, and I know not what beſide, unleſs I repent me of my Saying (at what Time he pleads the King's Oblivion (ſhowing himſelf more below him in Mercy, than he is in Dignity) Let him begin when he will, it will never leſſen my Credit, nor greaten his. But that he ſhould, after ſo much Provocation, ſuch Scurrilous Replies, Hard Names and Black Characters, given by him, ſay, I am turned Cavalier and Prelate too, to ſatisfy my Luſt of Anger; adding, We ſee what a Change the Quakers Light can make when it acts the Part of Fire, are Words very Indiſcreet and Ungrateful, as well as Scoffing and Prophane; for they fling ſuch Scurvy Reflections upon Cavaliers and Prelates, as become not one who got his Oblivion by the former, and his preſent Liberty of Preaching and Licenſe for Printing by the latter: For it is as much as to ſay, that both Cavaliers and Prelates are a Sort of Revengeful, Angry and Fiery Perſons (to be ſure bad enough, or he would not have rendred me either, when he went about to character me to Diſgrace) So unthankful is he for his Oblivion and all other Benefits that he now enjoys at the Hands, and by the Moderation of either Cavaliers, that is, Royaliſts; or Prelates, that is, Epiſcopal Proteſtants; whom notwithſtanding, he pretended to be no farther concerned in his Eſſays againſt us, than vindicated, as I have frequently obſerved.

But laſtly he excepts againſt my Mention of one of his new Benefactors.

There is a Gentleman, Mr. T. F. againſt whom Mr. Penn hath ſuch a Spleen, that to my great Wonder I find him in all his Writings (I have read) attempting his Diſgrace, who never wrote againſt him; and if my Information fail me not, P. hath been engaged by him to another Kind of Deportment.

How black am I with J. Faldo's Dirt? but none of it will ſtick. Spleen I never had to the Man; but once a Friendſhip, that had never been broken by me; but as it came, it went. At the Time of our Diſputation with T. D. T. V. T. D. and W. M. at the Spittle, being engaged in the Negative concerning the common Doctrine of diſtinct and ſeparate Perſonality, he and ſome others fell into great Intimacy with us; Who but we in his and their Thoughts? at what Time they were not quite diſcovered by us; But pulling off their Maſks, at leaſt we found them to have been the Followers of J. Biddle, in that which is commonly call'd the Socinian Way; and that their peculiar Regard to us came from an implicit Vindication of one of their Principles, for which we came under the Scandal and Odium of Socinians: Pulpits rang how the Quakers had unmaſk'd themſelves on that Occaſion; and their warm Diſputes, in our Defence, did not a little ſtrengthen the common Reports that went of us, and me in particular. When my Book intituled, The Sandy Foundation Shaken, came out, it being a farther Detection of what we call Errors, and it happening that Socinians did the ſame, as if I was a rank Socinian (who had never read any one Socinian Book in all my Life, if look't into one at that Time) ſo theſe Men, at leaſt T. F. was ready to believe me nearer akin to them, than, God knows, I was; that is to ſay, in Denying the Divinity of Chriſt, At this Time, what would he not have done for me, if I might have believ'd him, and in Reality the Man was wonderfully taken; but, which was grievous, he was ſhamefully miſtaken; and when he came to read my Confeſſion to Chriſt's Eternal Godhead, in my little Book, intituled, Innocency with her open Face, (though he had another, call'd, The Guide Miſtaken, that p. 28, abundantly doth the ſame, which was writ and read by him before the Sandy Foundation was thought of) he deſerted me, broke all Bonds of Friendſhip and Rules of Civility, and his extreme Shews of Kindneſs, turned to continual exceſſive Reflections; he would have it a Retraction, rather than be thought to have been miſtaken; He had built his Hopes too high for the Foundation, and then became Wrathful, that they fell. And though I ſought his Friendly Behaviour, having no Thought in my Heart but Love and Friendſhip to him; yet ſo invincible was his Diſpleaſure, that there was no Holding for me of his Good-will, and believing Chriſt to be God; They were with him as inconſiſtent, as Light and Darkneſs; I know no other Reaſon (if this be any) for his Sharpneſs to me; And God knows, this is the very Truth. I leave it with my Reader to ſatisfy his own Conſcience concerning this Matter.

But he never wrote againſt me; Truly he needed not, who hath another Inſtrument ſo nimble, and ſo idle a Scribe as J. Faldo for the Purpoſe. But if calling me the baſeſt Names, undervaluing, detracting and traducing me in almoſt all Companies behind my Back; and in a Garden at Hoxton, where I went to accompany ſome of my Relations, to affront me with opprobrious Names, as many can witneſs, who demean'd my ſelf with all Gentleneſs towards him; and to act in the Quality of an inceſſant Agent againſt us by Informations, Reports, Books, &c. (Who once did all theſe Things for us (and we are no worſe than we were) If theſe Things be no juſt Provocations to mention two Letters, I am to blame: Yet that I name him in almoſt all my Writings, or all that he hath read, is falſe; for in the Spirit of Alexander the Copperſmith, &c. which J. F. quotes, he is not nam'd, and of above Twelve Books, he has mention'd but in Three, and that obſcurely; this makes the Fourth againſt my Will. The Occaſion, beſides what hath been already touch'd upon, was this; H. H. one of his Friends, writes a Book againſt us, or rather to us, againſt G. F. J. Faldo's Maſter T. F. was the Promoter and Scatterer of theſe Pamphlets, eſpecially upon the Exchange, where (and not in private Converſe, as J. F. ſays, and makes to be the only Reaſon of my taking Notice of him, that he may render me Baſe to his Neighbours) before ſeveral, and thoſe of divers Perſwaſions, he called G. Fox Knave, Puppy, Loggarhead, with ſuch like unhandſome Terms, unworthy of a Man of T. F's Conſideration in the World. This I would never have repeated, had not J. Faldo drawn, yea, compelled it from me, by ſuggeſting an Untruth, and ſubſtituting it in the Room of the True Reaſon.

Well, But if his Information fail him not, I have been engaged by T. F. to another Kind of Deportment. And ſuppoſe all this, hath he not diſingaged me ſufficiently? I owe no Man any thing beyond Truth, nor will be fettered from my Teſtimony by any Obligations. But I never was engaged to him beyond what I have faithfully related, except it was his lending me (as he thought) by one that was my Servant at that Time of my Tower-Impriſonment, about Forty Pounds (he coming in my Name, counterfeiting both Meſſages and Letters, as I made appear to him afterwards) which, though mine Eyes never ſaw one Penny of it, nor was there a Penny employed in my Service, or to my Uſe, I did, when God enabled me, having then no Eſtate in my Hands, faithfully repay, as if I had really had every Penny; believing then, and ſtill, that it was Kindneſs in him to me that was abuſed by a knaviſh Servant; and I would never let him ſuffer for it: If herein I have wrong'd him, he may forgive me.

But becauſe in my Anſwer to J. Faldo, and what he ſaid in his Behalf againſt us, I told him, that ſome thought it a Shame, that ſo ill a Tongue ſhould go unrebuk'd of thoſe whoſe Principles and Intereſt give them the Liberty of doing it in a Way that might be more effectual than all the Moderation and Reaſon that can eaſily be ſhewn to him; J. Faldo, exactly like himſelf, ſtrains theſe Words, all the Moderation and Reaſon, which I intended, of our bearing his Abuſes, only ſhewing their Unreaſonableneſs by Writing, to nothing below ſome Unjuſt and Violent Courſe to rid him out of the Way; which are but ſofter Words for down-right Murder; and to countenance this Comment of his, I was told, I think, by one that had it at T. F's Mouth, that he was adviſed to take the Law of me for his Security.

But to put all this out of Doubt, thoſe that thought it a Shame, he ſhould ſo frequently, violently and publickly revile honeſt Men, bringing their Common Credit into Queſtion by ſcurvy Names, meant by the Way that might be taken, only the Law, which was what ſome counſelled him to uſe to ſecure himſelf againſt me. Theſe Men had need have good Conſciences, that are thus afraid before they are hurt.

Thus have I vindicated thoſe Reflections J. Faldo laid ſuch Foundation for; and if T. F. be troubled at this, I muſt tell him, ſo am I, but I cannot help it; Let him better adviſe his Scribe next Time; for I have nothing but hearty Love and good Wiſhes for him; nor have I ſaid any Thing harſh or diſgraceful in this Defence of my ſelf, imputing much of what hath happened more to his Natural Haſte, and ſometimes ungoverned Speech, than a Premeditated Injuſtice; He knows how often I have caution'd him in thoſe Reſpects, while we converſed together; Nor hath it been my only Obſervation and Admonition, but a great many others, and ſome of his own Friends too. Thus I leave T. F. in perfect Good-will, to ſee what Leave it is that J. Faldo is taking of us.

His Epilogue degenerates not one Jot from the Book it ſelf; And as if he would do me a great deal of Miſchief in a little Compaſs, and ſay whatever is rude and unjuſt, once for all, he tells his Reader, That I have egregiouſly play'd the Forger; that I am a Cheat; that all Men underſtanding Controverſy, will judge me worthy to be made a Proverb of, and when they would expreſs an impudent Forger, to ſay no more than W. PENN, Rep. pag. 95.

And that he may add Prophaneneſs to his Railing, he proceeds, A Great Poet of their own hath theſe Words, worthy to begin all Mr. Penn's Books on that Subject as it ends this of mine.

If a meer Scoff in Scripture-Phraſe be prophaning Scripture, then I have not over-charg'd him in calling this Paraſe, wherein he uſeth Paul's Words to the Athe- nians (but with Scorn and Levity) againſt us, Prophaneneſs. But let us hear theſe ſo much derided Words.

‘ And they that would be ſatisfy'd concerning us any Way, they muſt find us
‘ and know us in the Principle of Life, where we are, and not in their own Reaſon,
‘ where we are not; and ſo let none Reaſon about us, for there they can never ‘ know us, nor come unto us, W. Smith's Cat. p. 94.

But why ſo much Contempt upon this Paſſage, unleſs it be to ſhew us, that he can ſtill Scoff at that Principle of Life, which is the Strength and Habitation of God's Children, as he hath done already throughout both his Books. Did the Diſciples of the Phariſees find out Chriſt's Meaning by their Reaſoning about it, John 6, or would not either have reliſh'd the true Meaning of his Words, had they dwelt in the Divine Principle of Life? Why did Chriſt ſay, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, that thou haſt hid theſe Things from the Wiſe and Prudent, and revealed them unto Babes, if they were diſcoverable by human Reaſoning? for Babes are ignorant of that Art; yet out of the Mouth of Babes and Sucklings, &c. The Apoſtle's Queſtion, 1 Cor. 1. 20, was very impertinent, if J. Faldo may be of Authority, who ſaid, Where is the Wiſe? Where is the Scribe? Where is the Diſputer, &c. for this implies an Excluſion of all thoſe Arts, Sciences, and natural Gifts from any Capacity to reveal the deep Things of God, ſhut up in the Divine Principle of Life. Beſides, W. S's Words imply a Clouded Underſtanding and degenerated, and therefore Uncapable. J. F. muſt either intend by his Deriſion, that he thinks W. S. deſerves to be hiſs'd for denying the Knowledge of Divine Things to be attainable, by the Degenerated Underſtanding of Man, or ſanctified: If the firſt, All may have Cauſe to abhor his Falſe Doctrine: If the latter, I would know which Way that can be, without the Divine Principle of Life? * This abundantly manifeſts J. Faldo's unſavory Spirit, and proves him to be ignorant of the Way, Method and Work of God in his Children. When the Natural Man by his Reaſon can know Chriſt, he may know his Sheep, the Scriptures and the Power of God, and not before; but becauſe it is impoſſible in Reaſoning or Arguing, pro and con, by the utmoſt Strength and Search of Natural Abilities, to know Chriſt, but by the Revelation of the Spirit of God alone, as hath been abundantly prov'd; therefore William Smith's Words are ſound and weighty, and J. Faldo's carnal and Prophane; ſhewing himſelf to be a Mocker of the Privileges and Myſteries of the Goſpel; but what elſe may we expect from one that walks after the Luſts of his own vain Mind, having not the Spirit, Jude 18, 19. Yet that we may manifeſt how inconſiſtent he is with himſelf, as that he can't write againſt us, but he muſt write for us, take this Paſſage out of Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity (which ought always to begin his Books againſt us upon this Subject, as it ends this Chapter of mine.)

‘ Thoſe Goſpel-Illuminations are beyond the utmoſt Reach of our Natural Fa‘ culties of the Mind (though ſanctified) and therefore it is ſaid to be 2 Tim. 3.
‘ 16. Divinely inſpired; It is not produced in the Exerciſe of the Rational Facul‘ ties; the Soul is purely paſſive or receptive therein; and is to thoſe Illuminations
‘ as the Wax is to the Seal.

CHAP. XV.

Chap. XV.

His ſeveral Groſs Miſcarriages ſumm'd and farther obſerved.

I. Of his over-looking my Anſwer and Arguments.

OF Twenty Two Chapters in his Reply, there is not one of them, in which he hath not wilfully declined inſerting my Anſwer and Arguments, and only flutters about, pecks and ſcratches at ſome Part that is of leaſt Moment to the Reaſon of the Point; perhaps ſome Rebuke or Reflection upon the ill Uſe he makes of our Friends Writings; particularly Pag. 9, 22, 23, 24, 30, 31, 35, 53, 56, 57, 71, 73, 82, 83, 85, 86, 90, 92, 93. How is it poſſible my Arguments ſhould be conquered, when they were never encounter'd ? I was never yet ſo unjuſtly dealt withal in this Particular by any Adverſary of his Pretences.

* Dr. Barnes, J. Bradford, J. Calvin, Bp. Jewel, W. Perkins, W. Green, J. Caryl, Dr. Owen, with an Hundred more of this Mind, admir'd by ſuch as J. F. yet that Doctrine derided by him in us, particularly J. de Weſtphalia, No Man can know the Mind of Chriſt, which he holds forth in his Words, but he alone. Paradox in Faſc. Rer. p. 163.

II. Of his drawing Falſe Inferences.

Where he ventures at any Time to inſert any conſiderable Part of my Anſwer, he is ſure to draw ſome Inference that may bring an Odium my Words never deſerved. I could particularize at large, Pag. 6, 13, 17, 18, 31, 35, 41, 42, 47, 49,71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, but take theſe following for the reſt.

1. From Edw. Burroughs Reflecting upon People's imagining God to be confined to ſome Place beyond the Stars, he implies, they deny Chriſt's Manhood, Vindic. Page 6.

2. From our not ſtiling the Scriptures the Word (but Words) of God, he infers, that we deny the Scriptures, Firſt Book, p. 18, 19.

3. From our Aſſerting the Doctrine of Inſpiration, and Certainty of what we are inſpired either to write or ſpeak, he infers, not only our Equalling with, but preferring what we ſpeak and write before the Scriptures, Firſt Book, p. 40, Vind. p. 17.

4. From our condemning the Imitation of any of the Holy Men of God of former Ages in particular Caſes, without they are thereunto required by the Spirit of the Lord, he infers, that Commands of God in Scriptures are no Commands unleſs we think ſo; and that it is no Sin to break all Commands in the Bible, if our Conſciences can but be ſo blinded as to tell us it is no Sin, Vind. p. 34, 35.

5. From our aſſerting that there is no knowing of God but by the Spirit; and that Men's Apprehenſions of God, and his Work in the Souls of his People, are but the Endeavours and Effects of the Wiſdom of the Fleſh, he infers, that we oppoſe the Spirit and the Scriptures; nay, that we reject and ſcorn them, Vind. p. 41, 42, 47.

6. From our denying a Carnal, Worldly, Mercenary Miniſtry, Lifeleſs Prayers, a meer formal Church, Preaching, and not by the Spirit; and W. Smith's ſaying, that the preſent Uſe of Bread and Wine, and Water, called Baptiſm and the Supper, (as they are uſed at this Day) are no other than Popiſh and Human; he infers, that the Quakers deny the Goſpel-Miniſtry, Goſpel-Prayer, Goſpel-Church, Goſpel-Preaching; and that we call Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, as Preached in the firſt Age after Chriſt, the Pope's Inventions, &c. Vind. from p. 49 to p. 71. O Injurious!

7. From our reproving People for feeding in an Unconverted State upon the meer Report of what Chriſt hath done without them and depending thereon, and from our aſſerting that Juſtification (taken for Remiſſion) goes not before Repentance, which is an inward Work, much leſs that Men can be compleatly juſtified, or made inwardly juſt, but by the waſhing of the Word of Regeneration and Sanctification of the Eternal Spirit, this Man dares to infer Our Denial, yea our Undervaluing, and that to the Degree of Blaſphemous Contempt of the Tranſactions of Chriſt at Jeruſalem, Vind. p. 71, 72, 73, 74.

8. From J. Pennington, aſking, If outward Blood would cleanſe the Conſcience from Indwelling Sin, he infers, that we deny all Benefit by the Blood of Chriſt ſhed upon the Croſs, for the declaring of Remiſſion of Sins, Rom. 3. 25. Firſt Book, 2d Part, p. 46, 47. Vind. 77.

9. From our chuſing to call that Body God prepared in which to do his Will, the Body of Chriſt, rather than the Chriſt of God; And from our aſſerting, God to be that Light which enlightens every Man; and that the Soul of Man had ſomething of the Life of God in it's Primitive Perfection, he makes no more ado, but concludes, Firſt, That we deny the Chriſt of God; 2dly, That we make the Meaſure of Light in every Man the Eternal God, thereby confining him to Man's Soul: And, laſtly, That the Soul of Man is God himſelf, and ſo God ſaves God, and God worſhips God. This my Reader may find in his Vind. from p. 75 to 87, particularly this following of E. B. about the Soul.

10. From E. Burroughs's affirming the Light of Chriſt in every Man to be one with the Spirit, and as good as the Spirit of Chriſt, (in order to prove it the ſame) J. Faldo infers, he made the Soul of Man God; becouſe that which is as good as the Spirit of God is God, Book 1, Part 2, p. 122. Vind. p. 85, 86. As if E. B. had ſpoken it of the Soul of Man, and not the Light of Chriſt ſhining in the Soul of Man, as his Words expreſs it.

11. Laſtly, from our Denial of his carnal Reſurrection, as inconſiſtent with Scripture and Reaſon, he takes Heart to tell all People, that W. P. and all the through Quakers, deny the Reſurrection of the Dead, and are guilty of not believing a future Reward in another World, with a Train of ill Language, too long to bring in, Vind. p. 88, 89, 91.

This, Friendly Reader, hath been the Entertainment we have received at J. Faldo's Hands; but all Things ſhall work together for good.

III. Of his evading my Anſwer and Arguments.

It is very frequent with him, next to leaving out what I ſay, or faſtning falſe Conſequences upon what he tranſcribes, to evade the Strength of mine Anſwer, either by pretending to have ſaid enough in his firſt Book, (as if that had foreſeen my Anſwer, and anticipated his Reply with a Refutation) or by ſome one Word which will ſerve him to play at; or by being in haſte; or elſe my Anſwer deſerves no Reply at all, &c. An Evidence of this Sort of Carriage, my Reader may find in his Reply, p. 5, 17, 18, 38, 51, 57, 58, 59, 69, 71, 76, 91, 93. One at large for all.

To my ſeveral Arguments in Defence of Immediate Revelation, Inſpiration (as he terms it) he returns three or four Lines.

This W. P. is ſo far from denying, that he pleads for it; but after ſuch a Rude, Impertinent Manner, that I ſhould but injure you, and ſhew my ſelf idle to animadvert upon it, p. 17. The cheapeſt Way that ever Man took to confute his Adverſary. Doth this become any Man of his Pretence to either Scholarſhip or Chriſtianity.

IV. Of his Forgery or Perverſion.

I am ſorry I have ſuch reiterated Occaſion to charge him with Forging, that is, foiſting in Words into our Writings and Sayings, that are wholly inconſiſtent with them, or perverting thoſe he delivers, to the End he may make them pronounce his Mind the more plainly. A few of many Places I have obſerv'd, as in Page 22, 25, 41, 42, 50, 51, 92, 93. Of which I ſhall give four Inſtances more particularly.

1. I. Pennington ſpeaking of Knowledge according to the Fleſh: By Fleſh, ſays, he, The Quakers underſtand the Uſe of our Underſtanding (though) ſanctified, Firſt Book, Pag. 41. Vind. Pag. 24, 25.

2. His ſecond is, making W. Smith to call the Scriptures, Traditions of Men, Earthly Root, Darkneſs, Confuſion, Corruption, Rotten, Deceitful, the Whore's Cup, the Mark of the Beaſt, all out of the Life and Power of God; and not that he meant them of thoſe who had degenerated from the Power of Godlineſs, and had ſet up their own Imaginations in the Stead of God's Inſtitutions, teaching for Doctrine the Traditions of Men, firſt Book, Pag. 117, 119. Vind. 41, 45.

3. The Third is, his making I. Pennington to call viſible Worſhip the City of Abomination, Vind. Pag. 50.

4. Laſtly, That he gives, in our Name, this Interpretation, of the Vail is over them; i. e. the Belief of the Man Chriſt Jeſus, which was of our Nature to be the Chriſt, &c. Vind. p. 93.

V. Of his Grand Improbabilities and downright Untruths.

This Charge, I know, muſt needs be very unpleaſant to a Man as Vain Glorious as many Places of his Book declare him to be, but I cannot help it; 'Tis Truth, if there be any Truth in the World, that he hath writ a great many unlikely and abſolute untrue Things. Let my Reader take the Pains to look over theſe following Pages of his Reply, and I am well aſſured, if impartial, he will not think that I have in a Tittle wrong'd him, Pag. 6, 7, 18, 21, 33, 35, 38, 39, 42, 46, 47, 48, 49, 55, 56, 65, 70, 72, 73, 89, 93. Of which I will only inſtance four.

1. Firſt he affirms, that he quoted forty Places out of our Friends Books, that would prove the Light within (as within us) to be the only Lord, and Saviour, and very God, p. 6, whereas he brought not any one that either proved the Terms or the Matter.

2. Secondly, He confidently accus'd us, of charging the Miſcarriage of Men's Souls on the Knowledge the Letter of the Scriptures, by God's Bleſſing, doth convey, Pag. 21.

3. Thirdly, Whereas I ſaid that W. Smith's Words reflected not in the leaſt upon the Scriptures, nor thoſe Doctrines truly received thence; neither that any ſuch Words can be produced by our Adverſary, he boldly tells his Reader; I intended no other but that Smith doth not accuſe himſelf in ſo many Words of Blaſpheming the Spirit of God in the Scriptures, and the Doctrines from thence received; as much as to ſay, We both knew it to be Blaſphemy, but W. Smith did not call it ſo, p. 4. There is no ingenuous Man that will not abhor the Falſeneſs of this Paſſage.

4. Laſtly, I oppoſing his Affirmation, that we did not profeſs or believe Eternal Rewards, thus pretends to confute me: W. P. oppoſes me rather becauſe he would not be thought to ſubſcribe to me, than that he believes not what I ſay to be true, p. 69. But if this be true, ſure I am, there is no Truth in the World.

And indeed, there is no giving this Sort of Carriage at large, but by tranſcribing far the greateſt Part of his Book.

VI. Of his Idle Jeers and Frothy Expreſſions.

I have not met with any Man writing upon ſo ſerious a Subject as Religion is, that gives himſelf the Liberty of ſo many vain Expreſſions, as if he had intended his Diſcourſe for vulgar Merriment, and not for Chriſtian Information. If my Reader pleaſe to trouble himſelf with the Peruſal of theſe following Pages, he ſhall find enough to nauſeate, p. 6, 22, 23, 26, 27, 29, 30, 34, 37, 40, 47, 50, 51, 53, 58, 60, 69, 71, 72, 95. Take two Inſtances: He cackles like an Hen, when he has laid a worſe Thing than an Egg, p. 47.

Again, Becauſe we ſaid, God ſpoke once by Balaam's Aſs, thereby proving that he did not always ſpeak by the Scriptures, he thus reflects, I wonder not that they leave the Teachings of God by the Scriptures, to attend on the Miniſtry of Aſſes, thereby calling us Aſſes, p. 27. Which, how witty ſoever he thinks ſuch Sort of Sayings, to be ſure, they are more Frothy and Irreligious, than becomes a Man profeſſing Religion, much leſs writing of the weightieſt Points of it.

VIII. Of his Vain Glory and Self-Praiſe.

At this he is exceſſive; So conceited is he of his own Abilities, and impatient after Praiſe, (the greateſt Diſcovery of Pride and Weakneſs that any Man can make) which my Reader may find, p. 28, 32, 33, 34, 50, 52, 61, 63, 65, 84. I will give one Proof for all.

My Charge and Argument in this Chapter (ſays he) is ſuch an Argument, and ſo proved by me, as a Thouſand Penns can never invalidate it, p. 34.

The Truth of which, as alſo the Vanity of it, may be ſeen both in my Anſwer and Rejoynder; however, he ſtops his Reader's Mouth, and counts him ſenſeleſs and deſperate that is not of the ſame Mind, p. 36.

VIII. Of Railing and Ill Names.

No Man pretends to diſlike, yet no Man practiſes theſe ill-bred, as well as unchriſtian Courſes more than J. Faldo, where he wants Reaſon he impoſes an hard Name; and if he be rebuk'd, he calls it Railing, reflecting that upon us for reprehending it in him. If I call his Compariſon baſe, that is ſo, and that he manages it maliciouſly againſt us, he replies, that more genteel Railing may be learned under a Hedge, and that thoſe Words are ſlovenly impoſed upon Him; as if he were too great to be reproved, or licenſed to rail without Controul, at leaſt againſt the Quakers; for if I tell him, he is unmannerly, he counts our own Practice a Diſpenſation; inferring from our Diſlike of vain and fruitleſs Complements, a Liberty to treat us with what unſeemly Language pleaſes him beſt; This my Reader may ſee at large, if it pleaſe him to look into theſe Pages of our Adverſary's Reply, p. 5, 8, 16, 20, 27, 29, 33, 35, 45, 49, 50, 52, 54, 58, 62, 63, 64, 69, 72, 73, 77, 82, 87, 91, 95.

But to omit whole Sentences, and yet to give ſome Inſtances more at large than by bare Figures, my Adverſary hath liberally beſtowed out of his great Store of ill Language theſe following Epithets, as well upon our Religion and Friends, as my ſelf for defending them. That our Light is the ſecond Anti-chriſt, the Quakers Idol, Pernicious Guide and Saviour, Fanciful Teacher; in fine, a ſordid, ſinful, corrupt and ridiculous Thing; and our Religion and Practice Blaſphemy and Idolatry, p. 47, 85, 87. Our Friends (Quakers, ſo called) benighted with palpable Knavery and Impudence; Abſurd and Blaſphemous Idiots; Out of their Knowledge and Wits alſo; prodigiouſly wicked; Speak the amazing Deluſions of Satan. And that I am a preſumptuous and blind Accuſer, a Sophiſter, an Haman, an accurſed Ham, a treacherous and wilful Deluder, a Mad-man, an Hangman, an infallible Stager, a Fool, an Ape, a Dunce, an impudent Forger, and what not, that his Rage and Folly can foam out, p. 4, 53, 54, 59, 61, 63, 65, 90, 91, 95.

I deſire my Reader would alſo take Notice, that beſides his exceſſive ill-uſing of us, and reputing our Rebukes for doing ſo, Railing (which ſhows the Beam to be in his own Eye, and that his Nature is as proud to reject Reproof, as it is foul and rough to occaſion it) he gave us the On-ſet; Had he not begun with us, we know not that ever we ſhould have meddled with him; but having begun, and withal ſo miſerably abuſed us by foul Charges, falſe Citations and vilifying Language, that it ſhould be more unreaſonable in us to cenſure him, than in him to deſerve it, no impartial Man can ever think, What is J. Faldo for a Man, of what Rank, what Quality, what eminent Office or Dignity in the World, that we muſt be kick'd by him up and down four or five Hundred Pages, for whatever he pleaſeth to count us, and not be told, he wrongs us? Is the Quality of this diminutive Prieſt ſo much above the whole Body of the People, called Quakers, that to ſtop him in his Career of Scoff, Jeer, Taunt, foul Names and Reflection is to deſerve them? But over and above, that this ſhews his Diſpoſition to be Imperious and Impatient, as well as Rude and Frothy, and therefore very inconſiſtent with his Pretences to Meekneſs and good Manners, but moſt of all with his Reprehenſion of others in Caſes leſs offenſive; it will neither confute my Arguments or damnify my Perſon, which makes me the leſs ſolicitous of making any other Rejoynder. I ſhould here bring in my Concluſion to this whole Diſcourſe, but leſt any may yet doubt of the Truth of theſe Things, as believing me to have made an ill Uſe and partial Relation of them, I ſhall yet offer for farther Confirmation of my Senſe of the Man, and his Undertaking againſt us, this undeniable Evidence, to wit, that he hath dealt imperfectly and falſly with the World in his Account of our Writings, which he makes the Foundation on which every Charge is built, that he exhibits and aggravates againſt us. I have here and there, in my Book, touch'd already upon this great Failure; But I ſhall more particularly inform my Reader of it in this Place.

Of Imperfect and Falſe Citations.

Foraſmuch as J. Faldo would have all People believe, that he hath charged the People, called Quakers, with nothing that their own Books do not clearly and plentifully prove, (inſomuch, as he counts thoſe that think ſo, ſenſeleſs and deſperate) and that many who read him, may be ready to credit him, becauſe they ſee Books, Names and Paſſages frequently cited, eſpecially thoſe who have not the Books by them, to examine how honeſtly he deals with us, I thought it requiſite to end this Book with this farther Unanſwerable Diſcovery of his Defective Foundation, that in many Places we find Names without Book, Books without Parts, Chapters and Pages, yea, without Names; and Pages without Number or Figure; many falſly cited; ſome added to, others diminiſhed from in the Beginning, middle, or End of Sentences, thereby robbing them of their own Explanation, that he might the better fit them for his Purpoſe. Take theſe few Inſtances.

Theſe, Reader, are but ſome Hints I was willing to give thee of our Adverſary's Diſingenuous Carriage towards us, either in letting drop that which may be moſt material, at leaſt might be more explanatory of our Friend's Intentions, foiſting in Words wholly inconſiſtent with the Scope of our Paſſages, or miſ-applying them in Favour of his black Charges, all which may clearly be ſeen by a Compariſon of his Books with our Friends Writings, a great Part of which, I muſt confeſs, it will be difficult to procure, ſince to prove his Miſcarriage in Citations, I have not been able to compaſs above one half of the Books he names; but that carries this woful Reflection with it, if his Uſe of 15 Books in Thirty affords us ſo many groſs Inſtances of his unfair Dealing with us, what might we have expected upon our Examination of the reſt? In the mean Time we ſhall without Leave ſuſpect him, having ſo much Reaſon for it.

To compleat what I have done in this Particular, let me tell thee, Reader, that in his Compariſon of us with the Papiſts, he ſets down Twenty ſeveral Paſſages as our Doctrines and Opinions, not producing ſo much as Perſon, Book or Page to avouch them; a Piece of Juſtice he denies not to the Papiſts themſelves at what Time he refuſeth it to us, though not they, but we were the People againſt whom the Diſcourſe was writ: which, though groſs enough, yet nothing compared with his Diſingenuity at the End of his Firſt Book, where, under the Pretence of furniſhing his Reader with a Key to underſtand the Quakers Meanings by, he ſets down no leſs than about Two Hundred and Fifty Particulars in our Name, without ſo much as the bare Mention of one Author, Book or Page, to countenance his Attempt. Yet, after all this, he cannot bear to be told of his unfair Carriage, and his unjuſt Dealing towards us; His Quality, or his Pride, is ſo great, it will not bear a Reprehenſion; I never met with a Man of ſo much Falſeneſs and Stomach together. He thinks it ſo great a Puniſhment to be told of his Miſcarriages, that if we will not let him paſs for a Faithful, Sober, Meek, and Chriſtian Author, however he hath prov'd himſelf the Contrary, we muſt expect all that his Scorn and Anger will caſt upon us: But ſuch Vindications of his Eſſays, will be Hand-writing enough againſt themſelves and their Author, who ought not to flatter himſelf after theſe great Evils, with the Hopes of Impunity; for ſuch as he hath ſown againſt us, ſuch ſhall he reap at the Hand of God, the Righteous Judge of all, who will reward every Man according to his Works. But I deſire with all my Soul, that God may ſhew him Mercy, that Repentance may yet over-take him, and this Iniquity be blotted out before he departs this World, and is no more ſeen. I would beſeech him, in the Love of God, to fight no longer againſt the Truth, and for a Cauſe, his Conſcience (might it ſpeak) would tell him, is not the only true God's, but the Honour and Intereſt of the God of this World, whom the formal Chriſtian is led and ordered by, that is ſo ſharp againſt us. Let him not be afraid to take Shame for that which is ſhameful, leſt vain Credit, brings Sorrow hereafter. I cannot be otherwiſe perſwaded, but that Reputation prevailed more with him than Conſcience in this Controverſy; he tugs ſo hard to prop the one, and there is ſo little Savour of the other: God could never be in that Deſign, nor amidſt thoſe Thoughts, that were laid with ſo great Miſtake, and which have been vented with ſo much Fury. I muſt needs ſay, There was neither Truth to inform us, nor Charity to gain us: It ſtumbled the Weak, grieved the Tender, and offended the Peaceable among thoſe Profeſſions he pretended to vindicate, gratifying only ſuch as are of a Litigious and Contentious Nature, whoſe unreaſonable Heat it had been his Duty rather to abate by ſweet Perſwaſion and a meek Example. I have this Comfort in my Concluſion of this Controverſy, that I moſt heartily forgive him all the Injuſtice and Unkindneſs he hath ſhewn, at leaſt ſo far as I am therein concerned, and that I think is more than any Man; And with the ſame Love that God hath loved me, I do with all my Soul fervently wiſh his ſolid and unfeigned Repentance, that he may receive the Love and Mercies of God in the Remiſſion of his Sins, and Reconciliation of him by the Power and Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, that he may know the Excellency and Glory of the Truth in the inward Parts, and what are thoſe good Things, no Carnal Eye, Ear, or Heart hath ever ſeen, heard or underſtood, that God hath laid up for them that truly fear him, and which he daily reveals unto all ſuch by his Eternal Spirit.

The CONCLUSION.

THUS, Friendly Reader, are we come to the End of our Taſk, wherein, I hope, the Doctrines of that deſpiſed People, in Deriſion, called Quakers, their Worſhip and Church-Practice, are evidently and firmly vindicated againſt vulgar Miſtakes and Reports, and more eſpecially thoſe many black Charges, ſo confidently exhibited by J. Faldo, in his Firſt and Second Books, both by a fair Reſcue of our Words from his groſs Perverſions, and indirect and unnatural Meanings, and the Confirmation of our real Senſe, with Plenty of plain Scripture, many Reaſons, and the unqueſtionable Teſtimonies of ſeveral Ancient and Modern conſiderable Authors. My Deſign hath not been Conqueſt, but Information, that by theſe Religious Wars we may at laſt arrive at Peace; And theſe Weapons be all beaten into Plough-ſhares, ſo as to learn War no more: That to fear God and work Righteouſneſs (the Life of Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, who hath left us his moſt Holy Exam-Example, that we ſhould follow his Steps) may be the very Bent of our Hearts, the Reſolution of our Minds, and conſtant Practice of our Lives, which bring the Soul to the Inheritance of Subſtance, and eſtabliſh the Heart for ever.

O that all who read this Diſcourſe, may with me wind up their Spirits, and lodge their Souls, not in the Love of Controverſy, but of that Divine Life, which ſtills, reſolves, and fixes all, and gives ſuch Heavenly Waiters to feel and enjoy Immortality! To ſee and poſſeſs ſomething that is beyond Time, and theſe painful Exerciſes that are within it. O! this makes Men Weighty, Serious, Loving, Meek, Holy, Forbearing, and Conſtant, the Image and Delight of God! Such become Livers of Pure and Undefiled Religion, who have been hitherto but ſo many vain and verbal Contenders for Religion; ſo ſhall this Scripture be fulfilled to our un-utterable Rejoycing: Pſal. 85, 9, 10. Surely his Salvation is nigh them that fear him, that Glory may dwell in our Land; Mercy and Truth are met together; Righteouſneſs and Peace have kiſſed one another.

The God of Everlaſting Strength bleſs and proſper this Glorious Work in the Earth, to the Praiſe of his Holy and Bleſſed Name, Amen.

Wiſdom Juſtified of her Children,

From the

Ignorance and Calumny of H. Hallywell,

In his BOOK, Called,

An Account of FAMILISM, as it is Revived and Propagated by the QUAKERS.

By WILLIAM PENN.

But all theſe Things will they do unto you for my Name's Sake: Yea, the Time cometh, that whoſoever killeth you, ſhall think he doth God Service. But be of good Cheer, I have overcome the World. John xv. 21. and xvi. Ver. 2. 33.

TO THE

Juſtices of the Peace in the County of Suſſex.

A Certain Perſon in your Parts hath lately troubled himſelf and the World with a Book, entituled, An Account of Familiſm, as it is reviv'd and propagated by the Quakers; and this dedicated to Sir J. Covert, Knight and Baronet, &c. How ill he ſpent his Time in Writing it, and how unadviſed he was in publiſhing it, an impartial Peruſal of this ſmall Diſcourſe will briefly yet abundantly manifeſt.

I come not to you for Protection (a Thing he and his Cauſe wanted) but for Impartiality and Juſtice; Truth is ſufficient to patronize and defend her own Cauſe from the Laſh of Envy, without the weak Auxiliaries of Human Force; She gives Sanctuary to all that take to her for Refuge, but is all-ſufficient to her own Relief from the deepeſt Preſſure, and moſt inveterate Proſecutions of her implacable Enemies.

And though the Evil Diſpoſition of the World to receive her Apologies, ſeems to conſpire with the Indefatigable Endeavours of Her Adverſaries to traduce Her; yet her own pureſt Innocency and Unwearied Patience hath ever in the End broke forth to that clear Conviction of it's Oppoſers, as hath prov'd at once both their Confutation and their Shame.

And let it ſeem no Riddle to you, that I write ſo aſſured of Truth on our Side, There is no Objection our Adverſary has made to the contrary, we ſhall not eaſily remove. Our Meanneſs in Quality, Breeding, Literature and Fortunes in the World (badges of Reproach with him) will receive an ample Parallel from the beſt Perſons and Times, and is ſo far from making to Overthrow, that if the Scripture and other Story be to be credited, they tell us, that not many Wiſe, Learned or Noble; Not that they are excluded, but as Perſons ſtumbled at the Croſs of Chriſt, and the Simplicity of the Goſpel, through the Power that Greatneſs and Pleaſure have with them, they exclude themſelves.

But ſince Great and Rich Men have Souls to be ſaved as well as Poor, it is equally their Concern to inform themſelves of that Way which moſt aſſuredly leads to the reſt that is Eternal. I confeſs the Variety of Sects in the World to be a great Diſcouragement, eſpecially when we conſider with what Confidence each Party pleads the Truth and Divine Original of his own Perſwaſion; But Men are not to be ſatisfied with Pretence but Evidence: Education is too ſhort, nor will Tradition reach far enough, to aſcertain any Man of the Verity of his Perſwaſion.

Could the two firſt have done, there had been no Need of Relinquiſhing the Roman Church, who was neither wanting in Pretences, nor an Education prejudic'd enough againſt all Reformation; And if Tradition had been all-ſufficient, the Direction of God's Unerring Grace, and the neceſſary Conviction of Men's Reaſons, might have been ſpared.

For if Men are to believe what is recommended for true, becauſe Recommended, and not becauſe True, we are to believe we know not what, and ſhall be to ſeek ſo far for a Reaſon for the Hope that is in us, that in Reality we can have no other Anſwer to give, than that ſuch or ſuch told us ſo, and therefore we believe it: But if the Ground of our Faith ought to be more ſure and better founded, it will ſtand us greatly upon to examine, What is the Reaſon we have to render for our Faith and Hope in God, and that Belief we have of Holy Scripture? If we err here our Building is inſecure; and the Danger is, that we ſhall not only one Day loſe our Faith, but, which is worſe, our Souls too. This neceſſarily brings a Man to a more Inward Search and Teſtimony, ſome Divine Principle in Man, planted by God himſelf, which gives to believe that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that fear him.

This the beſt Heathens, as well as Jews and Chriſtians, have highly venerated, and many are the Teſtimonies they have left upon Record, to the Divine Original, and excellent Uſe of it, both to know God, and our ſelves; And truly it was this Holy Principle in all Ages that hath attended Mankind with thoſe Checks, Reproofs and Directions, by which he hath had any Diſcerning of what ſhould, from what ſhould not be done. This is that which has given him the certain Sound and true Reliſh of what God has ever required at his Hand, as ſaid the Prophet Micah, God hath ſhewed thee, O Man, what is Good, and what he requires from thee; to do Juſtice, love Mercy, and walk humbly with thy God, Mic. 6. 8. In the Pſalms thus, Thou giveſt thy Mouth to Evil, and thy Tongue frameth Deceit: Thou ſitteſt and ſpeakeſt againſt thy Brother; Theſe Things haſt thou done, and I kept Silence; Thou thoughteſt I was altogether ſuch an one as thy ſelf, but I will Reprove thee, and ſet them in order before thine Eyes, ſaith the Lord. And the Apoſtle Paul tells us, Whatever may be known of God is manifeſted within. And what can that be by which God ſo manifeſteth himſelf, but what Moſes called the Word nigh, in the Heart, that the Children of Iſrael were to obey; That Job calls Light, which the Wicked rebel againſt, not loving the Ways thereof: The like doth Chriſt in John, when he complained, that Men would not bring their Deeds to be examined by it. In all Ages hath the Almighty more or leſs pleaded his own Cauſe in the Conſciences of all People by this Divine Principle of Light, however variouſly denominated; And whatever Faith or Hope Man has, not grounded upon the Diſcoveries, Convictions and Directions of This, it is a by-rote Faith, Hope, and Religion.

Therefore I beſeech you to whom this Diſcourſe is more particularly dedicated, to conſider of us, not by Tradition, Education, Religions eſtabliſht by Humane Laws, or Imperial Decrees, but by that Underſtanding this Immortal Law and 1673. Everlaſting Foundation of Virtue (as Heathen Plutarch calls it) will afford you to judge us by.

Ever-

It has been Man's Venturing to wade into the Holy Scriptures without this Divine Principle, that has cauſed ſo many fearful Miſcarriages about Religion. Something in Man prompts him to Religion, but Man being not wholly guided by that which ſo inſpires him with Religious Deſires, haſtily ſpoils all with the Intermixture of his own Fancies and Conceits; and becauſe He is aſſured that What firſt inclined him was Right, he ſticks not to ſtile his own Inventions Orthodox; and then impatient of Contradiction, with a Fury, as great as his Ignorance, endeavours the Overthrow of whatever ſtands in his Way, and refuſes to receive his Mark in his Forehead, or in his Right Hand. This has occaſioned ſo much Trumpery in Religion; Ceremonies, Shew, and meer Formality have ſwallowed up the greateſt part of it: Now were Men brought to God's Heavenly Gift in themſelves, it would reclaim and leaven the Mind, chain the Affections, and bring Religion into Holy and Self-denying Living, and erect an Holy Regiment in the Heart and Soul, by which the Heavenly Image would be renewed, and Man become as one born again, without which Tranſlation, there can be no entring into God's Heavenly Kingdom.

This the firſt Proteſtants made to be their Reaſon of their Revolt from Rome: For though 'tis true, that they charged the Papiſts with making God's Tradition (the Holy Scriptures) void by their numerous dark Traditions; yet That which begot that Holy Loathing of Rome's Superſtitions, Idolatries and Will-Worſhip, was God's Grace in the Hearts; and their beſt Argument againſt Rome's Aſſaults was this, The Scripture which I believe from the Teſtimony of the Spirit of God in me, and which I can only underſtand from the Illumination thereof, owns no ſuch Thing, and therefore I reject it.

Such as converſe with Luther and his Followers, Zuinglius and his Followers, will find this to have been the Foundation of their whole Work. And our own Martyrology is full to our Purpoſe, particularly Tindal, Tims and Philpot.

I omit to mention a whole Cloud of Witneſſes, becauſe I intend not to dwell here; only this I would be at, and I intreat you all to weigh it, If any Thing can give to underſtand aright, and enable to practiſe thoſe Things of God, which it is neceſſary for Man both to know and do, but God's Light, Grace or Word in the Heart; What elſe can give us to reliſh the Divine Authority of the Scriptures themſelves, or to believe the Things therein treated of to be undeniable Truths? Indeed, the Want of This has been a great Occaſion of Atheiſm; Man making, practiſing and enacting That for Religion, of which People have had no Aſſurance in themſelves: But if they ſhould ſpeak their Hearts, 'tis more probable, They do not believe it, but inſtead thereof deride it, and ſo under a Shew of Religion, live as Men without God in the World.

To prevent which, and to bring Men to the true Underſtanding of what God expects from them, in order to that great Account they are to give unto Him at the Revelation of his Righteous Judgments (when he will judge the Secrets of all Men by Jeſus Chriſt) we do exhort all to Chriſt's Pure, Unerring Light in the Conſcience, (John 8. 12. 1 John 1. 5, 6, 7.) which is ſufficient to daily Underſtanding and Duty, that what they believe and profeſs in Matters of ſo high Importance, They may be convinced in their very Conſcience, by the good Underſtanding the Inſpiration of the Almighty gives, of the Truth and Neceſſity thereof; and not ſuffer themſelves to be carried away with the Torrent of Fathers, Councils, Synods, Doctors, Scholars, National Conſtitutions, &c. (big and moſt Times untrue, and too often empty Words) without that inward Conviction and Teſtimony of God's Good Spirit in Your Own Conſciences, the old Proteſtant, and only primitive Ground of True Faith and Obedience.

I know, and ſhall always acknowledge, that in the Time of Ignorance the Almighty winked, and that in every Age he has expreſſed his Regard to thoſe under the various Forms of Religion ever in the World, who have been Sincere-hearted and of Sober and Conſcientious Converſation; But I muſt alſo tell you, that by how much the more, needleſs and unwarrantable Cuſtoms, Will-Worſhip and Human Religion built upon the dark and uncertain Conjectures of Men, are receded from, and the Minds of People engaged in a diligent Attendance upon that Divine Principle which only can clear up their Underſtandings, and give them an experimental Knowledge of the True God, and that Way of Worſhip and Service which may be moſt acceptable with him, by ſo much more certain will they be of the Truth of their Religion, in as much as they have over and above all external Record, the Aſſurance of Unqueſtionable Convictions in their own Conſciences.

Thus God, that made Heaven and Earth, knows, we came to receive that Knowledge of him, Which we now expoſe our ſelves to all Hardſhips, to maintain.

We profeſt God; but like our Neighbours, in Works we denied him. We worſhipp'd him after Man's Conceivings, inſomuch that I may ſay, we worſhipp'd the Unknown God in a Falſe Way. No doubt but we were ſtockt with the Common Talk of Religion, but the Croſs of Chriſt we were Strangers to. His Blood we extolled, whilſt by Wicked Works, we trod it under Foot; And believed our ſelves ſaved by it, Who were uncleanſed from Sin. The whole End of his Coming we eſteemed the Top of all Love; but never knew enough of it, truly kindled in our Hearts, whereby to work ſuch Faith and Reſignation, as could give us Victory over the World. Thus were we Jews-like Children of God whilſt we crucified the Son of God; and of the Seed of Abraham, whilſt the Serpents Seed reign'd; Heirs of the Kingdom, yet not born again; Free, yet the Bondſlaves of Vanity. O! at this Time of Day it was that God found us out, and broke in upon our Souls with his Righteous Judgments for Sin, and laid Judgment to the Line, and Righteouſneſs to the Plummet, within us; the Book of Conſcience was opened, and great Fear ſurpriſed us, and deep Sorrow fell upon us; which brought that ſudden and Strange Change, that made us both the Deriſion of Prophane, and Wonder of Sober Men.

The Author of the Account of Familiſm, for want of more Skill, and Serioûſneſs, calls it the Hypochondria, as if it had been only a Flux of Melancholy overpowering the Strength of Reaſon, and carrying the Underſtanding captive at the Impetuoſity of it's Fancies. But having been thus made ſenſible of the Terrors of the Lord for Sin, and being brought into a True Underſtanding of that Religion and Worſhip which moſt pleaſe God, ſome of us were conſtrained, and in Conſcience bound, to go forth into the World, and publiſh theſe Tidings of Judgment for Sin, and Converſion through Righteouſneſs, wrought by the mighty Power of God in the Conſcience, that all might be awakened to try their Works, Faiths, Worſhips and whole Religions, whether they were of God or Men; or they had been doing their own Wills, or the Will of God; that ſo they might be brought to experience God to be a God nigh at hand, reconciled in Chriſt, blotting out Sin, and renewing a Right Spirit within, by which their Religion might not longer ſtand in the Traditions of Men, or on the Education of Parents, but upon the Convictions and Operations of God's Grace in the Conſcience. And thus is all that Chriſt did without brought nigh and home to the very Soul. The Seed of the Woman is known to Bruiſe the Head of the Serpent; Chriſt, the Light, and Lamb that taketh away the Sins of the World, not only to take away Sins paſt through Remiſſion, but Cleanſe from the Nature, Root and Ground of Sin, by His Holy Blood, which ſprinkles all Conſciences that wait and walk in the Light (the Juſt Man's Path) from Dead Works, to ſerve the Living Lord God in Uprightneſs for ever.

For this Cauſe are We brought out into the World; and behold the Veſſel we are embark'd in, our Lading and the Country we make for! The Veſſel, Truth; the Lading, Faith and Good Works; Our Souls, the Paſſengers; and the Country, the Land of Everlaſting Reſt.

This I could not but preſent you with, that no Endeavours of our Enemies may be able to lodge a falſe Character of us and our Principles with you; Though I muſt faithfully tell you, that I ſhould wrong my own Reaſon, as well as your Judgment, and ſpeak againſt my Conſcience too, if I ſhould let in one Thought of this Man's Ability to do us any great Miſchief with you: for, out of no Inſult, but in Real Truth, I take Him for a very Unskilful Pilot on our Coaſt, a Man unacquainted with our Concerns; and a moſt Incompetent Perſon for an Antagoniſt.

Accept (for I can aſk no Excuſe for) my Plainneſs, I have not fawned, I never could, and now much leſs: Theſe Matters not only deſerve, but require greateſt Plainneſs. And Men that believe they ſhall have to do with God, after they have left having to do with Men, ought to act with greateſt Circumſpection and Sincerity. Remember your Original; remember your End; and know aſſuredly that but Breath is in your Noſtrils; and for every Deed done in this Mortal Body, whether it be good or whether it be evil, will God, the Righteous Judge, require an Account from You before his great Tribunal, where may you all be able to anſwer with Joy,

I am Your Faithful Friend,

Chap. I.

CHAP. I.

THE Adverſary we have to do withal begins his Dedicatory Epiſtle thus, The daily and Numerous Encreaſe of the Heretical Generation of Quakers in theſe Parts made me a little more then ordinarily inquiſitive into their Doctrines and Perſwaſions; which I found not only Deſtructive of Civil Government, but of Religion it ſelf.

'Tis natural with Ignorance to be Proud, and Envy to ſlander. His Enquiry has been at our Adverſaries Doors, not ours. They that read him, and thoſe Books that lately came out, may know his Informers without farther Coſt: But Book-Robbery, though to Untruth, is an old Prieſt-trick.

If his Sort of rendring us inconſiſtent with Government could incenſe the Civil Magiſtrate to our Deſtruction, we know very well Traducers would not be wanting. Truth has never been perſecuted under it's own Name: Hereſy is an old Blot the Devil has caſt upon it, that it may become ſuſpected with the Simple; And Chriſtians were of old worried in Beaſt-Skins: Such Coverings the preſent Heathen Spirit has provided for us. But as we cannot but bleſs the Name of Al- Jer. 31. 33, 34. Heb. 8. 10. mighty God, that he has brought us to the Knowledge of his good old Way of Truth in the Inward Parts; So do we affirm it to be neither averſe from Government, nor deſtructive of Religion; right Government being according to it; and Jam. 1. 27. pure Religion being to keep our ſelves Unſpotted from the World, and to do or ſuffer, which we have ever done: and God knows, to that is the Tendency of our Holy Principle, to wit, Moderation, Juſtice, Induſtry, Temperance and Upright Converſation. But the true Engliſh of this wicked Suggeſtion is no more than this; The Quakers and their Perſwaſion are inconſiſtent with Will-Worſhippers, Hirelings, Men-Pleaſers, Perſecutors and Oppreſſors; They give the World an Alarm for theſe Things, and Round their Ears with the Neceſſity of walking in ſo ſtreight and narrow a Way, as gives great Diſquiet to the Libertine, and brings the Prieſts Qualification into great Queſtion, and his Trade into abſolute Danger.

No wonder then, ſo many hard Names are caſt upon us, to deter ſuch as are unacquainted with us; and beget Scruples in them that are Well-diſpoſed to us. However, this Contentment this Paragraph gives, that notwithſtanding all this Oppoſition, we daily and numerouſly encreaſe, for which my Soul is greatly glad, and my Knees bow to the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, that he would continue to proſper and ſpeed his own great Work of Redemption in the Earth. But he goes on.

For what elſe can be expected from them who deny the Scripture to be the Word of God, and Rule and Guide in Matters of Salvation.

Anſw. We do not deny the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and Rule and Guide in Matters of Salvation, out of any Undervalue of them, but from that reverent Regard we have to Chriſt the Great and Eminent Word, who was with John 14. Acts 7. 37. God, and was God, by whom all Things were made, Who is the Way, Truth and Life, the great Prophet, Judge, Law-giver and Prieſt to his People, whoſe Lips preſerve Knowledge. He is the New Covenant, Rule and Judge, and without him we can neither underſtand nor believe the Scriptures as we ſhould do; Nay, ſo far are they from being a Rule, &c. that a Thouſand Caſes may happen wherein they cannot be a Direction to us. Nay, they may be burned, drowned, torn, loſt, miſtranſlated, added to, diminiſht, Men may be robbed of them, impriſoned from them; but none of all this can or ought to be ſaid of the Great Goſpel-Rule: God has ever been Sufficient to his People in every Age; And ſince they only are Children of God, who are led by the Spirit of God, and that it is the Spirit of God alone which leads into all Truth, It follows that the Law of the Spirit of Life, writ in the Heart, and not a Law writ on Paper (a State leſs excellent than the Jews, whoſe Law was written upon Stone) is the great Evangelical Rule of Living; Yet are the Scriptures an Holy Declaration of the Word of God, and of the Rule and Guide in Matters of Salvation: And we reject for ever that Spirit which leads into thoſe Principles and Practices, that in the leaſt contradict the ſtanding and permanent Truths therein mentioned; For they were written by Holy Men of God, being inſpired thereto, and contain Godly Reproof, Admonition, Exhortation and Prophecies, for the Edification of the Church, and perfecting the Man of God to every good Word and Work, through Faith in Chriſt Jeſus; and as ſuch, many Directions, Precepts and Rules are therein laid down, yet they all refer to the Grace, Light, Spirit, Word or Anointing within, as That by which Man ought to be Ruled, Governed and Ordered to God's Glory and his own Comfort, as they firſt were who gave them forth; for they were Witneſſes of the Truth of what they writ. So that they are an Holy Declaration of the Way of God, and that Holy Principle which leads to it, and in it, without which the Book is ſealed, the Scriptures are unknown; and conſequently not the Scriptures, but that Holy Key of David is the Rule, how far, and which Way we are both to underſtand, interpret, believe and practiſe them.

Tit. 2. 11, 12
Rom. 8. 13,
14.
1 John 2. 27.
Read Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for old Chriſtianity, from pag. 24. to p. 202.
Alſo Reaſon againſt Railing. from p. 24. to p. 47.

This may be enough to ſhew the Diſingenuity of our Adverſary in repreſenting us to his Knight; For becauſe We cannot give that Title and Office due to Chriſt himſelf from him to his bare Declaration, he would inſinuate that we refuſe all Conformity to the Holy Examples and Teſtimonies therein related and expreſt, as if we were a moſt diſſolute Crew of Libertines.

But he tells us, that this Perſon (whoſe Name I ſuppoſe we ſhall prove he has made too bold with) ſo well knowing our obſtinate and perverſe Humour, in the Diſcharge of his Truſts committed to him under his Moſt Sacred Majeſty, he could do no leſs than preſent him with this Treatiſe, that going under the Name and Protection of ſo worthy and accompliſht a Perſon, it may in ſome meaſure obtain it's deſired Effect, by putting a Stop to the growing Evil, and confirming thoſe who are not ſeduced in the Truth of their Profeſſion. A moſt non-ſenſical Expreſſion.

Anſw. But I am willing to hope better Things of him, than that he ſhould go upon the Prieſt's Meſſage, or turn their Knight Errand. But what's the Matter that the Quakers are ſo Perverſe? They cannot ſay right Worſhipful, becauſe they think that of right belongs to God; nor moſt ſacred Majeſty, that being fit for no mortal Man: Neither can they lie and flatter with Your moſt obliged and affectionate Servant, for they are more obliged to God than Man, and to one Man more than another. He either knew not, forgot, or ſlighted the Rebuke of Paulinus to Sulpitius Severus, who ſaid, It becometh not Chriſt's Free-men to ſubſcribe themſelves Servant, &c. But it is nothing with ſuch as our Adverſary to Cog, Lie and Flatter; 'Tis one Part of his Manners.

I would fain know what Rule he had for all this? Did the Holy Prophets and Apoſtles teach him any ſuch Traſh? Will he prate of Scripture for a Rule, and yet bridle his Flattering Tongue no better? The Cuſtoms of the Heathens have entred the Profeſſion of Chriſtianity, and that Old Spirit under this New Trim goes off for a very Good Chriſtian.

O, but the Quakers are obſtinate in other Caſes for all this!

Anſw. Why ſo? Becauſe they will by all Means ſtand to their Principles; They will not play the Sycophants; Threats do not fright them, nor Promiſes gain them; They love their Conſcience above their Conveniency; and ſeek to pleaſe God rather than Men. Perhaps, this Sort of Men the Knight has found them, but could have wiſht them more pliant to the Laws, it may be, that he might have ſome colour to be kind: Muſt therefore this Buſy-Body entitle his Name to all his own Follies, Lyes and Slanders againſt us? What can any moderate Perſon think, but that the Patron of ſuch a Diſcourſe has been an eminent Perſecutor, whoſe Protection is ſo plainly called for to a Book that without doubt would have him ſo? For my Part, I think the Knight ought to repute that Ignorant and Diſingenuous Diſcourſe ſo far from being a Teſtimony how much the Author is his moſt obliged and affectionate Servant, that for Intereſting his Name and Power therein, he ſhould hereafter look upon him as an Enemy to him, his Name and Family.

Before I conclude, give me leave to aſk him, why he ſought for Protection? Is his national Cauſe defended by Princes, Parliaments, Navies, Armies, the Learned, Rich and Powerful Clergy, both Univerſities, the Generality of the Gentry and Commonalty, ſo weak and gaſping; or are the poor deſpiſed, traduced and troden down Quakers ſo potent and terrible, that a Book of eight Sheets dare not peep 1673. out againſt them, but a big Title muſt be got to recommend and patronize it. But how Worthy ſoever the Knight be, that will not hinder my Proceeding to ſhew the Unworthineſs of the Book, and therein of the Author, as well to his Patron as the deſpiſed Quakers.

Chap. II.

CHAP. II.

Containing an Anſwer to his firſt Chapter, in which he pretends an Agreement to be between the Quakers and other Ancient and Modern Hereticks.

The Compariſon Examined and Proved Defective.

OUR Adverſary, that he may the better Prejudice his Reader againſt us, introduceth his Diſcourſe with a Compariſon of us, to the moſt noted and odious of the reputed ancient and modern Hereticks, doubtleſs hoping, that what he wants of Argument to render us ſuch, may be ſupplied by that ill Opinion, Men have of thoſe he brings us into parallel with. The firſt Man he thought fit to pitch upon is Simon Magus, a Man famous for his infamous Sorceries, with whom he wickedly yoaks that faithful Miniſter of God, George Fox, becauſe, ſaith he, Simon Magus gave out that he was God the Father; And George Fox before the Juſtices at Lancaſter, that he was equal with God.

Anſ. There is no believing a decimating, perſecuting Prieſt, againſt a Quaker till he makes more Conſcience of telling Lyes, who hath given too many Demonſtrations of his Deſire to have us run down at any rate, to be credited by thoſe who love Truth more than Partiality.

George Fox denies the Words, they were never ſo ſpoken by him, much leſs were they ever intended in that Way our Adverſary takes and improves them; For though there be not an Equality, yet there is an Unity, as teſtifieth the Scripture; Phil. 2.6. Let the ſame Mind be in you, that was alſo in Chriſt Jeſus, who being in the Form of God, thought it not Robbery to be equal with God. And He that ſanctifieth, Heb. 2.11. and they that are ſanctified are all of One; for which Cauſe he is not aſhamed to call them Brethren. Again, They that are joyned to the Lord are One Spirit; and, He 1 Joh. 3.7. that doth Righteouſneſs is Righteous, even as He is Righteous. To deny this is to deny the moſt Heavenly Benefit we have by Chriſt, namely, that Unity and Fellowſhip we have with the Father and with the Son, That it was an Unity, not an Equality, eſpecially in the Senſe he takes the Word, the faithful Narrative of that Proceeding, printed in the Year 1654. will farther teſtify.

How great then muſt this Man's Miſcarriage be, who, to render a good Man an Impoſtor, turns Forger himſelf? But God will reward him.

The next Pair he pitches upon to prove his Aſſertion, is Menander and James Naylor. (pag. 3.) The one for affirming Himſelf to be ſent from the inviſible Regions to be the Saviour of Mankind. And James Nailor for aſſerting himſelf to be Chriſt, and accepting Hoſannahs and Divine Worſhip in the Streets of Briſtol.

Anſ. What Menander was I know not, and it is hard believing a Character of any Man, when it is given by his Enemy: But ſure I am that James Naylor never aſſerted himſelf to be the Chriſt of God; Neither did he ever deny Him that appeared at Jeruſalem to be the Lord's Chriſt, as his Writings plentifully declare, eſpecially one Paper written by him to the then Parliament, when a Priſoner in Bridewel.

“ Chriſt Jeſus the Emmanuel (of whoſe Sufferings the Scriptures declare) Him “ Alone I confeſs before Men, for whoſe ſake I have deny'd whatever was “ dear to me in this World, that I might win him, and be found in him and not
“ in my ſelf, whom alone I ſeek to ſerve in Body, Soul and Spirit, Night and Day, “ according to the Meaſure of Grace working in me; even to that Eternal Spirit
“ be Glory, and to the Lamb for ever. But to aſcribe this Power and Virtue to “ James Naylor, or for that to be exalted or worſhipped, To me is great Idolatry.
“ So having an Opportunity given (with Readineſs) I am willing, in the Fear of “ God the Father, in Honour to Chriſt Jeſus, and to take off all Offences from every “ Simple Heart, without Guile or Deceit.

His third Compariſon lies betwixt Photinus who is ſaid to have denied the Trinity, and G. Fox, as guilty of the ſame Error in his Account. pag. 4.

Anſ. I can find no ſuch Place in the Book ſo called; Either our Adverſary ſets up for a New Controvertiſt, or he diſhoneſtly ſhunned giving us the Page: But I am willing to believe, that he took it as he found it in ſome other Adverſary; for any Thing reported or printed againſt a Quaker, is ground enough for an envious Prieſt to accuſe him.

But what if G. Fox denyed the Unſcriptural Expreſſions, viz. The Trinity of diſtinct and ſeparate Perſons? muſt it neceſſarily follow that he denyed the Three that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, Word and Spirit? We juſtly renounce thoſe Barbarous-School Terms, as not ſuited to God's Heavenly Manifeſtations, but the dark Conceits of ſome Popiſh Doctors. 1 John 5.

His fourth Compariſon is made between Socinus and James Naylor, in that the one denyed the Satiſfaction of Jeſus Chriſt, and look'd upon his Paſſion only as an Example. Pag. 4.

The other in that he affirmed, the End for which Chriſt did ſuffer, was to be a living Example to all Generations, Love to the loſt. p. 50.

Anſw. He has not truly delivered the Opinion of Socinus, whoſe Books ſhew, (however miſtaken about Chriſt's Divinity) that he ever eſteemed his Death and Paſſion to have more in it, than a bare Example: Nor has he faithfully dealt with J. Naylor in this Quotation; For firſt I find not the Words as cited: and next, the Word (ONLY) is by himſelf omitted, which alone renders the Paſſage Heterodox. Suppoſe then that J. Naylor writ, that Chriſt was in his Suffering a Living Example to all Generations; Is there no Difference between Chriſt's being in his Death and Paſſion only our Example, which he charges upon Socinus, and Chriſt's being our living Example in Suffering, which he attributes to J. Naylor? How can there be a Compariſon, where there is ſo great a Diſparity? The Firſt is denyed by all that own Chriſt: The Laſt is owned by all that do not deny Peter, who thus writ to the ſcattered Brethren, For even hereunto were ye called, becauſe Chriſt alſo ſuffered for us, leaving us an Example that ye ſhould follow his Steps. 1 Pet. 2. 21.

His fifth Compariſon he makes between the Valentinians and the Quakers. The Former, he ſays, arrogated to themſelves a Knowledge beyond Chriſt and his Apoſtles; The Latter, impudently throw away the written Word of God, and delude the credulous Vulgar, with new fangled Revelations; which he thinks he has prov'd by two Inſtances. 1. That Tho. Hollbrow a Quaker, to one that urged Scripture, anſwered, “ What doſt thou tell me of Scripture, which is no more to me than an old “ Almanack. 2. That Fox and Hubberthorn in a Book, called Truth's Defence, ſay, “ The Scriptures are no ſtanding Rule, and it is dangerous for ignorant People to “ read them. Pag. 4, 5, 6.

Anſw. To the firſt I ſay, there is great Difference between one that was no Quaker, and one that was or is a Quaker; We have examined the Matter, and by all we can find, both that Saying is not true as charged, and it is of an ancienter Date than the Coming of any of our Friends into thoſe Parts, therefore not the Saying of a true Quaker. To the Second I return thus much, 'Tis true there is ſuch a Book, and it was written by G. Fox, and R. Hubberthorn; but he has not given us ſo much as one Page to direct us to the Paſſage: So that either People muſt read till they find it, or elſe take his Perverſion for our Aſſertion. Unworthy Man! does he think us ſuch Wretches, that we deſerve not common Juſtice? Methinks Juſtice ſhould not be denyed where ſo little Mercy is ſhewn.

But to anſwer the Inſtance. Our Judgment about the Scriptures being the Rule, we have already delivered; And in what Senſe it is dangerous to read them, their own Book will declare.

“ 'Tis dangerous, ſay G. Fox. and R. Hubberthorn, to read the Scripture in Or-“ der to make War againſt the Saints, to give carnal Expoſitions upon them, and “ Meanings contrary to them, and to make a Trade of them; but bleſſed is he that “ doth read and doth underſtand them. If this prove that Slight to Scripture, our Adverſary would ſuggeſt them to be guilty of, then let us be condemned: But God's Witneſs in every unſeared Conſcience will acquit them, and judge him for corrupt Citation, and hard Speeches, who dares to cry thereupon, Are not theſe as Impudent Hereticks, as the Valentinians (whom he repreſents to have arrogated to themſelves a Knowledge above Chriſt and his Apoſtles) which, how true ſoever it may be of them, I am ſure is falſe enough of us; for thoſe hideous Conſequences he makes, are not deducible from any unperverted Saying to be cited out of Truth's Defence.

And leſt any ſhould think, we deny, with the Papiſts, the Peruſal of the Scriptures to Ignorant People, from what our Adverſary ſays, know that they ſpoke of ſuch Ignorant and Unlearned Perſons, as in reading, wreſted them to their own Deſtruction;

1673. ſtruction; now unleſs it be not dangerous to read to Deſtruction, they are not chargeable with Blame in that Matter.

Chap. II. But who are the Knowing and Learned? The Jewiſh Doctors? and Greek Philoſophers? No, but Fiſhermen and poor Mechanicks diſcipled in Chriſt's School, for the Excellency of whoſe Knowledge Paul reputed his Gamaliel-Acquiſitions, but Droſs and Dung: So that their Knowing and Learned are many Times the Ignorant and Unlearned we ſpeak of, whoſe Wiſdom God will confound, and whoſe Underſtanding he will bring to nought.

Pag. 6. His laſt Compariſon of us in this Chapter is, with Marcus, an old Heretick. The Agreement he makes betwixt us lyes in our mutual Pretences to Inſpiration and Prophecy. For as he reports him to have abuſed many ſilly Women, under Colour of conferring on them the Gift of Propheſying, and that he had a familiar Spirit by which he brought himſelf into Credit with his deluded Followers; So he tells us that he has had it confidently affirmed, that about the firſt Riſe of the Quakers, in the North of England, ſeveral Perſons by Gloves and Ribbands and divers Charms were really bewitched by them. And doubtleſs many of their Quaking Fits were real Poſſeſſions by the Devil.

Pag. 7. Anſw. What Marcus was is nothing to us; If he has done amiſs, he has anſwered for it by this Time. I confeſs, I am not over fond of the Characters left us of ancient Hereticks, knowing what Kind of Creatures the beſt Proteſtants are with Papiſts; and what fearful Monſters ſeveral ſober Separatiſts are reputed among ſome Proteſtants: But this I know, if what he hath ſaid of ſeveral Ancients be no truer than what he hath ſaid of us, he has groſly abuſed their Doctrines and their Memories.

For the Witchcraft of Gloves, Ribbands and Charms, 'tis ſcarce worth my Notice; his Folly in mentioning it, being a ſufficient Reproof and Confutation to himſelf. A Story fit for none at this Time of Day, to report or believe, but a Man of his Size. I thought they had been worn out by this Time.

But let the ſober Reader judge, which Savours moſt of Satan's Deſign, this idle, yet Scandalous, Story, or our fearing and trembling at the Word of the Lord, and thoſe Terrors that broke in upon our Souls, becauſe of Sin and Iniquity? 'Tis but the old Spirit of Mockery, that acted the Jews and Heathens againſt the Chriſtians, and Papiſts againſt Proteſtants, and too many Proteſtants of ſeveral Sorts, againſt ſome more reformed Seperatiſts.

For had the Reverend Fear of God poſſeſſed our Adverſary's Heart, in the writing of this Diſcourſe, there had been no Room for ſuch irreligious Scoffs againſt an inoffenſive People. But the Devil, becauſe he would be God, calls God the Devil, and Chriſt Beelzebub; Light, Darkneſs; and the Power of God, the Power of Satan; and the Fear and Trembling brought by the one, the Poſſeſſions and Witchcrafts of the other. Certainly ſuch Men live in a dry Land, they ſee not when Good cometh. But what will not an enraged Tything Prieſt do to deſtroy us, who (he knows) are Diſcoverers of ſuch Deluders?

Chap. III.

CHAP. III.

His pretended Agreement between the Authors of Familiſm and the Quakers conſidered. His Objections anſwered.

I Now come to conſider the Reaſon of the Title of his Book, and what Ground he had to name us, the Revivers and Propagators of Familiſm, with the moſt weighty Objections he makes againſt us, (if in Truth I may repute the ſtrongeſt of them ſuch) and that with what Brevity, Truth and Faithfulneſs I can.

The great Authors of this Doctrine of Familiſm, he ſays, were David George and Henry Nicholas, but more eſpecially the latter, as having more improved and diſſemminated the pernicious Errors introduced by the former. He beſtows many ſevere Expreſſions upon them, more, I think, than becomes a Man of any Charity to give. I am not their Advocate; but ſo much Spleen and ſo little Reaſon, againſt Dead Men, can be neither Chriſtian nor Manly. What he ſays they held, and how far we are concerned in it, it is our Buſineſs to enquire.

§. 1. Of Chriſt's Miniſtration.

And firſt he tells us, that H. N. ſhould ſay, “ that not only the Law of Moſes “ but the Miniſtration of Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, were only temporary Things inſtituted to bring Men to the perfect Reign of the Spirit; and then, like Horn-

Books and Primmers to grown Underſtandings, to be thrown away, p. 10, 11. And that this is the full Senſe of the Quakers, ſays our Adverſary, p. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14. Hear John Crook a Quaker; "We believe by the ſame Gift of Grace, that there are ſeveral Miniſtrations, and ſeveral Operations, according to 1 Cor. 12. And all by the ſame Spirit, as before and after the Law by Moſes, and after by John the Baptiſt, and Chriſt and his Apoſtles. And by this Spirit were the Scriptures given forth, and the Holy Men of God did ſpeak, propheſy, preach and pray, as they were Moved; and to anſwer the Service God had for them to do, they were to wait, as Chriſt commanded his Diſciples, to receive the Promiſe of the Father —— And therefore as it was the Practice of the People of God in old Time, to wait for the Moving of this Spirit, that they might ſpeak as it gave them Utterance in the Evidence and Demonſtration thereof; ſo do this People, called Quakers, now. Upon which our Adverſary dares to obſerve, that we, with the Familiſts, deny the Miniſtration of Chriſt to be the Miniſtration of the Spirit, and conſequently charges us with a Blaſphemous Derogation from the Honour of our Bleſſed Saviour, who ſaid to his Apoſtles, John 16. 14. He ſhall receive of mine, and ſhew it unto you.

Anſw. If our Adverſary's Weakneſs has run him into this ſtrange Parallel, he is to be pity'd; but if his Envy, he is ſeverely to be rebuked. Will any Man that has Senſe or Honeſty ſay, it is all one to affirm that Chriſt's Miniſtration is an Horn-book that Time caſts off with Infancy; and that it is a Waiting to receive the ſame Spirit Chriſt commanded his Apoſtles to wait for, as the Promiſe of the Father, and the peculiar Gift and Privilege of his own Miniſtration? Does not J. Crook expreſly draw a Parallel between the Holy Men of God of old, and the Quakers of our Time; that as they then, ſo the Quakers now wait to be taught, moved and ordered by the ſame Eternal Spirit, through which all come to be baptized into One Body? How was that then no Spiritual Miniſtration, when we deſire to be conformed unto the Spirit and Holy Example thereof, not making this a new, but reviving that old and durable Miniſtration of the Spirit? Therefore Blaſphemous Derogations will return to our Adverſary, as unduly charged upon us, with a Charge upon him of baſe Derogation from the Truth of our Belief.

But he thinks that Humph. Smith has made much for him in thus Querying; p. 15. "Whether ſhould People be led in theſe Days by Moſes, according to his Outward Miniſtration, or the Perſon of Chriſt, (limiting him to his Viſible Appearance) or the Spirit of Truth, which he promiſed to pour out after his Aſcenſion; which contains the Subſtance of what he quotes out of Humph. Smith, and to which he thus anſwers, There is no ſober Chriſtian can read this Paſſage without Anger and Diſdain to ſee ſuch wicked Wretches ſcoff, and fleeringly inſult upon the ſacred Perſon of our Lord Jeſus; The whole Hiſtory of whoſe Life and Death, in the Letter of it, they eſteem no better than one of Æſop's Fables.

Anſw. But our Adverſary will not ſo eaſily eſcape the Hands of the Juſt God, (whoſe is Vengeance) for theſe Ungodly Defamations, as he well knows he may do ours: Anger, Diſdain, and Lies, become him, and it is little to be wonder'd that he ſhould be guilty of them all againſt a Quaker. If H. Smith had aſſerted that Moſes could not be our Leader, neither the Viſible Perſon of Chriſt, but the Spirit of Truth, he had not exceeded the Warrant of Scripture, nor the very Judgment of this Reviler. It is not two Pages off that he quoted John 16. 14. He ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you: Which, if I underſtand any thing, imports thus much; That thoſe Things which they knew not whilſt Chriſt was with them, after his Aſcenſion the Holy Ghoſt ſhould reveal unto them, as theſe two preceding Verſes fully prove. I have yet many Things to ſay unto you, but ye cannot bear them now; Howbeit, when the Spirit of Truth is come, he will guide you into all Truth, and he will ſhew you Things to come. Nay, Chriſt himſelf ſays in the 7th Verſe, Nevertheleſs I tell you the Truth, It is expedient for you that I go away; For if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you. And in the 14th Chap. Verſe 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, he ſpeaks thus, I will pray the Father, and he will give you another Comforter, and will abide with you for ever, even the Spirit of Truth: So that the perſonal Miniſtration was manifeſtly tranſient and temporary; but That of the Spirit was to abide for ever. But I would not any ſhould think it to be leſs Chriſt's Miniſtration, becauſe the Miniſtration of the Spirit; for the Lord is that Spirit, as his own Words manifeſt: Again, I will not leave you Comfortleſs, I will come to you. Yet a little while, and the World ſeeth me no more, but ye ſee me: Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo; For he that dwelleth with you, ſhall be in you. At that Day you ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. And that this Comforter is Chriſt in his Spiritual Coming and Appearance, let it be farther obſerv'd, that the ſame Word for Comforter (Παράκλητος) in John 16. 7. is the Word uſed by the ſame Apoſtle in the firſt Verſe of the 2d Chapter of his firſt Epiſtle, for Advocate, when he ſays, We have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous.

In ſhort, the Diſpenſation of his Viſible Appearance was but Temporary: It is expedient for you that I go away. But his Miniſtration, who ſo appeared, then diſappeared, and after re-appeared in a Spiritual and unalterable Miniſtration, Lo, I am with you to the End of the World, Mat. 28. 20. And truly thus much our Adverſary (p. 13.) in Contradiction to himſelf, grants us, that the Miniſtration of Chriſt was indeed the Miniſtration of the Spirit. Now what Scoffs, Fleerings or Inſults againſt the ſacred Perſon of our Lord Jeſus any can ſee in this Doctrine, to incite a ſober Chriſtian to Anger and Diſdain, I leave to any but ſuch an Angry Diſdainful Enemy to judge?

I cannot forget this horrible Lye of us, concerning the Scripture, ſtolen probably out of an Anabaptiſts lying Dialogue lately printed againſt us. Prelaticks and Sectaries can ſometimes agree againſt Quakers, *Æſop's Fable*s have more Worth in them than all the Books that ever were written againſt the Quakers; I do not at all doubt but there are twenty Fables in Æſop, that, well conſidered, would have taught them more Diſcretion and (it ſhould have been their own Fault if not) more Honeſty too, than any or all of them have ſhewn in their utmoſt Endeavours againſt us. But that we have no more Regard to, nor Belief in the Holy Scriptures of Truth, than in Æſop's Fables, is a Story more prophane and fabulous than any Fable in Æſop; and God will recompence with a Vengeance this Defamer of an Innocent People, unleſs diverted by his unfeigned Repentance.

§. 2. Of Revelation.

He tells us, the ſecond Thing wherein the Familiſts and Quakers are all one, is the Pretence of Immediate Revelation. Dav. Geo. and H. N. both pretended to receive their Doctrine from the Angel Gabriel. And W. Gibſon, the Quaker, ſays, p. 16. that the Goſpel which they preach they have not received it from Men, nor from Books, nor from Writings, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt in them, and then denies the Scriptures of the old and New Teſtament to be the revealed Will of God.

Anſw. After what Manner D. G. and H. N. received their Commiſſion I know not, but ſure I am that W. Gibſon's Aſſertion is ſound. Take away Revelation and the Goſpel ceaſes of Courſe; Chriſt is put beſide the Dignity of his Prophetical and Prieſtly Office; the Promiſes of God will be broken; and the moſt excellent Part of the Scriptures, God's Traditions, made void. Who was it ſaid, A Prophet ſhall the Lord your God raiſe up like unto me, Deut. 18. 18. Him ſhall ye hear in all Things. There is a Spirit in Man; and the Inſpiration of the Almighty giveth Underſtanding, Job 32. 8. As for me, This is my Covenant with him, ſaith the Lord, My Spirit that is upon thee, and my Words which I have put in thy Mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy Mouth, nor out of the Mouth of thy Seed, nor out of the Mouth of thy Seed's Seed, ſaith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever, Iſa. 59. 21. I will Reveal unto them the Abundance of Peace and Truth—, Jer. 33. 6. I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe Things from the Wiſe and Prudent, and haſt Revealed them unto Babes—— And no Man knoweth the Father but the Son, and he to whom the Son will Reveal him, Matt. 11. 25, 27. No Man can come unto me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him. John 6. 44. But God hath Revealed them unto us by his Spirit. For the Spirit ſearcheth all things yea, the deep things of God. For the Things of God knoweth no Man but the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11. Chap. 14. 30, If any Thing be revealed to another that ſitteth by, let the firſt hold his Peace. For when it pleaſed God to Reveal his Son in me. For I neither received the Goſpel of Man, neither was I taught it, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt, Gal. 1. 12. 16. If any be otherwiſe minded, God will Reveal it to him, Phil. 3. 15. As I ſaid before, ſo again, Who uttered theſe excellent Sayings, and for what End? If no Inſpiration, no Underſtanding; If no Revelation, no Knowledge; And if the Spirit ceaſe to teach, (as it can never teach, but by Inſpiration or Revelation) then the Adminiſtration of Chriſt and his Apoſtles is ceaſed indeed; And ſo, not the Quakers, but their Adverſary overturns the Goſpel-Miniſtration, as begun and preached by Chriſt and his Apoſtles. And be it known to all the World, we think Revelation no Diſgrace to our Cauſe. Parrots may learn Scripture, but can never experience it; And thoſe know little better who know not by Experience: They are unprofitable Canters indeed, who confidently talk of what they never felt, and idle Boaſters who buoy up themſelves unto the Reputation of Miniſters and Chriſtians, with a loud Talk of their Travels, Tryals, Inſpirations, and Experiences, whom they plainly mock in their Poſterity, concluding all blind becauſe themſelves cannot ſee. In ſhort, Let it be the Character of the deſpiſed Quakers, (and we glory in it) that all the Councils, Synods, Univerſities, Doctors, Scholars, and the moſt Unanimous Decrees, Learned Books, and whatever the Power and Art of the Spirit of Man can produce, will never be able to give, or rule that true Faith which overcomes the World; For that which may be known of God is manifeſted within Man: And though outward Records may teſtify of and direct to that Unerring Light and Spirit, by which Man comes both to know God, and to be made Conformable to his Heavenly Image; yet nothing below the Diſcoveries, Convictions, and Effectual Operations of the Eternal Spirit, can give Man the certain Knowledge of God, nor that daily Ability by which alone he may be enabled to obey him.

Pag. 16, 17, 18. But he oppoſeth to us Miracles and Reaſon, inſinuating that we have no more of the laſt than the firſt, and therefore not to be believed. To the firſt, I ſay, we pretend to no other Religion, than what was profeſſed and practiſed by the Apoſtles, and therefore need no new Miracles after that Manner to confirm that which has been confirmed by Miracles already; eſpecially to thoſe who believe thoſe Miracles: And to deny Revelation where there are no Miracles, is to diſcard many of the Prophets, and to deny the Pouring forth of the Spirit upon the Primitive Chriſtians. But above all, hear the Man's Interpretation of Deut. 18. 22. When a Prophet ſpeaks in the Name of the Lord, if the Thing follow not, nor come to paſs; that is, ſaith this horrible Perverter of holy Scripture, if he do no Miracle; whereas the Verſe intends no ſuch Thing. Is this to rant over the Quakers for Idiots, as if he were ſome Doctor of the Chair, that where the Scripture ſpeaks of Prophecy, he ſhould render it Miracle; as if he that is a Prophet, is a Worker of Miracles, and that Miracles and Prophecy are equivalent? But (Argumentum ad hominem) let us ſee how it will hold. He that is a true Prophet muſt neceſſarily work Miracles; But the Prieſts of England cannot work Miracles; therefore, the Prieſts of England are all Falſe Prophets. A true Concluſion, yet falſe Premiſes; A Paradox. Now for the Reaſonableneſs of our Doctrine: 'He 'thinks a very mean Capacity can find none in it; for how ſhould there be any 'Reaſon in what they teach, when they themſelves, ſays he, deny the Uſe of 'Reaſon. (pag. 18.) But none have leſs than they which pretend to ſo much. This Man dares ſwagger for Reaſon, and yet cries out, Hereſy, as ſoon as he ſees it. His Reaſon is, the Authority of his Church, The Say-ſo of ſome Univerſity Doctor, finally, The Works of ſome learned Men; and offer never ſo much Reaſon and Conſcience againſt them; and your Reaſon is Sophiſtry, and Conſcience, Enthuſiaſm. The juſteſt Separation in the World is with ſuch but Schiſm, and which is the laſt Stratagem, ſuch Perſons muſt be Enemies to Cæſar. But I may ſay of thoſe Men, as Heraclitus ſaid of their Fore-Fathers, If blind Men were to judge of Sight, they would ſay Blindneſs were Sight. God is the Fountain as well of Reaſon as Light: And we aſſert our Principle not to be without Reaſon, but moſt Reaſonable; Whence it is frequent with us in our Reproof of Cruel Men, to ſay, they are Unreaſonable, whether it be to Man or Beaſt, making good what the Prophet ſaith, For his God doth inſtruct him to Diſcretion, and doth teach them. Again, Come and let us Reaſon together. And Tertullian will have the firſt Verſe of John thus rendred; In the Beginning was Reaſon, and that Reaſon was with God, and that Reaſon was God; by that were all Things made, &c. And this ſeems no foreign Interpretation, for in the 10th Verſe of Jude we have ſenſual Men not having the Spirit, called ἄλογα ζῶα, Unreaſonable Creatures, according to which the Apoſtle Peter ſpeaks, ἕτοιμοι πρὸς ἀπολογίαν αἰτοῦντι λόγον, to him that aſks Reaſon ready to give it.

Thus much (to overlook our own Tranſlation in Paul's ſecond Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians, where he calls ſuch Unreaſonable Men that have not Faith) concerning Reaſon: So that it is very evident by our Adverſary's denying, and the Quakers aſſerting an unerrable Principle to be in Man, and the Refuſal of the one, and the Readineſs of the other to be governed thereby, that not the Quakers, but their Enemies are Unreaſonable both in their Faith and Practice.

§. 3. Of Forms of Prayer.

Our Adverſary ſpends two or three Pages in proving the Neceſſity of Bodily Worſhip, and he doth it ſo lamely, that if it were ſo much my Judgment to deny it, as it is to practiſe it, I know nothing he has ſaid, to incline me to it. This he makes an Introduction to that Agreement, he ſays, there is between D. G. H. H. and the Quakers, in their mutual Renouncing both Bodily Worſhip and Viſible Ordinances. For Bodily Worſhip, I need ſay no more, than that our publick Meetings judge him guilty of great Diſhoneſty. For his Viſible Ordinances, we ſhall proceed to conſider them. The firſt is concerning a Form of Prayer, hear him.

With the like ſilly and weak Confidence they exclaim againſt Forms of Prayer, when as our bleſſed Saviour taught his Diſciples a Form. Matt. 6. 9. After this Manner therefore pray ye, &c. And leſt, ſays he, we ſhould think that this was only a Pattern, Saint Luke Chap. 11. expreſſes it, when ye pray, ſay, Our Father, &c. that is, do it in theſe Words. Moreover John taught his Diſciples; and one of Chriſt's Diſciples deſired that he would teach them: where we are told, firſt that John delivered a Form of Prayer to his Diſciples. 2. That Chriſt's Diſciples beſought him that he would alſo give them ſome Form of his making.

Anſ. But can this Man have the Vanity to plead the Neceſſity of the Uſe of this Form, much leſs of thoſe that are of Mens Invention and Appointment from thoſe Quotations? Has his Religion brought him no farther? Can he believe that Matthew writ by the Holy Ghoſt, and yet imply an abſolute Reproof in his ſo much more commending Luke's Account, which, he thinks, requires the expreſs Words, and not others like them? But let it be conſidered, that this was a Time of Infancy; and that it was before the more full pouring out of the Spirit, is certain; and that they knew not Goſpel-Prayer as afterward, is undeniable. Beſides, It is either Sufficient, or it is not; If Inſufficient, it reflects on Chriſt, beſide, who can ſupply it's Defect? If Sufficient, why do you uſe any other? What ever it is upon our Principles, you muſt confeſs it to be a ſetting of your Poſts by God's Poſts; your Invention by his Inſtitution. It is meer Deceit to attempt the Defence of the Popiſh Engliſh Maſs-Book from Chriſt's Prayer. Prove your Forms to be of Divine Inſtitution, and that God by his Spirit now requires them, and the Debate will end; otherwiſe we reject the Alluſion as improper and incoherent. The Spirit is not confinable to ſet Forms, though in Times of Ignorance he hath adminiſtred Comfort in them to thoſe who were ſincere, and knew no better: But Forms are not therefore to be perpetuated; for that were to obſtruct the more free Operation of the Spirit, and our Expreſſion by it: It is at beſt but a State of Weakneſs to be condeſcended to, but never to be pleaded for; God's Spirit will be unlimited, as well as the Words, he prompts us to, muſt never by another be confined.

§. 4. Of Baptiſm.

He ſays, we both Deny Baptiſm (by which I underſtand Water) becauſe Chriſt finding it among the Jews adopted it into his Religion; a Ceremony neither burthenſome nor offenſive, and the only Door ſet open under the Goſpel for Salvation. For which he brings three Scriptures, Matt. 28. 19. Go, and teach all Nations baptizing them in the Name of the Father, &c. To the ſame Purpoſe by Mark, chap. 16. ver. 15, 16. And Chriſt's Saying, John 3. 5. Except a Man be born of Water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God.

Anſ. If Baptiſm was ever Jewiſh as our Adverſary grants, then becauſe Chriſt came to end all Jewiſh Ceremonies, Water-Baptiſm can bear no Evangelical Perpetuity. And if it ſhould be objected, that it was uſed after the Pouring forth of the Holy Ghoſt, I anſwer, ſo were Circumciſion, Vows, Purification, Forbearing to eat Things ſtrangled and Blood; And the common Practice of Chriſtendom, ſo called, ſufficiently tells us, what is become of thoſe Obſervations. Uſing and Inſtituting are two Things. The Apoſtles condeſcended where they never commanded.

In the two firſt Scriptures, which contain a Commiſſion, there is no Water mentioned; That there is a Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, I hope, all will grant; That ſuch a Baptiſm admits of no outward Water is plainly implied: And that it was the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt (and therefore not of Water) which Chriſt intended, I will briefly prove.

Firſt, This Commiſſion was ſome of the laſt Words Chriſt ſpoke; that it is to be fulfilled is certain; that they could not do it without Power is clear; that neither of thoſe Chapters mentions any ſuch Endowment muſt be granted. Whither then muſt we go to fetch that Account here omitted? I would deſire my Reader to turn to the firſt Chapter of Luke's Acts of the Apoſtles, where we ſhall find Chriſt's laſt Words to his conſtant Followers thus left upon Record; And being aſſembled together with them, he commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but wait for the Promiſe of the Father, which, ſaith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence. When they therefore were come together, they aſked of him, ſaying, Lord, wilt thou at this Time reſtore again the Kingdom to Iſrael? And he ſaid unto them, It is not for you to know the Times or Seaſons which the Father has put into his own Power; But ye ſhall receive Power, after that the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you, and ye ſhall be Witneſſes unto me, both in Jeruſalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt Part of the Earth. And when he had ſpoken theſe Things, while they beheld he was taken up, and a Cloud received him out of their Sight. Now if the Promiſe of the Father was the Pouring out of the Holy Ghoſt, and if the Pouring out of the Holy Ghoſt be the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, and that the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt was that which qualified them to be his Witneſſes, as the whole Place fully proves; Then, Go, and teach all Nations, &c. in Matthew, and, Go ye into all the World, in Mark, muſt not have been ſpoken before theſe Words in the Acts, at leaſt not to take Place till they themſelves had been baptized with the Holy Ghoſt; and conſequently the Baptiſm mentioned in that Commiſſion, muſt not have been a Water-Baptiſm, as John's was, but that of the Holy Ghoſt which they were to be baptized with: So that the Order of the Words, at leaſt in Execution, if not in Expreſſion, muſt have been this, John indeed baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence; Then go ye and teach all Nations, baptizing them in (or rather into) the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt; And lo, I am with you always unto the End of the World. Nor is this incredible, when we conſider, that without their ſo baptizing, it had been utterly Impoſſible for them to have turned them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God. And doubtleſs they might as well baptize with the Holy Ghoſt, as reconcile by the Word; For where the one was, the Power of the other could not be wanting.

For the third Scripture, though Water be mentioned, yet what Water will be the Queſtion. That it is not meant of outward Water, I offer ſeveral Reaſons. 1. To be born of Water and of the Spirit is no more, than to be born of Water, or of the Spirit, καὶ being here explicative; For were it otherwiſe, and that by Water were underſtood External Water, this Abſurdity would inevitably follow, that the Soul of Man which is Spiritual and Internal, could in part be regenerated by Water External and Elementary: But this Place is excellently unfolded, by that notable Paſſage of the Apoſtle Paul in his Epiſtle to Titus, chap. 3. 5. Not by Works of Righteouſneſs which we have done, but according to his Mercy he ſaved us, by the Waſhing of Regeneration and Renewing of the Holy Ghoſt; where we not only have the Waſhing of Regeneration to parallel being born again of Water (which ſay we, muſt be as Spiritual as the New Birth it produceth) but alſo the Renewing of the Holy Ghoſt to anſwer being born again of the Spirit, That as the waſhing of Regeneration, or Renewing of the Holy Ghoſt, are Synonymous, or Expreſſions to the ſame Purpoſe; ſo being born again of Water, or being born again of the Spirit, are equivalent.

But if our Adverſary will have this Water to be material in Honour of his Baptiſm, Let him never refuſe the like Liberty to us in Conſtruction of that great Water-Baptiſt's own Words: But he ſhall baptize you with the Holy Ghoſt and with Fire, that is, material Fire. Mat, 3. 11. My Judgment is, if that were the Church of England's Baptiſm, he had never been her Son, though ſuch Sons are ready to Chriſten many with that Fiery Baptiſm. But if ſuch an Interpretation be abſurd, let him not eſteem his own Rational: And if it muſt be the Holy Ghoſt, or Fire, then let it be Water, or Spirit; for indeed they are but ſo many Words, intimating the various Operations of one Divine Power.

In ſhort, John was but a Forerunner, therefore not tobe perpetuated: He was the Water (but Chriſt the great Spiritual) Baptiſt; The former to decreaſe, the Latter to increaſe: And the leaſt in Chriſt's Kingdom, which is not of this World, is greater than John; not than his private State, but outward Adminiſtration.

Paul (whoſe Commiſſion was larger than any Prieſt's in England) tells us, He was not ſent to baptize (with Water) but to Preach; And inſtead of enjoyning the Practice of it upon others, he thanks God that he baptized but very few himſelf, which ſurely he had never done, if it had been Part of his Commiſſion, or the durable Baptiſm of the Goſpel; For he had juſt Reaſon to ſuſpect ſome diſaffected would make that ill Uſe of his Liberty, that it was to ingratiate and ſet up himſelf, being conſcious that he had no Authority for what he did. This he farther gives us to believe in that pertinent Paſſage to our Purpoſe; There is One Body,

Epheſ. 4, 5, 6.
Pag. 28. 29.

One Spirit, One Lord, One Faith, One Baptiſm, One God and Father of all. If more Baptiſms than one, then more Bodies, Spirits, Lords, Faiths, Gods, and Fathers of all, who were above all, and through all, and in them all, unto whom Paul wrote. If this be abſurd, and that there is but one Baptiſm, I hope, it will not be denied to be that of the Holy Ghoſt, which is both moſt ſuitable to the Evangelical Miniſtration, and the peculiar Baptiſm of Chriſt Jeſus our Lord. I ſhall touch upon one Paſſage more.

The like Figure whereunto even Baptiſm alſo doth now ſave us; as our modern Tranſlation has it, From which, though our Adverſary would infer that Water-Baptiſm is to be uſed, as co-aſſiſtant with the Anſwer of a good Conſcience, to Salvation, (pag. 28, 29,) I doubt not unanſwerably to maintain our foregoing Aſſertion.

This Verſe admits of various Readings in ancient Copies, and diverſe Interpretations by learned Men. Of this Inward Baptiſm we have ſeveral Types in the old Teſtament, of which Noah's Ark was one. Grotius refers us to theſe Scriptures for an Apoſtolical Expoſition, Rom. 6. 3, 4. Epheſ. 4. 5. Gal. 3. 27. Col. 2. 12. all which refer to Man's being baptized into Chriſt's Death, his putting on of Chriſt, and to the one Lord, one Faith, one Baptiſm. And indeed Beza ſhewed them the Way, who will have it, that the Baptiſm which anſwered to Noah's Ark, was not material Water, but the Power of Chriſt within, which preſerves us cleanſed, and enables us to call on God with a good Conſcience. Nor is Dr. Hammond of a different Judgment in this Caſe, who not only will have ἀντίτυπον rendred Antitype, but the Baptiſm that is that Antitype, anſwering to Noah's Ark, to be the inward Waſhing of Men's Conſciences from Pollution, aud delivering them from the Deluge of Sin and Deſtruction.

Not only from all this do I conclude, the Baptiſm mentioned in that Place, to be the Antitype. or Truth anſwering to the outward and typical Salvation of Noah's Ark; but for thoſe Reaſons which were with me, before my Peruſal of theſe Authors, and which I ſhall now briefly offer. Firſt, If ἀντίτυπον βάπτισμα were but a Type or Figure, one Type would anſwer another, which is not proper. 2dly, It were both to ſuppoſe, that the Goſpel were a State of Figures (which is the Subſtance of all) and of ſuch Figures too, as are leſs demonſtrative or ſignificant; for, what is that Sprinkling, Baby-Baptiſm (for Dipper or dipped I ſuppoſe our Adverſary to be neither) to the Words Deluge and Noah's Ark. 3dly, The Baptiſm in the Text, muſt be ſuch an one as hath Efficacy enough in it to ſave, which outward Water can't do; Beſides the Word σώζει, or ſaveth, hath Relation to Noah's Ark, wherein the eight Souls were ſaved; therefore the Antitype, or Truth anſwering to that, as Type. 4ly, It is ſuch a Baptiſm as ſaves by the Power of Chriſt's Reſurrection. anſwerable to Rom. 6. 3, 4. Know ye not that ſo many of us, as were baptized into Jeſus Chriſt, were baptized into his Death? that like as Chriſt was raiſed up from the Dead, by the Glory of the Father; even ſo we alſo ſhould walk in Newneſs of Life. 5ly, And this the Parentheſis in the Verſe undeniably proves, being an illuſtration of the Baptiſm intended, not the putting away af the Filth of the Fleſh, but the Anſwer of a good Conſcience towards God, or as ſome have it, interrogatio, ἐπερώτημα Inquiſition or Enquiry, alluding to the Oracle U R I M and THUMMIM, Jacob Capell. Salm. Sac. ling. Profeſs. in loc.

THUMMIM, by which Men have Boldneſs and Acceſs to God; ſo as to render the Verſe, "Cui etiam ex adverſo oppoſitus, nos ſervat Baptiſmus, non is quo carnis ſordes abjiciuntur, ſed is quo fit ut bona conſcientia Deum interroget per reſurrectionem Chriſti, i. e. To which the directly Oppoſite Baptiſm alſo now ſaveth us, not That by which the Filth of the Fleſh is caſt off, but That by which it is effected, that a good Conſcience may aſk God by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. From all which, two Things reſult; Firſt, that the Verſe ought to be thus rendred, Anſwerable to which Figure Baptiſm now alſo ſaveth us, not the putting away of the Filth of the Fleſh, but the Account of a good Conſcience to God, by the Reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt. And indeed the moſt diſputable Part of this Verſe is abundantly confirmed on our ſide, by the Simplicity of the Ancient Engliſh, French and Spaniſh Tranſlators. And I wonder that any Man of common Senſe, not greatly abuſed by Prejudice or Cuſtom, can think, that the Baptiſm mentioned, ſhould be that of Water, when the middle of the Verſe provides this material Diſtinction, not the putting away of the Filth of the Fleſh (the Effect of outward Water) but the Anſwer of a Good Conſcience to God (the Fruits of the Holy Ghoſt alone) to that very End that People ſhould not think ſo; I mean, that it was a Water-Baptiſm.

Secondly, It may not be improper for us to obſerve, That if one Verſe hath ſuch Variety of Copies, Readings, Tranſpoſitions and Senſes, as hath been noted, beſide what we could yet produce, that they are at a miſerable paſs for an Univerſal, Living, Conſtant and Unerring Rule, who eſteem the preſent Scripture ſuch, excluſive of the Spirit, which Time, Variety of Tranſcribers, Tranſlators, Interpreters and Expoſitors, have rendred ſo Uncertain. But if we had been unprovided of all this to our Defence, what has our Adverſary to do to charge us with a Diſcontinuance of Water-Baptiſm, till he had firſt clear'd his own Opinion from Popiſh Innovation and Invention? What Scripture or pure Antiquity has he for Infant-Baptiſm, one of the Unſcriptural and Senſeleſs Ceremonies of his Religion, about which ſuch as he make more ſtir than about that of the Holy Ghoſt? A Man may gueſs what a Chriſtian he is, and how well he is verſed in Chriſt's Doctrine, who can call a little Water ſhed by a Prieſt's Hand the Door into God's Kingdom. How much is this ſhort of the Romiſh Prieſt's making his God, who ſays, the Bread is Chriſt after Conſecration, ſince Chriſt, who is God over all, Bleſſed for ever, ſaith, He is that Door; which H. Hallywell will have his Infant-Water-Baptiſm to be.

§. 5. Of the Supper.

But he ſaith of us and the Familiſts, By the ſame Diabolical Spirit, wherewith they are poſſeſſed, they lay aſide the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a Thing too Carnal. (pag. 30, 31.) In Oppoſition to which he produceth Matt. 26. 26, 27. How that Chriſt took Bread and bleſſed it, and brake it, and gave it to his Diſciples, and ſaid, take, eat, this is my Body; Then he took the Cup and gave Thanks, and gave it to them, ſaying, drink ye all of it. St. Mark, chap. 14. repeats the very ſame, and ſays, they all drank of it; But St. Luke Chap. 22. 19. and St. Paul 1 Cor. 11. 24. added theſe Words [do this in Remembrance of me] which import both a Commiſſion and Direction to uſe and continue them.

Anſ. 'Tis granted, that Chriſt, eating the Paſſover with his Diſciples, did Familiarly repreſent that Fleſh and Blood, which he gave for the World, that whoever eat thereof ſhould have Life Eternal abiding in them. Nor is this ſtrange; for it was his Familiar Way of opening his deepeſt Myſteries, and recommending the moſt excellent of all his Commandments; witneſs his Diſcourſe concerning the Bleſſed Unity of Chriſt and his Members, by the Simlitude of a Vine and it's Branches; And both his Waſhing his Diſciples Feet, and requiring them to follow his Example. John 13. 5, 14.

That this Practice was enjoyned his Diſciples, is not warranted from Matthew, Mark, or in Remembrance of me, as our Adverſary obſerves: But that they ſhould be Paul's alſo, as he affirms, is both an abuſe of the Scriptures, and them that read them; For theſe are the Apoſtle's Words, as often as ye eat this Bread and drink this Cup, &c. which amounts to no more than this, when ye do eat this Supper, do it worthily; ſo that there is no Command to do it, though as often as they did do it, they were exhorted to do it diſcerningly: As often as you do it; and Do it often, are differing Sayings.

And that Luke's Words do not perpetuate it, eſpecially as now uſed, I ſhall prove. Firſt, if it be but a Sacrament or Sign, as ſaith our Adverſary, then can it not of right continue longer than till the Thing ſignified ſhall come. Do this till, that is, when that is come, till the coming of which, the Sign was to be uſed; there remains no longer any Inſtitution.

Now between all Types and Antitypes, Shadows and Subſtances, Parables and Morals, there muſt needs be ſome Reſemblance, or elſe the End of their being uſed will be loſt to them, for whoſe Sakes they were appointed: For inſtance, Chriſt is called a Door, becauſe no Man comes to the Father, but through him; A Lyon, from his Strength and Dominion; A Lamb, becauſe of his Innocency; A Vine becauſe of that Excellent Fruit he brings forth; and laſtly, he calls himſelf by the Name of Bread, becauſe of that inward Strength and Nouriſhment ſuch receive that feed Spiritually upon him: Wherefore the Subſtance ſhadowed out, by this outward Bread and Wine, is no other than Chriſt, as the Bread that came down from above, and that Fleſh and Blood which all were to eat and drink of that would have Eternal Life; mentioned at large John 6. So that admitting of a Command, it muſt be thus read, Do this till I come, who am the Heavenly Bread, and Fleſh and Blood, that give Eternal Life to them that feed thereon; which Bread the Apoſtle very well underſtood, when in the foregoing Chapter to the Corinthians he thus delivered himſelf, I ſpeak as to wiſe Men, Judge ye what I ſay, The Cup of Bleſſing which we bleſs, is it not the Communion of the Blood of Chriſt? For we being many are One Bread, and One Body, for we are all Partakers of that One Bread, 1 Cor. 10. 15, 16, 17. And this Chriſt himſelf intimated in the following Verſe to that Paſſage out of Matthew, But I ſay unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this Fruit of the Vine, until that Day when I drink it new with you in my Father's Kingdom. And I query if that was not made good, on the Day of Pentecoſt, when ſcoffing, yet truly (like Caiaphas in another Caſe) ſeveral Spectators ſaid of the Diſciples, They were full of New Wine: Acts 2. 13. Which was the Beginning of the Reſtoration of that Kingdom of God to Iſrael, that the Diſciples a little before ſo weakly queried after.

In ſhort, The Father's Kingdom is within, Luke 17. 20. What was that Fruit then that was to be drunk anew in that Kingdom? Certainly it came from himſelf, the true Vine, and muſt be of a Spiritual and Inward Nature, like to the Kingdom.

To conclude, If Bread and Wine be but a Sign; And if Things ſignified ought to reſemble their Signs; And if Spiritual Bread and Wine moſtly anſwer thoſe Viſible Signs; And if they are to be had in the Kingdom of God; And if the Kingdom of God be within; And that who eat not that Bread, and drink not that Wine, have no Life in them; Then becauſe the Apoſtles had Life Eternal in them, and we a Meaſure of the ſame in us, Chriſt, the Heavenly Bread and Fleſh, and Wine and Blood, was then and is now come, and conſequently, the Shadows of thoſe good Things (as to any Inſtitution) were and are at an End: And as there is but One Spirit, and One Lord, One Faith, One Baptiſm, One God and Father, One Heavenly Kingdom, One Holy Body; So but One Bread, and but One Cup, and but One Communion and Fellowſhip, and that is with the Father and the Son, by the Holy Ghoſt.

But here, as in the Caſe of Water-Baptiſm, it will be objected, why were they then afterwards uſed?

Anſ. The Practices of good Men, though in Things temporary, are many Times too greedily received, and too long doted upon by thoſe who deſire to be reputed their Followers. Any thing once becoming cuſtomary is hard to be left; Several Jewiſh Ceremonies the Holy Ghoſt thought fit to be diſpenſed with for a Seaſon, that were never to be perpetuated. But what has our Adverſary and the ſeveral Sorts of Proteſtants in the World to do with Baptiſm and the Supper, and deny that Qualification and Commiſſion the Apoſtles had? They will never ſtand our Enquiry about their Call, which they know, we have great Cauſe to ſcruple, indeed to deny; For all muſt or ſhould know that was either Immediate, or Mediate and Succeſſive. If Immediate, then they muſt neceſſarily confeſs to a Commiſſion upon Inſpiration, and then Quakers. If Mediate and Succeſſive, then either beſide the Church of Rome, or through the Church of Rome; Not beſide the Church of Rome, becauſe ſhe cannot prove any regular Ordination, or uninterrupted Succeſſion, either as to Faith or Diſcipline. If through the Church of Rome, then they own the Ordination of a Church they renounce, and grant Her the Keys, whom they have writ againſt for theſe ſix ſcore Years, under the Name of Whore of Babylon, and Mother of Harlots, and all Abominations of the Earth. Can that which you account a corrupt Fountain, bring forth clean Streams? Will Men ſeek Ordination at the Hands of that Church, they reſolve to employ it againſt? Has ſhe forfeited her Religion, and not her Power? When did ever God make over his Authority by ſuch an Entail? If Mens Errors and Vices do not un-miniſter them, It will follow, that they may be Ill Chriſtians, but very good Miniſters. For Shame never renounce the Roman Church as Falſe, if her Ordination muſt be True; For what has Power to make a Miniſter, muſt be allowed to have Power both to inſtruct and conclude him in what he is to miniſter: Wherefore never let any own her to have Heaven's Keys of Church Authority, and then deny her as Heretical; For where-ever any Church or People are truly ſuch, that Church or People have thereby forfeited all Right thereunto: And as the contrary Opinion has long enricht the Pope's Coffers, ſo the Unwary Conceſſions of ſome certain Proteſtants thereto, have too evidently given away a great Share of that good old Cauſe.

I have dwelt longer upon theſe Particulars, than my Adverſary's Weakneſs could deſerve at my Hands, but their Information hath induced me to it, who are aſſaulted by the envious Endeavours of our ſeveral Adverſaries, that daily ſeek, how to miſ-repreſent us, and our moſt Evangelical Principles.

Chap. IV.

CHAP. IV.

His Third Chapter examined, which conſiſts of the Holineſs of Times, Places, Things and Perſons under the Goſpel.

§. 1. Of the Sabbath-Day.

HIS Accuſation is, that the Familiſts and Quakers put no Difference between one Day and another, the Sabbath no more than another Day; That many Times they follow their uſual Trades on a Sunday. pag. 34. 37, 38, 39.

Anſ. What the Familiſts did is nothing to us (if they did ſo) But ſure I am he has abuſed the Quakers; For 'tis well known, that in what Country ſoever they live, they follow the Practice of the Apoſtles, in Aſſembling together on the firſt Day of the Week: They do it conſtantly and reverently. Who moſt prophane that Day, the Quakers, or the Sons and Daughters of the Church of England, Their Feaſts, Drunkenneſs, Wantonneſs, Gaming, and other Recreations, as they call them, are ſo many Demonſtrations, to help every common Underſtanding to a Reſolution in the Point. And to ſay, That we many times follows our uſual Trades on that Day, is a plain Untruth, the whole World knows better, though we do not Judaize; For Worſhip was not made for Time, but Time for Worſhip: Nor is there any Day Holy of it ſelf, though Holy Things may be performed upon a Day.

But he tells us, yes; For the fourth Commandment being as Moral as the reſt, and that requiring a Sabbath-Day, the Sabbath-Day is perpetuated alſo.

Anſ. But this hurts us not, ſince the Jewiſh-Sabbath is not obſerved by the Church of England: But if a Sabbath-Day be Moral, becauſe mentioned in the fourth Commandment; Then becauſe the Jews ſeventh-day Sabbath is there particularly mentioned, Their Sabbath muſt be only Moral, and conſequently Unalterable.

But ſays he, 'No; For that the Apoſtles and ſucceeding Church of God, may 'very reaſonably diſpoſe of us in Matters of this Nature; And it is obligatory
'from the Ten Commandments, every one of which is moral, and binds all Chri-
'ſtians ſtill; and therefore the Church of England (though theſe rebellious Qua- 'kers diſown their Mother) doth make it Part of her Liturgy.

Anſ. If it be as Moral as all the reſt, as it muſt be if it be Moral, becauſe of it's being there, they could no more diſpenſe with it, than with any other Commandment: To call that Day Moral, and make it Alterable, is Ridiculous. 'Tis true, the Apoſtles met upon the Firſt Day, and not on the Seventh; but as that releaſed us from any pretended Morality of the Seventh, ſo neither did it confer any Morality upon the Firſt; yea, ſo far were they from it, that not one ſpeaks any ſuch Thing; but Paul much the contrary: Let no Man judge you in Meats or in Drinks, or in reſpect of an Holy-Day, or of New Moons, or of the Sabbath-Days, which are a Shadow of Things to come, but the Body is of Chriſt. Col. 2. 17, 18. The outward Sabbath was Typical, of the great Reſt of the Goſpel, which ſuch come to, who ceaſe from their own Work, and in whom the Works of God's new Creation come to be accompliſht.

And though I ſhould acknowledge the other Commands to be Moral, yea, and Times too, both reſpecting God's Worſhip, and the Creatures Reſt; yet there is no more Reaſon for the Morality of that Day, becauſe amongſt thoſe Commandments, than for the Ceremoniouſneſs and Abrogation of ſeveral Moral Precepts, becauſe ſcattered up and down among the Ceremonial Laws, recorded in Leviticus.

I grant, the Apoſtles met on that Day; But muſt it therefore be Moral? Certainly, the Scriptures Silence in this Particular muſt either conclude a great Neglect againſt thoſe Holy Men, in not recommending and enjoyning more expreſly both Water, Bread, Wine and Holy-Days, in their ſeveral Epiſtles to the Churches; or warrant us in our Belief concerning the Temporarineſs of thoſe Things. Let not our Adverſary reproach us for not believing that to be durable, which was weaning off and vaniſhing in thoſe Days; but ſoberly conſider, that the Practiſe of the beſt Men, eſpecially in ſuch Caſes, is no Inſtitution, though ſometimes it may be an Example. But I perceive he makes bold, like an Irreverent Son, with his Ghoſtly Fathers, who through his Reflections upon us, ſeverely rebukes them. Has he ſo quickly forgot the Book of Sports, and who put it out; when not to prophane this Sabbath with Dancings, Riots and Revels, had been enough to render a Man an Enemy to Cæſar, and a ſchiſmatical Puritan to the Church? If he be not ſatisfy'd with this, I refer him to Calvin's Inſtitutes, Bp. Ironſide, and Dr. Peter Heylin, concerning the Non-morality of the Sabbath; and a great Wonder it is, that John Calvin and Peter Heylin ſhould be of one Opinion in any Thing.

Pag. 34. 42, 43, 44, 45.

He is very angry with us for denying a more than ordinary Sanctity to Places, and ſays, that we eſteem a Church no more than a Stable; That the Jews, Heathens, and Turks have their Synagogues, Temples and Moſchs to pray in: That Chriſt went to a Prayer-Houſe, Luke 6. 12. and Acts 16. 13. Where Paul and others went out to a River's Side, where an Oratory was reported to be.

Anſw. We value the true Church more than a Stable, but we value a good Stable before a falſe Church, as ſuch. But I ſuppoſe he means by Church, an Houſe; and then I muſt tell him, that I prefer a Stable better than no Houſe, but a good Houſe better than a Stable. But why is a Stable ſuch an ill-favoured Place? Has he forgot that the Head of the true Church firſt lodged in one, when there was no Room for him in a whole Synagogue, yet Room enough for a Company of Cavilling Murdering Scribes and Phariſees? There is no doubt but the Jews had Synagogues enough, for it was out of them the Apoſtles were to be haled, becauſe of their Teſtimony againſt thoſe that were in them. 'Tis true, the Heathens had Temples, and the Turks have their Moſchs: I like the Compariſon and the Proof very well For I take ſome of your Steeple-Houſe-Gueſts to be as good Chriſtians, as ſome of the worſt Sort of them. It was the old Heatheniſh Spirit which under the Cloak of Chriſtianity both erected thoſe ſtately Edifices, inſtituted that Pompous Worſhip, and exacted thoſe vaſt Revenues, that have burthened the World theſe many Ages; whilſt the pure Apoſtolical Spirit, and Religion, have been as driven into a Sack-cloth and Wilderneſs Eſtate.

That Chriſt went to a Prayer-Houſe, and that Paul and the Church met in an Oratory by the River Side, is a pretty Rattle for Children, and may paſs as unqueſtionably with thoſe who are willing to be cheated, as the Story of St. Dennis's Body, that went a Mile without his Head, and St. Winifred's Head a great Way without her Body, to a Papiſt.

But he affirms, that the firſt Chriſtians had diſtinct Places to meet in, and that they called them Churches. Pag. 47, 48, 49.

Anſw. Chriſt went not to the Synagogue or the Temple to eat the Paſſover; 'Tis certain that the Twelve met in an Upper Room, upon their Return from Chriſt's Aſcenſion; and it is ſaid, when the Day of Pentecoſt was fully come, they were all with one Accord in one Place, (Acts 2. 1, 2, 3, 4.) at what Time that excellent Glory appeared; but here is no Mention made of either Temple or Synagogue: One would have thought thoſe Conventicles (for ſo they were then called and ſince) ſhould not have born away the Glory and Honour of that Holy Solemnity from thoſe Cathedral and Canonical Places: What ſullen Separation did the falſe Jew then repute it, as well as the falſe Chriſtian now the like Practice. Certainly this ran retrograde to the Grain and Humour of that Age; And the poor Apoſtles were therefore eſteemed as great Phanaticks, and as much reproached as any of the Quakers in this. I muſt alſo confeſs, they continued daily with one Accord in the Temple Acts 2. 46. but they broke not Bread there, that was done κατ' οἶκον, that is, in the Houſe, if he will have it ſo, inſtead of from Houſe to Houſe; to be ſure, it was not not from Church to Church, as he would have the Houſe called; for then we ſhould underſtand the following Verſe thus, and the Lord added to the Church daily ſuch as ſhould be ſaved, that is, to the Houſe.

But I ſee no Reaſon why he ſhould fall ſo hard with his Criticiſms upon κατ' ὄικον, and let καθ' ἡμέραν in the ſame Verſe alone; For, as Valla and Eraſmus well obſerve, κατ' ὄικον is as well rendered per ſingulas domos, or domeſticatim, i. e. from Houſe to Houſe, as καθ' ἡμέραν per ſingulos dies, ſive quotidie, i. e. daily, or from Day to Day.

But he will needs have it that the Apoſtle * 1 Cor. 11. meant by Church the Houſe, when he ſaid have ye not Houſes to eat and drink in, or deſpiſe ye the Church of God? His Reaſon is, if it may be thought one, becauſe the Apoſtle in the 18*th* Verſe ſays, when ye come in the Church; and in the 20*th* Verſe, when ye come together into one Place; So that the Word Church ſignifies the Place.

Anſw. When ye come together in the Church, ſignifies no more than in the Congregation or Aſſembly, or among your ſelves as a Church, (obſerve well the Margin) And to make the Church allude to Place in the 20th Verſe, is a baſe wreſting of our Adverſaries; for there is no Greek Word there for Place.

But he thinks he has one Argument more, from Paul's Greeting Priſcilla and Aquila, and the Houſe that is in their Houſe, Rom. 16. 3, 5. And again, ſending Salutation from them; Aquila and Priſcilla ſalute you much in the Lord, with the Church in their Houſe, 1 Cor. 16. 29.

Anſw. If this be to prove an Houſe to be a Church, I never ſaw the like. It ſeems we muſt read, after his Dialect thus, Greet Priſcilla and Aquila, and the Houſe that is in their Houſe. But in Contradiction to all this, he tells us in the next Page, By the Church, at ſuch a Man's Houſe, muſt be meant the whole Congregation of the Saints aſſembled at ſuch a Man's Houſe; and truly, Reader, I think ſo too: But if the Saints met to make the Church, then the Houſe is not the Church, nor indeed can an Houſe meet together in an Houſe.

But now I will tell this Defamer of us, that though we have no ſtately Baſilicos, or Palace-Churches, as ſome call them, beautify'd with Painting, Images, Flags, carved and engraved Work, and built to the Eaſt, in Imitation of the Heathen Idolatrous Temples; yet, like unto the Apoſtles and Primitive Chriſtians, we aſſemble from Houſe to Houſe, and if he will have it ſo, there are ſeveral convenient Publick Places on purpoſe to meet and perform divine Worſhip in.

§ 3. Of Tythes.

His next Section, and as became a careful greedy Hireling, by much the largeſt of any in his Book, is employ'd in the Defence of the Prieſts Maintenance, the ſine quâ non of their Calling. From Page 51 to 69, His firſt Argument is, That God will have a Rent and Tribute paid him. That thus he dealt with the Children of Iſrael, from whom he reſerv'd a Tythe to himſelf, and that in Abraham's Time Tythes to Melchizedeck were paid, after whoſe Order Chriſt was made a Prieſt.

Anſw. The Tythes that were paid Melchizedeck, were but of the Spoils Abraham took from his Enemies; and that not by Compulſion but Choice. Melchizedeck was King of Salem, King of Peace, Prieſt of the moſt high God: He freely adminiſtred Bread and Wine to Abraham to refreſh him; and when he had done, prayed and praiſed God for him without Bargain or Hire: Whereupon Abraham gave him the Tythe of all, as a Token of his Thankfulneſs.

Now let the Prieſts of England prove themſelves to be of Melchizedeck's Offſpring, Men of Peace, Prieſts of the moſt high God, and let them but miniſter to us of the Living Bread and Wine, and wrap up all with ſuch Prayers and Praiſes to God for us, as he will accept; and when all this is done, if we refuſe them the Tythe of our Spoils, let us be recorded for Ungrateful Men: But whilſt Prieſts are Men of Contention, Hirelings, that ſeek Gain from their Quarter, prepare War againſt them that put not into their Mouths, are not Prieſts of the moſt high God's Locus loco opponitur grammaticè, non logicè. i. e. Church or Congregation. The Church is not oppoſed to private Houſes. To deſpiſe the Church, is to make aſhamed the Poor of it.

1673. Chap. IV.

Anointing, and who inſtead of giving us Bread and Wine, oppreſs us unto Death for a Four-penny Eaſter-Reckoning, and in Lieu of Prayers and Praiſes to God for us, Anathematize, Whip, Impriſon and Baniſh us for Impoſtors, Hereticks, Men inſpired by Satan, and ſuch like, let it not be wondred at that a poor Quaker hath a Teſtimony againſt ſuch a Prieſt; and that he rather chuſeth do die (unjuſtly his Priſoner) than pay Tythes to him, that is an Uſurper of the Name, Authority and Office of a True Evangelical Miniſter.

And for his Inſtance of the Land of Canaan, it brings no Obligation upon us, England is no Canaan, neither as to it's Acquiſition, nor Diſtribution; When the Saxons came into England, God reſerved no ſuch Rents. And if it be well argued of the Apoſtle, (Heb. 7. 12.) that becauſe the Law is changed the Prieſthood is alſo; Then certainly it is no ill Conſequence, that the Way of Maintenance muſt be changed too, at leaſt as to Inſtitution.

But, ſays our Adverſary, in the Apoſtle's Words, 1 Cor. 9. 14, The Lord hath ordained, That they which preach the Goſpel ſhould live of the Goſpel.

Anſw. We are contented with this, but the Prieſts are not. They cannot prove themſelves Miniſters of the Goſpel, unleſs by that never-failing Argument of human Law and Force, if yet that can prove them ſuch. Beſides, Here is no Stint or Method; What or How? It is left to God's Witneſs; but that they dare not leave themſelves with; Earthly Powers muſt firſt make them Miniſters, and then get them Maintenance. But there's not a Word of Paul*'s working with his own Hands,* nor Chriſt's Explanation of the Labourer is worthy of his Hire, to wit, that he ſhould eat what is ſet before him, and, Melchizedeck like, bleſs the Houſe, if worthy; Nor do I hear of ſo much as one Itinerary-Preacher, who to be ſure carried no Tythes upon his Back, as the Prieſts of our Days do into their Barn; they ſued, excommunicated, impriſoned none unto Death for Hire's Sake.

He that Minds God more than his Belly, ſhall never want for his Belly; for the Authority of Him in whoſe Name he goes, makes ſufficient Way for his Subſiſtence, without the Force of Imperial Decrees; The Cattle upon a Thouſand Hills are the Lord's. The Primitive Chriſtians paid no Tythes that we read of, yet they forbore not to adminiſter freely to the Neceſſities of thoſe who were faithful Labourers and Travellers amongſt them. The Law that ſettled that Maintenance, was the Law in the Heart, and the Witneſs of God in the Conſcience, to which Paul particularly deſired to be made manifeſt. 'Tis true, about Four Hundred Years after Chriſt, the then Chriſtians began to lay up the Tythe of their Subſtance, towards the Maintenance of ſuch Members and Miniſters of the Church as wanted. But this was out of their own free Will, not as ſettled Maintenance, nor by Compulſion, as our Countryman, Jo. Selden, a learned Antiquary, tells us.

Gratian. Cauſ. p. 16. R. C. Dec. Selden. c. 6, p. 80, 81.

But our Adverſary ſays, that Chriſtian Emperors, Kings, Princes, and other Nobles, by the all-wiſe Providence, inſpiring their Hearts, have given Houſes, Lands and Tithes for the Maintenance of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, and ſecured ſuch Poſſeſſions. And therefore, ſuch are Sacrilegious and Robbers of God, who with-hold them; Such Tenths being as much the Miniſters as the Ninths are the People's.

Anſw. I perceive the Prieſt allows Inſpiration for Tythes, though we are Familiſts, Quakers and Fanaticks for abetting the Doctrine of Inſpiration in the Worſhip of God. O Mercenary, O Hireling and Irreverent Saying! that God ſhould be more concerned for Carnal than Spiritual Things, and inſpire Men about Tythes, and not about Divine Worſhip. Who but a Dark and Mercenary Prieſt could have uttered ſo impious an Expreſſion?

I grant, that when Auſtin came into England, he deſired Tythes of Ethelbert, as I take it, King of Kent; But the King's Care of his People, and the Averſion of their Humour to all Encroachments, diſappointed the Monk. However, Time bringing forth Murder and Adultery, They brought forth Tythes. For Offa killing Ethelbert, gave a Tenth of his Goods to pacify his Ghoſt. And Edgar being greatly in Love with Ethelwald's Wife, to obtain his End, murdered him; upon which the Pope ſending forth his Bull, Edgar, to appeaſe him, confirm'd to the Church the Tenth of all the Fruit of his Field and Cattle, to them and their Succeſſors. And as Murder and Whoredom introduced them, ſo the Cunning and Covetouſneſs of the Clergy have continued them; For when the Heptarchy became a Monarchy, the Prieſts evermore would thruſt in for a Share with the Conqueror; and this Wrong Way came Tythes to be the Prieſts Right, as he calls it.

Selden, p. 67.

But let this pretended Proteſtant anſwer me, if he dare.

Was the Church then degenerated or no? Was it not a Time of Popery? Did not the firſt Martyrs except againſt her? Was it lawful for Princes to give away other Men's Goods upon the Account and for the pretended Expiation of their Sins?

Could the giving of them atone? Is it not an acknowledging of the Pope's Power to abſolve? Is it not a Buying or Bribing off the Guilt of Sin againſt Almighty God, by Gifts to a Mortal Man, and thoſe extorted from poor People too? Is this Proteſtant Doctrine? But above all, is this inſtituting Tythes upon Inſpiration? Hell her own ſelf was the Foundreſs of theſe Things. He may remember that there is better Antiquity for that Voice, which the Ancients report to have been heard that Day Conſtantine conferred thoſe large Endowments upon the Church, than for the Inſtitution of Tythes and Rich Benefices; I mean that Voice through the Heavens, This Day is Poyſon poured into the Church. Since which Time it has been obſerv'd by the beſt Princes, Wiſeſt Counſellors, and moſt moderate Clergymen, that the Enrichment and Impowering of Church-Officers, has been the Canker of the Church, and the Moth of the State.

'Tis not my Buſineſs to write an Hiſtory; but I recommend to the Inquiſitive Reader, Wickliff's Remonſtrance, The Plowman's Complaint, Chaucer's Plowman's Tale, Walter Brute, and W. Thorpe's Examination, in the Martyrology; Pareus: Hiſtory of the Waldenſes, and Jo. Selden, Men that ought not to paſs for, or be reputed Phanaticks, eſpecially by ſuch who call themſelves Proteſtants.

I ſhall only ſay, firſt, That they were the People's wholly. 2dly, It is now the People's Labour, more than the Prieſt's Land, that brings the Increaſe: And Men ought not to be conſtrained to pay thoſe they never hired; nor to labour for thoſe that profit them not. 3dly, They were given to expiate Murder and Adultery, and uphold an Idolatrous Clergy, upon Proteſtant Principles, and therefore to be remov'd, as were the high Places and Groves, Idolatrouſly dedicated among the Jews. 4thly, Becauſe it is moſt reaſonable for a Man to believe according to his own Conſcience, and not according to another Man's Conſcience; “It is Unrighteous to preſecute a Man for not maintaining that Religion, which in his Conſcience he believes to be falſe; as well as that it is the Badge of a Falſe Religion to perſecute for Maintenance. 5thly, Though they may be confirmed by ſome Princes, yet, conſidering the End to which they were given, to wit, for the Maintainance of a certain Sort of Religious Order, now exploded, whoſe Succeſſors theſe are not, (and ſo the ancient Conſtitution broken) we can't ſee any Reaſon why they ſhould remain, unleſs any thing commanded is to be obeyed, becauſe Commanded, and not becauſe in it ſelf Lawful. Two Things I cannot but obſerve. Firſt, That he affirms, The Clergy of England have not a Tenth, much complaining that every one Snips from them, cujus contrarium verum; For they not only ſnip, but ſlice from every Body elſe. I commend to his Peruſal a Pamphlet, entituled, Omnia comeſta a Belo, where he will find a very particular Account of the Revenues of Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Archdeacons, Deans, Canons, Prebends, Parſons, Vicars, Petty-Canons, Singing-men, Choiriſters, Organiſts, Goſpellers, Epiſtlers, Vergers, Chancellors and their Attendants, Delegates, Regiſters and their Clerks. Gentlemen-Apparitors, Inferior Apparitors, Proctors, &c. I doubt not but Fifteen Hundred Thouſand Pounds a Year, will be the modeſteſt Accompt that Computation will admit of, which is but double the Revenue that former Monarchs have had for the Maintenance of their Family, Crown and Dignity, their Civil Juſtice, Armies, Navies, and coſtly Embaſſies. If all this be to reſemble Chriſt Jeſus and his Apoſtles, the Scripture has given us a very wrong Account of him and them.

The ſecond Thing I would obſerve is this, That he has the Ignorance and Confidence to argue from the Super-excellency of Chriſt's Miniſtration to that of Moſes; That the Maintenance of the Miniſters of the Goſpel ſhould proportionably exceed the Maintenance of the Prieſts under the Law.

Anſw. But certainly he is one of the firſt Men that made this wild Interpretation of the Glory of the latter Houſe excelling the Glory of the former; as if Chriſt's Houſe were outward, or his Glory either. Would he have one outward Temple figure out another? as if Chriſt ſhould bring in another Levitical Law to excel that of Moſes. Certainly the New Jeruſalem, after this Man's Rate of Diſputing, muſt be an outward Structure of material Sapphires, Emeraulds, Jaſpers, &c. But there is a Pope and a Mahomet in his Belly, whether he knows it or no; For theſe Fleſhly Conceits firſt ſet them to work upon their Pompous Worſhip, neglecting the Holy, Pure, Self-denying and Spiritual Religion of Chriſt Jeſus and his Apoſtles, who neither practiſed nor ſet up any Shadowy and Ceremonial Worſhip, ſhip, not ſettling themſelves in Splendid Livings, to lead Eaſy, Quiet and Voluptuous Lives, Freely they received, freely they gave; not as our Adverſary ridiculouſly underſtands it, that they gave their Miracles, but ſold their Preaching: Indeed the Spirit of a Pompous Antichriſt, who pleads for State under a Self-denying Goſpel. Chriſt's Kingdom is not of this World; and yet our Adverſary pleads for the Grandeur of a Worldly Worſhip, Miniſtry and Maintenance; we may allow him therefore and his Tribe to be Worldly Chriſtians, but not true Followers of that Jeſus, who ſaid, when he was in the World, I am not of the World; which leads me to the next Section concerning the Miniſtry.

§. 4. Of Miniſters of the Goſpel.

In Defence of the Church of England's Miniſtry he tells us, (p. 70, 71, 73, 74.) that they have firſt the Teſtimony of their own Conſcience, that they are furniſhed to that Office. 2dly, The outward Call of the Church by Impoſition of Hands and Prayers.

Anſw. If the Miniſters of the Church of England have the Teſtimony of their Conſcience, it muſt be either a true or a falſe Teſtimony. If a Falſe, then not truly called, upon our Adverſary's Principles; If True, then infallibly ſo, and conſequently, both every Man hath an Infallible Witneſs in his own Conſcience, and the Preparation and Call of this Witneſs is the inward Call to the Miniſtry; Now how this can be without Revelation and Inſpiration I know not. But it ſeems, Miniſterial Qualification muſt be judged of by the Witneſs in the Conſcience, which is the Overthrow of the Prieſt's Cauſe and Doctrine: But I deny that the Prieſts Act upon this inward Teſtimony; for they are afraid of being made manifeſt to the Conſcience: And when we urge this Inward Manifeſtation, they cry out with our Adverſary, Enthuſiaſm, Familiſm, Quakeriſm! But if this muſt be the alone Judge of Qualification, let him for Shame give over Vilifying our publick Labourers, and Incenſing our Superiors againſt us, who honeſtly plead Conſcience in the Caſe, and us for Refuſing the National Prieſthood, which we believe in the Preſence of God, Angels and Men, to be not ſo qualified. For Covetouſneſs, Bargaining, Stealing their Neighbours Words, Preaching their Experiences, not their own, not knowing experimentally whereof they affirm, nor turning People to Righteouſneſs, but perſecuting them that love it, and daubing Sinners with untempered Mortar, are altogether inconſiſtent with it.

For the Laying on of Hands, it is well known to be a Jewiſh Ceremony; And we read that Saul and Barnabas preached before the Apoſtles laid Hands upon them. Beſides, it is not every Body's Hands will ſerve; they muſt be Men inſpired upon our Enemies Conceſſions, and not every Foul Fiſt: Nor did it give Authority, but as many other Jewiſh Ceremonies, it was made Uſe of to expreſs that Miſſion which had a more Inward and Spiritual Ground. They were named Apoſtles from one of the meaneſt Offices that belonged to the Temple; not Lord Primates, Lord Archbiſhops, Lord Biſhops, May it pleaſe your Grace, May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, Right Reverend Fathers in God, &c. Theſe Things came from the Pope, and thither they will and muſt return.

To Conclude: Becauſe our Adverſary tells us, that the Church, from the Days of the Apoſtles, has had a ſucceſſive Apoſtleſhip and Miniſtry to confer; whether he will or no, he muſt imply, that there has been a true Apoſtolical Church ever ſince, which is to give the Lye to the Holy Ghoſt that propheſied of a falling away and a great Apoſtacy. 2 Theſ. 2.

2dly. That, if the Miniſtry of the Church of England be lawfully deſcended, and are Succeſſors of the Apoſtles, and ſo primitive Miniſters, they muſt be Apoſtolically qualified; but they are not ſo Apoſtolically qualified either as to the Work of God in themſelves, the Gift of the Holy Spirit, daily Information, the Effect of their Miniſtry, that Patience, Meekneſs, Plain-dealing, Perſeverance, Godly Hoſpitality, continual Labour, and Self-denying Converſation: conſequently not lawfully deſcended, nor true Succeſſors of the Apoſtles and primitive Miniſters.

Nor do we think it ſuch an intolerable Preſumption, for Mechanicks and Tradeſmen to preach the Goſpel, as he would have it: For we well remember, that thoſe who believed and followed the Son of God, were reproached by the Scribes and Phariſees, the Learned and National Teachers of the Jews, for illiterate Perſons, crying out in that Day, Have any of the Rulers or of the Phariſees believed on him, but this People, who know not the Law, are accurſed? It was that His fourth Chapter conſidered : Quakery (as he calls it) no Sadduciſm, as he would ſuggeſt. His Meaſures of us wrong.

HIS great Ill-will to the Quakers puts him upon flinging any thing upon them that he thinks will ſtick; at leaſt that he would have to do ſo. We muſt this Turn be, with all, Familiſts, Sadducees; but the fierce Will of the Man has precipitated him into a ſtrange Miſtake: Hear him.

H. N. owns No other Immortality than the Continuance of his Doctrine, nor Judgment-Seat of Chriſt, nor Heaven, nor Hell, but what are in this Life. The Quakers (ſays he) do the like; for T. Foſter ſays, in a Book, called, A Guide to the Blind,
“ that the Second Appearance of Chriſt is in Spirit, to end Sin and finiſh Tranſ-“ greſſion.

Now if this proves the Agreement, I never ſaw the like (taking for granted what he repreſents H. N to have held, in which I know he belies him.) Is there no Difference between ſaying, that Chriſt's ſecond Appearance is in Spirit, and denying Immortality, Eternal Judgment, Heaven and Hell? O Hideous Conſequence and Compariſon! But why is it ſuch falſe Doctrine to ſay, that Chriſt's ſecond Coming is Spiritual; ſhall he ever come ſo Fleſhly as before? Is not he glorified? After what Manner was it he promiſed to come, when he ſaid, ſome ſtanding 1673. Chap. V. here ſhall not taſte of Death 'till they ſee the Son of Man come in his Kingdom. Mat. 16. 28. I will not leave you Comfortleſs, I will come to you; yet a little while and the World ſees me no more; but ye ſee me, becauſe I live ye live alſo. He that is with you ſhall be in you, John 14. 17, 18. And when the Apoſtle Paul ſaid, Tho' I have known Chriſt after the Fleſh, yet henceforth I know him ſo no more; When it pleaſed God to reveal his Son in me. I aſk, if this was not both a Second and a Spiritual Appearance? Certainly it muſt be another Appearance from the former, therefore a Second; and it muſt be a Spiritual one, becauſe it is Unreaſonable to believe that Chriſt, as to his bodily Appearance, could be all this to his Diſciples and Followers; therefore, His Second Appearance is Spiritual.

And for Judgment, Immortality, Heaven and Hell in this Life, were not our Adverſary a Senſeleſs Novice in theſe Matters, his own Doctors would teach him, That there ſhall be no other Judgment, Immortality, Heaven or Hell hereafter, than what every one has ſome meaſurable Senſe or earneſt of in this Life. From hence he is ſo unjuſt to us, and H. N. too, as to give out to the World, We both deny all future Immortality, Judgment, Heaven or Hell. I have declared the utmoſt of the Thing, and doubt not but Time will make him greatly aſhamed of his Undertakings.

Pag. 82. But G. Fox, the Sadducee, (ſays he) holds, the Soul is a Part of the Eſſence and Being of God; therefore his Concluſion is unqueſtionable; or to that Purpoſe.

I am very ready to think the Devil grievouſly angry with that good Man, and indeed he has Reaſon for it, (if I may ſay, That the Devil can have Reaſon for any thing he does) for he hath ſhrewdly brow-beaten his Cauſe in the World, and a great Inſtrument has God made him of Noble, and Valiant, and Durable Acts among the Sons of Men: And we ſhall ſo much the more reſpect and Honour him, by how much Untoward Spirits ſeek to bear him down in the Minds of People. But to anſwer our Adverſary: How comes it he never quotes when he cites, I mean page his References? Does he think we are bound to peruſe a Folio to defend any Paſſage from his Random Reflections? What is he for a Man, that he treats us ſo a la neglegence; with this contemptuous Neglect? Does he conceit People beholden to him for his Slanders without Proof, or that any Thing againſt a Quaker is Evidence enough? But I will tell the Man, he miſtakes G. F. for the Purport of his Words are to ſhew, That the Life God breathes into the Soul of Man, by which Man comes to live to God, is ſomething of the Divine Being; not that the Soul, as a Created Capacity, without that Inſpiration, is Part of God, or of his Divine Being, and ſo far Candor (that keeps the Eye clear) would have let him ſee, had not Prejudice and a Deſire of Miſ-repreſenting, and running us down, hurried him beyond the Bounds of all Moderation: Nor is he alone in the Matter? For many Learned Rabbies and modern Orthodox Divines (as they are called and reputed) have affirmed the ſame. Let it be Truth for their Sakes, if not for his.

In ſhort, Were we of the Mind he would have People to think we are, of all Men none would be ſo Miſerable: What! Suffer in this World, becauſe of our Faith and Hope, in the Life of the other, and yet deny the very End of that Hope, Faith and Eternal Life, which alone bears us over the Troubles of this Temporal One? I am perſwaded all moderate Perſons will think better of us.

Chap. VI.

CHAP. VI.

He endeavours in his Fifth Chapter, to prove us Inconſiſtent with the Good of Civil Magiſtracy. Our Adverſary's Reaſon too ſhort for his Envy: Swearing not Lawful.

p. 90, 91, 92. HAD not this Chapter been found among the reſt, I might perhaps have taken him for ſome Zealous Church-man, vexed only at the Increaſe of the poor Quakers, on a mere Religious Score. But when I ſee him wilfully Miſtaken, and purpoſely Characterizing them Enemies to Government, and that to the Inſecurity of Civil Magiſtrates, I perceive what he would be at, and that nothing will ſerve him below our Throats. He has multiplied Words unneceſſarily; theſe two, hang them, would have both explain'd and perhaps gratified his Mind better.

He delivers it as a Fundamental of the Quakers Religion, That they teſtify againſt Proud and Lofty Magiſtrates, who Rule not for God, but themſelves; to which, as a dangerous Doctrine, he oppoſeth the Apoſtle Peter's Exhortation; Submit your ſelves to every Ordinance of Man for the Lord's Sake, whether to the King, as Supream, or unto Governors, that are ſent by him for the Puniſhment of Evil-Doers, and for the Praiſe of them that do well; crying out, Is not this a Doctrine fitted to ſtir up Sedition and Rebellion; and that ſuch are only Magiſtrates in our Account that are Righteous in our Eſteem. If a Magiſtrate be wicked, Obedience, ſays he, is ſtill due to him.

Anſ. True, but not to that which is Wicked; for that were to open a Door to all the Impiety a Nero could be guilty of. But what Contradiction is there betwixt the Apoſtles Language and the Quakers? Can any ſober Perſon think, the Apoſtle Peter exhorted the Churches to believe Evil Magiſtrates to be Good ones? or prove Lofty Magiſtrates who rule not for God fit to be obeyed therein? This were to underſtand, as if the Apoſtle meant, That ſuch as rule not for God, Puniſh Evil-Doers, and Praiſe them that do well; A Contradiction. If our Faith be Dangerous, the Scripture muſt be in Queſtion. Muſt a Reproving of Evil be a diſowning of Magiſtracy? It ſeems then that Magiſtrates are not to be reproved, let their Practices be never ſo exorbitant; Is there no Difference between our Diſlike of the unjuſt Act of a Julian; and our Rebellion againſt Juſt Authority? If ſhewing Men their Evils, be Diſreſpect, and a Reprehenſion of them as Unchriſtian, be Rebellion; we muſt read Religion backwards. But God deliver all Magiſtrates from ſuch Counſellors, and us from ſuch Enemies.

But that which is very remarkable, is the Contradiction he gives himſelf, and the Injuſtice he ſhews to us; who in one Page ſays, 'we would deſtroy all Magi'ſtrates, not of our own Opinion: And in the very next gives it for our Judgment, though with great Diſlike, that Magiſtrates ought not to impoſe Opinions in Matters of Religion, as if we were ſuch Wretches, as to deny that Power unto Magiſtrates, which we would tyrannically uſe our ſelves.

But he thinks he has enough againſt us in this Expreſſion, "All Governours "ought to be accountable to the People, and to the next ſucceeding Rulers, for "all their Actions which may be enquired into upon Occaſion. This (ſays our Adverſary with a great Rant) borders upon Treaſon, reſpecting his Majeſty, the King of England.

Anſ. But what if he was not then in England, but a Sort of People that held this very Principle, and who had ſworn to God, before Angels and Men, to maintain it, and broke their ſolemn Oaths? Was it not, Argumentum ad hominem, to ſuch a Generation? And does not our Adverſary know, that there are Elective Governments in the World, and annual Choice of Officers in our own Country, that are accountable both to the People and their Succeſſors?

But ſince he has brought the King of England's Name on the Stage, upon this Occaſion, I ſhall briefly tell him and the World, two Things, and let Men reliſh them as they pleaſe. Firſt, That it is not for the Intereſt, or Honour of his Government, For any to be over officious in the enlarging his Prerogative beyond thoſe bounds, the excellent fundamental Laws of England have circumſcribed the whole Government with. No Princes Crown in Europe ſtands more firm than his, upon Engliſh Law; The Law gives both Right and Might. It has been the Part of ſuch as dare not truſt their Lives and Actions with the Law, to whiſper unlimited Power into the Ears of Princes; but their ultimate Aim was not their Soveraigns Greatneſs, but their own Protection. We are no Sycophants, yet we fear God, and honour the King. Secondly, It is not our Buſineſs to meddle with Government; but to obey or ſuffer for Conſcience-ſake: Can our Adverſary aſk more? Several of us have been the faithful Servants both of Him and his Father, and God knows, our Kindneſs is not changed with our Religion, though it admits not of our former Way of ſhewing it. And this I may truly ſay in general, That not only our Principle leads to no ſuch Nice and buſy Medlings, but we are actually unconcerned in any ſuch Things: We ſpeak not this out of Fear or Flattery; the Truth has placed us far above both; but knowing the World will never be good till every one mends one; and that God's Grace has therefore univerſally appeared, and yet doth in the Hearts of Men, It's both our Deſire, Duty and Practice to endeavour after that Holy, Righteous and Innocent Life it leads to, and that as well for others as our ſelves.

Of SWEARING.

But he ſays, (pag. 93.) Inaſmuch as we refuſe to ſwear before a Lawful Magiſtrate, we contradict the Word of God, and throw away the greateſt Tye any Prince hath upon his Subjects, Inſinuating, as if we had been dabbling with the Jeſuits in this Matter.

Anſ. 'Tis ſtrange that ſuch an illiterate Sort of Mechanicks, and Ruſtick Rabbies (as he is pleaſed to call us) ſhould hold ſuch Correſpondence with one of the moſt learned Claſſes in the World; But as there is more Difference between us and the Papiſts, than the Proteſtants and the Papiſts, by how much the Proteſtants have many Things that are Popiſh, and we have not; ſo have I ever found theſe ſilly thred-bare Slanders, to be the Refuge of Shallow Heads, and Weak Cauſes. But I would have all know, as I have elſe-where ſaid, The Ground of Swearing is either through Diſtruſt of Honeſty in Him that ſwears, or Weakneſs in Him to whom the Oath is made. The firſt takes in all the Swearing that is now in the World; the laſt thoſe Oaths God condeſcended to make to the Jews. So that it is either an extraordinary Way of Evidence to awe Witneſſes into Truth, or an extraordinary Way of Promiſing to work Belief in the Incredulous. Now Incredulity and Diſhoneſty are both Uuchriſtian; For as none are Chriſtians, but thoſe who are buried with Chriſt by Baptiſm, and are raiſed up unto Newneſs of Life; ſo in that pure Law of the Spirit of Life, Swear not at all, is recorded. And ſo far is this from Contradicting the Word of God, that the great Word of God hath ſo enjoyned us, for all our Adverſary's Paraphraſe upon it, to wit, Swearing in Communication; for the Swearing prohibited was ſuch as the Law allowed, as Bp. Sanderſon well obſerves, It was not needful that Chriſt ſhould forbid, what was forbidden in it ſelf, or was always Unlawful, which Swearing in Communication was and is, as by the third Commandment, Thou ſhalt not take the Name of the Lord thy God in vain.

See Bp. Gauden of Swearing, The Foundation of Swearing now is the Wickedneſs of Men. P. 36.

Bp. R. Sanderſon De Jur. Oblig. p. 141.

Chriſt brought forth a Righteouſneſs that needed it not; for that Grace, Faith and Truth, which came by Jeſus Chriſt, take away the Neceſſity of an Oath. Conſequently ſo far as any are in that Incredulity or Diſhoneſty which needs it, ſo far they are not the Followers and Diſciples of Chriſt, nor qualified with his Evangelical Righteouſneſs. Indeed 'tis a ſhameful Thing, and very diſhonourable to the Chriſtian Religion, that they who pretend themſelves to be of a Chriſtian Society, ſhould be ſo un-Chriſt-like, to want and uſe the ſcareing and affrighting Aſſeverations diſpenſed with in ſome of the weakeſt Times of Knowledge, by which to aſſure one another of their Faith and Truth. In ſuch Caſes where is their Evangelical Link and Tye of Unity? Certainly a true Chriſtian's Yea ſhould be Yea, and his Nay, Nay; that is, in Anſwer to all Queſtions, whether it relate to matter of Evidence or Promiſe, they ſhould ſpeak the Truth, and mean and do what they ſay; which is enough.

This Truth is ſo natural, that it is familiar with ſome to ſay, *I had rather take his * Word than the other's Oath*; which ſhews, how much Honeſty is more credible than Swearing. This made the primitive Chriſtians not only Refuſe to Swear by the Fortune of Cæſar, but to ſwear at all, telling their Judges in their Anſwers, It was unlawful for a Chriſtian to ſwear. Bnd Bp. Gauden himſelf aſſures us, that they were ſo ſtrict and exact, that there was no need of an Oath among them; Yea, they ſo kept up the Sanctity and Credit of their Profeſſion among Unbelievers, that it was Security enough in all Caſes to ſay, Chriſtianus ſum, I am a Chriſtian; And that if any urged them farther, they repeated this as the only Satisfaction they would give: The Veracity of their Word. And that he might farther ſhew, how diſhonourable and needleſs a Thing it was for Good and Holy Men, and true Chriſtians to Swear, he brings in the Whole Body of the Eſſæans, ſeveral wiſe Heathen, and Chriſtian Fathers; Indeed it was a Primitive Maxim, Non oportet, ut vir qui Evangelice vivit, juret omnino. It behoves not that a Man of an Evangelical Life ſhould ſwear in any Caſe. And this Doctrine was cloſely follow'd by Chryſoſtom, Theophylact, and ſeveral other ancient Chriſtian Doctors. Nor were the Heathen wholly inſenſible of the Truth of this Matter, as Bp. Gauden farther informs us out of Polybius "That the better and ſimpler Ages of the World rarely uſed any Oaths at all, no "not ſo much as in Judicature; but after Perfidy and Lyes encreaſed, Oaths en-"creaſed, as a Remedy to reſtrain thoſe Miſchiefs. To which let me add, That ſome of the ancient Sages, Socrates and Xenocrates, knew, urg'd, and alſo practiſed a Life beyond an Oath.

* As the Thief in Eſſex, who robbing a Quaker in company with another, and uſing them fairly, deſired them not to ſtir, till they were got clear of the Road; upon which ſaid the other Man, I'll ſwear; you ſwear, you'l ſwear through an Anvil and back again; will the other promiſe? Thieves know Honeſty, though they do not practiſe it.

Chap. VI.

So that if thoſe who are truly diſcipled, redeemed and renewed by the Power and Spirit of Chriſt Jeſus, need no Oath (Nay, that it is a Queſtioning of their Veracity, and an Affronting of their Profeſſion, to offer them one) and if the Lying, familiar Swearing, Forſwearing, and fraudulent Dealing of Wicked Men make their Oaths of little or no Credit (as ſaith the Biſhop out of Lactantius and Auſtin) certainly it will be much better to prevent Swearing, and puniſh Lying with the Penalty due to Forſwearing: which ſuggeſts an unanſwerable Return to that familiar Objection, But how do we know that ye are thoſe Honeſt Men? For we have not only the ſame Anſwer the ancient Chriſtians had to give, with this ſevere Rebuke, That ye are the Reproach of Chriſtianity, who under that good Name act thoſe vile Impieties the nobler Heathen judged, and the looſeſt have not out-done; but we have this farther to offer: Diſpenſe with our Conſciences in not-Swearing, and puniſh our Untruth when ye find it, as ſeverely as ye do their Perjury. What more can be deſired, ſince Truth-ſpeaking fulfils the Law, and Puniſhing Falſe-ſpeaking ſatisfies it?

Chap. VII.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Light Within.

IT is Matter of ſad Complaint, that a Man ſhould write of ſo excellent a Subject as the Light Within, and ſhew ſo much Darkneſs in treating of it. p. 99, 101, 102, 103.

But leſt he ſhould ſay, That our uncertain and various Expreſſions, for ſuch he eſteems them, put him beſides all Faith in it, we ſhall endeavour to make their Conſiſtency both with themſelves, and the Scriptures of Truth appear,

He quotes Tho. Foſter, in his Guide to the Blind, p. 1. thus, “God is the Light. p. 7. as a Man forgetting himſelf, “Chriſt Within is Man’s true Light to walk by; And in p. 9. As doubting whether that would hold Water; ſays, “The Spirit of “Chriſt in Man is the true Light and Guide, and this Light enlightens every Man “that comes into the World. But (ſays he) if James Naylor may be Judge, our Friend Thomas (he was ſo, though thou art an Enemy, and a Mocker of his Memory) is very much miſtaken; for in his Book, called, A Door opened to the Impriſoned, p. 2, 3, he ſays, “That the Light of the Word is God’s Love to the “World; and this Light is not given to any till they come out of the World. And that George Whitehead in the Seed of Iſrael’s Redemption, p. 20. ſays, “That “the Light Within, is a Meaſure of the Lord’s Life and Light.

Anſ. To the firſt Quotation, there can be no Cavil; for ’tis plain Scripture, God is Light, 1 John 1. 5. And it was the Apoſtolical Meſſage ſo to preach, That God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all. John 1. 9.

The ſecond is alſo moſt true; for Chriſt is Man’s true Light, that was the true Light which enlightens every Man, &c. And that it was for Man to walk by, both Chriſt and his Apoſtles prove. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life. Joh. 8. 12. Again, If ye walk in the Light, as He is in the Light, &c. 1 Joh. 1. 7. God is Light, and Chriſt is Light; and ſince there is no knowing of God or Chriſt but by the Manifeſtation of Light; and that none know the Father but thoſe to whom Chriſt, the Light, reveals him; therefore Chriſt is Man’s true Light, without which Man can never know either God or Chriſt.

For his third Quotation, I ſee no Contradiction in it to the two former, unleſs Chriſt can be without his Spirit; for if the Spirit of Chriſt dwell in any Man, Chriſt dwells in that Man. This Language the Apoſtle uſed to the Romans, Chap. 8. 9, 10, 11. If the Spirit of God be in you. Again, If the Spirit of Chriſt be in you; yet again, If the Spirit of Him that raiſed up Jeſus dwell in you; all which are Synonymous, or to one and the ſame Purpoſe. For Shame, thou a Scholar, a Græcian, a Diſputant, that makeſt ſuch ſorry Cavils; might not the Jews and Heathens have made the ſame Exceptions againſt the Apoſtle? But ’tis an old Devil-Trick to be-ſaint and extol the Holy Ancients, whilſt they hugg the Spirit that murdered them, and with it perſecute the Truth in this Age; ſo cunning is the Devil, and ſo blind is the World. But let us ſee how much more Honeſt he is in his next Quotation, than Rational in the three former.

That the Light of the World is God’s Love to the World, I find in James Naylor’s Book; But that the Light is not given to any till they come out of the World, is a direct Lye to our Principle, and a putting an abſolute Forgery upon his Book; For he ſays, That God has given his Light to the World, that therein is his Love manifeſted, that ſuch as follow it in it's Leadings out of the World, have the Nature of Sons: But Sonſhip is that which cannot be had whilſt in the World's Nature; therefore they are to come out of the World's Ways, to follow the Light, which viſits Man in the World's Ways, in order to bring him out of them, and here the true Sonſhip is received; ſo that the Sonſhip and not the Light, is that which cannot be had in the World. Now what Contradiction can this be to our Diſhoneſt Adverſary's honeſt Friend Thomas, who ſaid, that the Light enlightened every Man that comes into the World? Sure I am it is a plain Inſtance of our Adverſary's Diſingenuous and Injurious Practice.

For G. Whitehead's Words, The Subſtance of them is to be found in Joh. 1. 14, 16. The Word was full of Grace and Truth, and of his Fulneſs have all we received, and Grace for Grace.

But he ſays. H. N. teaches that every Godly Man is God incarnate, and Chriſt incarnate, and that this is the Doctrine of the Quakers (ſays he) I prove. Firſt, becauſe T. Foſter in his Guide to the Blind, pag. 13. ſaith, "The Light which is "Chriſt within, is not Natural, but Sufficient to Salvation. Now I appeal to the whole World, What Affinity there can be between H N's Words and Tho. Foſter's. Is God incarnate or Chriſt incarnate, to be found in his Aſſertion? Nor will I paſs my Word for his right Quotation of H. N. What he quarrels at here I know not. Would he not have Chriſt manifeſted within? Or would he have him Natural, in Oppoſition to Spiritual? Or would he have his Light and Spirit inſufficient to Salvation? If he intends any of theſe, he croſſes expreſs Scripture, blaſphemes againſt God, and fruſtrates the very End of the Goſpel; If none of them, why was this Paſſage cited? But he thinks G F. has made much for his Purpoſe, who in his Great Myſtery, p. 207, 201. ſaith, Chriſt is not diſtinct from the Saints, and he that eats the Fleſh of Chriſt hath it within him. And what of all this? Is Chriſt di-
Col. 1. 27. vided from his Saints, Was he not in them of Old the Hope of Glory? He that's
Joh. 14. 17. with you, ſhall be in you. And at that Day ye ſhall know, that I am in my Father,
.20 and you in me, and I in you. For the other Part, I wonder he cited it: Certain it
John 6. 53. is, That unleſs Men eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, they have no Life in them. Now how a
54. Man can be ſaid to eat any Thing, and not have it within him, is a Diſtinction paſt my Underſtanding.

But Geo. Fox ſaith, p. 206. If there be any Chriſt but He that was crucified within, he is a falſe Chriſt; and he that hath him not within, is a Reprobate.

Anſw. Our Return to this will be very ſhort. 1ſt. By Chriſt crucified within, he does not deny that he was once crucified without (as the ſame Page proveth) as our Adverſary would inſinuate. 2dly. There can be no Falſe Doctrine in it, unleſs the owning of Chriſt being crucified within, through Wicked Works, neceſſarily ſhould imply our Denying that he was ever crucified without; from the Danger of which Conſequence the Scriptures of Truth ſufficiently ſecure us. Heb. 6. 6. Seeing they crucify to themſelves the Son of God afreſh. Alſo Rev. 11. 18. 3dly. And that ſuch are Reprobates in whom he lives not; remember that unanſwerable Paſſage, 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves. whether you be in the Faith; prove your own ſelves: know you not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except you be Reprobates?

But ſays our Adverſary, Ric. Stubbs, a Quaker, told Eliz. Wetherly, That the Jeſus who was born of the Virgin, and dyed at Jeruſalem, was a falſe Chriſt and an Antichriſt. But this needs no long Anſwer; for it is an abſolute Untruth, raiſed by the Devil within, and his envious Emiſſaries without, to bring us, the poor deſpiſed People of God, into Infamy with all who have any Reverence for the Name of Chriſt; And God will plead our Innocency in this Man's Conſcience, by that Holy Light which he blaſphemouſly ſaith, leads down to Hell and the Devil, carrying Man, like an Ignis fatuus, into Bogs and Ditches, cauſing him at laſt to fall into the Pit of Everlaſting Deſtruction. For this I would have all the World to know, Pſal. 7. 9. That God, Who is the Searcher of the Heart, and the Tryer of the Reins, who alone ned every Man that cometh into the World, that he may come to the Light, and walk and grow up in it: For as all have given unto them out of his Fulneſs Grace for Grace, ſo from his Fulneſs of Light, hath he given all Men Light for Light; not a meer natural Capacity or creaturely Underſtanding, but that Divine Light or Grace, which is able to teach, ſanctifie and govern the Soul to God's Glory, and it's own Everlaſting Happineſs: In the Word by whom all Things were made was Life, and that Life was the Light of Men; And as it was then, ſo is it now the Condemnation of the World, that Men love Darkneſs rather than Light, becauſe their Deeds are Evil. Some, with the Phariſee, prefer their Formal, Literal and Ceremonial Religion; and others, their Pleaſures, Paſtimes and Worldly Honour and Profit, before this Inward, Pure Light, and Law of the Spirit of Life, the Leaven of the Kingdom, and Truth in the Inward Parts, which frees from Sin, and brings into the Heavenly Liberty of the Sons of God. And we do teſtifie in the Name of God, that it is only by this Meaſure of that Divine Fulneſs, which above One Thouſand Six Hundred Years ago was manifeſted in the Fleſh, that any Man or Woman can ever come to a right Sight, Senſe, Reliſh and Enjoyment of the Bleſſed Ends and Effects of his Gracious Appearance, Heavenly-Goſpel, Mighty Miracles, Holy Life, Death and Sufferings, his Powerful Reſurrection, Glorious Aſcenſion, and conſtant Mediation and Interceſſion. And that all Knowledge, Faith, and Worſhip, not grounded upon this internal Sight, Senſe and Operation of this Divine Meaſure of Grace, Light and Truth in the inward Parts, are but Hiſtorical and Phariſaical; making up but the Jew outward, and Chriſtian outward, who are not Children of the Free Woman, nor Heirs according to the Promiſe. And if for this bleſſed Teſtimony we muſt be thus abuſed, defamed, and ſet at nought by the Black-robed-Rabbies of this World, as the Prophets, and Chriſt, himſelf, were, God will be our abundant Recompence, who is the Author of that good Reformation begun, and will, I hope, be the Finiſher of it, to his own Immortal Honour, and our unutterable Rejoycing, World without End.

CHAP. VIII.

Chap. VIII.

Of ſome of our Adverſary's Lyes and Slanders.

HIS next Chapter containing a ſhort Account of the Quaker's Pretences to immediate Revelation, hath been already effectually conſidered; only I ſhall take Notice of two or three Particulars.

Pag. 107. 108. 109, 110. 111.

Firſt, That he would have the Sadneſs and Dejection of thoſe that turn Quakers, and the Zeal and Fluency of thoſe that Preach among them, to be the Effect of the Hypochondria.

Anſw. This ſhews what an eaſie Religion our Adverſary lives in, who yet knows not the Terrors of the Lord: How unfit is he to Warn Men? Had he ever known God's Word to be as a Sword, an Hammer, an Ax, a Conſuming Fire and Everlaſting Burnings againſt Sin and Iniquity, the Pangs of a New Birth, and how hard it is to become a true Diſciple through the daily Croſs, he would never have made ſuch a frothy, dark and envious Conſtruction of our Serious Convictions: But God's Fire will one Day burn up his peaceable Habitation; and in that Day of Alarm, he and the reſt of his Jovial Crew, ſhall know the Meaning of theſe Words, They that pierced him ſhall ſee him, and all the Kindreds of the Earth ſhall wail becauſe of him.

But whatever Diſeaſe we have, his frequent and ſenſleſs Scoffs at us, and our Holy Way, ſhew that the Spleen is very prevalent in him.

For his Reflection on Edw. Burroughs, it will do him no Harm; his Soul is with God, and his Memory ſhall out-live his Enemies Hate. And for this Ranting Scribbler, he is not worthy to carry his Books after him.

For his Gentle-man of New-Caſtle, who affirmed, Some Quakers came to Kendal Church, and ſaid, they had a Commiſſion from the Lord to pull down the Steeple-Houſe; And another in Sermon Time to pull down the Hour-Glaſs, I muſt tell him, that we know no ſuch Thing, and if it were a fair Adverſary, he would have told us, who this Gentle-man was, and who the Quakers, that we might have informed our ſelves of the Truth of the Matter; though we have great Cauſe to conclude it a down-right Forgery. For the other, it is altogether as likely to come of the ſame Stock; but if ſuch a Thing ever were, I dare ſay, the Prieſt was in a worſe Taking than the Quaker; however, it was no Theft, becauſe they all ſaw for what End it was done: And every Body knows, the Prieſt can tell how to call for another Glaſs; for the Truth is, ſome of that Profeſſion can hardly preach without them; for they elevate them above his Quaker's Hypochondria.

That the Wife of one Williamſon, ſhould call Ja. Milner, the Eternal Son of God, at Appleby, is an arrant Falſhood; for we have particularly enquired, and can find no ſuch Thing.

That a Woman at Weighton in York-ſhire, of that Goatiſh Herd (as he is pleaſed to call them) went naked up to another Woman's Huſband's Bed, and bid him open his Bed to her, for the Father had ſent her, is a Slander hatcht in Darkneſs: We deny it in the Name of the Lord God; And I charge this diſingenuous Man, if he has any Regard to his Reputation, or thoſe he belongs to, to prove, if he can, the Truth of this Story.

And that he ſhould at laſt call this, A Taſte of the Quakers deluded Dreams, melancholick Fancies, Impoſtures, Injections, everlaſting Errors and Deceits, is the Top of what Impudence and Forgery Man can well be guilty of againſt his Neighbour. But why our Goatiſh Herd above all others? Unjuſt and Uncivil Man! Look at Home for Shame. How often are Quakers brought to Eccleſiaſtical Courts for Uncleanneſs? We know they are too often ſummoned there for Tythes: It would be almoſt endleſs to tell the Stories of both Prieſts and People's Wickedneſs that follow them; one would think that no Church of England Man, that knew any thing of the preſent Age, or that thought we did, could believe that forging one unclean Lye againſt the Quakers, ſhould invalidate their Religion, who believes his own to be true, notwithſtanding thoſe numerous Inceſts, Adulteries, Fornications, Concupiſcences, Murders, Lyes, Perjuries, Diſſimulations, Thefts, Injuries, and ſuch like, that have been, and daily are committed by his Dear Fellow-Communicants, The Sons and Daughters of the Church of England. Let him therefore draw in his Horns, and leave off puſhing at us with his Forgeries and Defamations; and repent of this ungodly Way of dealing with us, that he may find Mercy to his Soul.

Chap. IX.

CHAP. IX.

Of PERFECTION.

I Perceive, the Man would fain ſay ſomething of every Controverted Head, held by the Quakers, though as little to Purpoſe as may be. There is but one Thing commendable in his whole Chapter, and that is it's Brevity. He ſtumbles at the very Entrance, and never recovers himſelf to the End.

The Quakers talk much of Perfection from Sin, in this Life, and that they have already attained to it. Quote, he ſcorns, his Word is Credit enough, at leaſt he would have it ſo; but to let him go on. This, ſays he, is the Phariſee's Litany, God, I thank thee! I am not as other Men are. The Antinomian Litany, the Doctrine of Dell, Saltmarſh, Town, and all Antinomians and Familiſts; And that Malice and Railing perpetually make up the greateſt Part of the Quakers Speaking to the People. But what of Argument can be found in ſuch meer Aſſertion and Reflection, I leave with ſober Men to judge. He neither underſtands, Antinomians, Familiſts, nor Quakers. And truly I am ready to think him ſome raw, unfledged, ungraduate, who by this Eſſay aims at that Proof of his Abilities, as may induct him to ſome Fat Benefice; or elſe One that thought we deſerved no larger Teſtimony of his Ability, Honeſty, and Diſcretion, in his Endeavours againſt us.

In ſhort, A perfect Principle we plead for, and preſs the Neceſſity and Benefit of Man's Conformity to it; That though it be a little Leaven, it is able to leaven the whole Lump; That this Grace brings Salvation from Sin, by the Power it gives them that obey it, to mortify Sin; elſe what a Riddle would thoſe Scriptures make, That ſpeak of Sanctification throughout in Body, Soul and Spirit. That He that's born of God, ſins not. Old things are done away, behold all things are become new: I write unto you Young Men, becauſe ye have overcome the Wicked One. Be ye perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect. Unto a perfect Man. Let us cleanſe our ſelves from all Filthineſs of Fleſh and Spirit, perfecting Holineſs in the Fear of the Lord. The God of all Grace make you perfect, &c. Wherein not only a Perfection from Sin, but the going forward to a perfect Man in Chriſt, is exhorted to, and prayed for; therefore not inobtainable.

To conclude: We do not teach People the Perfection of our Perſons, but the Principle of God, and our Experience of it's Converting and Tranſlating Power, Chriſt is ſtronger than the Devil; And for this, was, and is he manifeſted, To end Sin, and deſtroy the Works of the Devil; a Doctrine the Church of England teaches in her Baptiſm. Nor do we ſay, That every Man is perfect from Sin as ſoon as he is convinc'd of Sin: No, there is a great War, a long Wilderneſs to travel through, many Enemies to ſubdue, and difficulties to ſurmount; and thoſe Enemies are moſtly thoſe of a Man's own Houſe. We therefore exhort all to wait for God's Ariſing, that his Enemies may be ſcattered, that witneſſing a victorious State over Hell and Death, by the Power of Chriſt Jeſus, ſuch may obtain the New Name which is written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and promiſed to all that Over-come: Which is far from that Ungodly Ranteriſm he would faſten upon us and our Principles; And I doubt not but Time, Patience, and our Blameleſs Converſation, ſhall diſpel thoſe Miſts, Malice and Ignorance may have raiſed to darken and blemiſh the Reputation of our Practice, Perſons and Principles in the World.

CHAP. X.

Chap. X.

His Ninth and Tenth Chapter of the Ways and Arts that the Quakers uſe in gaining Proſelytes, with the Advantage their Way has over other Hereſies, honeſtly conſidered, and briefly confuted.

Pag. 117. THE firſt Artifice, he ſays, we uſe, is, To come in Sheep's Clothing. Now what is this Sheep's Clothing (ſays he) but only the Innocence and Purity of the Chriſtian Doctrine; when as their main Purpoſe is to devour credulous Souls.

Anſw. If we have the Sheep's Clothing, and if the Sheep's Clothing be the Purity and Innocence of Chriſtian Doctrine, then is our Doctrine Innocent, Pure, and Chriſtian. And ſince he avers the Doctrine of the Church of England to be ſo remote and oppoſite, this Character muſt neceſſarily imply, that her Doctrine is Hurtful, Impure, and Antichriſtian.

But what have we Seduced People to? Drunkenneſs, Whoredom, Perjury, Wantonneſs, Idleneſs, or any ſuch Unſeemly or Irreligious Practice? Let him tell me who of us are leſs Serious, leſs Moral, or worſe Livers than we were before. But the Truth of the Matter is this: Our Way of Devouring People's Souls, as he calls it, is that which hinders the Hireling Prieſts from Devouring the People's Pockets, and endangering their Souls too, who teach for Hire and Divine for Money, and make Religion but a Stalk to Preferment, who have the Shell without the Subſtance, the Form without the Power; From ſuch, in Obedience to God's Spirit, we have turned away; and becauſe we have dared no longer to put into their Mouths, their Covetous Spirit has ſwelled, notwithſtanding their Pretences, and their Sheep-ſkin burſt, and an arrant Wolf has come forth; no true Sheep, but a Sheep-Fleecer, and a Sheep-ſucker, of their Blood, whoſe Innocency and Patience have plainly proved them ſuch. But the Wolf's and the Fox's Skin have been always good enough for us; any thing to diſguiſe, and make the Dogs faſten and worry to Death. Our Conſcience they call Enthuſiaſm; and our ſolemn Confeſſion, Colluſion, and Equivocation; our Perſeverance is reputed Obſtinacy; our Plainneſs, Singularity; our Induſtry, Worldly-mindedneſs; and our Retired Living, Penuriouſneſs; our Rebukes of Evil, they will have to be Cenſoriouſneſs; and our Diſregard of Company, Pride and Sullenneſs. Whatever God by his Light has made Conſcience to us, there are a Sort of Men, that have ſo little Conſcience, as to conſtrue it all backwards, rendring us inſtead of Honeſt Conſcientious Men, A Pack of Fraudulent, Cheating Fellows: But we cannot help it, if Men will rage, they muſt; Their Shame, and our Patience, will the more appear.

He ſays, Our Second Stratagem is, to bring the People out of Love with their Paſtors, who have the Care of them.

Anſw. I know not a Quaker in the World that would not adminiſter both Food and Rayment, to the worſt Perſecutor, as a neceſſitous Creature: But I hope, they would ſuffer, unto Death, before they would contribute either to him as a Prieſt; No, God's Witneſs in our Conſciences never ſaid Amen to their Miniſtry. They have the Scriptures, true; But the Word of Reconciliation, that brings to God, and of which they declare, they want. I know that ſome of them can talk well; ſo can ſome Mountebanks and Comedians. Do they witneſs the Truth of what they ſpeak? Their Heads know, but do their Hearts feel the Operation of that Truth they will ſometimes in Words declare? Have they travelled the Way, and traced the many anxious Steps of that new Birth, which is the only Door into the Heavenly Kingdom? But, alas! Oxford and Cambridge make them, and their Parents and Patrons prefer them; a good round Maintenance is moſtly their Aim on all Hands: Tell them of the Neceſſity of an Inward Work, that it is the Spirit of God that only makes a Man a Miniſter of God, and that the Anointing, which true Chriſtian-men receive, is ſufficient to their Inſtruction, and preſently the Cry is, Donatiſm, Pelagianiſm, Familiſm, Browniſm, Jeſuitiſm, Quakeriſm, or any other Name that begets Jealouſy, Undervalue and Hatred. In ſhort, we do believe, that the ſettled Miniſters of the World are ſo far from being Beneficial to People, that on the contrary, they exerciſe their Minds with a Sort of unexperienced, unauthoriz'd Preaching, leading from the ſecret Strivings, Diſcoveries and Conduct of that Spiritual Miniſter, of the Everlaſting Covenant, which is able to bring Man into that Way of Holineſs, without which no Soul ſhall ever ſee the Lord: And this is the true Reaſon why we are turned unto God's Miniſter, Chriſt Jeſus, who ſays, Learn of me: Of whom God ſaid, this is my Beloved Son, hear him; and reject the Miniſtry of Man.

p. 120. 121. Our Third Artifice by which he ſays, we gain our Proſelytes, is denying all Humane Learning, and Uſe of Reaſon: That we are the moſt ſottiſh and ignorant Sect that ever appeared in the World; Yet for our own Turn we will be nibling at it, as G. W. in mentioning a Moth-eaten Manuſcript mentioned by Beza in his Annotations.

Anſ. We have already ſaid enough to defend Chriſtianity, from the abſolute Neceſſity of Humane Learning, either to underſtand or vindicate it; and ſo falſe is his Aſſertion, that ſince Prophecy has ceaſed in the Church, ſecular Learning hath been of greateſt Uſe and Benefit to Religion, that there is nothing more true than the contrary, as it is commonly underſtood, promoted and practiſed in the World. I would fain know, how many Rabbies, Greek and Latin Philoſophers, yielded themſelves Proſelytes to the Chriſtian Religion, though they had his Preſence, Miniſtry, Miracles, Death and Reſurrection amongſt them, who was and is the Author and Maſter of it? If ſuch Learning be ſo great a Friend to Truth, how comes it that the greateſt Things have fallen to the Share of Poor and Illiterate Men; And that ſuch have been moſt apt to receive, and boldeſt to ſuffer for it? Why not Rabbies rather than Fiſher-Men, which was before the Pouring out of the Spirit of Prophecy? And for what Reaſon ſhould ſo many learned Academies, ſince the pretended, * Ceaſing of it, be overrun with ſuch foul Idolatries, Groſs Superſtitions, and flagitious Living, as 1200 Years paſt will witneſs. Nay, on the Occaſion of any Reformation, with whom is there more to do, and who harder to be brought to yield than Univerſities have been? Scripture and Story give it clear againſt him.

Not that I would be thought to oppoſe all Sorts of Learning neither; It has been Man's Erring from his Divine Guide, that has made Way for thoſe numerous Theſes, Diſtinctions, Books and Controverſies, the World for Ages hath been infeſted with. Such are the obſcure, unintelligible and unprofitable Metaphyſicks of the Heathen, too greedily received and miſchievouſly increaſed by Fathers, Councils, School-Men, and our modern Univerſities, to the corrupting of Chriſtian Doctrine, and diſputing away the Benefit of Chriſtian Life. An unbounded Curioſity and Fancy, have been the Womb that hath brought forth ſo much troubleſom and unprofitable Matter; which began with a Degeneration of Philoſophers: True Philoſophy in the Beginning of it being no more, than the Way of Holy Living, by the Mortification of Paſſions. But Learning, as Religion, failing by Corruption of Men, is now degenerated into quite another Thing. Socrates taught proper Speech and good Life, and ſuch a Courſe of Learning as turned to daily Practice and Profit; ſeverely forbidding all Curioſities and Niceties, as what turned not to Good Life, which he reputed the beſt Science; and Plato would have the Poets baniſhed out of his Common-Wealth, as corrupting it with Fables: Thus was Learning, as Religion, once Pure and Simple. * In ſhort, all Right Learning is to be divided into theſe Two, True Knowledge and Proper Language. This Knowledge relates Firſt to God, and that's only to be received from the Spirit of God; And, Secondly, the Things of this Life; and therein the Spirit of Man has a large Field to act in, to the Enlargement of it's own Underſtanding, and Benefit of the whole Creation as ſubject to God's Grace, as knowing the Nature and Order of Things in the Creation, Building, Improvement of Land, Medicine, Chirurgery, Traffick, Navigation, Hiſtory, Government, with many other Honeſt, Uſeful, and Profitable Arts and Inventions, for the Help and Good of Mankind. And if Man had kept in God's Counſel, the many ſuperfluous and unneceſſary Arts and Inventions that are in the World, had never been brought forth by him; and Time will work them out, as it brought them in, ſo that what is Plain, Honeſt, Serviceable, and of good Report, ſhall be preſerved for the Good of the Creation.

* But why is it ceaſt? becauſe ceaſt to, you, Sons of the Night? Did not Chriſt promiſe to be with his to the End; Either that is not ſo, or his being with them, endues them not with the Spirit of Prophecy; Was it not Apoſtolical, and in the firſt Churches? Why not now? Is it leſs wanted? Is Chriſt not that to his Church he was? A blind Argument indeed! becauſe the Prieſts of Man's making have it not; therefore none have it. I will pour out my Spirit upon Thee, and upon thy Seed, and thy Seed's Seed unto all Generations. Iſa. 5. 9.

As for Language, it muſt be granted that there is a Propriety and Decency in Language: But as Men have followed the Outſide of Religion, and left the Subſtance behind, ſo have they done with Learning: They have neglected Matter, the moſt Beneficial Part of Learning, and devoted themſelves to an Exceſs of fine Speaking, of which Biſhop Wilkins in his Real Character complains not without a Cauſe, when he ſays, That this Grand Impoſture of Phraſing hath eaten out all Solid Learning.

Yet Language is very convenient for Men's Converſe with Books and Nations of a different Tongue; however, we utterly deny them to be abſolutely neceſſary to the True Knowledge of the Myſteries of God's Kingdom. So that the True Engliſh of the Quakers denying all Reaſon and Learning, is this; We refuſe to commend or practiſe Unneceſſary Studies, Nice Controverſies, Voluminous and Intricate Diſputations, Obſcurity of Language, Affectedneſs of Stile, Exceſs of Elegancy, believing, that Learning as well as Religion, ſtands in need both of great purging, and reducing: And that thoſe Subjects and Employments, which are moſt ſerviceable and beneficial to Mankind, and agreeable to God's Grace, digeſted into eaſy and familiar Methods, and treated on in the plain and ordinary Way of Speaking, beſt deſerves Man's Time and Regard. And for his Reflection upon G. Whitehead, it no farther deſerves our Notice, than that he flung a greater upon Beza, whoſe Learning he makes a little too bold with. To ſay no more of his Moth-eaten-Manuſcript than this, That the beſt Copies he has had for his Rule, have been near a-kin to ſuch Moth-eaten Manuſcripts; and if ſuch a Manuſcript was the Holy Scripture, as I believe it was, he was too Bold, and Irreverent, as well as Unwary and Fooliſh, in calling it a Moth eaten-Scripture, thereby implying it to be a Moth-eaten-Rule; not that I take it to be his Rule, who has ſo fearfully erred and ſtrayed from the Holy Precepts and Exhortations of it.

The fourth Thing by which he reports us to proſelyte People, is, (Pag. 122, 133,) To deceive and aſſociate firſt with Women, therein imitating the Devil.

Anſw. Firſt we deny it, as being like the reſt of his idle Stories, and thoſe that not only in the Primitive Times by the Heathen, but in ſeveral Ages ſince, and Degrees of breaking forth of Truth and Reformation from Apoſtate Generations, have been by them faſtned upon the Sincere Profeſſors thereof, as Waldenſes, Lollards, Hugonots, and Proteſtants themſelves, in their firſt Day, as well as more modern Diſſenters. We muſt take our Share, it is no new nor ſtrange Thing.

But ſuppoſing it to be True, that our Endeavours are firſt directed towards the Women, I ſee no Evil in our Beginning to undeceive, where the Devil began to deceive. If they are ſo eaſie to be perſwaded, why not to Good as well as to Evil? But theſe idle Shifts and pitiful Reflections, deſerve rather to be diſdained then conſidered.

Laſtly, (Pag. 125, 126, 127,) For our pretending to higher Degrees of Holineſs, and Cracks, and Boaſts of Inſpirations, with our † Bewitching Language, which is

* Theſe Men were only verſed in their own Tongues; They were many of them Mechanicks and Tradeſmen: Anſwering among the Gentiles to the Prophets, and Apoſtles among the Jews and Chriſtians (though far ſhort of them.) So that Learning and Philoſophy, like to Religion, are now ſo changed, the Ancients would be at a Loſs to know them: Another Thing has poſſeſt it ſelf of the Name of each: For to be a Philoſopher, or Lover of Wiſdom, which was to eſchew all Evil; and Learning, which was to unlearn every ill Thing, as Socrates ſaid, are now turned to dark and Unprofitable Conteſts, Elaborate and Unſerviceable Studies, to ſtuff Men's Heads.

† Rainerius the Monk, and a terrible Enemy to the poor Waldenſes, made the ſame Complaints againſt them. They uſed, ſays he, to teach firſt what the Diſciples of Chriſt ought to be, and that none are His Diſciples, But they that imitate His Life. And that the Popes, Cardinals, &c. becauſe they live in Pride, Avarice, and Luxury, &c. are not the Lawful Succeſſors of Chriſt, in that they walk not up to His Commandments. Thus ſays the Monk, they win upon the People. P. P. Pet. Hiſt. Wald.

nothing but Canting, and Scripture Phraſe fitted to Feminine Fancies; by which (he ſays) we have the Advantage of all other Hereſies. I return thus much.

Anſw. It is our Faith, that God, who made Heaven and Earth, will judge the Secrets of all Men by Jeſus Chriſt; ſo that it is not only my Duty, but my Intereſt to ſpeak the Truth of my Conſcience in this Matter. We dare pretend to no higher Degree than we have attained; but we muſt make a Difference between what we were whilſt under the Miniſtry of Man, and what we are, ſince our being turn'd to God's Powerful Word in the Heart, Chriſt's Miniſtry: We ſhould be falſe to God, injurious to our Neighbour, and ſmother and belye our own Convictions, if we ſhould not ſay, That we have found our Judge near us, our Guide, Law-giver and Rule very nigh unto us; and thoſe Infirmities, Temptations, and Corruptions, God has, by this Heavenly Grace, given us Power againſt (by which we have known that Mortification of Sin, and Conformity to the Will of God) which the utmoſt of our former Profeſſion could never free us from. And if this Plain and Chriſtian Confeſſion muſt be called by all thoſe hard Names our Adverſary finds for our Honeſt Intentions, we muſt, as we have done, recommend our Cauſe to God, and His Holy Witneſs in all Conſciences, and him to be judged by him to whom we deſire to ſtand and fall in all we ſay, do, and take in Hand; to whom alone we owe the Honour of our Experiences and Preſervations.

However, the Irreverence of the Man deſerves both our Notice, and the Reproof of all that read him: What! Is Scripture-Language become a Cant; and a Sober and Seaſonable Uſe of it, Canting fitted to Feminine Fancies? But we think it not more his Folly, Contradiction and Blaſphemy, to ſpeak with that Contempt of the Holy Scriptures, and his pretended Rule, than an Advantage he gives our Cauſe, to tell the World, That of all others, the Quakers Speak and Preach the Scripture-Dialect. But it is the Mother-Tongue of ſuch frothy Minds ſo to prophane; and for all their pretended Reſpect to the Holy Scriptures, the Spirit and Life, that belong unto them, are made but Matter of Jeer and Mockage: They would not be thought to undervalue Chriſt, the Scripture, nor his Religion, but with the Height of Formality ſeem to Reverence and Applaud them all, yet Perſecute to the Death thoſe that are His Holy Offſpring, by the Spirit of Regeneration; which ſhows their Eſteem of Chriſt, Scripture and Religion, to be but a Kind of Blindfold Reſpect; and that indeed their very Spirits turn within them againſt that which is, truly Chriſt-like, Scriptural and Religious. The Devil ever underſtood his Intereſt better, than to perſecute Truth under that Name; yet for all his fair Pretences to Saintſhip, he conſtantly became a fierce Devourer of thoſe that have been the Children of the Truth: And I may truly ſay to this Oppoſer, That for all his Religion, Learning, Church-Communion, and that Stir he maketh againſt us, as a Crew of Hereticks, and Impoſtors, he knows not what Spirit he is of, who has writ a Book, rather to Abuſe, than Inform us, and inſtigate the Civil Magiſtrate to deſtroy us, than by ſolid Argument to Refute or Reclaim us. He that has but Half an Eye may ſee his Aim was not ſo much our Converſion, as Diſgrace, and, if poſſible, our utter Ruin; But 'till our Adverſary's Labours prove as Dangerous to us as his Deſign (no doubt) was Wicked, we have little Cauſe to dread the Succeſs of his Attempts.

And that he may ſee a little of himſelf, if he thinks himſelf worth looking upon, let him be pleaſed to take a View of ſome of thoſe many Reviling, Scoffing, Rude and Contemptible Epithets he is pleas'd to beſtow on us, an entire Body of People: Heretical Generation of Quakers; Slaves to Pride, Covetouſneſs, Luſt; poſſeſt by the Devil, and a Diabolical Spirit; Apoſtates, Phanaticks, Spiritualiſts; Black, impure Hearts and Mouths; Bewitched with their Sorceries and Inchantments; Impertinent Cavilling Fellows, Rebellious Quakers, Cheats and Mountebanks; A Beaſtly and Quaking Generation; Juglers; Quaking and Impudent Hereticks; A Sottiſh Sect; Illuminado's, Inſpirado's; Their Cheats and Impoſtures, Enthuſiaſtical Hereticks, A Goatiſh Herd.

Epiſtle, p. 6. 7, 29, 32, 33, 35, 40, 41, 53, 77, 94, 206, 111, 117, 121, 110, 109.

And of our Principle thus, Their Light leads to Hell and the Devil, and carries a Man like an Ignis Fatuus, cauſing him to fall into the Pit of Everlaſting Deſtruction; who are led by this, are made obnoxious to all the Impoſtures and Injections of the Devil, and to lye under Everlaſting Errors and Deceits.

*To all which I have no other Anſwer than what it is to itſelf; for it contains that Charge againſt it's Author, that I ſhall leave him to clear himſelf from, both to God and the whole World; only I cannot be ſo wanting of Civility to the Perſon he dedicated his Book to, as not to let him know, that it is unworthy of his Quality and Repute amongſt Men, to have his Name uſed to the Protection of ſo much Rudeneſs, Irreligion and Abuſe.

* Biſhop Sanderſon highly honours and characterizes the Light; he calls it, The Eternal Law of Righteouſneſs, and a Rule ſufficient to Good Life. See his Book in Latin, entituled, De Oblig. Jur. promiſſ.

I cannot think ſo meanly of him, as that the Endeavours of ſo ſcurrilous an Author ſhould excite him to any Severity againſt that poor People he has ſo baſely wronged: For ſuch a Thing were not only beneath that Place he holds amongſt Men, but would be to intitle himſelf to all our Adverſary's Shameful Miſcarriages, and encourage him to perſiſt in what it greatly behoves him to Repent of: Which God grant for his Mercy-Sake; which is my whole Anſwer to his ill Treatment of us, and worſt Wiſh I have for him.

A Conclusion to thoſe to whom the Diſcourſe is Dedicated.

SINCE then it is ſo evidently proved by Scripture, Reaſon, and Undoubted Preſidents, that it is no new or unwonted Thing, for * National Churches to be deceived, notwithſtanding they have been endowed with Power, Learning, Nobility, Wealth, and Worldly Glory: And that it hath pleaſed Almighty God in the moſt Signal Reformations that have been wrought upon the World, to employ a Sort of Plain, Simple, and Illiterate People: Let not our Meanneſs, Plainneſs and Simplicity, be any Argument with you againſt us, in the Mouths of that Decimating Tribe, whoſe Trade it is to oppoſe that Reformation, which in Conſcience can neither own nor pay them; The Old Enemies of God's Appearance in the World, who therefore dread a Free and Univerſal Preaching, becauſe the Ingroſſment of it to themſelves, has proved ſo profitable. Be Gamaliels at leaſt, I beſeech you, and Fight not their Battels: If we are not of God, we cannot ſtand; And if of God, they muſt fall. Leave us therefore with our Spiritual Weapons to decide this Controverſie, without interpoſing your Worldly Power. 'Tis ſtrange that we ſhould be ſuch Ignorants, and Hereticks too, whilſt they Bleſs themſelves with the Name of Learned and Orthodox, and yet dread the Conſequence of being left by you to a Fair Field with us. Are not their Univerſities, Biſhops and Doctors, enough to Silence ſuch Illiterate Whiſflers, as our Adverſary is pleaſed to call us, without the Argument of your Carnal Sword? Certainly they ill deſerve Fifteen Hundred Thouſands Pounds a Year, if at laſt you muſt do the Buſineſs for them: What leſs can we expect from the worſt of Perſons and Cauſes? But as this Employment is below the Dignity of their Office, who are Publick Magiſtrates, and much too Narrow for that Univerſal Influence it ſhould have for Publick Good, ſo remember that Great Saying of the late King, to the then Prince of Wales.

Always keep up Solid Piety, and thoſe Fundamental Truths, which mend both Hearts and Lives of Men, with Impartial Favour and Juſtice. Your Prerogative is beſt ſhown and exerciſed in remitting, rather than exacting the Rigour of Laws, there being nothing worſe than Legal Tyranny. Again, A Charitable Connivance and Chriſtian Toleration often diſſipates what rougher Oppoſition fortifies: Which had been the Saying and Counſel of King James before him. It is a ſure Rule in Divinity, That God never loves to Plant His Church by Violence and Bloodſhed. And in his Expoſitions on Rev. 20. he ſaith, That Perſecution is the Note of a Falſe Church.

Hereſie muſt be cut off with the Sword of the Spirit, ſaith Jerom. The Church doth not Perſecute, but is Perſecuted, ſaith Hilary. If you will, with Blood, with Evil, and with Torments defend your Worſhip, it ſhall not thereby be defended, but polluted, ſaid Lactantius. I will conclude with Chryſoſtom; It is not (ſaith he) the Manner of the Children of God to Perſecute about their Religion, but an evident Token of Antichriſt.

Reader,

O*F what Sort of People ſoever thou art, ſure I am, that Almighty* God hath placed a Witneſs for Himſelf in thy Conſcience, unto whom thou muſt ſtand or fall in the Terrible Day of Account. Vain will all prove that enables not to abide the Teſt of that Day, when the Works of all Mankind ſhall aſſuredly come to Judgment: But bleſſed for ever will they be, who, not deluding themſelves with Unprofitable Notions, ſhall appear with Conſciences void of Offence before God, Angels and Men. And as I have been taught to ſeek that Happineſs above all other, however miſ-repreſented by Ungodly Men, ſo would I not for many Worlds hazard the Peace of that State, by any unjuſt Procedure againſt this Adverſary now before me, however provok'd by his Exorbitances. I would give the Worſt of Men their Due, and as I juſtly eſteem him of that Number, ſo God forbid that I ſhould in the leaſt deprive him of his Right, a Robbery I would not (after his Example) be Guilty of.

Sorry I am, that ſo many Occaſions are renewed to trouble both thee and my ſelf with Books of Controverſie; did I conſult my own Eaſe, and the Common Peace of the ſeveral Religious Intereſts of this Land, Silence ſhould have been my Choice.

Shall Noiſe always go for Zeal, and implacable Conteſt conſtantly be eſteem'd contending for the Faith once delivered to the Saints? Miſerable People! Who know not that of all the Enemies Faith has to overcome, there is not a greater to be conquered? It is an old Fetch of the Devil's to beſaint his own Off-ſpring, that he may beguile the Simple-hearted; and to think of doing God good Service in perſecuting his Truth, was the Condition of the high-profeſſing Jews of old.

Reader, It hath been our great Unhappineſs, that we have not been hitherto known, as we are; for ſince we evermore deſire to be unvail'd to God, there is no Reaſon why we ſhould abſcond our ſelves from Men; no, would we were known of Men, as we are known of the Lord: But ſuch is the Impudence of this Adverſary, that whilſt we ſeek nothing more than to be underſtood, he would have the World believe, we glory in being Unintelligible, and ſeems to make the whole Drift of his Diſcourſe to be a Diſcovery of us; who, inſtead of pulling our pretended Maſk off, puts a frightful Vizard on, and then leads us up and down his Dialogues for a Sight; This is G. Reader, I have only this to requeſt, be moderate, be impartial; and this grant for thy own Sake, that what Judgment thou ſhalt hereafter make of us, or our Enemies, may be ſuch, as thou ſhalt not be aſhamed of in the Day of the Lord God. Certainly it concerns us to beſeech all to weigh theſe Things; For never were Men more innocent, and yet never any rendred more Nocent: Our Reputation here, and our Welfare hereafter, are brought into Queſtion; we muſt be at once the Worſt and moſt Imprudent Men, if what is charged, be True; and if Falſe, our Adverſary greatly both: For ſuch is the Accuſation, that nothing ſhort of fouleſt Wickedneſs can lye at one of our Doors. And though I know many ſlight him, who yet are not of us, reputing him no better than a meer Janizary in Religion, one that fights for his Pay, and writes for his Living, a kind of Homily-Hireling, *not worth our Notice; yet, ſince ſuch is the Unhappineſs of ſome, that they ſtick not to entertain more favourable Thoughts of his Endeavours againſt us; for their Sakes, and to detect his Envy, Error and Injuſtice to the World, am I now engaged. Thy True Friend,

WILLIAM PENN.

Reaſon againſt Railing, and Truth againſt Fiction.

CHAP. I.

Chap. I.

The Introduction to the Diſcourſe: Reaſons why the Dialogue was not anſwered before.

IF it ſhall be wondered at by any, that we are ſo quick with our Return to T.H. upon his Second Dialogue, who ſeemed no more concerned for his Firſt: 'Tis fit that ſuch know the Reaſons we have to give in our Defence.

Firſt, We eſteemed it a Fiction, calculated to the vain and ſcoffing Humour of the Vulgar, without all Savour of Mercy, Juſtice, Seriouſneſs or Civility; worthy of no Man's Patronage, that would be in Earneſt about Religion; To employ our Time about a large, compleat and diſtinct Book, had been to loſe it.

2dly. George Whitehead, the Perſon moſt engaged, had given ſuch an Account of it in brief to the World, that with many it ſeem'd ſufficient; ſince the Contradictions, by him obſerv'd, are no Ways reconciled, nor ſo much as attempted by T. H. in his laſt Dialogue.

3dly. Becauſe whatever might ſeem to carry any Force with it throughout that confident Piece of Forgery, we reſolved to conſider among many other Adverſaries in one large Volume, which is accordingly done. And had it not been for other intervening Diſcourſes, with the great Difficulty we have to print our juſt Defences, when we have made them (a Strait our Enemies are not put to) it had long e'er this come to publick View.

4thly. Several other Adverſaries were then before us, who, whether they ſaid any thing more injurious or no, to be ſure, pretended better Proof and Evidence for what they affirmed.

5thly. So juſt Complaint having met him, as well from ſeveral unconcerned in our Way, as our Friends, to wit, That he had charged the Quaker with ſaying what he did not, at leaſt to him, and in that Caſe, if ever he could prove it to have been either his Saying, or his Belief at any Time, or in any Caſe. He now, to vindicate himſelf from ſuch Injuſtice, hath given us a Second Part, wherein he hopes to make good what he charged upon us in his Firſt, by Quotations out of our own Books, which, if faithfully done, I ſhall freely acknowledge, that a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian. And as this may ſuffice all, but ſuch as are reſolv'd never to be ſatisfied with any thing that comes from us, of the Reaſon of deferring our farther Anſwer; ſo having now that Ground to proceed upon, which we never had before, I ſhall, with God's Aſſiſtance, make the beſt of it I can, in Defence of the Truth, and the Innocency of them that profeſs it; only give me Leave to hint at a few Things, which may not be improper to the Matter in Hand, becauſe they do not a little Diſcriminate and give to reliſh the Spirit of our Adverſary.

Chap. II.

CHAP. II.

Something of the Manner of his Dealing with us.

FIRST then, He has taken a very unequal Way to repreſent our Faith, Doctrine and Practice to the World, in that he hath rather delivered his own Fury than a true Quaker, and ſhews to the World, rather what he would have us to be, than what we are.

Can it be fairly done, to propoſe the moſt knotty Queſtions for himſelf, and give the weakeſt Anſwers for us? Had he but had the Generoſity of a Roman, he would have given us fair Dealing for our Reputations: To make a Fool and an Heretick both, and then call him a Quaker, is no leſs than a Rape, becauſe a violent Robbery committed upon thoſe that go under that Name.

The beſt of Men can never eſcape, let their Adverſaries have but the Characterizing of them. It had become T. Hicks, if he would have ſhewn himſelf a Chriſtian and a Champion too; firſt to have ſet down our Principles and Arguments, as delivered and urged by us, and then have enervated both by his pretended greater Strength of Scripture and Reaſon, before he had made ſo many Trophies of Conqueſt; But becauſe, had we been in the Wrong, this had been the Practice of a true Chriſtian, and that this hath not been his Practice, we are taught to infer, that T. Hicks is thus far Antichriſtian.

Secondly, He has not only made us weak and Ridiculous by Anſwers no Ways to the Purpoſe, but to bely our very Conſciences and Principles. For when he aſks us, Do you believe the Scriptures to be true Sayings of God? he makes us to anſwer, So far as they agree to the Light in me: An Anſwer never ſo delivered by us. And when he queries, Will you be ſo liberal of your Revilings, whether your Adverſary gives Occaſion or not? He anſwereth for us, It concerns us to render them as Ridiculous as we can, and to make our Friends believe they do nothing but contradict themſelves, which is enough to us.

Certainly theſe Things ſhew ſuch premeditated and wilful Obſtinacy to be wicked, that were we, what he repreſents us to be in this very Matter, the ſevereſt Plagues and Judgments of the Eternal God we might juſtly expect to be our Portion for ever. I fear T. Hicks meaſures us by himſelf; and that the Anſwer he feigns to the Second Part of his Dialogue, will be his Lot as truly, as he has there feignedly ſaid it. It would take up too much Time to enlarge, only thus much let me ſay, That Man is hard put to it, and Unjuſt with a Witneſs, who not only invents Anſwers to diſ-repute a Man or People, but ſuch as are very Lyes too againſt their Faith and Practice.

Thirdly, Nor is this all, but he hath managed the whole of his Dialogues in a Spirit of Prophanation, by a taunting and inapplicable Uſe of many ſerious Words, that have at one Time or other been ſeaſonably uttered by Sober, Simple and Religious People to the inſnaring Queſtions of ſuch Trepanners as himſelf. As for Inſtance, Thou manifeſteſt thy Darkneſs, that thou art ſtill in thy Imagination; What doſt thou witneſs in thy ſelf? I ſee thou art a poor Dark Creature, as by thy talking is manifeſt; yea, it is manifeſt in the Light; yea verily: Alas! for thee, I bear Witneſs againſt thee: We are dead to Diſtinctions: Thou manifeſteſt a Perverſe Spirit.

Theſe, Reader, with the like Expreſſions, doth this Ungodly Scoffer give to the World in the Name of a true Quaker, as ſome of his beſt Anſwers; and that to ſuch Queſtions, whoſe Matter hath been effectually conſidered and anſwered in many of our Books: However, his Spirit ſhews, to whomſoever thoſe Anſwers are improper, in one Senſe they are not ſo to him. But above all, that a Man pretending to Religion himſelf, and ſuch an one too as next to us ſtands faireſt for Reproach, ſhould give our ſerious Language in a Jeer, as if we were fitter to be derided than Informed, is horridly wicked. Can his Conſcience be ſo ſeared, as to handle Holy Things without Fear? Is Singularity grown ſo odious to an Anabaptiſt Preacher, that he ſhould make it a Subject for his Scorn and Drollery? However this may reſemble T. Hicks, he does not herein anſwer the firſt Love of the People who go under that Name, while he ſhews ſo much implacable Hatred to his Conſcientious Neighbours, thereby not diſcountenancing the prophane Rabble in their frequent Scoffs at us, but furniſhing them with ſuch a Work of Darkneſs, as excites them farther to it, making us to inherit thoſe cruel Mockings, which were once the Portion of his own Profeſſion. We know, what Anſwers not God's Witneſs, ſhall never be able to abide the Trial, and therefore we are the leſs concerned in his Comical Abuſes of us, more becoming a Moorfield or a Smithfield Stage-Play, than a Chriſtian Treatiſe. Thus much and no more, of the Spirit of the Man in general, becauſe more largely handled elſewhere.

CHAP. III.

Chap. III.

The Queſtion Stated, and accordingly Purſued. Our Adverſary proved Falſe and Weak.

WE ſhall now deſcend to the main Queſtion, and that which is the Ground of his Second Dialogue, and without which there can be no Defence of his Firſt, viz.

Whether thoſe Doctrines and Expreſſions, charged upon the People called Quakers by Tho. Hicks in both his Dialogues, be really the Doctrines and Sayings of that People, or not? And afterwards, Whether what we do own, and is by him charged with Error, is ſufficiently oppoſed or proved ſuch?

He affirms, they are; and undertakes to prove his Aſſertions out of their own Works, which naturally leads me to conſider, what are thoſe Doctrines and Expreſſions he hath charged upon us to be ours; and what are thoſe Proofs, by which he endeavours to make good that Charge. I ſhall firſt of all treat upon the more weighty Parts of Doctrine, and reſerve the more trivial Matters to the latter End.

The firſt conſiderable Thing he endeavours to ſuggeſt againſt us, is, Our making the Light in every Man to be God, which he undertakes to prove from G. Whitehead's Diſcourſe upon John 1. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men; That if the Life was the Divine Eſſence, the Light muſt be ſo alſo; for ſuch as the Cauſe is, ſuch the Effect muſt be. Upon which ſays T. Hicks, "From this kind of reaſoning we may conclude, not only the Light within, but every Creature both Beaſts and Trees are God; theſe being Effects of infinite Wiſdom and Power. Doſt thou not Tremble at this Conſequence?

Anſ. This very Thing ſhews great Diſingenuity in T. Hicks, That from G. Whiteheads aſſerting & proving the Divine Nature of the Light within, he ſhould inſinuate, that every Meaſure of Light in Man is whole God, and which is yet more groſs, to conclude from G. Whitehead's ſaying, Such as the Cauſe is, ſuch the Effect muſt be; that Beaſts and Trees are God, becauſe the Effects of his Power; whereas G. Whitehead did not intend it of a meer Potential, but Natural Effect, that is, ſomething reſulting from the Nature, and not the meer Power of the Divine Life. Men are the Natural Off-ſpring and Product of Men, but ſo are not all thoſe other Things in the Creation, which are notwithſtanding the Effects of their Art and Power, ſo that there needs no Trembling at G. W's Blaſphemy, as he afterwards calls it, but better Information to T. Hicks's Ignorance, or Rebuke to his wilful Blindneſs. For this I refer the Reader to G. W's Part of that larger Volume.

Again G. W. affirm'd it muſt be God, becauſe to deny it ſo to be, was to deny the Omnipreſence of God, "Then it ſeems, ſays T. H. that the Light within, and the Omnipreſence of God is one and the ſame Thing with him. Is this your Champion? May we not conclude the Body of Man as well as the Light within to be God by this Reaſon?

Anſ. By no means, and 'tis a Shame to hear that a Man pretending to Controverſy ſhould aſk ſo ridiculous a Queſtion. Is there no Difference betwixt a Man, whoſe Reins are on his Neck, following the Luſt of the Fleſh, the Luſt of the Eye, and the Pride of Life, and the Light within, that T. H. himſelf acknowledgeth to convince of Sin, reprove for it, and unto which Man ought to give Attendance? Is there as clear a Proof of the Omnipreſence of God in the one as in the other; I would know who is he that ſearcheth the Hearts, and trieth the Reins, and telleth Man his Thoughts? Do not the Scriptures attribute this to God, and that as the moſt convincing Proof of his Omnipreſence? And if he doth ſo ſearch the Hearts and try the Reins, let us underſtand, if it be not as the Great Light, that enlightneth every Man that cometh into the World, ſince the Scriptures teſtify that God is Light; that every Man is enlightned; that God ſearcheth all Hearts, and that whatever doth make manifeſt is Light: Now unleſs a Man may have his Heart ſearched, his Reins tryed, his Deeds manifeſted and judg'd without an inward Light, it muſt neceſſarily follow, that the Light within, preſent with us every where, is to us the great Proof of Gods Omnipreſence, and therefore of God. And though every Meaſure of Light diſtinctly is not that Intire Eternal Being, yet we are bold to aſſert, that it is no other than God the Fulneſs of all Light, who ſearcheth the Heart and tryeth the Reins, and telleth Man his Thoughts, that doth ſhine into the Inward Parts of Man, and doth there convince of Sin, reprove for it, and lead out of it, as believed and obeyed: And 'tis by this Inward Diſcovery chiefly Men come to know that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of them that fear him; whence, when Men are Innocent, it is frequent with them to ſay, being unjuſtly accuſed, my Heart miſgives me not, my Conſcience doth not condemn me, I have good Courage to look my Accuſer in the Face; A State tranſcending the utmoſt Stretch of all T. H's imagined Chriſtianity.

Col. 1. 19.

In ſhort T. Hicks's confident Concluſions againſt us ariſe from theſe Miſtakes. Firſt, He infers from Man's being Ignorant of all he ought to know, the Inability of the Light to inform him, never conſidering Man's Obedience or Religion. 2ly, From Chriſts being the Light that enlightens every Man, every Man's having the whole Chriſt in him; And thirdly from our aſſerting God and Chriſt to be one, our Denial of Chriſts Outward Perſon and Bodily Appearance at Jeruſalem, ſee pag. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, and 14. of the Dialog. and 41. Contin. of the Dial. with much more of that ſort: Than which, what can be more groſly Injurious to any People. Either let him leave of Writing, or underſtand better what he writes againſt us. In ſhort, we are willing to let the Controverſy lye here; that the Quakers own, promote and aſſert, that the Life of God which is the Light of Men, with which every Man is enlightned, is ſufficient to Everlaſting Salvation; And Thomas Hicks aſſerts and promotes, that this Life of God, which is the Light of Men with which all Men are enlightned, is not ſufficient to Salvation. I am not willing to break my Deſign of following his Charge and Proofs by much controverting the Doctrine in it ſelf, ſince 'tis enough for me to ſhew, that the Doctrines and Sayings he faſtens upon us, and the Proofs he brings to maintain them, are not ours: yet I am willing to mention one Paſſage among ſeveral others, that if I underſtand any Thing, is a grand Contradiction to his Opinion of the Light's Inſufficiency.

He quotes Stephen Criſp thus, If the Light ought to be obeyed, then it muſt be ſufficient. To which T. H. returns this Anſwer. "But I appeal to the Light in thee, whether this be not an Inſufficient Proof. I grant it ought to be obeyed, “ ſo ought the lawful Commands of Magiſtrates, Parents and Maſters; yet who “ thence infers, that therefore they are a ſufficient Rule to Salvation?

Anſw. This cuts the Throat of his whole Deſign, For by the ſame Reaſon, that ſuch who obey the lawful Command of Maſters, Parents and Magiſtrates, are to be reputed good Servants, Children and Subjects, thoſe who obey the Light are good Subjects, Children and Servants to God; And if thoſe who ſo keep the Commandments of Parents, Maſters and Magiſtrates, eſcape Puniſhment, and obtain their good Will, Favour and Recompence, which is an outward Salvation, then thoſe who obey the Light by his Alluſion, do obtain Favour, Love and Recompence of the Reward of Righteouſneſs, which Righteouſneſs, that it might be fulfilled in us, ſo obeying and walking after his Spirit, was the End of God's giving his Son a Light, condemning Sin, and that they that walk thereafter, might not have Condemnation, minding the Things of the Spirit of God, the Spirit of him that raiſed Chriſt from the Dead, the Spirit of Chriſt, Chriſt in them, not minding the Things of the Fleſh, which φρόνημα, or Minding, as it may be render'd, cannot be ſubject to the Law of God, but they that are ſubject and are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Children of God, and Heirs according to the Promiſe. Moſt Ungodly then muſt T. Hicks's Conſequences be, that becauſe we ſay, Chriſt enlighens every Man, Saul perſecuted the Church, and the Heathens multiplied their Falſe Gods by the Light within. Like unto which is his Arguing, p. 14. where he thus pretends to anſwer his feigned Quaker: If indeed thou knoweſt not what I aim at in this Queſtion, then thy Light cannot be God, as thou ſayſt it is; for God knows the Hearts and Intentions of all Men: Thereby confounding the Light and Creature together, and concluding Imbecillity, Inſufficiency and Ignorance in the Light, which are the Imperfections of the Creature. Was there ever any Thing more Scoffing, Prophane and Dark than this? Might not the Gentiles have treated the Chriſtians after this Manner, that if they knew not all Things (whether it concerned them to know them, or not) the Chriſt and Spirit they pretended to be led by, were not God? This is ſo far from proving the Light not to be God, that admitting of it, it were to prove every Man a God. Is every Maſter as ignorant as his Scholar, becauſe his Scholar knows not as much as his Maſter? T. Hicks knows not all Truth, nay T. Hicks may be led into many Miſtakes? Is his Bible, which he calls his Rule, therefore the Cauſe? Certainly by his Way of Arguing againſt the Light, if he be not Perfect and Infallible, the Scriptures muſt needs be Inſufficient and Errable: But if it be an Evil, to make the Scripture acceſſory to T. H's Miſtakes; of equal Reaſon it it Impious in him to charge Men's Infirmities upon the Light, and repute that Inſufficient, becauſe they are Rebellious. Education, Prejudice, Intereſt, Self-Righteouſneſs, Evil Living, bring Vails over the Underſtanding, that, though the Light ſhine in Darkneſs, they comprehend it not.

When Saul's Formality, and Phariſaical Righteouſneſs became ſhaken by the Law of Light in the Conſcience, then, and not till then he cries out, O wretched Man that I am! Whilſt Saul gave more heed to his Outward Religion, than the Light in his Conſcience, he did Perſecute, and thought it a Duty; 'twas when the Light ſtruck him, that he became awakened: But if he perſecuted the Church by the Light within, why not by the Spirit too, ſince God gave the Jews his good Spirit? If T. Hicks will ſay, But he reſiſted that; ſo ſay I, as to the Light; Formality, Tradition, and many Superſtitions (attended with an Ignorant and Harſh Zeal) darkened him, that he could not behold it. But it is a groſs Contradiction in T. H. to ſay, The Light ought to be obeyed; and yet ſay, That it led Saul to perſecute the Chriſtians.

And he abuſes many of the Heathen-Philoſophers, as well as the Light, in ſaying, That the Light within reproved them not for multiplying their Deities. For all learned Men muſt needs know, as I have elſe-where at large proved, that by the Light within they have decried the Heathen-Gods, maintained the Doctrine of the One only Wiſe God, and for their Faith and Perſeverance they have been Taken, Impriſoned, Arraigned, Condemned and Executed, though it went for Juſtice upon the Enemies of the Gods. Who knows not this, is a Stranger to Story.

But hear T. Hicks, ‘ I demand an Inſtance, among the many Thouſands of Mankind,
‘ that hath been convinced, or reproved for not believing Jeſus to be the Chriſt by
‘ the meer Light within, before any Revelation was brought unto them; though I ‘ grant that the Light in thee may reprove for thoſe Sins, the Common Light in all ‘ Mankind will not, becauſe thou haſt borrowed much Light from the Scriptures, which ‘ all have not.

Anſ. I may well ſuppoſe, that as many have been reproved for not believing Jeſus to be the Chriſt, by the Light within, as by the Scriptures; and my Reaſons are; Firſt, Becauſe thoſe who crucified him, were Admirers of the Scripture, and pretended to prove out of their own Law, that it was both lawful and neceſſary he ſhould be put to Death; whereas had they brought that Deed to the Light, the Light would have ſhown it not to have been wrought in God; which the Scriptures without that Light could not ſo effectually do. 2ly, Thoſe who by Scripture came to any Convincement, originally received it from the Revelation of the Light within, which both opened the Scriptures and their Underſtandings. 3ly, Peter, Andrew, Matthew, Nathaniel, the Centurion, Ruler, Diſeaſed Woman, &c. confeſs'd him from the Illumination and Operation of the Light within, ſince whatever makes Manifeſt or works Conviction, is Light; They were not Diſobeyers and Rebellers againſt it, who moſt readily received and followed Chriſt; They who waited for Iſrael's Conſolation, lived in the Juſt Man's Path, a ſhining Light, which ſhined brighter and brighter to the leading ſuch as walked in it, to the great Light of Iſrael, when he appeared.

Farther, To ſay that the Light we have, being much of it borrowed from Scripture, Reproves for thoſe Sins, the Common Light in all Men will not, is great Wickedneſs; for it is to ſay, that the Light wherewith Chriſt hath enlightened all Men, will not Reprove for all Sin; thereby placing the Defect manifeſtly upon the Light, as before, and not upon the thick and groſs Darkneſs (through Diſobedience of the People) as well as that he attributes to the Scripture that Conviction, which is chiefly due to the Light. For by what Way can Mankind arrive at true Sight, Diſcerning and Knowledge in the Underſtanding Part, but by the Light, and that as it ſhines into the Underſtanding; is it not the Light to which every Deed ſhould be brought, to ſee if it be wrought in God, or no? What can any Man ſolidly and beneficially learn by the Scriptures, but through the Diſcoveries of that Inward Light? Are they not dark Sayings, or rather Man dark to thoſe Sayings, if the Holy Light ariſe not to ſhine forth, and give to underſtand their Scope and Tendency? All Scripture but Prophecy, which was given forth by Inſpiration, as Reproof, Exhortation, Doctrine, &c. were firſt experienced or witneſſed, (by thoſe at whom T. Hicks may equally cavil and Scoff, (What's your Witneſſing to me) and that through walking in the Light of the Lord, the Juſt Man's Path; and were written for the ſake of others, that they might be aſſiſted and helpt to the ſame Experience, but not another Way, than through the ſame Steps they had trodden: So that the Ground of the Holy Ancients Experiences now written, and of the true Knowledge of the Scriptures, and Comfort from them, as an outward Means, and whatever is to be obtained and enjoyned within, is originally and chiefly aſcribable to the Diſcoveries, Convictions and Leadings of the bleſſed Light of Chriſt within, through every Generation, however variouſly the Principle may have been denominated; as, the Word of God nigh, Wiſdom, Light, Spirit, &c. under the Old Teſtament; and Light, Grace, Truth, Chriſt, Spirit, Anointing, Gift of God, &c. under the New Teſtament.

Two ſhort Scripture Arguments ſpring in my Mind for the Divinity and Sufficiency of the Light, and then I ſhall conſider his Objections:

I. If God be Divine and ſufficient to Salvation, and the Word be God, and the Life of the Word, the Light of Men, then is the Light of Men Divine and Sufficient to Salvation.

But God is Divine, and Sufficient to Salvation, and the Word is God, and the Life of the Word, One with the Word, and the Life of the Word, the Light of Men.

Therefore I conclude, that the Light of Men, which is the Life of the Word, which Word is God, is Divine and Sufficient to Eternal Salvation.

II. That which was in all Ages the juſt Man's Path, and there where the Blood of Cleanſing is known to cleanſe, and by which Fellowſhip is enjoyed, and the Light of Eternal Life obtained, is, ever was, and ever will be a Divine, Sufficient and Saving Way; But ſuch a Way is the Light as the ſeveral Scriptures in the Margin will teſtifie, Conſequently, the Light is Divine and Sufficient to Salvation.

1 John 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7.
John 8. 12.
John 11. 9, 10.

The only Cavil at theſe Arguments will be this; I deny this Light to be the common Light in all Men. To which I ſay, that there cannot be Two Spiritual Lights of the Life of the Word; and not the ſame, if Two could be; For whatever is of the ſame Nature, though not of the ſame Degree, is ſtill the ſame in Kind. If there be another Light that is Saving, tell us from whence it comes; but firſt prove this not Saving: And as theſe Things are too Difficult, I hope, for him to compaſs, ſo is it as Ridiculous and Blaſphemous to think, that God ſhould give Man an Inſufficient Light. But why any, if not Sufficient?

I have heard and read often, That all God's Gifts are Perfect. 'Tis ſtrange, that his Light to Men ſhould be ſo Lame, Defective and Imperfect, as T. H. repreſents it. But ſuppoſe this Light to be ſo; Why an Inſufficient Light, and a Saving Light both? The latter would have done our Buſineſs. It is Injurious to Man to let him have a Fallible Guide; For when he may think himſelf certain, he may be in the greateſt Danger by miſtaking one for the other; or thinking not of them as they are. But Thanks be to the God of Light, we know (for We Witneſs) better Things, How ill a Reaſon, and how offenſive ſoever Witneſſing is to Thomas Hicks an Anabaptiſt Teacher; to whoſe Brethren Experiences once were the great Foundation of both their Knowledge and Comfort, though now mockt at by him with great Deriſion in a Quaker.

But to his Objections faithfully contracted:

1. If this Light ever was and is Sufficient, how comes it, that Men have been and are ſo degenerated in Faith, Diſcipline and Worſhip? They have all this Light by your Principle.

2ly, If this Light had been Sufficient, wherefore ſhould God have ſuperadded ſo many other Ways and Means; they would be then needleſs?

3ly, Chriſt being the Only Saviour, who was born of a Virgin at Bethlehem, wrought Miracles, was Crucified, bore our Sins, &c. I query, how all this can be affirmed of the Light?

4ly, Are not all the Generations of Chriſtians ſince Chriſt's Time till within theſe very few Years certainly Loſt and Damned, foraſmuch as they acknowledg'd not this Light within, as the True Chriſt?

To the firſt I anſwer, There is nothing therein, which may be thought to reflect upon the Light, but what falls as heavily upon all other Ways, Helps, Ordinances, Appointments, yea the Scriptures, and which is more, upon God, and Chriſt, and the Holy Spirit too; For if the Degeneracy of Man, that is the ſad Effect of his own Rebellion, ſhall be a valid Proof of the Inſufficiency of the Light within, then muſt we conclude from the Degeneracy, that hath been among Jews and Chriſtians, and which remains to this Day, that all thoſe Aſſiſtances, Ways and Helps which have been given, in reality were not Potent nor Sufficient to the End for which they were given; The Conſequences of which Opinion of our Adverſary's are theſe Two, and ſad enough. 1. That God in his Ways muſt have been and is Inſufficient; and 2. That Man never was, neither is in any wiſe faulty. In ſhort, that may be ſufficient to Salvation, which if neglected, will never work Salvation, as in the Parable of the Talents may be ſeen.

To the Second I briefly ſay, That Man's Mind being ſo much abroad through unſtable and vain Wandrings from God's Light, the Lord in Wiſdom and Condeſcenſion to the Weakneſs of Man, and Darkneſs of that Carnal State, did accommodate both his Diſcoveries to Man, and that Worſhip he required from Man, according to his Capacity to receive the one, and perform the other. If God went into Outward Things to meet with Man's Mind that was abroad, to the End that gradually it might return Home, ſhall we infer Weakneſs in the Light? Man in that State was incapable; he muſt have been new-moulded, and as another Creation, to have then received that Teſtimony in all it's Plainneſs, which God hath brought forth in after Ages.

If any will undertake to charge Weakneſs upon Man, let him; But I warn all, how they conclude it againſt the Light, ſince the ſame falls on God and his good Spirit, who made Uſe of ſuch Ways and Means in order to gain upon Man's Mind, and beget a right Underſtanding and Senſe of what was his Will concerning him: Beſides, not only did the Divine Light and Life appear unto Man in, and through, thoſe Things as Vails; But that which gave Man true Diſcerning, Repentance, and to do the Thing that ever was acceptable with God in any Meaſure, and which was as the Soul, Life and Spirit of all the true and well-pleaſing Sacrifices, was a Meaſure of that Divine Light of Life in their Hearts at that Time; though as Samuel in a like Caſe, they knew it not. Let none then charge the Weakneſs of the Adminiſtration upon the Light, but the Generation, to whom he that is the Light of and in Men, appeared, as Mankind has been able to receive the Knowledge of him: It was not Inſufficiency in God, nor in his Light or Spirit, if Man's Eyes were not ſtrong enough to behold the Brightneſs of what after Ages have beheld; But it was his Mercy and Goodneſs, that he proportioned both his Diſcoveries and Requirings according to Man's Ability.

To conclude; The Light is ſtill the ſame in it ſelf through all Ages, and not a whit the leſs Sufficient, becauſe through its Inviſibility and Spirituality, and the Wandrings Abroad and great Carnality of Man's Mind, ſome External Means were uſed, ſuitable to Man's Weakneſs, through which to reach into Man, and raiſe up ſome farther Knowledge of the Spirituality of God's Worſhip: Nor becauſe of the Light's Sufficiency as to it ſelf, ought any to infer, that thoſe Ways or Means were vain or needleſs; For as the Weakneſs of Men ſhould not call the Ability of the Light in Queſtion, nor their Carnality take off from the Light's Sufficiency, Spirituality or Divinity, ſo neither doth the Sufficiency of the Light render all Means accommodated to Man's Weakneſs vain or needleſs; eſpecially when the virtue that is in them, comes from the Light of Life.

To his Third Objection, which with moſt Oppoſers carrieth the greateſt Weight, I have this in Plainneſs and Brevity to anſwer.

We own not, neither do we confeſs to another Chriſt than him, who after the Fleſh was born of the Virgin Mary, at the City of Bethlehem, in Judea, who preacht an Everlaſting Goſpel, wrought Miracles, bore our Iniquities, and was cut off, or dyed for the People. But ſince Thomas Hicks would have us believe, that he is not yet Socinian enough to deny the Divinity or Godhead of Chriſt, and therefore that Chriſt was not only a Man; much leſs, that which was born of Mary, was crucified, and laid in the Sepulchre of Joſeph of Arimathea, was the whole Chriſt; I muſt diſtinguiſh.

The Word that was with God in the Beginning, and was God, who in Time took Fleſh, was and is the Light of the World; in the Fulneſs of Time he manifeſted himſelf in a more familiar and intimate Manner to Mankind, in order to which he prepared an Holy Body, in which he preached his Everlaſting Goſpel, wrought many Miracles, drew many after him: He ſuſtained grievous Weights, the Burden of the Iniquity of the whole World lay upon him, he travelled under it, and trod the Wine-Preſs alone, and was preſſed as a Cart with Sheaves; And ſo well did he love the World, that, to teſtify the ſame, he gave up his Life not only to recommend his Love, but to confirm his unchangeable Goſpel of Remiſſion of Sins, and Eternal Salvation to as many as believed, and followed him the Light of the World; that ſo Remiſſion might not only be preached in his Name, but in his Blood alſo (for it was a Time of Blotting out; for God was in Chriſt reconciling the World unto himſelf.) In which Manifeſtation, he not only drew many to him, and gave Teſtimony of his Salvation to ſome Particulars, but he combated the Serpent, bruiſed his Head, and gave him an abſolute Defeat in the General, ſcattering his Oracles, chaſing his Infernal Spirits, cauſing his own Light more univerſally to clear up, and break forth into the World, inſomuch that Thouſands followed him: He qualified and deputed Ambaſſadors; Commiſſioned and impowered them from on high; whoſe Meſſage was Powerful, and whoſe Miniſtry was Effectual; yet when all this is ſaid, and believed moſt ſurely, as well as expreſt moſt plainly, That which gave the Life, Power, Virtue, Strength, and Efficacy to all this, and to whom therefore eminently the Work, Salvation, Power and Glory are moſt deſervedly aſcribable, is the Word that was in the Beginning with God, and was God, whoſe Life was, and is the Light of Men, who took Fleſh, and was manifeſted therein. Therefore He who is our Light, ought not to be denied, being the true Chriſt, and true Saviour; For no other Light and Life than appeared in that Body, that was then an Offering for Sin once for all, is the Life and Light that we aſſert and defend. And for that Holy Body, it was our Lord's, as the Scripture ſpeaks, Joſeph of Arimathea begged the Body of Jeſus, Mat. 27. 58. Mark 15. 43. Luke 23. 52. They found not the Body of the Lord Jeſus, Luke 24. 3. He prepared it, he took it, he was manifeſted in it and by it; how can we deny that Body which was our Lord's? By no Means. To conclude, Though the Divine Word of Life and Light died not (for Chriſt as God over all bleſſed for ever, could not die) yet his Body did, and ſo his Fulneſs therein and thereby manifeſted, have we received, and Grace for Grace. So that all thoſe who are talking of the Body of Chriſt, and ſeeking to repreſent us to the World as Deniers and Deſpiſers of his Appearance, are but in the Steps of the Perſecuting Jews, who as they cried up the Prophets, but being Strangers to their Divine Life, reliſht not, ſavour'd not, and therefore yielded not to Chriſt (the Rock who followed the Fathers in the Wilderneſs, the Fountain of all the Life and Refreſhment of the Holy Ancients) but with their Proud, and Conceited, and indeed Miſtaken Knowledge, not from, but of the Letter, and in a bitter Zeal for their Dying Forms and Traditions, did they war againſt the Breaking forth of that Day of Salvation, and that as Hereſy, Blaſphemy, and the like; ſo now, theſe Men ſeem buſy and great Sticklers for the Body of Chriſt, (which they know not) and for Bread, Wine, Water, &c. and all in Oppoſition to a more Plain and Inward Manifeſtation of the Divine Light, Life and Subſtance ſhed abroad, as the Accompliſhment of the Promiſe of the Father in this our Day and Generation. But as it fared with thoſe of old, ſo ſhall it with theſe Oppoſers, their Viſitation ſhall paſs ſwiftly over their Heads, and their Temple ſhall be caſt down, and not one Stone of their fair Edifice ſhall be left ſtanding upon another.

To his Laſt Objection I muſt tell him, that we have not that Uncharitableneſs in our Principles, which our Adverſaries are guilty of. He, like the Jews of old, is ready to think every Man damn'd, nay, by his Principle, it is not avoidable, who hath not heard of the Name Chriſt, or is not entred into ſome kind of Church-Fellowſhip upon common Chriſtian Confeſſions, as they are called, and diſtinguiſhed from meer Morality or Good Life: But for my Part, as God had a People among the Gentiles of old, who became a Law unto themſelves, doing the Things contained in the Law, whom I believe to be at Reſt and Peace (notwithſtanding the ſevere and poſitive Cenſures I have heard from ſeveral Profeſſors againſt them, and Millions more) ſo, though much Darkneſs hath prevailed in moſt Parts of the World, and ſtill continueth, yet then, and where the Day of Ignorance remains, and where there hath been and is a Walking with Sincerity towards God, according to their Knowledge, I do believe the Lord did and doth wink, and had and hath Mercy on men, though great Strangers to that Chriſtian Profeſſion ſo much boaſted of among too many in our Nation: And I doubt not, but that there may be found ſome Thouſands both of Turks and Indians, who would not only have deteſted, in Point of Credit, but in Fear to God dreaded, doing a Tittle of what Tho. Hicks hath falſly and impudently ſaid and done againſt our Perſons, Practices and Principles.

In ſhort, though God in every Age hath had a Regard to the Sincerity of People's Hearts, and their Upright Living, though ſubjected under groſs Forms, and in the darkeſt Seaſons of the World; yet, God having now cauſed his Day-ſpring from on high to viſit, whereby more certain Knowledge and ſound Judgment is given of the Darkneſs that hath covered the Earth, the Superſtition, Idolatries, human Inventions, Will-Worſhips, Violence, Cruelty, Wantonneſs, Intemperance, Avarice, and all Manner of Ungodlineſs; all are required to hearken to the Lord's Voice, to obey his Call, to let him in, and bring their Deeds unto the Light, that Chriſt, who is that true Light, may diſcover the Enemy, may bind him, ſpoil his Goods, and caſt him out; that he may reign over Thoughts, Words and Deeds; ſo ſhall ſuch be able to ſay as David did, O, all that is within me, praiſe his Holy Name! For Chriſt will be known, as he is the Saviour of the Soul from Death, the Reſtorer of Paths to dwell in, who deſtroys the Works of the Devil, and brings in Everlaſting Righteouſneſs to the Soul. And though few obſerve it, That which is truly commendable in any People proceeds from the ſecret Power and Efficacy of that Inward Principle we ſo much teſtify of: 'Tis that convinces, diſcovers, reproves, reſtrains, tenders, humbles and affects the Soul, and not their ſeveral Outward Forms, which, with Robbery to the Light or Grace within, they are apt to attribute it to, and whereby the Devil beguiles them into a Continuance of them. Wherefore let all our Oppoſers be dehorted from their vehement out-cries; for who withſtand, revile, and ſet at nought this Bleſſed Appearance, God, the Lord of Heaven and Earth, will break them to Pieces, if they come not to timely Repentance for it.

Chap. IV.

CHAP. IV.

Of the True Evangelical RULE.

AND this for ever raſes the Foundation of T. H's Building; as indeed how can any thing ſo infirm long continue, built upon Forgery, and the Heighth of all Partiality: who makes us Hereticks, that he may be ſound; and abuſive, that he may either ſhew his own Patience, or colour his frequent baſe Revilings of us: I ſay this overthrows his whole Diſcourſe about the Scriptures being the Rule of Faith and Practice under the New Covenant. For, whatever is more Ancient, more Univerſal, and Able to Inform, Rule and Guide, that muſt eminently be the Rule; but that has been, and is, the Light within: conſequently that has been, and ought to be the Rule of Faith and Practice. That it has been and ought ſtill to be the Rule expreſt, is proveable thus:

That which led thoſe Holy Men into thoſe Things, of which the Scripture is a Declaration, muſt needs have been the Rule; But that was the Principle of God within, by what Name ſoever denominated. That this is true, let it ſuffice to ſay, That who walked in the Light in any Age, ſo far walked in the Counſel of God. And that all Mankind had an Ability from God ſo to do, is our Belief, what Abridgment ſoever T. Hicks's deteſtable Opinion of Reprobation may make of the Love of God.

That it ought ſtill to continue to be the Rule of Faith and Life, I prove thus: That which is every where, which makes manifeſt that which is diſpleaſing, and that which is acceptable to God, without which the Scriptures are unintelligible, and by living up to which, Men only may come to witneſs the Truth of thoſe Things declared of in the Scriptures, muſt be, and ought to be the Rule of Faith, &c. But all this is true of the Light; which is farther proved thus:

The Light Thomas Hicks acknowledges all Men have. The Light Thomas Hicks acknowledges all Men ought to attend unto: (p. 7.) Now, unleſs ſome Man, who hath lived unblameably up to the Light, can give us a Demonſtration of it's Inſufficiency to ſhew, and teach him, that farther-Thing, that God requires him to believe and do, there can be no valid Argument againſt the Light's Sufficiency. If T. H. dare be the Man, we ſhall join Iſſue with him in the Trial of the Matter: But if the Light be before-hand with Mankind, furniſhing him ſtill with Work enough to do, as it certainly ever hath done, and ſtill doth, let it be known to T. H. that ſuch as would know more of Chriſt's Doctrines, muſt firſt do his Will according to what they do know; And as it is the common Method of the Dealing of God towards the Sons of Men; So is it great Impiety in any Man to infer or conclude Inſufficiency to be in the Light to diſcover and teach Man what he ought to know and do, from Man's Ignorance of all that he ought to know and do; ſince the Ground of that Ignorance is, his not doing, what the Light of God requires from him, as his preſent Duty to perform.

That the Scriptures are Unintelligible without it, is eaſily prov'd from the Variety of Judgments that are in the World about moſt of the Fundamental Doctrines contained therein; as about God's Eſſence and Similitude, Chriſt and the Spirit, their Divinity, Predeſtination, Original Sin, Free-Will, Redemption, Satisfaction, Juſtification, Faith and Works. In ſhort, the whole End of Chriſt's Coming, Living and Dying, are ſtrongly controverted: Now were the Scriptures ſo clearly capable to determine in theſe Matters, the Differences would quickly end; But ſince the utmoſt Ability they of themſelves can give, is not enough to render thoſe Things obvious, that are now doubtful and diſputable; There is a Neceſſity of Man's Recourſe to ſome other Thing, which is able to diſcover the Mind and Intention of the Holy Pen-Men. Now I would be glad to know of any ſober Man, if any thing beſides the Light ſhining into the Underſtanding is able to give true Sight, Diſcerning and Judgment, about the Points controverted? Would it not be reputed Madneſs to bid Men read, that have no Eyes, or if they have Eyes, at leaſt no Light to read? The whole Scripture, as it relates to Man's Duty, is a Declaration of the woful State of Darkneſs, and the bleſſed State of Light and Life, with the Way of Tranſlation out of the one into the other. And was this Knowledge without Experience, or by and through Experience? I hope no Man will ſay, the Holy Pen-Men were not Witneſſes of the Things they wrote; and if they were, I would fain know, by what other Way they came to underſtand and comprehend the Darkneſs that was within, than by the Light within; And to know the Temptations and Subtleties of the Spirit of Darkneſs, the Diſcoveries, Reproofs and Leadings of the Light, the Tryals, Travels, Exerciſes, and finally the perfect Tranſlation ſo frequently expreſſed in theſe Holy Writings, but through the Manifeſtation of the Light of Chriſt in the Conſcience, their Obedience to it, and it's Operation to their Redemption and Sanctification. So that the State of Judgment, Repentance, Remiſſion, Regeneration, called the New-Birth, and perfect Juſtification, were their Experiences (or Witneſſings, for all T. Hicks) from the Inward Work of God's Light upon their Hearts and their Souls, which though the Scriptures declare of, they can never bring Man into, nor can any Man groundedly aver the Truth of thoſe Things, 'till he comes through Obedience to the Light in his own Conſcience to experience the ſame Judgment, Repentance, Remiſſion, Regeneration, called the New Birth, and perfect Juſtification before God; Since then the Scriptures can do none of theſe Things of themſelves, however Inſtrumental they may be of Good, but the Holy Light in the Conſcience, and that theſe Things are not knowable, though they may be read, talked and writ of, without being led by the ſame Spirit, and treading the ſame Steps of deep Experience the Holy Ancients trod in, and have left us for an Example, it muſt be granted, whether T. Hicks will or no, That the Author of thoſe Diſcoveries, Convictions, Judgments, &c. muſt be the Standing Immutable Rule to the Soul, what, how far, and which Way we are to deny or own, reject or embrace, relinquiſh or follow, with Reſpect to thoſe Things that pleaſe God, or that pleaſe him not.

His Objections I ſhall contract into theſe Four, urged by him for the Scriptures, and againſt the Light's being the Rule of Faith and Practice; and indeed they are the greateſt Strength of his Book, if any it has.

Dial. pag. 21, 22, 23.

Firſt, The Light Within cannot give a clear and diſtinct Account how Sin came to be; if we conſult the Wiſeſt Philoſophers, we ſhall find a deep Silence touching this Point: They ſaw Sin did overflow, but could not by all the Improvements of the Light in them, find how Sin came to be.

I am perſwaded T. Hicks never conſulted ſo much as the meaneſt of them, at leaſt effectually; had he, His Dialogue would have ſavoured of more True Science and Morality; for I will make it appear that he has contradicted himſelf, abuſed the Philoſophers, and blaſphemed the Light in this one Paſſage.

Pythag. Socrat. Clean, &c.

Where there is no Law there is no Tranſgreſſion; then where there is Trangreſſion there is a Law. Now T. Hicks granting that the Heathen knew there was Sin, they muſt know it by Virtue of ſome Law that made it ſo. This Law was not written, but themſelves declared, God had imprinted it upon their Hearts, as an Immutable and Infallible Guide to them in their Actions. If ſo, how could they be ignorant of Sin's coming into the World, who knew it to be a Deviation from God's Living Commandment in their own Conſcience, and a committing quite contrary Things? If T. Hicks means, by clear and diſtinct Account, the Hiſtory of Moſes; that is, that Adam and Eve were beguiled by the Serpent, who tempted them with an Apple, &c. 'tis no Ways to his Purpoſe; For that which is ſufficient to that Faith which concerns Salvation, is, to know that God is, that He is Pure and Holy, that He has given Man the Knowledge of himſelf, and His Will concerning Him, by ſome Inward Law, Command, Light, Grace, or Spirit; and that who acts not correſpondently to this Guide, is a Tranſgreſſor, and incurs the Penalty; and that the Heathen had this, their Books at large tell us: Nor does T. Hicks deny it, ſo that he manifeſtly contradicts himſelf, and abuſeth the Philoſophers, in ſaying, They could not find out, how Sin came, ſince they expreſly ſay, That God made all Good, and that Man's Erring from the Divine Law in him, brought Evil into the World. And I boldly affirm, and in the next Head will prove, that the meer Hiſtory is not abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation.

Now that herein he has Blaſphemed againſt the Light, is evident; ſince it is to ſay, That God gave Men a Law and Light not ſufficient to let them ſee, how Sin entred the World; which is to ſay in plainer Engliſh, What is Sin; it will and muſt end there. Beſides, ſuppoſe the Philoſophers had been ignorant, muſt it needs follow, that the Fault and Want was in the Light, and not in them? Will T. Hicks become their Warrant in the Matter, That they arrived as high as the Light could teach them, and that the Deficiency lay on the Side of the Teacher, and not on theirs? Confident, yea, Impudent Man! Why ſhould either the Darkneſs of any Age be charged upon the Light, or render it Inſufficient; or the more clear Breaking forth of Light in a following Generation, be reputed another Light, becauſe another Degree than what obſcurely ſhined forth in the former; ſince it was not the obſcurer in it ſelf, but through the groſs Blackneſs that might have over-caſt that People becauſe of Diſobedience, it ſeemed ſo to them? But let us hear him farther.

2. Nor can this Light give any Account of that Remedy which God in His Infinite Wiſdom provided, JESUS CHRIST, that He ſhould be Born of a Virgin, Dye for others, and Riſe the Third Day: This is the Pinch.

But I anſwer, Firſt, That the Prophets ſaw it by this Light, unleſs that they ſaw it without Light, or that the Light they ſaw it by, was not the Light of Chriſt, as the Word that was with God, and was God; which, I hope, T. Hicks upon ſerious Thinking, will not ſay; for of no other do we ſpeak. Secondly, Thoſe that believed Him, when he came, could never have received him, had they not ſeen him by an Inward Eye, enlightned by that Light in Meaſure in themſelves, which then ſo unmeaſurably appeared in Him; For the Jews had the Scriptures, and according to their Underſtanding of them, they reputed him a Blaſphemer; and both plotted, promoted, and obtained his Crucifixion. The Queſtion will be, Why did they not better underſtand them? The Anſwer is, becauſe they Rebelled againſt that Spirit which could only ſo inform them: Had they brought their Deeds to the Light, they had received Sound Judgment, and a True Meaſure would have been given them, which they rejecting, that was both the Ground of their Ignorance, and the Juſt Reaſon of their Condemnation. Hence we ſee, that Light, and not the Scriptures, was the higher Rule and Judge of Thoughts, Words and Deeds, yea, and which Way the Scriptures themſelves were to be underſtood; And truly it is ſtrange, that the Light in Men ſhould not lead naturally to it's own Being and Fountain. 'Tis Proverbial among Men, The Way to the Fountain-Head is to trace the Stream. If the Light in Man leads not to Chriſt, who gives that Light, let us leave off all Talk of Religion; for to what, or whom elſe was it given to lead us?

But ſays Tho. Hicks, tell me, Who, or what was Chriſt in that Manifeſtation it ſelf, but that Divine Word, Life, or Light manifeſted in Fleſh? Will not then a Meaſure of the ſame in Man, lead him of Courſe to acknowledge the Fulneſs, or in following it's Leadings, bring to Eternal Salvation; Or can that Light reſiſt that Manifeſtation, as thou doſt elſewhere ſeem to affirm?

Dial. p. 38. 42. If Chriſt has enlightned Men with the Light of his own Life, and if they are required to bring their Deeds to be tryed by it, and if they are invited to follow it, and in following it, are promiſed, no more to abide in Darkneſs, but have the Light of Life, becauſe of the Blood of Cleanſing, that is therein met with, whereby ſuch are cleanſed from all Unrighteouſneſs, and yet the Light neither a Rule nor Saving, then what elſe can be either a Rule or Saving?

But this Light (ſays he) could not tell any that JESUS ſhould be Born of a Virgin, Dye for Sinners, and Riſe again. But this is ſo great a Miſtake, that had he converſed with the Sibylls, or other Heathen Writers, he might in good Part have informed himſelf to the contrary. But here I diſtinguiſh of Faith, There is an Hiſtorical and Saving Faith, and there is an Hiſtorical and Saving Rule, as the Faiths, ſo the Rules differ. If T. Hicks ſays, That 'tis the Scriptures that give the Knowledge of thoſe Tranſactions, I muſt then underſtand him to mean Hiſtorically, if I aſſent, which is not Saving; for then all who believe thoſe Things to have been muſt therefore be ſaved; the contrary to which is daily ſeen with our Eyes; ſince who believes not that Report among thoſe who are yet in great Wickedneſs? But if we are to penetrate deeper, and that T. Hicks ſhould hold as he ſeems plainly to do, that what Faith we can have of the moſt weighty Truths declared of in the Scripture, is from it, and not from the Light or Spirit within, I muſt firmly deny it; For Faith is God's Gift, not the Scripture's Gift: No, ſo far are the Scriptures from giving Faith, that it is God's Spirit alone, that gives both to underſtand and believe them. The Scripture tells me of ſuch Prophecies, Hiſtories, and Epiſtles, and of ſuch Men as Moſes, Job, David, Iſaiah, Matthew, Paul and John; But what is it that gives me to believe the Things they writ of to be True? Is it not the Teſtimony and moſt certain Amen in the Conſcience? And what is that there, which Seals to thoſe excellent Truths? Which Way then can the Scripture be a Rule to me, in believing the Scripture, when that Faith is begotten of God, by his Light and Spirit concerning the Scripture? If the meer Scripture could give me Faith, then it might be allowed to Rule my Faith; but when God by his Spirit alone begets Faith, without which I can neither underſtand nor believe the Scriptures, tell me, If God's Spirit be not the Rule of my Faith; what, how far and which Way I am to believe them, or the Things believed? Certainly they can never be my Rule, How far, and which Way I am to believe themſelves, who of themſelves cannot give me that Faith; but it muſt be wrought by another Thing; So that what gives to believe, rules the Belief, and not the Thing believed: Therefore the Scriptures cannot be the Rule of Faith.

Now as to this of Chriſt's Outward Manifeſtation, I ſay, ſo far as it is Hiſtorical, the Scripture is that which furniſheth me with a Belief; But I utterly deny, that they give to believe it in that deep Senſe, which may be truly called a Saving Faith.

The Phariſees had the Scriptures, and they pretended to admire Moſes and the Prophets; yet they Crucified Chriſt, and ſought to countenance their Murder by Scripture. Now had they believed and eſteemed the Writings of Moſes and the Prophets from an Inward Senſe of God's Spirit (which the meer Scriptures could not not furniſh them with) they had rightly underſtood them, and not made ſo ill an Uſe of their Hiſtorical Knowledge, as to Crucifie the Lord of Life and Glory. This ſhews that Men may have an Hiſtorical Faith, and yet not the True Faith nor Knowledge of the Scriptures, What then gives to believe aright now? Why truly that which did then, the Light and Spirit of Truth; no Man could call JESUS Lord without it, that is, truly ſo, or upon Good Ground. No Man could confeſs that Chriſt was come in the Fleſh, but whoſe Spirit was of God, yet now nothing is more common, and yet nothing is more True, than that Thouſands of them are not of God, but lye in Wickedneſs, alienated from the Life of God, &c. What is the Matter then? Why this, Thoſe who then confeſt that JESUS was come in the Fleſh, did it by Virtue of an Inviſible Sight, and through a Divine Illumination in their Souls: For impoſſible had it otherwiſe been for them in any Meaſure to have ſeen through the Vail of his Fleſh, into that Divine Life, Power and Wiſdom that unmeaſurably filled it, but having ſome inward Senſe and Taſte of that moſt Excellent Being, that was manifeſted in, and by that Bodily Appearance, therefore did they confeſs to it, and their Spirits were truly reputed by John to be of God.

And as in that Day it was impoſſible for any truly and acceptably to confeſs to Chriſt, without a Diſcerning given, and Faith wrought by the Light and Spirit of God in the Heart, which was the Saving Faith; ſo is it now equally impoſſible for any to believe that Chriſt appeared, and that he ſpake and did all theſe great Things, ſo as to be benefitted thereby, and any Ways accepted of God therein, but as the Light and Spirit of Truth open thoſe Things to the Underſtanding, and from a Meaſure of that Divine Life which then immeaſurably appeared (for we have all received of his Fulneſs and Grace for Grace) True Faith comes to be begotten in that Manifeſtation, and a Right Confeſſion unto it. In ſhort, He that calleth Chriſt Lord, muſt now, as then, do it by the Holy Ghoſt, that is, from an Experience or Witneſſing of his Dominion, and Rule, which, through the Operation of the Holy Spirit, the Soul is to be ſubjected to; ſo that whoſo believes more than Hiſtorically that Chrſt came in the Fleſh, muſt do it by Virtue of the Divine Light and Spirit, which alone gives to reliſh and ſavour the Truth, Nature and End, of that Appearance.

And though it may be allowed, that the Scripture is a Rule, reſpecting the Hiſtory, as it was to thoſe of Old, in Reference to the particular Propheſies fulfilled in Chriſt's Coming; yet as there was then a more Inward and Heavenly Senſe of Chriſt, which drew many after him, and begot deep Faith in him, ſo muſt there now be a more Inward, Spiritual, and deep grounded Faith of thoſe Things recorded in Scripture, of Chriſt's Appearance, &c. than the meer Letter is able to give. And therefore that Light and Spirit which gives that diſcerning, and works that deep Senſe and Faith, muſt needs be as well the Rule as the Author of it, and not the Scriptures; For if the Scriptures be the Rule, then either of Themſelves or by Interpretation. If of themſelves, then either in their Tranſlations, or Originals. Not in the Tranſlations, unleſs the Tranſlators had been ſo Inſpired, that they miſt not a Tittle, which I am ſure is not ſo; and conſequently none but Scholars have a Rule, for the Unlearned are ſecluded; and therefore the Engliſh Bible is not a Rule.

If in the Originals of Hebrew and Greek, Query, In what Copies? There are various Lections in Hebrew: And for the New Teſtament, ſo called, there are no leſs than Thirty Copies, and all differing; in fine, there are many Thouſands of various Readings.

Now let's Dialogue a little upon Suppoſition only.

Quaker. If by Interpretation, Who ſhall Interpret? Meer Man?

Anabaptiſt. No.

Q. The Light Within?

A. No.

Q. The Spirit?

A. No.

Q. The Church?

A. What Church?

Q. Shall Right Reaſon interpret?

A. Yes, ſays T. H.

Q. I Query, Which of them is the Rule? And when that's found out and determined, then let T. Hicks prove that it is unqueſtionably True, and has remained uncor-uncorrupted through every Generation: And by that Time he has done all this, he ſhall have done a great Deal towards our Satisfaction. But what is this Right Reaſon?

A. 'Tis a Faculty in Man rectified.

Q. Very well: But who has this rectified Faculty?

A. Thomas Hicks, ſay.

Q. Has none it but He?

A. Yes.

Q. Have none Right Reaſon but ſuch?

A. It was an Old Saying, Dip or Damn; but Intereſt has taught us more Diſcretion.

Q. Well then; Others may have Right Reaſon that are not Dipped?

A. We ſay ſo, whatever we think among our ſelves.

Q. What's the peculiar Benefit of Dipping?

A. Much every Way.

Q. But which Way?

A. We are brought into Church-Fellowſhip.

Q. Are you brought into Fellowſhip with God by it?

A. No; I cannot ſay ſo.

Q. No! What's your Fellowſhip worth then? The Saints Fellowſhip was in the Light, and the True Church-Fellowſhip was in Spirit: What do you receive when you are Dipt?

A. Nothing.

Q. Are you no Better?

A. No.

Q. Why, I once thought you received the Holy Ghoſt out of Hand?

A. I thought ſo too, but was miſtaken.

Q. Why waſt thou Dipt then?

A. To fulfil the Scripture.

Q. But what led thee to it?

A. My own Deſire.

Q. Is not that Will-Worſhip?

A. What, to do as the Scripture exhorts?

Q. How knoweſt thou it exhorted to it?

A. I thought ſo.

Q. Is that enough? Where's your being led by God's Spirit? But to our Buſineſs.

Q. How ſhall I know Thomas Hicks has this Reaſon before-mention'd?

A. He loftily ſays ſo.

Q. But is that ſufficient? Well, but where is this Right Reaſon?

A. In Men.

Q. Is it ſo? Then it ſeems that which gives the True Knowledge of the Scripture, is in Man. But tell me honeſtly, Do ye believe this Right Reaſon may Err?

A. No; For then it were not Right Reaſon, if it could be Wrong.

Q. Well argued. But if a Man Errs, is it not the Fault of Right Reaſon?

A. By no means.

Q. Thou ſpeakeſt honeſtly. But why then does T. Hicks charge the Light, the Quakers profeſs, with every ſhort-ſighted imperfect Saying or Action of this or any other Generation.

A. Does he?

Q. Yes; it is the great Drift of his Books.

A. Truly that's not fair.

Q. Honeſtly ſaid. But if this Right Reaſon cannot Err, then cannot Man Err?

A. No, that does not follow; for Man may not ſubmit to it.

Q. Why, may Man have ſomething in him that cannot Err, and he not be Unerrable?

A. Yes.

Q. Rightly ſaid. But why then does T. Hicks conclude ſo of us?

A. It is unfairly done.

Q. Very well. But you ſay, that this Right Reaſon is Part of Man's Soul, or I am miſtaken; ſee Dial. pag. 32. If ſo, then Man's Soul muſt be Infallible?

A. O, Infallible; that Word affrights us. What, Infallible? Pray what's Infallible?

Q. Poor Man! I ſee it ſcares thee indeed. Why, Unerrable and Infallible are all one. Yea, Right Reaſon is Infallible by the ſame Reaſon, that it cannot be Wrong.

A. But the Popes talk of being Infallible; are not you like them?

Q. Never the more like them for that; Talking, and being ſo, are Two Things. Men ſhould not deny the True Chriſt becauſe of an Impoſtor; nor any fear Infallibility, becauſe the Pope makes Market with ſuch Pretences. If thou art not certain of what thou believeſt, thou haſt not that Faith which was once delivered to the Saints; for that was Certain, and therefore Infallible.

A. Why; Is Certain and Infallible all one?

Q. Yes; Certainty and Infallibility is the ſame. But what think'ſt thou of the Light in this Caſe under Debate? For either it is the Rule, or it is given to underſtand and uſe the Rule, or elſe it's given for nothing?

A. 'Tis not the Rule we are taught to ſay; and yet we cannot conclude it to be given for nothing.

Q. Very well; then it muſt be given in order to underſtand and uſe the Rule. Now ſuppoſing the Scriptures be the Rule, that which informs me of my Rule, and teaches me how to uſe it, muſt be greater than my Rule, in that it teaches me to know and do that my Rule cannot do of it ſelf: I query then, If this Light be not my Rule, how and which Way I come to underſtand and uſe this Rule. So that it is eminently the Rule becauſe of it's Preſent, Immediate and Certain Direction and Knowledge, and the Scripture at moſt but a Kind of Declaratory and Secondary Rule, and therefore ſubject to the Holy Spirit in the Apoſtles and Primitive Chriſtians, who took not Meaſures by it, when it diſtinguiſh'd the Ceremonial from the Moral Precepts, ſo intermixed in the 19th of Leviticus, and other Places; but their Minds being exerciſed and guided by that Holy Living Rule, they left off, or continued for a Time ſeveral Jewiſh Obſervations, as there might be a Service therein ſignified to them from that Living Rule. The Light and Spirit of God then is both THE Rule of Faith and Guide of Life, Superior to the Scriptures, and That by which only they can be rightly known, believed and fulfilled. A Doctrine Evangelical, and not diſowned by thoſe firſt Proteſtants, who teſtified that no Man could underſtand the Scriptures given forth by Inſpiration, but by a Meaſure of the ſame Spirit. To conclude, Hiſtorical Faith Scripture is a Rule of, but Doctrinal and Saving Faith, the Light and Spirit of God, can only be the Rule of; for that which giveth Faith, is only that which rules Faith.

3. But (ſays he) how could you have known, that Swearing in any Caſe were Unlawful, if it had not been written, Swear not at all; Is not then that Scripture your Rule in this Caſe? Dial. p. 22.

But this ſhews both the Ignorance of T. Hicks in the Writings of the beſt Gentiles, and his Acknowledgment of the Light's Sufficiency, in Caſe we are able to prove Swearing diſallowed and diſpractiſed before Chriſt's coming in the Fleſh.

The Seven Wiſe Men famous among the Greeks, and Contemporaries above Five Hundred Years before Chriſt came in the Fleſh, eſteemed Swearing but a Remedy againſt Corruption, in Evidence: To be ſure, they both believ'd and exhorted People to that State which needed it not. Stob. 28.

Socrates plainly ſays, That there is a Life more Firm, and Unqueſtionable than an Oath: Conſequently Swearing not the beſt State. Id. 114.

And Xenocrates was had in that Veneration in Athens, for his exceeding Virtue, that the Magiſtrates thought it a queſtioning of his Honeſty to offer him any Oath, and therefore refuſed, implying, that Oaths were not made for the Beſt of Men, and that there is a State attainable, which is more Excellent than that in which Oaths are uſed. Val. Max. 2. 10. Cic. pro Bal. Laert.

And thus was that Evangelical Precept, Swear not at all, arrived at, preferred, and honour'd by profeſt Gentiles, about Five Hundred Years before it was uttered by our Lord JESUS CHRIST; therefore the Light, from T. H's Objection anſwered, is proved ſufficient.

4. But here is an utter Inſufficiency (if we will believe him) in this meer Light Within to direct us the Right Way of Worſhipping God: This, ſays he, is manifeſt from the great Loſs the Wiſeſt among the Heathen have been, and are at, about this very Thing, the multiplying their Deities, Worſhipping Devils, &c. Dial. pag. 35, 36.

He is an incompetent Witneſs againſt the Light's Sufficiency, that has never tryed the Extent of it's Ability by a Life conform'd to what it leads to: If T. Hicks walk'd without all Reproof, it were ſomething; but for a Man to talk of it's Inſufficiency, whilſt it ſhews that which he is not come up to, as well as that it condemns for Daily Failings, is Arrogancy with a Witneſs.

But why is it Inſufficient to direct him the Right Way of Worſhip. Becauſe T. Hicks has not found it; Is it a good Argument againſt the Scripture, that becauſe thoſe who pretend to Square their Faith by it, manifeſtly Err, therefore it is Inſufficient to direct them Right? Thomas Hicks will never allow this againſt the Scriptures, and yet he calls us Names for not tacitly ſuffering his baſe Abuſes againſt the Lord's Light, Rom. 1. 19, 20. What if any of the Heathen became Vain in their Imaginations, who when they knew God, Worſhipped Him not as God, will it follow, that God's Manifeſtation of himſelf (as the Apoſtle plainly ſpeaks) in Man, was an Inſufficient Manifeſtation? The Jews turned Idolaters, they Worſhipp'd a Calf, and offer'd their Children to Moloch, (Devotion made up of Murder and Idolatry) was God's Light, Law, or Good Spirit, and the whole Series of Love and Mercy ſhown unto them, Inſufficient, becauſe of their Rebellion? I affirm that Thomas Hicks, by this Argument, is the horrid'ſt Blaſphemer that ever lived among Men: For if the Falſe Deities of the Heathen, and their Worſhipping of Devils, with the horrid Idolatries of the Jews, were not the Effects of their own Erring from a Sufficient Light or Manifeſtation, to have better informed and directed them, but through the Inſufficiency of the Light to diſcover the True God, and how to Worſhip Him, T. H. has evidently laid the Charge at God's Door; for he could not Reap where he had not Sown: And thus far doth he render the Almighty acceſſory to thoſe Impieties, That He gave not Man a Sufficiency of Light to inform him better, that he might have eſcaped ſo groſs Abomination; which ends in that deteſtable Doctrine of Eternal, Unconditional Reprobation; an Off-ſpring of Satan, a Murderer from the Beginning.

In ſhort, Chriſt is the Light of Men: The Way of the Juſt is a ſhining Light: He that is the Way, Truth and Life, is the Light; Therefore thoſe who Worſhip God according to the Light, Worſhip him in the Spirit and in the Truth, and walk in the Juſt Man's Path: For that Men ſhould walk up to the Light of Chriſt, and yet be Ignorant of the Right Way of Worſhip, is groſs Ignorance and Darkneſs. For Tho. Hicks then to ſay, that God doth make more known, than is, or can be known by the Light, is falſe and contradictory; For unleſs there be two Diſtinct Divine Lights by Nature (which is an abſurd Thing, ſo much as to conceive) or that God can manifeſt any Thing without Light, it will follow, that both the Light is One, and that it is that One Light, whereby God hath revealed himſelf through all Ages: And here I would be well underſtood; for I know one Age hath been attended with larger Diſcoveries, yet this argues no Deficiency to have been in the former Manifeſtation, though it implies Weakneſs in the People that they could not receive the ſame Light in a greater. The Light is therefore One in it ſelf, however variouſly it may break forth in any Age and Generation; I know it hath ariſen higher and higher; the Difference is in Degrees, not in Nature; and ſo T. H. in great Contradiction to himſelf acknowledges, Dial. p. 36. What hath been the Duty of every Age, it hath ſhewn, and the beſt Reaſon and Rule for the Obedience to any Thing ſuperadded hath been the Convictions and Leadings of the Light, according to that Manifeſtation, it gave before; Thoſe that went from the Light, and ſat down, grew Rich in literal Knowledge, were the Oppoſers of the more glorious Breaking forth of Light, and not thoſe who kept cloſe to what was revealed. So 'tis at this Day; Such as have kept to the Tendering Grace and Spirit among Profeſſors, ſuch are moſt moderate to us, and inclin'd after us; The Hard, Dry and Cavilling amongſt them, as they are ſtrongeſt in their Combatings, like the Phariſees of old, ſo are they moſt darkned from the Light, and moſt of all deſpiſe the Teſtimony of it, and ſet at nought and oppoſe, as to the Death, all thoſe who are become Witneſſes of the freſh Reſurrection of Light and Life (If I may ſo ſpeak) in the Hearts of People. I know not what better to call them, than Thieves and Robbers, ſpoken of by Chriſt, who have gone aſide from the tender Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, that in Days paſt ſtrove with them, and with whoſe ſecret Voice they were in ſome meaſure affected, and have ſet up themſelves in a Form, without Power, Praying, Preaching, Dipping and all other Acts of Worſhip, Ordinances, &c. without the Leadings of God's Spirit: Wherefore, ſaid Chriſt, of the like People, All that came before me are Thieves and Robbers, they climb over the Wall, they come not in at the Door; which Door is that State of Witneſſing, at which that light and frothy Prophaniſt, T. H. beſtows ſo many foul Reflections; forgetting how much of the ancient Puritan, Browniſt and Baptiſt Religion was made up of Experiences, which, with Men that underſtand Words, hath the ſame Signification, as well as that Witneſſing is more Scriptural. And indeed, I wonder not at all at it; for where Men that have had ſome Inward Senſe of Life Eternal, give not way to the more full Breakings forth of the ſame, but run into Forms, and take up their Reſt by the Way, and ſo come to withſtand it, they loſe what they had, and center, where thoſe be who at firſt oppos'd them, emptying from one to the other till they arrive at Rome again, that ſo the Battel may be of Michael and the Devil, the True Church againſt the Falſe, Power and Form of Godlineſs againſt Form without Power, and the Traditions, Superſtitions and Inventions of Men; by which they have endeavoured to make void God's Law: For whoever have loſt their Inward Senſe of God, and withſtand the Propagation of that Inward Religion, however their Form may be more Scriptural, the ſame Spirit enters them that reigned in their old Perſecutors, and they at laſt run back, and end in that, from whence they at firſt reformed. So dangerous it is to reſt ſatisfied with a finer Form, which in Truth is but a better Covering for the old Enemy of God's Spirit and Power to act more diſguiſedly and ſecurely in.

But leſt any ſhould think that all this is ſaid to juſtle the Scriptures out of all Uſe and Service, read theſe few lines following with Patience and Impartiality. Though we eminently account the Light or Spirit of Chriſt to be the Goſpel, Living and Immediate Rule (as the great Promiſe of the Father (and that without being ruled and led or guided by it, there is no being a Child of God) yet we do not thereby intend an Excluſion of the Scriptures from being Obligatory, or as not Declaratory of thoſe Heavenly Bleſſed Truths, that are fit to be read, believed and practiſed; God forbid, No, we know better and practiſe otherwiſe, and have good Satisfaction therein. Nor do we ſay that thoſe eſſential Things relating to Faith and Godlineſs mentioned therein are by us to be ſlighted or contradicted; or that the Light and Spirit we are led by, doth or can lead to any ſuch Thing; for by it's Holy Diſcoveries and Convictions are we made acquainted with them; and our Faith concerning them is firm, and they are thereby made our Duty, and ſuch is their Correſpondence and Agreement, that from an Inward Aſſent and Living Amen, from God's Light in our Conſciences do we teſtifie of their Truth, Uſe and Dignity. And very vain is T. Hicks's Objection, If your Light be Sufficient, why do you read them? ſince we may return to him the ſame; If the Scriptures be Sufficient, why doſt thou uſe other Means? Though God's Grace be Sufficient of it ſelf, therefore is the Creature always in that Condition, wherein he needs not Means? And notwithſtanding it be the Diſpenſation of Light and Life, more Immediately than has been known to former Ages, yet we deny not the uſe of ſuch Means, as may be uſed of God's Light and Spirit, as will be ſpoken more largely to elſewhere. Man's Mind being Carnal and abroad, Means in God's Power are us'd not as ſettl'd Teachers, but as Inſtrumental in God's Hand to teſtifie of and direct to that one Great Prophet and Living Teacher in the Hearts of Men, that all may come thither and be taught of him.

CHAP. V. Of his Inſinuations againſt us concerning the Scriptures.

Chap. V.

P. 19 to 30.

BUT T. H. that he may be true to his Ungodly Way of perverting our Principles, would inſinuate, Firſt, 'That we eſteem the Scriptures no farther, than 'as they were the Experiences of Ancient Saints, thereby rendring the many Prophe'ſies and Promiſes therein recorded, not yet fulfilled, Unprofitable. But to take off all Credit to this evil Suggeſtion, let our ſober Readers know, that by the Light of Chriſt in our own Hearts and Conſciences, as to confirm what of the Scriptures we have experienced, and preſs after the Compleating of thoſe Enjoyments therein expreſſed; ſo are we taught reverently to believe thoſe Holy Prophecies and Promiſes yet unaccompliſhed to have been given forth by the Inſpiration of the Almighty; and that they ſhall be as certainly fulfilled, as they are written. Yet we dare boldly affirm, and that in the Name of the Lord (before whom we ſhall give an Account for every Deed done in the Body) that the greateſt Reaſon of our Belief concerning them, is not from any Outward Thing, but that Inward Teſtimony, Record and Heavenly Amen, that we have frequently received from the Holy Light within us, to the Truth and Faithfulneſs of thoſe Sayings. And if any Quakers there be that are not thus minded, they are to me unknown, and I publickly renounce, and proteſt againſt that Principle that would in the leaſt derogate from thoſe Holy Writings; which leads me to his Second Inſinuation, viz. As if becauſe we do deny the Scriptures to be the Rule of Faith and Practice, in Honour to that Divine Light, which was the Author of them in the Holy Pen-men, " that we ſhould therefore deny " all thoſe Holy Precepts, Commandments and Rules relating to Life and Godlineſs, " that

Chap. V.

“ that are therein contained: A Conſequence ſo foul, that God forbid any of us ſhould ever give any Juſt Occaſion for it; For we both believe Men ought to live up to them, and that they are highly Reproveable if they tranſgreſs againſt them. But the Reaſon why, is that Conviction they meet with from the Light in their own Conſciences; wherefore the Scriptures are ſo far from being the great Rule of Faith and Practice, that the Light of Chriſt within is both our Warrant and Rule for Faith in, and Obedience to them. And let T. H. ſay if he can, that the Waldenſes, Albigenſes, Lollards, Huſſites, Lutherans, Calviniſts and other Proteſtants made not the Teſtimony of God in their Conſcience the chief Ground of their Belief of the Scriptures; to ſay nothing of the primitive Chriſtians and moſt uncorrupted Fathers, who are many and poſitive on our Behalf.

3ly, He inſinuates, that we equal, nay prefer our Books before the Scriptures, becauſe of the Titles we give our own Books, viz. The Voice of Wiſdom, A Teſtimony for God, &c. and what we give the Scripture, namely, Letter, &c. This I have largely ſpoken to in my Anſwer to J. Faldo, but not knowing whether ever that may be where this probably may come, I ſhall ſay thus much, If at any Time we call the Scriptures the Letter, it is not that we mean thereby, our Books are the Spirit, or that we would irreverently ſet them below our Writings, but upon a Compariſon only betwixt the Scriptures and the Spirit that gave them forth, and that, I hope, may be done without the leaſt Diſreſpect, though ſuch whoſe Religion ſtands in Letter and Time, and not in Spirit and Power, be angry at it. But that we ſhould be thought to ſlight the Scriptures, becauſe we beſtow ſuch Names upon our Books, is a ſtrange kind of Conſequence. Are not our Books moſtly written in a plain, familiar and Scripture-ſtile? Do we not earneſtly endeavour to confirm what we write by Scripture, which not only renders it a Part of our Book, but the moſt Noble Part too? And ſhall we notwithſtanding be reputed Slighters of the Scriptures? Certainly if our Books are called, The Voice of Wiſdom, and A Teſtimony for God, becauſe from the Voice of Wiſdom, and God's Witneſs in the Conſcience; by good Reaſon muſt the Scriptures be intereſted therein, which are both a Part of them, and ſuch an one too unto whom our Quotation implies a Manifeſt Preference.

His next Inſinuation is, that it is Dangerous for Ignorant People to read the Scriptures, flinging thoſe hateful Names of Jeſuit and Romaniſt upon us. This Doctrine he lays to the Charge of G. Fox and Rich. Hubberthorn, in a Book called, Truth's Defence, pag. 101, But the Truth of the Matter I will relate out of that Book it ſelf, which has been moſt partially and baſely repreſented by him.

The Prieſt's Query lies thus, “ Whether the Scripture being Carnal, and the Let- “ ter Killing, as you ſay, we may read them without Danger?

‘ Anſ. The Letter which killeth, 2 Cor. 3. 6. is Dangerous; for thou takeſt it
‘ here to war withal againſt the Saints, with thy Carnal Mind, giving out thy Carnal
‘ Expoſitions upon it: And the Miniſters of the Letter are Miniſters of Death,
‘ which is to Condemnation, and you take it to make a Trade with it, and with ‘ what the Prophets, Chriſt and the Apoſtles ſaid; ſo that ſome have Sixty, ‘ ſome an Hundred Pounds a Year: But Chriſt cried, Wo unto ſuch whited Walls.
‘ And here you read with Danger, who ſpeak of them, and ſpeak a Lye, becauſe
‘ you ſpeak of your ſelves, and you wreſt the Scriptures to your own Deſtruction,
‘ and to you it is Dangerous to read or ſpeak of it, who know not the Life of it,
‘ as the Phariſees, who were learned in the Letter, but knew not Chriſt. But I ‘ ſay, Bleſſed is he that doth read, and doth underſtand.

This is the true Account in brief of their Anſwer to the Prieſt's Query: And I appeal to God's Witneſs in the Reader's Conſcience, if any Thing of what that vile Man would ſuggeſt, is to be found in theſe Men's Words; who by Letter evidently mean the Legal State of Condemnation; by Dangerous, not what Edification was to be got with reſpect to reading, but that Aggravation of Puniſhment, which would be the Recompence of thoſe who make a Trade of them, and oppoſe them, Phariſee-like, to the Life and Spirit of Chriſt Jeſus, wreſting them to their own Deſtruction. Reading to ſuch End and Purpoſe, will prove Dangerous with a Witneſs. And that it was at ſuch a ſort of Reading they ſtruck, conſider this Paſſage, But I ſay, Bleſſed is he that doth read and doth underſtand.

Let this Forgery ſo obvious, ring through the Streets and Towns, where-ever his Book or Name is known; however this is little to what's Behind. For my Part I ſpeak my Conſcience in Sincerity; I had rather periſh off the Earth, than live ſo great a Burden of foul Diſhoneſty, as I doubt not but a little Time will manifeſt him to be.

That the Baſeneſs of his Intentions in this kind of Arguing may yet farther appear, let this groſs Inference directly charged by him upon our Principle, of the Light's being our Rule, be diligently conſidered.

From our Aſſerting the Light Within to be our Rule, he tells the World, That we mean the Holy Qualification, that is in us: Which were it true, he would hit the Mark, when he ſays, that Holineſs, being a Conformity to the Rule, it cannot be the Rule. But never yet certainly did any, but Thomas Hicks, ſo miſ-repreſent the poor Quaker: Nay, he Confounds and Contradicts himſelf. How can we be ſaid to make our Holineſs the Rule, when we affirm it only to be a walking up to the Light within, which is Holy? He ſays that we aſſert the Light to be the Rule, how then is our Obedience to it the Rule; for that is true Holineſs? Is there no Difference between a Rule, and Obedience to it? Holy Life, and that which gives it, or makes it ſo? What a Meeting here is of Ignorance, Malice and Lying? Any Thing to ſpoil the Quakers; but God will break the Bow and Spear of their Enemies.

Again, From his Quaker's telling him, 'Thou takeſt up the Saints Words; but if thou haſt not the ſame Spirit, what are the Words to thee; he dares to ſuggeſt, that our Opinion of the Light's Sufficiency in every Man cannot be true; And all the Reaſon he gives us for his ſtrange Concluſion, is this; That thoſe Words imply, that the Spirit or Light of God is not in all Men.

Now what is more evident, than Firſt, That it is not our Anſwer? 2. That it concerns not the Sufficiency, ſo much as the Univerſality of it? 3. By not having the Spirit, or Light, is not meant, that we believe that God has not given a Meaſure of his Good Spirit unto all to profit with, or that there be ſome, whom he never enlightned, but that they ſo have not the Spirit, as to walk by it, be benefitted by it, or come to enjoy it as their Teacher and Comforter; and that ſome may be ſaid, not to be Enlightned, who are not through Faith in, and Obedience to the Light, come to be advantaged and made Children of Light by it. Let this ſuffice at preſent to ſhew the Man's Ignorance of our Principles, or his great Unrighteouſneſs to pervert them.

I ſhall now attend the next Point by him handled, and that is Chriſt's Perſon, and our Faith in him, which, he ſays, we deny, and indeed he does but ſay it.

CHAP. VI. Of our Faith in Chriſt.

Chap. VI

Dial. p. 43, 44, 45, 46, 47. Contin. p. 4 41, 43, 44.

HIS next Cavil is at our Belief in Chriſt, and which is worſe, he would be thought a Chriſtian in doing ſo. The great Streſs lies here, Tho. Hicks would have the World think, we Equivocate about our Faith in That Chriſt which after the Fleſh appeared and dyed at Jeruſalem. The Reaſon of all this Clamour and Injuſtice on the Part of our angry and reſtleſs Adverſary is this; if I wrong him let him ſhew it me: The Quakers ſay, that Chriſt is in them; Chriſt is God, is God Man in them? Again, The Quakers ſay, that Chriſt is in them; But ſince there is but One Chriſt, who was born of a Virgin, and that he ſuffered at Jeruſalem, being there crucified, can that Chriſt be in Man? The falſe Doctrine or Abſurdity he would run us upon, is one of theſe two, Either that we deny Chriſt's Manhood, or that He is actually in our Bodies with that Body he appeared in at Jeruſalem, which is Impoſſible, witneſs this one Paſſage, If God be Chriſt, as Penn ſaith; or, If the Light within you be the Chriſt, as Naylor and Hubberthorn affirm, is it proper or ſafe to ſay, God was Slain, or the Light in you was Crucified.

To which I anſwer, That as in other Things, ſo in this, our Adverſary has ſhewn his great Ignorance or Malice. For is it reaſonable to infer from our Affirming in Scripture Language, Chriſt is in the Saints, that we deny him as to his Viſible and Bodily Appearance in the World; and that becauſe he is God, therefore he was never Man; or that the Word took not Fleſh; Is this to underſtand us right, or give the World a true Meaſure of our Belief, who confeſs Chriſt to be every where, and if ſo, then in his People, ſee Cont. p. 34. Ah, God the Righteous Judge ſhall plead with thee in a Day that thou ſhalt not be able to eſcape his Terrible Recompence, if thou repenteſt not. Let it ſuffice to the ſober Reader (for of himſelf I have little Hopes) that we do believe that Chriſt, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever, did come of Abraham's Seed according to the Fleſh, that the Body prepared of that Line was his Body, that what Sufferings befel it were the Sufferings of Chriſt, 1673. Chap. VI. juſt as the Body is called the Body of Chriſt: Yet this we do ſay, and that not in any Undervalue to the Body, or Bodily Sufferings of Chriſt, that the Divine Word, in whom was Life, and whoſe Life was the Light of Men (who took that Fleſh) is eminently to be look'd upon, and that to believe and obey the Light of his Life, wherewith he has enlightened us, is both the beſt Way to know the Sufferings of his Body, and to receive the Benefit of them.

In ſhort, unleſs Chriſt be not God, and unleſs the Light be not Chriſt, I know no Hurt I have done, to aſſert him to be God, nor any Reaſon our Adverſary hath to infer, therefore I, or any of us, deny him to have taken Fleſh, or that he ſuffered without the Gates of Jeruſalem, or that he is not as well Chriſt without as within us.

Again I do affirm that by the ſame Reaſon the bodily Sufferings of the Word, whoſe Life was the Light of Men, are frequently attributed to the Word it ſelf, as if the Word had immediately ſuſtained them, and not the Body; the Light which ſhineth in the Conſciences of Mankind, which is the very Life of the Word, or Word it ſelf, is not unconcern'd in the bodily Sufferings, but both gives to believe them aright, and to receive Benefit by them, and that as the Sufferings of his own Body, by and through which his Glory, Grace and Truth, did ſhine forth, in the World: Which are now revealed afreſh in the Hearts of all who believe in him. Let our Adverſaries deal ſo fairly with us, as to diſtinguiſh between Chriſt, and the Body of Chriſt, as before Abraham the Rock in the Wilderneſs, and the Appearance of Chriſt in the Fleſh, and not infer from our denying that the whole Chriſt could die; that Chriſt, that is, the Body of Chriſt ſuffered or died not; And when we ſay, he who took Fleſh has appeared to, and in our Hearts, that we exclude and deny his then Viſible and Bodily Appearance, or that he is not now as well without us, as within us; and we ſhall never doubt of a good Iſſue. But truly after the Rate we have been uſed by him, the moſt Scriptural Aſſertions can never eſcape being accounted falſe and unwarrantable. For becauſe we are with godly Fear Jealous, leſt the whole Chriſt ſhould be thought to have been then crucified, when his Body was, which ſtrikes at the Life of the immortal and Divine Being, we are repreſented by this Perverter of our right Meaning, as Denyers of that Body, whilſt he himſelf acknowledgeth that the meer Manhood was not the Chriſt, but the Word made Fleſh, Emmanuel. Page 44. Dialogue.

2. Becauſe we aſſert that true Light, with which every Man is enlightned, to be in it ſelf the Chriſt of God, and Saviour of the World; he infers that we deny the True Chriſt, becauſe he dyed and roſe again, &c. Which the Light never did, never conſidering that if he makes what dyed and roſe again, the entire Chriſt and Saviour, he excludes the Divinity or Godhead, which he confeſſeth to be Chriſt, in Conjunction with the Manhood, and which the Scripture calls ſtrictly the Saviour, beſides whom there is none; and which J. Faldo himſelf pag. 85. part 2. Acknowledges to be ſuch. But if T. Hicks does allow, as indeed he doth, that Chriſt is God, as well as Man, there is nothing befalls us from his Inference, but what ſtrikes himſelf equally; for if the Light, with which Men are enlightened, be not Chriſt, becauſe it cannot dye, then Chriſt cannot be Chriſt as God, becauſe God cannot dye. Well! But T. Hicks tells us, that Chriſt as God is alſo Chriſt, and that it was Chriſt's Body only that dyed: Therefore I conclude, that to own Chriſt to be that true Light, which enlightneth all Men, or that true Light to be Chriſt, is no Derogation from Chriſt or Undervalue to his Bodily Sufferings.

3. And becauſe that one of us ſpoke of a twofold Appearance of Chriſt in the Soul, firſt, as a Seed of Light in Man, and next, as perfect Day, or in a full grown State of Glory, Therefore ſays he, a Perſonal Coming in any Reſpect, is denyed by you, Contin. page 45. which Concluſion is ſo horribly unjuſt, that no Impartial Man needs an Anſwer to it. And let the Partial know, that we have not only confeſſed to his Perſonal Appearance, But T. H. has ſo much faith for us. Dial. pag. 45. The Baſeneſs and Self-Contradiction of the Man is notorious enough as to this Point.

I ſhall proceed to the next Particular, and that is, If Chriſt ſignifie Anointed, and Chriſt be God, as Penn ſaith, I would query, (ſaith our Adverſary) whether God himſelf was anointed? Contin. pag. 47.

But though this might have ſeem'd ſomething from a Socinian Hand, yet from T. Hicks, it gives no Difficulty at all; for ſince he acknowledgeth Chriſt to be as well God as Man, and that Chriſt was not anointed by Halves, but intirely, as the Word χριστὸς Chriſt, from χρίω to Anoint, doth imply, I would fain be informed (Argumentum ad Hominem) Who anointed the Godhead, without which T. Hicks affirms again and again, Chriſt was not Chriſt, becauſe (ſays he) Chriſt is God manifeſt in the Fleſh. Dialog. pag. 44. And ſince he is for Querying, let me aſk him, who is underſtood in that Paſſage, God, even thy God hath anointed thee with the Oyle of Gladneſs, &c? Was that ſaid of Chriſt or no? If not, ſay ſo, If it was, as moſt, or all believe, then, whether the Divine Nature of Chriſt was unconcern'd in that Anointing? And who it was that anointed him is evident from the Place? If T. Hicks will limit God to the Manner of his Manifeſtations and Operations reſpecting us, that is, that he is no otherwiſe to, and in himſelf, than what he appears to us to be; What will he make of that Place. To us a Child is born, to us a Son is given, he ſhall be called Wonderful Counſellor, the mighty God, the everlaſting Father, the Prince of Peace? &c. Shall God's Condeſcenſions to Man's Weak and depraved State, by perſonating, and repreſenting Things to his Capacity, be an Argument that he is no otherwiſe in himſelf? Are we confuſed becauſe we uſe his Words? or ſhall Man riſe up againſt God's Way of uttering forth himſelf ſuitable to the Shortneſs of his Underſtanding? This Kind of Cavil might better become a Carnal Phariſee, or Scoffing Heathen, than a Man pretending to Chriſtianity. Baſe Man that he is, who rewards the Almighty ſo ill for his Merciful Condeſcenſions! But to the Blind all Things are dark.

Iſa. 6. 9.

But he thinks that he has caught me irrecoverably: Hear his Dialogue. Chr. Was not Chriſt God's Gift? Quak. Yea he was ſo. Chr. To what End? Quak. His Doctrine, Life, Miracles, Death and Sufferings to God is the Gift and Expreſſion of God's Eternal Love for the Salvation of Men. Penn's Sandy Foundation, Pag. 19. Chr. Thou haſt affirmed that God is Chriſt: If ſo, Did God die and ſuffer to God?

To which I anſwer, That T. Hicks, as in other Places, ſo here is baſely Unjuſt, and if he accounts me his Adverſary or an Oppoſer of his Principles, though I never had to do with him in particular, nor any of that People in General; It behoved him to be honeſt, and give me my Due; Inſtead of which he leaves out ſome Words, and horribly perverts the reſt. For, firſt, I did in that Book acknowledge and confeſs to Chriſt's Bodily Appearance, and that he was born of the Virgin Mary after the Fleſh, and that largely and plainly, p. 36, which he wholly omits to mention. Secondly, I do not remember that I ſo expreſs'd my ſelf, that God was Chriſt, but whether I did or no, to inſinuate a Denial of his Manifeſtation in Fleſh is moſt perverſly wicked and ungodly, as well as that it plainly ſhews, notwithſtanding his feigned Confeſſion to Chriſt's Divinity, that in Truth he owns him not to be God, or he has very ill expreſs'd himſelf when he ſays, thou affirmeſt God is Chriſt, (or Chriſt is God) for it implies he does not; elſe what means his following Words, did God himſelf die and ſuffer to God? He thus queries to ſhew the Abſurdity of believing God to be Chriſt, (or Chriſt to be God) and tells us that he believes what died was the Intire Chriſt. Certainly, he is either Rank Socinian in the Point, (which I mention not in Diſgrace, unleſs it be to that Party that ſo impious a Perſon is of it) or he has not well given us his Mind. But this proves what elſewhere I obſerve of him, that from our aſſerting Chriſt to be God or God Chriſt, Tho. Hicks is ignorant or malicious enough to infer, that we deny that ever he took Fleſh; whence he would faſten ſuch like Abſurdities upon us, you ſay Chriſt died, Chriſt you ſay is God, did then God die? &c.

But if he has repreſented us to deny the Bodily Appearance, why did he not alſo make us to deny his Death and Sufferings too, and then there had been no Room for that prepoſterous Concluſion; But to inſinuate a Belief of our Denial of Chriſt's Coming in the Fleſh, and not of his Death, that he might bring us upon this Pinch of Contradiction, to wit, that God died, and not the Body in which he was manifeſted, is ſuch an invented Piece of Diſhoneſty as deſerves nothing elſe than the Abhorrence of all Impartial Perſons; In ſhort, we ſay, that God manifeſted in Fleſh was the true Chriſt that then appeared, that the Fleſh, and not God, died, and that the whole of the Appearance, whether in Life or Death, was for Man's Salvation And if Tho. Hicks is not herewith contented, we cannot help it, but hope others are not ſo Unreaſonable.

But he proceeds thus; Give me Leave to aſk you, directing himſelf to his 'foreſaid Quaker, Whether one great End wherefore Chriſt was given, and came into the World, was not to ſeek and to ſave ſuch as were loſt. Quak. Yea, he came to ſeek and ſave the Loſt.

Chriſt. But who, or what, is this that was loſt?

He wickedly and with an Aggravation, like the Enmity of his Spirit, thus makes G. Keith to anſwer, That which is loſt is ſtill in Man, That Chriſt came to ſeek and ſave, and all his Miniſters preached People to this, the Loſt in Man, a loſt God, a Loſt Chriſt, &c. To which ſays T. H. Bluſh, O Heavens! and be aſtoniſhed, O Earth! Was ever ſuch a Thing as this heard of before, that Jeſus Chriſt came to ſeek and ſave a Loſt God, a Loſt Chriſt? &c. Was ever God and Chriſt in a Loſt Condition? But the Heavens may bluſh, and the Earth be aſtoniſhed indeed at ſuch ſordid and baſe Dealing. G. Keith means, that Chriſt came to ſeek and to ſave, by turning People to enquire after a Loſt God and a Loſt Chriſt, the Groat within, the Pearl in the Field, &c. that is, to God's Light in them, by which God and Chriſt are revealed to the Soul; For whatever may be known of God is manifeſt within, Rom. 1. which they rebelling againſt, had loſt the Knowledge of the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt: And this unrighteous Perſon turns it that G. Keith meant, that Chriſt came to ſeek and ſave a Loſt God, and Loſt Chriſt; What Senſe can there be in ſo horrible a Perverſion, as well as that there is no Colour for it, who endeavours to inſinuate that Chriſt came to ſave God and Chriſt, not the Soul, by turning it to ſeek after God and Chriſt; and to repreſent God and Chriſt's Condition Loſt and Perilous, inſtead of theirs, who had or have loſt God and Chriſt. In ſhort, Loſt, as taken by T. H. is meant of Man's Loſt Condition, and as there uſed by G. Keith, is underſtood of God and Chriſt, whom Man had and hath loſt the Knowledge of, and Fellowſhip with. But ſuch ſiniſter Practices ſavour of the Height of Diſhoneſty; The Inventor of Baxter Baptized in Blood by Anabaptiſts is nothing to this horrible kind of Perverter; And I doubt not, but T. Hicks's Recompence will be more terrible from the Hand of a juſt God, irritated by ſuch Irreligious Proceedings. However, I will return upon T. Hicks what more concerns him than he is aware of: If Chriſt came to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt, then becauſe the whole World was Loſt, he came to ſeek and to ſave the whole World; And if ſo, then Reprobates, becauſe loſt, or elſe there can be no ſuch Thing, as Eternal Reprobation, or Men from Eternity unalterably decreed to Eternal Deſtruction; How much more this confounds his own partial Opinion of Predeſtination than any thing he has ſaid can the Quakers Principles, let the ſober-minded judge.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Seed, and Redemption of the Seed.

HIS next Stumble, and groſs Perverſion of our Words, is concerning the Seed, from a Paſſage or two taken out of the Books of J. N. and G. F. That the Seed is Chriſt, that the Seed wants Redemption, as being laden by Sinners as a Cart with Sheaves, &c. He thus argues; If then Redemption be of the Seed, and this Seed be Chriſt, either there muſt be more Chriſts than one, or elſe Chriſt came to redeem himſelf. Again, Chriſt without you eſteem to be but a Creature; but the Seed within you ſay is God. Tell me ſeriouſly, whether a Creature can redeem the Creator. Can you pretend to be guided by an Infallible Spirit, and yet be guilty of ſuch Gibberiſh and Folly as this?

To which, before I make my Anſwer, I think fit to inſert that which he gives in the Name of the Quakers.

Here thou ſheweſt thy dark Mind, and that thou art ſtill in thy Imagination, underſtanding neither the Redemption nor the Seed; which however feign'd by himſelf againſt himſelf, is ſo great a Truth, that there is ſcarcely one Paſſage in his Dialogue more allowable.

But to his Argument and Queſtion. We do aſſert the Redemption of the Seed, for the Light and Life which has been as ſown in the Heart of Mankind, has been loaded with Sin, preſſed down with Iniquity, grieved and almoſt quenched through Diſobedience, which Words are not properly, but metaphorically to be taken, as uſed by the Holy Pen-men, whereby to make Things the more plain and eaſy to common Capacities. It is ſaid in Scripture, Out of Ægypt have I called my Son, a Place of Bondage and grievous Weights, Burdens and Oppreſſions, from all which the Seed was to be redeemed; and Chriſt came, or God was manifeſted in the Fleſh, that the Seed of Light, Truth and Righteouſneſs might break through and ariſe over all Corruption, by which it had been grieved and preſſed down. And it is no Contradiction to ſay, That God did rid himſelf of the Enemies that oppreſſed his own Righteous Life, or that he brought Salvation to himſelf; for the Scriptures frequently ſpeak on that wiſe, eſpecially in thoſe two notable Paſſages of Iſaiah, And he ſaw that there was no Man, and wondered that there was no Interceſſor, therefore his Arm brought Salvation to him, and his Righteouſneſs ſuſtained him, Iſa. 59. 16. Again, The Year of my Redeemed is come; and I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered there was none to uphold; therefore mine own Arm brought Salvation unto me, and my Fury it upheld me, Iſa. 63. 4, 4. Whence it is no Ways abſurd that we affirm, that the End of God's manifeſting himſelf in the Fleſh, was for the Redemption or Deliverance of his Holy Life that was in Man, but as a ſmall Seed, even the ſmalleſt of Seeds, that had been long vexed, grieved, bruiſed and preſſed down by Sin and Iniquity; For the End of that Appearance was, that Sin might be deſtroyed, and that Chriſt, who had been as a Lamb ſlain from the Foundation of the World, might be exalted in the Hearts of Men and Women, and his, and their Foes, made his and their Foot-ſtool: For the Work is Inward, we do aver in the Name of the Lord; for where the Devil hath Reigned, and had Dominion, to wit, in Man, there he muſt be defeated, and ſubdued; and Chriſt alone, by whom that is brought to paſs, ought and muſt have the Power and the Kingdom for ever. And if this be the Folly and Gibberiſh the Quakers muſt be charg'd with from this Anabaptiſt Preacher, we are content to uſe it, as well as patient to bear his inſolent Scoff; only let all take Notice, that we underſtand not by the Seed's Redemption, its being redeemed from the Pollution, but the Weight of Sin and Iniquity; for it was and is pure for evermore.

Now, as to our calling Chriſt without a Creature, I muſt tell him, 'tis not our Language; but if he means by it the Body born of the Virgin, I ſuppoſe T. Hicks is far from believing that to be the Creator, though his Manner of Speaking ſhews a Diſlike of us, that we don't, becauſe he ſays that we eſteem the Chriſt without, or the Outward and Viſible Part of Chriſt but a Creature, as if he believed it to be the Creator. However, manifeſt it is, he believes, that the Redemption wrought, is not by that God, who in thoſe foregoing Paſſages ſpeaks ſo expreſly to that Purpoſe, and who in Time manifeſted himſelf in the Fleſh, but the Fleſh only, by and through which he was ſo manifeſted.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the SOUL of Man.

Chap. VIII.

HIS next Abuſe of us, that I ſhall take Notice of, is this, "That G. Fox and others hold the Soul to be a Part of God, of God's Being, and that it is "without Beginning: (Dialog. p. 1.) All which (ſays he) is as much as to ſay, the Soul is God. So that God ſets up a Light in himſelf, which he himſelf is to obey, and in ſo doing God ſhall be ſaved.

Behold your Anabaptiſt Preacher! A Man of Truth, Tender Conſcience, of the firſt Form of Chriſtians, a Contender for the Faith once delivered to the Saints, and what elſe he falſly pretends, and in vain would have us think him to be. What ſo Baſe? What ſo Irreligious as this Perverſion? Men nor Devils could never ſtudy more our Wrong, than this pretended Chriſtian has done. If this be his Chriſtianity, The God of Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob preſerve my Soul from ever coming within the Borders of ſuch Religion; but Chriſtianity is abuſed by ſuch Traducers, and God's Spirit is grieved by ſuch Injuſtice. I would not uſe the worſt of Men, no not Devils themſelves, at that unequal Rate he deals with us, who both miſ-cites our Words, and abuſes the true Meaning of what is truly cited. G. Fox ſays thus, God breathed into Man the Breath of Life, and he became a Living Soul, and is not this of God, of his Being? &c. And is not this, that comes out from God, Part of God? Where nothing can well be clearer than that G. F. intends that Divine Life, Power and Virtue, by which Adam in Soul and Body came to live to God. Can T. H. ſay, after all this, that he cited G. F. right, and aſk the Quaker in his Dialogue, Dareſt thou ſay I have not quoted him truly? Hardned Man!

Breathed, that is Inſpired: Breathed being the Engliſh Word, Inſpired borrowed from the Latin Inſpirare; the Greek has it ἐνεφύσησεν, as John 20. 22. hath breathed into, enlivened, inſpired, quickened; the Hebrew ויפח and he breathed or blowed; on which R. Nachmanni and the Author Hiskuni in P. Fagius's Comment on the Place, ſpeak thus, That God inſpired Man with ſomething of his own Subſtance; that he contributed ſomething to him, and beſtowed ſomething of his own Divinity upon him, and that God did inſpire Man with the Holy Ghoſt; and that נשמה is a proper Word for it. Which is as much as can be collected or juſtly concluded from what G. Fox hath ſaid concerning Men. But this Ungodly Perſon would infer from our aſſerting that the Breath God breathed into Adam's Soul, whereby it lived to God, was of God's own Divine Life, that the Soul of Man, as a meer Creature, created Capacity, is of God's own Being and Subſtance; and when he has done, with a Taunt becoming none but a Prophane Perſon, tells us, that then God ſets up a Light in himſelf, which being obey'd by him, he comes to be ſaved; as if the Soul needed either a Light or Saviour, in Caſe it were God; or, that God could obey any thing, or needed Salvation. O monſtrous Blaſphemy againſt God, and horrid Injuſtice to us! For as God can obey none, nor need Salvation, neither in Senſe can we be thought ſo to believe of the Soul, as by him repreſented; ſince our pleading for a Saving Light, the Neceſſity of Obedience to it, the Eternal Reward of Life or Death, Happineſs or Miſery, as it is conformed to, or rebelled againſt, prove our Faith in that Matter to be quite another Thing. If this be your Champion, I dare warrant his own Baſeneſs ſhall be his own Overthrow; we need no more againſt him, than his own Ignorance, Malice, Lyes, Forgeries and Slanders to his utter Confutation in the Minds of all Impartial Perſons.

Read G. Fox's Gr. Myſt. p. 91.

Chap. IX.

CHAP. IX. Of Juſtification, and ſomething of Satisfaction.

THE Doctrine of Juſtification is the next Particular that I am to take Notice of. He begins with the Quaker thus, Pray what is your Opinion of Juſtification by that Righteouſneſs of Chriſt, which He in his own Perſon fulfilled for us Wholly without us. Quak. “Juſtification by the Righteouſneſs which Chriſt fulfilled for us in his own Perſon, Wholly without us, we boldly affirm it to be a Doctrine of Devils, and an Arm of the Sea of Corruption, which doth now deluge the World, Will. Penn. Apol. p. 148.

This Apology cited was written againſt a malicious Prieſt in Ireland, who in a Book by him publiſhed not long before, laid it down as Unſcriptural, and a very heinous Thing in us to deny Juſtification (without any Diſtinction expreſt) by the Righteouſneſs which Chriſt wrought in his own Perſon, Wholly without * us. To whom I made the Anſwer given by T. Hicks; And if therein I have croſt the expreſs Teſtimony of the Scriptures, let any ſhew me; But if I have only thwarted a moſt Sin-pleaſing (and therefore dangerous) Notion; let ſuch as hold it look to that: He has not offered me one plain Scripture, nor the Shadow of a Reaſon, why this Paſſage ought to be reputed unſound or condemnable. If any Living will produce me but one Paſſage out of Scripture, that tells of a Juſtification by ſuch a Righteouſneſs as is Wholly without us, I ſhall fall under it's Authority; but if we only deny Men's corrupt Conceits and Sin-pleaſing Gloſſes, and they offer us nothing to our Confutation, or better Information, we ſhall not think bare Quotations of our Books to be ſufficient Anſwers. But to the End all may underſtand the Reaſon of my ſo anſwering that Prieſt, take thoſe ſhort Reaſons then rendred, with any one of which I am to ſuppoſe T. Hicks deſired not to meddle.

‘Firſt, No Man can be juſtified without Faith, (ſays Jenner.) No Man hath Faith without Works (any more than a Body can live without a Spirit (ſays James. ‘Therefore the Works of Righteouſneſs, by the Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, are neceſſary to Juſtification.

‘Second, If Men may be juſtified, whilſt impure; then God quits the Guilty, contrary to the Scripture; which canot be, I mean while in a Rebellious State.

‘Third, Death came by actual Sin, not imputative, in his Senſe; Therefore Juſtification unto Life comes by actual Righteouſneſs, and not imputative.

‘Fourth, This ſpeaketh Peace to the Wicked, whilſt wicked; but there is no Peace to the Wicked, ſaith my God.

‘Fifth, Men are Dead and Alive at the ſame Time, ſaith this Doctrine; for they may be dead in Sin, and yet alive in another's Righteouſneſs, not inherent; and conſequently, Men may be damned actually, and ſaved imputatively.

‘Sixth, But ſince Men are to reap what they ſow, and that every one ſhall be rewarded according to his Works; and that none are Juſtified but the Children

* If wholly without us, then none of it within us.

It was ſuch a Juſtification, as reſpected being made juſt by the Deſtruction of Sin inherent by the Spirit and Power of Chriſt Jeſus, and not being accounted Juſt from the Guilt, and former Sins freely remitted in his Blood, as an Offering for Sin once for all to every one that truly repents.

' of God; and that none are Children but who are led by the Spirit of God, and that none are ſo led, but thoſe that bring forth Fruits thereof, which is Holineſs; 'tis not the Oyl in another's Lamp, but in our own only, which will ſerve our Turns; I mean the Rejoycing muſt be in our ſelves, and not in another: Yet to Chriſt's holy Power alone do we aſcribe it, who works all our Works in us. All which was not only not anſwered, but not cited by him. Gal. 6. Rev. 22. Rom. 8.

He brings me in again thus; Juſtification is not from the Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs; but from the actual Performing and Keeping God's Righteous Statutes. Sand. Found. p. 25. To which, after this baſe and diſingenuous Citation, he returns me only this Anſwer; It is not written, Rom. 5. 19. By the Obedience of one many are made Righteous? But before I explain the Truth of that Scripture, be pleaſed to hear my Argument, as it is laid down in my Book, and then give thy Judgment, Reader, upon the Man. P. 51. Contin.

' The Son ſhall not bear the Iniquity of his Father, the Righteouſneſs of the Righteous ſhall be upon him, and the Wickedneſs of the Wicked ſhall be upon him, when a righteous Man turneth away from his Righteouſneſs, for his Iniquity that he has done ſhall he dye; Again, when the wicked Man turneth away from his Wickedneſs, and doth that which is lawful and Right, he ſhall ſave his Soul alive; yet ſaith the Houſe of Iſrael, The Ways of the Lord are not equal. Are not my Ways Equal? If this was once equal, it's ſo ſtill; for God is unchangeable; And therefore I ſhall draw this Argument, that the Condemnation or Juſtification of Perſons is not from the Imputation of another's * Righteouſneſs; but the actual Performance, or not keeping of God's righteous Statutes or Commandments, otherwiſe God ſhould forget to be equal: Therefore how wickedly unequal are thoſe, who not from Scripture Evidences, but their own dark Conjectures, and Interpretations of Obſcure Paſſages, would frame a Doctrine, ſo manifeſtly inconſiſtent with God's moſt pure and equal Nature; making him to condemn the Righteous to Death, and juſtifie the Wicked to Life, from the Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs. —— A moſt unequal Way indeed. Ezek. 18. 20, 26, 27, 28.

Where obſerve that the Anſwer he makes me give in his Dialogue, is delivered by me with an If it be ſo, fetcht expreſly from the Text it ſelf: So that the Scripture, and not W. Penn is moſt ſtruck at by him. However it be, he has offered us no Oppoſition yet, but that Paſſage out of Romans, which will not be found inconſiſtent with Ezekiel's Teſtimony, on which my Argument was grounded.

Rom. 5. 19. The whole Verſe was thus, For as by one Man's Diſobedience many were made Sinners, ſo by the Obedience of one, ſhall many be made Righteous; which, if the whole Chapter be well conſidered, is no more than this; that as Adam, Repreſentative of Mankind (from whence he had that Name) was he by whom Sin entred into the whole World; So Chriſt was He, by whoſe Coming, and Obedience, Righteouſneſs had an Entrance to the Juſtification of many. In ſhort, the Work Chriſt had to do was two-fold. 1ſt. To remit, forgive, or juſtifie from the Imputation of Sin paſt, all ſuch as truly repented, believed and obeyed him. And 2ly, by his Power and Spirit operating in the Hearts of ſuch to deſtroy and remove the very Ground and Nature of Sin, whereby to make an End of Sin and finiſh Tranſgreſſion preſent and to come; that is, the firſt removes the Guilt, the Second the very Cauſe of it. Now I grant, that his Obedience unto Death was in Order to make Men righteous, becauſe it was in the Nature of a Sacrifice, by which God teſtified unto the World his Deſire of Reconciliation through the Remiſſion of the Sins that are paſt, which was held forth, and came, and was confirmed by that Obedience, even to the Death of the Croſs; In which Senſe the Juſt ſuffered for the Unjuſt, and whilſt we were Sinners, Chriſt dyed: He was made Sin, that is, to take away Sin from us, (an Hebraiſm) and he juſtifieth the Ungodly, that is, remitteth the Ungodly upon Repentance, and bore our Iniquities, or bore away our Iniquities, that is, by this Offering for Sin, was Remiſſion for Sins paſt, declared and affirmed and declared unto all, as an Univerſal Propitiation; For God was in all theſe Sufferings, ſhewing forth his Love and reconciling the World unto himſelf, not imputing their Treſpaſſes unto them. But ſtill Repentance was that which brought Home the general Pardon promulgated, in and by that holy Offering up of his Body once for all, unto every particular Soul. Thus by the Obedience of that one Man, even to the Death of Rom. 2. 3, 4. 5. Chap. 2 Cor. 5. 19.

* As wholly without us

It is to be underſtood of a Righteouſneſs wrought by Chriſt's Power within, when I ſpeak of being juſtified; that is, made Juſt by it.

the Croſs, many come to be made Righteous, that is, Juſtified from many Offences, ſee Rom. 5. 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17. But if this firſt Part of Juſtification, which is Remiſſion of Sin, be not obtainable by any, however General it be in Chriſt, without Repentance from Dead Works, which implies Faith, Contrition, and Amendment of Life, how miſerably is T. Hicks out, who brings this very Scripture we are upon, to prove that we are compleatly juſtified (which takes in both Forgiveneſs of Sin paſt, and a being inwardly made Juſt through the caſting out of Sin by the Juſt and Holy Power and Spirit of God appearing in the Heart and Conſcience) by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs, Wholly Without Us.

I grant, that Forgiveneſs of Sin is God's free Love, meer Grace, and rich Mercy, declared in and by Chriſt Jeſus to the World, and that this Grace abounded unto all; for He was a Propitiation, not only for the Sins of thoſe that believe, but of the whole World; yet the whole Benefit thereof ſhould never redound unto any, whilſt alienated from God by wicked Works.

Peter preached another Doctrine: For though Chriſt dyed for the Ungodly, yet they were not thereby Juſtified, that is, pardon'd for Sin paſt, while Unrepentant. Peter ſays Acts 3. 38. Repent, and then they ſhould receive Remiſſion of Sins. Now I would fain know how this Repentance is wrought, by which, as a Condition, any come to have an Intereſt in that great Pardon held out to the whole World; Is the Spirit of Chriſt unconcern'd in it? Can we think One Good Thought of our ſelves? Are we not altogether degenerated Plants of a Strange Vine? By Nature Children of Wrath, &c. Is not this frequently confeſt by the Profeſſors of Religion in our Times, and the moſt affected Piece of their Righteouſneſs too? Well then! If we cannot Repent of our ſelves, and that Repentance is a Condition, and that it is in the Soul, and that it cannot be there without the Spirit of Chriſt work it, tell me plainly, if ſomething is not to be done Within, and therefore of the Nature of Inward Righteouſneſs, before any Benefit be procured, deriv'd or receiv'd from Chriſt's Death and Sufferings to any particular Perſon. This is cloſe to the Point, for therefore it is that we affirm, That ſuch as go on to tranſgreſs againſt the Law of the Spirit of Life, and ſo diſobey the Light, and grieve the Holy Spirit by wicked Works, are not in that State Juſtified; I mean now, that they are not ſo much as forgiven, and leaſt of all, that they ſhould be look'd upon as compleatly Juſtified, that is, by Qualification and Participation of the Divine Nature, truly and inwardly made Juſt; ſince it would be to ſay, That by the Obedience of One, many ſhall be made Righteous, who notwithſtanding remain Diſobedient and Rebellious to God's Grace which has appeared unto them. We do ſay again, that ſuch a Doctrine, ſo ſpeaking Peace to a State of Sin and Death, and ſhutting out an inward Work, many Ways neceſſary to the Forgiveneſs of Sin paſt, or Daily Acceptance with God, Is no leſs than the Doctrine of Devils, and the worſt they have to propagate, to the Diſhonour of God, and the Eternal State of People's Souls. In ſhort, here lyes the groſs Miſtake of our Adverſaries; they make the Sufferings of Chriſt which peculiarly relate to the firſt Part of Juſtification, Remiſſion of Sins paſt, to be that which has anſwered, not only for Sins paſt, but preſent and to come, ſo as to acquit them from all Inward Work as neceſſary to Juſtification compleatly taken, contrary to expreſs Scripture, Rom. 5. 25. and the Great End of Chriſt's Spiritual Manifeſtation in his People. There might be much more ſaid in this Matter, but becauſe he thinks I have not made a little for him, in my Book truly entituled, The Sandy Foundation Shaken, and that I am to be ſhort, I ſhall proceed to diſpatch what remains, as God ſhall enable me.

To that Anſwer he gave out of the Romans, (By the Obedience of One, &c.) already with other Scriptures explained and vindicated from his Abuſe of them, he makes me thus to anſwer him.

Quaker. It is a great Abomination to ſay, God ſhall condemn and puniſh his Innocent Son, that he having ſatisfied for our Sins, we might be juſtified by the Imputation of his perfect Righteouſneſs. O why ſhould this horrible Thing be contended for by Chriſtians? Penn. ibid. p. 25. 30.

To which he returns, Chr. How now Mr. Penn, Is the Doctrine of Chriſt's Suffering for Sinners, to make Satisfaction to Divine Juſtice, an horrible Thing, and an Abomination to you? Do you conſider what you ſay? And thus brings me in anſwering him. Qu. This I do ſay, that the Conſequences of ſuch a Doctrine are both Irreligious and Irrational. Penn, ibid. p. 16. Now that he has dealt Blaſphemouſly with God, and Injuriouſly with me, as well as that he has given me no Account of his Thoughts upon the Error he makes me guilty of, in Caſe I held it, beſides that impertinent Queſtion, plainly appears.

Firſt, he has dealt Blaſphemouſly with God, in calling Chriſt's Suffering, God's Condemning and Puniſhing his Innocent Son, &c. which his Cenſure of my to Phraſing their Opinion, manifeſtly implies. Now I appeal to all Impartial People, which of us Two is moſt to be blamed, I that confeſs to Chriſt's Sufferings as the Effect of God's Love, thereby not to ſatisfy himſelf as a Revenger, or as if he could not forgive (for none of that is in the Verſe at all) which yet is in their Sordid Opinion, but as a God full of Mercy, Forgiveneſs and Pardon to all True Penitents, to declare to the World His Free Remiſſion of Sins, and that He would not impute their Iniquities unto them, if they would Repent, Believe, and Obey; or T. Hicks, who holds that God Condemn'd and Puniſh'd His Innocent Son for other Folk's Sins, that He might be ſatisfied; for Pardon He neither could, nor would: And, which is moſt abſurd, Chriſt being the ſame God, he at once makes him the Party ſatisfying, and the Party ſatisfied, which is abſurd and impoſſible; beſides, 'tis ſuch a Satisfaction as hath paid all Debts, paſt, preſent, and to come, whereby all inward Righteouſneſs, though of Chriſt's Working, is not neceſſary to Juſtification in any Kind.

Secondly, He has dealt Injuriouſly with me, and that in Two Reſpects. 1. In not ſtating the Doctrine truly, which I oppoſed, and my Words at length, that they might ſpeak for themſelves (But in that Caſe, perhaps he thought he ſhould have been obliged to anſwer them, a Thing he every where ſeems afraid of, his Trade is Cavilling.) And 2dly; In that he brings this Paſſage which oppoſed ſuch a Satisfaction, as is ſaid, to have paid for Sins paſt, preſent, and to come, to anſwer a Scripture which concerns Juſtification, and that Part of it too, which relates to Remiſſion of Sins; inſinuating, that I make Men's own Works ſufficient to Juſtification in the firſt Senſe, I mean, Remiſſion; and in the ſecond Senſe, I mean, Daily Acceptance upon being made Juſt; and laſtly, That I overturn all the Righteouſneſs, Death and Sufferings of Chriſt; whilſt in Truth and Sincerity of Soul, 1. By Juſtification, not by another's Righteouſneſs Wholly Without, I only meant, That it was Chriſt's Righteouſneſs wrought in us, and not our own, which made inwardly Juſt, and which gave Daily Acceptance, and brought into the Heavenly Fellowſhip with the Father and with the Son; the Juſtification then intended by me. 2dly, Since God has made His Truth known to me, I have ever underſtood Chriſt's being offered up, to ſignify the carrying away of Sin, the bearing away of Iniquity, that by which God declared Remiſſion and Forgiveneſs of Sins paſt to all that Repented. And this Juſtification, called Rom. 4. ver. 5. 6, 7, 8. God's not Imputing Sin, I have ever owned to be the Free Unmerited Love of God to the World; And was not that Juſtification by me ſpoken of in the Paſſage cited? 3dly, That which I oppoſed was ſo rigid a Satisfaction, as made it abſolutely unavoidable or neceſſary in God to require a Satisfaction, thereby robbing Him of the Power of His Free Mercy and Loving-Kindneſs to remit and paſs by, and that Chriſt did not anſwer or pay, by the Act of His Suffering, for Sins paſt, preſent, and to come; but as he declared Remiſſion by His Blood for the Sins paſt of the whole World, the Beginning of His Work; ſo that He doth by His Power and Spirit, ſubdue, deſtroy, and caſt out Sin out of the Hearts of all who believe in Him, whereby their Conſciences come to be made Pure, and they ſanctified throughout in Body, Soul and Spirit, which neceſſitates to Good Life, and ſpeaks no Peace to the Wicked in their Wickedneſs, nor yet to the ſlothful, formal, and carnal Profeſſor of Religion. Therefore ſuch rage, and imagine a vain Thing againſt us.

That the Conſequences of the common Notion of both Satisfaction and Juſtification are Irreligious and Irrational, though what has been ſaid might ſuffice with Sober and Impartial Readers, yet I may anon have farther Occaſion to prove it. In the mean Time, he tells the World, That William Penn, in Anſwer to this Queſtion, How did Chriſt fulfil the Law for Sinners? ſays, That Chriſt fulfilled the Law Only as our Pattern or Example, Sand. Found. p. 26. In which he has done exactly like himſelf; for if he can find the Word Only there, or ſuch an Anſwer to ſuch a Queſtion, or the Matter ſtrictly contained in that Queſtion, he has not wronged me; but ſure I am there is no ſuch Queſtion, and as ſure, that the Fulfilling of the Law, was not the Subject treated on, and very certain, that the Word Only was not there; therefore he is a Forger. That which I ſaid, with the Scripture on which it was grounded, follows, If ye keep my Commandments ye ſhall abide in my Love, even as I have kept my Father's Commandments and abide in His Love.

Chap. IX.

‘ [From whence this Argument doth naturally ariſe; If none are truly Juſtified that abide not in Chriſt's Love, and that none abide in His Love that keep not His Commandments, then conſequently none are Juſtified but ſuch as keep His Commandments. Beſides, here is the moſt palpable Oppoſition to an Imputative Righteouſneſs that may be; For Chriſt is ſo far from telling them of ſuch a Way of being Juſtified, as that he informeth them, the Reaſon why he abode in his Father's Love, was his Obedience; and is ſo far from telling them of their being Juſtified, whilſt not abiding in his Love, by Virtue of his Obedience imputed unto them, that unleſs they keep his Commands, and obey for themſelves, they ſhall be ſo remote from an Acceptance, as wholly to be caſt out; in all which Chriſt is but our Example.] Now that this concerned not the Whole Law Chriſt came to fulfil; The whole * Law he fulfilled, the Place of Scripture quoted, the Nature and Matter of the Argument clearly proves. Next, If Chriſt had been other than our Example in that Caſe, then he ſhould have fulfilled his own Commandments in our ſtead, who from Obeying his Father's, taught us, our Duty was to obey His. And ſuppoſing that he could have kept his own Commandments, and obey'd himſelf for us, or in our ſtead, it would have followed, (1.) That we needed not to have kept them, unleſs they were to be obſerved twice over. And that (2ly.) in not keeping of them, we had been notwithſtanding juſtified from his alone Fulfilling of them; unleſs his Anſwering them had been Inſufficient. The firſt of which, if I underſtand any Thing, opens a Door to all Licentiouſneſs (however Upright ſome may be in their Intentions to the contrary) And the laſt ſtrikes dead their own Opinion of the Sufficiency of Chriſt's Perſonal Obedience, to perform all needful on our Account; From hence he undertakes to charge me with the Merit of Works. My Words at length are theſe; which he thought good to conceal.

‘ Was not Abraham juſtified by Works when he offered Iſaac? and by Works was Faith made perfect; and the Scripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, Abraham believed God, and it was imputed to him for Righteouſneſs. By which we muſt not conceive, as do the dark Imputarians of this Age, that Abraham's Offering Perſonally was not a Juſtifying Righteouſneſs, but that God was pleaſed to account it ſo; ſince God never accounts a Thing that which it is not; nor was there any Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs to Abraham; but on the contrary, his Perſonal Obedience was the † Ground of that juſt Imputation; and therefore that any ſhould be juſtified from the Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs, not inherent, or actually poſſeſſed by them, is both Ridiculous and Dangerous.—Ridiculous, ſince it is to ſay, A Man is Rich to the Value of a Thouſand Pounds, whilſt he is not really or perſonally worth a Groat, from the Imputation of another; who has it all in his Poſſeſſion: Dangerous, becauſe it begets a confident Perſwaſion in many People of their being Juſtified, whilſt in Captivity to thoſe Luſts, whoſe Reward is Condemnation; whence came that uſual Saying amongſt many Profeſſors of Religion, That God looks not on them as they are in * Themſelves, but as they are in Chriſt; not conſidering, that none can be in Chriſt, who are not New Creatures, which thoſe cannot be reputed, who have not diſrobed themſelves of their Old Garments, but are ſtill immantled with the Corruptions of the Old Man.

* That is, within them as to Qualification.

In all which I ſee nothing Unſober or Unſound. But he thinks he has caught me faſt in my Caveat againſt Popery, where in diſtinguiſhing betwixt Grace and Merit, I ſay, Grace is a Free Gift requiring nothing; and now aſk, ſays he, was not Abraham Juſtified by Works? and that Good Works may be ſaid to procure, deſerve or obtain, Apol. 198. Is this writ like an Infallible Dictator? Thus far T. H.

Ibid. p. 52, 53.

There is an old Proverb, That ſome love the Treaſon, but hate the Traytor. No Man that writes, rants it more imperiouſly than Tho. Hicks. It is hard to ſay, whether his Diſhoneſty or his Impudence be the greater. I think, I never uſed Thomas Hicks ſo ill, or any of his Way, as to deſerve ſo many Scoffing Taunts, Baſe Detractions, and Down-right Scurrilities from his Hand; But let that paſs. To the Point. Hear what I have ſaid in the Caveat. p. 12.

‘ Grace and Merit, as ſtated by Calviniſts and Papiſts, are taken for Faith without Works; and Works without Faith; like the two Poles, Doctrines the moſt oppoſite: Now Rewardableneſs is neither, but ſomething in the middle, and indeed

* He was our Example in Holineſs, though not in his Ending Types and Shadows.

† God's Love is not excluded, nor his Power that ſo wrought in Abraham's Heart.

‘ the moſt true; for Grace is a Free Gift, requiring nothing: Merit is a Work proportionable to the Wages: Rewardableneſs, is a Work without which God will not beſtow his Favour, and yet not the Meritorious Cauſe; for that there is no Proportion betwixt the Work that is finite, and temporary, and the Reward which is infinite and eternal; in which Senſe both the Creature obeys the Commands of God, and does not Merit, but Obtain only; and God rewards the Creature, and yet ſo, as that he freely gives too.

Now what Contradiction is there in all this? I plainly diſtinguiſh the Word Merit in the ſtricteſt Acceptation of it, from that which is truly Scriptural, reſpecting us at leaſt. That I did not mention Merit in my Sandy Foundation ſhaken, the Book proves. Is there no Difference between obtaining the Juſtifying Preſence of God by the Fruits of the Spirit in our Heart and Lives, and ſtrictly meriting his Acceptance of us by Works, and thoſe of our own making too, as what T. H. doth wickedly ſuggeſt? I ſay, ‘ Abraham was juſtified in offering up his Son, becauſe he had been condemned if he had diſobeyed. But ſays T. Hicks, He was juſtified before. And why was not his whole Life mention'd to his Juſtification? But I muſt tell T. H. that as among Men the Will is taken for the Deed, ſo the Lord finding Abraham right in his Heart, that he believed, and would obey; he was as much juſtified therein, as if he had actually done it. We have cauſe to believe T. Hicks never knew what the Conſequence of that working Faith, and offering up an Iſaac to God is. Nor was it needful to recite the whole of his Life: Meaſures are frequently taken by ſome eminent Trial. If he was accepted, in that, Obedience being the Condition, where that was before, he was before accepted no doubt. But ſays he, ſee the Caveat, p. 12. and Apol. p. 198. How do they agree? Truly very well: For Grace is free, requiring nothing. How? Nothing at all? By no Means. How then is it free? Grace is free, becauſe it was the good Pleaſure of God both to give Remiſſion of Sins, and Eternal Life to as many as ſhould Repent, Believe and Obey to the End, and thereby come to be conformed to the Image of his Son. But may T. Hicks ſay; Is Repenting nothing? Believing nothing? Obeying nothing? No, T. H. not one jot of Merit in all that; It is the Great Grace of God, to give us Eternal Life upon ſo ſmall Conditions. They obtain it; but that is God's good Pleaſure, and no Purchaſe, therefore Grace ſtill; All that is our Duty; the Reward is Free; God giveth it, but chuſes a Way by which to do it. If T. H. will underſtand Grace, as my Caveat condemns it, I cannot help that; ſure I am, I never writ ſuch Doctrine as my Faith, and therefore no Contradiction to my ſelf, whatever it may be to him. But ſays he, Your Apology ſpeaks that good Works may be ſaid to procure, deſerve, or obtain, &c.

My Apology as my ſelf, and other Books, are not Apology enough for me and my Friends againſt ſuch Envious Perverters as T. H. though I doubt not but they may be effectually ſuch with more moderate Perſons; thus it ſpeaks,

‘ The Word Merit, ſo much ſnarled at, allows a two fold Signification; the Firſt, a Propoſition or Equality betwixt the Work and Wages, which is the ſtricteſt Senſe, and that which he (S. Fiſher) leaſt of all intended; The Second, ſomething that may be ſaid to procure, And in ſome Senſe to deſerve or obtain, and ſo good Works do; ſince without them there is no Acceptance with God, nor Title to Eternal Life.

Where it is obſervable, how baſely he has left out, both my abſolute Denial of the ſtrict Senſe of the Word MERIT, and thoſe qualifying and diſtinguiſhing Words, which come after Procure, and before Deſerve, namely, And in ſome Senſe, to deſerve or obtain, with the laſt Clauſe. Certain it is, that whatever Senſe I had, T. Hicks took me in the worſt he could invent, yea in that very Senſe, which all along I have moſt particularly refuſed and condemned; A Baſeneſs, and Piece of Forgery, unworthy of any Man pretending to Good Conſcience!

But he proceeds ſtill, and much after the ſame Manner; he would have People believe, That we aſſert the Ground of our Rejoycing and Acceptance to be not in, and from the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt imputed to us by Faith (where obſerve, that Wholly without us, is omitted, to render us Deniers of Chriſt's Righteouſneſs in any Senſe) but only in a Righteouſneſs inherent in us, and done by us; Which great Untruth he gives the Lye to, in his own Book. But becauſe he pretends to fetch this out of my S. F. Shaken, p. 27. let's hear what I have ſaid. But let every Man prove his own Work, and then ſhall he have Rejoycing in himſelf alone, and not in another. Be not deceived, for whatſoever a Man ſoweth that ſhall he reap.

‘ If Rejoycing, and Acceptance with God, or the contrary, are to be reaped from the Work that a Man ſoweth, either to the Fleſh, or to the Spirit, then is the Doctrine of Acceptance, and Ground of Rejoycing from the Works of another utterly excluded; every Man reaping according to what He hath ſown, and bearing His Own Burden.

The Queſtion will now be, Whether I meant this of the Creature alone, or by the Aſſiſtance of God's Holy Spirit, by which his Children are led?

Concerning which I need ſay no more, than what that Book ſpeaks in my Defence, yea, that very Page, from whence he fetches this pretended Dangerous Aſſertion. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, are the Sons of God.

‘ How clearly will it appear to any but a Cavilling and Tenacious Spirit; that Man can be no farther * Juſtified, than as he becomes obedient to the Spirit's Leadings; For if none can be a Son of God, but He that's led by the Spirit of God, then none can be juſtified without being led by the Spirit of God; becauſe none can be Juſtified but he that is a Son of God: ſo that the Way to Juſtification and Son-ſhip, is through Obedience to the Spirit's Leadings.

* Juſtification not as Remiſſion, but as made Juſt.

By all which it appears, that I am not ſpeaking of Remiſſion of Sins, as if by our Conformity to the Spirit it ſelf, we could ſo juſtifie our ſelves, No; but that by being Led by the Spirit of God, and Fulfilling of his Royal Law, Men come to be accepted, as Children of God; and the Ground of their Joy is from their own Experience of the Work of God in them. What was it made the Faithful Servants that improved their Talents be accepted; and gave an Entrance to the Wiſe Virgins into the Bride-groom's Chamber? Was it not the Improvements of the one, and the Oyl in the Lamps of the other? And if T. Hicks come not to know that Holy State, he ſhall never know Eternal Rejoycings, that is the Word of Truth to him; For ſuch as he ſows, ſuch ſhall he reap, in God's Day of Account. Wherefore that Scripture by him brought out of Iſaiah makes greatly for us; Surely ſhall one ſay, in (or from) the Lord have I Righteouſneſs; that is, not in or from my ſelf; In the Lord ſhall all the Seed of Iſrael be juſtified, and ſhall Glory. Is there no being in the Life, Power, Nature and Virtue of that Seed? then no Salvation. Alſo that of the Apoſtle Paul to the Corinthians, Chriſt is made unto us Righteouſneſs; wherefore let him that glorieth Glory in the Lord. For this I affirm, and that with Boldneſs and Truth, that Iſaiah and Paul ſpeak of a Real and Inward Righteouſneſs, not the leſs in the Creature, becauſe not of the Creature, but of Chriſt.

1 Cor. 1. 30, 31.

Was not Paul's Righteouſneſs the Son of God revealed in him? that everlaſting Righteouſneſs, that Chriſt, binding and caſting out of the Strong Man, making an End of Sin, and finiſhing of Tranſgreſſion, he brought and brings into the Soul? For that their Righteouſneſs ſhould be in or from him, or that he ſhould be made their Righteouſneſs, and they never know a being cloathed and made Righteous by it, were Abſurd and Impoſſible. In ſhort, As we know no Righteouſneſs out of Chriſt our Lord, ſo knowing his Appearance in us, and that Grace for Grace, received of his Fulneſs, in whom are hid the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge, and being obedient thereunto, we know and Witneſs a Participation of his Everlaſting Righteouſneſs, Holy Wiſdom and Saving Knowledge, which qualifie and adorn the Soul for the Bleſſed Marriage of the Lamb, who takes away the Sins of the World; not only the Guilt of Sins paſt by Remiſſion upon Repentance, but as a Redeemer from under the Power and Nature of Sin preſent and to come, through the Virtue of his Holy Life in the Soul, which is the Compleating of Juſtification, and the Thing now inſiſted on.

Laſtly, he gives under the Quakers name, as a dangerous Doctrine, this Paſſage; Juſtification goes not before, but is conſequential to the mortifying of Luſts, and the Sanctification of the Soul. Penn, Sand. Foun. Sh. p. 27. To which he anſwers. Doth not this import that a Man muſt be formally juſt before he be juſtified? I would aſk whether Remiſſion of Sins be not one Part of Juſtification? Qua. I ſuppoſe it may. Chr. Can one be forgiven that is not Guilty? It looks like a Contradiction, to pardon one that is Innocent. Certainly he that is pardoned muſt be a Sinner. To all which I return thus much; Were he True and honeſt in his Reaſoning, I had been to blame for my Ignorance, and T. Hicks to be commended for his Anſwer; but he dodges baſely. He would avoid my Argument about the ſecond Part of Juſtification, by ſuggeſting that I meant it of the firſt, to wit, Remiſſion of Sins, as much as if he had ſaid; What, muſt all Sin be mortified before a Man be pardoned his old Score? and can a Man's own Good Works ſo remit, Cancel or Juſtifie? But his Sleight will not do. I have often declared that upon Repentance God doth not impute paſt Ini-

Iniquity to any, therefore that Part of his Anſwer which ſeems moſt ſmart upon me, that is, Can one be forgiven that is not Guilty? &c. vaniſheth of Courſe; for the Queſtion is not, Whether Man in his natural Eſtate is Guilty before God, and ſuch can be no otherwiſe ſo juſtified, that is, Remitted, than by the free Love of God, which is the firſt Part of Juſtification, as David ſpeaks, Bleſſed is the Man unto whom the Lord will not impute Sin. But whether Men are daily accepted as Children of God, redeemed, and ſaved of the Lord, and juſtified as ſuch, in his Preſence, farther than as they come to be led by his Holy Spirit, and know Victory over Sin? which is the ſecond Part of Juſtification. So that he did diſhoneſtly with me, to ſuggeſt my Denial of Remiſſion of Sins paſt, upon any other Score than the Mortification of Sin in the Party ſo pardoned: For though Sin may not be mortified, yet if there be a Foundation of true Repentance laid, the Guilt of former Iniquities, I have often ſaid, is not imputed. It was therefore very unfairly done of him, from Aſſerting daily Acceptance, and Fellowſhip with God, to be the Conſequence of a Self-denying and mortified Life through the powerful Working of the Spirit of Chriſt in Man, to infer, that before this Work was done, there could be no Remiſſion of Sins paſt; as if it were the procuring Cauſe of Pardon, and not the free Love of God upon Repentance. In ſhort, it is to ſay, that becauſe I deny Men may be juſtified in the ſecond Senſe, without being made truly and really Juſt; that therefore Men are to be made Juſt and Innocent before they are forgiven; which is Juſtification in the firſt Senſe. And thus has he dodg'd diſingenuouſly with me throughout this Point: Where I meant by Juſtification, Remiſſion of Sins, he has run it the other Way; And when I have underſtood it of a State of Fellowſhip and daily Acceptance with God, then he has taken it for Remiſſion, with manifeſt Deſign, to render me as confus'd, contradictory and unſcriptural, as he could; but all that lights upon himſelf, and I doubt not but in the end it will appear, that I have contended for the Juſtification of Life, whilſt his Aims will have been at nothing more in all his Buſtle, than to promote a Juſtification in a State of Death, where the indwelling Life, Power and Virtue of Chriſt, which gives to live to God in the Nearneſs of Life, cannot be enjoyed nor known: elſe, what Means his reputing that Aſſertion in my Sandy Foundation ſhaken, ſo Erroneous, namely, without Good Works there is no Acceptance with God, which, without any Wrong to him, cauſes me to believe, that it is his Faith, that Men may be accepted with God without Good Works; and conſequently that they are not neceſſary to Salvation. I wiſh for his Sake, more than mine own, he had been no more Injurious to me, and the Truth I have defended, than I have been to him, in expreſſing but the Natural Reſult and Tendency of his Doctrine.

I ſhall now be as good as my Word, and that is, to produce an Argument or two againſt the Common Doctrines of rigid Satisfaction and Juſtification, as they have been oppoſed by me in this ſhort Diſcourſe, and that out of my Book called, The Sandy Foundation Shaken, becauſe it has been moſt in this Adverſary's Eye; That if he thinks fit to reply, he may have ſomething elſe to employ his Mind about than to write Dialogues filled with Lyes, Shifts, Forgeries, Scoffs, Impudence and Scurrility.

Of SATISFACTION.

1. Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth Iniquity, and paſſeth by the Tranſgreſſion of the Remnant of his Heritage? He retaineth not his Anger for ever: becauſe he delighteth in Mercy. Micah. 7. 18. [Can there be a more expreſs Paſſage to clear, not only the Poſſibility, but real Inclinations in God to pardon Sin, and not retain his Anger for ever? Since the Prophet ſeems to challenge all other Gods to try their Excellency by his God, herein deſcribing the Supremacy of his Power and Super-Excellency of his Nature, that he pardoneth Iniquity, and retaineth not his Anger for ever: ſo that if the Satisfactioniſts ſhould aſk the Queſtion, Who is a God like unto ours, that cannot pardon Iniquity, nor paſs by Tranſgreſſion, but retain his Anger until ſome-body make him Satisfaction? I anſwer, Many amongſt the harſh and ſevere Rulers of the Nation; but as for my God, he is exalted above them all, upon the Throne of his Mercy, who pardoneth Iniquity, and retaineth not his Anger for ever, but will have Compaſſion upon us.]

2. And forgive us our Debts, as we forgive our Debtors. Mat. 6. 12. [Where nothing can be more obvious than that which is forgiven, is not paid: And if it is our Duty to forgive without a Satisfaction receiv'd, and that God is to forgive us as we forgive them, then is a Satisfaction totally excluded. Chriſt farther para-phraſes upon that Part of his Prayer, v. 14. For if you forgive their Treſpaſſes, your Heavenly Father will alſo forgive you. Where he as well argues the Equity of God's Forgiving them, from their Forgiving others, as he encourages them to forgive others, from the Example of God's Mercy in forgiving them; which is more amply expreſt in Chap. 18. where the Kingdom of Heaven (that conſiſts in Righteouſneſs) is repreſented by a King; Who upon his Debtor's Petition, had Compaſſion, and forgave him; but the ſame treating his Fellow-Servant without the leaſt Forbearance, the King condemned his Unrighteouſneſs, and delivered him over to the Tormenters. But how had this been a Fault in the Servant, if his King's Mercy had not been propoſed for his Example? How moſt unworthy therefore is it of God, and Blaſphemous may I juſtly term it, for any Man to aſſert that Forgiveneſs impoſſible to God, which is not only poſſible, but enjoin'd to Men.]

Conſequences Irreligious and Irrational.

1. That it's Unlawful and Impoſſible for God Almighty to be Gracious and Merciful, or to pardon Tranſgreſſors; than which, What's more Unworthy of God?

2. That God was inevitably compelled to this Way of ſaving Men; the higheſt Affront to his incontroulable Nature.

3. That it was Unworthy of God to Pardon, but not to inflict Puniſhment on the Innocent, or require a Satiſfaction, where there was nothing due.

4. It doth not only diſ-acknowledge the true Virtue, and real Intent of Chriſt's Life and Death, but intirely deprives God of that Praiſe which is owing to his greateſt Love and Goodneſs.

5. It repreſents the Son more Kind and Compaſſionate than the Father; whereas if both be the ſame God, then either the Father is as loving as the Son, or the Son as angry as the Father.

6. It robs God of the Gift of his Son for our Redemption (which the Scriptures attribute to the unmerited Love he had for the World) in affirming the Son purchaſed that Redemption from the Father, by the Gift of himſelf to God, as our compleat Satiſfaction.

7. Since Chriſt could not pay what was not his own, it follows that in the Payment of his own, the Caſe ſtill remains equally grievous; Since the Debt is not hereby abſolv'd or forgiven, but transferred only; and by conſequence we are no better provided for Salvation than before, owing that now to the Son, which was once owing to the Father.

8. It no Way renders Men beholding, or in the leaſt oblig'd to God; ſince by their Doctrine he would not have abated us, nor did he Chriſt, the laſt Farthing, ſo that the Acknowledgments are peculiarly the Son's: which deſtroys the whole Current of Scripture Teſtimony, for his Good-will towards Men.—O the Infamous Portraiture this Doctrine draws of the Infinite Goodneſs! Is this your Retribution, O Injurious Satiſfactioniſts?

9. That God's Juſtice is ſatisfied for Sins paſt, preſent, and to come, whereby God and Chriſt have loſt both their Power of injoyning Godlineſs, and Prerogative of puniſhing Diſobedience; for what is once paid, is not revocable; and if Puniſhment ſhould arreſt any for their Debts, it either argues a Breach on God's or Chriſt's Part, or elſe that it hath not been ſufficiently ſolv'd, and the Penalty compleatly ſuſtain'd by another; forgetting that every one muſt appear before the Judgment-Seat of Chriſt, to receive according to the Things done in the Body, Rom. 14. 12. 2 Cor. 15. 10. Yea, every one muſt give an Account of himſelf to God. But many more are the groſs Abſurdities and Blaſphemies, that are the genuine Fruits of this ſo confidently believ'd Doctrine of Satiſfaction.

Of JUSTIFICATION.

1. Not every one that ſaith unto me Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doth the Will of my Father. Whoſoever heareth theſe Sayings of mine, and doth them, I will liken him unto a Wiſe Man which built his Houſe upon a Rock, &c. Mat. 7. 21. 24, 25. [How very fruitful are the Scriptures of Truth in Teſtimonies againſt this abſurd and dangerous Doctrine; theſe Words ſeem to import a two-fold Righteouſneſs, the firſt conſiſts in Sacrifice, the laſt in Obedience; the one makes a Talking, the other a Doing Chriſtian. I, in ſhort, argue thus: If none can enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but they that do the Father's ther's Will, then none are juſtified, but they who do the Father's Will, becauſe none can enter into the Kingdom, but ſuch as are juſtified. Since therefore there can be no Admittance had without Performing that Righteous Will, and Doing thoſe Holy and Perfect Sayings, Alas ! to what Value will an imputative Righteouſneſs amount, when a poor Soul ſhall awake polluted in his Sin, by the haſty Calls of Death to make it's Appearance before the Judgment-Seat, where 'tis impoſſible to juſtify the Wicked, or that any ſhould eſcape uncondemned, but ſuch as do the Will of God.]

2. For not the Hearers of the Law are juſt before God, but the Docrs of the Law ſhall be juſtified. [From whence how unanſwerably may I obſerve, unleſs we become Docrs of that Law, which Chriſt came not to deſtroy, but, as our Example, to fulfil, we can never be juſtified before God; wherefore Obedience is ſo abſolutely neceſſary, that ſhort of it there can be no Acceptance; Nor let any Fancy that Chriſt hath ſo fulfilled it for them, as to exclude their Obedience from being requiſite to their Acceptance, but only as their Pattern, For unleſs ye follow me, ſaith Chriſt, ye cannot be my Diſciples: And it is not only repugnant to Reaſon, but in this Place particularly refuted; for if Chriſt had fulfilled it on our Behalf, and we not enabled to follow his Example, there would not be Doers, but One Doer only of the Law juſtified before God. In ſhort, if without Obedience to the Righteous Law none can be juſtified, then all the Hearing of the Law, with but the meer Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs, whilſt actually a Breaker of it, is excluded as not juſtifying before God. If you fulfil the Royal Law, ye do well; ſo ſpeak ye, and ſo do, as they that ſhall be judged thereby.]

3. If ye live after the Fleſh, ye ſhall die; but if ye through the Spirit do mortify the Deeds of the Body, ye ſhall live. Rom. 8. 13. [No Man can be dead and juſtified before God, for ſo He may be juſtified that lives after the Fleſh; therefore they only can be juſtified that are alive; from whence this follows, If the Living are juſtified and not the Dead, and that none can live to God, but ſuch as have mortified the Deeds of the Body through the Spirit, then none can be juſtified but they who have mortified the Deeds of the Body through the Spirit; ſo that * Juſtification does not go before, but is ſubſequential to the Mortification of Luſts, and Sanctification of the Soul through the Spirit's Operation.]

* Juſtification is compleatly taken.

Jam. 2. 21. 24

4. Was not Abraham our Father juſtified by Works, when he had offered Iſaac his Son upon the Altar? Ye ſee then how that by Works a Man is juſtified, and not by Faith only. [He that will ſeriouſly peruſe this Chapter, ſhall, doubtleſs, find ſome, to whom this Epiſtle was written, of the ſame Spirit with the Satisfactioniſts and Imputarians of our Time; they fain would have found out a Juſtification from Faith in, and the Imputation of, another's Righteouſneſs; but James, an Apoſtle of the moſt High God, who experimentally knew what true Faith and Juſtification meant, gave them to underſtand from Abraham's Self-denying Example, that unleſs their Faith in the Purity and Power of God's Grace, had that effectual Operation to ſubdue every beloved Luſt, wean from every Delilah, and intirely to reſign and ſacrifice Iſaac himſelf, their Faith was a Fable, or as a Body without a Spirit; and as Righteouſneſs therefore in one Perſon cannot juſtify another from Unrighteouſneſs, ſo whoever now pretend to be juſtified by Faith, whilſt not led and guided by the Spirit into all the Ways of Truth, and Works of Righteouſneſs, their Faith they will find at laſt Fiction.]

Conſequences Irreligious and Irrational.

1. It makes God guilty of what the Scriptures ſay is an Abomination, to wit, that he juſtifieth the Wicked.

2. It makes him look upon Perſons as they are not, or with Reſpect, which is unworthy of his moſt Equal Nature.

3. He is hereby at Peace with the Wicked, (if juſtified whilſt Sinners) who ſaid, There is no Peace to the Wicked.

4. It does not only imply Communion with them here, in an Imperfect State, but ſo to all Eternity; for whom he juſtifieth, them he alſo glorifieth; Rom. 8. 30. Therefore whom he juſtified whilſt Sinners, them he alſo glorified whilſt Sinners.

5. It only ſecures from the Wages, not the Dominion of Sin, whereby ſomething that is ſinful becomes juſtified, and that which defileth, to enter God's Kingdom.

1673. Chap. IX. 6. It renders a Man juſtified and condemn'd, dead and alive, redeemed and not redeemed at the ſame Time; the one by an Imputative Righteouſneſs, the laſt by a Perſonal Unrighteouſneſs.

7. It flatters Men whilſt ſubject to the World's Luſts, with a State of Juſtification, and thereby invalids the very End of Chriſt's Appearance, which was to deſtroy the Works of the Devil, and take away the Sins of the World.

CHAP. X.

Of the Doctrine of Sanctification and Perfection. The Ignorance or Malice of T. Hicks Detected.

Cont. p. 56. OF the Doctrine of Sanctification he has ſeveral Unſanctified Paſſages, though he beſtows not much Time upon that Important Subject; ſome of which I take a little Notice of.

Chriſt. Let us underſtand your Opinion of Sanctification. what it is? Out of Edw. Burroughs he anſwereth himſelf thus: Quak. 'Tis Chriſt. Hence we conclude, to ſay Sanctification is Imperfect in this Life, is as much as to ſay, Chriſt is Imperfect. To which he replies. Chriſt. 'Tis true, 'tis Jeſus Chriſt by his Spirit is the Author and Worker of Sanctification; but will it therefore follow, that the Work of Sanctification in us is Chriſt, or that this Work is perfect in all it's Degrees?

Now let any tell me wherein T. Hicks who frequently inſults over the Grave and Labours of that Faithful Servant of the Lord, could have more groſly miſtaken E. Burroughs, than he has done, on purpoſe, I doubt not, to inſinuate his Belief of the contrary to what he oppoſed. But hear Edw. Burroughs's Words at large in Anſwer to Prieſt Eaton.

"Thou ſayſt, Sanctification is not Perfect in this Life; And the New Man, the "Spirit or Law of the Mind, is that Grace or Imperfect Sanctification: Then Chriſt "is not Perfect in this Life; for He is made of God unto us Sanctification, 1 Cor. 1. 30.

In this it is evident, Firſt, That the Prieſt did not ſo much ſtrike at the Work done in the Creature, as at the Perfection of the Principle, by which the Work ſhould be perfected in the Creature.

2*dly*. E. Burroughs did not in that Place meerly intend the Work of Sanctification, but the Author and Worker of it, who is oftentimes called by the Name of the Work it ſelf, the Cauſe by the Effect, as is plain from the Scripture quoted, in which he uſed but Paul's Words.

How baſely done was it then, in T. Hicks, not only to leave out what the Prieſt aſſerted, but to miſ-conſtrue E. B's Anſwer, and (that ſuch Perverſion might go the more Unqueſtioned) omit the Inſertion of that Scripture, in which Chriſt is by the Apoſtle ſaid to be made Sanctification to the Saints; the Mention of which would have given a clear Underſtanding of E. Burroughs's Anſwer, and broke the Neck of his Ungodly Purpoſe to miſ-repreſent him We ſay, and it was the Faith and Tendency of the Writings of that Juſt Man, 1. To aſſert a Perfect Principle of Righteouſneſs and Sanctification, which is Sanctification and Perfection in the Abſtract. 2. The Poſſibility of being Perfectly Sanctified by it. 3. That ſuch Sanctification, when taken for the Author of it, (who is the Fountain of all Holineſs and Purity) is Compleat and Perfect. 4. But he objects, Why doth the Apoſtle exhort Sanctified Perſons to put off the Old Man, (from Coloſ. 3. 5.) If where the Old Man, the Body of Sin remains, none are Sanctified, as ſaith E. B.

1673. Chap. X.

This indeed is the Drift of the Man, he would be Sanctified whilſt Unſanctified; as Dangerous, as it is Abſurd: For what Thing can be and not be the ſame Thing, at one and the ſame Time? But I deny they were then Sanctified who ſtood in Need of that Reproof and Exhortation, to wit, that they ſhould mortify ſuch Luſts, as Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Inordinate Affection, and Covetouſneſs, which is Idolatry. Sanctifying ſuch are, who are Mortifying: but when Sin is not Mortifying, none are Sanctifying; and where Sin is not Mortified, no Man is Sanctified. We may eaſily ſee, what a Church-Fellowſhip T. H. can allow of, and what a Goſpel-Sanctification it is he pleads for. Can Men be Sanctified, and yet ſo Corrupt? If they can, tell me in what Senſe, and from what they are cleanſed? Is this the End of pleading for Perfection in Degree, to allow theſe Abominable Enormities, as Church-Infirmities? Away, for Shame! But that a perfect Sanctification is no Hereſy, ſuppoſe they had been Sanctified Perſons to whom the Apoſtle wrote, (which could not be, Sanctifying was the moſt) yet, ſince he exhorted them, to put off the Old Man, which Old Man is the Body of Sin, and that when he is off, he is not on, and that the Apoſtle exhorted them not to an Impoſſible Thing, I conclude from his Queſtion, that a State of perfect Sanctification is attainable. He pretended to correct E. B's Extravagancy; but whatever Face he puts upon it, this is the Mark he aims at. To conclude, and ſum up his ungodly Method; E. B. ſpeaks of a perfect Sanctification in Chriſt. T. H. infers, that ſame perfect Sanctification immediately to the Creature; not only confounding the Worker and Work, the Cauſe and the Effect, about which one Piece of Baſeneſs he beſtows not a little Pains; but ſuggeſting thereby, that we deny all Sanctification or Perfection in Degree, and that we are as compleatly Perfect as Chriſt himſelf.

Next, He leaves out thoſe Words that would beſt explain his Mind. And, Laſtly, All his Oppoſition is, becauſe the Quakers are for having Men Sanctify'd before they are accounted ſo, and New Creatures before they ought to be reputed Good Chriſtians; which ſo directly Un-churches and Un-chriſtians T. Hicks, that we may well believe it a main Reaſon for his Implacableneſs againſt them.

CHAP. XI.

Chap. XI.

Of COMMANDS, MOTIONS and MINISTRY. T. Hicks proved Unjuſt to us, and an Enemy to God's Law, Goſpel, the Quakers, and himſelf.

He has not leſs abuſed and bely'd us in theſe three Particulars, than in any thing he has written againſt us, which I ſhall briefly ſhew.

To this Paſſage in E. Burroughs's Works, "That is no Command to me which is E. B's Works p. 47.
"a Command to another, neither did any of the Saints act by a Command that was "given to another, he thus anſwers, Then that Law which forbids Idolatry, Adultery, Murder, Theft and bearing falſe Witneſs, is no Law to you. And after having made this indirect Conſequence, he breaketh forth, Impiouſly Horrid, Ungodly, Irreverent Patronizers of Blaſphemy, Countenancers of ſuch, Novices, Prophane Scribler, and Abundance more.

Now though I have ſaid ſomething to this before, and have largely vindicated that Paſſage againſt J. Faldo, yet I cannot well omit touching here upon it, the Matter being ſo aggravated by this diſingenuous Perſon.

Theſe Commands muſt either relate to Ordinary or Extraordinary Duty; I mean, they muſt either be ſuch Commands, as that of Moſes's going to Pharaoh, Iſaiah's going Naked, Jeremiah's making Yoaks, Amos's going to the King's Chappel; with many more: And here I do affirm with that faithful young Man of God, that the Command which came to them, not coming to another, that other Perſon is not only not warranted, but condemnable, in an Imitation of any of them. If then ſuch Extraordinary Commands, as theſe before-mentioned, muſt not be intended, then thoſe that are Ordinary and Common to Mankind muſt, as Fearing God and working Righteouſneſs towards God, towards their Relations, both Natural and Civil. Now I would aſk T. H. if he believes that Idolatry, Murder, Theft and bearing falſe Witneſs, be not reproved by the Common Light in all Men? if not, T. H. gives the Dial. p. 8.
Lye to all Mankind, and his own Books too; Nay, what is it good for? But if Cont. p. 68.
they be; query, If any can confeſs to one God, love his Neighbour, be Chaſte, be Juſt, and ſpeak Truth in his own and Neighbour's Cauſe, without being thereto oblig- ed by that Light he hath? Did the Gentiles of old the Things contained in the Law, without a Word, Commandment, Law or Light within, inducing them thereto? I perceive T. Hicks owns no Command in himſelf againſt Idolatry, Aultery, Murder, Theft and bearing falſe Witneſs; which is to ſay, if the Scripture did not reſtrain him, he ſhould be guilty of all. Farewel Grace, Spirit, Light, and all Inward Rule or Judge, by which to ſee, taſte, reliſh, and determine of Things. But in this Condition, how knows he that the Scriptures were writ by Inſpiration? If he ſays he was told ſo; I aſk how they knew it? If they ſay they were told ſo too, and ſo upwards; I aſk what Aſſurance can any Man's Say-ſo or Hearſay be in a Matter of ſuch Importance? Nay, Suppoſe I ſhould grant them a true Tradition from the Apoſtles Times, I aſk, How knew they to whom they were writ, that they were the Fruits of Divine Inſpiration? In ſhort, take away all Inward Teſtimony, or the Certainty and Sufficiency of it, and Farewel to all Right Belief of the Scriptures themſelves. Behold the Strait he is run into! But if at laſt T. H. ſhall deſire a little more Room, and acknowledge the Spirit muſt give the Diſcerning, and Reliſh, and moſt Convincing Teſtimony; will it not follow that he believeth the Scriptures, and performeth what may be his Duty therein, upon that Conviction, and nor meerly becauſe written or recommended by any Man whatever?

But he proceeds to prove E. B. as he thinks, an Enemy to God's Commandments, and a very Lyar. The Thing he wickedly, but in vain aims at.

He quotes him thus: “ Quak. You are not dead with Chriſt who are yet ſubject “ to Ordinances, E. B. p. 105. To which hear him. Chriſt. The Spirit of God in the Scriptures aſſures us, that they who are ſubject to, and keep the Commandments of God, are the Children of God, and they who do not are Lyars. See the firſt Epiſtle of John 2. 3, 4. and Chap. 5. 2, 3. Yet this Wicked Man ſaith, That they who are ſubject to Ordinances are not Dead with Chriſt.

Edw. Burroughs's Words are thoſe of the Scriptures of Truth, therefore true Words in themſelves. But how does E. B. aboliſh what God perpetuates? I am ſure I can plainly perceive that T. Hicks does call a Conſcientious, Departed Sufferer, and Priſoner unto Death for the Teſtimony of Jeſus, Wicked Man, becauſe he dared not be guilty of Will-worſhip, by going into any Practice of Worſhip, without the Leading of God's Spirit. Six Particulars comprehend my Anſwer in Brief.

Firſt, That Edward Burroughs only pleaded againſt ſuch Performances, under the Name of Ordinances, as were but Shadowy, * Elementary and Periſhable Things; and which they were not led to by God's Spirit, but took up unwarrantably, and by meer Imitation, and therefore Will-Worſhip.

2. That Thomas Hicks implies by calling him Wicked Man, that it is a Wickedneſs, not to take up any Outward or Viſible Part of Worſhip in a Man's own Will and Time, but to ſtay God's Time, and wait for the Leadings of God's Spirit: From whence I infer, He is no Child of God; for every ſuch one is led by the Spirit of God; therefore no better than an Ape, or Imitator of the Outſides of Religion. In ſhort, a Will-Worſhipper, and not a Worſhipper of God in the Spirit and in the Truth.

3. Let it be obſerved, that there is not ſo much as the leaſt Mention made in all the Epiſtles of that Beloved Diſciple, of any of thoſe Ordinances, which ſtood in Viſible and Corruptible Elements, but the Scope and Tendency of them is the moſt Inward and Spiritual of any of the Apoſtolical Writings: So that to bring in Things of a Temporary, Shadowy Nature, among the Spiritual and Durable Commands of Chriſt under the New Covenant State, without keeping of which Men incur Eternal Wrath, is an Abuſe both of the Apoſtle's Words, and E. B's, which he intended by them to confute.

4. T. Hicks does as good as tell us, That the Commandments of God may be kept without the Spirit of God; ſince he oppoſes the Neceſſity of doing God's Commandments, to our doing them in the Time and Will, and by the Aſſiſtance, of God's Spirit: O Irreligious Man, and Enemy to God's Spirit!

5. It plainly tells us, that Thomas Hicks has no Command in himſelf for doing what he does; that the bare Authority of the Scripture is all he has to induce him, which raſes to the Ground that old Proteſtant Doctrine of Believing the Scriptures from an Inward Teſtimony, and Worſhipping God in Spirit and Truth.

6. Laſtly, If all are Lyars that keep not God's Commandments, and therefore none of his Children, as ſaith the Place, and as aſſerts T. Hicks, then either T. H. keeps God's Commandments, and ſo is Perfect, or he muſt be a Lyar, and ſo no Child of God.

That he keeps not God's Commands I prove.

Such as ſay that Man cannot fulfil, obey or keep the Law, nor the Goſpel; Pray, Preach, Dip, Eat Bread, and Drink Wine, nor live without Sin, keep not God's Commandments; but ſo doth T. H. expreſly or implicitly; therefore he keeps not God's Commandments, and conſequently is a Lyar, and no Child of God; For the Lyar is for the Lake.

To ſay, We deny Obedience to God's Commands, becauſe we deny the preſent Neceſſity or Uſe of their Water, Bread and Wine, will never hurt us; For, Firſt, we know, and they confeſs, that they were in the Beginning uſed as Figures and Shadows of a more Hidden and Spiritual Subſtance.

2. That they were to endure no longer than till the Subſtance was come: Now the Time of the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, Chriſt's Only Baptiſm, therefore called the One Baptiſm, has been long ſince come: Conſequently the other, which was John's was fulfilled, and as becomes a Fore-runner, ought to ceaſe. The like may be ſaid of the Bread and Wine; for as there is but One Baptiſm, ſo there is but One Bread. The Leaſt in the Kingdom was Greater than John's Water Baptiſm; He was to Decreaſe, Chriſt to Increaſe. Jeſus Baptized not with Water: 'Tis true, he bid his Apoſtles, Go, Teach, Baptizing, &c. but no Water is mentioned: But Luke, in the Firſt of the Acts, ſays, that before Chriſt gave that Commiſſion mention'd by Matthew, he ſaid, John Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence; and then comes the Commiſſion in Force, Go, Teach, Baptizing, &c. How? With the Holy Ghoſt; turning People from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God.

3. They were but the more Noble among the Meats and Drinks, and divers Waſhings, that the Apoſtle ſaid, Were but Shadows of the Good Things to come: For I would not that any ſhould be ſo Sottiſh as to think, that Chriſt came to aboliſh thoſe Shadows of the Jews, and inſtitute other in their Room; by no Means: He came to remove, change, and aboliſh the very Nature of ſuch Ordinances, and not the particular Ordinances only, to wit, an Outward, Shadowy, or Figurative Worſhip and Religion. For it was not becauſe they were Jewiſh Meats and Drinks, and divers Waſhings, but becauſe they were Meats and Drinks, and divers outward Waſhings at all, which never could, nor can, cleanſe the Conſcience from dead Works, nor give Eternal Life to the Soul; elſe wherein would the Change be? I affirm by that one Scripture, Circumciſion is as much in Force as Water-Baptiſm; and the Paſchal Lamb as Bread and Wine: They were both Shadows, and both Elementary and Periſhable. And though the Latter were more immediately fore-running and introductory of the Subſtance it ſelf, yet not to be perpetuated; For a Continuance of them had been a Judaizing of the Spiritual Evangelical Worſhip; The Goſpel would have been a State of Figures, Types and Shadows, which to aſſert or practiſe, is as much as in ſuch lies, to pluck it up by the Roots; The Appellation, Ordinances of Chriſt, I therefore renounce, as Unſcriptural and Inevangelical: Beſides, a Spirit of Whoredom from God, groſs Apoſtacy into Superſtition and Idolatry, yea, a Spirit of Hypocriſie, Perſecution and Murder, and all manner of Wickedneſs has got them, and covered it ſelf with them, Jezebel-like, the old Enemy of God's Faithful Prophets and People. And we can teſtifie from the ſame Spirit by which Paul renounced Circumciſion, that they are to be rejected, as not now required; neither have they, ſince the Falſe Church eſpouſed and exalted them, ever been taken up afreſh by God's Command, or in the Leading of His Eternal Spirit: And the Lord will appear to gather People out of them; but never to eſtabliſh, or keep People in them, no; they ſerved their Time; and now the Falſe Church has got them; yea, the Whore has made Merchandize with them, and under ſuch Hiſtorical, Shadowy, and Figurative Chriſtianity, has ſhe managed her Myſtery of Iniquity, unto the beguiling of Thouſands, whoſe Simplicity the Lord has, and will have tender Regard to.

P. 19 to 20.

But they Baptized after the Holy Ghoſt was poured out. True; and they alſo would not Eat the Fleſh of Things Strangled, nor Blood; They Circumciſed and Purified themſelves in the Temple, and had Vows after the Pouring forth of the Holy Ghoſt. By which we may learn, that Condeſcenſion and Practice are quite differing Things from Inſtitution; elſe Paul would never have ſaid, He was not ſent to Baptize (i. e.) with Water, whoſe Commiſſion doubtleſs, went as far as any of the reſt.

But they brake Bread, and Paul received it from God. True; But Paul never enjoyned it; He ſaid, As often as ye do it, &c. which is very wide of any Inſtitution.

on. Again, Read the Chapter foregoing, 1 Cor. 10. where he tells the Wiſe Men of another Bread than that he ſpoke to the Weak of, who Eat and Drank to Exceſs, not diſcerning the Lord's Body.

Farther, Let it be conſidered, that no other Apoſtle recommends theſe Things, nor Paul himſelf, to either the Romans, the Corinthians (in his Firſt Epiſtle) the Galatians, Epheſians, Philippians, Coloſſians, Theſſalonians, Hebrews (if his) nor to Timothy, Titus and Philemon, when he ſet down the Order of the Churches. What an Over-ſight (might one then ſay, according to T. H.) was it in him, not only not to preſs and charge, but not to mention the Sacraments of the Church, Neceſſary to Salvation, as they are called and eſteemed? Would it not have been accounted a great Neglect and Defect in Calvin, if he had been ſilent to any Church Inſtitutions in his Time and Form; or to ſay, He thanked God he Baptized none but ſuch and ſuch? Yet how full are his and their Epiſtles of Divine Exhortation, Information, Reproof, Inſtruction, and the like? Is it not very Wicked then in Thomas Hicks, to tell the World of our Denying to keep God's Commandments in General, becauſe we refuſe to practiſe theſe Shadowy, Temporary, Periſhing Things, eſpecially at this Time a Day, after ſuch an Abuſe of them, and that the Gentile-Spirit has troden them under Foot ſo long, being Part of that Outward Court of Religion, given to them, which were left out at the meaſuring of the Evangelical Temple of God, Rev. 21? Beſides, what Authority have theſe Men for uſing them? To do as Men would be done to, concerns all, in all Ages; but to practiſe Figures and Shadows in Religion, we know does not. A Church cannot be without one, yet without the other. Would it not be Ridiculous in any Man to adorn himſelf either as ſome Eminent Commander, or other Officer, becauſe it is required by Office or Place of every ſuch one that really is ſo? The Apoſtles Baptized, therefore muſt T. H? The Apoſtles Anointed with Oil, therefore ſhould T. H? Nay, Chriſt waſhed his Diſciples Feet, telling them, they ought, or it was their Duty ſo to do one to the other, therefore ſhould T. H? The Believers Sold their Poſſeſſions, and had all Things Common; but will T. H. either imitate, or enjoyn this upon his Hearers? But ſince T. H. and his Adherents, do not ſeveral ſuch Things, once done and enjoyned too, as Blood, Things Strangled, Anointing with Oil, Waſhing of Feet, &c. Why are they not to be as much blamed, as we are for omitting that of Bread and Wine? Or why ſhould not they rather deſiſt Practiſing of thoſe with the reſt, and that upon the ſame Terms? I will warrant T. H. for going to Synagogues, Decrying Hirelings, Preaching Freely, Expoſing himſelf to all Hardſhip for the Goſpel's ſake, which the Apoſtles did.

To conclude, God never condeſcended to uſe ſuch Things (to lead to, and hold forth the hidden Subſtance) that People ſhould reſt there, and much leſs in a Way of Oppoſition to the Subſtance it ſelf; ſuch an Uſe of them has cauſed God to loath them, and enjoyn us to teſtify againſt them. Remember the Inſtituted Brazen-Serpent of old, &c. what became of them in the like Caſe? We would be glad to ſee more Honeſty, Meekneſs, and Godly-mindedneſs in our Oppoſers, tho' there were leſs of this Imitation: They are for ſuch Commands, as they call them, which Hypocrites, Apoſtates, the Falſe Church, yea, the Devil himſelf can come into; but as for thoſe that concern the Daily Croſs, and Victory over Sin, they can Wickedly plead a Kind of Liberty from, at leaſt to, their unconquerable Infirmities, as they are willing to believe them. But we teſtify againſt the Falſe Church, whoſe Faith and Worſhip ſtands not in the Life, Power and Spirit of God, however deckt with the ancient Attire of the True; for her fineſt Forms out of the Life and Power of God we renounce, and as becomes the True Evangelical Church, we aſſert, That he is not a Jew or Chriſtian, who is one outwardly, neither is that now the Circumciſion, Baptiſm and Supper, which is Outward; but he is the Jew or Chriſtian, that is one Inwardly; and that is the Circumciſion that is of the Heart, that the Baptiſm, which is of the Holy Ghoſt and Fire, and that the Supper, which is of the Bread that cometh down from Above, which gives Eternal Life to as many as Eat thereof, and that is the Wine, which is to be Drunk New with Chriſt in the Kingdom of God Within, Luke 17. 20.

Much might be ſaid in this Matter, but I refer the Reader to the Book entituled, Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity. However, let it be noted, that our Adverſary is for Will-Worſhip, and not the Quakers; for we affirm that no Sacrifice nor Performance can be acceptable with God, to, and in which His Holy Spirit leads not; by the which only, Self is abas'd, kept under, and in perfect Obedience to, and watchful Obſervance of, God's Holy Will. But T. Hicks makes this a Strange and Dangerous Doctrine, inſinuating that we perform nothing but upon a Kind of Spiritual Compulſion, as if that God required Man to do all his Commandments without His Holy Spirit, always ready to incline and help them, either to begin or perform any ſuch Duty; or that there were no Difference between waiting for the Natural Springs of Divine Power to aſſiſt, and being compell'd to worſhip. But this ſhews his great Ignorance of God's Spirit, in it's Daily Movings upon the Heart of Men, either as a Reprover, or Comforter for Good; for were he better acquainted with it's Dealings, it would not be ſo uncouth to him, to hear of our Waiting to feel the Holy Stirrings of it, in order to every Religious Performance: Wherefore let not his Ignorance be any Argument againſt our Holy Goſpel-Practice. The Saints of Old had a Warrant in themſelves for what they did: They were not wont to run into the Imitation of former Generations, as to any External Appointments becauſe then commanded, and practiſed as proper, but conſulted the Anointing they had receiv'd about the Continuation or Diſ-uſe of ſuch Figures or outward Services; and as they receiv'd Wiſdom and Counſel therefrom, either to uſe or decline the Practice of them, they acted, and no otherwiſe; making Good the Apoſtle's Saying, That as many as are led by the Spirit of God, are the Sons of God: Are we led by it in All Things, then in, and about God's Things. Had it not been for this, how could the Apoſtles have preach'd down the whole Ceremonial Worſhip of the Jews? The meer Letter of Scripture could never have been their Rule in the Caſe. If any ſay, They were extraordinarily Inſpired, I anſwer, How did ſuch as then Believ'd, know that, if not from an Inward Teſtimony? Nay, What Rule had the many Thouſands then to Worſhip God by? The Hebrew Bible was little, or not at all known to the Gentiles. The Scripture tells us, that whole Churches were ſettled in the Faith before the Epiſtles were writ; And it is hard to think, when they were writ, that they could be ſuddenly collected; and when collected, that every Individual could get a Copy, that, to be ſure, ought to have a Rule; for Printing was not ſo early in the World, and Tranſcribing muſt needs have been too irkſome for every Perſon to obtain a Copy for his, or her peculiar Benefit: But becauſe we are taught to believe, that they wanted not a True Rule of Faith and Practice, and that the Scriptures, eſpecially of the New Teſtament, could not be all that to them, our preſent Adverſaries conclude to make the Great Rule, let them not be diſpleas'd if I infer from hence, that a Meaſure of that Holy Spirit, which was given to every one to profit with, was their Rule, and therefore ought to be, our Great Rule and Guide, in all Things relating to Faith and Worſhip. And let it be remembred, that Chriſt promiſed to ſend the Spirit of Truth to lead into all Truth; as much as to ſay, None are led into the Truth, nor in the Truth, but by the Holy Spirit of Truth; or, that their Practice is a Lye, or they are led into a Lye, who are not led by the Spirit of Truth, that alone leads into all the Ways of Truth: Where by Truth is not to be underſtood the meer Letter of the Scripture, which notwithſtanding is True, but the Living, Powerful Truth; Chriſt the Way, the Truth, and the Life, of which the Scripture is but a Record, or Declaration: Many may run into a Practice of ſeveral Outward Things mentioned in the Scriptures, to have been the Practice of the Saints of former Ages, and yet not be led into the Truth; for all that is but Will-Worſhip, Imitation, and Unwarrantable. To be led into the Truth, is to be led into God's Living Power, Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, whoſe Fruits are Peace and Aſſurance for ever: This is the Truth, the Spirit leads, and is All-ſufficient to.

Certainly, Chriſt intended This for the Great Evangelical Leader, Rule, Judge, Law-giver and Guide through the whole Courſe of Regeneration, the only Way into the Everlaſting Kingdom. And all thoſe who are not by this Holy Spirit prepared, moved and aſſiſted to perform Divine Worſhip unto God, but run into that weighty Duty, or any other (ſuppoſed) Ordinance, without it's Pure Leadings, which makes it a Spiritual and Living Worſhip, they are but thoſe anciently fore-told of, Lord, Lord Cryers, whoſe Portion ſhall be that diſmal Depart from me, I know you not, who has requir'd theſe Things at your Hands. Let this therefore be a Warning unto all Profeſſors, in the Name of the Lord, that they Run no longer Unſent, nor think to be accepted for their many Words; God regards the Heart that he has broken, and is made Contrite before Him, and which trembles at His Word: 'Tis not meer Worſhip, but that which is Spiritual, which He expects and accepts; and to perform that, Man muſt ceaſe from his own Spirit, Strength, Strivings and Imitations, and become Dumb before the Lord, and as a Man Dead to Self-Performance, and then will he breath into him the Spirit of Supplication, and raiſe him up in the Newneſs of his own Divine Life; whereby (though but in Sighs and Groans) a Spiritual and moſt Acceptable Worſhip ſhall be offered unto God, in which his Soul will be well-pleaſed, and every ſuch one come to be refreſh'd and eſtabliſh'd in Righteouſneſs. For all Offerers and Upholders of ſtrange Fire, of what Sort of People ſoever they may be, in the Great and Notable Day of the Lord God, will be cauſe to lie down in Sorrow.

And becauſe he thinks his Advantage is not ſmall, that he hath againſt us, by baſely inferring and aggravating ſuch Conſequences as this, What of Duty we neglect, we are to charge upon the Spirit's not moving us to it; or becauſe we muſt not obey without a Motion, we are acquitted from all Fault till then, &c. Let me tell him, that he ſtriketh himſelf, and not the Quakers; For they hold, that God's Spirit ought to be Daily waited for; And that it is always ready to inform and inſtruct Man's Soul, and to move it to thoſe Thoughts, Words and Deeds, with reſpect to God and Man, as are Well-pleaſing to the Almighty: For we do not only teach, that the Spirit of God is always preſent to Convince of Sin, but to lead out of it, and in that Way of Holy Living, which is well-pleaſing unto God. In ſhort, God's Worſhip ſtands in the Spirit, and I teſtify from the Eternal God, all other Worſhip than what ſprings from a Mind touch'd, ſanctify'd and mov'd of his Holy, Quickning Spirit, is abominable to Him; His Righteous Soul loaths it: And what elſe were their Sacrifices, as theirs were, who in my Hearing ſaid, Pray Brother will you Pray? No, Brother, I am not ſo well able as you are; Let Brother ſuch a one Pray, he is better Gifted for the Work, &c. Complementing, Shifting, and at laſt Praying, &c. in their own Wills, and not in God's Motion —— This God hates.

Next, ſince the Pouring forth of the Spirit is the Great Goſpel Gift, and that the Children of God are to be led by it; in what ſhould we more diligently wait for it's Heavenly Aſſiſtance, than in that Part of our Duty which we owe to God? Is his Worſhip Spiritual, and can we perform it out of the Motion of his own Spirit? For what then was His Spirit given? Again, If Men ſhould Pray in a known Tongue, much more with the Spirit, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks; No Wonder the Profeſſors ask Pardon for their Prayers. Indeed God's Spirit gives them to ſee the Emptineſs of their Righteouſneſs, and condemns them for it, wherefore they are at Times diſſatisfy'd in them; yet they will not learn of him, to be guided by him, who would cover them with Everlaſting Righteouſneſs. Bleſſed would they be, if their Minds were ſtayed in his Counſel; but inſtead thereof, T. H. does as good as ſay, That if he ſhould ſtay till the Spirit moved him, he might ſtay long enough; rendring the Spirit Wanting in that for which he was ſhed abroad in the Heart: Becauſe through his Enmity and Darkneſs, and haſty Running in his own Spirit, he feels it not to lead him; elſe he would never infer, from our aſſerting the Neceſſity of the Spirit's moving to Right and Acceptable Worſhip, that we are acquitted from any Fault in omitting to do that which is Good, and the Blame muſt be laid upon the Spirit. But let me ask him, Can any Man do Good of himſelf? Surely he will ſay, No. How then ſhall Man do that Good he ought to do, but by the Holy Ghoſt? Canſt thou call Jeſus Lord by any other Power or Spirit? Read the Scriptures: What greater Contradiction can there be, than to believe, Man of himſelf can do no Good; and yet to ſay, He can do it without God's Spirit to incline and aſſiſt him thereunto? But if the Spirit do not, what does? Tell me, what can tender the Heart, prepare the Soul, raiſe the Affections, give True Feeling of Wants, and help to perform all in that Fear, Reverence, and deep Senſe (which becomes all New Covenant, Spiritual Worſhippers) if this cannot, or do not? Nay, what an Affront is it to God; ſince it is to ſuppoſe, that Man wants Him not, that his Spirit neither moves to Duty that ought to be performed, nor yet condemns for Duty omitted? Behold the Impudence of the Man! He talks of Goſpel, Chriſt, the Myſteries of his Glorious Kingdom, &c. What groſſer Oppoſer of the New Covenant can there be, who denies the very Life, Virtue and Soul of all True Goſpel-Worſhip and Diſcipline; and without which, the otherwiſe beſt Chriſtian-Church that ever was, would be worſe than Legal? For they that Worſhip not from the Motions of God's Spirit, offer ſtrange Fire, ſet up their own Worſhip, and are Image-Makers; ſuch aſk, but they receive not, becauſe they aſk not aright. For if no Man can call Jeſus Lord, but by the Holy Ghoſt, no Man can pray to the Lord, or in his Name, without the Holy Ghoſt; yet a Sigh or Groan from it's Holy Operation, that Sacrifice, though without Words, is manifold more engaging and effectual with the Lord, than the moſt excellent Performance of Man's own Spirit. 'Tis the Fear and Heavenly Senſe of God in the Soul, that recommends the Performance, and that the Holy Spirit begets: And as the Minds of Men and Women are exerciſed in the Law of this Pure and Quickening Spirit, as it appears in them, they ſhall know the True Worſhip, which ſtands in Life and Power, whoſe End is Everlaſting Peace; when the Lord, Lord, Cryers, that have Prayed and Preached in their own Wills and Wiſdom, as well as to their own Ends and Advantages, ſhall be caſt out for ever, with a Depart from me ye Workers of Iniquity. Mat. 7. 21. But there is one Objection taken from my Book, called, The Spirit of Alexander the Copper-Smith, &c. which he thinks, ſplits us irrecoverably. It runs thus;

'Either there is ſuch a Thing as a Chriſtian Church, or there is not; if there be, 'then this Church either hath Power, or hath not? If no Power, then no Church, 'If a Body or a Church, then there muſt be a Power within it ſelf to determine. Spir. of Alex. p. 9.

To which ſays Tho. Hicks; For Chriſtians to plead this, who own the Scriptures for their Rule, and not the meer Light within, the Argument may ſafely be allowed; But you cannot ſtand by this: For will you ſay, what a Man doth without an Inward Motion is accurſt, and yet diſown him for not doing what he is not moved unto? Contin. p. 64.

But though this be plauſible, it is no more; For the Difficulty remains, in Caſe the Scriptures be admitted for the Rule; for Inſtance: The Church unto which Tho. Hicks belongs, own's the Scriptures to be the Rule: But ſuppoſe Tho. Hicks in ſome one Point believes the Scripture not to intend the ſame Thing, the reſt of the Church underſtand it to mean, as in Caſe of Free Will; I query how this Matter will be reconciled? They affirm the Scriptures to be the Rule, and ſay, This is the true Senſe of the Scripture, Tho. Hicks alſo affirms the Scripture to be the Rule, but that his Senſe is the Mind of the Scripture: This occurs almoſt daily among thoſe who believe the Scripture to be the Rule of Faith. Now obſerve the Parallel.

The Quakers by the Light within them, as their Rule, judge that rude Imagination of keeping the Hat on in Time of publick Prayer.	The Anabaptiſts by the Scripture, as their Rule, cenſure Thomas Hicks for upholding a contrary Senſe to the Scripture.
The Diſſenter from the Quakers ſays, the Light, (which he calls his Rule) manifeſts no ſuch Thing to him, nor doth he believe it to be the Mind of the Light to him.	Thomas Hicks makes Anſwer to the Church, that by the Scripture he underſtands quite another Thing, and the Scripture is his Rule for what he ſays and maintains in the Matter.

I would aſk auy Man of common Senſe, if the Scripture is not as well ſet in Oppoſition to it ſelf, by theſe two Pretenders, as the Light within? And if the Church of Anabaptiſts would not therefore doubt the Truth of their Interpretation, but proceed to cenſure Thomas Hicks a Diſturber of their Church in it's Doctrine or Diſcipline by the Introduction of new and unprofitable Opinions? Neither are the Body of the Quakers to queſtion their Judgment given by the Light within as their Rule, to be a true and unqueſtionable Determination againſt ſuch Alexanders and Enemies to the Peace of their Jeruſalem.

But I would farther tell Tho. Hicks, that though we renounce all Worſhip not led to by God's Spirit (his Reflection upon which ſhews it to be none of his Faith or Practice, and ſo no Spiritual Worſhipper) Yet the Men teſtified againſt in that Book, were ſuch as had been in Unity with us before, and in going from that into differing and oppoſite Practices, we impoſed nothing upon them, but they innovated unſeemly Cuſtoms upon us, ſo that which Tho. Hicks's Conſcience had no Mind to obſerve, leſt he ſhould loſe the Force of his Cavil, removes it out of the Way.

Let Tho. Hicks tell me by what other Rule than God's Spirit, Men's Spirits, and the inſide of their Religion can be tryed, reliſht, or ſavoured, and he doth ſomething: The Devil can transform into all outward Forms, and ſubſcribe the beſt Methodiz'd true Articles that ever were written; Who, or what ſhall unmask him? God gave us the true Taſte, Savour and Diſcerning of that Spirit that leads out ſeveral from the Heavenly Unity, and from thence we gave our Judgment. If Men become darkned, and led by a Deluſive Spirit, and call that the Light, though it give the Lye to the Light, and ſtrikes at the Life, they, whilſt faithful, felt among us, they muſt look to that. You ſay, Every Man ought to make the Scripture his Rule, ſome that ſay, they do, you ſay do not; do you think your Judgment the leſs valid? By no Means; Neither do We. Will you not deſiſt from cenſuring thoſe that anſwer not the Scripture, though they fancy that they do? Why may not we alſo, by the Light of Chriſt, judge thoſe to be deluded, who notwithſtanding ſtanding pretend to be ruled by it? Ye turn People to the Scripture, and they miſtake it; We direct People to the Light, but they miſtake it: So that here is the Difference between our Saying, that Men ſhould do nothing but what the Spirit requires; and your Teaching, that Men ought to do nothing but what the Scripture requires. For if we diſown them for not doing what we know the Spirit requires, you daily diſown ſuch as do not ſome things you ſuppoſe the Scriptures do require: And as you think the Scripture to mean the ſame, you ever did, notwithſtanding your Oppoſer's Suggeſtion, we are by you juſtified in maintaining our Judgment againſt thoſe Pretenders to the Guidance of the Light.

To conclude, I ſee no Difference between Tho. Hicks's ſaying to me, William Penn, thou bidſt me obey the Light within me, and becauſe I do, thou diſowneſt me; and my ſaying to him, Thomas Hicks, thou bidſt me obey the Scriptures, and becauſe I do, thou cenſureſt me. This drives unavoidably to an infallible Spirit, whereby to ſavour all Spirits, Words and Works; for the Anointing is Judge, and meer Pretenders weaken not its Judgment: And 'till Men come thither their beſt Duties are Unholy Things.

Let none fancy an Impoſſibility of Trying Spirits by that without which it is utterly impoſſible to try them. God's Spirit gives his Children to ſavour and diſcern Spiritual Bad, as well as Spiritual Good Things; It is not unknown to ſuch as are led by God's Spirit, of what Nature and to what Tendency ſuch Words or Actions may be. It was on this alone, and upon no other Foundation, the Spiritual Goſpel, Sound and Heavenly Fellowſhip, ſtood of old; for by One Spirit were the true Chriſtians baptized into One Body.

O You that are Profeſſors of Religion, who in Days paſt, and Years that are gone over your Head, prayed loud and fervently for the Spirit, riſe not up againſt it becauſe it ſtains your Beauty, ſubjects your Wills, brings you out of Self, and overturns your dead Forms, where the Spirit of this World has had its Seat for Ages, and in a Myſtery inſnared and beguiled you; But wait upon God in deep Silence to all Fleſhly Conceivings, and Will-Worſhips, ſo ſhall you come to feel God's Pure and Quickning Spirit, to Enliven, Tender and affect your Hearts; in which State one Sigh or Groan is more Valuable, than Years of unprepared and unſanctified Will-ſacrifice.

The next Thing aimed at in this Cavil, attended with ſo much Bitterneſs and Rude Language, is this, that T. Hicks being deſirous to repreſent the Quakers to great Diſadvantage, takes not a little Pains to incenſe Parents, Magiſtrates, and Maſters againſt them, as Neglecters of all Lawful Commands, without an Immediate and Extraordinary Impulſe to perform them.

Were we ſuch Wretches as he would render us, we ſhould not deſerve to live in Civil Societies. What I ſhall ſay in our Defence is briefly this.

1. The Quakers Principle and Practice have proved themſelves conſiſtent with Government, becauſe they have encouraged to Good Life, Peace, and honeſt Induſtry. I ſhall not here ſeek an Eye for an Eye, nor tell any of thoſe Black and Horrible Tragedies, that go up and down the World, under great Authors Atteſtations, of the People called Anabaptiſts. No, I have more Regard to the Sincere and Moderate among them; though 'tis a great Shame to the Profeſſion, which lies more dangerouſly expoſed to the Laſh of Story than we do, that T. H. ſhould be ſuffered among them, at leaſt as a Teacher, after ſuch Forged, Prophane and Abuſive Traſh, But for this Time I ſpare him; yet if he proceeds on this wiſe againſt us, perhaps he may hear farther of me, and ſo may that People to whom he belongs, if they take not ſome other Courſe with him.

2. As to the Commands of Parents, I have this to ſay, and that by good Experience of more than one, That thoſe who have had Children of our Way, though with great Diſquiet, and not a little Diſpleaſure and Severity againſt them at firſt, have left the World with this Teſtimony of their Children, they never diſobeyed them, but for Conſcience Sake, and from Threatning them with the Loſs of all, have become ſo Affectionate tawards them, and Confident in them, as to entruſt them with the Whole of their Worldly Subſtance. 'Tis true, here and there a Crooked Perverſe Profeſſor, whoſe Huſbands, Wives, Children or Servants convinced, have the worſt of Lives, through their extream Oppoſition, and Watching for Evil, may perhaps have 'ſpy'd an Indiſcretion, which, though againſt his own Blood or Family, his Enmity has aggravated to an heinous Offence, and then it muſt be given for a Demonſtration of the Erroneouſneſs of the Quakers Way: But how Juſt, Natural or Conſcientious ſuch Proceeding is againſt ſuch Diſſenting Relations, or the People they aſſociate with, let all Impartial Perſons Judge. This is not doing as they would be dealt by; Liberty of Conſcience! Tyranny, and Egyptian Oppreſſions. I aſk, Would the Anabaptiſts be thus ſerved concerning their own Proſelytes? Did they never any of them ſuffer from their Parents? And have not their Parents complained of them? And has that been taken by their Church always for ſufficient Proof.

And for the Story of the Woman that went rambling from her Family and Huſband, bidding him take another Woman, &c. with ſome pretending Revelations to refuſe juſt Debts, I ſhall ſay no more but thus, We know of no ſuch Things, and believe them to be downright Lyes, as others that are gone before them; However, ſhould they be as true, as we hope they are falſe, we can but judge them, and that we do by the Light of Chriſt Jeſus to the Pit for ever. But if we ſhould take this Courſe, of proving the Anabaptiſts thoſe vile Impoſtors, he doth call and pretend to prove the poor deſpiſed Quakers to be, p. 69. How many Miſcarriages might we collect and publiſh againſt the People that are called by that Name; but we do not deſire that Prophaniſts ſhould have any ſuch Themes from us, to ſport their Unclean Minds upon, notwithſtanding T. Hicks's Liberality to them: Is it not then wickedly done in him, to tell us in the ſame Page, That if a Miſcarriage be, it is improved by us to make the Truth Odious, who without ſuch Arguments and his own Forgery, would in Truth have nothing againſt us. But truly it is very hard, that we ſhould ſuffer as we have done, for the Miſcarriages of other Parties, and yet receive theſe groſs Abuſes at their Hands: But our Eye is to the Lord, and our Innocent Suffering Cauſe will he plead in his own Time, whoſe Will be done by us, and that will be our Everlaſting Rejoycing. Cont. p. 63, 69.

3. For Maſters, I muſt ſpeak my own Experience; many have deſired to retain us, and great Truſts have been repoſed in us. To whom were we Falſe? Of whoſe Service were we Negligent? When did any of us ſay, I am not moved to do this or that, when ſo required thereto? Shall a Lying Dialogue be Demonſtration enough to prove us what ſo invective an Adverſary would have People believe us to be? We do declare to all, that the Light whereby we are enlightned, always commands and ſtrictly enjoyns us Duty, Obedience, Love, Peace, Gentleneſs, Faithfulneſs, Induſtry, Holy Living; And whatever is ſuppoſed to the contrary, we diſclaim it in the Fear and Name of the Righteous God of Heaven and Earth to be no Product of our Holy Principle.

I ſhall now attend his Cavils about the Miniſtry, and give a ſhort Taſte of the Rancour of his Spirit therein. He aſks, What is the True Miniſtry? To which he maketh G. W. anſwer. "Quak. In the New Covenant God is the Teacher of his "People himſelf immediately, by his Immediate Spirit, Power and Unction, Chriſt Aſcended, p. 64. Chriſt. If ſo, wherefore were Apoſtles, Prophets, Evangeliſts, Paſtors, Teachers, &c. given, and ſet in the Church for the Work of the Miniſtry? And why do ye ſet up one among your ſelves, and appoint Miniſters before-hand to ſpeak in ſuch a Place, and at ſuch a Time. From whence I plainly collect thus much. Cont. p. 64, 65, 67.

1. That T. H. in ſo many Words denies God's Immediate Teaching by his Spirit, Power and Unction under the Goſpel; And in that one Expreſſion ſtrikes out, what in him lies, the whole Pourings out of the Holy Ghoſt, the great Promiſe of the Father; being led by the Spirit; no more I, but Chriſt that liveth in me; the Tabernacle of God is with Men, and he will dwell with them; the Anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any Man teach you, or you need not Man's Teaching, &c. In ſhort, the very Diſpenſation of the Goſpel, which is a State of Power and Life immediately received of God, is deny'd by him.

2. That in acknowledging ſuch Officers to continue in the Church, he muſt confeſs to their Qualifications, or he does nothing. Now, that which qualified them, was the Receiving of the Holy Ghoſt, and thoſe Heavenly Gifts by it, which were neceſſary for the Diſcharge of thoſe reſpective Services in the Church; By this it appears, that either Thomas Hicks muſt now yield to Preaching and Praying by the Motion of the Holy Spirit, or in oppoſing of it, acknowledge to his own Contradiction, that there are no ſuch Apoſtles, Prophets, &c. (who miniſtred to the Church, as any thing was revealed to them, the great Evangelical Qualification to the Miniſtry) in our Days.

3. But why ſhould T. Hicks therefore degrade the Diſpenſation becauſe the People are not yet fitted for It, or oppoſe the Means uſed to bring them to It, to the End for which the Means are employed; Beſides, Is it Man's Teaching, or Chriſt by and through Man? God was in Chriſt; and Chriſt in his Miniſters reconciling the World unto himſelf, that he might be the Immediate Prieſt, Prophet and King to the Souls of People. Might not the ſame Objection be more colourably made againſt the Apoſtle John, (1 John 2. 27.) who at that Time wherein the Churches were ſo weak, and the Means ſo many, and lately eſtabliſhed, ſaid unto them, But the Anointing which ye have received of him abideth in you, and ye need not that any Man teach you, but as the ſame Anointing teacheth you of all Things, and is Truth, and is no Lye; And even as it hath taught you, ye ſhall abide in him: Where he is ſo far from meer Man's Teaching, (T. Hicks's only Teaching) that by his Words he would think, the Churches to whom he wrote, had as well been gathered without Means, as that he admoniſhed them to abide in that Holy Unction, as Sufficient to their Inſtruction and Comfort: Therefore let him go aſk the Apoſtle John, why Men were to attend upon the Holy Anointing as Sufficient; notwithſtanding thoſe Means then provided? And the Anſwer to that Queſtion will be ours. But here is the Darkneſs of the Man from our denying of empty unauthorized Imitations, he infers our Denial of ſuch Means as God's Power uſes; and from our uſing ſuch Means our Contradicting our ſelves, and Immediate Teaching; and becauſe we uſe Means in God's Power to bring People to God, the Judge of all, that he may be their Judge and Law-giver, and that from his Immediate Hand they may receive Wiſdom, Knowledge, and Comfort, he ignorantly concludes that Men, where they are, ought not to have Means uſed to bring them to this Bleſſed State; but that God ſhould immediately teach them there.

4. I charge him with another Lye, in ſaying that we appoint Miniſters beforehand to ſpeak in ſuch a Place, at ſuch a Time, and much leſs that the End of our Meeting is to decoy, trapan, and inveagle others, as he ſcoffingly and falſely inſinuates. We deny the Suggeſtion, and renounce, and judge ſuch Practices by that pure Spirit that hath otherwiſe taught us; God preſerve us from that dry Hireling Cuſtom, and Practice of Thomas Hicks, and avenge our Cauſe upon the Head of this Ungodly Slanderer. But he thinks he has utterly foiled us in his Repreſentation (indeed Perverſion) of our Belief about the Seed, which tho' ſpoken to ſome Diſtance before, yet I am willing to ſay ſomething to it, leſt it be taken for granted, and his ſcurvy Names accounted due Titles to ſuch miſerable Wretches as he endeavours to render us. The Objection entirely is this.

You ſay, that the Work of the Miniſtry is to point People to this Seed; That to the Carnal Mind, which rules in any, the Commands of Chriſt are not given; And that the Spirit not only manifeſteth the Promiſes, but exerciſeth Faith in, and fulfils them; out of E. B. G. K. G. W. p. 106. Im. Rev. p. 77, 78. Chr. Aſc. p. 10. Query, Is nothing elſe taught but this Seed, then your Miniſtry is only God Preaching to himſelf? &c. Will your Prate of Infallibility, and Talk like Mad-men? You are implacable Enemies to the Chriſtian Religion; Men Inſpired by Satan, and as vile Impoſtors as ever were. Here ſtop a While.

Certainly, Reader, No Man was ever given up to a Spirit of greater Injuſtice, Diſhoneſty, and bitter Rage againſt any People than T. Hicks ſeems to be againſt us: He does not ſo much prove us Bad, as he would make us ſo, that he may cover his Wickedneſs againſt us. What falſe Doctrine is it, to preach People to the Seed God has ſown, in which is Virtue, Life and Power, to bring forth bleſſed Fruits to God? To ſuggeſt from thence, that there is nothing to be taught but the Seed, is great Darkneſs and Prejudice; For the Miniſtry is not to teach the Seed, but to bring down, and humble the Mind of Man to it, that the Mind may be taught, and the Seed delivered from under the Preſſure of Sin and Ignorance. Strange Contradiction! that the Seed ſhould be ſown in Man for it's own Salvation, and not for Man's? What, but Wickedneſs it ſelf, could thus write of us?

And that the Carnal Mind receives not the Things of God, becauſe it perceives them not, is according to Scripture, if not according to Thomas Hicks. But it is not the firſt Time by many that Scripture in a Quaker's Book has been given, under that Name, for groſs Error and Deluſion. That the Spirit manifeſts the Promiſes, exerciſeth Faith in, and fulfils them, cannot be falſe Doctrine, if it be allowed to give a true Underſtanding of them, and if it gives to exerciſe in them, and finally, to accompliſh or fulfil them. But his Inſinuation lies here, that the Spirit of God is that which believes in God, and exerciſes Faith for it ſelf in God, which was never G. W's Intent. But as I have ſaid, the Spirit is that only which gives us Faith, and exerciſeth that Faith it gives in the Promiſes of God, which are Yea and

Chap. XI.

Amen in that Seed, the Quakers preach People to believe and grow in; for which T. Hicks is pleaſed to call us Praters, Canters, Enthuſiaſts, Mad-men, Idle, Non-ſenſical, Blaſphemous, Inſpired of Satan, and as vile Impoſtors as ever were, &c. For which God Almighty rebuke his Envious, Enraged and Unclean Spirit.

CHAP. XII. Of Reſurrection and Rewards.

Chap. XII.

THE laſt Doctrine he inſinuates our Denial of, is that of the Reſurrection from the Dead. That which he brings under the Quaker's Name, as a ſufficient Proof for that Suggeſtion I ſhall relate, that every Impartial Reader may be ſatisfy'd of the Man's Inconſiſtency with ſound Doctrine, as well as the Common Juſtice of Doing as he would be done by. Dial. Ibi.

In Anſwer to his Queſtions about the Reſurrection of the ſame Carnal Body that dies, he brings in G. Whitehead thus:

Q. Is it not written, Thou Fool, that which thou ſoweſt is not the Body which ſhall be, but God gives a Body as pleaſeth him?

Thus (ſaith Thomas Hicks) Whitehead replied; and G. Fox the Younger ſpeaks to the ſame Purpoſe. To Fools that ſay, This Body of Natural Fleſh and Bones ſhall riſe; I ſay, The Body which is ſown, is not the Body which ſhall be. I query, (ſaith he) Whether both theſe Perſons do not tacitly deny the Reſurrection of the Body?

Now that T. H. hath ſhewn himſelf at once Diſhoneſt and Erroneous too; Let it be obſerved, 1. That from our Denial of the Reſurrection of the ſame Natural, Fleſhly Body, he abſolutely infers and concludes, our Denial of the Reſurrection of the Body in any Senſe; which is great Injuſtice to any Adverſary. 2. Let it be well obſerved, that he makes the Scripture it ſelf to deny the Reſurrection, and ſo Heterodox, by Accounting G. Whitehead and G. Fox their Anſwers in Scripture-Language, to be a Denial of the Reſurrection: For if T. Hicks does not intend by his Arguing, That the ſame Body that died, without a Mutation, ſhall riſe again, what makes him to quarrel the Apoſtle Paul's Saying, Thou Fool, that which thou ſoweſt is not the Body which ſhall be; and repute us Hereticks for believing him?

Certainly his groſs Belief of the Reſurrection is inconſiſtent with Scripture, Reaſon, and the Belief of all Men right in their Wits in the Point. How can he have the Confidence to call the Scripture his Rule, and yet Contradict it ſo egregiouſly, as when the Apoſtle tells us, It is not the ſame Body that is ſown that ſhall be, to aſſert, that it is the ſame Body, and that who ſays the Contrary, denies the Reſurrection of the Dead, and Eternal Recompence? In ſhort, We do acknowledge a Reſurrection in order to Eternal Recompence, and that every Seed ſhall have its own Body, and reſt contented with what Body it ſhall pleaſe God to give us; But as we are not ſuch Fools as curiouſly to enquire What? ſo muſt we for ever deny the groſs Conceits of T. H. and his Adherents concerning the Reſurrection.

But T. Hicks would have us believe, that the Apoſtle ſaid Thou Fool, to him that denied, and not to him that owned the Reſurrection; But he muſt excuſe us if we refuſe to Credit him; for it was not, Whether every Seed ſhould riſe with its own Body, or that Bodies ſhould riſe, but, as taking that for granted, the Queſtion was, What Bodies they ſhould be. So that Thou Fool is moſt due to T. Hicks and his Aſſociates, who are not, with us, ſatisfied to leave all with the Lord, but intrude and query, What Bodies ſhall riſe? Wherefore no Anſwer can be more proper to him than, Thou Fool, (Thomas Hicks) That which thou ſoweſt is not the Body that ſhall be.

But he thinks he is not without Reaſon; For, ſays he, If the It in the Text be not the ſame Body, how can that be called a Reſurrection; for that ſuppoſeth the ſame?

I Anſwer, If a Thing can yet be the ſame, and notwithſtanding changed, for Shame let us never make ſo much Stir againſt the Doctrine of Tranſubſtantiation; for the Abſurdity of that is rather out-done, than equalled, by this Carnal Reſurrection.

The Papiſts ſay, That the Bread and Wine after Conſecration are very Chriſt, tho' the Accidents remain. Tho. Hicks, and Abundance of that Sort of Men, hold, That Man's Body in the Reſurrection is the ſame with that Carnal Body buried, and yet that it is changed to a Spiritual Body: How is it poſſible that It ſhould be the ſame, and not the ſame? How that Body, and yet, as the Apoſtle ſays, Thou ſoweſt not that Body that ſhall be, is very hard to reconcile.

Chap. XII.

And truly, that which is yet very ſtrange, Thoſe Three Scriptures peculiarly cited in Defence of his groſs Conceit of the Reſurrection, are either relative of another Matter, or directly oppoſite to, and inconſiſtent with his Aſſertion.

Dial. Ibid.

1. And this Mortal ſhall put on Immortality, this Corruptible ſhall put on Incorruption, 1 Cor. 15. 53.

I grant that this implies a Change; but I deny, that it ſo much as intimates, that Men ſhall riſe with thoſe very Carnal Bodies that were buried. No, the Apoſtle not only tells us, that the Body ſown is not the Body that ſhall be, but that Fleſh and Blood cannot inherit the Kingdom of God, ver. 50. If the Fleſh and Blood be tranſmuted, or changed into no Fleſh and Blood, I query, (and I think I may do it ſafely too) Whether It be the ſame Fleſh and Blood, that is changed into no Fleſh and Blood, that is the Body raiſed? O Abſurd, Dark and Carnal Man!

Nor am I afraid to tell him, that the Scripture cannot rationally be taken ſtrictly, as Tranſlated (neither ought many more) for there are certain Figures, Modes and Ways proper to that Language in which this Epiſtle was written, which are to be underſtood with Allowances; for how can the Mortal (taken for Mortality, and not him who in Part is Mortal) put on Immortality; Can Mortality be clothed with Immortality? Then it ſeems that Mortality is the Perſon, and Immortality the Garment. If T. Hicks ſhould tell me, No, it is meant that the Mortal Body ſhould be changed into an Immortal Body, it follows that he is gone from the Letter of the Text into an Interpretation, as well as that it contradicts his abſurd Identity or Sameneſs of Body: If ſo, it is as Lawful for me (and more, if in the Right) to conſtrue it thus, That we, who are Mortals reſpecting our Bodies, put off the Mortal Part, and put on inſtead thereof Immortality; ſuitable to that weighty Paſſage of the Apoſtle Paul, 2 Cor. 5. 1. For, We know that if our Earthly Houſe of this Tabernacle were diſſolved, we have a Building of God, an Houſe not made with Hands, Eternal in the Heavens; which as directly concludes the Change, not of Accidents, but Bodies, from an Earthly Houſe or Tabernacle, to an Heavenly Houſe or Building, as ever any Thing can be ſpoken by Men or Angels.

To conclude: Since Mortality cannot properly put on Immortality, but Man that is clothed with Mortality, may put off, or exchange Mortality for Immortality, becauſe otherwiſe Mortality would have Immortality for its Garment; a Thing impoſſible and abſurd; I do infer that this Place yields no Strength at all to T. Hicks's groſs Apprehenſion of the Reſurrection.

2. His next Scripture is that in the Romans, But if the Spirit of him that raiſed up Jeſus from the Dead, dwell in you, He that rais'd up Chriſt from the Dead, ſhall alſo quicken your Mortal Bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.

But this is nothing to T. H's Purpoſe in the leaſt; for the Apoſtle treats not here of the Reſurrection of Dead Carnal Bodies in our Adverſary's Senſe, as the whole Chapter ſeriouſly proves; but of the Inward Work of the Spirit, in order to the making Man's Body a fit Temple for the Holy Ghoſt to dwell in, as he writ to the Corinthians.

3. The third Place he brings, is out of the Epiſtle of Paul, writ to the Philippians: He ſhall change our Vile Bodies: Upon which he ſays, This cannot be meant of a New Created Body, becauſe ſuch a Body cannot be ſaid to be either Vile or Changed.

But what makes this for his Conceit? Surely nothing: For if the Vile Body be changed, then it is not that Vile Body; therefore not the ſame Body. Again, to ſay, that Scripture can't be meant of a New-Created Body, becauſe ſuch an one can't be ſaid to be either Vile or Changed, makes much againſt him: For, 1. It is to ſay that the Body that ſhall be, is Vile, elſe what means his Saying, Becauſe ſuch a Body cannot be ſaid To Be (not to have been) either Vile or Changed. 2. Though the Body that ſhall be, may not be ſaid to be either Vile or Changed, yet it may be given of God in Lieu of a Vile Body, and ſo the Vile Body Changed for One that is Glorious. It was either Ignorantly or Sophiſtically done in T. Hicks, to imply, That Body that ſhall be, could not be ſaid to be Changed, ſince the Change lies on the Side of the Vile Body, that is exchanged for a more Glorious Body: Therefore all along we muſt conclude, it is not the ſame, but another Body. But how Diſingenuous is T. Hicks, to repute G. W's Anſwer in the Apoſtle's Words, a preſſing the Metaphor too far, and yet by ſo doing, runs himſelf into this Dark Imagination of a Fleſhly Reſurrection.

But T. Hicks thinks, The Joys of Heaven Imperfect elſe.

I Anſwer. Is the Joy of the Ancients now in Glory, Imperfect? Or are they in Heaven but by Halves? If it be ſo unequitable that the Body which hath ſuffered ſhould not partake of the Joys Cœleſtial; Is it not in Meaſure unequal, that the Soul ſhould be rewarded ſo long before the Body?

This Principle brings to the Mortality of the Soul (held by many Baptiſts) or I am miſtaken: But why muſt the Felicity of the Soul depend upon that of the Body? Is it not to make the Soul a Kind of Widow, and ſo in a State of Mourning and Diſconſolation, to be without its Beloved Body? Which State is but a better Sort of Purgatory. See T. V. and T. D.

What made the Apoſtle willing to be abſent from the Body, that he might be preſent with the Lord, 2 Cor. 5. 8, 9. if ſuch a Diſſolution brought Sadneſs inſtead of Joy, as our Adverſaries in the Point of the Reſurrection ſuggeſt, if not boldly affirm? In ſhort, If the Compleat Happineſs of the Soul reſts in a Re-Union to a Carnal Body, for ſuch it is Sown, then never cry out upon the Turks Alcoran; for ſuch an Heaven, and the Joys of it, ſuit admirably well with ſuch a Reſurrection. The Reaſons I have to give againſt this Barbarous Conceit, I thus contract.

1. Becauſe that the Scripture ſpeaks of a Diſſolution, and no Reſurrection of that which is diſſolved, being Earthly, and Unfit for a Cœleſtial Paradice; and therefore holds forth a Building of God, an Houſe Eternal in the Heavens.

2. If the Body be the ſame, it muſt have the ſame Nature, otherwiſe not the ſame Body: But if it have the ſame Nature, it will be Corruptible ſtill: Mortal Seeds bring forth Mortal Natures, not Immortal; Neither can Mortal be Immortal, and yet the ſame Nature as before, for that Change made, tell me, What remains of the Old Earthly Body?

3. It makes the Soul uncapable of Compleat Happineſs without a Fleſhly Body, as if Heaven were an Earthly Place to ſee, walk in, and for all our Outward Senſes to be enjoyed and exerciſed, as in this World, though in an higher Degree; which I call Mahometiſm: For what Spiritual Happineſs the Body now can have, reſpecting God, is derived through the Soul to the Body, and not through the Body to the Soul. Beſides, if ſo great a Change or Alteration paſs upon the Body, how is it that Carnal and Senſible Body that ſuffered? And how can that ſame Body be equally Senſible of Cœleſtial Delights? For the Fleſh and Blood that ſuffered, is not to enter God's Kingdom; and if that very ſame Carnal Body enter not, which ſuſtained any Part of the Tribulations, the great Knot is broken, and our Adverſary's ſtrongeſt, if not only Plea, is render'd Invalid: For if the ſame Natural Body, Parts and Senſes, conſiſting of Living Fleſh, Blood and Bones, that ſuffered and dyed, riſe not, another is given in which the Children of the Reſurrection (who have ſuffered in the Fleſh) have their Recompence: And if they do ſo ſtrictly Riſe as they Dyed, then every Man is to Riſe Married, Low, High, Fat, Lean, Young, Old, Homely, Handſome, and according to former Complexion and Sex: And which is yet more unreaſonable, This Body is to be Uncorruptible, Immortal, Spiritual, Faſhioned like Chriſt's Glorious Body, and as the Angels of God. May our Adverſary bluſh at theſe dark Imaginations but here touch'd upon, becauſe more largely handled elſewhere? Only I cannot but ſignify, that this Sort of Reſurrection pleaded for, is renowned by ſome Baptiſts, and ſeveral other more Clear-ſighted Profeſſors.

For our Parts, A Reſurrection we believe, and of Bodies too, unto Eternal Life. What they ſhall not be, I have briefly ſaid and proved; What they ſhall be, we leave with God, who will give every One a Body as pleaſeth Him; and Thou Fool belongs to the Unneceſſary Medler.

CHAP. XIII.

Ch. XIII.

A Collection of ſome of T. Hicks*'s many* Contradictions, Perverſions, Lyes, Forgeries, Railings and Scoffs at Witneſſing; from all which, he is proved to be neither a True Chriſtian, nor a True Man.

His CONTRADICTIONS.

Argum. I. HE that contradicts himſelf, is not led by God's Spirit, and conſequently no Child of God, nor certain of his own Faith; but ſo doth T. Hicks; therefore No Chriſtian Man.

He tells us, That the True Light hath Enlightned every Man, from John 1. and that

In Contradiction to which, he makes this Light to be but a Part of the Soul, by which

that it ought to be attended upon, making the Light to be diſtinct from the Soul, and not the Soul, Dial. 7. 22.	which he falls into the ſame Confuſion he falſly would faſten upon us, namely, That if the Soul ought to obey the Light, it would it ſelf, which is abſurd, and cannot be, Dial. p. 14. 32.
2. He acknowledges, That the Light checketh within for many Evils, and exciteth to many Good Things, and that he ought to ſhun thoſe Evils, and do that Good, p. 8. In ſhort, That Chriſt is the Light and Life of Men, p. 22.	Yet he dares to tell us, that this Light, in directing to it's Beſt Actions, ſwelleth Men but with Proud Conceits, and that it doth deceive and miſguide ſuch as follow it, p. 3. and 37.
3. But I do, and muſt bear Witneſs againſt thy Erroneous Opinion, If true to the Light in me, p. 8. I am to do what the Light in my ſelf directs me, and herein is my Comfort, p. 91. Again, Where a Rule is, there muſt be Light in the Subject, yielding Obedience; otherwiſe no Reaſonable and Acceptable Service, p. 14. I grant it ought to be obeyed, p. 7.	To Unſay which, he aſſures us, as his Judgment at leaſt, That the Light is Uncertain; in one Man it teaches one Thing, in another the directly contrary; ſo that (ſays he) there can be no Certainty of Truth or Error, Sin or Duty, by this.
Again, he ſays, that 'tis no Diſparagement to the Light within, to ſay, that God doth make any Thing more known of his Will than is, or can be known by it; for 'tis but to ſay, that each Degree of Light is ſerviceable to it's End, p. 36.	In direct Undervalue of, and Oppoſition to which, he tells us, within two Pages after, that the Improvement of the Light within, ſubverts the Covenant of Grace, the only Way God hath Revealed for Salvation; And, that it directly oppoſeth it ſelf to the Ends of the Covenant, and ought to be rejected, p. 38.

From all which it is very obſervable, Firſt, That the Light is Chriſt's Light. 2. That it ought to be obeyed. 3. That it is not a Diſtinct Light from a Goſpel Light, but in Degree only, and conſequently, One and the ſame Light; therefore Saving in it's Nature. But in Contradiction to all this, he ſays, 1. That it is Part of the Soul. 2. That it will Miſguide and Deceive. 3. That it is Repugnant to the Ends of the Covenant of Grace, and ought to be Rejected. Theſe are a few of his very many Self-Oppoſitions. Now if this be to argue ſafely, prudently, and like a Diſputant, I am greatly miſtaken: Sure I am, there is nothing of Truth or Chriſtianity in ſuch Confuſion. For that Man ſhould be obliged to obey a Light that does miſguide, or that Thomas Hicks ſhould talk of acting according to the Light in him, making his Appeal thereto in others; and yet ſuggeſt that it may deceive and oppoſe the very Ends of the Covenant of Grace, is with me the Top of all Impudence, and Self-Contradiction.

Argu. II. Who Perverts and Miſrepreſents another Man's Principles, acts not like a True Chriſtian Man; but ſo doth T. Hicks, therefore no Chriſtian-Man.

Of the Quakers Principles.	And Thomas Hicks*'s Perverſions.*
1. Becauſe we hold, Chriſt is God, and God the Light, and that all Men are Enlightned by Him;	He concludes, That every Man comprehends whole God, and whole Chriſt, Dial. p. 2, 3, 4, 5.
2. Becauſe we aſſert it to be ſufficient to ſave all from Sin, who are led by it, and walk in it;	He concludes from the Ignorance and Wickedneſs of thoſe that have it tendered to them, but obey it not, that the Light is Ignorant, Weak, and Deceivable, Ib. p. 10, 32, 33, 34.
3. From our Belief in the Light's Sufficiency to ſave, as that which was, and is given of God for Salvation, to as many as bring their Deeds to it, and are tranſlated by it.	He infers, That all other Means are needleſs, not conſidering it was not the Light's Inſufficiency, but Man's Weakneſs, that has neceſſitated the Great Light to make Uſe of External Means to bring Men's Minds, from wandring abroad, to the Inward Light, which is the Juſt Man's Path, Ib. 12, 36, 37

He 4. From

4. From our making the Illumination in Man to be a Natural Emanation, or Product of the Divine Word which made all Things.	He wickedly turns it to an Effect of God's Power, and ſo would by that Argument make the Trees, &c. alſo Divine, Ibid. p. 3. 4.
5. From our aſſerting that Chriſt ſhineth by his Light in the Heart of every Wicked Man, as well as every Good Man.	He tells People, that we hold Chriſt to be in every Wicked Man, as he is in his Saints, Cont. p. 45, 46. though ſuch Ungodly Perſons partake not of his Holy Life and Power, neither are ſubject unto his Government.
6. From our affirming God's Promiſe made Good, that he would be the Teacher of his People; and directing People to God's Light in them, as the Goſpel-Inſtruction to the Way of Life.	He Wickedly infers againſt us, yet as our Meaning, that we deny all Miniſtry, all Viſible Worſhip, &c. though they ſtand in God's Power and Spirit; Dial. p. 42, 43. A Thing never believed nor intended.
7. When we ſpeak of Chriſt's Manhood, or Chriſt's Viſible Appearance, and when we ſpeak of his Eternal Godhead, or as he is now to his Saints and People, ſaying, he was never as ſuch, Viſible to Wicked Men.	He is not aſhamed to tell the World in our Name, that Chriſt was never Viſible to Wicked Men, as to that Bodily Appearance, and therefore that we deny any ſuch Appearance at all. Cont. p. 37, 43. 41.
8. From our Believing Chriſt to be in his People, according to expreſs Scripture, and our aſſerting that as ſuch, he is Crucified by Wicked Men.	He infers, that we deny Chriſt to be as well without, as within; and that he was ever Crucified in the Fleſh, Dial. p. 44. O Wicked Man!
9. From our Denial of their rigid Satisfaction, that is, that Chriſt was puniſhed by his Father for our Sins; and that Sins paſt, preſent and to come, are anſwered for; and that Men may be Holy in Chriſt, by Virtue thereof, whilſt not New, but Old Creatures, and ſo Unholy in themſelves, their Conſciences not being Purged from dead Works;	He unworthily concludes, that we diſown Chriſt's Death and Sufferings as a Propitiation, that his Body was an Offering for Sin, that he bore the Weight of the Iniquity of the whole World, that he carry'd away Sins paſt, and ſealed Remiſſion in his Blood to as many as believe; and that we expect to be both forgiven and accepted, not for Chriſt's-ſake, nor in his Sacrifice and Righteouſneſs, but our own Works, Dial. p. 9. 10. Cont. 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 52. All which is an horrid Abuſe of us.
10. From our aſſerting the End of Chriſt's Coming to be not only the Forgiveneſs of Sin paſt upon Repentance, but the finiſhing of Tranſgreſſion in the Creature by the Operation of his Power in his Inward and Spiritual Appearance;	He wickedly infers, that we make his Viſible Appearance of no Value, and, deny the End of Chriſt's Sufferings. Dial. p. 10. Cont. p. 50, 51, 52, 53, 54. 55.
11. Becauſe we ſay that Men are not accepted of God, but upon the Inward Work of the Holy Spirit in the Soul, as to daily Communion with God: And that there is not another Way to be ſaved from Sin preſent and to come, than by Chriſt's Inward Manifeſtation and Operation.	He Inſinuateth as our Faith, that we purchaſe our Forgiveneſs by our own Good Works, and not that Chriſt was God's Propitiation, by whom Remiſſion of Sins paſt came; which is the meer Love and Mercy of God, declared then by him in the World more eminently, and now by the Light in the Conſcience, to all that Repent. Ibid. p. 51, 52, 53.
12. Becauſe we make Obedience a Condition to Salvation.	He would have People believe, that we make it the Meritorious Cauſe, and ſo Papiſts, Dial. p. 2, 63.
13, Becauſe we ſay that Chriſt is but our Example in his abiding in the Father's	So Wicked is he as to conclude, that we believe Chriſt to be in All Things but an

1673. Ch. XIII. ther's Love by keeping his Commandments;

14. From our pleading for a Perfection from Sin, and a Growth to the Meaſure of the Fulneſs of the Stature of Chriſt in this Life.

15. From our aſſerting True Rejoycing to be the Reſult of God's Work in Man, and Man's Conformity to him, and what Man ſows he reaps.

16. Becauſe we ſay, that ſuch Works as are wrought by the Holy Spirit in us, are neceſſary to Eternal Life, and may in a Senſe be ſaid to obtain it; ſince the Lord hath ſo freely offered it upon the Condition of Believing and Obeying, the Fruits of the Spirit of God in Man.

17. Becauſe we ſay all True Spiritual Liberty ſtands in God's Power, that looſes from Satan's Snares.

18. From our aſſerting that the Breath of Life, which came from God, by which Adam became a Living Soul to God, was ſomething of God himſelf.

19. From our Preaching the Redemption of the Seed from under the Weight and grievous Preſſures of Sin, and calling it the Loſt Groat, and Pearl in the Field, &c.

20. Becauſe we ſay the Scriptures are not the great Goſpel-Rule but the Spirit, becauſe the Diſpenſation of the Spirit is that of the Goſpel more peculiarly, and that without it we cannot underſtand, or ſavingly believe any Thing declared of in the Scripture; and therefore that it is our Rule for believing the Scriptures themſelves;

21. From our aſſerting, that what was a Commandment to any Servant of God in old Times, is not ſo to us, becauſe ſo to them; that is, ſuch as going to Pharaoh, going Naked, going to the King's Chappel, as Moſes, Iſaiah and Amos did; as alſo thoſe Elementary Types, Shadows and Figures appointed for a Seaſon, and to paſs off, That ſuch are not Commandments to us unleſs required by the ſame Spirit anew; an Example. Ibid. p. 54. Behold this Wickedneſs!

He confidently infers our Denial of a Perfection in Degrees, and our Belief of as high a State of Perfection of Glory in this World, as hereafter. Dial. p. 48, 49, 50, 51.

This Perſon baſely infers our utter Denial of any Cauſe of Rejoycing from what Chriſt had done for us, when bodily in the World, or by his Righteouſneſs now in us. Ibid. p. 53.

He Wickedly ſuggeſts in our Name, that we expect to Merit Eternal Life by Good Works, and thoſe of our own working, as the Spider weaves his Webb out of his own Bowels. Thus does he pervert and miſconſtrue our pure Faith. Dial. p. 38. Cont. p. 51, 52.

He unrighteouſly infers, That who are not of our Way, ſhould have no Liberty. Cont. p. 87. O Impious Man! God will reckon for theſe Things with thee.

That he may keep his old Wont, he falſly renders it as our Meaning, that the Soul is a Part of God; and then faſtens all his hideous Conſequences Diſhoneſtly upon us. Dial. p. 45, 46.

He dares to give it our Faith, that we believe that Holy Seed to be in a Loſt, Undone or Polluted State, Dial. p. 47. Cont. p. 49. than which what can be more Wicked?

He baſely ſuggeſts, that Quakers caſt off all Precepts in the Scriptures, and will not bound either their Doctrines or Lives thereby, and ſo will not bring their Cheats and Impoſtures to the Teſt thereof, counting them of no more Authority than Æſop's Fables. Dial: p. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36. Cont. Epiſt. to the Reader. Behold your Anabaptiſt-Preacher! Indeed an Ungodly Wreſter to his own Deſtruction.

It is not a little his Endeavour Unrighteouſly to infer, that thoſe Moral, Perpetual, and Eternal, Holy Precepts, thou ſhalt have no other God but me; thou ſhalt not Murder; thou ſhalt not commit Adultery; thou ſhalt not Steal; thou ſhalt not bear falſe Witneſs, &c. are not binding upon us: But that we give our ſelves the looſe of ſuch horrid Principles, as the contrary; and are therefore inconſiſtent with Civil Government, Cont. pag. 59, 60. As if that Eternal, Holy, Omnipreſent Light, with which we are enlightned, did not continually declare and require theſe Juſt and Righteous Things at our Hands. God rebuke him.

22. From our Uſe of the Scripture, and a Miniſtry with ſuch like Means, though by the Aſſiſtance and Leadings of the Eternal Spirit, and for this End, that all may come by them, as Helps, to the Life and Power it ſelf; the great End of all External Means;	He would inſinuate the Inſufficiency of the Light, and does prefer the very Beggarly Elements of the Jewiſh Religion before it, which holds as well againſt God, Chriſt and his Power, Grace and Holy Spirit, becauſe the like Means are uſed, notwithſtanding, to reclaim and reſtore Men to a State of Happineſs; but if that were Wicked, what can his Reflection be upon the Light? Dial. p. 37, 41, 42, 49.
23. Becauſe we ſay that no Man can rightly worſhip God, without the Preparation and Motion of his Holy Spirit, which we daily wait to feel, and accordingly are prepared and drawn forth to worſhip the Lord, whether in publick or private; for we never ſought his Face in vain.	This Envious Man ſuggeſts, that we never wait to be ſo prepared or moved; But if the Spirit of God compels us not, God muſt go without his Worſhip, and not blame them, with ſuch like, making as if the Spirit were as far off, as he would have Chriſt; and that to ſtay till Men were mov'd, were never to worſhip: which ſufficiently ſhews his Ignorance of that Spirit, whoſe alone Leadings make a Child of God, as well as the Wicked Uſe he makes of that Holy and Chriſtian Practice, Cont. p. 60, 61.
24. From our aſſerting, that every Man ought to be convinc'd of what he does, and that by the Light in him, as his Rule of Faith and Duty, before he ſets about to do or perform it.	He inſinuates, the Impoſſibility of our Renouncing and Rejecting any tenacious Diſputer about unprofitable Queſtions, that may go out from us as a Religious Society, becauſe ſuch Perſon or Perſons, may plead the Light within for it, Cont. p. 64, 65. As if they might not as well plead the Scripture too, upon his Belief of a Rule, and give him the ſame Difficulty? Muſt every one uſe the Scripture right that pretends to it as their Rule? If not, then why may not ſeveral pretend to the Guidance of the Light, for that which the Light really condemns.
25. From our denying the Reſurrection of the Natural and Corruptible Body, and leaving it with the Lord to give us a Body as pleaſeth him,	This Caviller and Fooliſh Intruder into Sacred Myſteries, endeavours to poſſeſs People with our being Shufflers about, and Denyers of the Reſurrection of any Body to Life Eternal, however Spiritual or Glorified. Dial. p. 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62.
26. And from our aſſerting the Unity of God and the Soul, and our Denial of their Carnal Reſurrection,	He blindly concludes, that the Soul is part of God, and ſo no future Rewards or Puniſhments at all to be expected by any. Dial. p. 16, 17.

Thus much to give the World a Taſte of the Man's Spirit. He that can thus far believe him to be an Honeſt Man, ought to be condemned for great Ignorance and Diſhoneſty, God that made Heaven and Earth, will Recompenſe it into his Boſom with a Vengeance, if he Repent not.

A Collection of a Few of his Many GREAT LYES.

Arg. III. He that Lyes is not of God; but Thomas Hicks is a Lyar; therefore not of God, then No Chriſtian.

1. Firſt, That our owning of Chriſt Jeſus is indeed no other than A meer Myſtical Romance, and that the Chriſt we own is no other than a Myſtical Romance, Dial.

1673. Ch. XIII. Dial. p. 10. Contin. p. 9. A Prophane Untruth; Untruth, in ſpeaking ſo of us; and Prophane with a Witneſs, to call the Light a Myſtical Romance, which he juſt now ſaid, ought to be obeyed. Is this your Champion?

2. That according to the Quakers Conceits, Scripture and Reaſon muſt not be made uſe of, Ibid. p. 26. A Lye our Books and Practice plentifully prove.

3. That the Light in us ſees no Neceſſity of a Mediator, Ibid. p. 35. When God knows we feel the daily Benefit of one.

4. That the Quakers account the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt no more than they do the Blood of a Common Thief. Ibid. Pag. 38. An Ungodly Aſperſion.

5. That we deny his Viſible Coming and Appearance in the World, Cont. p. 37, 45. Though a Contradiction to himſelf.

6. That the Quakers hold, they can work a Compleat Righteouſneſs Out of their Own Bowels, Ibid. Epiſt. and p. 53. Dial. p. 38. and yet a while ſince, all was to be done by the Motion and Operation of God's Spirit alone. O Confuſion it ſelf.

7. They own Chriſt in all he did, Only as an Example, Contin. p. 54, yet juſt now he made us deny his Coming at all. What ſtrange Lying and Self contradicting is here?

8. That the Quakers Diſſemble when they tell People they own the Scriptures, and that they render them of no more Authority than Æſop's Fables, Cont. Epiſt. That a Quaker ſhould ſay, That which troubles thee is thy Puzling thy ſelf ſo much in that Book the Bible, thou wilt never be ſetled till thou throw that Book Away, Cont. p. 76. A Wicked Lye. Alſo, That a Quaker ſhould ſay to one T. Hollbrow, What doſt thou tell me of the Scriptures? they are no more to me than an old Almanack: Which we renounce both as being a Lye, and an Irreverent Expreſſion. For J. Nobbs on whom it is charged, was a Ranter; and if I miſtake not, it was ſpoken before the People Quakers were known in the Southern Parts, if not before God's Breaking forth by them.

9. That any Thing againſt our Miniſtry (though never ſo true) muſt be looked upon as the greateſt Lye, Ibid. Epiſt. But this is one to be ſure; God will clear their Innocency and confound their bitter Enemies.

10. That Nicholas Lucas ſaid to one of T. Hicks's Acquaintance, that he might burn the Bible, and ſerve God as well without; and that he might write as good Scripture himſelf, if he would have any, Ibid. pag. 5. A Lye, which he diſowns.

11. That they appoint their Miniſters afore-hand, to ſpeak in ſuch a Place, and at ſuch a Time; and that they go to Meetings only to encourage (that is, to decoy, trepan and inveigle) others, Ibid. p. 66. Very Lyes, I teſtifie in God's Fear.

12. That the Quakers bid People follow the Light within, and if they do ſo, then will they load ſuch with moſt bitter Revilings, Ibid. p. 68. A Lye, every tittle of it. What? Are they repreſented to be Overturners of all Things to exalt the Light within, and now revile People moſt bitterly if they obey it?

13. That one of us ſhould bid her Husband take another Woman, Ibid. p. 63. We charge upon him for a Slander.

14. That Motions of God's Spirit are pretended by Quakers, at leaſt one of them, to refuſe Juſt Debts, and that they may do ſo by their Principles, Ibid. p. 69. is alſo a Story hatcht in Hell.

15. That ſcarce a Man that reads W. Penn, but thinks him to be either Diſtracted or Worſe, Cont. p. 87.

16. That ſuch as ask us Queſtions we call Reprobates, in the Sorcery, Witchcraft, polluted Beaſts, Serpents, Sots, &c. Ibid. p. 86.

17. That one of us ſhould ſay, of one that had writ againſt us, that if he writ any more againſt us, we would Print any Thing againſt him, that any would report, Be it what it would. Dial. p. 73.

18. If any Diſcourſe with us, 'tis the Man, and not the Argument that we will be concerned with. And if we can fix any Thing that is Odious, it ſhall paſs for an Anſwer, and a Confutation; And to fill up their Wickedneſs they will in their ſolemn Way of Prophaneneſs and Blaſphemy, bleſs God that they have thus anſwered.

But who has moſt medled with Perſons may be ſeen, who unprovokedly has taken into Twelve Sheets about Twenty Perſons, and all of them ſuch as have been wholly unconcerned with him, and are Strangers to him; a Way I never took. How far we meddle with our Adverſaries Strength, our Books will beſt declare. Nor were his Dialogues with me leſs than a moſt undeniable Demonſtration of the higheſt Forgery, Partiality, Cowardlineſs and Impudence that ever was given by Man, who falls upon our Concluſions, and never concerns himſelf in our Premiſes: A Principle obtained through many Arguments, he can tell how to crop, clip, pervert and diſguiſe, and then call it ours; But to engage an Argument that leads to it, as by us defended, it is not in him ſo much as to adventure; His Forgeries have been his Anſwers; And our Principles abuſed, he thought, Confutation enough to themſelves. When he has given an Error, for a Quaker's Principle, truly all may believe it, if they will, for him, he has offered in no Place but little to the contrary, and in moſt Places nothing at all.

How Honeſtly or Worthily he has dealt with us is farther evident, who brings in five of us, Fox, Dewsbury, Criſp, Whitehead, Penn, under the Suſpicion of being Wilful Lyars, Fornicators and Adulterers: For though he ſays but ſome of them; yet not Naming Who, the Blemiſh lies againſt us all, every one being left to his Liberty to think, which are the Men.

Ah! the God of Vengeance will repay this Murdering, Wicked Spirit, that as greedily Hunts after our Ruin, as the Evening Wolf doth after the Prey. If theſe Defamations are to paſs unjudged of the Anabaptiſts, God's deſpiſed Light will judge them, when all their Profeſſion ſhall never relieve them from under the Burden of it.

Thus far of Contradictions, Perverſions and Lyes. Now for a few of his Forgeries.

Some of Thomas Hicks's FORGERIES Detected.

I ſhall now endeavour to give ſome brief Account of his Forgery; and notwithſtanding the Hole he hopes to eſcape at, I doubt not to make it appear that he is guilty of it, and therefore a Forger. My Argument runs thus.

Argu. IV. He that gives that for a Man's Anſwer to any Queſtion, that is not his Anſwer to that Queſtion, is a Forger; but that T. Hicks hath done, therefore a Forger, conſequently no True Chriſtian.

He agrees to the Firſt Propoſition: the Second he denies, as I ſuppoſe, which I will prove.

T. H. Anabaptiſt, Is it Honeſt in you to deny the Scriptures to be a Rule to others, when at the ſame Time you make it a Rule to your ſelves? Dial. p. 24, 52.

Quak. Thou miſtakeſt us when we make Uſe of the Scriptures. 'tis only to quiet and ſtop their Clamours that plead for it as their Rule.

Anab. Did this Light within create the Heavens and the Earth, &c. it being proved that it ſelf is but a Creature?

Quak. Yes.

Anab. Is this Light within the Immediate Object of Divine Worſhip?

Quak: Yea.

Anab. Doth not this juſtifie that horrid Act of James Naylor's at Briſtol, in receiving Hoſannah's with Divine Worſhip, &c? Dial. p. 64, 65.

Quak. I think not meet to anſwer ſuch Enquiries. A wicked Lye; for we diſowned what was Condemnable, as himſelf afterwards did. Again, Anab. If this Light be the Rule, who is the Subject capable of underſtanding it? Ibid. pag. 13, 14, 15.

Quak. Thou art Drunk with Words and Carnal Diſtinctions, I know not what thou wouldſt be at. A very Lye.

Anab. More the Pity, if thou ſo furiouſly Contendeſt for this Thing, and yet knoweſt not what I would be at, &c. He makes us Bad that he may condemn us.

Quak. Thou art a Wicked Creature; Blackneſs of Darkneſs is reſerved for thee. This is given in Deriſion.

Anab. Was not my Queſtion Plain and Familiar; but is this Anſwer pertinent? Is it not needful we ſhould be informed, who muſt obey this Light? &c.

Quak. Thou art a Serpent, and the Curſe of God is Eternally upon thee. A Queſtion never ſo anſwered that he can prove.

Anab. This Language is ſo Natural to you, that it is as difficult for you to leave it, as for the Ethiopian to change his Skin, &c. Ungodly Man! Who ſees not that 'tis his Deſign not to be informed, nor inform us; but to Scoff and Deride us?

Quak. Thou manifeſteſt thy Darkneſs, and that thou art ſtill in thy Imagination.

Anab. What need theſe Impertinencies? T. Hicks is the Father and Forger of them.

Quak. I comprehend thee, and ſee the Serpent's Subtilty in theſe Queſtions; thou art out of the Truth, and drunk with Words. What is he that ſpues out theſe invented Anſwers?

Anab. Either thou canſt, or thou canſt not anſwer me; be ſo free and honeſt as to tell me ſo. If thou canſt, pray let me know, whether the whole Perſon, or Part, or ſomething elſe? What is this but to incenſe People againſt us, and beget Deriſion?

Thus Reader, does this Ungodly Anabaptiſt (the Scandal of his Profeſſion) treat us. We charge it all with Forgery in the Name of God, the Lord of Heaven and Earth; and every Body that is not Blind, may ſee enough of Scorn, Ignorance and Prophaneneſs. But hear a little more.

Anab. Do you believe the Scriptures to be the true Sayings of God? Ibid. p. 25.

Quak. Yea, ſo far as they agree with the Light within. An Arrant Forgery.

Anab. How ſhall I know that?

Quak. I Witneſs it.

Anab. Muſt I believe thee upon thy own Words?

Quak. I would have thee do ſo. Abominable Forgery!

Anab. Was't thou never Miſtaken about Perſons and Things?

Quak. This is an Enſnaring Queſtion.

Anab. Did the Primitive Chriſtians uſe to anſwer thus?

Quak. We deny Imitation; We are to ſpeak as we are moved. O Ungodly Mocker and Forger!

Here's your Anabaptiſt, a Preacher, a Perverter, a Forger, and a Prophaner of wholeſome Words. Who moved him to this Romance, but the Father of Lyes? What Quaker can this be beſides his; I mean, that Unchriſtian Thomas Hicks? God will avenge the Quakers Cauſe upon his Head, as ſure as he is God, if he for theſe Things repent not. But yet a little more upon Perfection.

Anab. Will this convince me, or any other, of your Perfection? Ibid. p. 72, 73.

Quak. Though it do not, yet thereby we ſhall render you ſo Odious to our Friends, that they will believe nothing that is ſpoken by you againſt us.

Anab. Then may I not conclude, that the Reaſon why you ſo freely Rail againſt, and Reproach your Oppoſers, is only to ſecure your own Credit with your Proſelytes?

Quak. I cannot deny, but that there may be ſomething of that in it. O Unreaſonable Man!

Anab. Will you be ſo Liberal of your Revilings, whether your Adverſaries give Occaſion or no?

Quak. It concerns us to render them as Ridiculous as we can, and to make our Friends believe, they do nothing but contradict themſelves: And if this fail, we will inſinuate ſomething by Way of Queſtion, that may be Reproachful to them. O Horrible Impiety! God, our God, vindicate our Innocency from theſe Helliſh Slanders.

Anab. But doth not this ſignify a very Diſhoneſt and Malicious Mind in you?

Quak. We care not what you think, provided our Friends think not ſo. Again, We will give it out, that we have both Anſwered and Confuted our Adverſaries, and our Friends will believe us, which is enough to us.

Obſerve, Reader, what a very Villain this Anabaptiſt has made of a Quaker: But where will it light, when the Anabaptiſt ſhall be known to be the Maker both of the Quaker and the Villain too? If this be not Forgery, there is no ſuch Thing in the World? O my Heart trembles within me, to think of this deteſtable Piece of Cheat. He writes as if he were hardned againſt God, deſperate againſt us, and reſolved to the Abuſe of the poor People, to make them believe his Fictions to be Truths. But the Devil always ſpoils his own Buſineſs: For who (not quite diſtracted) can think it to be more our Intereſt, to pleaſe our Friends, that we are already ſure of, than thoſe who are not yet ſuch, with Deſign to make them ours?

I charge theſe Things, with Abundance more, relating to both our Doctrine and Practice, upon him, as Abominable Forgery: And the Weight hereof ſhall lye upon his Soul in the Day of his Death. And the Righteous God of Heaven and Earth will terribly plead our Cauſe in his Conſcience, to his great Amazement, and perpetual Anguiſh, if he repent him not of theſe Undertakings.

But he objects, what Fierce and Impertinent Language he has given in Anſwer to ſeveral Queſtions E. B. furniſheth him with, in his Anſwer to one Philip Bennet, a Prieſt; As theſe: Thou art a Wicked Creature, Blackneſs of Darkneſs is reſerv'd for thee. Thou art a Serpent, and the Curſe of God is eternally upon thee. Thou Beaſt, to whom the Plagues of God are due; with which he makes a great Boaſt in his Continuation of his Dialogue, written in Part, to prove the Firſt no Fiction: But till it be better done, he will remain a Forger in the Minds of all Impartial People; for that is not the twentieth Part of what he has given under the Quaker's Name. Should that be admitted for a Proof ſo far as it extends, We have little Reaſon to believe that to be a ſufficient Proof of the Reality of the firſt, whoſe very firſt Queſtion and Anſwer is a downright Forgery in G. Whitehead's Name, and that with no Quotation, though he promis'd it; at once proving himſelf Lyar and Forger too. But in Defence of that worthy Sufferer, and deceaſed Prophet of the Lord, I have this to ſay.

1. Firſt, God having raiſed him with others, by His Eternal Power, which was very Dreadful, and Lived as a Flaming Fire in the Boſom of them, againſt the Formality, Hypocriſy, Covetouſneſs, Perſecution, and other Wickedneſs, of that Generation of Covenant-Breaking Profeſſors, both with God and Man, from whom they underwent bitter Mockings, and cruel Sufferings, He and They have been drawn forth of the Lord, to check, rebuke, and ſtrike Dumb, that Unclean, Unregenerate, and Serpentine Spirit and Nature, which was predominant, and that under the Shew of Worſhip, and Forms of Religion, acted in a Myſtery againſt the Life and Power of Godlineſs. Wherefore, when this Prieſt, in his Subtilty, and unclean Wiſdom of the Tribe and Trade of the Ungodly Phariſee, propoſed theſe Deep and Weighty Queries (not ſo much to be inform'd, as to enſnare; that's God's Word of Truth) whoſe State was to come to Judgment for Sin, and into the deep Fear, Awe and Dread of Almighty God, becauſe of Iniquity, that through God's Righteous Terrors and Judgments, he might learn the True and Experimental Knowledge of what was convenient for him to know (For they that do the Will of God, can only know the Life and Truth of his Doctrine) I warrant it from God, and by the Senſe of his Eternal Spirit do declare, that it was the Portion, and only Fit Anſwer to be given to thoſe Trepanning Queſtions: And had E.B. gone into a familiar Opening of all the Deep Things of the Spirit of God, and Myſteries of his Holy Kingdom, to his Vultrous, Unclean, Serpentine Eye, who was in that Nature that Crucified the Lord of them, E. B. had brought upon himſelf, the Wrath of the Eternal, Allwiſe God, whoſe Righteous Judgments were come, and at that Time abroad in the Earth; And I do believe they ſtruck the Prieſt home, or we had heard of him e're this; For Hypocrites, and Diſobedient Men, ſometimes are ſooner ſtruck with Judgment than Argument.

2. Nor did the Prieſt enquire ſo harmleſly, as T. Hicks would falſly inſinuate. Cont. p. [illegible] It is the Language of a White Devil, ſet on to Carp, Cavil, Catch, and Enſnare the Innocent, for the Promotion of the outſide and formal Religion, then cryed up; and ſecretly to ſmite at, and withſtand the Lord's Spiritual Appearance then breaking forth in the Nation. But the Prieſt queries ſmoothly. And what then? Is it ever the farther from being Serpentine for that? Was it not then the Jews ſought to entrap Chriſt by their Queſtions, when they came with a ſeeming Veneration and Acknowledgment, calling Him Maſter, and the like? Are ſharp Words a greater Provocation, than a Subtil, Twining, and Deceitful Spirit? If Thomas Hicks can no better diſcern Spirits, than to believe every Thing fairly ſpoken, to be True, his Judgment is like to be little minded; he is Dead to all Right Feeling. Every Spirit and Queſtion is not to be anſwered; And can he ſo baſely miſconſtrue our plaineſt and moſt upright Aſſertions, and yet put ſo high an Eſtimation upon every Thing writ againſt us? He ſhews he would have us miſrepreſented at any Rate. Let it ſuffice, that E. Burrough gave no harder Names than the Scripture by Rule allows, we read of Dogs, Bears, Wolves, Swine, Serpents, Vipers, Foxes, Children of the Devil, and ſuch like; and as that Nature to whom they were then given, thought them hard, ſo does Thomas Hicks now; but the ſame Power that then gave them, has now us'd them, to the ſame End and Purpoſe; and I abide by it.

3. Whereas Thomas Hicks inſinuates, that what E. B. ſaid was to the Man, eſpecially as to determining his Eternal State; I ſay, he has in a great Part miſtaken both him and us; For it was not ſo much to the Perſon, as that accurſed Seed which was transformed in him, by whom the Soul was deceived, and the Heel of the True Seed bruiſed: Therefore it was an Anſwer of Love to the Prieſt, though a 1673. ſharp and heavy Anſwer of Judgment upon that Mind in him, which never did, nor never will, nor can pleaſe God in any.

Ch. XIII.

Ibid. P. 27. 29. 32, 33, 34, 38.

4. 'Tis very hard and wicked with a Witneſs, in Thomas Hicks, that he ſhould run away with two or three Leaves of a large Folio Book, of about Nine Hundred Pages, conſiſting of ſo many Solid Teſtimonies, pertinent Anſwers, Heavenly Epiſtles; his Pleas of Liberty of Conſcience, his Letters, Propheſies, and Meſſages to the Powers (ſome of which his Party is concerned in) and overlook them all; yea, and like a moſt Irreligious Miſcreant indeed (for 'tis but a Miſbeliever) and with as much Hard-heartedneſs and Inhumanity, as could be ſhewn by one Man, trample upon all his Valiant Acts, Tedious Labours, Great Sufferings, and Teſtimony unto Death it ſelf, for the Free Exerciſe of a Good Conſcience to God and all Men: And as if it were not enough, to rob him of the Praiſe due to his Life, and to ſpeak Evil of him now he is dead, he endeavours what in him lyes, to invalidate his Reward, by rendring him unworthy of any Portion but what's to be had in Hell. God is my Record this Day, I would not, to inherit more Worlds than there are Stars in the Firmament, have ſo violated the Law of Charity, againſt the moſt violent of our Deceaſed Oppoſers; and God is All-ſufficient both to find out, queſtion, and recompenſe this Ungodly Traducer, whoſe Envy, I doubt not, has Fire enough in it, to burn that Good Man's Bones with his Books, as the Blood-thirſty Pope did Honeſt Wickliff's; but Thanks be to Almighty God, 'tis not in his Power, nor any of his Old Covenant-breaking, cankered Adherents: God has ſwept them off the Stage; And I declare it to be both my Faith and Prayers, that they may never come on it more; For it is ſcarcely to be doubted, but if that Day were come, rather than not root out the Quakers, Thomas Hicks would firſt forge Faults, and then Evidence to prove them. No Man can be ſecure of him in common Converſe, who, to compaſs his End, upon ſuch as oppoſe him, will Self-Contradict, Pervert, Lye, Forge, beyond which, in this World, is nothing but direct Murder, and that's a Queſtion, Since in ſome Caſes it were leſs irkſome to Dye, than to be Defamed.

Is this Doing as Men would be done to? Was D. Patrick's Friendly Debate, betwixt the Conformiſts and Non-Conformiſts, ſo Unrighteous in the Account of the Non-Conformiſts, becauſe he made their Anſwers? And doth Thomas Hicks purſue that Example; yea, to a Continuation alſo, as he did before him: Nay, did not Thomas Hicks once, upon a Time, condemn the Diſingenuity of that Way of Writing? Yet himſelf the Man. Let us but conſider the early and great Care of ſome called Anabaptiſts, to detect the Forgery of the New-England Bloody-Baptiſm, lately cryed and vended in this City. Could one think that a Chieftane of them ſhould be ſo Guilty of the ſame Injuſtice? And which is worſe, hardened in it too? And which is worſt of all, at that very Inſtant, when they were teſtifying their great Abhorrence to all ſuch Actions, and uſing all poſſible Means to check and interdict the Forgery? But we may learn from hence, how hard it is for Thomas Hicks, and ſome of his Abettors, in the Midſt of all their pretended Zeal for the Chriſtian-Religion, to do as they would be done by: They can fly to the Council-Board for an Order againſt it; to the Lord Mayor for a Prohibition of it's Sale; to the Archbiſhop's Chaplain, both to recal his Licenſe to the Forgery, and give them one to detect it. What have they miſt to clear themſelves? But this had been leſs ſuſpected to be done meerly out of Reputation, if they had taken that Vile (yet their Brother) Anabaptiſt, T. Hicks, into hand, for his Envious, Lying Pamphlets againſt us; whoſe Greater Pretences to Religion, renders him far the worſe Forger of the two: For the Author of that Pamphlet did not ſo much make it the Principle of thoſe People to deſtroy, as to recount under the Relation of a Brother to the Party murdered, the Lamentable Tragedy acted by a Member or two of that People, which, if it had been True (as perhaps it is a Lye) the whole Body had not been concern'd to anſwer for the Paſſion and Fury of two or three particular Perſons, farther than to renounce that Action. But T. Hicks hath publickly avowed Lyes againſt us, the groſſeſt imaginable, rendring us Inconſiſtent with Chriſtianity, and Deſtructive of the Government under which we live, and that by our Principles too; than which no greater Charge can be given, as well as no greater Lyes told againſt us. Well! God will be even with them for theſe Things; and will rid both Himſelf and us of that Generation of Vipers and Hypocrites, who make Lyes their Refuge, and glory in their Warfare againſt the Lamb, and His Followers; who will aſſuredly have the Victory: But the Tender-Hearted God will gather, and that ſpeedily, I do believe, as well as that I do very greatly deſire it:

To conclude, in both Books he has given thoſe Anſwets in our Names, which never were our Anſwers at all; And that little he has quoted out of our own Books, he has given as thoſe Anſwers to other Queſtions, and many Times to other Matter, therefore not our Anſwers, but his own: And conſequently Th. Hicks is guilty of Forgery, and ſo a Forger. Thus much of this Subject, to his eternal Infamy, if not wip'd away by unfeigned Sorrow and Amendment of Life.

Of his Railing, Ill Language and Evil Treating our Friends in General, and my Self in Particular.

Arg. V. He that rails, reviles, calls Names, &c. is no true Chriſtian; but ſuch is T. Hick's, therefore no true Chriſtian.

It ſeems a great Crime with Tho. Hicks, that the Quakers will not own the Scurvy Reflections of their Adverſaries (which were the next Way to be thought Guilty) And which is ſtranger, he calls them Names for defending themſelves. If we refuſe their baſe Epithets, reject their Lyes, and lay their Slanders at their own Door; they report us a Sort of Foul-Mouth'd People, Cenſorious and Judging; and which is moſt intolerable, they account ſuch Carriage towards us Goſpel-Zeal and Plain-Dealing, which are only better Words for Reviling and Railing. But whilſt ſome have thus ſhewn themſelves againſt us, upon cloſe Encounters with our Books, Tho. Hicks, that he may be extraordinary (though in Wickedneſs) forges ill Language under our Name, that he may the better practiſe Railing againſt the Quakers. and inſinuate with the Vulgar for a Reality, a very Fiction; but ſince the Anſwers, as they are, he pretends to condemn as bad, he is at once to be blamed for Forgery, and forging that which is reproveable too.

But that which deſerves our Notice is, that Tho. Hicks ſhould be the Man, of all others, that takes moſt upon him to rail the Quakers for their ſharp Dealing with their Adverſaries, who is not only Unjuſt in doing ſo, but exceſſive in his Bitterneſs againſt them, witneſs theſe Scurrilous invective Expreſſions.

A Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Quaker. Their owning Chriſt, and the Chriſt they own, a meer Myſtical Romance. Cheats and Impoſtures, Lyars, Malignant Errors. Their Hypocriſie, Deceit, Equivocations. The Way, they arrived to that Degree of Perfection, was by Quaking, foaming at the Mouth, with dreadful Roarings and Howlings, and this, he ſays, the Devil influenced us unto. Again, Deluſions, Impertinent Canting, Non-Senſe, Blaſphemy. The Devil's Slaves. Paganiſm. Satan's Snares. Pernicious and Perilous Errors. They are inſpired and influenced by that grand Impoſtor the Devil. Blaſphemous and Ridiculous Canting. Enthuſiaſtical. They decoy and trepan. Your Idle, Nonſenſical and Blaſphemous Prating. Inſpired by Satan. You are as vile Impoſtors as ever were.

Cont. Tit. Pa. p. 50. 56. 58, 66, 68. 70.

Thus much of Us and our Way in General, beſides his Knaves, Cox-Combs, Impudent and Audacious Fellows, that he has called our Friends in Religious Conferences. I think it not unſeaſonable to ſay ſomething of that Entertainment I have had at his Hand. I am wholly a Stranger to him; I ever had an Eſteem and tender Regard to the Tender-Hearted among that People with whom he walks; I know not that ever I had to do with them in general, and I am ſure, nothing at all with Tho. Hicks in particular, as to Religious Controverſie. I may farther ſay, that ſome of them have known me long, my Temper, Education, early diſſent from National Worſhips, my Sufferings upon it; and if they will be true to me, they muſt ſay, I have had the keeping of a good Conſcience above the one half of my Life in my Eye, being now about Twenty nine Years old. Now that T. Hicks in the midſt of his ſevere Rebukes of us as abuſive to our Adverſaries, ſhould treat me with ſuch Unhandſome Reflections, as Confident Dictates, intoxicated with Pride; Tinkling and Ridiculous Words; Arrogant and Conceited Man; Confident Dictator; Raſh, inconſiderate and Opinionated, I appeal from W. Penn in his Rage and Fury; His Talk bewray'd his Arrogancy, tranſported with Pride and Error; Brazen'd with Impudence, Rage and Folly; Precipitate into Blaſphemy. I ſay, that he ſhould thus vent his Paſſion and Diſpleaſure upon me, who never had to do with him, is certainly very Unchriſtian, and altogether Unworthy of any Man that pretends to correct others.

Contin p. 87.

But why Tranſported with Pride and Error? only, becauſe I ſaid, in Defence of God's revealing his Will to Man, that methinks this one Demonſtration ſhould ſatisfy all, viz. when neither Man nor Scriptures are near us, there continually attends us that Spirit that immediately informs us of our Words, Thoughts, and Deeds, and gives us true Directions what to do, and what to leave undone.

1673. And this is the whole Provocation, or Reaſon aſſigned by him, for ſuch Rude and Unhandſome Expreſſions, and that to a Man that never had to do with him. God's Chap. XIII Witneſs in all Conſciences judge betwixt us, if ſo true an Expreſſion deſerves ſuch
Dial. Ibid. Affronts; and if ſuch an Anſwer ought to paſs for a Confutation. Beſides, it is baſely done of any Man, to run down the Labours of any Man by Shreds and Scraps of Matter; or to fall upon a Concluſion without ſo much as encountring one of thoſe many Arguments that lead to it. A Way, Tho. Hicks, of all Men, has proved himſelf moſt expert and moſt unjuſt in. But why Confident Dictator, and brazened with Impudence, Rage, and Folly? Becauſe in my Second Part of the Apology in Anſwer to T. Jenner, a Prieſt in Ireland, who had publiſhed Scores of Lyes, Scandals, and Perſonal Defamations againſt many of our Friends, and particularly againſt my ſelf, (that his Book ſeemed but an Epitome of Lyes and Abuſe) I did ſay, O wretched Impudence! Could any but a Prieſt brazen'd with Rage and Folly ever pronounce ſo great a Lye, as that we ſhould perſecute the Truth and it's Followers, with bitter Revilings and Reproachings? when yet ſays T. Hicks, that to which Penn thus replies, is ſuch a Matter of Fact, that Thouſands can bear Witneſs to the Truth of it. But herein has he done fooliſhly; for it being yet diſputable betwixt us, what is Truth, and what is Perſecuting, and what is Reviling, Can he have ſo little Modeſty in his Cries againſt Impudence, as to make our Accuſers and Parties, either Judges or Witneſſes? We ſhall ſubmit it to an Impartial Judgment; but not to T. Hicks's Pride and Paſſion. However, this is moſt true, that to call Chriſt's Light an Ignis Fatuus, a dim Light, the Spirit of the Devil, to ſay that we are of the Devil, that we are poſſeſs'd, are Witches, acted and moved by Satan, Enemies to God, Chriſt, the Spirit, Religion, human Societies; with many Stories that we have offered to prove Lyes in the Sight of all Men, and particularly what he charged upon my ſelf, viz. That Penn, another of their Teachers, did boldly affirm to a Friend of mine in Dublin, that whoſoever ſhall expect to be ſaved by that Jeſus Chriſt that was born in Judea, and ſuffered at Jeruſalem, ſhall be deceiv'd; which I declare to be a Lye in the whole, and every Part of it: I ſay, this is certain, that ſo much Evil Treatment may well extort that ſharp and juſt Rebuke from me: But if it be Criminal (I know in T.Hicks's Account it is) for me ſo to Characterize a Prieſt that has written an entire Book againſt us, in which he had moſt wickedly bely'd our Principles, and abuſed our Friends, and beſpattered my ſelf in particular; what can he think of himſelf, to ſay ſo much more of me, who never writ againſt the Anabaptiſts in general, nor Tho. Hicks in particular, much leſs, that I have vented or aggravated ſo many horrible Lyes againſt either them, or him? If his Conſcience condemn him not of Baſeneſs, Paſſion and Partiality, it is ſeared; and if the Party he belongs to, judge him not for ſuch unjuſt Procedure, they will be condemned by God's Light, that will bring every unfruitful Word and Work into Judgment.

His inſinuating that I entitle J. Naylor's Blaſphemy and Railing, wherewith he was charged at Briſtol, upon the Holy Spirit, and that neither he had, nor I have Words enough to ſignify our Venom and Malignity; becauſe I ſaid of James Naylor's Book writ long before his being ſo charged, "That if he had treated that accurſed Stock "of Hirelings ten thouſand Times more ſharply, it had been but enough; is like the reſt of his ungodly Perverſions already noted; For firſt I ſpoke againſt Hirelings; and I have ſaid nothing of them, that the Holy Prophets have not exceeded, who called them Dumb Dogs, Greedy Dogs, Wolves, and ſuch like. But T. Hicks's Concern for Hirelings ſhews both that he is one himſelf, (and indeed has been ſo a long Time) and next, that he is fallen, with many more, from the firſt Love and Principle of that People called Anabaptiſts.

2. From my Juſtifying James Naylor's Sharpneſs in a particular Controverſy againſt a Deceitful, Lying Prieſt; he infers, that I defend him as to his publick Miſcarriages at Briſtol. Is this thy Conſcience? Have all thy pretended Scriptural Doctrines, Knowledge, Study, Preachments, &c. brought thee no farther? God will blaſt it all; and bring thee to Judgment for theſe Things.

Well may I return the third Particular againſt thy ſelf, and warn all People how they adhere to a Man filled with ſo much Untruth, Slander, Perverſion and Forgery; who art alienated from God's Light, as near as it is to thee, and that Heavenly Life that is felt therein by all thoſe who believe and obey the Light.

Reader, Let us not be eſteemed Railers becauſe we rebuke Railing; Nor our Religious Cenſure of their Perverſions, Forgeries and Prophaneneſs, be accounted Reviling? 'Tis Trouble enough to us to be thus concerned in Controverſy; We would find other Employment, if ſuch Envious Spirits found not this for us. 'Tis not our Choice, but theirs; They began, and, which is worſe, when the Powers left off. Their reſtleſs Spirit ſhows, it muſt have it's Vent ſome Way. Policy and Enmity, together, have turn'd it upon us; ſo that our Peace from the Powers proves a Perſecution from ſome of the Profeſſors, as the Experience of the baſe Cowardiſe of many among them gives us to remember, that the Power's Perſecution was the Time of their Peace; who, like Inſects, lay dead during thoſe Winter Seaſons; We were then their Mud-walls to flat the Shot, and Bulwarks to reſiſt the Aſſaults; and the more Moderate prayed, that we might be enabled to ſtand; But no ſooner were we come out of the Fiery Furnace, than we were ſaluted with an Impoſture from Lincoln, and a Lye from Dover, both ſubſcrib'd by Anabaptiſt Preachers, with ſeveral Clamorous Books ſince. An ill Recompence indeed for our Love and Sufferings: But from God is our Reward, therefore we are not moved; with whom we leave our Innocency; and he will Effectually plead our Cauſe with our Adverſaries.

His SCOFFS, or ſlight ESTEEM of WITNESSING; With a Word to Profeſſors; With a Concluſive Supplication to the Lord.

Argum. VI. He that Slights and Scoffs at Witneſſing, is no True Chriſtian; but that doth Tho. Hicks, therefore no true Chriſtian.

IT was the Way of the True Prophets, Apoſtles, and Churches of Chriſt, to declare of what they had known Experimentally of God and his Work, otherwiſe they muſt have been uncertain of the Truth of thoſe Things they have recommended to us: * And ſince the Times of Reformation, from the Thickneſs of Popery, Experiences have been very Excellent Things. I remember, tho' very young to Thouſands, what a great Stir and Flocking there has been in my Time after ſuch Preachers, who could by any Experiences approach the Conſciences, and tell People upon Trial what God was, and what Chriſt was, and the Holy Spirit, with Reſpect to the Soul of Man, as to Manifeſtation, Operation, Conviction, Faith, Temptation, Victory over Sin, Regeneration, and the like. Indeed, it was the Want of this Preaching that gave ſuch a Diſ-reliſh to People of the National Prieſts, and they ſuffered not a little for their Change: Sure I am, ſome Forms, reputed leſs Phanatical than that in which T. Hicks is, preſt cloſely after ſuch a Miniſtry, and utterly decry'd all other to be Beneficial in the Church of Chriſt: But the Lord having appeared in a more Immediate and Spiritual Manner, and ſome having taken up their Reſt by the Way, (thereby loſing their firſt Deſire and Love, and ſo the more Inſenſible of theſe farther Breakings forth of God's Power amongſt them) under the more refined Form they have ſat down in (and where the Lord in ſome Meaſure might have appeared to them) do they in this Day ſet themſelves to War againſt the Light and Life of Chriſt within. For indeed it is a State too Inward, Self-leſs, and Spiritual, for their Carnal Minds, that can only perform an Outward and Formal Worſhip, to arrive at. Now ſuch being cloſely beſet in their Fading and Dying Forms, and many on all Hands, in whom there are any tender Deſires after God's Inviſible Preſence, falling from them, (like Men that ſeek themſelves, and not the Lord) they are labouring hard to prevent ſuch a Separation from them; and indeed they are grown ſo Dry and Barren of all Good, by their Oppoſition to the Lord's Truth, as now revealed among us, that they come to loſe (with their former good Deſires) their very Doctrine; And that which above all Things was once moſt deſirable to the better Sort of them) and applauded by all, is become a Theme for Scorn and Deriſion; I mean, WITNESSING.

Luther oppoſed the Pope and his Adherents, particularly about Juſtification by Works, upon Experience, He made it to ſtand in the Teſtimony of God in the Conſcience, that he was accepted from an Inward Work of God's Spirit, and not any Outward Works, much leſs ſuch as their Works were. Weſſel, & Luth. confer. Fox. Mart. 2 Tom.

The Engliſh Martyrs laid the Streſs of their Oppoſition to Popery, upon their Witneſſing better Things. Book of Mart.

The Browniſts call themſelves God's Sack-Cloth-Witneſſes in their Apology dedicated to King James, in the Beginning of his Reign, 1. yea, in that Epiſtle Dedicatory, they ſpeak ſeveral Times to that Purpoſe, their being Witneſſes, that they did Witneſs, &c. The Like often in the Preface and Book it ſelf, with great Zeal and Honeſty. 'Twas what they all in their ſeveral Days felt ſpringing up in them, that gave them to reliſh Perſons, Words, and Things; and as they ſavoured, ſo they teſtified. Their Experience was the Ground of their Knowledge: And their Inward Witneſſing the Work and Will of God, the Reaſon of their outward witneſſing for it unto Death it ſelf.

T. Hicks, though an Anabaptiſt-Preacher, cannot abide to hear of Witneſſing. He had as lieve meet with the Lye, as Witneſſing, for an Anſwer. He commonly beſtows Ignorance, Folly, or ſuch like upon it for a Companion; And though another Return might be as eaſily found out by him, yet becauſe it may not ſo well ſuit the Scoffer and Prophane, WE WITNESS IT is to go in it's Room. To which Kind of Anſwer he uſually replies, What is thy Witneſſing to Me? Do not put us off with your Witneſſings, which ſignify nothing to us. Thy Commands and Witneſſing are much alike to me, with more of this Kind.

My Friends, In the Love of God, that would have you redeemed and ſaved, I beſeech you, turn away from ſuch blind Guides, their Paths are Darkneſs, and the End thereof Death; If ever you will know and worſhip God aright, you muſt come to the Meaſure of his Spirit in you, that is given to convince the World of Sin, and you muſt know the Work thereof Experimentally in you, or your Souls periſh for ever. My Friends, I have a great Streſs upon me concerning you, would I could reach into every Soul of you, that you might be touched with this true Teſtimony; for I know not more truly that God is, than that I feel him to be a Rewarder of every Man according to his Works; and ſuch as Men ſow they muſt reap. And truly, my Friends, Time paſſeth away apace, and the Day makes haſte over you, if your Viſitation be ſhut up in God's withdrawing the Light of his Countenance, (inwardly to be felt and known by ſuch as turn to it) your Condition will be miſerable for ever. I beſeech you, in the Bowels of the Love of Chriſt Jeſus, unto whom this comes; Be ſtill, cool, and moderate, let him in, whoſe Right it is; He will affect your Hearts, purify your Souls, deſtroy your Enemies, and finally ſave you from Sin here, and Wrath to come; for to that End was he given a Light to lighten the Gentiles, and for Salvation to the Ends of the Earth. And hold no Communion with ſuch unſavoury Perſons as T. Hicks, a Man turn'd, I teſtify, from the Grace of God into Dryneſs, and Wantonneſs, and Prejudice, who makes a Mock at Experience, and to whom the Weighty Work of Witneſſing is Matter of Deriſion. O the Ill Uſe he has made of Religion, and the Lamentable End he is come and coming to! My Friends, get to Experience, get to Witneſſing by all Means, and that with all Speed; for thoſe who cannot witneſs God's Work and Will done in them to their Sanctification, ſhall never ſee Heaven; That is the Word of the Lord God of Life and Power, and it is ſealed for ever. Ah! Life for your Souls, or you periſh, which is only known in the Light; and you muſt be born again, or you enter not into the Kingdom of God. No ſplendid Shew, no Methodical Articles, no Outward Fellowſhips will ſerve Turn; Friends, They will all ſtay behind, when you muſt go away once and for ever. Therefore be not Oppoſers of God's Work in your ſelves, nor others; but ſeek after Inviſible Life for your Souls, that will go with you; And if you will believe in the Light, you ſhall not abide in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life; which, bleſſed be God, we do Experience, yea, Tho. Hicks, we Witneſs it. And though thou haſt beſtowed much Time to Abuſe, Bely, Slander, and Traduce our Friends in General, and my ſelf (a Stranger to thee) in Particular, yet I can forgive thee, and the Lord is Record for me, I wiſh thy Salvation. O that theſe heavy Things might not be laid to thy Charge! For, ſo ſure as God liveth, Great will be the Wrath that ſhall follow: yea, God will viſit for theſe Unrighteous Dealings: And I teſtify to thee from God's Living Spirit, if thou deſiſt not, and come not to deep Repentance, the Lord will make thee an Example of his Fury, and thy Head ſhall not go down to the Grave in Peace; and by this ſhalt thou know, that not a Lying, or Deluſive, but a True and Infallible Spirit hath ſpoken by me; yea, the Light within will bear Witneſs to the Truth of theſe Things on thy Dying-Bed; and then remember me. I wiſh well to all; I ſeek the Good of all; I have nothing in my Eye, but the Glory of my God, the Proſperity of his Truth, and the Salvation of all People, through their Belief in it, and Obedience to it. Wherefore my Heart is not diſcomforted, but I have Peace with him, whoſe Preſence I feel, in which is Life to my Soul, Strength towards my Labours, Support under Sufferings, and a plentiful Reward for them all.

A Concluſive Supplication.

O LORD God! Plead thy own Cauſe, and the Innocency of thy own poor People: O Lord! Reach into the Conſciences of all thy Enemies; Breathe a Blaſt upon all their pleaſant Shews; Strain the Glory of their Will-Worſhip; Bring them down, that thou mayſt exalt them; Wound them, that thou mayſt heal them; Break them, that thou mayſt bind them up. O, that they may all hunger and thirſt after thy Appearance; that thy Life, and Power, and Wiſdom, they may come to Witneſs, that they may be all ſaved in this thy Day, O Lord, from every Barren Way, and from every Evil Work; that the Life of thy Pure Spirit may ſhine forth by them to thy Eternal Praiſe, who over all art worthy, who art God, Bleſſed for ever, Amen.

Magna eſt Veritas, & Prevalet.

Great is the Truth, and it doth Prevail.

A Postscript of Complaint againſt the Unfair Dealing of our Publick Enemies.

SINCE God viſited us by his glorious Light, and that he alarm'd, quicken'd and raiſed us by his Almighty Power, that broke in upon our Hearts and Conſciences to diſcover Sin, wound for it, and redeem from under the Yoak of it, that our Religion might not ſtand in Word and in Form only, but in Power and Life: But ſpecially ſince our Outcry againſt the Formality and Emptineſs of the many Religions in the World, preaching the Neceſſity of Obedience to the Daily Croſs unto Salvation; many have been our Enemies, and thoſe of divers Sorts. What Stratagems they have uſed may be better known, when it ſhall be conſidered what they have not uſed to our Deſtruction; Indeed few, or none: For if Lyes, Forgeries, Perverſions, Miſ-repreſentations, Aggravation of Invented Miſcarriages would have done, we had not been now in the World: But God has preſerved us to this Day, and the Points of their Arrows have retorted upon themſelves, and the Hole they have digged for us, they have often fallen into themſelves; and our Patience and Reſolution will wear out their Envy and Cruelty.

Among other of their Eſſays, Writing hath not been the leaſt in Practice and Requeſt. But this we have publickly to declare of, and that in a Way of Juſt Complaint: Our Enemies multiply their Books againſt us; yet never anſwer our Defences. The utmoſt of their Endeavours towards it ſeems to end either in Cavilling, Perverting, Miſ-repreſenting our Words and Meanings (rather diſguiſing than confuting our Principles) or elſe inventing Error and Weakneſs in our Name, that they may the more eaſily convict us of both; though guilty of neither.

Since therefore they afford us no Juſt Dealing, but inſtead of weighing our Reaſons, in Vindication of our ſo much decryed Way, ſeek to defame it, through Ignorance or Malice, or both; We thought it fit to let them know, that we have ſeveral Books already out, which contain a large and effectual Defence of our Principles and Practices, which we demand a ſerious Conſideration of, and full Anſwer to before we ſhall think our ſelves obliged to any farther Tracts in our Vindication, than what have been already writ, and which we are now in Hand withal. For that we ſhould ſo often defend our ſelves, and our Defences be neglected; and inſtead of an effectual Conſideration of them, that they ſhould fall to their old, and ſo often repell'd Charges and Accuſations, as if they writ, not to have us clear our ſelves, nor yet that they would juſtifie their Miſ-repreſentations of us, by confuting our Apologies, but to bedirt and diſguiſe us to the People, is moſt Unreaſonable on their Side, as well as that it would argue great Indiſcretion on ours, to follow them into every repetitious Accuſation. For our Parts, we can never think our ſelves obliged to juſtifie our Principles ſo many Times over, againſt the ſame Charges, till our Anſwers have been better weighed: For as ſuch Trouble would be almoſt endleſs; ſo in Reality, it looks more like making us Work, than Refuting

1673. us. Beſides, I muſt needs tell the World, the baſe Cowardice of this Adverſary in hand; for we have offered him a freee Meeting with his Books in our Hands, proffering to refute them vivâ voce before the World; but inſtead thereof, or any other way (as ſeveral have been tendered) he diſingenuouſly ſlinks away, and puts off by meer Shifts and Evaſions: His Buſineſs is to write Dialogues, when he is ſure to anſwer himſelf, and to back his Forgeries with Lyes.

But avoiding all Party-Reflection, or any farther Aggravation of this baſe Fear and Injuſtice too; we ſhall among the many Books writ by us in general in Defence of our Way we profeſs, lay theſe few upon the Heads of our ſeveral Adverſaries, as containing much of what can be ſaid in Behalf of our Principles and Practices.

1. Prieſts and Profeſſors Principles, writ by G. Fox.
2. Ruſticus ad Academicos, writ againſt J. Owen, R. Baxter, J. Tombs and T. Danſon, by S. Fiſher.
3. Ἐπίσκοπος Ἀπόσκοπος, writ againſt Biſhop Gauden, by Samuel Fiſher.
4. Edward Burrough's Works.
5. The Divinity of Chriſt, &c. writ againſt J. Owen, T. Danſon, T. Vincent, W. Maddox, by G. W.
6. Oaths no Goſpel-Ordinance, againſt A. Smallwood, writ by Francis Howgil.
7. The Great Caſe of Tythes, by Francis Howgil.

11. Chriſt Aſcended, &c. writ againſt J. Newman, by G. Whitehead.
12. The Light and Life of Chriſt within, &c. writ againſt W. Burnet, by G. W.
13. No Croſs, no Crown, &c. writ by W. Penn.
14. The Spirit of Truth Vindicated, &c. writ againſt the Socinians, by W. Penn,
15. Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity, &c. writ againſt J. Faldo. by W. Penn.
16. The Chriſtian-Quaker, &c. writ againſt the Strength of all our many Adverſaries in general, and ſeveral of them in particular; divided into two Parts, the firſt by W. Penn, the ſecond by G. Whitehead.

Theſe, with our preſent Diſcourſe, let them anſwer; and if they have any Thing that's new to offer, we ſhall, we hope, by God's Aſſiſtance, freely and faithfully conſider it; otherwiſe let Shame cover the Face of our Enemies for their Unjuſt Out-cries and Baſe Forgeries againſt us, whom they cannot by Reaſon Silence, nor ſober Argument confute.

Reader,

IT was about a Month after the Publication of T. Hicks's laſt Dialogue, e're I knew there was ſuch a Pamphlet in the World; I took great Care to get it, and then us'd us'd no leſs Diligence to peruſe it, which having done, I ſhall briefly and faithfully give thee my Senſe, both of the Man and his Work, and, I hope, ſufficient Proof to juſtifie that Account.

Some were of the Mind, our full and ſober Anſwer to his other diſingenuous Dialogues, with that Remembrance we gave him of his own former Diſlike and Reprehenſion of that unfair Way of Writing Controverſie, to ſome of his own Profeſſion in Wiltſhire, would have had ſome Place with him, and influence upon him, towards a more Juſt Procedure with us for the future; That inſtead of a Man of Straw, and a Fool and a Knave of his own creating (and therefore call'd by him a Quaker, that he might the better intitle us to his invented Error, Blaſphemy and Immoralities, and bring us under the Odium that follows) we ſhould have ſeen, if not a real Contrition for the Wrong done us, at leaſt, if in the Wrong our ſelves, ſome Arguments more fairly given, and tenderly preſt, in order to reclaim us: But in lieu of a ſolid and edifying Confutation (were we in the Wrong) the Man is become reſolv'd and deſperate; without all regard to God, Reaſon, Scripture, his own Credit, and the Repute of his Party (not a little weakned by his Carriage) for it ſeems no matter with him how black the Stratagem be, provided it renders but the Quakers and their Faith deteſtable. And ſo remote is he from the leaſt Acknowledgment of his former Miſcarriages, to wit, Forgeries, Perverſions, Evaſions, Lyes, Slanders and Railings, that with regret I ſpeak it, he has preſumptuouſly continued and advanced in that Ungodly Practice, as if he would maintain our Iniquity by the doubled Confidence of another; increaſing, with the number of his Dialogues, the number of thoſe Impieties, for which his other two were ſo frequently rejected of ſober and well-diſpoſed People. Now if the Man be ſo bad, and that in his Book too, how his Book can be good, is beyond the Skill of any Man to tell us. That he deſerves no better Character at any Good Man's Hand, and that I write but the very Truth of the Matter, I ſhall proceed to manifeſt by ſuch Inſtances and Evidences, as I think cannot be juſtly queſtioned of either Reaſon or Senſe.

Reader, be but intent and impartial in thy peruſal, and I deſire no more at thy Hands to our Vindication and our Adverſary's utter Shame. Farewel.

The Counterfeit Chriſtian Detected, &c.

NOT long after Tho. Hicks had brought forth his Piece of Fiction, being charged by ſeveral, as well thoſe that were not of our Way, as our own Friends, with having made a Quaker of his own (and no wonder then that he ſhould confute him) he, as one concern'd to buoy up his Credit above thoſe Aſſaults, writes the Continuation, or Second Part, endeavouring to make appear, that he had not wrong'd us in his firſt. I undertook to conſider them, and that in a Spirit of Moderation, to the People of his Profeſſion, and to him, at moſt, but in a Way of grave Rebuke of his Unchriſtian Practice. In this I repreſented his Forgery, with many other of his Unrighteous Dealings towards our Perſons and Profeſſion. At this he fumed and raged; and where he might ſafely do it, in City and Country, I was a Knave, and I know not how many more hard Names, that both ſuit his Envy, predominant Paſſions, and ſordid Practice, to the Diſgrace of his Religious Pretences. But it has ſo happened, that about a Year's Time after, he has thought it requiſite to give us ſix Sheets, which are to advocate his Cauſe, and prove to the World that I am an Arrogant, Abuſive, Prophane, Impertinent Man, with abundance of the like Dirt, out of his foul Pit, which he loads almoſt every Page withal.

The Intent of this laſt Undertaking, is to condemn us out of our own Mouth, and ſhew to the World, that we verify what before he had charged upon us, and we ſo confidently denied: But if upon Examination, it ſhall appear, that my Charges againſt him remain firm, and that by the Aſſiſtance of this laſt Dialogue it ſelf, I hope, notwithſtanding his high Rants, mighty Confidence, moſt poſitive and dogmatical Say-ſo's, and hard and ſcornful Names, with which he endeavours to over-bear us, he ſhall be reputed the Man we have deſcrib'd him, and therefore unworthy of the Name of Chriſtian, which he untruly gives himſelf in his Dialogues.

Sect. I.

Sect. I. Tho. Hicks proved guilty of Forgery.

I Shall begin with an Account of his Title-Page, and what he promiſes his Reader there; The Quaker condemned out of his own Mouth. or an Anſwer to W. Penn's Book, entituled, Reaſon againſt Railing, and Truth againſt Fiction; wherein W. P. hath confeſſed, That if thoſe Things objected againſt the Quakers in two former Dialogues be true, then a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian. That thoſe Matters heretofore objected were, and are, real Truths, and no Fictions, is fully cleared and evinced in this Third Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Quaker by Thomas Hicks, Tit. Pag.

That a Quaker is Condemned out of Tho. Hicks's Mouth, is no Wonder to me; but that he ſhould be Condemned out of his own, would be ſtrange, and is, we hope, a Task too difficult for him to ſurmount. However, he tells us, that what Things he objected againſt us in his former Dialogues, called Fictions by us, are cleared and evinced to be no Fictions, but real Truths by him: This is either true or falſe; if true, we are wrong; if falſe, T. Hicks is ſtill to be reputed a Forger.

He that would clear himſelf from any Charge, muſt be ſure to take into his Anſwer the Matter of that Charge, or he ſhuffles with his Adverſary, and maketh no allowable Defence for himſelf. That this is T. Hicks's Caſe, inſtead of Condemning the Quaker out of his own Mouth, and conſequently that he is worthy to be condemned himſelf for his Enterprize, I ſhall briefly ſhew.

I charged him at the Entrance into my former Book, with having anſwer'd his own knottieſt Queſtions in our Name, with the moſt weak and impertinent Returns he could well invent; and in many Pages there was not ſo much as a Quotation to be ſeen (a Practice to be deteſted of any that have learned but the very Alphabet of Common Honeſty) to which the Man ſays nothing, yet would be thought a fair Diſputant, yea, a Chriſtian too, if any Body will believe him.

Next, I charged him with having given ſome Anſwers, we could acknowledge ours, joyned to their proper Queſtions, unto ſuch Queſtions, as they were never returned to, therefore guilty of Forgery; though not in making them Anſwers at all, yet in giving them for Anſwers to thoſe Queſtions unto which they never related, which is a manifeſt Miſapplication of them; But of this neither do we hear one Word.

Again, Though what he has ſaid in his Title-Page be enough for us, and we ſhall anon deſcend to uſe it, yet does not that contain or reach my Queſtion, as in Honeſty it ought to have done, which was this; Whether thoſe Doctrines and Expreſſions charged upon the People called Quakers, by Tho. Hicks, in both his Dialogues, be really the Doctrines and Sayings of that People, or not? And afterwards, Whether what we own, and is by him charged with Error, is ſufficiently oppoſed or proved ſuch? Reaſon againſt Railing, p. 6. Which, Reader, takes in not only what T. H. objects againſt the Quakers, but what he invents and anſwers for them, and under their Name, whether it be about Doctrine or Practice. Nor is this all that may be learned of T. Hicks in his Title-page; For, to compleat his Baſeneſs in that very Paſſage, obſerve, that as he only renders us concerned at his Objections, ſo does he confine theſe Words [are real Truths and no Fictions] unto them. Whereas it is notorious to all that have but turned over my Anſwer, that it was not only, nor indeed ſo much, his Objections againſt us, as thoſe Anſwers he gave for us, that I charged with Fiction. But T. Hicks's Policy in this Contrivance is not unworthy of our Notice, though always of our Approbation; for this is the plain Language of it, If I uſe not theſe Stratagems to cloud the Queſtion, and vary the Charge, I am a Forger, &c. there's no Help for it; and that diſcards me with all Men, even thoſe of my own Party; wherefore I will ſo order the Matter, that I will only bring my ſelf upon the * Proof of my own Objections, and overlook theirs. But though this goes a great Way, yet this alone will not do; For I query, Doſt thou intend by Objections, which thou ſay'ſt I call Fictions, all, or ſome; if but ſome of them, thou ſhouldſt in Honeſty have ſaid ſo; if all, as thy Words imply, then haſt thou farther abuſed us; for my State of the Queſtion includes a grant of ſome of them in Point of Citation, though none as Errors.

But, Reader, this is T. Hicks's Fetch (for without them he can do nothing againſt us) If I can extend the Word Forgery or Fiction, as well to Things they do grant, as thoſe they deny, by ſome ſuch general Words, as Matters objected againſt the Quakers, &c. Then by proving they acknowledge I have rightly quoted and charged them in ſome three or four Particulars, I will clear my ſelf from the foul Imputation of Forgery in all the reſt.

* Not that I allow him to have rightly charged us in every Thing in that Senſe neither.

That this is the very Truth it ſelf, and therefore Forgery in the Abſtract, let the Reader know, that this has been his Practice, to wit, Where we have never charged Forgery upon him, he has taken his Opportunity, and that with the Confidence of an Innocent, to cry out, Is this candid to call me a Forger, when you confeſs the Thing—Then I am not guilty of Forgery— this clears me from being a Forger— Examine theſe Pages in his Third Dialogue, viz. p. 4, 5, 6, 9, 29, 36, 39. and mine to which he there refers, and which he pretends to anſwer, and thou wilt have ſuch Evidence of the Truth of what I ſay to thy very Senſe, as muſt needs render my Adverſary's Carriage worthy of thy ſevere Cenſure.

But as he hath attempted the Proof of his Innocency in this Matter, by Places that never reflected any ſuch Sort of Guilt upon him (therefore ſtill the Man once charged to be) ſo has he wholly declined medling with the very Head of Forgery, under which I ranked near Twenty Anſwers, ſet down by him in our Name, that were never given by us, in either Matter or Form, to thoſe or any other Queſtions; as a Demonſtration of the Truth of my Accuſation; ſome of which are ſo very groſs, that had not his Envy over-powered his Wits, Credit with his ſober Neighbours would have diſſwaded him, if the Apprehenſion of God's Judgments could not have deterred him.

Before I produce Particulars, I ſhall recite a Paſſage in his ſecond Dialogue, p. 2. as a Proof of the unmeaſurable Confidence, as well as Folly and Wickedneſs of the Man. Quak. Thou haſt preſented the World with a Quaker of thine own framing, making him to ſpeak thoſe Impertinencies and Falſehoods that were never uttered by any real Quaker; Therefore it is a Forgery. G. W. Epiſt to D. P. Anab. You had done well, if you had produced ſome Inſtances wherein I made them ſpeak what was never uttered by a real Quaker: But if I can prove that what is ſpoken under that Name is the Language of a real Quaker; then thou haſt confeſſed that ſuch may be guilty of Impertinencies and Falſhood.

But T. Hicks has made them ſpeak what was never uttered by a Real Quaker, and has not ſo much as attempted to prove the contrary; Therefore T. Hicks by his own Argument is guilty of Impertinencies and Falſhoods. This I made appear in my Anſwer to his former Dialogues; and therein did well by his own Confeſſion; For I produced ſeveral Paſſages to make good my Charge of Forgery, unto which he is wholly ſilent. I ſhall inſtance in three or four of them, that my Reader may both perceive the Spirit of the Man, and ſee at what rate he has clear'd himſelf from my Imputations.

Anab. Is it honeſt in you to deny the Scripture to be a Rule to others, when at the ſame Time you make it a Rule to your ſelves? Dial. 1. pag. 24, 52.

Quak. Thou miſtakeſt us; when we make uſe of the Scriptures, it is only to quiet and ſtop their Clamours, that plead for it as their Rule.

Anab. Do you believe the Scriptures to be the true Sayings of God, ibid. p. 25, 2.

Quak. Yea, ſo far as they agree with the Light within.

Anab. May I not conclude, that the Reaſon why you ſo freely rail againſt and reproach your Oppoſers, is only to ſecure your Credit with your Proſelytes, ibid. page 72, 73.

Quak. I cannot deny but that there may be ſomething of that in it.

Anab. Will this convince me or any other of your Perfection? ibid.

Quak. Though it do not, yet thereby we ſhall render you ſo Odious to our Friends, that they will believe nothing that is ſpoken by you againſt us.

Anab. Will you be ſo liberal of your Revilings, whether your Adverſaries give occaſion or no? ibid.

Quak. It concerns us to render them as ridiculous as we can, and to make our Friends believe, they do nothing but contradict themſelves: And if this fail, we will inſinuate ſomething by way of Queſtion, that may be Reproachful to them.

Anab. But doth not this ſignifie a very Diſhoneſt and Malicious Mind? ibid.

Quak. We care not what you think, provided our Friends think not ſo. We will give it out, that we have both anſwer'd and confuted our Adverſaries, and our Friends will believe us, which is enough to us.

What a Wicked and Falſe Quaker this counterfeit Chriſtian hath made, to abuſe true ones? If this be not Forgery, palpable Forgery, and that not only againſt ſome one Perſon, but the People in general, perſonated by his own made Quaker, 1674. there is no ſuch Thing as Forgery in the World. O you that ſeriouſly profeſs Religion, can you away with this?

Sect. I. But hath he vindicated himſelf from theſe baſe Courſes, or honeſtly confeſſed them? Neither. How then can he juſtly call himſelf a Chriſtian, or be thought to have anſwered my Book, that hath thus baſely declined that Part of it, which ſtood him moſt upon to diſprove? But how groſly ſoever he hath repreſented us, and how ſilently over-look'd our Charges, he wants not Confidence to write after this Strain; I do affirm in Seriouſneſs, that the Account I have now, and heretofore, given of the Quakers, is no other than the very Truth, Epiſt. p. 5. How ſerious is this Man in his Lying? Forge firſt, and then Lye to prop it: Impudence in Grain!

For what he hath ſaid heretofore, relating to this Particular, I have here briefly conſidered it. Let us ſee if he be any better now; In order to it, I have already ſhewn you the Shuffle of his Title-Page: I will now proceed to give you an Account of his Progreſs in this Black Art of Forgery and baſe Abuſe.

Anabapt. I am not conſcious of having objected any thing againſt you in my former Dialogues, but what I am certainly perſwaded to be true, p. 1.

But is not T. Hicks conſcious of firſt making us ſay that we never ſaid, and then calling it, A Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Quaker? That T. Hicks was a Forger I have evidenced: That he is one ſtill, his own Words ſhew; for inſtead of retracting, he pleads Innocency in being ſo: No wonder this Man can write againſt the Light within; whoſe Conſcience, if we will believe him, is ſo ſeared, that it feels no Riſings againſt the fouleſt Forgeries. But let's hear him a little farther.

Anabapt. I am ſo confident of the Truth of thoſe Allegations, that I doubt not to avouch them, to all impartial Men, Ibid.

We never doubted his Confidence, but Honeſty. His Allegations muſt either reſpect thoſe Paſſages, which he book'd and pag'd, or elſe all that he alledges under the Name of Quaker: If the former, he is a Forger ſtill; for more than Three Hundred in his Dialogue were neither book'd nor pag'd: If the latter, he tells a plain Untruth; for he has not ſo much as attempted to avouch them, unleſs it is to be underſtood of his Confidence.

Seven Inſtances I ſhall give of his Continuance in FORGERY.

I. T. Hicks's firſt Forgery begins with his Title-Page, and in that very Paſſage, where he promiſeth an Evincement of his own Objections to be no Fictions, but real Truths; to wit, that he doth not only content himſelf in making the Evincement of his own Objections againſt us (unfairly over-looking ours) to be all he is concerned in, but in ſo many Words tells the World, That I confeſs, if thoſe Things objected againſt the Quakers in the two former Dialogues be true, then a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian; who never ſaid or confeſſed any ſuch Thing in all my Life: For I well knew, that the Conroverſy roſe higher, and went farther than his meer Objections; I mean, to all he gave under our Name; as both the Queſtion ſtated, and my Purſuit of it do evidently prove. So that he, to make the Clearing of his own Objections enough (yet more than he can ever do) brings me in with a Confeſſion of a Thing I never thought on, much leſs ever writ; what ſhall I call this but Forgery upon Forgery?

II. His Second Forgery brings me in thus: Qua. If the Quotations be true, I do freely acknowledge, that a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian. Reaſon againſt Rail. p. 2.

There is no Paſſage ſo laid down by me; my Words are theſe, T. Hicks hath given us a Second Part, wherein he hopes to make good what he charged upon us in his firſt by Quotations out of our own Books; If faithfully done, I ſhall freely acknowledge that a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian. Where it is obſervable, that I do not lay the Hazard of a Quaker's being a Chriſtian, meerly upon the Truth of his Quotations, but the Uſe of and Application of them, if they be faithfully done: that is, if he can make thoſe Quotations and his Charges meet againſt us, I ſhall concede; for a Quotation implies an Agreement. He hoped to creep out at a few right Citings, and to be over-look'd all falſe Applying and Perverting, by unnatural Conſequences, to his Crooked Purpoſe. Though had I ſaid, as he ſets me down, I ſhould have no Cauſe to fear the Iſſue; ſince if naming us may go for Quoting, he has done it an Hundred Times, where he has directed to no Particular Way of knowing the Truth thereof, conſequently is a Forger; and where he has been more punctual, I dare abide by every ſuch one he ever made, well-knowing he cannot get one Letter to ſpeak for him, but by his meer Sophiſtry and cuſtomary Wreſts.

III. His Third Forgery in this Third Dialogue, is thus laid down by him. He begins with an Anſwer to the laſt Paſſage he quoted for mine.

Anab. Art thou well adviſed in what thou ſayſt? p. 1, 2.

Quak. Were we as thou repreſenteſt us, the ſevereſt Plagues and Judgments of the Eternal God we might juſtly expect to be our Portion, Reaſon againſt Railing, page 4.

The Streſs lies here, Whether this Anſwer were ever given by me to the Queſtion 'tis now made an Anſwer to? I ſay, No; Therefore a Forger. Next, let us ſee if it was ever given to a Queſtion of the like Tendency? No; Therefore the greater Forger. I will ſet down the two Paſſages unto which this hath been given twice for Anſwer, that my Reader may be helpt to a clearer Sight of the Man.

In this Third Dialogue he queries of me:

Anab. Art thou well adviſed in what thou ſayſt, in ſaying; If my Quotations be true, thou doſt freely acknowledge that a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian. Dial. 3, p. 1.

Quak. Were we as thou repreſenteſt us, the ſevereſt Plagues and Judgments of the Eternal God we might juſtly expect to be our Portion. Reaſon againſt Railing, Page 4.

Thus T. H. lays it down: But let us ſee how it is in my Book.

T. H. queries, Will you be ſo liberal of your Revilings, whether your Adverſary give Occaſion or not? He anſwereth for us: Quak. It concerns us to render them as ridiculous as we can, and to make our Friends believe, They do nothing but contradict themſelves, which is enough to us. Upon which, Reader, I made this Reflection: Certainly theſe Things ſhew ſuch premeditated and wilful Obſtinacy to be Wicked, that were we what he repreſents us to be, in this very Matter, the ſevereſt Plagues and Judgments of the Eternal God we might juſtly expect to be our Portion, &c. p. 4. If only ſaid in this very Matter, then not in every Matter T. Hicks pleaſeth to wreſt or twiſt it to: O groſs Abuſe! Shall this Man go for a Chriſtian? But his Evil is greatly heighten'd, when we conſider, that theſe Words were ſpoken of ſuch a Paſſage, as to this Minute he never ſo much as attempted to clear from the Imputation of Forgery, though ſo much charged upon him, p. 67 of my Anſwer; becauſe there was no Quotation for it, nor in Senſe can be expected for ſo plain a Fiction: And yet he makes it a formal Anſwer to a Queſtion about right and wrong Quotations, which were not there in Queſtion; as if it were one and the ſame Thing, to ſay, The Plagues and Judgments of God we might expect, &c. if ſo morally Evil as he brought us in ſpeaking our ſelves to be, for which he directed us to no particular Proof, neither could: And to ſay, We might juſtly expect the Plagues of God, &c. if he repreſented us right, as to Quotations about Doctrines out of our own Books, which was never the Queſtion. He that can thus invent, add, diminiſh, and tranſpoſe, both Words and Sentences, may write Dialogues at Pleaſure, and as eaſily abuſe the Prophets and Apoſtles, yea, Chriſt Jeſus himſelf, as the People called Quakers.

IV. His Fourth Forgery he makes, and that I think fit to remark, is this.

Anab. But doſt thou indeed believe, that thoſe Quotations in the former Dialogues are Forgeries?

Quak. I do ſo. Dial. 3, p. 2.

This is all falſe; I never thought ſo, much leſs writ ſo; nor was that the Queſtion, taking Quotations for Places cited, as to Book and Page. And if generally accepted by him, he brings me in denying all, which was as much beſide my Thoughts.

Thus he ſhuffles with me, and endeavours to delude ſimple People by the Word Quotation, (which taken ſtrictly, does not reach the one Half of thoſe Anſwers he made us to give) by getting a few Paſſages acknowledged, which he has punctually made, (though miſerably perverted) to make them believe, all given under our Name, not ſo cited, are alſo allow'd under the ſame Term [Quotations.]

Beſides, He has not referred us for any ſuch Anſwer in any Book I ever wrote. This, Reader, is ſo far from proving and evincing former Charges againſt us, that it is to multiply more Fictions, and add to his other Score.

V. His Fifth Forgery is in Page 59, and conſiſts of two Parts: The firſt is, The foiſting in of the Word only; The ſecond of miſ-placing and miſ-applying my Anſwer, 1674. Sect. I. that he may the better have his Ends upon me, which is but one of his many unruly reigning Sins. Obſerve, becauſe I told him, that E. B. in ſaying, ‘ That ‘ was not a Command to him, which was a Command to another, reſpected not thoſe univerſal and eternal Precepts of fearing God, and working Righteouſneſs (as T. H. untruly inferred) But more extraordinary and particular Injunctions; ſuch as the Going of Moſes to Pharaoh, with many more. And becauſe I explain another Paſſage out of E. B. by him cited and wreſted, viz. ‘ You are not dead with Chriſt, ‘ who are yet ſubject to Ordinances; after this Manner, E. B. pleads only againſt ſuch Ordinances, as were but Shadowy, and to paſs off; He puts the Adverb only, by me mentioned in what I ſaid to this laſt Citation out of E. B. in my Explanation of the firſt Citation, where I never mentioned it. And that he might faſten a Contradiction upon me, he omits this laſt Citation out of E. B. mentioned in his ſecond Dialogue, and makes the Anſwer I gave to his Uſe of it, to belong to that which I gave to the Former about Commands, as if they had been but one entire Anſwer to one and the ſame Paſſage, which were really two.

The Advantage he hoped to gain, was this, that I ſhould ſay, E. B. intended by Commands, only extraordinary Ones, as Moſes's going to Pharoah, &c. and yet ſay, That E. B. only meant ſuch Ordinances as are Shadowy; if only ſuch extraordinary, then not only ſuch Shadowy; if only ſuch Shadowy, then not only ſuch Extraordinary; as if they had been ſaid of the ſame Paſſage, and on the ſame Occaſion; whereas the firſt was in Page 47 of E. B's Works, and the other in Page 105, as Thomas Hicks himſelf quotes them, in his ſecond Dialogue, p. 59, 61.

But that which yet adds Blackneſs to this Forgery is, firſt, that at what Time he foiſted [only] into my Explanation of the firſt Paſſage, he baſely left out theſe three Words, [with many more] which were on Purpoſe to ſhew I did not ſtint E. B's Uſe of the Word Command, to the extraordinary Caſes inſtanced in my Anſwer. And next, that after all that premeditated Injuſtice, he flings theſe ſtinking Interrogatories at me, Doſt thou conſult thy Credit in multiplying ſuch Inſtances of thy Inadvertency and Folly? What Reaſon hath any Man to believe thee, either in what thou affirmeſt or denyeſt, that doſt ſo apparently contradict thy ſelf? This is not only to be bad, but brazen withal. To contradict a Man's Self is reproveable; but to make Contradictions in another Man's Name, is deteſtable; To commit Injuries againſt any is ill done; but to brave the Wronged with inſolent Reflections, muſt needs be a great Aggravation. What think the more ſober among the Baptiſts of theſe Things?

VI. The Sixth Forgery I ſhall now mention, is the Anſwer T. H. makes G. W. to give in his ſecond Dialogue, Page 1. The Queſtion and Anſwer I will recite.

Anab. I have formerly detected you of ſeveral pernicious Errors, concerning the Scriptures, Light within, Perſon of Chriſt and Reſurrection, &c. What ſay you thereunto?

Quak. I ſay the Plagues and Judgments of God will follow thee.

G. W. denies that this was ever his Anſwer to that Queſtion, Appendix, p. 13. Though he at the ſame Time tells T. H. he no Ways doubts the Thing. T. H. that he may not lie under the Charge of Forgery, ſo fix'd upon him by G. W. has by his Legerdemain, p. 69, trapt in Joh. Gladman, to cloak his Fiction, thus; Whereas G. W. denies that he ſaid, The Plagues and Judgments of God would follow Tho. Hicks, theſe may certify, that G. W. and my ſelf being in Diſcourſe about the Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Quaker, he ſaid, The Plagues and Judgments of God would follow T. Hicks, and all that had an Hand in that Dialogue, or that diſperſed it. J. Gladman, Dial. p. 8.

But the Meanneſs of the Shift aggravates the Forgery: Did G. W. ever deny that he had ſaid ſo to J. G. or was that the Queſtion? Vain Man! or tell us, Does J. Gladman certify, that G. W. ſaid ſo to T. H. at what Time he controverſially aſkt him that Queſtion? Which is to come cloſe to the Queſtion: Or does he ſay, there ever was any ſuch Queſtion aſk'd him? Clear 'tis, G. W. never deny'd that he had ſpoken thoſe Words, or to the ſame Effect, to any Body at any Time, or upon any Occaſion, (Therefore hath J. G. alſo manifeſtly wronged him in ſaying, Whereas G. W. denies that he ſaid, &c. this is an Untruth, as is evident by G. W's own Anſwer, Appendix, p. 13) and as evident it is, that the Subſtance of this Certificate goes no farther than to teſtify that which was never yet denied; Therefore no Certificate to clear the Matter objected againſt T. H. to wit, That he never receiv'd by Word or Writing any ſuch Queſtion from T. H. much leſs did he ever return him any ſuch Anſwer; conſequently T. H. is a Forger ſtill.

I will briefly parallel the Caſe: Let us ſuppoſe a Diſpute between T. Hicks, a Predeſtinarian, and J. Ives, an Univerſaliſt, both Anabaptiſts, about Election and Reprobation; And J. Ives uſing his Wits to depaint T. H's Opinion to the greateſt Diſadvantage; which T. H. looking upon as Unfair, and thinking himſelf not to have been doctrinally, gravely, and juſtly dealt with, as by the Law of Sober Diſputation ſhould have been, falls upon J. Ives, with this Rebuke, Thou art an Ungodly, Vain, and Captious Man; the Judgments of God will overtake thee, if thou Repent not, for thy daring Oppoſition to the Goſpel, and unfair Dealing with me. J. Ives immediately writes a Dialogue; the firſt Queſtion ſuppos'd to be this:

J. Ives. What doſt thou ſay, T. H. to thoſe groſs and blaſphemous Abſurdities I charged thy narrow and ill-natur'd Opinion with; of damning Men unconditionally, from all Eternity, to glorify God, thereby rendring God more Cruel than Men and Beaſts, that naturally take Care of their Off-ſpring, repreſenting him partial and double-minded; as having a revealed Will that ſpeaks of his Deſire that all ſhould be ſaved, and a ſecret Will notwithſtanding that damns far the greateſt Part, whether they Obey or Rebel? with much more of the like Cruel and Black Aſpect. I ſuppoſe thou haſt conſidered them well; Haſt thou any Reaſons to offer in Countenance and Defence of this horrid Opinion? What ſayſt thou?

T. Hicks is made by J. Ives to anſwer thus:

T. H. I ſay, thou art an Ungodly, Vain and Captious Man; The Judgments of God will overtake thee, if thou Repent not, for thy daring Oppoſition to the Goſpel, and unfair Dealing with me.

Now, I aſk T. Hicks, if he thinks this Reflection, by him given upon the ſuppoſed diſingenuous Carriage of J. Ives, to be a proper and ſuitable Anſwer for J. Ives to give in his Name to a Doctrinal Queſtion, unto which it was never given as an Anſwer? If not, how injuriouſly has he dealt with G. W. Are our Rebukes of T. Hicks's Unrighteous and Prophane Carriage in his Dialogues, the only Reaſons we are able to render in Defence of our Belief, or againſt his Doctrinal Objections? Or may a Man honeſtly take another's Anſwer, and give it to his own Queſtion, however impertinent, and that in the other Man's Name, with Deſign to render him ſo? If not, then certainly T. H. has not acted the Chriſtian but the Counterfeit with us: And God will require this Wickedneſs at the Church's Hand to which he is related, if they indulge or connive at it.

VII. His Seventh Forgery, and the laſt which I will now mention, is this, and I intreat my Reader's Attention; for He or I muſt Needs be very guilty.

In his ſecond Dialogue, p. 5. He thus brings me in:

Anab. Be free and plain with me, how and in what Reſpect, is Chriſt ſaid to fulfil the Law, and to dye for Sinners.

Quak. He fulfil'd the Law only as our Pattern or Example: Chriſt is ſo far from telling us of ſuch a Way of being Juſtified, as that he informs us the Reaſon why he abode in his Father's Love, was his Obedience: He is far from telling us of being Juſtified by Virtue of his Obedience imputed, unleſs we keep his Commands ahd obey for our ſelves; in all which Chriſt is but our Example, Pen. Sand. Found. ſhak. page 26.

To this, Reader, I return'd two Pages of Anſwer, in Defence of my Book, and to detect his Forgery, ſome of which he hath ventur'd to give, but with his wonted Diſingenuity perverted: Let us hear him patiently.

Anab. But foraſmuch as thou ſeemeſt to grant that Chriſt's Death was in the Nature of a Sacrifice, how will this agree, with what thou haſt formerly aſſerted? viz. That Chriſt fulfil'd the Law, only as our Pattern and Example, Dial. 3 Page 74.

Quak. In this Queſtion thou haſt done exactly like thy ſelf; for if thou canſt find the Word Only there, or ſuch an Anſwer to ſuch a Queſtion, thon haſt not wronged me; But ſure I am, there is no ſuch Queſtion, and as ſure, the Fulfilling of the Law was not the Subject treated on, and very certain, the Word Only was not there; Therefore thou art a Forger. That which I ſaid, with the Scripture on which it was grounded, was this: If ye keep my Commandments, ye ſhall abide in my Love, &c. Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 78. Sand. Found. p. 26.

Anab. Here it is hard to ſay, whether thy Diſhoneſty or Impudence be the greater; for in this Anſwer thou art guilty of no leſs than three notorious Untruths: Firſt, thou inſinuateſt, as if the Text above named were the only Text from which thou didſt argue in thy Sand. Found. p. 26. 2*dly*. Thou art ſure, the Fulfilling of the Law was not the Subject treated on there. 3*dly*. Thou art very certain, the Word

Only

1674. Sect. I.

Only is not there; Thus haſt thou aggravated thy Wickedneſs in adding Lye unto Lye, and all this knowingly, Dial. 3 p. 74, 75.

'Tis now Time for me to ſpeak; and I beſeech thee, Reader, hear me; for it is of great Moment to determine who is the Forger, who is the Lyar, T. H. or W. P.

Firſt, he ſuggeſts by this Queſtion, If Chriſt's Death was in the Nature of a Sacrifice, as thou ſayſt, how will this agree with thy former Aſſertion, that Chriſt fulfil'd the Law, only as our Pattern, as if the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt, as a Propitiation to declare God's Righteouſneſs for the Forgiveneſs of Sins that are paſt, upon Repentance, had been Part of that Doctrine in that Part of my Book, unto which thoſe Words relate, viz. Chriſt fulfil'd the Law as our Pattern, which really was no Part of that Doctrine, as may be ſeen. pag. 24. 26.

For becauſe we aſſert him to have been our Example in fulfilling the Righteouſneſs of the moral Law, T. H. would conclude from my Words, that he was only our Example in ending Types, Shadows, Sacrifices, Propitiations, &c. of the Law; Therefore 'tis great Forgery in him, to make me Anſwer two Queſtions, the one in p. 52. of his Second Dialogue? the other in p. 74 of his laſt Dialogue, which take in the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt, that wholly related to but ſome Part of the perſonal Obedience of his Life.

Anab. Are we no farther concerned in the Obedience and Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus without us, than only as our Example or Pattern?

Quak. What more wouldſt thou have? I have told thee, that Chriſt fulfilled the Law; but Only as our Example.

Where there is nothing clearer than that he thruſts the Sufferings of Chriſt into the Queſtion, which was no Part of the Queſtion, making me to deny the Benefit thereof, becauſe I aſſert him to be only our Example in that which is our daily Duty unto Acceptance with God; not in being a Sacrifice for Sin. Is this not to be Guilty of Fiction? Or is this to deſcribe a real Quaker, and act the Part of a true Chriſtian? O hateful Injuries!

But 2*dly.* In his Quotation of my Anſwer he hath omitted two Paſſages; for when I ſaid, If he can find ſuch an Anſwer to ſuch a Queſtion he has not wronged me, I placed the Words between, which he dropped, viz. or the Matter ſtrictly contained in that Queſtion, which I knew he could never compaſs, becauſe his Queſtion was, in what Reſpect Chriſt died for Sinners; and the Anſwer he made me give, truly related to the Fulfilling of the Righteouſneſs of the Law in our ſelves. O injurious Man! Is this the Chriſtian?.

His next Omiſſion is this Part of my Anſwer, which followed from my Argument (by him cited for Proof of his Charge) upon John 15. 10. If you keep my Commandments &c. Now (ſaid I) that this concern'd not the whole Law, Chriſt came to fulfil; the Law he fulfilled, the Place of Scripture quoted, the Nature and Matter of the Argument clearly prove. Again He was our Example in Holineſs, though not in his ending of Types and Shaddows, Reaſ. againſt Rail. page 79. Which Paſſages Reader, plainly evidence, that if ever thoſe Words were ſpoken by me, they never extended to Chriſt's being but our Example, in the Fulfilling of the whole Law, which T. Hicks by his Sophiſtry would inſinuate.

For Anſwer to his Three notorious Untruths he charged on me, take what follows. 1. He ſays I inſinuate as if John 15. 10. were the only Text from whence I argued in Sand. Found. pag, 26. Which Paſſage, Reader, is ſo far from Truth, that I only charg'd him with having argued from that Text in which no ſuch Word or Matter was to be found, which he denies. 2*dly*, He ſays, that I am ſure the Fulfilling of the Law was not the Subject treated on there; and that I know therein I have ſpoken falſly.

But ſure I am, he hath told two Tales in charging one upon me: For, Firſt, how could the Law, as he underſtands it, to wit, the whole Law that Chriſt came to fulfil, be intended, when the very Text and Argument upon it, ſhew, that it was the Keeping of Chriſt's Commandments, that they might abide in his Love, and without which they could not be accepted, that was inſiſted on.

2*dly*. He tells an Untruth in charging me with the Knowledge of that which was not: But as he declined this Scripture, ſo the Arguments by which I proved the Impoſſibility of Chriſt's keeping his own Commandments in our ſtead, with which I made good my Concluſion, viz. The Neceſſity of keeping his Commandments as he kept his Father's, In Order to Acceptance with him.

3*dly*, He ſays, I am certain, the Word Only is not there, and ſo add Lye unto Lye knowingly; knowingly; which, Reader, makes other Two Untruths on my Adverſaries Patt: For firſt, there is no ſuch Word in all that Argument and Paragraph out of which he made his Citation, as may appear Sand. Found. ſhak. page 26. Argum. 5. Dial. 2. page 52. Reaſ. againſt Rail. page 79. 2dly, His Saying I ſhall know of a Thing that never was, makes up his other Falſhood: But to the End he may acquaint all with my Folly and Madneſs, as he is pleaſed to term his own horrible Fiction, he tlles me, that he referred in his Citation not to John 15. 10, but Rom. 2. 13. Not the Hearers of the Law are juſt before God, but the Doers of the Law ſhall be juſtified. But do Men uſe to refer to Places they never cite, either as to Words, Chapters, or Verſe, for they are not mention'd in his Dialogues: How then did he refer to them.

Sect. I.

If he ſays, it was to my Argument, I make the ſame Demand. Do Men refer to Arguments they never mention? If to thoſe they do mention, then I can eaſily prove, it was not this Scripture or Argument upon it, that T. Hicks referred to, Reader, peruſe Sand. Found. p. 26. Arg. 5. Dial. 2. p. 52. Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 78. 79. and thou ſhalt ſee his palpable Untruth.

But becauſe he builds here upon this Argument, let's hear it: Unleſs we be Doers of the Law, which Chriſt came not to deſtroy, but as our Example, to fulfil, we can never be juſt before God: Let not any Fancy, that Chriſt hath ſo fulfilled it for them, as to exclude their Obedience, from being requiſite to their Acceptance; but Only as their Pattern. Here Only is mentioned: But firſt, this was not the Place cited, but another that had it not, as before-expreſs'd; Therefore I no Lyar, but T. Hicks a Forger. 2dly. This Law mentioned Rom. 2. 13. was the Moral and Eternal Law of God, and not that Shadowy Law containing Ceremonies, Sacrifices, Propitiatories, Meats, Drinks, and divers Waſhings, &c. which Chriſt by his Life, Death and Sufferings, fulfill'd and ended, in which T. H. would make me ſay, That Chriſt was Only our Example: That it was not the whole Jewiſh Law, the two next Verſes prove; For when the Gentiles, which have not the Law, do the Things contained in the Law, theſe having not the Law, are a Law unto themſelves, which ſhew the Work of the Law written in their Hearts: Therefore not the whole Jewiſh Law, for that they had not; conſequently, I do not contradict or make void the Benefit of Chriſt's Death and Sufferings, by ſaying, He was only our Example in keeping that Law which the beſt Jews and Gentiles were to keep, and kept, and the Righteouſneſs of which is to be fulfilled in us. Thus hath he unworthily added, diminiſhed, miſ-rendred, tranſpoſed, &c. from Time to Time. Certainly, the People called Anabaptiſts are deeply concerned to reckon with him for this great Scandal to their Profeſſion.

But ſuppoſe I meant the whole Law of God in that Place, I ſee no worſe Conſequence from my Words than this, That ſo far as Man's Obedience to God's Law is requiſite to his Acceptance, ſo far only Chriſt became our Example; For as he was not our Pattern in Things that more peculiarly related to him to perform and finiſh, ſo was he no more than our Pattern in that which is our conſtant Duty to do. Now let T. H. ſnap and catch what he can, with all his Legerdemain, p. 69. only take this along with him, That by his Reflection upon that Argument, viz. That Chriſt hath not ſo fulfilled the Law for us, as to exclude our Obedience from being requiſite to our Acceptance, he implies a Denial of the Neceſſity of obeying the Law of God to Acceptance with God: A Doctrine ſuited to his Practice, contrived and continued to the Eaſe of Hypocrites; no wonder he ſtruggles ſo hard for it; for without it, nothing but Horror would ſurround him, though at this Rate he muſt not always expect to eſcape the Blow (I mean not aſſaſſinating of him) a Trick that lives nearer his Complexion than mine, but that Vengeance which is the Recompence of every Soul that loveth and maketh a Lye.

With you, the People called Anabaptiſts, I leave this Section; Right us, Right your ſelves; Right our Profeſſion of ſuch an Unfair Adverſary, and your ſelves of ſo ſcandalous an Advocate.

§. II. That T. Hicks has groſly perverted our Writings.

Sect. II.

TO Forge is bad, but to Pervert may in a Senſe be worſe; ſince it is to miſ-uſe true Words, and by Diſguiſe twiſt them to a Senſe never intended, when many Times that which is falſe is undiſcernibly ſwallowed for the Sake of ſomething that's true.

This was another Charge I exhibited againſt T. Hicks, and an Argument by which I proved him no Chriſtian. I frequently in my Book took Occaſion to detect him of this Unworthy Practice, and more eſpecially by ſix and twenty Inſtances under a diſtinct Head, containing ten Pages, our Principles in one Column, and his Perverſions in another; but he ſeems dumb to the Charge. Shall I enter him Mute? that may alter, but not excuſe the Puniſhment (Aſſaſſinating always excepted.) I ſhall, Reader, for thy Sake and the Truth's, produce ſome of them, that thoſe to whom this may come, may have ſome Account of his Carriage in his former Dialogues.

I. From our Belief of the Light's Sufficiency to ſave, he infers, That all other Means are needleſs, Dial. 1. p. 36, 37. not conſidering it was not the Light's Inſufficiency, but Man's Weakneſs, that occaſion'd them. He might object Inſufficiency as well againſt God, Chriſt, Spirit, Grace, &c.

II. From our making the Illumination in Man to be a natural Emanation or Product of the Divine Word which made all Things, he wickedly turns it to An Effect of God's Power, and ſo ſays, we would make Beaſts and Trees, &c. alſo divine, Ibid. p. 4.

III. From our aſſerting that the Light of Chriſt ſhineth within the Hearts of Wicked as well as Good Men, He tells People (in our Name) that he is in the Heart of every Wicked Man, as he is in his Saints, Cont. p. 45, 46. Though through Rebellion they partake not of his Life, Power, &c.

IV. From our affirming, that God is the Teacher of his People, He infers, That we deny all Miniſtry and Viſible Worſhip, though they ſtand in God's Power and Spirit, 1 Dial. p. 42, 43.

V. From our believing Chriſt to be in his People, according to expreſs Scripture, and that as ſuch he is crucified by Wicked Men, He infers, That we deny Chriſt to be as well without as within; or that he was ever crucified in the Fleſh, 1 Dial. p. 44. Contin. p. 37, 40, 42.

VI. From our denying of their rigid Satisfaction, that is, that Chriſt was puniſhed by his Father for our Sin; and that Sins paſt, preſent and to come, are anſwered for: And that Men may be Holy by Virtue thereof, tho' not new, but old Creatures, and ſo Unholy in themſelves, He unworthily concludes, That we diſown Chriſt's Death and Sufferings, as a Propitiation, that it carried away Sins paſt, and ſealed Remiſſion in his Blood to as many as believe: And that we expect to be both forgiven and accepted, not for Chriſt's Sake, nor in his Sacrifice and Righteouſneſs, but our own Works, 1 Dial. p. 9, 10. Contin. 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53.

VII. From our pleading for a Perfection from Sin, and the Duty of growing to the Fulneſs of the Meaſure, &c. He infers, Our Denial of Perfection in Degrees, and our Belief of as high a Degree of Perfection in this World, as hereafter, Dial. 1. p. 48, 49, 50, 51.

VIII. Becauſe we ſay, that ſuch Works as are wrought by the Holy Spirit in us, are neceſſary to Eternal Life, and may in a Senſe be ſaid to obtain it, ſince the Lord hath ſo freely offered it upon the Condition of believing and obeying, which are the Fruits of the Spirit of God in Man; T. Hicks ſuggeſts in our Name, That we expect to merit Eternal Life by our good Works, and thoſe of our own Working, as the Spider weaves his Webb out of his own Bowels, Dial. p. 38. Contin. p. 51, 52.

IX. Becauſe we ſay, All Spiritual Liberty ſtands in God's Power (that redeems from Satan's Snares) He inferreth, That who are not of our Way, ſhould have no Liberty, Cont. pag. 85.

X. Becauſe we ſay, The Scriptures are not the great Goſpel-Rule, but the Spirit; The Diſpenſation of the Spirit being that of the Goſpel more peculiarly; and that without it we cannot underſtand, or ſavingly believe any Thing declared of in the Scripture, and therefore that it is our Rule for believing the Scriptures themſelves; He baſely ſuggeſts, That the Quakers caſt of all Precepts in the Scriptures; and ſo will not bring their Cheats and Impoſtures to the Teſt thereof, counting them of no more Authority than Æſop's Fables, Dial. 1. p. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36. Contin. Epiſt. to the Reader. Behold your Anabaptiſt-Preacher!

XI. From our preaching Men to a loſt God and Chriſt, to God and Chriſt whom they have loſt Fellowſhip with, He perverts it to our Believing, That God and Chriſt were in a loſt or undone Condition, Cont. p. 49.

XII. From our aſſerting, that what was a Command to any Servant of God in old Time, is not ſo to us, becauſe ſo to them, that is, ſuch as Moſes's going to Pharoah, the Performance of Types, Shadows and Figures appointed for a Seaſon, and to paſs off, unleſs requir'd by the ſame Spirit anew, He falſly infers, That thoſe Moral and Eternal Precepts, Thou ſhalt have no other God but me, Thou ſhalt not Murder, Commit Adultery, Steal, Bear Falſe Witneſs, &c. are not binding upon us, but that we give our ſelves the Liberty of ſuch horrid Principles, as the contrary to thoſe Principles, and are therefore inconſiſtent with Government, Contin. pag. 59, 60. Who would have expected this from a profeſt Baptiſt, and Preacher too?

XIII. From our denying the Reſurrection of the natural and corruptible Body, leaving it with the Lord to give us a Body as pleaſeth him, as 1 Cor. 15. 36, 37, 38.

This Caviller endeavours to poſſeſs People with our Denial of the Reſurrection of any Body to Life Eternal, however ſpiritual or glorified, Dial. p, 56 to 62.

And laſtly, from our aſſerting the Unity of God and the Soul, and Denial of his carnal Reſurrection; he concludes, That the Soul is Part of God, and that no future Rewards or Puniſhments are to be expected, Dial. 1. p. 16, 17.

Theſe Reader, are ſome of the many Perverſions this Ungodly Man is guilty of againſt our Principles. Is this to condemn the Quaker out of his own Mouth, and to evince his Objections againſt him to be real Truths? Is not Counterfeit a Name good enough for him that has thus counterfeited a Quaker and a Chriſtian too? Will this bring Honour to his Brethren? Or can it be conſiſtent with their Credit, to encourage ſuch baſe Attempts, when but a midling Heathen would have abhorred to have been the Actor of half that Injury T. H. hath not only committed, but continues in, and boaſts of.

And that he has taken himſelf to no better Refuge from the Purſuit of our Arguments, notwithſtanding the Cautions of our former Book, I ſhall in a few Inſtances make evidently appear to all that dare truſt, and will but impartially uſe, their Eyes.

1. From my ſaying, That thoſe that crucified Chriſt were Admirers of the Scriptures, and pretended out of their own Law, that it was both lawful and neceſſary he ſhould be put to Death: Whereas, had they brought that Deed to the Light, the Light would have ſhown it not to have been wrought in God; which the Scriptures without the Light could not effectually do: He makes no Conſcience of inferring, That I intimate an Inſufficiency in the Scriptures to convince the Jews that Murder was a Sin, Dial. 3. p. 13. Whereas the Queſtion was not, whether Murder was a Sin; but whether the Jews thought that Murder, by the Scripture: if they did, give us an Inſtance; if they did not, then I have the End of my Alluſion, to wit, If the Scriptures are not therefore inſufficient in T. H's Account, becauſe the Jews were not convinced by them of Murder; neither ought the Light within to be reputed inſufficient, becauſe Men were not convinced of their Unbelief in Chriſt by it. I will anſwer him in ſetting down his own Words to me: O Impious Man! ſays he: The Defect was not in the Scriptures, but in themſelves, in not attending to what was therein delivered, wherein Murder is peremptorily forbidden. Right; But, O Impious Man! ſay I, the Defect was not in the Light, but themſelves, in not attending to it, whereby Murder is alſo forbidden. How much more ſufficient now, T. H. is the Scripture than the Light? Vain Shuffler!

But this is not all his Perverſion; for he farther infers in my Name, That the Scriptures did rather countenance and juſtifie, than condemn them in that Fact, Dial. 3. p. 13. Which, Reader, in plain Terms, is as much as to ſay, becauſe the Scriptures do not ſo effectually diſcover evil Conceptions as the Light within; therefore the Scriptures rather countenance and juſtifie them: Monſtrous Baſeneſs! The Truth is, were his Endeavours againſt us but well weighed of all that ſee them, there were little need of our Labour in his Diſcovery, or our own Defence. But that which aggravates his Sin, is the hard Words he gives me after all; I know not why, unleſs to cover his own Guilt, or make his credulous Reader think me as hateful, as he would have me.

2. The ſecond Perverſion I ſhall inſtance, is this: Becauſe I told him (in Anſwer to his Objection about the Light's Inſufficiency, for it's not diſcovering to the Heathen-Philoſophers how Sin came into the World) if he meant by that Diſcovery, a clear and diſtinct Account and particular Hiſtory, how Adam and Eve were beguiled by the Serpent, it was no Ways to his Purpoſe (unleſs he can prove the Knowledge of it abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation) He, according to his uſual Baſeneſs, makes me to ſay, The Penning of that Hiſtory was to no Purpoſe, Dial. 34. thus interrogating of me, Wilt thou dare to ſay, the Knowledge of this is to no Purpoſe?

Why then did the ſacred Penmen give ſuch a full Account thereof? As if it were one and the ſame Thing for me to ſay, the Penning of that Hiſtory is to no Purpoſe, and to ſay, It is not to T. Hicks's Purpoſe? Is this the Way to prove the Quaker no Chriſtian? But ſince this full Account is made ſuch a great Inſtance by T. H. for the Sufficiency of the Scripture, and Inſufficiency of the Light, let him tell me, What Paradiſe Adam was put in; and where it was? What was that Serpent that tempted Eve, if a fallen Spirit, or a Beaſt of the Field? And what was that Fruit and Tree God forbad, and the Serpent tempted the Woman to eat of? And what was the Voice Adam heard in the Garden? What were thoſe Fig-Leaves he covered himſelf withal? And what was that Death that he dyed? And what were thoſe Cherubims and the flaming Sword and the Tree of Life, all mentioned in that Hiſtory. If he takes the Account Literally, let him ſay ſo; but let him take this with him, that then Adam bodily dyed, before he begot his Sons and Daughters; and the Hiſtory gives us no Account of his corporal Reſurrection: But if he take the Account, in whole, or in Part, myſtically, then how is it full, clear and diſtinct, not diſtinguiſhing Literal and Natural from Myſtical and Spiritual Things: Is this the Way to prove the Inſufficiency of the Light within, that ſends all People to the Light within for a ſufficient Account, which, ſays Dr. Henry Moor of Cambridge, ſpoke in and reproved Adam for his Lapſe from God, Philoſoph. Lab. p. 27.

However it be, this lies at T. H's Door, that becauſe I ſaid, his Inſtance of Moſes's Writings were nothing to his Purpoſe, he makes me to conclude, They were writ to no Purpoſe: If he loved his Soul, he would hate theſe Courſes, that need no Aggravation, their own Infamy is enough.

3. Again, from my acknowledging that the Scripture furniſheth me with the Knowledge of Chriſt's Viſible Tranſactions; he infers thus, which is as if thou ſhouldſt ſay, God manifeſted in the Fleſh could not have been known by thee, were it not revealed in the Scriptures, intimating, that thou couldſt NEVER have known it by the meer Light in thee, Dial. 3. p. 44, 48.

Which intimates, that Thomas Hicks is an arrant Perverter of my Senſe. Is there no Difference between ſaying, I was informed of a certain Paſſage by A. B. and ſaying, It was impoſſible I ſhould have known it any other Way than by A. B. But why all this wreſting? Is it to conclude, therefore the Light within is Inſufficient? which may as well be inferred againſt God, Chriſt and the Holy Spirit; for he makes me to exclude all other Ways of Diſcovery, than what is made by Scripture. If an Account were wanting, the Light of Chriſt is as ſufficient now, as it was in the Time of Moſes and the Prophets, who wrote both of Things paſt and to come: But a Relation being with us, the Light of Chriſt doth nothing unneceſſarily. But T. H. 'tis like, degenerates not from his Anceſtors; he can cry, Come down and ſave thy ſelf, &c.

4. From our aſſerting the Works of the Spirit in us neceſſary to our compleat Juſtification or Acceptance with God, he inſinuates, Our making thoſe Works the meritorious Cauſe of our Salvation, Dial. 3. p. 69. which is manifeſtly denied and rejected by me, in my Anſwer, p. 72, 73, 82, 83, 86. which he no more regards, than if it never were: The Trick of an unfair and ſhuffling Adverſary.

5. From my aſſerting the Neceſſity of an inward Work of Righteouſneſs, by the Power of Chriſt in theſe Words of the Apoſtle to the Galatians, Let every Man prove his own Work, and then ſhall he have Rejoycing in himſelf, and not in another: He, to make his Ends upon me, infers, That the Doctrine of Chriſt dying for Sinners, hath nothing in it, as the Ground of our Rejoycing: For our Rejoycing muſt be in our ſelves, not in another, Dial. 3. p. 69, 70.

That, Reader, which aggravates this wretched Conſequence by him charged upon me, is firſt, that he ſays, it is plainly deducible, which is ſo plain a Wreſt: And next, that they are the Apoſtle's Words, and not mine, of which he makes ſo ill an Uſe.

Is this to make the Scripture his Rule, that is ſo unruly in his Abuſe of them? I am ſure, a lying and an abuſive Spirit has been his Rule throughout his three Dialogues, which God rebuke.

6. The ſixth Perverſion is as follows: Being formerly aſſaulted by T. Hicks, Cont. p. 50. for having ſaid in a Book entituled, The Serious Apology, &c. p. 148. That Juſtification by a Righteouſneſs wholly without us, is a Doctrine of Devils; I undertook my Defence, and performed it in my Anſwer to his other Dialogues, from p. 68. to p 98: I diſtinguiſhed upon the Word Juſtification, firſt, as it might be taken barely for the Remiſſion of Sins, or the acquitting Men of the Guilt and Puniſh-

Puniſhment due to Sin, which was the free Love and Mercy of God upon Repentance (declared in Chriſt's Death, as a Propitiation for the Sins of the whole World) and therefore not to be merited by the beſt Works we can perform, 2dly, As it imported a being made inwardly juſt by the bringing in of Chriſt's Everlaſting Righteouſneſs to the Soul. To leave out this latter, and make the former only ſufficient (whereby Men are left in an unjuſt and unrighteous State) I affirmed to be a Doctrine of Devils. But notwithſtanding this plain and ſcriptural Diſtinction to ſatisfie T. Hicks (would he but be ſatisfied) what I meant by Juſtification; He is ſo unjuſt to me, as to infer in my Name, 'That I account the Doctrine of Chriſt's Death in the Nature of a Sacrifice, to declare the Righteouſneſs of God, for the Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt (becauſe tranſacted without us) a Doctrine of Devils, Dial. 3. p. 72, 73, 74.

Canſt thou, Reader, in earneſt think, this Man makes Conſcience of his Endeavours againſt us, who commits theſe frequent Abuſes againſt our Books, Perſons and Principles? As if becauſe I acknowledged Chriſt's Death to be in the Nature of a Sacrifice, to declare God's Righteouſneſs, in the Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, unto them that believe, &c. to be one Part of Juſtification; and that this Tranſaction was, confeſſedly, without us, even while we were Sinners, &c. that therefore, I ſhould call this the Doctrine of Devils, becauſe without us, though the Word wholly be not there, upon which lay the Streſs, and which was only ſaid by me of a Juſtification, that wholly excludes Chriſt's Righteouſneſs revealed within, to the making Man Juſt, unworthily applying that Reflection to the Beginning of Juſtification, that I have ſo expreſly owned, which was made againſt a Doctrine no ways concern'd in this true and Goſpel-Juſtification. In ſhort, If Juſtification by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs without us, be the ſame, with being juſtified by Chriſt's Righteouſneſs wholly without us; then T. H. is not ſo bad a Man, as I have repreſented him: But if there be any Difference, as undeniably there is, and a material One too; then T. H's Inference and Concluſion, in my Name, make a foul Perverſion.

7. The laſt Perverſion I at this Time think fit to mention, is his laſt, both in his Epiſtle and Book, to wit, from my ſaying, upon a ſad Conſideration of his many Miſcarriages towards us, That his Head ſhould not go down into the Grave in Peace; he thus interprets my Words: 'I muſt take them either as a Prediction, or as a Menace, or ſome Miſchief, he himſelf, or ſome influenced by him intend to perpetrate upon me: The former I fear not, the latter is moſt Probable: As if, Reader, his not fearing a Prediction, implies my not meaning a Prediction. But why is the former not feared, and the latter more probable? becauſe he would render me a Murderer, as his following Words ſufficiently evidence. Wherefore, ſays he, I deſire all, to whom this Book may come, that if at any Time they hear of any Violence offered me, or that I be Aſſaſſinated, they would remember theſe Words of W. Penn, that my Head ſhall not go down to the Grave in Peace, Epiſt.

Now though this miſerable Conſtruction be ridiculous with wiſe Men, and rejected of ſeveral of his own Way, and ſo unlikely a Thing in it ſelf, that I ſhould proclaim that to be my Deſign that leads to the Gibbet, viz. Murder; yet I was unwilling to paſs it by, ſince firſt, it rather renders him to be the Man he ſuggeſts me to be: And, ſecondly, It aggravates the Sin of his falſe Conſtruction; becauſe to inſinuate it the better, he has left out all thoſe Words going before and after, that had they been mentioned, would have detected his Malice, viz. Though thou haſt beſtowed much Time to abuſe our Friends in general, and my ſelf in particular, a Stranger to thee, yet I can forgive thee: O, that theſe heavy Things might not be laid to thy Charge: God will viſit for theſe Unrighteous Dealings, if thou deſiſt not.

Now, Reader, if I forgive, how can I Aſſaſſinate? And if it be God's Viſiting Hand, how can it be mine, or any influenced by me? Again, theſe following Words were the next to thoſe by him cited, viz. Yea, the Light within will bear Witneſs to the Truth of theſe Things on thy DYING BED, and then remember me. How comes this T. H. to be omitted? Dying-Beds do not uſe to be Unnatural Deaths; Nor will the Light within bear Witneſs for Murder: Was all this left out to evince, that the Fictions I charged upon thee, were real Truths, and no Fictions; and that a Quaker is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian? Becauſe it is his Honour to be quite another Thing than ſuch a Chriſtian as thou art, that is a very Counterfeit.

Reader, Does not thy Soul riſe againſt theſe abominable Practices? Falſhood was ever hateful to Truth, and Baſeneſs to an Honeſt Mind, which T. H. being proved thus guilty of, I muſt conclude him quite another Thing than a Chriſtian.

Thus

1674 Sect. II. Thus have I finiſhed my Obſervations on his Perverſions, leaving them alſo with the People called Anabaptiſts, upon whom I cannot chuſe, but frequently call for Juſtice, againſt this their unjuſt Member; concluding my Complaint in this Section, in Honeſt John Huſſe's, againſt the like Adverſaries, on the ſame Occaſion: Some of theſe Propoſitions I did Write and Publiſh, other ſome mine Enemy did feign, now adding, then diminiſhing and taking away, now falſly aſcribing and imputing the whole Propoſition unto me.

Sect. III.

§. III. T. H. Proved Guilty of Lyes and Slanders.

Reader, in my Anſwer to his former Dialogues, I charg'd him with Eighteen Lyes and Slanders, under a diſtinct Head, Pag. 154, 155, 156. of which I find not that he hath taken any Notice, ſaving Two by Way of farther Affirmation, but no Proof. A few I ſhall mention to his utter Shame, with all Men loving Religion.

1. That the Quakers owning of Chriſt Jeſus, and the Chriſt they own, are a meer Myſtical Romance, Dial. p. 10. Cont. p. 9. A prophane Untruth!

2. That the Light in the Quakers, ſees no Neceſſity of a Mediator, 1 Dial. p. 35. when, God knows, we feel the Daily Benefit of him.

3. That the Quakers account the Blood of Chriſt no more than they do the Blood of a common Thief, Ibid. p. 38. An Ungodly Aſperſion!

4. That we deny his Viſible Coming and Appearance in the World, Cont. p. 37. This he contradicts elſe-where.

5. That the Quakers diſſemble when they tell People they own the Scriptures; and that they render them of no more Authority than Æſop's Fables, Cont. Epiſt. Both abominable Untruths.

6. That a Quaker ſhould ſay, The Thing that troubles thee, is thy puzling thy ſelf in that Book the Bible, Thou wilt never be ſettled till thou throw that Book away, Cont. p. 36. An arrant Slander.

7. That a Quaker ſhould ſay to one J. Nobbs, What doſt thou tell me of the Scriptures, they are no more to me than an Old Almanack (whereas J. Nobbs, if he be alive, and have but a little more Honeſty than T. H. can't but confeſs that he was no Quaker; nor that there was one ſo call'd in that Country, when any Thing like thoſe Words was ſpoken) As T. Holbrow, the Perſon charg'd by J. N. related it to me the laſt Summer, Dial.

8. That the Quakers appoint their Miniſters to ſpeak in ſuch a Place, and at ſuch a Time: And they go to Meetings only to Decoy, Trepan, and Inveigle, Cont. Pag. 66.

9. That a Woman-Quaker ſhould bid her Husband take another Woman, Ib. p. 63.

10. That the Motions of God's Spirit are pretended by Quakers, at leaſt one of them, to Refuſe Juſt Debts, Cont. p. 69.

What Man that makes Conſcience of Lying, would have told ſo many groſs Untruths; and that cared for his own Reputation, would have paſs'd over their Proof in ſuch Silence?

Either he thinks it no Sin to render Men Hereticks and Knaves at Pleaſure; or that there is no Obligation upon him to maintain his foul Imputations. But let's ſee how much better he is grown ſince his Second Dialogue.

1. The firſt Great Lye he tells in his New Book, is the very firſt Sentence that is writ in it, viz. The Quaker Condemn'd out of his own Mouth: For it is his foul Mouth that hath both Accuſed and Condemn'd him; as we have already prov'd, and ſhall yet have farther Occaſion to do.

2. His Second Untruth is in the fourth Page of his Epiſtle, viz. That there was a Perſon eſteem'd by the Quakers a Friend, of whom W. Penn gave this Character, That he might be truſted with one's Life (notwithſtanding W. Penn's Infallible Judgment) counterfeited (like an Ungrateful and Unworthy Wretch) W. Penn's Hand, took up a conſiderable Sum of Money in his Name, (pretending for his Uſe) which W. Penn in a little Time found (though to his Coſt) to be a meer Cheat.

Reader, He hath put the Quaker in this Man's Livery, that he might have the fairer Plea for abuſing him. Ungrateful and Unworthy Wretch are Words not ſo much flung at the Fact, or the Man, as the Quaker: For were it the Temper of Thomas Hicks to be Grateful, and Worthy to them that oblige him, he would never be Injurious to them that never hurt him. But be that as it will, I have three Things to ſay to T. Hicks, Firſt, That this Man was never a Quaker, unleſs ſuch as ſometimes come to T. Hicks's Meeting, are to be reputed Anabaptiſts, having never come under any of thoſe External Significations, by which they are differ'd from other People; and I think I that knew him, ought to be believ'd before T. H. who perhaps never ſaw him. Secondly, If he were an Unworthy Wretch for Counterfeiting my Hand in Money-Matters; how much more Unworthy Wretch is T. Hicks, who hath Counterfeited the Faith, Doctrine and Practice of a great Body of People, to the rendring them Infamous with all Men, were that Work as Really Believed, as it was Enviouſly Contrived. Thirdly, But for all my Infallible Judgment I was Cheated, ſays T. H. How plentiful, Reader, are the Inſtances T. H. gives us, to detect him: For beſides the Baſeneſs of his Taunt, he inferreth from our aſſerting an Infallibility in the Principle, our arrogating an Infallibility to all our Perſons, as well in Civil as Religious Concerns, whether we obey it, or no: But to turn it back upon himſelf: Have no Anabaptiſts been cheated, notwithſtanding they pretend the Scriptures to be their Infallible Rule? If they have, Shall I make one of T. H's Concluſions, viz. That they are Infallible, becauſe they have an Infallible Rule; Or, That their Rule is Fallible, becauſe they are Fallible themſelves? Or, in Caſe of being Cheated, ſhould we tauntingly ſay, Where is your Infallible Judgment, becauſe you ſay, you have an Infallible Rule.

3. I charge him with ſlandering our Friends, with ſaying, That when it hath been demonſtrated to them, wherein (he thinks) I have erred, What doſt thou tell us of W. Penn; He is an heady, raſh, Young Man, we take no Notice what he ſaith —— Yet acquaint them with the like Extravagancies in the Writings of the former, G. F. &c. They will either peremptorily deny them ſo written, or elſe tell us, We underſtand not their Meaning, Epiſt. p. 5. This let him prove if he can.

4. That the Quakers excuſe ſome of their Villanies, by Pretences to the Innocent Life. This we eſteem an abominable Falſhood, 3 Dial. Epiſt.

5. The next Slander is, That the Quakers warn their Proſelytes againſt reading their Adverſaries Books, leſt their Wickedneſs ſhould be detected, pag. 76. A very Falſhood.

6. That W. Penn, by the Senſe of the Eternal Spirit, doth declare, that Curſing, Railing and Lying, were the only fit Anſwers to be given to the Prieſts trepanning Queſtions, pag. 10, 80, 81, 82. O Ungodly Slander! The Lord rebuke thy foul Spirit.

7. That the Quakers have diſcovered themſelves to be no other than the Spawn of that wicked Brood, the Ranters, having lick'd up their Vomit, p. 80. What ſay the Baptiſts to this? It is known, none ſo much oppoſed them.

8. The Quakers ſay, they witneſs Innocent and Sober Enquirers after their Faith and Religion to be Beaſts, Sots, in the Sorcery and Witchcraft, p. 85. which manifeſt Slander, I ſuppoſe, proceeds from certain Names Edw. Burrough gave to a Prieſt, that by ſubtil Queries endeavoured to trepan ſome of our Friends, as they of old our Lord and Maſter, under the Cenſure of Blaſphemy, and as was attempted upon ſome about that very Time. So that he was an Innocent and Sober Enquirer, by the ſame Figure that Tho. Hicks hath been an Innocent and Sober Dialoguer, who firſt invents Lyes, and then kicks them up and down for our Principles and Practices.

9. Another Notorious Falſhood committed by Tho. Hicks againſt us, is in p. 88. to wit, That ſome Overtures have of late been offered the Quakers, in order to a publick Meeting, to debate the Chief Things in Difference betwixt them and others; which the Quakers refuſed, under Pretence of being cautious not to run themſelves voluntarily into Jeopardies, and therefore think it their beſt Way to Rail at their Adverſaries. It is to be hoped Tho. Hicks by this Time, hath ſufficiently ſhewn and vented his Falſhoods and Slanders, by the Frequency of them; and that for the future they will leſs need our Animadverſion. That this is One, and a Great One too, take what follows.

W. Hayworth, an empty, but hot-headed Preacher, among the Profeſſors at Hartford, often making a Kind of Challenge to ſome of our Friends to meet with any of their Teachers, and being anſwered that they would not refuſe him a Meeting, he proceeded thereon, and propoſed Ware for the Place; againſt which the Scruple was made, and not about a Meeting, as Thomas Hicks falſly relates: This our Friend's Anſwers to W. Hayworth prove. In Th. Prior's firſt Anſwer to W. H. it is ſaid, I perceive they (the Quakers) are not intended to refuſe thee a Meeting, at a convenient Time and Place agreed on by both Parties; and it is expected and intended, the Book authorized by thee, ſtyl'd, The Quaker Converted, be the Subject of the Diſpute.

Sect. III.

Diſpute. And in the ſecond Paper to W. Hayworth, it is propoſed, That the Meeting be at Theobald's; and that after the ſaid Book be fully diſcourſed, if he had not Diſputing enough, ſuch other Queſtions as tend to Edification be propounded, and a farther Time taken to diſcourſe them: But he would no Ways conſent that his Book ſhould be the Subject; ſaying in his Letter, That to undertake it, would narrow the Debate.

Judge now, Reader, who evaded the Meeting; and if Tho. Hicks hath not falſly accuſed the Quakers with refuſing it; yet doth he Rant, Revile, and add Lye unto Lye in that very Page where he told this, that he might make the moſt of his fancied Advantage againſt us, to our Diſgrace, and his own Triumph. But he ſhall fail in his Endeavours, and God will advocate our Cauſe among Men, againſt theſe foul and provoking Imputations. One Slander more, and we end this Section.

10. That the Tendency of all the Quaker's Reaſoning about Inſtituted Religion, is to Debauch Mankind, to teach them how to live in Rebellion againſt God. Their Religion is a meer Cheat, calculated only to the Service of the Devil, and their own Luſts, and inconſiſtent with Government, Dial. 1. pag. 62. Dial. 3. p. 65.

Here is a great Deal in a Little, all at once: This ſhews what the Man would be at, and makes Good what elſewhere he ſaith, That we are inconſiſtent with Government, Cont. pag. 69. The Conſequence is plain; A New-England Antidote to rid Old-England of the Epidemical Diſeaſe of Quakeriſm: For it is a Maxim in Law, That whoſoever is inconſiſtent with Government, deſerves not the Protection of Government.

But that this Language ſhould drop from the Pen of an Anabaptiſt to a Quaker, is juſtly ſurprizing; ſince a Multitude of his Profeſſion ſtand charg'd on Record with ſo many groſs Immoralities, erroneous Doctrines, and rebellious Practices, as have rendred them and their Profeſſion, the Suſpicion of the Weak, the Abhorrence of the Multitude, and at beſt the Diſlike of many Good Men: But though T. Hicks hath invented Crimes to blacken us, I ſhall not ſo much as recriminate the People that go under that Name, having abundance more of Charity for them, than the ſofteſt Paſſage in Tho. Hicks's Dialogue can afford us. I am well ſatisfied, that I have thus far honeſtly repreſented him in his Inventions, Perverſions, Slanders and Aggravations, ſo inconſiſtent with the Spirit, Language and Carriage of a True Chriſtian; and therefore his Pretence of being ſuch, renders him but the Greater COUNTERFEIT.

Sect. IV.

§. IV. That T. Hicks is Guilty of Plain Contradictions.

IT is inconſiſtent with the Credit of any Man that writes, to contradict himſelf: But for one who pretends himſelf a Chriſtian, ſo to do, and that in Matters of Religion, is ſhamefully to make void his own Pretences. That Thomas Hicks is the Man, I produced ſeveral Proofs in my Anſwer to his former Dialogues: But they were equally diſregarded with the reſt, not having ſo much as attempted the reconciling of them.

I will briefly repeat ſome of them, and add more out of all Three Dialogues.

1. Contradiction. Firſt, I, T. Hicks, do acknowledge, that the Light within checketh for many Evils, and excites to many Good Things; and that I ought to ſhun thoſe Evils, and do that Good, 1 Dial. p. 8. ——— Yet in direct Contradiction he dares to tell us, That this Light in us, directing to it's beſt Actions, ſwelleth Men with proud Conceits; and that it doth deceive and miſ-guide ſuch as follow it, 1 Dial. p. 3, 37, 38.

2 Contr. I, Thomas Hicks, do, and muſt bear Witneſs againſt thy Erroneous Opinion, if true to the Light in me, Dial. p. 8. I am to do what the Light in my ſelf directs me, and herein is my Comfort, p. 91. I grant it ought to be obeyed, p. 7. —— Yet in direct Contradiction, and to unſay this, he tells us, That the Light is uncertain; in one Man it teacheth one thing, and in another directly contrary; ſo that, ſaith he, there can be no Certainty of Truth or Error, Sin or Duty by this, Dial. p. 42.

3 Contr. Again, Thomas Hicks ſays, That it is no Diſparagement to the Light within, to ſay, That God doth make any thing more known of his Will, than is, or can be known by it; For it is but to ſay, that Each Degree of Light is ſerviceable to its End, 1 Dial. p. 36. —— Yet in direct Contradiction to, and undervalue of this, he ſays within two Pages after, The Improvement of the Light within ſubverts the Covenant venant of Grace, the only Way God hath Revealed for Salvation; and that it directly oppoſeth it ſelf to the Ends of the Covenant, and ought to be rejected, pag. 38.

My Animadverſion contracted, upon theſe Contradictions, I will give: If this be to argue ſafely, prudently, and like a Diſputant, I am greatly miſtaken; ſure I am, there is nothing of Truth or Chriſtianity in ſuch Confuſion: For that a Man ſhould be obliged to obey a Light that doth miſ-guide, or that T. Hicks ſhould talk of acting according to the Light in him, making his Appeal to it in others; and yet ſay, that it may deceive, and oppoſe the very Ends of the Covenant of Grace, is with me, the Top of all Impudence and Self-Contradiction.

All this, Reader, he paſs'd with his uſual Silence.

How concern'd he was to conſider it, I ſhall leave with thee to judge, having hereby ſo manifeſtly forfeited his Reputation, both as a Chriſtian and a Diſputant. But I will not leave him here; I ſhall greaten his Score e're we part, and yet evidence, that he hath ſaid little againſt us, wherein he hath not ſaid a great Deal in Contradiction to himſelf.

Contr. I. I, T. Hicks, appeal to the Light in thee, Stephen Criſp, whether this be not an Inſufficient Proof; for I grant the Light ought to be obeyed; It checks for Evil, and excites to good things, Dial. 1. p. 7. 8.

Yet in Contradiction to this, hear what he ſays:

I deny not a Light to be in every Man; for the Underſtanding and Conſcience being Parts of the Reaſonable Soul, theſe do remain ſtill in the Worſt of Men, though the Rectitude be loſt, Dial. 1. p. 32.

Obſerv. Is it not Madneſs in T. Hicks, to appeal to a Light that hath loſt it's Rectitude (that is, Reader, which through Depravity is become Darkneſs) for an Evidence about Matters of the greateſt Concern in Religion? Can ſuch a Light check for Evil, and excite to Good, that T. H. ſays, hath loſt it's Rectitude? And is it a Crooked and Depraved Light, that he grants, is to be obeyed and followed? Is this the Man fit to reprove the Quakers, for turning Men to a Sufficient Light, who himſelf confeſſedly follows a Crooked and Depraved Light? No Wonder if he cannot ſee the Truth and Streightneſs of our Light, who judgeth of it by a Light that hath loſt it's Rectitude: For, ſaith he, I do and muſt bear Witneſs aginſt thy Opinion of the Sufficiency of the Light in every Man, if I be true to the Light in me, that hath loſt it's Rectitude, 1 Dial. p. 8, 32.

Contr. II. It will be our Wiſdom, yea, our Duty (alſo) to attend to the Light within, 1 Dial. pag. 13. as the Place imports.

Yet in direct Contradiction he ſays, p. 38.

What intolerable Pride and Arrogancy have you Quakers arrived to, and all this in following the Conduct of the Light within?

What ſayſt thou to this, Reader? Is the Man like to make the Quaker No Chriſtian? Is it not a Shame for thoſe called Anabaptiſts, to ſuffer this Man as well in his manifeſt Weakneſs, as great Diſhoneſty, to manage the Controverſie againſt us?

Contr. III. That which any of you Quakers have ſaid of the Light within, hath been no more than what the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Man of Sin. And what may as well prove Mahomet to be the True Chriſt, as the Light in you. Again, If thou ſayſt that the Light in every Man is Chriſt, I charge it with Blaſphemy, 1 Dial. p. 3. 11, 12.

Yet in direct Contradiction, T. H. ſaith,

How could you (Quakers) call the Light within Chriſt, if ſome Scriptures had not mentioned Chriſt in you, and, that He is the Light and Life of Men, 1 Dialog. pag. 22.

Obſerv. Does John 1. 4, 9, chap. 14, 20. 2 Cor. 4, 6. chap. 13, 5. Gal. 1. 16. which we are wont to offer, as well prove the Man of Sin, and Mahomet, to be Chriſt, as the Light which T. H. acknowledgeth to check for Evil, to excite to Good Things; and confeſſeth, as before, That the Scriptures have given us to call the Light within Chriſt, and Chriſt the Life and Light of Men? Wert thou aware of theſe Things, T. H. when thou wroteſt them? Art thou fit to accuſe me of Inadvertency, that committeſt it thy ſelf. I will not ſay that any of thy Friends, being charg'd with thy Follies, replied, What doſt thou tell us of T. Hicks? He is a Heady, Raſh Man, we take no Notice of what he ſaith. But that thou haſt proved thy ſelf Raſh and Heady, and that they ought to take no farther Notice of thee, than to check thee, thy wretched Management of the Controverſy againſt us ſufficiently proveth: But let us proceed.

IV. Contr. You Quakers, ſince you have reprobated the Scriptures from being your Rule, and given up your ſelves to the immediate Motions and Government of the Light within, have arrived to this Degree of Wickedneſs, to deny Jeſus Chriſt to be a diſtinct Perſon without you, 3 Dial. p. 15, 16.

Yet in plain Contradiction he ſays, That every Man hath a Light within him, is not denied; and that it ought to be obeyed is granted, Ibid. p. 8.

Obſerv. The Conſequence, Reader, which is this, That Men ought to obey that Light, the Government of which leads to deny Jeſus Chriſt, &c. and to perſiſt in a Reprobation of the Scriptures. Is this Doctrine like to Chriſtian the Anabaptiſt, and Unchriſtian the Quaker?

Contr. V. Verily, I much doubt, that you believe that Jeſus Chriſt is the Son of God, and that as concerning the Fleſh he was put to Death at Jeruſalem, 1 Dialog. p. 43, 44.

Again, The Quaker denies that Chriſt was ever Viſible to Wicked Men; and conſequently that Perſon, called in the Scripture by this Name, who converſed in the World and ſuffered Death openly and viſibly at Jeruſalem, to be the Chriſt; So that a Perſonal Coming in any Reſpect is manifeſtly denied by you, Contin. p. 37, 45.

Yet to un-ſay and contradict all this, he ſays, I never charg'd you Quakers for denying that bodily Appearance, 3 Dial. p. 26. I no where accuſe you for denying Chriſt's Bodily Appearance, Ibid. p. 33. Ye have confeſſed to Chriſt's Bodily Appearance, Ibid. p. 31.

Which is as much as to ſay,

Obſerv. The Quakers do own Chriſt's Viſible Appearance: The Quakers do not own Chriſt's Viſible Appearance; yet I doubt whether they own Chriſt's Viſible Appearance or no. Is this Man fit to write Controverſy that is of three or four Minds in the writing of it? Confuſion will be the End of all this, not our Confutation, but Vindication, in the Minds of impartial Men.

VI. Contr. His ſixth Contradiction is this: That the Religion of the Quakers is a Cheat, calculated only for the Service of the Devil and their own Luſts, 1 Dial. p. 62. yet confeſſeth to us, That every Man is enlightned, that this Light checks for Evil, and exciteth to Good; That it ought to be obeyed, Dial. 1, p. 7, 8. Dial. 3. p. 8. And that this is the Quakers firſt and grand Principle, Dial. 1, p. 6.

Obſerv. Now, Reader, How our Religion can be calculated to the Service of the Devil, and our own Luſts; and yet the firſt and grand Principle of that Religion be unconcerned in that Helliſh Service, is more than I can tell.

The plain Engliſh of his groſs Contradiction is this: That the Light within, which checks for Evil, and excites to Good, and ought to be attended upon and obeyed, is the firſt and grand Principle of that Religion, which is calculated to the Service of the Devil, and their Luſts that receive it. For which deteſtable Blaſphemy, with more Reaſon may I uſe T. H's Exclamation, Bluſh, O Heaven! and be aſtoniſh'd, O Earth! Was ever ſuch a Thing as this heard of before? I muſt tell the People called Anabaptiſts, that the Attempts of T. Hicks will prove as great a Reproach to their Profeſſion, and bring the Endeavours of our Adverſaries into as utter Abhorrence with all honeſt-minded People as any Oppoſition ever made againſt us.

Contr. VII. The ſeventh Contradiction, and the laſt I ſhall here mention, is very well worth the Notice of my Reader, ſince it doth at once invalidate his whole Enterprize with Perſons of Underſtanding. And that is this:

A Dialogue between a Chriſtian and a Quaker, wherein are faithfully repreſented ſome of the Chief and moſt Concerning Opinions of the Quakers, 1 Dial. Title-page. Again,

A farther Account of their perilous Errors, clearly and plainly repreſented, Cont. Title-page. Again,

The Things objected againſt the Quakers in the former Dialogues, are fully cleared and evinced, 3 Dial. Title-page. Yet, as a Man infatuated with a Spirit of Contradiction, thus gives the Lye to his three Title-pages, and in them to his Three Dialogues.

The Doctrines delivered (by the Quakers) are ſuch, as neither themſelves, nor any for them, can give us a diſtinct and intelligible Account of: And that the Tendency of all their Writings and Declarings, doth but lead People into the Thicket of Abſurd, Inexcuſable, and Unintelligible Dotages, Contin. Epiſt. 3.

Obſerv. Now, Reader, If no Man can underſtand them, how can T. Hicks repreſent and evince them? Are they inexplicable by every Body, and yet explicated by him? Be they unintelligible to all People, and yet not only pretended to be underſtood by him, but by him made intelligible to others? How can he with Honeſty or Senſe pretend to give an Account of our Doctrines to the World, who confeſſeth not only that he has not, but he cannot have from us or any other a diſtinct and intelligible Account of them? Has he not then ſhot his Bow at Random? Is this the Way to evince and confute them? Never, certainly, Reader, did any Man, thought to be in his Wits, give greater Ground for People to believe him out of them: We have no Cauſe to fear what a Thouſand ſuch Adverſaries can do againſt us, who thus manifeſtly help us againſt themſelves, and fall by their own Weapons: Which leads me to conclude this Part of this Diſcourſe; and that I ſhall do in this Argument:

He that pretends to be a Chriſtian, and yet commits Forgery, uſeth Perverſion, tells Lyes, publiſheth Slanders, and in his Endeavours contradicts himſelf, and that materially, muſt be a Counterfeit, and no Chriſtian: But ſuch a Man we have evidently prov'd T. Hicks to be; Therefore, I think I may be held excuſable in concluding that Th. Hicks is a Counterfeit and no Chriſtian.

THE

Real QUAKER Juſtified:

In a Defence of the Doctrines held by him againſt the Mean Sophiſtry and Shuffling Oppoſition of Thomas Hicks the COUNTERFEIT.

---

§. I. Of the Light within. Sect. I.

THO' it Matters not much what ſo ill a Man ſays of any Religion, yet, leſt ſome ſhould be ſo weak as to conclude from our Silence, our Doctrines indefenſible; and that in having the laſt Word, he has the beſt Cauſe. I ſhall briefly conſider his Oppppoſition.

Counterfeit. I do ſay, that the Quakers affirm the Light in every Man to be God: And W. Penn asks, Who of us did ever ſay, that the Light within is the whole entire God? Reaſon againſt Railing, p. 7. when I no where expreſs thoſe Words, 3 Dial. p. 4.

Quaker. Nor do I, T. H. in the Manner delivered, nor to any ſuch Charge, as thou now makeſt them to anſwer: What I ſaid, with the Ground of it, was this: G. W. inferring from Joh. 1. 4. That if the Life was of the Divine Being, the Light muſt be the ſame: (which was againſt T. H's calling it an Effect) for as is the Cauſe, the Effect muſt be: * Thou madeſt this unreaſonable Concluſion, that not only the Light within, but every Creature, as Beaſts and Trees are good, becauſe the Effects of God's Power and Wiſdom. I then charg'd thee with inſinuating, that every Meaſure of Light in Man is whole God: So that thy not expreſſing thoſe Words will not acquit thee from not inſinuating them; ſince thou doſt inſinuate upon what G. W. ſaid, not only every Meaſure of Light, but every Tree and every Beaſt, becauſe an Effect of his Power, to be God.

C. Thou ſayſt the Light within is not a potential, but a natural Effect, which thou illuſtrateſt thus: Men are the natural Off-ſpring and Product of Men, &c. Tho' this be true, yet a Son is a diſtinct Perſon from his Father: Is the Light within ſuch an Effect? Is it another God? Ibid. p. 5.

* Which was only admitted with Reſpect to it's Illumination or Meaſure of it's Appearance in Man; It was never G. W's Principle or Words, that the Life, which is the Light of Men, Jo. 1. 4. is but in it ſelf a meer Effect; for he owns it in it's own Being to be no other than God himſelf, and values not the Counterfeit's Quarrel.

Q. I will anſwer thee in the Language of thy own Creed: The Son of God is the natural Off-ſpring of God, is he therefore another God? The Holy Ghoſt proceeds from the Father and the Son, is he therefore another God? Here is Off-ſpring and Production; What ſayſt thou, T. H. to this?

C. If the Light within be a natural Effect, then it is a neceſſary Effect, and that from Eternity: But were Men from Eternity, in whom God had thus naturally ſhined? If not, How is the Light within a natural Effect? It is in vain to pretend to Infallibility, whilſt thou talkeſt thus idly, Ibid.

Q. Both thy ſilly Sophiſtry and Reflection are too weak for the Buſineſs. If the Light within had taken it's Beginning with Men, as T. H. aſſerts, Dial 1, p. 32. It were a good Conſequence, That the Light were not Eternal, and therefore not God; or if the Light had neceſſarily been within from Eternity, that Men were from Eternity: But that Men were from Eternity, becauſe the Light which ſhines in Men was from Eternity, is to ſay, the Word, as manifeſt in the Fleſh, was from Eternity, becauſe the Word was from Eternity, or that Immanuel, God with Men, was not from Eternity, becauſe he was not with Men, nor Men with him from Eternity. In ſhort, thy Sophiſtry plays upon the Word within; we ſpeak of the Eternity of the Light's Nature, and thou turneſt it to an Eternity of Manifeſtation; as if becauſe we ſay, the Light within is Eternal, that therefore it muſt needs have been Eternally within. This is not to act the Chriſtian, but play the Jew againſt the Son of God: For the Term Effect, it is variouſly ſpoken and taken among Men: The Light of the Sun is called an Effect of the Sun, and yet the Light of the Sun, is not another Sun. Howbeit, the Scripture holds forth the Life of the Word to be the Light of Men; Conſequently, The Life and Light are one.

C. Though thou wilt not affirm every Meaſure of the Light within to be the Eternal Being; yet thou wilt not deny, but that it is God. This clears me from Forgery.

Q. Thy ſaying ſo, makes thee but the more Guilty, becauſe the Paſſage thou pretendeſt to anſwer, has no ſuch Charge in it; beſides, thou haſt perverted my Words as thy ſelf haſt given them, viz. 'Tho' every Meaſure of Light diſtinctly is not that entire Eternal Being, yet we are bold to aſſert, that it is no other than God, the Fulneſs of all Light, who ſearcheth the Heart, &c. that doth ſhine into the inward Parts of Man, and doth convince, reprove, &c. Theſe latter Words were omitted by thee, on Purpoſe to make the Word God relate to the Meaſure of Light, which is joined by me to the Fulneſs. But this is frequent with thee; Proceed.

C. Either the Light within in the leaſt Meaſure, is God, a Creature, or nothing: Thou wilt not ſay it is the entire God; thou dareſt not ſay it is a Creature; it muſt then be nothing: Might not thy Time and Abilities have been better improv'd, than in contending for that, which is neither God nor a Creature.

Q. This Reflection as well reaches thee for contending againſt nothing, as me in contending for nothing: But (Argumentum ad hominem) conſider this; either the Spirit in the leaſt Meaſure of it is God, a Creature, or nothing: I ſuppoſe T. H. will not ſay, that in the leaſt Meaſure it is the entire God; T. H. dares not ſay it is a Creature; ſhall W. P. then ſay in T. Hicks's Name, it muſt be nothing? Thus, through Inadvertency, do Men intangle themſelves in their own Net; we ſpeak of a Meaſure of the Light and Spirit of God in Man, T. H. preſently prophanely takes God into Parts and Pieces, as pag. 4, 5, 6, and then charges it upon us, as the Conſequence of our Doctrine: Are not Meaſures and Degrees Scripture-Terms? Does it ſtrike at God's Immenſity, becauſe he meaſures forth himſelf, in his inward Diſcoveries, according to Man's Capacity; It is called Meaſure, with Reſpect to Man, and not that God is diviſible.

But the Truth is, T. H. Thou haſt made it thy Buſineſs not ſoberly to argue, but vainly to quibble, manifeſtly aiming to take frothy Minds: A ſmall Share of ſuch Sophiſtry might eaſily obſcure the cleareſt Truth, and ſeem to lead in Triumph the ſtrongeſt Arguments given in it's Defence; but the beſt of it is, ſuch Attempts are ſhort-liv'd, and ſo are thine? not, I promiſe thee, that I intend to have thee Aſſaſſinated. But let us hear what farther thou haſt to ſay upon this Paſſage.

C. For the other Part of thy Diſcourſe, viz. That God ſearcheth the Heart, who denies it? But what is this to the main Point? Becauſe God ſearcheth the Heart; is therefore the Common Light in every Man God? Surely, no Man, except under the Power of Deluſion, would thus Reaſon, p. 6.

Q. The Word Common is neither ours, nor the Scriptures, yet if that be the main Point, it will not be hard to prove, provided, by Common, thou meaneſt that which ſhines in all Men; for if God be the Searcher of all Men's Hearts, and he that ſhews unto Man his Thoughts (as we muſt believe, 'till T. H. can groundedly aſſign us ſome other more common Searcher of the Hearts. &c. than God) and if God doth this, as he is Light, who is Light, 1 Joh. 1. 5. and Epheſ. 5. 13. Then this Light which T. H. calls Common, and which we from Scripture ſay, enlightens all Men, is God, as John 1. 4. In him was Life, and that Life was the Light of Men: And here is thy main Point concluded againſt thee. I ſhall add, Reader, to this, another Inſtance of his evaſive Carriage, which I entreat thee to take particular Notice of, that thou mayſt ſee at what Rate he ſhuffles with us.

In his firſt Dialogue, p. 7, he quotes Stephen Criſp thus, If the Light be obey'd, then it muſt be ſufficient; and anſwers, I grant it ought to be obey'd, ſo ought the lawful Commands of Maſters, &c. Yet who will thence infer, that they are a ſufficient Rule to Salvation?

To this I reply'd, as he quotes me, Dial. 3, p. 8. By the ſame Reaſon, that ſuch as obey the lawful Commands of Maſters are reputed good Servants, thoſe who obey the Light, are good Servants to God: And if thoſe who ſo keep the Commandments of Maſters, obtain their Favour and Recompence; then thoſe who obey the Light, by T. H's Alluſion, obtain God's Favour and Reward of Righteouſneſs, unto which he makes this Anſwer:

C. This concludes not the Queſtion in Controverſy, therefore it can be no Prejudice to me.

Q. No, Thomas Hicks? Is it nothing to the Purpoſe, that thoſe who obey the Light, are ſaved from the Wrath, and receive the Favour and Reward of God; as Servants which obey their Maſters Commands, are ſaved from the Wrath, and receive the Favour and Recompence of their Maſters? Let the Reader judge how much this concerns the Queſtion.

C. I confeſs, the Light within ought to be obey'd, and ſo ought the lawful Commands of Maſters, from whence thou boldly, like thy ſelf, concludeſt to the Sufficiency of the meer Light within: Such Extravagancies as theſe do ordinarily attend thy peculiar Genius, Dial. 3, p. 9.

Q. Soft a little! If the Light ought to be obey'd, it is a ſufficient Rule for that Obedience: To keep to thy own Parallel of a Maſter and a Servant: How can a Servant be condemned of his Maſter for not anſwering his Command, whilſt the Maſter's Command is not a ſufficient Rule for the Servant's Obedience. The Command implies a ſufficient Rule to the Performance of the Thing commanded.

C. 'Tis true, that God approves of Servants that do ſincerely obey the Commands of their Superiors; will it therefore follow, that their Commands are ſufficient to guide us to Salvation, p. 9.

Q. What a wretched Shuffle is this? Was it ever the Queſtion, Whether the Commands of Maſters were ſufficient to guide us to Salvation? Or are the Commands of the Light, about the Things of God, no more ſufficient to Salvation, than the Commands of Maſters (be they about what they will) are ſufficient to Salvation? Is not this taking away the Compariſon, by putting the Subject of it in the Room of that for which it was brought? making Salvation to be as natural a Conſequence of following the Commands of Maſters, as of following the Requirings of the Light. But we are not ſo to be ſhifted off; for by the ſame Reaſon, that the Civil Commands of a Maſter obey'd, are ſufficient to the obtaining of a Civil Salvation from Man's Wrath; The Spiritual Commands of the Light obey'd, are ſufficient to the obtaining of a Spiritual Salvation; that is, a being ſav'd from the Wrath to come, which is and ſhall be farther revealed againſt all the Workers of Iniquity. Let me uſe thy own Words, faſly reflected upon me in this very Matter; Where Proof is defective, thou beggeſt the Queſtion, (nay, I may ſay, changeſt it) and triumpheſt in thy own Confidence, which a modeſt Man would not do: Away with theſe poor Shuffles, for Shame! Is this to evince the Matters objected to be real Truths?

But what ſayſt thou to my Argument, p. 15, grounded on Jo. 1. 4? 'If God be 'Divine, and ſufficient to Salvation, and the Word be God, and the Life of the 'Word, one with the Word, and that Life the Light of Men; then the Light of 'Men is Divine and Sufficient to Salvation.

C. O!

1674. Sect. I.

C. O! What profound Divinity and exquiſite Logick is this! I perceive thy Mind abounds with Ignorance, from the Arguments that ſpring thence. Thou huddleſt the Principal Agent and Ordinary Means together, p. 18.

Q. A rare Excuſe for thine—— or ſomething worſe. Ought they not to be together in an Argument deſigned to prove them one? Ordinary Means are thy own Words, and not mine. A meer Shift for an Anſwer. But to go on.

C. How can God himſelf be called a Means? p. 18.

Q. After the ſame Manner that his Power ſaveth us, and his Spirit ſanctifieth us, and that he becomes the Teacher of his People; ſuch a Means, if thou wilt call it ſo, my Argument was offered to prove the Light to be. Is this to act either the Divine or Logician, after all thy conceited high Rants, thus pitifully to beg the Queſtion? But what follows?

C. Thy Argument is fallacious, becauſe that which is ſpoken in the Firſt ſhould exactly be the Subject of the Second Propoſition, p. 18.

Q. And ſo it is. See Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 14.

C. If the Propoſition were right, yet thy Concluſion doth not reach the plain Terms of the Queſtion, viz. Therefore the common Light in every Man is God, and ſufficient to Salvation.

Q. Though I told thee before, that the Word Common is none of ours, yet I am not offended with it: For the Love of God is never the worſe for being common, whatever thy Reprobation-Faith thinks of it. But art thou willing, in Earneſt, this ſhould be the Queſtion between us? For I perceive, when thou art put to a Pinch, it is frequent with thee to turn me off with ſuch Expreſſions as theſe, Prove this to be the Common Light within; What is this to the Common Light within Men? Meer Evaſions; and moſt Times attended with hard Words to cover them, as in Page 9, 14, 15, 17, 39, 42, 43, 52, 53, &c.

C. This is the Controverſy between us, whether the Common Light in every Man be God, Chriſt, and ſufficient to lead to Salvation, p. 8. If thou couldſt demonſtrate this, it would put an Iſſue to a great Part of the Controverſy between us, Ibid. p. 17.

Q. Very well; Thou haſt granted, That in the Word was Life, and that Life the Light of Men, as John 1. 4. on which I grounded my Argument; and that the Life and Light there mentioned, are one with the Word, (or of it's own Being) conſequently God, and ſufficient to Salvation. But that ſuch a Concluſion reacheth not the Terms of the Queſtion, to wit, the Common Light in Men; which thou denyeſt to be one with the Life of the Word, and therefore Inſufficient to Salvation. Upon this I thus argue, for the bringing of the Controverſy to an Iſſue.

If the Light of Men, John 1. 4. be the Light of All Men, then it is a Light common to all Men. Thou muſt deny one of theſe two, either that the Light of Men is the Light of all Men; or, that the Light of All Men is common to all Men; The latter I ſhould think in Point of Reputation, thou wilt not be ſo Unreaſonable as to deny: The former then I muſt ſuppoſe thee to reject, viz. That the Light of Men is the Light of all Men. This I ſhall maintain by the General Phraſe of Scripture, Eccleſ. 1. 13.—This ſore Travel hath God given to the Sons Of Men, chap. 2. 3, 8. the ſame chap. 3. 10. I have ſeen the Travail God hath given to the Sons Of Men, ver. 18. 19. That which befalleth the Sons Of Men, befalleth Beaſts; as the one dyeth ſo dyeth the other, Jer. 32. 19. Thine Eyes are upon all the Ways of the Sons Of Men, to give every one according to his Ways. Which prove, that Of Men, is meant Of All Men. I will add two Places more out of Prov. 8. 4. Unto you, O Men! I (Wiſdom) call, and my Voice is to the Sons Of Men. and ver. 31. My Delight is with the Sons Of Men. This proves Matter and Phraſe: For both Of Men ſignifieth Of All Men; and this Voice cometh from him, in whom are hid all the Treaſures of Wiſdom and Knowledge, even the Eternal Word, in whom is Life, and this Life the Light of Men. From all which I conclude, that the Light of Men is the Light of all Men, yea, Every Man that cometh into the World, John 1. 9. And that the Light of all Men, is a Light Common to all Men; and that the Light that is common to all Men, is a common Light. Now T. H. thou hadſt done ſomething, if thou hadſt given us a plain Reaſon and Scripture for thy Two Lights within, Common and Special; and made Good that Diſtinction between Light and Light, in Job 24. 13. John 1. 4, 9. chap. 3. 20, 21. Epheſ. 5. 13. 1 John 1. 5, 7. chap. 2. 8, 9, 10. and have told us, if thou couldſt, Where the common Light endeth, and the ſpecial Light begins: And if the Special reprove for Evil, as well as the Common (which thou ſayſt, reveals much, and ought to be attended to) thou ſhould'ſt have let us know how the Diſcoveries, Motions, Reproofs, and Commands of the one, might be diſcern'd and diſtinguiſh'd from the other: For we own but One Real Spiritual Light to the Sons of Men, though divers Manifeſtations and Operations of that one Light, ſuited to the Capacities of all Perſons and Ages; and not to ſhuffle me off with aſking me, How canſt thou infer with ſuch preſumptuous Confidence, wilt thou dare ſtand by this Conſequence? After thou T. H. haſt made it as Ugly as thy Malice and Diſhoneſty could well contrive. Mean Artifices to bear thy Weak Reader in hand, that thou haſt hit the Mark, when thou haſt all along ſhot quite beſide it; Practices unworthy of any fair Diſputant, much more a Man of thy Pretences to Religion. Had'ſt thou truly regarded the Light of which thou haſt writ ſo many ſlight Things, we ſhould not have ſeen that Envy, Paſſion, baſe Shuffling, Inſolence, &c. that thy Writings now abound withal. Therefore under all thy higher Conceits, thou ſtandeſt Condemn'd of the Light: Be exhorted firſt to obey it, before thou undertakeſt to write of things thou vainly think'ſt beyond it.

Sect. II. §. II. Concerning the SOUL of MAN.

Counterfeit. I Affirm, that G. F. ſays, The Soul of Man is Part of God's Being, without Beginning and Infinite, which is to ſay, The Soul is God, Dialog. 3. p. 19.

Quaker. I have two Things to ſay: Firſt, That in Caſe G. F. ſo holds, thou haſt done unworthily to conclude generally againſt the Quakers: In thy former Dialogues thou charged'ſt it upon the Quakers; and now thou layeſt it directly upon G. F. Are ſuch Shiftings and Runnings from Generals to Particulars, allowable in Divinity? Is this equal Dealing? But Secondly, I deny that G. F. ſo holds; What ſayſt thou to that?

C. G. Fox in his Great Myſtery, p. 90, in Anſwer to one that ſaid, There is a Kind of Infiniteneſs in the Soul; yet it cannot be Infiniteneſs it ſelf, ſpeaks thus: Is not the Soul without Beginning, coming from God, returning into God again? Hath this Beginning or Ending? And is not this Infinite in it ſelf? Can any Thing be clearer, than that G. F. makes the Soul the Subject, and not the Divine Life? Ibid. p. 20, 21.

Q. Yes, that there may: For it is clear enough that G. F. intends by the Soul and Breath coming out from God, the Divine Breath, or Soul of the Soul, as Auguſtine calls it; and as Mach, Neſhemah, Pneuma, Animus, and Spiritus ſignify: 'Twas this made Adam a Living Soul to God. [Thou dealeſt unfairly with G. F. and us, in making his Queſtions about this, both his and our Affirmation, That the Soul (or Spirit) of Man is God. A manifeſt Falſhood and Abuſe.] And was not the Death threatned Adam upon Diſobedience, the Loſs of this? They that read G. F's Books with a more impartial Mind than thou doſt, may ſee that ſometimes he ſpeaketh of the Soul, as of the Man, p. 91. where he ſays, That ſuch as receive the Light, receive Redemption, whereby their Spirits, Bodies and Souls are ſanctified; and ſometimes he ſpeaks of the Soul, as reſpecting that Breath of Life, by which it became a Living Soul to God, which is Man in the Heavenly Image. He that reads pag. 90, 91, 100. may diſcern the Truth of this. But why art thou not angry with the Prieſt, for talking of a Kind of Infiniteneſs in the Soul? 'Tis at the Quaker, and not the Principle, thy Gall is ſtirr'd: For a Kind of Infiniteneſs muſt be an Infiniteneſs, and not a Finiteneſs. Did G. F's Words at moſt riſe higher? What farther doſt thou object?

C. But G. F. ſaith pag. 100. God breathed into Man the Breath of Life, and he became a Living Soul; and is not this which cometh out from God, Part of God? Which Soul Chriſt is the Biſhop of. Can Fox here intend, that Chriſt is the Biſhop of the Divine Life, &c? Yet is he as abſurd in calling Chriſt the Biſhop of the Soul: For if the Soul be Part of God's Being, and Chriſt be God, then one Part of God muſt be Biſhop over another, Ibid. p. 21, 22.

Q. Suppoſe this Cavil had any Thing in it, and that thou hadſt herein faithfully repreſented our Belief, might not I retort upon thy own Creed, that God is the Father of God: And when Chriſt prayed, God prayed to God; ſince the One Nature could not pray without the other, and the Spirit makes Interceſſion, that is, God intercedes with God. What think'ſt thou of this T. Hicks? Beſides, I told thee then, that God Inſpired Man with ſomething of his own Subſtance, in the Name of R. Nahmanni, Hiſkuni, and P. Fagius, That God contributed ſomething to him, and beſtowed ſomething of his own Divinity upon him, and that thou did'ſt manifeſt thy ſelf an ungodly Perſon, for inferring that what is vulgarly call'd the Soul of Man, to wit, the meer Creature, is Part of God's own Subſtance, becauſe we aſſerted, the Life, Breath, or Soul, as it may very well be term'd, which God breathed into Man, was of his own Being and Subſtance: What ſayſt thou to this?

C. If G. F. be underſtood to ſpeak with Reference to the Soul, then my Inference is Natural and Proper, viz. That the Soul is of God's Subſtance, and Part of God's Being, Pag. 22.

Q. Are all thy Brags come to this? Take Soul as before expreſſed, and it is granted without any Damage to our Doctrine. For the Scriptures, that teſtifie, God communicated of his own Breath, or Life unto Man, whereby he became a Living Soul, do not confound Man and that Divine Life; no more doth G. F. he never affirmed Man to be God, his own Words diſtinguiſh them, viz. God Breathed into Man, &c. and conſequently, that Man is not that Breath of God which he Inſpired Man with. Again, G. F. in many of his Writings, ſpeaks of the Fallen and Degenerated State of Men, the great Pollution and Wickedneſs they lie and live in; and that heavy Wrath and Vengeance which will follow: All which concerns Man; it was not That, but Adam which was beguiled: Had Adam liv'd in that Life, he had been preſerved. But ſuppoſe what I ſaid granted the Queſtion, as it did not, Many Great and Learned Men have run in the ſame Line, and they eſcaped the Cries of Blaſphemy, Abſurdity, and the reſt of thy Exclamatory Terms, from Millions: What maketh Thee then keep ſuch a Barking at us? Is it that thou haſt more Authority, or leſs Candor?

Before I conclude this Section, I would put thee in Mind of a double Injuſtice thou haſt committed: The One was in making this Falſe and Prophane Conſequence, That God ſets up a Light in himſelf, which he himſelf is to obey; and in ſo doing, God ſhall be Saved, to follow from G. F's Words forecited. The Second is, in my giving this ſharp Rebuke for this Paſſage, as an Anſwer in thy Dialogue, without ſo much as inſerting one Word of it, that thou might'ſt cover thy own Unrighteouſneſs, and render me ſevere. Theſe Tricks, Thomas Hicks, will never compaſs thy End, but greatly contribute to fruſtrate it.

§. III. Concerning the Redemption of the SEED.

Sect. III.

Counterfeit. Foraſmuch as Chriſt came to ſeek and to ſave that which was loſt, I did Query, Who, or what was that which was loſt? Ibid. p. 34.

Quaker. I know thou didſt; and that thou mad'ſt G. Keith anſwer, That which is loſt is ſtill in Man; that Chriſt came to ſeek and ſave, and all his Miniſters Preached People to this, A Loſt God, a Loſt Chriſt, &c. Upon which thou mad'ſt this Exclamation, Bluſh O Heavens! And be Aſtoniſh'd O Earth, &c. Did Jeſus Chriſt come to ſeek and ſave a Loſt God, a Loſt Chriſt? Was ever God and Chriſt in a Loſt Condition? I told thee then, and do ſtill, that the Heavens and the Earth might bluſh at thy baſe Dealings with G. K. I alſo told thee, as thou haſt cited me, that he intended no other than that Chriſt came to ſeek and to ſave, by turning People to enquire after a Loſt God, and a Loſt Chriſt? What ſay'ſt thou to this?

C. If by Loſt, we muſt not underſtand Man's Loſt Condition; what leſs can be underſtood, but that Jeſus came to ſeek and to ſave a Loſt God. 'Tis true, G. K. ſpeaks of People's Finding a Loſt God, whom they had Loſt, Ibid. p. 35.

Q. If this be true, that G. K. ſo ſpeaks, to wit, that by Loſt God, he underſtood People's loſing of God, what's become of thy Bluſh O Heavens, &c. Is God and Chriſt in a Loſt Condition? It is well thou art drawn to confeſs this againſt thy ſelf?

C. But ſtill, if Loſt be meant only of God and Chriſt, how can Chriſt be ſaid to ſeek and ſave a Loſt God? Ibid.

Q. No ſuch Words ever fell from G. K. to any ſuch Queſtion, as thou makeſt them an Anſwer to. Thou haſt unworthily perverted both his Words and Senſe. Though Loſt be ſaid of God, yet the Loſs is Man's; for every Man who hath Loſt God, is truly in a Loſt Condition. But to apply that Loſt Condition to God, and not Man, becauſe Man hath Loſt God, and is admoniſhed to ſeek after a Loſt God, is to commit great Injury againſt us, as thou haſt attempted with thy ſilly Inſinuation, viz. If Loſt be meant Only of God and Chriſt, &c. What poor begging Shifts art thou put to?

C. But, to put the Reader out of Doubt, that what I infer is indeed your very Opinion, G. F. and J. N. tell us, that the Seed wants Redemption, and the Seed is 1674. Chriſt; either then there muſt be more Chriſts than one, or Chriſt came to redeem him ſelf, Ibid.

Sect. III. Q. Is it to put us out of Doubt, to leave it in Doubt whether G. F. and J. N ever ſaid any ſuch Thing, or theſe Words, as laid down together? For thou referreſt to no Book.

But ſuppoſe it be true; will it bear thy Inference; therefore God and Chriſt are in a loſt Condition? Is it all one to ſay, that Chriſt is bruiſed and Oppreſſed, and crucified afreſh by wicked Men, and put to open Shame; and to ſay, That Chriſt is in a loſt Condition? If it be not, as every ordinary Capacity may eaſily ſee; how needleſs, as well as how falſe is this Rant of thine? p. 36, viz. Wilt thou aſſert the very Thing which I infer from your Words, and yet ſay, I pervert them; May we not juſtly eſteem of thee, as a heady, raſh and inconſiderate young Man, &c. Thus, Thomas Hicks, where it is impoſſible for thee to make good thy Concluſions, thou telleſt me of granting the Charge, and then falleſt into thy uſual Inſults, the better to inſinuate a Credence of thy Ability and Honeſty with thy Reader.

C. But is it not abſurd, yea, blaſphemous, to talk of God's redeeming the Seed? Ibid.

Q. No more Blaſphemy than is in the Scripture, which ſays, Out of Egypt have I called my Son, a Place of Burdens. But I the leſs wonder at thy Ignorance in theſe Heavenly Things, who didſt never yet drink of his Cup, nor waſt baptized with his Baptiſm, nor knew'ſt the true Fellowſhip of his Death and Sufferings; but art now adding to them by as provoking Impieties, as any Man of this Age hath committed againſt him.

Give me thy Judgment of theſe Scriptures, and my Conſequence from them. And God ſaw that there was no Man, and wondred that there was no Interceſſor; therefore his Arm brought Salvation to him, and his Righteouſneſs it ſuſtained him, Iſaiah 59. 16. Again, The Year of my Redeemed is come, and I looked, and there was none to help, and I wondred that there was none to uphold; therefore mine own Arm brought Salvation unto me, and my Fury it upheld me, Chap. 53. 4, 5. Whence it is no Contradiction to ſay, That God did rid himſelf of the Enemies of his own Precious Life, or that he brought Salvation to himſelf.

C. I infer from your Words this horrid Abſurdity, That God Redeems himſelf, pag. 37. This is thy Truth againſt Fiction.

Q. It is not from our Words, bnt the Words of Scripture; and but that thou art become Shameleſs, I ſhould wonder that any Man pretending the Scriptures to be his Rule, ſhould charge plain Scripture with Abſurdity and Blaſphemy.

C. Thus Chriſt is at one and the ſame Time, at Liberty and in Bondage, Redeeming, and Redeemed, Conquering, and yet Preſſed down: And though this Kind of Language be Folly and Madneſs, yet thou telleſt us, thou art content to uſe it, p. 38.

Q. And it were well if thou would'ſt be contented not to abuſe it: Is this thy Religion, to vilifie the Language of other People's Religion; nay, of Holy Scripture it ſelf?

But how dark art thou, Thomas Hicks, to make both a Wonder and a Scoff at Chriſt's Conquering, and yet being Preſſed down at the ſame Time; when the Scripture ſo plainly holds forth, that He is Crucified by ſuch Counterfeit Chriſtians as thou art, at what Time He Reigns in the Hearts of his Children? And is not the Spirit ſaid to be Quenched by ſome, at what Time it Lives in others? And is he not grieved by the Rebellions of ſome, whilſt he is delighted in others? Was not God at Liberty at what Time he ſaid, They made him ſerve with their Sins? And was He not Whole, at what Time he ſaid, He was Broken, Ezek. 6. 9. * Canſt thou Reaſonably infer, becauſe of theſe Expreſſions, us'd after the Manner of Men, that it is Abſurdity and Blaſphemy, that God heals himſelf, delivers himſelf, and eaſes himſelf of his Enemies, Words of equal Import? Methinks thy unſavoury Carriage ſhould reflect Shame upon W. Kiffin, with his Elders, &c. to ſuffer ſuch irreverent Traſh to come out of their Congregation; if they value their Credit, they will not ſuffer thee any longer thus upon the Ramble.

But before I leave thee in this Section, I have One Thing more to charge thee with, and that is, not only the Abuſe of our Words, by concluding from Man's

* Thomas Hicks takes that Literally, which is Metaphorically ſpoken, both in Scripture and our Books, and makes Literal Conſequences upon Metaphorical Premiſes, as if God had Hands, Eyes, Head, Arms, could be imbondaged, broken, &c. after a Worldly Manner, or in a Strict and Proper Senſe, and not rather in a more Hidden, and Metaphorical Signification: He is herein either very Blind, or very Malicious.

Sect. III.

being turned to ſeek after a loſt God and Chriſt, that God and Chriſt are in a loſt Condition, but that they only want Redemption, and that Men and Women are not the Objects of Redemption, as in 3 Dial. p. 37. Than which nothing can be more falſe, and conſequently injurious to a People. But I have left wondering that thou ſhouldſt be baſe.

§. IV. Concerning our Belief in Chriſt.

Sect. IV.

Qua. ANother Inſtance by which thou undertakeſt to prove the Quaker no Chriſtian, is, his Denial of Jeſus Chriſt to be a diſtinct Perſon without him: Is this true, or no?

Counterfeit. I accuſe you for denying Jeſus Chriſt to be a diſtinct Perſon without you, p. 25.

Q. I ſay that thou haſt varied thy Charge, and given thy ſelf an Anſwer to it out of my Book, which was never an Anſwer to any ſuch Matter, viz. Herein thou haſt ſhown thy Ignorance and Malice; nor is it ſo in my Book, but Ignorance or Malice: Thou alſo omitteſt the Ground of my ſo ſpeaking, which is not fair, viz. The Quakers ſay, that Chriſt is in them, Chriſt is God-man; is God-man in them? Again, there is but one Chriſt, born of a Virgin, that ſuffered at Jeruſalem: Can that Chriſt be in Man? In Defence of which ſtrange Conſtruction of our Belief, thou haſt offered nothing to what I oppoſed. Howbeit, I deſire my Reader to take Notice, that ſince thou pretendeſt to own but one Chriſt, and ſayſt, that it is impoſſible that Chriſt ſhould be in Man, that thou both denyeſt the Scripture, and contradicteſt thy ſelf; there is not any Doctrine clearer in holy Record, than that of Chriſt's indwelling with his Saints, John 14. 20, 23. chap. 15. 4, 5. chap. 17. 23. Rom. 8. 10. 2 Cor. 13. 5. Gal. 1. 29. Col. 1. 27. Rev. 3. 20.

The ſame Objection thou makeſt againſt us, holds good againſt them, 'tis thus, Chriſt is God-man; can God-man be in the Corinthians? What might not T. Hicks have cavilled againſt Chriſt and his Diſciple, as well as againſt us; Is this the Way to prove the Quaker no Chriſtian, that makes that Thing Error, which can only conſtitute Men right Chriſtians: For if Chriſt be not there, no Anointing can be there, which John ſays, leads into all Truth: Beſides, thou contradicteſt thy ſelf, as thou mayſt ſee, Dial. p. 22, 23. But to thy preſent Charge.

C. This I object againſt you, your denying Chriſt to be a diſtinct Perſon without you; to which thou ſpeakeſt nothing, ſignifying thereby, that you are pinched, Ibid. p. 26.

Q. I told thee under the Head of Perverſions, that this was not all thou mad'ſt us to deny; for thou didſt untruly infer Our Denial of Chriſt's Bodily Appearance, concerning which thou ſpeakeſt nothing, ſignifying thereby, that thou art pinched; unleſs it be to deny thou ever ſaidſt ſo, as p. 26, 31. thereby adding a Lye to the Shuffle. But why are we pinched, becauſe we ſay nothing to a Doctrine the Scripture ſays nothing of: Give me one Place that mentions Chriſt to be a diſtinct Perſon without us; art thou ſo deſtitute of common Senſe, as to think of proving the Quaker no Chriſtian, becauſe he denies a Doctrine, not expreſſed in Scripture; and yet at that Inſtant to magnifie the Scripture, as thy ſole Rule: Verily, thou makeſt thy ſelf a Deriſion to all wiſe Men. But go on, make the beſt of thy Charge.

C. G. F. in his Great Myſtery, p. 16. writes thus, Thou art deceived, who ſayſt Chriſt is diſtinct from the Saints: Can any Man eat the Fleſh of Chriſt, if his Fleſh be not in them?

Q. This probably thou mayſt have found in thy Brother Faldo's Book, and thou mightſt have found it defended in mine. Where is Diſtinct among G. F's Words, which are theſe, 'But God and Chriſt are in his Saints, and dwell in them, and 'walk in them; and he, the Prieſt, is a Reprobate, and out of the Apoſtle's Do'ctrine: Which plainly ſhews that G. F. only oppoſeth Chriſt's being at a Diſtance, as divided from the Saints, becauſe they who know not Chriſt to be in them, the Apoſtle terms Reprobates; and not that Chriſt and his Saints are in diſtinct Beings. That Chriſt's Fleſh muſt be in People if they eat it, is ſo far from being either Matter of Error, or any Proof for thee, that, till thou canſt prove, how a Man may eat his Victuals without him, thou wilt but render thy ſelf ridiculous in talking at ſuch an idle rate. What elſe haſt thou to offer?

C. G. Whitehead ſaith, Jeſus Chriſt a Perſon without us, is not Scripture-Language, Dip. pl. p. 13—— We cannot own your Limitations and unſcriptural Notions concerning Chriſt's Being, R. againſt R. 1. p. 22.

Q. But (why doſt thou leave out the Word God-man, which thou uſedſt at firſt, and was repeated by G. W.) what of all this T. H?

C. If theſe be your Words, where in is my Ignorance or Malice manifeſt, in giving the World an Account of your Belief? Ibid. p. 26.

Q. Thou mightſt as well have ſaid of our Diſ-belief of thy unſcriptural Belief: Canſt thou upon ſecond Thoughts perſwade thy ſelf, that this is the way to prove the Quaker no Chriſtian, condemn him out of his own Mouth and evince his Errors to the World, that wandereſt from ſound Doctrine and wholſome Words, to effect it. Howbeit, not ſo much for thy ſake, who makeſt it thy Buſineſs to render us a Scorn and Reproach among Men, by the moſt injurious Practices upon our Perſons and Principles; as for theirs, in whom there is ſome Tenderneſs and ſober Enquiry, I ſhall endeavour to take away all Occaſion of Stumbling, by this ſhort and ſerious Account of our Belief.

'Tis granted, that Chriſt, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever, is a diſtinct Being (though not at a Diſtance) from the Saints; Otherwiſe, it would be all one indeed to ſay, as thou, T. H. wickedly concludeſt, p. 30. from thy own Invention of Man's being the Seed, which is God, that it is all one, whether we call God by the Name of W. Penn or call W. Penn God and Chriſt; a blaſphemous Abſurdity indeed, as thou ſayſt! But then, what art thou that madeſt it? Next, we never ſaid, that Chriſt was not as well without us, as within us; for we cannot comprehend him, but are comprehended of him: We never ſet any Limitations to Chriſt's Preſence; they are the falſe and hateful Inferences of our Enemies; And let the Reader beware, that he be not abuſed by them. For the Word Perſon (as thou uſeſt it, in telling us of Chriſt, God-man, a diſtinct Perſon without thee) it is no Scripture-Phraſe; for in Heb. 1. 3. Ὑπόςασις, Hypoſtaſis ſignifies Subſtance; and in 2 Cor. 2. 10. ἐν τῷ προσώπῳ χριςοῦ, ſignifies in Chriſt's Stead, Name, Sight or Authority, or for his Sake, as Grotius, Eraſmus and the Ancient Fathers have it. However, I hope for our Tenderneſs in this particular, conſidering that T. H's Charge is no Scripture-Phraſe, and that ſuch like Expreſſions occaſion People to retain mean and dark Apprehenſions of God, and Chriſt, and his Place of Reſidence, we ſhall not ſuffer in the Mind of our ſober Reader, as Men undeſerving the Name of Chriſtians. Haſt thou T. H. any more to offer upon this Head?

C. If the Light be Jeſus Chriſt, and a Meaſure of it in all Men, but more eminently in your ſelves; whether W. P. and G. W. may not as properly be called Jeſus Chriſt, as that Bodily Appearance or Outward Perſon? And why may not Divine Worſhip be given as well to you as to him?

Q. That Jeſus Chriſt is the Light of Men, the Scripture holds forth; but that W. P, or G. W. ſhould be the Proper Body prepared of God, for himſelf to be manifeſted in (as was that in which God was manifeſted in the Fleſh: in whom dwelt the Fulneſs of the God-head) is not ſcriptural, nor a Conſequence from our Opinion; but a blaſphemous Inference of thy making, to be abhorred of juſt Men. Are we Chriſt's Body, as that was? Did we ever ſay, that the Fulneſs of the God-head dwelt bodily in us? He is manifeſted in us meaſurably, to ſave us: But was he ſo manifeſted in that Manhood to ſave it? Or is either G. W. or W. P. as properly and peculiarly the Man-hood of the Saviour as that he took to manifeſt himſelf Saviour in? Thou ſhalt ſee whither thy Sophiſtry will lead thee: The Son of God appeared bodily and viſibly at Jeruſalem: The Son of God was revealed in Paul; therefore Paul might as well be called Jeſus Chriſt as he, in that Appearance. Again, Divine Worſhip is to be given to Chriſt: but Chriſt was in Paul; therefore Divine Worſhip was to be given to Paul. Again, T. H. doubtleſs, at leaſt many of the Baptiſts, believe they have the Spirit of God, and that the Spirit of God is God, and therefore to be worſhipped; will it be a good Conſequence, That T. H. or thoſe Baptiſts are to be worſhipped? Theſe vain Cavils and Sophiſms thou undertakeſt to entertain thy Reader with, and to abuſe us by, are great Inſtances of a weak Cauſe and an evil Mind.

C. Be not angry if again I aſk thee, if Chriſt ſignifie Anointed, and God be Chriſt, as thou affirmeſt; whether God himſelf be Anointed, Ibid. p. 32.

Q. It ſeems then, Socinian-like, thou doſt not affirm that God is Chriſt; and yet it is but two Pages before that thou ſayſt, The God-head of the Son, and the Man-hood conjunct, is the Chriſt. And Dial. p. 44. Thou calleſt God manifeſt in the Fleſh, Chriſt. Is not God then Chriſt by thy own Words? But what Anſwer did I give thee to thy Queſtion about Anointing?

Sect. IV.

C. Thou ſayſt, Chriſt was not anointed by Halves, but entirely; herein thou contradicteſt thy ſelf, and overthroweſt thy own Diſtinction between Chriſt and the Body of Chriſt.

Q. No ſuch Matter; for the Diſtinction came from thy inſinuating, that the Man-hood of Chriſt was the Chriſt, becauſe that only could be Anointed, upon which, knowing it was lately thy Opinion, that Chriſt was God as well as Man, I ſaid, that he could not be anointed by Halves; and therefore Chriſt was anointed as God as well as Man: What ſayſt thou to this?

C. The Difficulty ſtill remains: If God alone was that which was anointed, the Queſtion returns upon thee, whether God did anoint himſelf, and with what, and to what End?

Q. Thou art miſtaken; and miſerably beggeſt the Queſtion, and ſendeſt it back again: For when thou (to prove the meer Manhood to be the Chriſt or Anointed) didſt inſinuate the Impoſſibility of Chriſt's being anointed as God: I did then, and now more largely return this to thee, ſince thou confeſſeſt Chriſt to be God as well as Man, and that God manifeſt in the Fleſh, makes the true Chriſt or Anointed, and that it is abſurd to think he ſhould be anointed by Halves: Is not God or the Divine Nature alſo anointed? if ſo, T. H. who is it that anointed the Godhead, and with what, and to what End? Theſe are thy own Words, and they belong to thy own Doctrine. Thou didſt object againſt our Principle, and happenedſt to contradict thy own Principle in it: I ſent thee the Objection home again, for thee to diſingage thy own Principle of it Firſt; Thou groweſt angry, tell'ſt me of contradicting my ſelf, and returneſt me the Objection never conſidered; but back it muſt go, and when thou haſt found the Way to clear thy own, that ſhall ſerve for thine and mine too. And thus I leave thee and thy Cavils in this Section.

Sect. V.

§. V. Concerning the Goſpel-Rule.

LET us hear what thou haſt to ſay to the Arguments I gave about the Rule.

C. You deny the Scriptures to be the Rule of Faith and Practice unto Chriſtians, pag. 38.

Q. Thou wouldſt here inſinuate, as if our Faith and Practice were not according to Scripture, becauſe we do not aſſert them, but the Spirit that gave them forth, to be the Rule, eſpecially, in new-Covenant Times: I grant the Scriptures are to be fulfilled, and that many Heavenly Exhortations, Reproofs and Inſtructions therein contained, are to be regarded by us; but that which is my Rule to direct my Underſtanding, what is fit for me to embrace, and what to reject, and how to underſtand that which is to be received, muſt be the Spirit of Truth, which alone gives true Diſcerning: Therefore let us hear what thou ſayſt to my Argument, Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 25. as thou thy ſelf haſt cited it, Dial. 3. p. 38. viz. 'That which is more Ancient, more Univerſal, and more Able to inform, rule and guide, that muſt more eminently be the Rule: But that hath been, and is, the Light within; therefore that hath been, and ought to be the Rule of Faith and Practice: What doſt thou offer to invalidate this Argument?

C. Then herein I have not miſrepreſented your Belief, p. 39.

Q. But is this the Way to confute our Belief? Or did we charge thee with miſrepreſenting it in this particular? Doſt thou think thus to evince the Truth of thy Objections, by granting us the Matter objected: It ſeems, we are to take this for thy Anſwer; and conſequently, that the Light within is eminently the Rule, for ought thou haſt ſaid againſt it. Proceed.

C. But foraſmuch as you often ſay, you own the Scriptures, and the Holy Rules therein contained: In what Senſe do you acknowledge them to be your Rule?

Q. Thou makeſt me to anſwer this Queſtion thus, The Scripture is the Rule of Hiſtorical Faith; the Spirit can only be the Rule of ſaving Faith, Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 40. But can any Man that hath the leaſt Dram of Honeſty or Juſtice, think this the Way to confute me, to ſkip over near Fifteen Pages, containing ſeveral Arguments made to evidence and confirm the Truth of the Firſt?

Hadſt thou not a Conſcience, that dares do and ſay any Thing, thou couldſt never have given me ſuch an unhandſome Slip. But let us hear what thou ſayſt to that which thou haſt cited.

C. If the Light within be more able to inform, rule and guide, and therefore more eminently the Rule; what need is there of an hiſtorical Rule? p. 39.

Q. Did ever any Man, pretending to be in his Wits, talk ſo idly? What is it but to ſay, If the Spirit of God was always more able than the Scripture, what need is there of having Scripture? Is not this to infer from God's Condeſcenſion to Man's Imbecillity, that the Light and Spirit of God are Imbecile: Is not this to reprobate all external Means, and to conclude God, Chriſt, the Light and Spirit inſufficient, becauſe that any were ever uſed: Is it a good Argument, becauſe the Light does not reveal ſuch a Thing, therefore the Light cannot reveal ſuch a Thing, which is the utmoſt Strength of thy Oppoſition. I farther told thee, that thoſe who gave forth the Scripture, came to the Enjoyment of thoſe Things through the Light and Spirit of God, or they could never have writ them; therefore the Light and Spirit, and not the Scriptures, were the Rule of their Faith. But of this, and abundance more to the ſame Purpoſe, thou takeſt no Notice: I farther told thee, that the Prophets ſaw him with this Light, unleſs they ſaw him without Light, and that thoſe that believed him, when come, could not have received him, had they not beheld him with an inward Eye. Thus thou quoteſt me: What Reply makeſt thou to this?

C. That the Prophets ſaw him by the Light of Divine Revelation, I grant: And that none do believe in him, that do not know him, is true; but that this Light or inward Eye is the common Light in every Man, that thou muſt prove, p. 42.

Q. It was formerly, and is again prov'd to be the ſame Light, though not the ſame in Manifeſtation: Every one had the ſame Light, but not the ſame Propheſies, nor the ſame Sights: When thou haſt proved two inward Lights, it will be Time for thee to talk at this Rate: Nothing did then, nor can now, lead truly to know and confeſs to the Word that took Fleſh, in which Word was Life, and that Life the Light of Men, but ſuch Diſcoveries as proceed from a Meaſure of the ſame Light, as hath been already proved. And ſhould I admit of thy Conſtruction, that the Light by which ſome had a true Sight of Chriſt before, and at his Coming, was not the common Light, as thou calleſt it, but that which thou thy ſelf alloweſt to be Divine; yet wilt thou give me Leave to infer in thy Name, that the Divine Light was inſufficient, before ſuch Time as it reveal'd thoſe Things to the Prophets, and gave thoſe that were alive at Chriſt's Spiritual Coming, a Knowledge and a Senſe of them, becauſe they did not know them before they knew them? For at this Rate thou treateſt us about the Light within; the Light within doth not do this, therefore the Light within cannot do it, preſumptuouſly concluding it inſufficient to diſcover thoſe Things, that either do not need a Diſcovery, becauſe they are already known, or that it ſeemeth Good to God in his Wiſdom to conceal.

C. If the Scriptures tell thee there was ſuch a Man as Moſes, David and Matthew, &c. without which thou couldſt not have known any ſuch Thing; ſo the Scripture tells thee what they ſpoke and wrote of; therefore the Scriptures muſt be the Rule of thy Belief, both concerning thoſe Men and their Sayings, p. 45.

Q. I grant the Scriptures tell me, there were ſuch Men as Moſes, David and Matthew, and that they wrote: But what is it that gives me to believe the Things they wrote to be true? The Rule of Saving Faith is that we ſpeak of, and not that which is Hiſtorical? It is impoſſible for me to underſtand the Truth of thoſe Things, 'till I come to that Spirit of Truth that gave them forth; for no Man can know the Things of God, ſave the Spirit of God: The Want of which hath been the Cauſe why ſo many have been bewildred about the Things there declared: * Spiritual and Heavenly Things are not diſcernible by carnal Men, they are hid from their Eyes; and 'till the Light ſhine out of Darkneſs, to give them the Knowledge of the Scriptures; they are as a ſealed Book, and they labour in a Labyrinth of Uncertainties. I do ſay again, the Light in all Ages hath made known Doctrines fit to be obeyed, though not the Hiſtories and Narratives of other Men's Actions; which is thy ſilly Objection againſt the Light's Sufficiency. But one Thing I muſt not forget, on which thou didſt not a little depend, as an Inſtance to prove thy Conceit, viz. How could we have known, that Swearing in any Caſe were unlawful, if it had not been written in the 5th of Mattoew, Swear not all, Dial. 1. p. 22. But this I proved to thee, to have been revealed above 400 Years before that was written; but what is the Reaſon thou over-lookeſt that Anſwer? Clinias was taught by it rather to ſuffer a great Fine, than ſwear; the Eſſæans had rather dye than ſwear, which was long before Chriſt came in the Fleſh: Was not the Light then a ſufficient Rule for their practiſing of an Evangelical Doctrine by thy own Argument? But T. H. art thou not greatly aſhamed, that becauſe I ſuppoſed upon thy Principle, the Light and Rule to be two, Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 39, that therefore I contradict my ſelf, and overthrow mine own Opinion, ſaying, If Light be given to underſtand the Rule, then it ſelf is not the Rule, much leſs greater than the Rule; and as if thou hadſt come rightly by this Conſequence, falling into thy cuſtomary Inſults, telling me, This is ſo far from being Truth againſt Fiction, that it diſcovers me to be a raſh, heady, confident and ignorant Man, one that neither cares what he ſays or affirms. Hadſt thou any Regard to God, thy own Conſcience, thy Neighbour, or thy own Reputation, thou wouldſt never commit, much leſs continue to practiſe, theſe horrid Wrongs againſt me. However, as I ſaid before, ſo again: I affirm, that ſuppoſing the Scriptures were the Rule, that which informs me of the Rule, and teaches me how to uſe it, muſt be greater than the Rule, in that it teaches me to know, and do, what the Rule cannot do of it ſelf: I query then, if this Light be not the Rule, how and which Way I come to underſtand and uſe the Scriptures? &c. therefore eminently the Rule, the Terms of my Argument; for the Queſtion lay not upon particular Rules.

* I would aſk him how he knows the Scriptures extant are perfect both as to Number, and Copy, and Tranſactions? Several Books are loſt, that is certain; does the Scripture tell us what they contained? if not, the Rule is imperfect by T. H's Conſequence. The Copies are above Thirty in Number, at leaſt, in which there are Thouſands of different Readings; the Tranſlators greatly differ, and have greatly corrupted. Alſo T. H. is to look to prove the preſent Collection Canonical, If he pleads the Teſtimony of God within, his Cauſe is gone; if Tradition, I aſk how? Is he aſſured the firſt Canon was rightly made? The Council, was either Fallible or Infallible; If the firſt, What Aſſurance has he? If the laſt, it grants Infallibility, ſince the Apoſtles, 360 Years; but begets the Queſtion, How does T. H. know they were in the Right? And if in one Thing, why not in all? But thoſe Councils contradicted; and none ever gave the Catalogue, as now it is; nor can T. H. give a Canon for it. And if he cannot aſſure us that it is exact with the Original, free from Variation, Corruption, Miſ-tranſlation, &c. as it is not, he can never prove it the Rule, as he endeavours, in Oppoſition to the Spirit, for that is always plain and perfect. But more of this in the Chriſtian Quaker; not to leſſen Scripture, but to confound ſuch Cavillers.

C. The Primitive Chriſtians took not their Meaſures from the Light within, but from the Will of God revealed to them, p. 46.

Q. This is Confuſion it ſelf: Are the Light within and the Will of God revealed inconſiſtent Things? Who was it revealed to them (Paul turned from Darkneſs to Light) the Will of God, but the Light? And what was it taught them the Truth, when John ſaid, They had received an Anointing, which abode in them, and taught them all Things; unto which he directed, and with which he left them, John 1. 2, 27. And doth not the ſame Apoſtle tell us, if we walk in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another? &c. Was not the Light then the Rule of their Obedience, and the Way in which they were to walk? For the Accompliſhment of that Prophetick Speech, Iſa. 2. 5. O ye Houſe of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the Light of the Lord!

And is there any Thing plainer, than that the Apoſtle Paul deſcribes the Children of God, to be ſuch as are led by the Spirit of God, Rom. 8. 14. and that he exhorts the Galatians to walk in the Spirit, chap. 5. 16. and the Epheſians to walk circumſpectly, which was according to the Manifeſtations of the Light, chap. 5. 14, 15, 16. Finally, Does not the ſame Apoſtle pronounce Peace on as many as walk according to the Rule of the New Creature, Gal. 6. 16.

I farther told thee, that the Waldenſes, Lutherans, Proteſtants, Calviniſts, &c. made the Teſtimony of God in their Conſciences the chief Ground of the Scriptures, Reaſ. againſt Rail. p. 48.

C. That the Waldenſes, &c. made the Teſtimony of their Conſciences the chief Ground of the Belief of the Scriptures, is confidently ſaid, but more than ever W. Penn is able to prove.

Q. But if W. Penn is able to prove that the Waldenſes, Lutherans, Proteſtants, Calviniſts, yea and Independents, and Anabaptiſts too, have made the Teſtimony of God in their Conſciences, the Ground of their Belief of the Scriptures, wilt not thou then appear to have told a confident Untruth? Let us hear what they ſay.

That the Waldenſes held ſo, thou mayſt inform thy ſelf if thou pleaſeſt, out of their Hiſtory, penn'd by John Paul Perin of Lyons, Lib. 1, Cap. 1, Cap. 11, Cap. 13.

Luther taught, That the Spirit is required to the Underſtanding of the whole Scrip-

Scripture and of every Part thereof. Again, The Scriptures are not to be underſtood but by that very Spirit by which they were wrote, Tom. 3, fol. 169.

John Bradford, a worthy Martyr, thus anſwered the Archbiſhop of York, who catechiſed him how he came to know the Scriptures? We do believe and know, ſaid he, the Scriptures, as Chriſt's Sheep, not becauſe the Church ſaith they are the Scriptures, but becauſe they be ſo, being thereof aſſured by the ſame Spirit that wrote and ſpake them, Book Mart. Vol. 3, p. 298.

William Tindal, another faithful Martyr in Hen. VIII's Time, writes thus: It is impoſſible to underſtand the Scriptures more than a Turk, for him that hath not the Law of God written in his Heart to fulfil it. Again, Without the Spirit it is impoſſible to underſtand them, W. Tind. Work. p. 319 & 80.

B. Jewel againſt the Papiſts hath this Paſſage; Fleſh and Blood is not able to underſtand the Holy Will of God, without ſpecial Revelation, therefore Chriſt gave Thanks unto his Father; and likewiſe opened the Hearts of his Diſciples, that they might underſtand the Scriptures: Without this ſpecial Help and Prompting of God's Holy Spirit, the Scriptures are unto the Reader, be he never ſo wiſe or well learned, as the Viſion of a ſealed Book.

Calvin ſaith, It is neceſſary that the ſame Spirit that ſpake by the Mouth of the Prophets ſhould pierce into our Hearts, to perſwade us of the Truth of what they delivered, Inſtit. lib. 1, cap. 8.

Beza ſaith, That the underſtanding of the Scriptures ſhould be fetcht from the ſame Spirit that dictated them, Bez. in Nov. Teſt. 2 Pet. 1. 19.

Pet. Martyr taught, That it is the Spirit of God that reveals the Truth in the Holy Scriptures, Com. loc. p. 2, cap. 18.

H. Bullinger aſſerted in his 4 Decad. & 8 Serm. dedicated to K. Edw. 6. That Men fetch the Underſtanding of Heavenly Things, and Knowledge of the Holy Ghoſt, from no where elſe than from the ſame Spirit.

What ſayſt thou to this, T. H? Can the Holy Ghoſt be this Diſcoverer and Inſtructor, and yet not eminently the Rule?

But inaſmuch as thou chargeſt me with denying the Scripture's Authority, and then raileſt, p. 61, becauſe I place it upon the Teſtimony of the Light and Spirit of God in the Conſcience; Hear what Dr. John Owen ſays, The only Publick, Authentick and Infallible Interpreter of the Holy Scripture, is He who is the Author of them, from the Breathing of whoſe Spirit it derives all it's VERITY, PERSPICUITY and AUTHORITY, Exerc. 2. 7. 9. What would have become of me, T. H. if I had ſpoke ſo broad as this? This makes the Spirit Interpreter, Judge and Rule of our Knowledge, therefore eminently the Rule.

T. Collier, an ancient and conſiderable Baptiſt, ſhall be my laſt Inſtance here; There is the Law and Teſtimony in the Spirit, ſaith he, as well as in the Letter.

The Law of God is in the Heart, there it is written; and there it teſtifies the Truth of God: And if any Man ſpeak not according to this Rule, it is becauſe there is no Light or Morning riſen in him. See his Works, p. 294. Again,

Others know no other Touch-Stone nor Tryal, no other Light, by which they judge of Truth, than Scripture; thus putting it in the Room of the Spirit, which is Light, and the Greater Light: For they ſay, they cannot know Truth 'till they bring it to the Letter for Tryal; thus making an Idol of the Letter, ſetting it up in the Room of God, Ibid. p. 248.

I could produce a great Cloud of more Witneſſes, both of Fathers and other Authors; But I hope I have diſcharged my ſelf of my Engagement, and made appear, That what I aſſerted was not too hard for me to prove, and therefore thou T. H. wert too confident in ſaying ſo: but thy notorious Ignorance in theſe Things may a little excuſe thee.

But thou chargeſt us with undervaluing the Scriptures, a Fault I abhor to be guilty of; Let me hear in what?

C. You contemptibly call the Scriptures the Letter, whilſt you intitle ſome of your own Pamphlets, The Voice of Wiſdom, A Meſſage, &c. wherein you manifeſtly prefer your own Writings before the Holy Scriptures, p. 55.

Q. This Cavil has been anſwered again and again. I told thee before, and thou haſt cited me thus: 'If at any Time we call the Scriptures Letter, it is not that we 'mean our Books are the Spirit, or that we irreverently ſet them (the Scriptures) 'below our own Writings, but upon a Compariſon only between the Scriptures 'and the Spirit that gave them forth. What Return doſt thou give to this?

C. It is to aggravate, not to excuſe your Error.

Q. Is it an Error to call the Scriptures the Letter in a Compariſon with the Spirit? And an Aggravation of that Error, to prefer the Spirit before the Letter? But is this all thou haſt to ſay to the Matter?

C. Why have you not Reſpect to this Compariſon when you entitle your own Books? But that you would have us to believe that your Writings are more eminently from the Spirit than the Scriptures?

Q. How do we prefer our Writings above the Scriptures, which we prove by the Scriptures? I perceive it is become almoſt impoſſible with thee to make any other Conſtructions, than what rather ſhew thine own Envy than our Senſe. Was there ever the ſame Reaſon for a Compariſon between our Writings and the Spirit? Did we ever ſet them up for the only Rule of Faith and Obedience, and that in Oppoſition to the Spirit, as the New-Covenant-Rule, like thoſe that maintain that Plea? If there were the ſame Occaſion, thou ſhouldſt quickly hear of the ſame Diſtinction and Compariſon. But go on.

C. Hence it is, That when both ſtand in Competition you thus diſtinguiſh them; Letter, yea, dead Letter, as the proper Term for the Scriptures; but The Voice of Wiſdom to your Book: Art thou not aſhamed of this Baſeneſs and Prophaneneſs? Page 56.

Q. Whatever I am, I perceive thou art not aſhamed of making me baſe and prophane too, and printing a moſt horrid Untruth to render me ſo: There is not a Sentence in thy Book gives a clearer Teſtimony of the Injuſtice of thy Carriage than this in Hand. For nothing is more frequent with thee throughout thy Dialogues, than firſt to invent ſomething odious in our Name, and then, as if none ſo Modeſt and Righteous as thy ſelf, cry out, Who would not be aſtoniſhed at this Blaſphemous Abſurdity? p. 30. Art thou not aſhamed of this Prophaneneſs and Baſeneſs? p. 59. O Impious Man, &c. p. 13. But let this determine this Point between us. Produce but one of our Friends, that ever brought his Writings in Competition with the Scriptures, calling the Scriptures the Dead Letter, and his own Books the Voice of Wiſdom, &c. and I will yield thee to have written Truth: If thou can'ſt not, thou haſt but faſtned Baſeneſs, Prophaneneſs and Lying upon thy ſelf; With thee I leave them; for there thou oughteſt to reſt, 'till thou canſt better clear thy ſelf of them.

I charged thee with having wronged Geo. Fox and Rich. Hubberthorn, in making them to ſay, It is dangerous for ignorant People to read the Scriptures; and then fixing the Name of Jeſuit and Romaniſt upon us; producing the Words at large, which thou haſt baſely contracted to thy own Ends, leaving out what might moſt make for their Innocency, and the Evincement of thy own Forgery.

Thou giveſt the Words thus, The Letter killeth, is Dangerous: In my Quotation and in their Book thus, The Letter which killeth, 2 Cor. 3. 6. is Dangerous [for thou (Prieſt) takeſt it here to war withal againſt the Saints, with thy carnal Mind, giving out thy carnal Expoſitions upon it.] All this, T. H. thou haſt unworthily left out, that thou mighteſt the better faſten thy Fiction upon G. F. and R. H. I aſk, Is it not dangerous to read the Scriptures to theſe Ends? And the Miniſters of the Letter are the Miniſters of Death; here thou leaveſt out again [which is to Condemnation, and you take it to make a Trade with it, and with what the Prophets, Chriſt and the Apoſtles ſaid, ſo that ſome have 60 and ſome 100 l. a Year; but Chriſt cry'd Wo unto ſuch Whited Walls] having left out this Part, that concerned the Hireling thou putteſt in again: And here you read with Danger, who ſpeak of them, and ſpeak a Lye, becauſe you ſpeak of your ſelves: Here again thou letteſt drop [and you wreſt the Scriptures to your own Deſtruction] (as the Unlearned and Unſtable do; and is not this Dangerous in them? Then thou bringeſt in this, And to you it is dangerous to read or ſpeak of them; omitting all that here follows by me cited to clear them of thy Charge, viz. [who know not the Life of them, as the Phariſees, who were learned in the Letter, but knew not Chriſt: But I ſay, Bleſſed is he that Readeth and doth underſtand] All this ſo neceſſary to give the Underſtanding of their true Meaning thou haſt deſignedly over-look'd: However, let us hear what Defence thou haſt made for thy ſelf.

C. The Queſtion reſpects the whole Scripture, which you ſay, is Dangerous and Killing; The Miniſters of the Scriptures are Miniſters of Death, and it is Dangerous for them to read them: What a ſhameleſs Man art thou, thus to confeſs what I accuſe you of, and yet condemn me as a Forger? p. 57.

Q. Theſe foul and confident Queſtions thou uſeſt to aſk me, with which thou wouldſt inſinuate thy Innocency, do but aggravate thy Forgery. For, firſt, How do I confeſs what thou accuſeſt us of, when it is neither to be found in my Words, nor theirs upon whom thou chargeſt them, viz. It is dangerous for Ignorant People to read the Scriptures. 2*dly.* I told thee they meant by Miniſters of the Letter, Miniſters of the Law and Death, becauſe of Tranſgreſſion, and thou makeſt it Dangerous for ſuch to read the Scriptures; Whereas G. F. and R. H. ſaid, It was Dangerous for Hirelings and Whited Walls to uſe them againſt the Saints with their carnal Expoſitions, oppoſing them, Phariſee-like, to the Life of them, wreſting them to their own Deſtruction. It is Dangerous for ſuch to read them to ſuch Uſes and Purpoſes, not in any Senſe, as thou untruly ſayſt; Of this thou takeſt no Notice. So that here the Reader may plainly ſee thy firſt Forgery; ſince it was not the Man of no Letters, but the Men of Letters, ſuch as the Scribes and Phariſees, who uſed them againſt the right Heirs of them, of whom G. F. and R. H. ſpoke. And thy ſecond is not leſs viſible, in that thou haſt impoſed upon the Reader my Confeſſion of thy Accuſation, who never confeſſed any ſuch Thing. Theſe are ſome of thy wonted Tricks, ever and anon employ'd to cover thy Nakedneſs with, and to get off unſuſpected, from encountering the Difficulty of our Charge, Proof or Argument. I appeal to God's Witneſs in my Reader's Conſcience, to right us againſt the many Injurious Practices againſt us; And ſhall conclude with this Acknowledgment and Argument concerning the Scriptures.

We do receive and believe the Scriptures given forth by Holy Men of God, as they were moved of the Holy Ghoſt, and that they are profitable for Doctrine, for Reproof, and for Inſtruction in Righteouſneſs; yet ſince they are Writings relating to the Things of God, no Man can underſtand them, or have an aſſured Teſtimony of them, but by the Spirit of God, 1 Cor. 2. which alone reveals the deep Things of God; It was not the Scripture, but the Father that revealed Chriſt to Peter, Mat. 16. 5.

Farther, The New Covenant Times are Times of Fulfilling the Scriptures, by the Pouring out of the Spirit, therefore People's Regard ſhould be to the inward Drawings and Leadings of the Holy Spirit. The Law outward was a Rule to the Jew, though not eminently unto them (for the Lord gave them alſo of his good Spirit; and what for, if not to rule them?) But the Law of the Spirit of Life promiſed to be revealed within, under the New and Everlaſting Covenant, was certainly to be the Rule under that Covenant, being a Time for the more immediate Flowings forth of Spirit and Life. We do not ſay that every one hath hereunto attained: But we affirm, that God hath given a Meaſure of his Spirit unto Men and Women, that they might receive the precious Promiſes, unto which we direct them for that End. I know that T. Hicks, according to his wonted Baſeneſs, p. 49. interprets our Saying, that we deny the Scriptures to be the Rule of Faith and Practice in Honour to the Divine Light, to be our denying and rejecting the revealed Will of God, as if Men muſt hate their Parents, becauſe they are to love Chriſt firſt, Mat. 10. This were to ſay, that Paul's Regard to the Law of the Spirit of Life in him, as his Rule, was not to fulfil, but to deny and reject the Law without: If this Conſequence be falſe againſt Paul, how can T. H's Conſequence be good againſt us? Is it to reject and deny the Scriptures, to have the good Things they declare of brought in by the Eternal Spirit? And ſince the Scriptures cannot fulfil themſelves in us, but the Spirit, is not the Spirit the Rule and Guide to our Divine Knowledge and Enjoyments. But from our aſſerting the Spirit to be the Rule, T. H infers, That we deny to live according to the Scriptures, a Miſtake he fell into before, which I offer'd to help him out of in my Anſwer; for to own the Scriptures to be the Rule, and to live according to the Scriptures, are not one and the ſame Thing: For the Gentiles did the Things contained in the outward Law, and yet had not the outward Law for a Rule, Rom. 2. 14.

Nor is it to be doubted, but that Paul and the primitive Chriſtians lived up to the outward Law (that is, the inward Law outwardly declared) by the Law of the Spirit of Life, which was the Rule of their Obedience: Yet can any infer, that the outward Law, and not the inward, was the Rule of their ſo living? And I muſt tell thee, Thomas Hicks, that thy exalting of the Scriptures, is but an Endeavour to throw down the Spirit; which Sacrifice, be it known unto thee, the Lord of Heaven loaths. And I will ſay to thee, as G. F. and R. H. ſaid to the Prieſt, They are Dangerous to be read and uſed for thoſe Evil Purpoſes thou employeſt them upon: But as they ſaid, (though that alſo thou didſt overlook) ſo ſay I, Bleſſed is he that doth read, and underſtand them.

But what Need is there farther of my maintaining this Point, concerning The Light being the Rule in all Ages; ſince thou haſt made ſuch ample Confeſſion, That the Godly in all Ages, before Chriſt in the Fleſh, were turned from the Darkneſs to the Light, pag. 64. This Light muſt needs be within, becauſe the Darkneſs is there: And it muſt needs be ſufficient, becauſe thou ſayſt it was that which Paul was ſent to turn People to, p. 63, 64. And what could this Light be for, if not to Guide, Rule, and Lead them in the Ways of Godlineſs, and conſequently the Rule of the Godly in all Ages? Therefore the more General Rule, becauſe the Scripture was not in all Ages; and ſufficient, becauſe it was of God appointed for the Godly Man's Way; unleſs thou wilt ſuppoſe, that they were turned to an Inſufficient Light.

§. VI. Of Commands and Ordinances, particularly Baptiſm and the Supper.

Sect. VI.

Quaker. I Have ſufficiently ſhewn, under the Section of Forgeries, the horrid Abuſe thou haſt committed in thy laſt Book againſt E. Burroughs, concerning Commands and Ordinances; I ſhall here farther detect thy Miſcarriage.

The Matter charged upon E. B. I ſhall ſet down with his Name before it.

E. B. You are not yet Dead with Chriſt, who are yet ſubject to Ordinances.

T. H. The Spirit of God in the Scriptures aſſures us, that they that keep the Commandments of God, are the Children of God, 1 John 2. 3, 4. Yet this Wicked Man, E. B. ſaith, That they who are ſubject to Ordinances, are not Dead with Chriſt. See Coloſſ. 2. 19, 21.

Q. E. B. pleads only againſt ſuch Performances under the Name of Ordinances, as were but Shadowy, Elementary and Periſhing Things, appointed for a Seaſon, and to paſs off. Thus thou thy ſelf haſt quoted me, Dial. 3. p. 59. What ſayſt thou to this?

C. If thus E. B. did plead, Why doſt thou ſay I belyed him? ibid. p. 59.

Q. Becauſe in thy former Dialogue thou madeſt him as well deny to continue Obedience to ſuch Eternal Precepts of Righteouſneſs, as thou thy ſelf confeſſeſt the Light Within dictates, as to Shadowy, Elementary, and Periſhing Things. For about his ſaying, That was not a Command to him, which was a Command to another, thou didſt moſt unjuſtly infer, That the Law which forbids Adultery, Murder, Theft, and bearing Falſe Witneſs, is no Law to us; breaking forth upon us with Impiouſly Horrid, Ungodly, Irreverent, Patronizers of Blaſphemy, Countenancers of Novices, Prophane Scribler, with Abundance more: Whereas pag. 47. of his Works, whence the Paſſage was taken, proves it to have been writ about extraordinary and particular Caſes; as, Thy Running to Preach, becauſe Peter Preacht; or, Plunging People in the Thames, or elſewhere, becauſe John Baptized many in Jordan. What ſayſt thou to this?

C. Thou haſt a ſtrange Confidence! If thou hadſt examin'd the Place my Quotation refers to, thou muſt needs know I have not bely'd you: If thou haſt not, how dareſt thou thus charge me? Pag. 58.

Q. My Confidence is grounded upon Examination: And this Ranting Anſwer will not clear thee. And the greateſt Kindneſs that can be ſhown thee, is, to believe, thou took'ſt the Quotation firſt upon Truſt. But in this Dialogue thou art left without Excuſe: For had E. B. intended General Commands, it would not have coſt thee much more Trouble to prove it, than to ſay it; doubtleſs it would have been a Pleaſure to thee. But as a Man Guilty, thou art wilfully Silent about thoſe Horrid Conſtructions made upon his Words, as the Genuine Senſe of the Place, and vainly thinkeſt to ſhift it off, with accuſing me of ſtrange Confidence: But I return thee thy own Words, If thou, T. H. haſt examined the Place thy Quotation refers to, thou muſt needs know, that thou haſt belyed us; if thou haſt not, how dareſt thou thus (continue to) charge us? But what ſayſt thou concerning Shadowy Ordinances?

C. Foraſmuch as thou confeſſeſt, that E. B. did plead againſt ſuch Ordinances as were but Shadows, appointed only for a Seaſon, and to paſs off, that ſuch (Ordinances) are no Commands to us, how wilt thou prove this?

Q. This is to grant, that thou art for continuing Shadows under a Goſpel-Diſpenſation: My Reaſon againſt it is this: Shadows are Members of the Ceremonial Law, the Subſtance of which is the Goſpel: The bringing in of the Goſpel is the Ending of them; becauſe Shadows give Way to, and End in their Subſtance. But let me ſee how thou bring'ſt me in to anſwer thy Queſtion: "Let it be obſerved, that there is not the leaſt Mention in all the Epiſtles of John, of any of "thoſe Ordinances, that ſtood in Viſible and Corrupt Elements, ſo that to bring in "Things of a Shadowy and Temporary Nature, among the Commands of Chriſt, is to "abuſe the Apoſtle. What's thy Return to this?

C. Let it be obſerved what an arrogant, abuſive, prophane, and impertinent Man, this W. P. is. Suppoſe none of the poſitive Inſtitutions of Chriſt be expreſly mentioned in his Epiſtles; Did he therefore deny them? Pag. 60.

Q. To paſs over thy hard Names, thou doſt ſuggeſt to the Reader, as if this were my whole Strength, in Anſwer to thy Firſt Query, viz. How wilt thou prove Shadowy Ordinances to be no Commands to us? Whereas it was never given by me to any ſuch Queſtion; nor indeed would it have been Proper to do ſo: But ſince thou hadſt ſo little Senſe, as to quote John's Words, viz. They that Love God keep his Commandments, in Order to prove the Continuance of Shadowy Ordinances, I had ſo much Senſe in me, as to make Uſe of thy own Citation againſt thee, where no ſuch Ordinances are mentioned, upon which thou fooliſhly querieſt, Did he therefore deny them? Which was not the Queſtion: But whether that Place proves them. But this I am bold to infer, That it was not John's Meſſage to recommend and perpetuate them, as thou doſt: And it is ſtrange to me, that they ſhould be of ſuch Weight in the Chriſtian Religion, and not One Apoſtle mention them in all their Epiſtles, ſave Paul once, in denying Baptiſm a Share in his Commiſſion; and another Time in Regulating the Corinthians about their Diſorderly Uſe of the Type. If Bodily Exerciſe profits little in Religion, much leſs Shadows. If Men run into External Performances, without the Leadings and Preparings of the Spirit, ſuch Duties cannot be acceptable to God; running into External Imitations, without Internal Qualifications, gives but to boaſt in another Man's Line; And ſuch Oblations are ſo far from being accepted, that they are abominated. To this let us hear what T. Collier will ſay, a Man of greater Eminency and Antiquity than T. Hicks in the Baptiſt's Way; I ſee, ſaith he, that External Acting, according to a Rule without, is nothing, if not flowing from a Principle of Love and Life within, Works, p. 247. I perceive T. H. thou art not of that Mind, ſo far from it, as to account it Error: But let us hear what elſe thou haſt to ſay, in Defence of thy formal, unwarranted Practice.

C. We are certain, that our Lord did walk in the Obſervance of Poſitive Inſtitutions; and he that abideth in Chriſt, ought to walk as he walked, 1 John 2. 6. p. 61.

Q. What makes thee forge, pervert, lye, ſlander, and abuſe us then? If thou wouldſt be a Chriſtian, thou ſhouldſt walk as he walked: He was Loving, thou art Envious; He Meek, thou Paſſionate; He Long-Suffering, thou froward; He was Good to his Enemies, thou baſe to thy Neighbours. Surely thou haſt forgot, that if thou walkeſt as he walked, thou muſt have to do with that dangerous Doctrine of Perfection, as thou elſewhere reputeſt it. But at thy Rate of quoting this Scripture, and following of Chriſt, thou may'ſt as well bring in Circumciſion and the Paſſover, as Baptiſm and the Supper. Chriſt told his Diſciples, The Spirit ſhould lead them into all Truth, after his Aſcenſion; and his Beloved Diſciple John referred the Churches to the Anointing.

C. You tell us theſe Ordinances were uſed as Figures and Shadows, no longer to endure, than till the Subſtance comes, viz. The Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt. The Reaſon can be no other than the vain Conceit of a deluded Mind; for they are no Figures of the Baptiſm of the Spirit; therefore this can be no Reaſon for the aboliſhing of them: Chriſt commands his Apoſtles to Teach and Baptize, promiſing to be with them to the End of the World.

Q. Who ever ſaid, that Breaking of Bread was a Figure of the Spirit's Baptiſm? It's a meer Fiction of thy making, as Page 107. of Reaſon againſt Railing will ſhew. But if Water-Baptiſm, and Breaking of Bread are no Figures nor Shadows, they muſt be Subſtances; and what Difference then there is between thee and Popery in this Point, let the Reader judge. And for Chriſt's bidding his Diſciples, Go, Teach, Baptizing, Mat. 28. I told thee, " That no Water was mentioned; and that Luke, " in the Firſt of the Acts, ſays, before the Commiſſion mentioned by Matthew could " be given, at leaſt executed, John Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt, not many Days hence. And then comes the Commiſſion " in Force, Go, Teach, Baptizing; How? With the Holy Ghoſt, turning People " from Darkneſs to Light, from the Power of Satan, unto God.

C. If the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt do put this Commiſſion in Force, as thou ſay'ſt then the Obligation to thoſe Duties ſignified in the Commiſſion, cannot be taken off: If ſo, thy Argument falls.

Q. A poor Shuffle indeed! Does my Argument fall, becauſe thou beggeſt the Queſtion? Which is, Whether their Baptiſm be with Water or the Holy Ghoſt?

C. If Baptiſm of Water be not intended, then none; Not the Baptiſm of Afflictions; for the Apoſtles were not to Perſecute: Not the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt; for that was a Promiſe, not a Commiſſion, p. 63.

Q. Thou doſt but trifle with us ſtill. Though to be Baptized was a Promiſe, yet to Baptize was a Commiſſion. To be Baptized not many Days hence, was the Promiſe of Chriſt; but Go and Baptize all Nations, which followeth, was a Commiſſion; and that it was with no other Baptiſm, Chriſt's Diſtinction ſufficiently proves, viz. John indeed Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence; ſtay till then, and Go, and Teach, Baptizing all Nations, &c.

C. To Baptize with the Holy Ghoſt, was none of their Duty, it being properly Chriſt's Work, p. 63.

Q. It was both their Work and Duty, witneſs that Simon Magus would have bought that Gift of Peter: And that Paul Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 19. Did he not therein do his Duty?

C. Is it proper to ſay, I Baptize you with the Spirit into the Name of the Spirit?

Q. Yes, if thou haſt the Spirit; unleſs thou wouldſt make a Counterfeit Chriſtian of him, whom thou, without the Spirit, Baptizeſt into the Name of the Spirit. Wouldſt thou have a Man Baptized into the Name, and not into the Nature of the Spirit? Can a Man Baptize into Spirit and into Life, without Spirit and Life? God did Convert, Reconcile, Baptize, Beget, and Build up Thouſands to himſelf by them, unto whom the Word of Reconciliation was committed, and who were Embaſſadors in Chriſt's Stead.

Now, as for Water-Baptiſm, what Paul ſays of himſelf, I may ſay of his Commiſſion, It was not behind any of the Reſt; yet he denies Water-Baptiſm to be any Part of it, and it is as plainly rejected of him, in Point of Inſtitution, as any Thing in Scripture. So that either Water-Baptiſm is none of Chriſt's Inſtitutions; or elſe Paul had no Commiſſion to perform Chriſt's Inſtitutions, which were ſtrange. T. Collier determines this, The Baptiſm of Chriſt is the Baptiſm of the Spirit.

But if any of you can ſhew a larger Commiſſion than Paul had, let him produce it; if not, I muſt conclude, They Run, and are not Sent.

§. VII. Of the Doctrine of JUSTIFICATION.

Sect. VII.

I Perceive by what thou haſt writ of Juſtification, thou intendeſt to end at the Rate thou haſt manag'd the Controverſie all along; I mean with the ſame Shuffles and Injuſtice. I will ſet down thy Charge, the Anſwer thou makeſt me give, and thy Reply.

C. Thou haſt boldly affirm'd, That Juſtification by that Righteouſneſs Chriſt fulfilled for us, wholly without us, is a Doctrine of Devils, Apol. pag. 148. What ſayſt thou to this?

Q. This Apology cited was written againſt a malicious Prieſt in Ireland, R. againſt R. p. 68. If thy Poſition cannot be proved, it will be no Excuſe to ſay, It was given 1674. given to a Malicious Prieſt; yea, thy Folly and Raſhneſs is the more aggravated, &c. pag. 96.

Sect. VII. Q. As if I had given that Anſwer, not to inform Perſons againſt whom the Book was writ, and the Occaſion of the Paſſage, but (as one unable to ſay any Thing in my Defence) to extenuate the Fact, and excuſe my writing it. I perceive, rather than want Occaſions to abuſe me, thou wilt make them. But what ſayſt thou concerning Juſtification?

C. Thou ſuppoſeſt the Doctrine of Juſtification by that Righteouſneſs which Chriſt fulfilled wholly without us, to be a Sin-pleaſing and dangerous Notion: What Reaſon haſt thou ſo to eſteem it? Pag. 67.

Q. I do ſo; taking my Words in my Senſe, and my Reaſons are, Firſt, Becauſe wholly without us, is an Unſcriptural Phraſe. Secondly, It takes away the Neceſſity of all Inward Work. Thirdly, No Man is juſtified without Faith. No Man hath Faith without Sanctification and Works; therefore the Works of Righteouſneſs, by the Spirit, are neceſſary to compleat Juſtification.

Q. Whether a ſincere Faith is neceſſary to our Juſtification, is one Thing: But whether ſuch a Faith be our ſole Righteouſneſs, by which we are Juſtified, is another, pag. 67.

Q. And whether T. H. be not an idle Shifter is another thing. Was it the Queſtion, Whether our Faith were the ſole Righteouſneſs to Juſtification; or whether Juſtification were by a Righteouſneſs wholly without us and our Faith too? If a Sincere Faith be neceſſary; then becauſe Faith is not Faith without Works, Juſtification is not wrought wholly without. I told thee before, that this Doctrine of thine, Speaks Peace to the Wicked, whilſt Wicked. But there is no Peace to the Wicked, ſaith my God.

C. It is horribly Wicked to conclude, that what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered without us, is to ſpeak Peace to the Wicked whilſt ſuch.

Q. Right; but who is the Man? Not W. P. for oppoſing a Doctrine which leaves Men as Wicked as it found them; yea, encourages them in it. I appeal to the ſober Reader, if it be all one, to ſay, That Juſtification by the Righteouſneſs of Chriſt wholly without, which leaves the Conſcience as polluted as ever, is to ſpeak Peace to the Wicked, whilſt Wicked; and to affirm, That what Chriſt hath done and ſuffered without us, is to ſpeak Peace to the Wicked, whilſt Wicked. Thy indirect Conſequences T. H. are too obvious and numerous to deceive any ordinary Reader. But what ſayſt thou to my Diſtinction about Juſtification? “Chriſt's Work was Twofold; Firſt, To Remit, Forgive, or Juſtifie from the Imputation of Sins paſt, ſuch as truly Repent and Believe. Secondly, By his Power and Spirit working in the Hearts of ſuch, to deſtroy and remove the very Nature of Sin, to make an End of it, to finiſh Tranſgreſſion preſent and to come: The Firſt removes the Guilt, the Second, the Cauſe of it: Methinks this ſhould a little allay thy Clamours.

C. This Diſtinction of the Work of Chriſt, proves not what thou haſt aſſerted, viz. That Juſtification is not by Imputation of another's Righteouſneſs; much leſs that ſuch a Juſtification is a Doctrine of Devils, pag. 72.

Q. This ſhews thee weary of the Work, or elſe thou wouldſt not ſo ſoon after my Diſtinction, continue in thy Miſ-Conſtruction of my Words, for the clearing of which, my Diſtinction was made: I grant, that ſuch as Repent and Believe, receive Remiſſion, or a Juſtifying from former Sins, through the Righteouſneſs of God declared in, and by Jeſus Chriſt. But is this Compleat Juſtification? Is this a making Inwardly Juſt, through a Purging out of Iniquity, and Mortifying of Corruption, and bringing in Chriſt's Everlaſting Righteouſneſs? If not, then to exclude this, and yet conclude Men compleatly Juſtified, by what Chriſt hath done wholly without, is a Doctrine of Devils; for it leaves Men in an impure State, and allows the Devil's Kingdom to continue in being. In ſhort, it is as much to ſay, that W. Penn calls what Chriſt hath done for Men without, a Doctrine of Devils, becauſe W. P. aſſerts that to be a Doctrine of Devils, which maketh all that is neceſſary for Man's compleat Juſtification before God, to have been wrought by Chriſt wholly without, thereby excluding the Neceſſity of the Juſt-Working, or Juſt-Making Power of Chriſt from Man to that Work. Well, but I alſo told thee, of the Neceſſity of Faith and Repentance, even to the Firſt Part of Juſtification; conſequently, that Men cannot be juſtified in any Senſe, without Regard had to an Inward Work, viz: Of Sanctification, without which there can be no True Believing.

C. Though this be more cloſe to the Point than any Thing thou haſt ſpoken, yet it is not ſo cloſe as to prove thy Poſition : For if Repentance be but a Condition, then it is not the Sole Righteouſneſs for which we are juſtified, pag. 73.

Q. Produce me but one Paſſage of ours that ever ſpoke that Language, and I will yet ſay thou haſt not wronged us. Beſides, this Anſwer is wide from thy Purpoſe, though it comes very cloſe to mine : For from contending for Juſtification by a Righteouſneſs wholly without (the Queſtion) thou art come now to contend againſt a Juſtification by a Righteouſneſs wholly within, which was not the Queſtion.

C. But thou ſayſt Abraham's Perſonal Obedience was the Ground of his being accounted Righteous : If ſo, Then we are not made Juſt by a Righteouſneſs perform'd without us, but by a Righteouſneſs perform'd by our ſelves. But then, what wilt thou ſay to this Text ; If Abraham were Juſtified by Works, he hath whereof to Glory, but not before God ? Rom. 4. 2. p. 77, 78.

Q. The Apoſtle James bears me out in what I ſaid ; for if Abraham were Juſtified by Works, as ſaid James, then his Obedience to God's Spirit, which makes up thoſe Works, gave him Acceptance in God's Sight : And let T. H. ſay, if he dare, that Abraham was not Juſtified in God's Sight, in his reſigning up Iſaac for a Sacrifice ; and if he were, how do I err ?

But that I might not be thought to oppoſe one Apoſtle to another, know, Reader, that the Apoſtle James ſpeaks of ſuch Works, as were not performed in Abraham's own Strength, but through Faith, and his Obedience to God's Spirit ; and therefore Evangelical. And the Juſtification they lead to, was a Daily Acceptance with God. The Works, the Apoſtle Paul ſpeaks of, were meerly Abraham's in his own Power (as thoſe of the Jews from the Law) therefore not Juſtifying before God in any Senſe ; leaſt of all could they merit Remiſſion, or purchaſe Abraham thoſe Great Bleſſings and peculiar Favours that it pleaſed Almighty God to beſtow upon him above others. Works and Juſtification, thus diſtinguiſh'd and allow'd, prevent Men's ſetting one in Oppoſition to the other ; and here Paul may come in without Contradiction to James : If Abraham were juſtified by Works, he hath whereof to Glory, but not before God. The whole Chapter concerns a Juſtifying by the Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt, as the following Verſes evidence : Even as David alſo deſcribeth the Bleſſedneſs of the Man unto whom God imputeth Righteouſneſs without Works, ſaying, Bleſſed are they whoſe Unrighteouſneſs is forgiven, and whoſe Sins are covered. Bleſſed is the Man to whom the Lord will not impute Sin, Rom. 4. 6, 7, 8. So that the Righteouſneſs not obtainable by the Works of the Law, Ver. 16. and the Juſtification (which Abraham's own Works could not procure) which is obtain'd by Faith in the Love of God, is here explain'd to be, the Forgiving of Iniquity, and the Covering of Sin. But this is far from maintaining the Compleatneſs of Juſtification from a Righteouſneſs wholly without.

Sect. VIII.

§. VIII. Of Perſonal Reflections. T. H's Scurrilous Language. The Concluſion.

THOU accuſeſt me with defending and juſtifying E. B. in Curſing, Railing and Lying, and that in the Name of the Lord, Dial. 3. p. 10, 82, 83, where it is to be obſerved, that thou doſt not only eſteem it ſo thy ſelf, but ſuppoſeſt me both to confeſs it to be ſuch, and that notwithſtanding I warrant it from the Lord. Theſe are thy black and odious Inſinuations and Concluſions, as may at large be ſeen in the Pages before-mentioned; as if to deny them to be ſuch, were to affirm them ſuch; for I know not by what other Figure I allow them ſuch. But becauſe this cannot appear leſs than an abſurd and incredible Lye, to all that have their Senſes, I ſhall the leſs heed it; But what Proof doſt thou bring that E. B. curſes, lyes and rails? To call what he ſays by ſuch hard Names, concludes no ſuch Thing. All I ſee is, that thou run'ſt to the Words by him utter'd, as if a Repetition were a Proof: Poor Man! This it is to be upon the Fret, Proud and Paſſionate: E. B. muſt curſe, lye and rail, becauſe thou ſayſt ſo. Is not this to act the Dictator with a witneſs? The Truth is, I ſcarce think there ever was a fouler. But thou ſtomach'ſt my ſaying that the Scripture allows thoſe Names, and retort'ſt, it ſeems you can make the Scripture your Rule for Lying, Curſing and Railing But this is as irreverently ſaid of the Scripture as abuſively of us, and abſurdly in it ſelf; can any Man make them his Rule for that which is impious? I had thought that at what Time any act wickedly, they ceaſe to make them their Rule. Shall I make one of thy Concluſions now againſt thee? T. Hicks ſays, the Scripture may be a Rule for Lying, Curſing and Railing. But is every Example a Rule? a Rule always relates to Duty; a Preſident or Example not. Is it my Duty to call bad Men by all the Names mentioned in Scripture, becauſe there are ſuch Examples? What then ſhould I call Thee, that art as bad a Man, every Jot, as the worſt of them? This ſhews that the Scripture cannot be a Rule in an hundred ſuch Caſes, but the particular Meaſure of Wiſdom from God, that is always preſent, and gives to underſtand and apply Things ſuitably, and not upon meer Imitation, where thy Religion, ſuch as it is, ſtands. I ſay, that our juſtifying our Practice by the Example of Scripture, does not conclude it our Rule, or any Man's whatſoever, in ſo citing it: And therefore thy thread-bare Anſwer, it ſeems you are forc'd to make Scripture your Rule to prove this or that, is out of Doors and to be deſpiſed, as plauſible as it looks: Again, if the Scriptures be our Rule in any particular Caſes (and I think we live up to it more than thou doſt, with thy three impious Dialogues) yet this concludes not the Matter in Queſtion for thee; ſince it proves not the Scripture to be eminently the Rule, or the moſt eminent or general Rule, &c. But T. H. why has E. B. tranſgreſs'd more than either Prophets or Apoſtles, yea than Chriſt himſelf, when he (to ſuch carnal Men as thy ſelf) ſeemed ſo unkind and harſh in his Anſwer and Rebuke of Peter's Love and Care of him, as to ſay, Get thee behind me Satan? The Prieſt that E. B. gave thoſe Names (no one of which was harder than Satan) was never half ſo kind to him, as Peter was to Chriſt; Nay, they were entrapping Queſtions; ſuch as they uſed to aſſault Chriſt with, when they ſought Occaſion againſt him, whom he called Children of the Devil. And we know that ſome of thy Race T. H. in the former Times when Power was in your Hands, diligently ſought Matter againſt us: G. Fox was about the ſame Time indicted for Blaſphemy, and great endeavours us'd in ſome of the old Phariſaical Stock, thy Brethren, to take away his Life, E. B. knew whom and what he anſwer'd: And I do ſay, that by thy Argument about the Scriptures being the Rule, without farther Regard, thou oughteſt to ſtop thy Mouth, unleſs thou canſt prove that E. B. had not the ſame Warrant the holy Men of old had, to name thy Predeceſſors by; to do which, thou muſt come to the diſcerning of Spirits: And by what wilt thou perform that Enquiry and Judgment? How canſt thou tell, whether a Man uſing Chriſt's Words to Peter, to a loving Diſſwader of him from Sufferings, that only intends his Good, is well or ill done? The Scripture is no Rule for our diſcerning aright this Caſe; nor is it his Duty, in caſe he be in the right, becauſe Chriſt's Words are there recorded, unleſs he be thereto prompted, of the ſame Power: Yet if he ſay ſo, and be reproved by any; 'tis and muſt be granted that there is an Example which ſhuts the Mouths, or ſhould do, of all who reſpect the Scripture; which is our Caſe with thee. Well, but Chriſt had no Provocation by Peter's Words, but the Spirit that lurkt in them, which ſavour'd not the Work of God then doing; To reliſh the like Caſe aright there muſt be the ſame Spirit; which T. H. rejecting for the Rule of right Judgment, to be ſure he can be no right Judge of E. B. But upon his own Opinion ought to be ſilent from farther Clamour againſt him, and repent of his ſcurrilous reproachful Language, with which he has ſo often run over his Grave.

But thou chargeſt p. 86. Nicholas Lucas with ſaying, That if the Bible were burnt, as good an one might be writ, and though he denies it, yet thou telleſt us, it is never the leſs a Lye for that; and that he knows his Accuſers. But ſuppoſe it were true, had it not more become an Anabaptiſt, and a Preacher too, (eſpecially, when one of the Scriptures in thy Title Page is, A Man that is an Heretick, after the Firſt and Second Admonition reject, who never dealt ſo with either him or us, that thou haſt ſo publickly writ againſt as ſuch) firſt to have dealt with N. L. about it; and granting he had been ſo obſtinate in a wicked Saying, as thou Dialogueſt him to be, had this been a ſufficient Ground for thee to charge it upon the Perſons and Principles of the People called Quakers? But now thou haſt given the World a Saying to meaſure us by, that is, Firſt, of ſeveral Years ſtanding, and but lately raked up, and might have been either at firſt miſ-apprehended, or ſome Word forgotten or miſ-placed. Secondly, That N. L. denies that he ever ſpake it, by a ſerious Certificate in G. W.'s Append. confirm'd by H. Stout, appeal'd to by thy Anabaptiſt Informers, which thou haſt not ſo much as attempted to invalidate. Thirdly, That he abhors the Matter contained in the Story, and that without all mental Reſerves. And Fourthly, That it's charged upon, and made to be the Meaſure of Us and our Principles and Motions, thereby making us to blaſpheme God's Spirit, as well as reprobate Scripture, (and that with no ſmall Aggravation) who are innocent, by never ſpeaking the Words, by never countenancing ſuch Words, and by not holding the Matter directly or indirectly contained in them; and we do utterly renounce and abhor both the one and the other. Well, T. Hicks! God will plead our Cauſe againſt the Malignity of thy Slanderous Spirit: No Juſtice, no Diſcretion could ever have led thee to this monſtrous pitch of Abuſe: Thou ſheweſt how glad thou art to bedirt us, by making other Folks Lyes thy Charges, and then inſiſting on them with as much Confidence, as if thou wert infallibly aſſured of every jot. But we have ſome Cauſe to ſuſpect thee more than ever; thy Tale wears ſo many Dreſſes: One while it is, Thou mayſt burn thy Bible, and write as good an one thy ſelf, Contin p. 5. Another while, We may burn our Bible, and make as good an one our ſelves, Dial. 3. p. 3. And laſt of all, it is to go thus, If the Bible were burnt, as good an one might be writ, ibid. p. 86. Now, T. H. anſwer; thou that pretendeſt to ſuch Punctuality, which of theſe are we to take? The firſt is unlikely, becauſe what ever we think we could do, to be ſure thou canſt not think that a Quaker ſhould have ſo good an Opinion of an Anabaptiſt Woman, as that ſhe could write another Bible as good as this, that we are ſure underſtands not this. If we muſt take thee in thy Second Account, then the Woman is out in her firſt Story: If in the laſt Relation of this Fiction, then it concerns the Quakers no more than the Anabaptiſts. For ſuppoſe the World were under one Emperor, and he ſo impious as to enjoyn the burning of all the Bibles, and all were burnt; I hope they are not ſo irreligious as to limit God's Power, who is Almighty, that he could not furniſh us with one as good as this, eſpecially, ſince Chriſtians would elſe, as you muſt hold, be without a Rule: for I would have thee take Notice T. H. that thou haſt ſo materially varied in thy Charge, that now it is not, whether, if the Bible were burnt, any Man could make as good an one; but whether, if it were by ſuch Impiety burnt, as good an one might not be writ, which Words are general. Here, T. H. to give the——his due, thou haſt helpt thy Friend Quaker, by bringing him in ſaying what T. H. unleſs he would queſtion God's Omnipotency, dare not deny.

But to conclude, either theſe Miſtakes proceed from the firſt Authors, or from T. H. If from the firſt Authors, why ſhould they be credited at all, who ſhow ſuch Uncertainty? if from T. Hicks; what Reaſon has he to be ſo infallibly ſure of their Memories, who is not ſure of his own Books, much leſs of his own Memory, being found in ſuch manifeſt Variations? But ſince every juſt Judge accounts that Accuſer and Witneſs of little Credit, that are found diverſe and inconſiſtent in their Stories; I hope my ſober Reader, who is made judge betwixt us, will in Juſtice caſhier T. Hicks from all Credit with him in theſe Attempts. But as againſt N. L. ſo againſt S. Eccles, T. H. has publiſht a foul Slander, viz. That he ſhould ſay, the Scriptures are a Lye. This G.W. Append. p. 12. reflected upon thee, as an abuſive and falſe Charge; To which I cannot find that thou ſayſt any more than this, that one of thy Witneſſes againſt N. L. can teſtifie, that S. E. ſaid, he uſed Scripture, only to ſatisfie him, Dial. 3. p. 86. Doubtleſs that Witneſs has long Ears, thou hang'ſt ſo faſt by them. But he can witneſs it. But why does he not? Is that Put off like to confirm the Charge? But granting thy Witneſs remembers better againſt S. E. than N. L. Does E. S's Saying, that he us'd Scripture to ſatisfie his Opponent, prove, that he ſaid, the Scriptures were a Lye? Do Men uſe to prove Truths by Lyes? Doth not this make S. E. imply the Lye to his own Principles, whilſt he quoted Scripture to prove real Truths; What ſayſt thou T. H. Is this to evince the Truth of thy Objections and Charges againſt the Quakers, and ſecure thy Credit with thy own and other People, that carries with it what merits the Deteſtation and Rebuke of every honeſt Mind?

But that thou mayſt go out with the ſame braving Rant thou cameſt in with, and the like Honeſty, thou telleſt thy Reader, that W. P. is guilty of wilful Lying, in ſaying, that thou diſingenuouſly ſlankedſt from a publick Meeting, and evadedſt the offer made thee by G. W. to that Purpoſe: It is not unlikely but thou takeſt thy old Way of proving, which is in the End to detect thy ſelf of that thou chargeſt me with the Guilt of. Firſt thou ſayſt, that long before my Book was out, thou didſt deſire to meet with me, and I refuſed. But doth this prove me guilty of willful Lying, in charging thee with evading the offer made for a publick Diſputation? Are the Terms of a Meeting for a publick Diſputation in thy Anſwer? If not, How does thy Anſwer reach the Queſtion? Well, But I refus'd; to do what? To meet a Man in private that had twice printed me a Knave, a Fool, an Heretick, a Blaſphemer, and I know not how much more, either in thoſe Terms or in Circumlocution, to the World: No ſuch Matter, T. H. I never intend to releaſe thee from the Burden and Shame of ſo many publick aud manifeſt Villanies as thou haſt committed againſt me, a Stranger to thee in all reſpects, and my Friends in general, that, it may be, never heard of ſuch a Man. Beſides, let me tell thee, I look upon thee to be ſo baſe a Perſon, that as I ſhall always deſire to have nothing to do with thee (for that Cauſe, and not thy Abilities) ſo I never intend to truſt my ſelf in ſuch private Manner with any Man, that is detected of ſuch notorious Perverſion, Lying and Forgery; there being no Security to any one in common converſing with thee; ſave that thou deſerveſt no Credit againſt any Man, who haſt ſo publickly forfeited all Credit in thy numerous Fictions againſt us. But to prove thou haſt not evaded the publick Meeting, thou telleſt thy Reader, that thou didſt ſend ſix Queſtions to G. W. to debate them upon Notice in a convenient Time and Place; that he refus'd; therefore G. W. did both ſhuffle and lye; which is the great Shuffle of thy Third. Dial. in little, or the Evaſion of thy whole Book Epitomized: For as thou haſt pretended in thy Third Dial. that the Evincement of thy own Objections, was all that we required or ſtood upon for thee to do; ſo here thou makeſt as if the Diſcuſſing of thoſe Objections (herein conſider'd) had been all there was any Ground to diſpute upon; which was for thee, who art the Abuſer, to chuſe a Charge for the abuſed to inſiſt upon. But why didſt thou not tell thy Reader, that G. W. firſt ſent thee a Charge in writing; and that he offered in a publick Auditory to prove thee guilty of Forgeries, Self-Contradictions, and groſs Errors, from thy own Dialogues? Inſtead of yielding to the Teſt, even about Matter of Fact, where thou haſt groſly abuſed us, thou didſt in plain Terms ſhuffle by a freſh Propoſal of Queſtion; as if thou wert to teach us where and what to charge our Enemies with; and then preſcribe Rules (with many taunting Expreſſions, omitted in thy Third Dial.) how to behave our ſelves, on purpoſe to evade the Meeting. I would have thee know, it was our Right to make the Complaint; and hadſt thou been a Man of any Honeſty, thou wouldſt readily have conſidered it, and joyn'd Iſſue upon our Charge.

This, in Reputation to thy ſelf, as well as Juſtice to us, thou ought'ſt not to have declined: And yet to aggravate theſe Shuffles G. W. proffered in his 4th Paper to thee a Note of the Particulars charg'd as Forgeries, &c. if thou deſiredſt it; ſo willing was he and others to have ſeen thee in a publick Auditory. But ſeeing this would not do, he and I went to John Gladman's, deſiring him to offer thee from us, we would meet thee and any elſe to defend thee, in a publick Auditory, with thy Dialogue in one Hand and the Bible in the other; the faireſt of tenders; to make thy own Book the Subject; and the Scriptures, (thou ſayſt we reprobate) A Rule. But this thou canſt not but know was alſo rejected: So that to conceal theſe Shifts, nay, to ſay thou art no Shuffler, and which is worſe to charge G. W. with both Shuffling and Lying, at what Time thou art ſo manifeſtly guilty of both, is to heighten thy Unworthineſs to a monſtrous Pitch.

But as the Matter of thy Book is injurious, ſo thy Language inſolent and ſcurrilous; entituling us Cheats, Impoſtors, a mad, arrogant, abuſive, prophane Man, Knave, in Diſcourſe [Coxcomb] impious Curſers, Lyars, Blaſphemers, moſt implacable Enemies to the Chriſtian Religion, as vile Impoſtors as ever were, influenced and inſpired by the grand Impoſtor the Devil; calling our Religion, malignant Errors, a myſtical Romance, Satan's Snares, Blaſphemy, blaſphemous Abſurdities, I proclaim, to the World, that your Religion is a meer Cheat, calculated only to the Service of the Devil, and your own Luſts; and abuſing our religious Language with ſuch like Expreſſions as theſe; Impertinent Canting; your idle non-ſenſical and blaſphemous Prating; Terms that as much unbecome thy Pretences, as they reſemble the reſt of thy Practices. Canſt thou with good Conſcience npbraid E. B. with rebuking a Prieſt in Scripture-Language, whilſt thou haſt taken the Liberty, throughout thy Dialogues, when and where thou wert never provok'd, of ſuch foul and frothy Expreſſions, as becomes not any Man writing of Religion? Is this to make the Scripture thy Rule; or to act the Chriſtian againſt the Quaker? and to prove the Quaker none? No ſuch Matter T. H. but much the contrary, and that in the Minds of not a few, and thoſe too, of thy own Way, though of a better Spirit, who have diſown'd them, Root and Branch. I would not, after thy Example, reprobate all with thee, God forbid: That God has turned theſe ill deſign'd Attempts to our Advantage, remember what Sort of Salute was lately given thee, by a Religious and Ingenuous Perſon in Briſtol (once a Preacher among the Independents) at thy reflecting upon his adhering to the Way we profeſs, viz. That he read thy Dialogues before he ever read the Quakers Books (or Anſwers) and that the Diſingenuity of that Dealing (he apprehending it to be no real Dialogue) was a Furtherance of his Inquiries, and ſo of his Convictions, grounded upon thy Abuſes; An Argument never to be anſwer'd by thee, T. H. if thou ſhouldſt write Three Dialogues more, unleſs they were as remote from theſe as thou wert from Honeſty when thou writ'ſt them; who doſt firſt Forge, and then Lye and Rail to maintain it.

Think not with theſe Comical Courſes to obtain thy Ends upon us, nor raze the Foundation of our Religion by thy abuſive Interludes; in which thou haſt not imitated Chriſt, but Ap'd the prophane Stager; writing a ſort of Mock-Religion inſtead of ſolid Controverſie; therein playing the Humouriſt with the Vulgar, like Ariſtophanes of old, (though with worſe Malice, and leſs Wit) who ſacrific'd the Virtue and Gravity of Socrates and his Friends, to pleaſe their Enemies, and profit himſelf; the Hinges on which thy Dialogues turn. The Firſt is manifeſt, and ſo is the Laſt to the Value of 300 Books at an Impreſſion [if ſome of thy Aſſiſtants do not wrong thee, as we ſuppoſe not] (ask the Bookſeller elſe) beſides Perquiſites; hereby proving thy ſelf, one of thoſe unruly Vain-Talkers, who writeſt Things thou oughteſt not for filthy Lucre-ſake, applied to us in thy Title-Page, but due to thy Self.

And however ſweet theſe Courſes may reliſh to thy worldly Palate, thou wilt find them deadly Poyſonous in the End; at what Time thy own Dialogues, and not I, nor any influenced by me, will prove ſo many Aſſaſſinators in thy own Bowels. God, if it pleaſe him, give thee Repentance, that thou mayſt eſcape his fierce Wrath to come. Amen.

Now ſober Reader, I ſhall addreſs my ſelf to thee, and God's righteous Witneſs in thy Conſcience, whether I have acquitted my Self in this Controverſie as becomes a Chriſtian-Man, againſt the Violent and Unfair Aſſaults of my Adverſary? and if I may not with very good Reaſon conclude, that he has all this while but counterfeited the Chriſtian, and abuſed the Quaker; and couſequently, that he (and not the real Quaker) is quite another Thing than a Chriſtian? Let Righteous Judgment take Place.

Not every one that ſaith unto me, Lord, Lord, ſhall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven; but he that doth the Will of my Father which is in Heaven, Mat. 7. 21.

For he is not a Jew which is one outward; neither is that Circumciſion which is outward in the Fleſh: But he is a Jew which is one inwardly, and Circumciſion is that of the Heart in the Spirit; and not in the Letter, whoſe Praiſe is not of Men but of God, Rom. 2. 28, 29.

But as then he that was born after the Fleſh perſecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even ſo it is now, Gal. 4. 29.

Quid enim iniquius, quam ut oderint homines quod ignorant, etiamſi res mereatur odium, Tertul. Apolog.

—— The Lord, —— Fruſtrateth the Tokens of the Lyars, and maketh Diviners mad, that turneth wiſe Men backward, and maketh their Knowledge fooliſh. Iſaiah xliv. 24, 25.

THE CAUSE of the GOD of TRUTH hath rarely wanted the Endeavours of Men of greateſt Power and Literature in almoſt every Age, to ſlander it, nor the conſtant Adherers to it, contumelious Treatment for their Integrity: No Virtue hath been ſo Conſpicuous, no Quality ſo Great, no Relation ſo Near, as to protect them from the Fury of blind Tradition and prejudic'd Education. But as this ought not to diſcourage any that purſueth ſo Good and Heavenly an Intereſt, eſpecially when the Invincible Faith, Patience, and Hope of thoſe Holy Ancients, that ſo heartily eſpouſed it, ſtand before us as ſo many bright Examples and Encouragements; ſo neither have the many and great Attempts of Men of divers, yea oppoſite Intereſts, to render us Unfit for the Earth, and (what in them lyeth) to invalidate our Claim to Heaven, abated one Grain of our Love to, Confidence in, and Zeal for, that worthy Cauſe: And Bleſſed be the God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, their Eſſays have been Inſucceſsful, their Deſigns fruſtrated, and not one of their Weapons form'd againſt our Sion hath yet proſpered; But —— Creſcit ſub pondere Virtus.

Theſe very Sufferings God hath turned to our Enlargement, daily rewarding our Tribulations with Patience, and our Conflicts with Joy in the Holy Ghoſt; fulfilling to us that comfortable Saying of the Apoſtle, All Things ſhall work together for good to them that love him. Having this Encouragement from God, what Injury ſoever we ſuſtain from Men, well may we ſay with that Kingly Prophet, Whom ſhould we fear? Of whom ſhould we be afraid?

With that Godly Reſolution, which becometh the Juſtneſs of my Cauſe, I enter upon my preſent Work, and firſt of the Occaſion.

We have been long threatn'd with a Report of the joynt-Endeavours of many Miniſters, which rais'd ſeveral into an Expectation of ſome notable Piece, ſome grave and moderate Diſquiſition of what had been as frivolouſly as fouly managed by our other petulant Adverſaries, that the Controverſy ſo long depending, might terminate with ſome Advantage to ſuch as had made any ſober Enquiry after it; but we had no ſooner received and lookt into the Book, than we ſaw our ſelves under a very great Diſappointment; for inſtead of ſome New Eſſay, behold! An Old Diſcourſe new vampt, or a new Impreſſion of a Book twice largely conſider'd, and ſome think, effectually Anſwer'd, I mean, John Faldo's Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity, but now recommended, as the Title-page tells us, by the Epiſtle of many Learned, and Worthy Divines.

But ſince it hath pleaſed ſo many Perſons under that Character, to fall in with his Diſcourſe againſt us, to Commend it ſo highly, Recommend it ſo earneſtly, and beſtow ſo liberal an Elogy on him that writ it, I think I may without any the leaſt Injuſtice, look upon them as Authors of the Impreſſion, and conſequently (by eſpouſing his Endeavours) Reſponſible to the People call'd Quakers, for all thoſe Miſcarriages therein rightly chargeable by them upon him: And I no ways doubt, through God's Aſſiſtance, to evidence their Concern in this Affair to carry with it an utter Inconſiſtency with that Superbe Title they have either given themſelves, or the Author or Bookſeller conferr'd upon them, for the good Turn of their ſo ſeaſonable Epiſtle, viz. Learned, Reverend and Worthy Divines; Words that make a fine jingle, and pleaſe and blow up Vain People at a ſtrange rate.

The firſt Paragraph of their Epiſtle is a great Truth, both worthy of the Minds of good Men, and neceſſary to be conſider'd at any Man's Entrance into the Judgment of another's Cauſe; It runs thus:

One and Twenty Divines. That, as God is the Wiſe Diſtinguiſher of Good and Evil; and ſo loveth the Good in any, as not to abate his Hatred of their Evil; and ſo hateth the Evil, as to love all that is Good; So is it no ſmall Part of the Wiſdom and Integrity of his Servants to Imitate him herein; and not like Men blinded by Partiality, to juſtifie all in thoſe whom they like, and Villify all in thoſe whom they diſlike, &c.

W. P. One would think by this that you had Imitated God in your Conduct towards the Quakers; and doubtleſs you writ it, that thoſe that read it ſhould think ſo: but why? I know not; unleſs becauſe you looking upon your ſelves his Servants, ſuch ought to do ſo, or elſe to give greater Credit to your Work than your ſelves perhaps believe it deſerves: But let us hear what Uſe you, the great Men of Uſes, make of this Introduction; I find it in the next Paragraph in theſe Words.

One and Twenty Divines. This Juſtice we muſt and will obſerve towards this People, called Quakers,—The Fear of God and Love of Truth, forbids us to render them Worſe or Better than they are.

Better! there is little Fear you will: You may turn Pelagians in the Caſe, and exclude all Divine Aſſiſtance; for I hope none are ſo ignorant in this Age, as to think that Men of your Stamp need ſpecial Grace to keep you from the Sin of rendring the poor Quakers better than they are: How much Worſe will be the Queſtion? I confeſs, you ſay fair; but what if you break your Word with us? Muſt not your Cenſure of us fall upon your own Heads? And will it not be reaſonable for us to interpret your Uſe of ſo true an Expreſſion to be a Trick to decoy People into a Belief, that you had taken right Meaſures of us, whilſt you have really dealt moſt unjuſtly with us.

Let me a little expoſtulate with you in this Matter. You have either read or not read the Book ye recommend: If you have not read it, certainly you have done very Ill to recommend it, ſince you know not what you recommend; which is not to Imitate God, or do the Quakers Juſtice: If you have read it, you manifeſtly entitle your ſelves to all the Evils of it. Again, ſince the Strength of the Book depends upon Teſtimonies out of our Writings: either you have compared his Citations with the Books themſelves, or ye have not; if you have not (and I am apt to think that's your Caſe) you commend him, and condemn us by rote: If you have compared and conſidered them, you muſt needs have offered great Violence to your Underſtandings in giving your Approbation, which anon we ſhall ſo undeniably evidence, as it would have been comparatively your Virtue, to have recommended the Book without reading it or examining the Citations.

Beſides, the moſt of what he chargeth upon us to be our Principles, are not ſo laid down by any one of us, nor, ſay we, ſayable by any of us upon real Principles; but are ſuch Conſequences as he through Ignorance or Malice hath indirectly drawn from our Words: For Inſtance, That there is no other Judgment, Heaven or Hell, than what is within us in this Life: Which is ſo far from being our Principle in Our Words, that it is as inconſiſtent with the Truth of our Creed, as Darkneſs is with Light: Charge this upon him, and he will tell you, I doubt not, That this is not the Quakers Faith in terminis, but the Conſequence of it; but then it is to be obſerved, that he muſt have the making of it. I would fain know of you, if you would be ſo treated with Reſpect to the Articles of your own Creed? Would you eſteem it juſt in me, to give my Conſequence for your Principle, ſuppoſing I thought it a true Conſequence, eſpecially if you reject it? For Example; You are moſt, if not all of you, ſtrict Calviniſts in the Point of Election and Reprobation; would you take it for a candid Repreſentation of your Judgment, that I ſhould proclaim it to the World, T. Manton, T. Jacomb, &c. believe, That God is the Author of Sin; That God's Secret Will croſſeth his Revealed Will; That no Man is obliged by the Laws either of God or Men; That Men are not the Cauſe of their own Deſtruction; That there are neither Rewards nor Puniſhments, &c. becauſe perhaps I believe thoſe Conſequences to be deducible from the Calviniſtical Principle? I am perſwaded you would look upon me as an injurious Perſon in ſo doing; yet this hath been the Practice of your Reverend Author J. Faldo; and which is leſs to your Credit, you have notwithſtanding commended him in it, which, how well it ſuits with One and Twenty Learned and Reverend Divines I leave to their Judgment who underſtand what Perſons of ſuch a Character ought to do and be. But I hope you do not think this to be Imitating of God; if you do, your Caſe is deſperate.

But had your Carriage been leſs blameable in theſe Particulars, it had not only been your Diſcretion but Duty, to have enquired if ever any Thing had been writ in Anſwer to this Diſcourſe you recommend, by any of that People that it was writ againſt; if there had, to have procured and peruſed it, before you had ſo freely ſpent your peremptory Judgment againſt us.

You generally fling Infallibility at us, though it be about Matters of higheſt Importance to Salvation, as if it were a Capital Sin to be aſſured of what a Chriſtian ought not to make a Doubt of, and yet nothing below aſcribing ſuch an Infallibility to your Reverend Author, can excuſe you in not examining him by our Diſcourſes, before you confer'd ſo kind an Epiſtle upon his Book: I aſk you, if the like Practice would pleaſe you in your own Caſe? you have prov'd, it doth in ours, which makes not for your Honour: Some of you are Writers your ſelves, and thereby have aſcended to no ſmall Degree of Fame for ſomething or other; tell me honeſtly if you would think it a Piece of Juſtice in any Claſs of Men to recommend a Book moſt abuſive of your Religion to the World, for an Ingenuous Eſſay, an Exact Account of your Belief, a Tract that in Matter, Proof and Style (your own Words) merits the Notice of all ſuch as deſire an Information concerning your Principles of Religion, whilſt you both diſown the Principles of Religion it calls yours, and in Two large Anſwers have detected him of ſeveral hundred Miſcarriages againſt your Perſons and Principles? I am perſwaded you will provide better for your ſelves. But if you muſt needs be ſo liberal, methinks your Recommendation had been better beſtow'd upon his Vindication, ſince his writing That, proveth, This wanted it, and if it wanted it then, it wants it ſtill, and yet it ſeems the Book Vindicated muſt be the Defence of the Vindication, and all the Return I am like to have to my Rejoynder, bating The Epiſtle of many Learned, Reverend and Worthy Divines, in Praiſe of ſuch a Book, and ſuch an Author: May none of you, at leaſt in this Temper, be Inquiſitors when I am to be examin'd for my Religion!

I ſhall now fall more cloſely to the Matter of your Epiſtle.

One and Twenty Divines. The Quakers preach another Goſpel, and endeavour to ſeduce well-meaning Souls, to whom they ſpeak in unintelligible Words, and from whom they hide the Poyſon of their Antifundamental Doctrines.

W. P. Here is a great deal in a little, and very ſourly ſaid: Were it as True as it is Falſe, the Day were yours.

You ſay, We preach another Goſpel: You do but Say it, and I thank God, You can Do no more. But doth it become One and Twenty Learned and Reverend Divines, to give ſo general and black a Charge, without making any the leaſt Offer to Prove it? Is not this to Calumniate rather than to Confute us? If you ſay, your Reverend Author, John Faldo, hath done it for you, I muſt tell you, that he is an Irreverent Abuſer of God, the Chriſtian Religion and the Quakers ; and which is more to my Contentment, whatever it be to his and yours, Some, and No Quakers too, think, I have proved him ſuch. And let me aſk you, If it be Another Goſpel, To own Remiſſion and Eternal Salvation by the Son of God, both as he appeared above 1600 Years ago in the Fleſh, and as he reveals himſelf within in Power and Spirit? What is the Goſpel or Glad Tidings, but Deliverance from Sin here, and Wrath to come? And what can effect this, but the Powerful Grace of God that bringeth Salvation, which is diſpenſed to all Men by Him, who is full of Grace and Truth?

For the other Part of your Accuſation, That we ſhould Say One Thing and Mean another ; it is by Conſequence, to call us the Worſt Sort of Knaves, by how much a Deception in Matters of Eternal Moment, is more Impious than any Cozenage about Things of this Life ; and yet you would be thought Charitable Men, and ſay, We want it : Is this the Way to ſupply us? But I would willingly know of you, By what Skill you arrive at the Knowledge of our Hearts? Inſpiration is one Part of our Hereſy, if your Reverend Author is to be Credited : The Scripture cannot be your Rule in the Point ; for that no where ſaith, The Quakers ſay One Thing and mean another ; and if you meaſure us by our Words, you muſt grant, that either you do not underſtand us, or we mean very Good Things ; for you elſewhere ſay, That our Obnoxious Tenets we uſually Maſk under Expreſſions Doubtful, Unintelligible, or under Scripture and Orthodox Phraſes. If Doubtful, your Conſequences cannot be certain ; If Unintelligible, you infer that which you do not know ; If Scriptural and Orthodox, you muſt either tell us, how you come to know our Meanings to be Contradictory to our Phraſes, and prove them ſuch, or you muſt acknowledge that we ſtand upon equal Terms with your ſelves ; I do not ſay, Upon no Better, for as Great Infidels as you would have us to be, we have both Diſcretion and Religion enough, not to write ſuch Abuſive and Contrary Things, as ſo fluently drop from the Pens of One and Twenty Learned and Reverend Divines. But your Incharity far exceeds your Indiſcretion ; You make us to know Poiſon, and to hide Poiſon, given for Antidotes, Deſtructive to the Souls of Men and Women. I would fain know, why the Conſcience of a Quaker, ſhould not be as Good as the Conſcience of a Preſbyterian or an Independent? What Miſchiefs have we made our ſelves Authors of to the World, that it ſhould not be as Valid every Jot? Have we no Souls to be Sav'd? Is there no Deſire in us that they may be Sav'd? No Honeſty? No Conſcience? No Fear of God? All animated to ſuch Evil Purpoſes, as the Wilful Damning of our ſelves, and the Proſelyting others into Eternal Miſery ; and rather than not compaſs ſuch an End, expoſe our ſelves to all Sort of Sufferings in this World? O Bitter Invective! God, the Searcher of Hearts, will require this Injuſtice at your Hands : You have unworthyly traduc'd the Reputation of thoſe who dare meet you with a Publick Teſt, to prove their Integrity to God and Men. Why will you give ſuch Occaſion to remind you of Old Stories? But of that anon. Had you judg'd us Ignoramus's, you had been Kind to the Cruelty of making us Deſigned Murderers to our own and other Men's Souls. God forgive you. But this I muſt tell you, that it is not We, That ſay One Thing and think another, but You, and ſuch as You are, That make us think another Thing than what we ſay, and then entitle us to your own Inventions. I muſt farther tell you, We make it not our Buſineſs, as you falſly inſinuate, to decoy People into Antifundamental Principles : For beſides that we know none to be ſuch that we hold, We make not our Religion to ſtand in a Belief of ſo many Verbal Articles ; but a Conformity of Soul to the Grace of God. It is a great Part of our Duty, to dehort People from Curious Enquiry after Notions and Opinions, be they never ſo True in themſelves, knowing how much more Beneficial it is to Men, and Well-pleaſing to God, to have an Honeſt Heart than a Full Head : Doing is degenerated into Talking, and the Life of Religion into Contention about the Notion of it ; Such Chriſtians will not ſtand in God's Day : Beſides, many of thoſe, who are otherwiſe remote enough from ſaying any Thing in Favour of the Quakers, do frequently acknowledge, That they generally Preach and Preſs Good Living. It is our Deſire to bring Men into a Senſe of God's Grace in their own Hearts, and to know the Effectual Operations of it, to the Renewing of their Mind to God : And, That Divine Aſſiſtance Within, and Right Uſe of the Holy Scriptures Without, are enough to inform them of what is fit to be Believed. And though you would have People think very ſevere Things of us, with Reſpect to the Scriptures of Truth, by telling them, The Quakers hold, that the Scriptures are not the Word of God, nor a Rule of Faith and Practice ; yea, That we readily aſſert it in ſo many

Words ;

1674. Words; I muſt tell you, You have acted with us herein far from Men of Common Ingenuity; A Man might at this Rate, by Scripture prove, There is no God, if he would but leave out, The Fool hath ſaid in his Heart. We deny the Scriptures in that Senſe, wherein you deny them, to be the Word of God; that is to ſay, The Word that was in the Beginning with God, and was God, which you call the Eſſential Word; and, becauſe we find in no Place, that it calls it ſelf, The Word of God, we rather chuſe to ſay, The Scriptures given forth by Inſpiration, are the Words of God. The like Abuſe you put upon us, about denying them to be a Rule of Faith and Practice; you leave what makes for us behind, that you may make your Advantage of what you take; That the Scripture is not a Rule therein, in all Things expreſt, you your ſelves confeſs, reſpecting the Diſpenſation of the Jews, and other Things; and that there may be ſome Things wherein the Scriptures cannot be a Rule, I preſume you will not deny; and that they are not a Rule in any Caſe, the Import of your Charge, we utterly deny; for we believe, and know, they contain many Godly Rules. I ſhall place this to the reſt of your Account of Calumnies, and ſo proceed.

One and Twenty Divines. Though the Reverend Author hath ſhewed you how much Infidelity is among them, and how many of the Very Eſſentials of Chriſtianity their Leaders contradict, and how conſequently they are indeed No Chriſtians; yet it is not his Purpoſe (as he plainly premiſeth) to fix this ſad Character upon all thoſe who paſs under the Name of Quakers — There are divers of them, who are Honeſt, and Well-Meaning Perſons ——

W. P. Methinks yon are got into a very kind Mood, of a ſudden, but it holds not a whole Page; for you tell us ſoon after, That the whole Body of this People ſeems to be Judicially deſerted of God: If ſo, then No more Chriſtians than their Leaders, as you are pleaſed to call them; neither Honeſt nor Well-Meaning, unleſs God judicially deſerts Honeſt and Well-Meaning People. In the next Page, you call them Waſps of Satan's Hiving, who have Hives but no Honey, or Sweetneſs of Spirit, except for themſelves. The leſs we have, the more you have; and would not one think you All Honey, by your Writings? How can you expect that we ſhould have any to ſpare, whom you make to have ſo little, if any at all? And what Need is there of giving to them, that think they have ſo much already? The Truth is, We are Waſps, and you are Bees, by one and the ſame Figure. We know that you have always a Good Name for your ſelves, and have long loved the Honey-Pot; But where did you get it? Did you gather it? No ſuch Matter. Of whom then? Of the People, no Doubt; They Tail, and you Talk; they are the Bees, and you ſo many Cunnning Hivers, at the Tinkling of whoſe Bells; the Silly Bees aſſemble, and when you have ſafely Hived them, your next Buſineſs is to take their Honey from them. Howbeit, if we are Waſps, then not Bees, by which, I ſuppoſe, you intend Chriſtians; if ſo, Yaur Charity is at an End, and thoſe you Chriſtian'd with J. Faldo juſt now, you do here manifeſtly Unchriſtian; unleſs Waſps be Chriſtians; and that Chriſtians, while ſuch, may be Judicially Deſerted of God, and Hived by the Devil. Methinks ſuch Contradiction becometh not Men of your Stile and Pretences.

But tell me, Why are we Judicially Deſerted of God? Is it not becauſe we have Judiciouſly deſerted you? And don't you therefore ſay, We are Hived by the Devil, becauſe we will not let you Hive us? Speak Truth, fain would have it (according to the Old Proverb) As your Bell Tinketh, the Poor Quaker Thinketh. But bleſſed be God, His Grace has made us Wiſer than ſuch Teachers; we know the Heavenly Voice of our Spiritual Shepherd, and can no more ſuffer our ſelves to be carried away with a Worldly Miniſtry; and that I aver to be ſuch, which is not Founded upon the Revelations, and Internal Motions of God's Holy Spirit; a Principle you do, in the Perſon of your Reverend Author, J. Faldo, not only deny, but deride; who is ſo far from ſhewing any Infidelity amongſt us, that his Book is but a Proof of his Own Injuſtice; and not that our Principles, but his Corrupt Conſequences, contradict the Eſſentials of Chriſtianity. This is an Inadvertency in you, that well deſerves, as my Reproof, ſo your Repentance. But to your next Paſſage.

One and Twenty Divines. And the Truth is (excepting ſome Jugling Socinianiz'd Perſons, or Papiſts, that aſſume their Name) there are few of them who are Men of ſo much Underſtanding, and Conſiſtent Principles, as to be Able and Willing to give a Methodical and Intelligible Account what they themſelves or their Party hold.

W. P. A quick Way to do a Quaker's Buſineſs at once: He muſt either be an Ignoramus, a Secinian, or a Papiſt, chuſe him whether; if an Ignoramus, he is laught at; if a Socinian, or Papiſt, he is hated. Doth this flow from the Beeiſhneſs of your Nature, Jugling Socinians, Papiſts, or Ignoramus's? Theſe Expreſſions do not Quadrate with the Titles of Learned and Reverend Divines. What is it but to tell us, you reſolve to render the Quakers odious, and if they have nothing of themſelves, you will adapt any Thing that is hateful of other Perſwaſions, into theirs, that you may bring them into Suſpicion, and Abhorrence with your People. However, you are ſo conſtant to contradict your ſelves, that you grant to ſome of us, Both an Ability and Willingneſs, to render a Methodical and an Intelligible Account of what we and our Friends believe, after having rated us, For Deſigned Obſcurities, and Affected Unintelligibleneſs. But that I may not leave you ſo, let me tell you, firſt, that both Socinians and Papiſts have written, and that with Severity againſt us; next, The Labours of no Adverſary have had more Grateful Acceptance in the Thoughts of your Reverend Author, J. Faldo, than a Noted Socinian, of whoſe Attempt he ſpeaks thus, I reſent it as one of the Beſt, and moſt ingeniouſly managed, that ever I read againſt that Sort of People, meaning the Quakers. He alſo, both in his Firſt Book, and in His Vindication, as heartily advocates the Cauſe of a Socinian againſt me, as if he had been doubly Fee'd to the Work. Beſides all this, we have been of late both publickly and vehemently, yet groundleſly, exclaimed upon, For denying the Man Chriſt Jeſus, and aſcribing the Chriſtſhip to the Divinity alone; and you know the Socinians own Him to be but a Bare Man; and that ſome of our Eminenteſt Adverſaries in that Controverſy, were aſſiſted by Socinians, I am able to prove. But to what a Pitch of Inconſiſtency may not the Pride, Paſſion, and Prejudice of Men raiſe them? You think it enough to do our Buſineſs, to Pin the Pope at our Tail; but you may remember how Unjuſt you thought ſuch Suggeſtions from ſome of the former Prelates of the Engliſh Church, who made the ſame Uſe of your Separation; and as well as you Preſbyterians and Independents agree againſt us, both of you have Mutually Jeſuited one another; the Refuge of Malice, when driven to a Pinch. To conclude; I muſt tell you, we are neither Socinians nor Papiſts; and I do hereby require at your Hands, to produce One Socinian or Papiſt that goes under the Name of a Quaker among us; till when, you remain under the Juſt Imputation of Slanderous Perſons. But let us ſee what is next.

One and Twenty Divines. Diverſe Honeſt, Well-Meaning, and Ignorant Perſons, have fallen in with the Quakers, ſuppoſing them by their Plain Habit, Auſterity, and Rude Deportment, to be the Stricteſt, and therefore the Holieſt Sort of Profeſſors. — And thus ſeeing no farther, they become Quakers, from the ſame Principles in the Main, and from the ſame Diſpoſitions, as the more Ignorant Votaries among the Papiſts, are Carthuſians, Franciſcans, and other ſuch like Monks and Nuns.

W. P. I would fain aſk you, if you can yet think your ſelves Men of Charity? You elſewhere ſay we want it; and at this Rate we may do ſo for all you. Behold the Brand you ſet on every Soul that leaves you! Can you ſatisfie your Conſciences, that you have herein ſhown the Juſtice you promiſed us, in deſcribing the Quakers, or imitated the Rectitude of God in the Meaſures you have taken of us? Truly if you can, they are greatly to be ſuſpected: Give us one Inſtance of any Honeſt, or Well-meaning Perſon, That for the Sake of thoſe Outward Appearances became a Quaker, which in other Terms is, to expoſe themſelves to the Bitter Anathema's of ſuch High Prieſts as your ſelves, the Severity of their Deareſt Relations, the Penalties of Magiſtracy, and to the General Reproach of the Multitude. Methinks, upon ſecond Thoughts, you ſhould not have ſuch Good Ones of your ſelves, and ſuch Bad Ones of your Neighbours; But though you take ſo little Care of being Tender, nay, Juſt to us, yet you ſhould be more Circumſpect for your ſelves. You tell us in the Perſon of J. Faldo, That the Quakers deny to perform any Thing Relative of Religion, but upon Inſpiration, or Motion of the Spirit; and you all know, or may know, the Papiſts turn not Carthuſians, Franciſcans, &c. upon ſuch Pretences, or as being ſo diſpoſed: You, or your People have affirmed, That they by ſuch Works, think to Merit Eternal Life; Whether it be True or Falſe, let them look to that; ſure I am, that ſuch as ſay, Thoſe Works are my Works, and that upon my Principle, who otherwiſe tell the World, That I admit of no Work in Religious Matters, but by the Impulſe of God's Spirit, contradict themſelves to Purpoſe, and that you have done. Popery brought into Company with what you call Quakeriſm, doth your Work with ſome of your Vulgar; but your Compariſon had ſhown leſs of Envy, if you had pleaſed to produce thoſe Principles, and deſcribe thoſe Diſpoſitions you unworthily inſinuate Quakers and Monks in common to be acted by. But methinks your frequent frothy Reflections upon our Deportment as Monkiſh and Cynical, &c. look more than ordinarily ugly, from the Mouths of ſuch as pro-

1674. feſs themſelves to be of the Race and Stock of Ancient Puritans, whoſe Little Bands, Cropt Locks, Exceeding Plain Apparel, Severe Aſpects, with many more Inſtances of Preciſeneſs and Auſterity, (as you call it) were the Subjects frothy Minds play'd upon. You do not think Ben Johnſon acted like a Chriſtian-Man in his Comical Repreſentation of Puritans, and yet your ſelves call'd, Learned, and Reverend Divines, have ſhown as much Injuſtice, tho' it may be, One and Twenty more of you could not ſhow ſo much Wit.

It is known to God, with what Sincerity we are acted in Obedience to the Convictions of his own Spirit, and that it is not Affected Singularity, but Real Conſcience, that engageth us to thoſe Things you make the the Subject of your Mockage and Contempt; and God hath to reckon with you for the Liberty you give, and your People take. To indulge them in that Unchriſtian Latitude, and fling Monkiſh Auſterities npon us, who, through Fear of offending Almighty God, by giving Way to a Worldly Appetite, Conſcientiouſly live under ſome more than ordinary Reſtriction, is to deal deceitfully with them, and injuriouſly with us; and God will judge for theſe Things. The Truth of the Matter is, you are Angry the People can live without you, and rack your Wits to bring that Principle, People and Way, into Suſpicion and Hatred, whoſe Self-Denial judgeth you and yours: Your Intereſt in People ſtands in that, which, when the Everlaſting God ſhall terribly ſhake all Things, will fall; and ſuch as have vainly conceited themſelves Chriſtians upon your Character, will be found without their Wedding-Garment. But the Truth is, nothing is well with ſome Men that a Quaker doth; If he be Retired, he is Sullen; if Plain in his Apparel, Cynical; if Careleſs about Salutation, Proud; His Induſtry muſt be Worldly-Mindedneſs; His Moderate Uſes of Enjoyments, Penuriouſneſs; His Hoſpitality, Fleſh-Pleaſingneſs; His being at a Word, a Decoy for Cuſtom, and a New Way of Cheating: If he refuſe to anſwer any Queſtions relating to Religion, either he can Give no Account of his Religion, or, He holds ſome Error he is afraid to diſcover; if he doth anſwer them, either it is Nonſenſe or Equivocation: In ſhort, his Virtues muſt be Vices; but this is his Reſolution, if to be, as he is, be to be Vile, he will be more Vile; and I doubt not but God will plead our Cauſe againſt you, and evidence to you and all Men, that we have not purſued Cynical Singularities, nor Affected undue Separation; but with Holy Fear, and Sincerity of Soul, have been herein reſign'd to the Good-Will of God, as he hath made it known by the Light of His Son in our own Conſciences; and this I affirm, that all thoſe Endeavours many Vigorouſly employ to vilifie an Inward Principle, and diſſwade Perſons from believing in it, waiting upon it, and being guided by it, center in the Rankeſt Atheiſm, becauſe the Senſe and Influence upon the Mind, is the moſt Senſible, Expreſs, and Conſtant Argument for God, and His Pure Religion, which loſt, makes Way for Infidelity. But as in Point of Doctrine, ſo in Converſation, you believe we are not all alike; your Words are theſe:

One and Twenty Divines. And yet ſome of them being Rich, and grown into Eſtates in the World, can, and do Live in as Fleſh-Pleaſing Fulneſs, Splendor, and indulging to a Senſual Life, as others whom they have Condemned.

W. P. I would willingly know theſe Perſons, who they are, and where they Live: Did you love Truth, and your own Credit, ye would ſcarce be ſo laviſh of your Words. You ſay, We Condemn all but our ſelves; what is the Conſequence but this, if you ſpeak True, That there is not a Perſon in the World thas is not a Profeſt Quaker, who either hath more Ability to Live Fleſh-Pleaſing, or that actually doth indulge himſelf more to a Senſual Life, than ſome Quakers can, and do. Which Way to ſave your Credit, I know not, unleſs you make it appear, that the Quakers are both as Rich as other Men, and as indulgent to themſelves in all Senſual Pleaſures. I perceive, rather than the Quakers ſhall want Faults, you will make ſome for them; a Practice very unfit for One and Twenty Learned and Reverend Divines! But to do you Right, you are kind in your Cruelty; you provide againſt believing what you ſay, by ſaying what is incredible of us.

I ſhall now conſider your Recommendation of his Book.

One and Twenty Divines. Wherein the Quaker's Principles are more throughly inveſtigated than in any Book which we have ſeen; and we judge it for Matter, Proof and Stile, to be eſpecially uſeful for thoſe who need, or deſire Information concerning the Quakers, and their Principles.

W. P. Had we no other Weapon, this were enough to Wound your Cauſe incurably; for, Firſt, He hath laid down about Twenty Principles in the Quaker's Name, Eighteen of which are not only none of theirs, as ſo expreſt, but not ſo much as

by

by Conſequence. That they are None of ours, it is enough we ſay ſo, unleſs our Faith is not to be taken at our Mouths, but at our Adverſary's. He that tells me, I believe that which I do not believe, is either Fooliſh or Diſhoneſt, and his Confutation is not of me, but of himſelf. That they are not our Principles by Conſequence, I have abundantly proved, both in My Anſwer and Rejoynder: However, Matter, Proof and Stile you commend it for. The Matter of it lyeth in the Proof of it: What Proof and what Stile, I am willing to ſhew you; and Firſt, as to Proof: Who would not think it excellently performed, that hath ſuch an Epiſtle, and ſo Subſcribed, on Purpoſe to recommend it?

But that ſo many Men, with ſuch Fine Titles, may be Guilty of great Miſtake and Abuſe, I will produce you Ten Inſtances of Notorious Perverſion, any One of which, were unworthy, even of ſuch Poor Heathen as ye think us to be, referring you to My Anſwer and Rejoynder, for a more compleat Detection of his Miſcarriages.

1. John Faldo affirms, That W. Smith had not One Exhortation to read the Scriptures; nay, that the Main Deſign of the Book was to deny them, and throw Dirt upon them; yet J. F. cites him concerning the Scriptures, thus:

Quak. no Chr. p. 45.

Child, Then the Scriptures are to be own'd, and believed, &c.

Father, Yes, They are to be Own'd, and Believ'd, and they that do not ſo, are to be Denied.

My Anſwer, Pag. 42. Rejoyn. p. 60, 61, 62.

Obſerv. Can any Thing be more inconſiſtent than your Reverend Author? Is it this Sort of Proof you commend? Can you think this the Way to Convert ſuch Infidels, as you deem us to be?

To this let me add another Notable Paſſage in the ſame Diſcourſe, he faults with Dirting and Denying the Scriptures.

Rejoyn. ib.

Queſt. Of what Service are the Scriptures as they are given forth, and recorded without?

Anſw. Much every Way, unto thoſe that have receiv'd the ſame Spirit from whom they were given forth; for, unto ſuch they are Profitable, and make Wiſe unto Salvation; and are unto them of Service, for Instruction, Edification, and Comfort.

Obſerv. Is there No Exhortation lodg'd in theſe Words? And is this to Deny, or throw Dirt upon the Scriptures? If any Man ſhall object W. Smith's making the Spirit neceſſary to the Profitable Reading of the Scriptures, let them go to W. Tindal, J. Bradford, Biſhop Jewel, J. Philpot, Luther, Calvin, Peter Martyr, and others, they will Preach them the ſame Doctrine; which I have obſerv'd in My Rejoynder, and may eaſily be found in My Catalogue of Authors.

2. My Second Inſtance ſhall be this, That he maketh W. Smith call the Scriptures, Traditions of Men, Earthly Root, Darkneſs, Confuſion, Corruption; All out of the Life and Power of God; which he only aſcribed to Degenerated Men, their Worſhip, Imaginations, and Traditions.

Quak. no Chr. p. 117, 119. My Rejoynd. from p. 141, to 157.

Shall this be call'd Proof or Perverſion? Doubtleſs a Proof of nothing, but of that Hateful Sort of Perverſion.

3. That the Quakers underſtand by Knowledge according to the Fleſh, the Uſe of the Underſtanding though Sanctified; which is alſo a groſs Abuſe both of our Words and Senſe.

Quak. no Chr. pag. 41. Anſw. p. 35. Rejoy. p. 424.

4. That I. Pennington ſhould call Viſible Worſhip, as ſuch, the City of Abomination.

Vind. p. 50. Rejoy. p. 194, 195.

This is a downright Forgery; and your Praiſe of his Proof makes you Acceſſories. Look on it as you will.

5. That by Traditions of Men, we underſtand the Scripture, or Written Word. A baſe Abuſe of our Words.

Quak. no Chr. Part 3. p. 88. Anſw. p. 250.

6. That the Quakers mean by the Vail that is over the People, their Belief of the Man Chriſt Jeſus, Born of the Virgin Mary, to be now exiſting in Heaven. An Impiety of his own Inventing, and your Approving.

Quak. no Chr. p. 89. Anſw. p. 251, 252. Rejoyn. p. 395, 396.

7. From W. Smith's ſaying, that the preſent Practice of the Sacraments, as Baptizing with a Croſs, and counting the Bread and Wine the Fleſh and Blood of Chriſt, ariſe from the Pope's Invention, You in the Perſon of John Faldo, give out, That W. Smith calls the Lord's Supper the Pope's Invention.

Quak. no Chr. p. 163.

At this Rate, what will your Teſtimony be worth? Little, certainly, with ſuch as know good Coin from bad.

8. From Edw. Burroughs's making the Light of Chriſt within to be One in Nature with the Spirit of Chriſt; J. Faldo infers, That the Quakers hold the Soul to be Vindic. from p. 75, to 87. Rejoy. p. 348, 349, 350.

1674 be God: as if that had been ſaid of the Soul, which was ſaid of the Light of Chriſt ſhining in the Soul, or that they were Synonymous.

What cannot a Man of his Skill in This black Art do? Yet this is your own Reverend Author, who, for his Proof againſt the Quakers, is not a little in your Books.

Qua. no Chr. p. 9. 10. Anſw. p. 14. Rejoyn. p. 420 — 9. Becauſe G. F. rejected that carnal Notion that confines the Infinite Omnipreſent God to a Reſidence only above the Stars, he makes no Difficulty of inferring, That we deny the Manhood of Chriſt Jeſus. As Abſurd as Baſe!

Qua. no Chr. p. 190. Rejoyn. p. 126 127. 425. — 10. From our affirming that ſuch a kind of Reading of Scripture as the Phariſees uſed, and to thoſe Ends, makes Men harder to be wrought upon to true Converſation than the Heathen, John Faldo infers, That reading the Scriptures, and getting Knowledge thence, puts Men into a worſe Condition than the Heathen; and that there is ſcarcely any thing more Dangerous than reading the Scriptures: Yea, he accuſes us of Charging the Miſcarriages of Men's Souls on the Knowledge the Scripture, by God's Bleſſing, doth convey.

Behold at what Rate your Reverend Author hath inveſtigated our Principles! You have ſaid truly in ſaying, he did it throughly; for he hath ſcarcely toucht any thing that he hath not throughly abuſed; yet this is the Man whoſe Attempts ſo obnoxious as you ſee you have adventur'd to commend. You ſay, you judge it (among other Things) for the Proof of it, to be eſpecially uſeful for thoſe who deſire Information concerning the Quakers and their Principles: That ever Men of your Age, Experience and Reputation, ſhould precipitate themſelves into any thing ſo foul and ſcandalous! Can you believe this is Imitating God, and being Juſt to the Quakers? I hope your Condition is not yet ſo dangerous.

I think fit farther to add, for the Information of the Ignorant, that J. F. began with us in his Book, called, Quakeriſm No Chriſtianity; I anſwered him in a Book, entituled, Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity; againſt this he put forth his Vindication, unto which I made my Rejoynder, conſiſting of Twenty Three Chapters, in which I vindicated our Principles, ſtripping them of thoſe frightful Vizards and hateful Diſguiſes he put upon them, confirmed them by many Scriptures and Reaſons, and to compleat our Defence, produced in Favour of the whole, above Two Hundred Teſtimonies out of both ancient and modern Authors. Beſides all this, I faulted his Conduct and Behaviour in this Controverſy, in above Four Hundred Particulars, and that under diſtinct Sections.

None of which hath he taken Notice of, how much ſoever it ſtood his Credit upon; but after his own Proof of his Books, wanting a Vindication, he reprints it to conſummate the Controverſy. To me it is a manifeſt Token that the Man hath gotten to a Ne plus ultra, and therefore goes back again, and doubtleſs, were not his Cauſe deeply ſunk, it ſhould never need the Help of One and Twenty Divines, and thoſe term'd ſo Learned and Reverend as you are, to recover it, and yet you ſee at what a Rate you have perform'd your Taſk: We have Hopes you will be better adviſed the next Time; I am ſure your Circumſtances need it.

And that you have as well abuſed us in your Style as Proof, and therefore proportionably deſerve the Cenſure of Impartial Readers, I ſhall produce ſome Inſtances out of your Epiſtle and his Book (I may ſay yours; for ye have made it ſo by adopting it:)

Firſt, In your Epiſtle,

A ſtrange Sort of People, preach another Goſpel, and endeavour to ſeduce well-meaning Souls; Poiſon of their Anti-fundamental Doctrines; Infidelity among them; Jugling, Socinianiz'd Perſons; Papiſts; Carthuſians; Franciſcans, and other ſuch like Monks and Nuns; Judicially deſerted of God; arriv'd to Pride and Ignorance; ſeek Back-biting, Reviling and Reproaches; nauſeous Conceitedneſs; Deluded Souls; Barbarous Language; Pitiful Ignorance; No Chriſtians; ſubverting Chriſtianity; Waſps of Satan's Hiving.

This is the Language of your own Epiſtle, that do not love Reflections nor Railing, if we will believe you.

Now for the Style of your Reverend Author in his Books, whom you would have us believe a Friendly Perſon to the Quakers.

Of our LIGHT.

Ignis fatuus; the ſecond Antichriſt; the Quakers Idol; Pernicious Guide and Saviour; Fanciful Teacher: And in his Vindication, A Sordid, Sinful, Corrupt and Ridiculous Thing.

Of our RELIGION and FRIENDS.

Quakeriſm made it's Way by, and began in, Blaſphemies againſt the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; Quakeriſm enter'd the World, as if Hell were broke looſe, and Poſſeſſions of Satan were to make Way, and fit Souls for the Quakers Spirit; Blaſphemy and Idolatry. Our Friends (Quakers ſo called*) Dark-Lanthorn-Men*; being fill'd with Palpable Knavery and Impudence; Abſurd and Blaſphemous Idiots; Prodigiouſly Wicked; O the Hell-Dark Expreſſions of the Quakers Preachers ſpeak the amazing Deluſions of Satan. And in his Vindication, A Preſumptuous and Blind Accuſer; a Sophiſter; an Haman; an Accurſed Ham; a Treacherous and Wilful Deluder; a Madman; an Hangman; an Infallible Stager; a Fool; an Ape; a Dunce; an Impudent Forger; and what not?

Is this to act like a FRIEND to the Quakers, or give Teſtimony of a large Spirit and Principle, as you (to make a foul Matter fair) have ſo untruly intimated? Doubtleſs, no Man hath taken more Pains to abuſe a poor People, than J. Faldo hath to miſrepreſent the Quakers; yet this very Style you more eſpecially recommend: Can you yet think your ſelves Learned, Reverend and Worthy Divines, Men of Conſcience and Honour? And the Truth is, you were very hard put to it to make up the Recommendation; for in the Scope of four Pages, you three Times compare us to Papiſts and Infidels; thrice charge and aggravate our deſigned Obſcurity, with Abundance of Impertinency and Contradiction; four Times go over our Separation from you; and, laſt of all, you five Times charge us with Singularities, enlarge and grow Elegant upon it, Repetitions, Tautology.

And, by the Way, I muſt needs take this Notice of the New Advertiſement in this Impreſſion.

Firſt, That the Advertiſer moſt horribly abuſeth us in ſaying, We pretend all our Miniſters to be Infallible. More than ten Times over hath he both ſcornfully and untruly caſt this at us: We aſcribe not an Infallibility to Men, but to the Grace of God, and to Men ſo far as they are led by it; for that it certainly teacheth what it doth teach.

Secondly, Whereas he inſinuates, as if I allowed of every Paſſage he cited, as of the Books and Authors themſelves: This is ſo great an Untruth, that many of them are miſquoted, and almoſt every one of them miſapply'd; and this I have largely and frequently complained of in my Anſwer, and more particularly in my Rejoynder. I leave off Wondering at him; for he ſeems to have prepared his Conſcience for any thing that may countenance his Attempts againſt the Quakers; which gives us Cauſe to ſuſpect the Altering of the Folio of the Old Book in this Impreſſion, is done on Purpoſe to hinder the Reader from finding his (in my Anſwers thereto referred) Miſcarriages. But to you again.

Suppoſe we are as bad as you beſpeak us; how can you help it? Your Principle takes away all Liberty from our Wills, and tells us of being ordained to all theſe Miſchiefs: Would you have us better than we can be? that is, to expect Impoſſibilities at our Hands? Or would you that we ſhould attempt to invalid God's Immutable and Abſolute Decree, which, beſides that it cannot be done (allowing your Notion) were a great Impiety but to think of; you ſhould either change your Creed in this Particular, or ſeem leſs concern'd at the Event of Things confeſſedly Irremediable. I remember an Old Book publiſhed by Three and Fifty Presbyterians, ſome of whom help to make up your One and Twenty Reverend Divines; it's call'd, A Teſtimony to the Truth of Jeſus Chriſt and our ſolemn League and Covenant, (for you know they muſt go together) the Bent of it is to collect the then held Errors, and bitterly to exclaim on all that hold and plead for, or incline to favour a Toleration; and ſuch were Epiſcopalians, Independents, Anabaptiſts, &c. Among many other, theſe are brought in for capital Ones. 1. HIERARCHY. 2. INDEPENDENCY. 3. An Oppoſition of the Doctrine of Election and Reprobation, as you hold it. 4. The Doctrine of the Freedom of Man's Will. 5. That Chriſt died for all Men, or that the Benefit of Chriſt's Death extended to all Men. And ſome Leaves off, thus expreſs themſelves: 'Doubtleſs that old Serpent, call'd the 'Devil, hath been the grand Agent in propagating theſe ſtupendious Errors, all 'which Errors, Hereſies and Blaſphemies, we are confident we may loath, execrate 'and abhor, and that without the leaſt Breach of Charity. O the Strength and Religion of this Charity, that can loath, execrate, and abhor to think that Chriſt dyed for all Men, or that all Men may be ſav'd! as plain Scripture as any in Scripture. This 1674. they call the Preſbyterian Teſtimony, which in plain Engliſh doth but loath, execrate and abhor the Belief of the Generality of Chriſtendom. And that you may yet know your ſelves better, obſerve this Paſſage; The Curſed Blaſphemies; the General Looſeneſs; the Spreading Hereſies of our Times have in a Manner born down before them the Authority of the Sacred Scriptures, the Life and Power of Godlineſs, and our Solemn League and Covenant; but above all, Our Souls are wounded, to think with what Hope and Induſtry a TOLERATION of all theſe Evils is endeavoured. Which in ſhort amounts to this: 1. All that quadrate not with Preſbytery is Error, Hereſy, or Blaſphemy. 2. That above all Things it wounds them to think of having ſuch tolerated as believe and maintain them. This Doctrine (with ſome Allay) in the Epiſcopacy, you exploded for Antichriſtian, Popiſh, and Tyrannical. When through ſuch Pretences you had mounted the Chair, by a notable Figure, call'd Self-Intereſt, it became an excellent Doctrine with you, yea a moſt neceſſary Part of your Creed: Pray tell me if this be imitating of God? Being Juſt to all Men? Doing as you would be done by? Can you yet be ſo blind as not to ſee your ſelves to be a great Way off from Chriſtian Charity, and an univerſal Communion of Chriſtians, that even make Believing of plain Scripture, a Reaſon for your Abhorrence of their Communion that ſo believe; unleſs they will ſubject ſuch obnoxious Paſſages to Calviniſtical Interpretations? Is not this like the Egyptian Tyrant, that ſtretch'd all longer that were ſhorter, and cut all ſhorter that were longer than himſelf? This ſhews, you Cæſar-like, would have had no Equal, and reſolv'd to reign alone, come what will of thoſe you now have learned to call Chriſtians: It is but too manifeſt that the genuine Senſe of your Faithfulneſs to promote God's Cauſe and Intereſt, is Your Selves.

But you are ſeveral Times angry with us for our Separation.

One and Twenty Divines. They ſeek by Backbiting, Reviling and Reproaches, to diſgrace the Doctrines, Practices and Perſons of others, that they themſelves may ſeem more excellent and glorious than all that have been excellent before them, and that they may not be thought unworthy of ſome Communion themſelves, grow preſently of Opinion, that all the reſt of the World of profeſs'd Chriſtians, are ſo ignorant, or ſo bad, as to be unworthy of Communion with them.

W. P. Methinks that it is not only an ill Way to be thought more Excellent and Glorious than all that were before us; but that no Man that refuſeth to captivate his Senſe and Reaſon to ſerve the Intereſt of whatſoever you ſay or do, can believe that we ſhould take ſuch an improbable Way to Glory: Such juggling Socinians and Papiſts, as you make the chief of us to be, ſhould better underſtand their Buſineſs, than to be guilty of ſo much broad and diſtaſtful Folly, in doing of it; but what cannot you ſay of the Quakers, who rather than not ſay enough will be impertinently Tautological, and ſay the ſame Thing in four Pages five Times over, to fix an Odium in the Minds of People againſt us: What is this but to do what you condemn?

But the Truth is, you have ſo well expreſs'd the Matter for your ſelves, that an Unwary Reader would think you equally Enemies to Separation, and Reviling thoſe you ſeparate from. But of all Men this Language is moſt inſufferable from you, who have tranſcended in the Guilt of thoſe Things you ſeem ſo heartily to cenſure. You are made up of Preſbyterians and Independents; let me a little Expoſtulate with you: Argumentum ad hominem.

I will begin with you who are called Preſbyterians; Are you not Separatiſts from the Church of England? You know you are; And pray, what is the Ground of your Separation? Is it Difference in the Eſſentials of Religion? you know, you ſay, it to be only in ſome Matters of Diſcipline; for this you have divided your ſelves, and ſmartly vindicated your Separation, witneſs Galaſpee in Scotland, and Smectymnus in England. Was it not a great Reaſon of the Wars, that divided ſo many Families, ſhed ſo much Blood, and exhauſted ſo great a Treaſure? Did it not lay Epiſcopacy in the Duſt, and excite the Parliament in theſe very Terms? Elijah oppoſed Idolatry and Oppreſſion, ſo do ye: Down with Baal's Altars! Down with Baal's Prieſts! Do not, I beſeech you, conſent unto a Toleration of Baal's Worſhip in this Kingdom, upon any Politick Conſideration whatſoever. Which is as much as to ſay, Away with the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, the whole Miniſtry and Worſhip of the Church of England. Again, The Mouths of your Adverſaries are opened againſt you, that ſo many Delinquents (that is to ſay, Royaliſts) are in Priſon, and yet but very few of them brought to their Tryal (Did he mean to releaſe them?) And, ſaith another of your eminent Brethren before the Commons, Auguſt 28, 1644, Ye can- not Preach nor Pray them down directly and immediately—— Well, That which the Word cannot do, the Sword ſhall: To render which Saying authentick, the Apoſtle is brought in two Lines after. I could ſet out this Part of your Story to the Life, but at this Time ſhall forbear: Nor do I delight in this, but ſince I muſt needs mention Your Separation, how can I do it without telling who it was you ſeparated from? And can I do it more candidly than in your own Words? I wiſh there had been no need for it: Only from hence you may obſerve your Sort of Diſlike of Separation: and how notably Presbyterians revile even Men that are one with them in the Eſſentials of Religion.

Behold, a ſhort Inſtance of your Carriage to the Church of England you ſeparated from! Let us now take a ſhort View of your Treatment of thoſe that diſſented from you: You ſhewed the Independents the Way, firſt to ſeparate upon Conſcience, and then to plead Conſcience for Separation; and how reaſonable it was that Conſcience ſhould be Tolerated. Are you conſtant to your ſelves? Do you give what you will take? No ſuch Matter: But let us hear you. Matters of Religion (ſays Dr. Corn. Burges in his Sermon before the Houſe of Commons, Novemb. 5. 1641.) lye a Bleeding, all Government and Diſcipline of the Church is laid in her Grave; and all putredinous Vermin of old Schiſmaticks glory in her Aſhes, making her Fall their own Riſing to mount our Pulpits. That the Independents are concern'd under the Term Schiſmaticks, Dr. Cawdrey beſtows an whole Book upon it, which is Entituled, Independency a great Schiſm; yet ſome of theſe great Schiſmaticks are ſome of the One and Twenty Reverend and Worthy Divines. I find another of your Brethren, Octob. 22. 1644. that tells us of Parliamentary Hereſies, ſaying, You are the Anabaptiſts, and you are the Antinomians; theſe are your Errors, if they ſpread by your Connivance. Was not this ſpoken like a Man of Charity, one that diſdain'd not the Communion of other Chriſtians that are not altogether of his Mind? A Virtue commended by you in your Epiſtle. Another eminent Perſon of your Way, before the Parliament, Sept. 12. 1644. We are grown beyond Arminianiſm, Browniſm, Anabaptiſm; we are come to the down-right Libertiniſm, that every Man is to be left to the Liberty of his own Religion: An Opinion moſt pernicious and deſtructive, ſaith he. And another of your Brethren in his great Zeal, before the Houſe of Commons, 1644. ſtiles them Baſtard Imps of the Whore of Babylon: Though you know that many of you plead a Romiſh Succeſſion for your Miniſtry, and conſequently that you miniſterially deſcend of what you call the Whore; think on't as you will. But all this is exceeded by a zealous Presbyterian, who in his Book, called, The Gangrene, &c. Part 1. p. 91. querieth thus; Shall the Presbyterians Orthodox Godly Miniſters be ſo cold, as to let Anabaptiſm, Browniſm, Antinomianiſm, Libertiniſm, Independency come in upon us, and keep in a whole Skin, when Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, &c. hazarded the loſs of their Preferments to withſtand the Toleration of Popery? Where not only Anabaptiſts and Independents are rendred unworthy of a Toleration by this great Presbyterian; but their Perſwaſion rendred more intolerable than Popery. I would aſk G. Griffith, M. Barker, R. Mayo, M. Palmer, T. Cole (who help to make up the One and Twenty Learned and Reverend Divines) if this Man was a Waſp or a Bee? one that had more of Sting or Honey? Well—what's his Reſolution? Let's therefore, ſaith he, fill all Preſſes, and cauſe all Pulpits to ring, and ſo poſſeſs Parliament, City and whole Kingdom againſt the Evil of Schiſm, and a Toleration, that we may no more hear of a Toleration, nor of ſeparated Churches, being hateful Names in the Church of God, Amen, Amen.

All I ſhall ſay of the Man is this; he was hearty in his Work, and what he did, he did with all his Might. Another of them runs ſo high, that he impeacheth Gamaliel for a looſe Naturaliſt, a Time-ſerving Politician, a ſecond Achitophel, and only becauſe he was for Toleration; when you know, the reſt of the Jewiſh Council were for Perſecution: If you will not believe me, peruſe I. Ward's Sermon before the Commons, 1645. How agrees this with your preſent Deſires of Indulgence, and Thanks for it? Let me ſay, there is the ſame Exception againſt you upon this Doctrine, as any other ſort of Diſſenters: But, as ill as this Man thought of Worthy and Prudent Gamaliel, his Counſel hath been ſtrong and ſeaſonable, even in Presbyterian Apologies. But leſt you ſhould reject theſe Evidences of your rank Severity to others, though for minute Differences, as being but the Opinion of Three or Four Men, I will conclude with the Judgment of the Presbyterian Miniſters in the City of London, preſented in a Letter to the Aſſembly of Divines ſitting 1674. ing at Weſtminſter, 1645. INDEPENDENCY is a Schiſm, they draw and ſeduce our Members from our Congregations; a Toleration of it will be followed with inevitable Miſchiefs; They erect ſeparate Congregations, under a ſeparate and undiſcover'd Government; They refuſe Communion with our Churches in the Sacraments: And are ſuch Men fit to commend Chriſtian Communion to others, who themſelves break it, and impeach one another at this bitter Rate for doing ſo? But what follows? The Godly, painful, Orthodox, Miniſtry will be diſcouraged and deſpiſed; the Life and Power of Godlineſs will be eaten out by frivolous Diſputes and vain Janglings; it is too much to be doubted leſt the Power of the Magiſtrate ſhould not only be weakened, but even utterly overthrown, conſidering the Principles and Practices of Independents, together with their Compliance with other Sectaries, ſufficiently known to be Anti-magiſtratical; Hereby we ſhall be involved in the Guilt of other Mens Sins, and thereby be endangered to receive of their Plagues; It ſeems utterly Impoſſible (if ſuch Toleration ſhould be granted) that the Lord ſhould be one, and his Name one, in the Three Kingdoms.

This ſeriouſly conſider'd, let me aſk you, if you did not think theſe Independents either ſo Ignorant, or ſo Bad, as to be unworthy of your Communion with them, or being ſo much as tolerated in their ſeparated Communion from you? Certainly, if ſo ſmall a Difference as that which remains between you and the Independents, finds not Charity enough with you to be tolerated, not only the Quakers have no Reaſon to expect Toleration from you, had you Power in your Hands; But there is great Need, that you ſhould be aſhamed of Cenſuring others, or being ſo Narrow-ſpirited, as not to Commune with People of a different Perſwaſion in Matters confeſſedly of greater Moment, than that upon which you have exerciſed ſo much Gall.

That You that are Independents, have thought the Presbyterians Unworthy of your Communion, it is needful only that we put you in Mind of your Separating from them, and ſitting down in diſtinct Congregations under a different Diſcipline and Adminiſtration of Ordinances; The Reaſon of which, if we will believe the Presbyterians in the Account they gave to the Parliament, was, becauſe you eſteem them Prelatical, Tyrannical and Anti-chriſtian in their Miniſtry: An ancient Acquaintance of mine, who had more Learning and Diſcretion than to be one of your Learned and Reverend Divines, in his Book againſt D. Cawdrey, doth affirm, That Miniſtry that cometh through Romiſh Succeſſion, and is no Miniſtry without it, can be no better than a Romiſh Miniſtry; and the Truth is, I am of his Mind. J. Cotton, Browniſts Apol. J. Cann, ancient Independents, alſo writ in Defence of Separate from National Communion.

From hence and that ſecond great War between you and the Presbyterians, who ſhould inherit what you had joyntly gotten from another Party, are none of the cleareſt Proofs to us of your Brotherly Love and Chriſtian Communion, though a great Check to both of you for your turning Judges, who are ſuch notorious Criminals; and yet I will not ſay but the Presbyterians Fury was your Provocation. In ſhort; As the Reaſon you have both render'd of your Separation from the Church of England, and One from Another, is Greater Purity of Worſhip and Diſcipline; ſo We had never ſeparated our ſelves from you, but upon the ſame Principle: And if this will not ſerve your Turn, when You that are Prebyterians, have given better Satisfaction to the Church of England for your ſeparate Communion; and when You the Independents, have in the like Caſe anſwered the Presbyterians, and the Anabaptiſts you, We ſhall, we hope, not be wanting to our ſelves in any neceſſary Vindication of Our Cauſe.

I am ſorry you have given me Occaſion to remind you of your Separation among your ſelves: However, this deſerves the Notice of all Impartial Readers, that though you were ſo Bitter, and all Waſps one againſt another for your Separation; yet that now you are Confederated againſt us without any other Provocation, than ſuch as was the Cauſe your ſelves pretended for your own Separation: So that to uſe your own Words with better Reaſon, You are the Men that have no Honey nor Sweetneſs of Spirit, except for your ſelves. And I muſt needs ſay, that notwithſtanding your Reflection upon us, as Deſtroyers of Chriſtian-Communion, you have been ſo fond of your own Apprehenſions, that many of your Way have loſt the Friendlineſs ſo commendable in Civil Society; and ſome, no ſmall Preachers neither, have vehemently dehorted their Hearers from ſo much as converſing with us, no not about the Lawful Things of this World, ſo far as may be avoided; nay, one of them was ſo extravagant as openly to profeſs, He had rather his Hearers ſhould go to a Baudy-Houſe, than to a Quakers Meeting: To ſuch a Degree of Bitterneſs are ſome of you arriv'd, for all your Pretences to Charity. I am ſure if you had had any Regard to thoſe Natural Truths, you are forc'd to confeſs, make up Part of our Religion, viz. To do as you would be done by; remembring that for all theſe Things God will bring you to Judgment; you would never have dealt out ſuch hard Meaſure to us; and it cannot be too much lamented, that Men will not make the beſt of their Accord, ſo far as they do accord; I mean what you do, if you mean what you write, viz. That God ſo hateth the Evil, as yet to approve and love all that is Good; and that his Servants ſhould not diſpraiſe all in thoſe whom they diſlike:

For, We own ONE GOD; we fear him as well as own him; and through His GRACE are enabled to perform the Works of Righteouſneſs, whoſe Fruit is Peace: We believe this Grace is communicated to us through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord; that he is the Only and Compleat Saviour, as well from the Pollution as Guilt of Sin; that without his Holy Spirit we cannot pleaſe God; that therefore it is Reverently and Inceſſantly to be waited for, to inform, inable, and conduct, us through the whole Exerciſe of our Life, reſpecting our Duty towards God and Man; we alſo believe that there is an Eternal State for Sheep and Goats, Godly and Ungodly, and a Day in which God Almighty will judge the Secrets of all Men by Jeſus Chriſt, rendring to every Man according to the Deeds done in the Body: And this we do believe without any Mental Reſervation whatever, and find daily Comfort both in Believing and Living accordingly; nor do I know that you in any Thing contradict this, in Words, at leaſt.

Now that your Zeal for your Way of Religion ſhould tranſport you beyond all Natural Tenderneſs or Affection, as the Apoſtle renders it (your Duty to every Man as he is God's Workmanſhip) and then glory in ſo great a Vice, as a Chriſtian Virtue, by terming it Godly Zeal, &c. which is no more but an Unwarrantable Heat for your particular Perſwaſions; I muſt needs ſay, is a great Way off from that Moderation that the Apoſtle exhorts us to make known to all Men. It is an ill Way of admiring Grace which deſtroys Nature, and ſuch, I muſt needs ſay, ſome of yours is, or hath been, who have ſacrificed Univerſal Love, Natural Affection, Relation, the Liberties and Lives of Men differently perſwaded to the Promotion of your ſo much beloved Intereſts: Remember T. Edwards's Gangrene, and the London-Miniſters Petition, and the New-England Tragedy. How exceeding ſhort doth this fall of the Admirable Sweetneſs of his Nature, who is Lord of the Chriſtian Religion, that was ſo far from Indulging Hatred to his Conſcientious Friends, that he forbad it to his greateſt Enemies? Can you call for Fire from Heaven upon Diſſenters, and rather than not compaſs their Deſtruction, kindle Fire on Earth to devour them, and yet with any the leaſt Pretence to Modeſty check others for Incharity and Separation? But take this with you, that good Notions will ſignifie little to the Comfort of an ill Soul at God's Bar; it will not be Well Held, but Well Done, Good and Faithful Servant. Preferring Opinion before Piety hath filled the World with Perplexing Controverſies, and Men's Cenſures have been according to Notion, not according to Converſation: It is not what Works, but what Faith? though Works beſt of all define and evidence what Faith is. But this Age hath no Kindneſs for Good Works; the more the Pity: Looſe Men ſlight them in Life, and you in Doctrine; A Man cannot plead for them, but at the Hazard of being counted a Papiſt. Tell you, ſuch an one is a Virtuous Perſon, and you anſwer us commonly, He is a Good Moral Man, but he hath no Saving Grace; as if Grace and Morality were at as great Diſtance as London and Conſtantinople: Theſe Notions have abuſed Religion, and greatly injured the Souls of People; 1. By giving them to conceit themſelves Chriſtians, though Unlike Chriſt. 2. In Diſtinguiſhing between a Good Man and a Chriſtian, from whence hath flown that Stingineſs of Spirit, that denies any to have Saving Grace that fall not in with their Principles, and ſo divides Grace from Virtue, which God hath Inſeparably joyned. This is the Doctrine that deceiveth Men, which makes them too great for the Reſt of Mankind: Moral Men are no Company for them; they may be that, and go to Hell for their Pains, if what ſome of you ſay be true. It is the Presbyterians ſpecial Grace that ſaveth; for Morality's Part, alas! ſhe is a poor Heathen, an Alien, an Infidel, without the Pale of the Church, and Mercies of the Covenant; but then it is to be underſtood of the Scotch One.

1674. O! I beſeech you for the Sake of Jeſus Chriſt, by whom alone God will judge you and me in the Dreadful Day of Account; let the Univerſal Principle in your Conſciences have Power with you; the Divine Fruit of which is, firſt, A Diſcovery of Duty to be done; and as cloſed with there, next, Power and Ability to perform it, which ſtrips you of Self, and Glorying in it, and will work all neceſſary Works In you and For you: It will firſt correct and then comfort you; It's Ways are Ways of Pleaſantneſs, and all her Paths are Peace; To Faith it adds Virtue, to Virtue Knowledge, to Knowledge Temperance, and to Temperance Patience, and to Patience Godlineſs, to Godlineſs Brotherly-Kindneſs, and to Brotherly-Kindneſs CHARITY. Contend not againſt it; your Credit is a Temptation to you; ſacrifice it for the ſake of your own and other Men's Souls upon the Altar of Self-Denial, and that Humble and Heavenly Obedience you owe to the God of the whole Earth; and think not Repentance a Work too Mean for you, becauſe you have been ſo long Preachers of it to others; your Time haſtens on, and in the Grave it will be too late: If it was John's Honour to receive him when he came in Fleſh; let it not be your Judgment to reject his Coming in Spirit: God knows I have no Ill-will but much Kindneſs for you; I wiſh you were as truly taught of him, as you are great Teachers of others: Could my Deſires prevail, you ſhould be ſuch upon better Terms; but as Wo be unto them who are ſent and don't preach; ſo Wo be unto them who do preach and are not ſent; It is not hard in this Senſe to be Righteous overmuch, to be too Officious, and to act Thankleſly for God.

O that we may all conſider what we are Building with, and whether our Works will ſtand the Trial of God's Fire! whoſe Terrible Day haſtens upon the World, in which he will ſeverely plead with all Fleſh that hath corrupted it's Way before him; as with the Gentile, ſo with the Jew! as with the Prophane, ſo with the Profeſſor, Who hath had a Name to live, and yet will be found Dead, who calls himſelf a Jew, and yet is not; a Chriſtian, and is not; who runs, and God hath not ſent him; who cryeth, thus ſaith the Lord, and God hath never ſpoken by him: Let us therefore be perſwaded into a Serious Examination of our ſelves, and Preparation for this Great and Notable Day of the Lord, that the Sound of the laſt Amazing Trump may not ſurprize us, nor any of us be overtaken at unawares, but in Godly Fear wait till our great Change comes, that with Holy Habakkuk, we may all find Reſt to our Souls in the Day of Trouble, Amen.

Your Friend in much Sincerity,

William Penn.

The EPISTLE.

Candid Reader,

SINCE it hath pleaſed the Everlaſting God to viſit a poor deſpiſed People in this Nation, with a more direct, immediate and clear Sight, Senſe and Knowledge of Him, than heretofore they had, by the Shinings of His Eternal Life and Spirit in their Hearts, thereby giving them a True Diſcerning of the Ways and Worſhips that have been in the World, which Gender towards meer Outſide and Lifeleſs Formality; and of that Pure, Straight and Narrow Way, that ſtands in the Power of God, and Holy Life of Righteouſneſs, many, very many, have been their Trials, Exerciſes, and Deep Sufferings; and that of Slandering them, and their Moſt Precious Faith, has not been the leaſt in their Eye; for by that Practice, hath the Enemy of Chriſt's Kingdom caſt ſuch Miſts and Vails over the Truth, as have obſcured the Divine Beauty and Excellency of it from the Sight of People, inſomuch that ſome have dreaded nothing more than the Reception of that Principle, which bears True and Faithful Witneſs for God in their own Conſciences. It is cryed down for Inſufficient, by ſuch as never tryed the Power and Efficacy of it, and termed a Natural and Dim Light, though It diſcovereth and inſtructeth Man, in, and about Spiritual and Supernatural Things. O that they would Obey this Day of Small Things, and remember, That Obedience is far better than Sacrifice; How much is there of the Latter? But how Little, O how very Little of the Former! What Degeneracy is there among all Profeſſions? Their Tenderneſs is withdrawing, their Greenneſs withering apace; and with the Form do they earneſtly contend, as the Jews of Old, againſt the Very Power and Life of Godlineſs; and ſee not that the God of the World has entred thoſe Outſides of Religion, wherein, perhaps, the Lord may formerly in Condeſcenſion have appeared, that he might lead them nearer to the Subſtance it ſelf; and for want of a True Savouring Spirit in this Matter, Millions are deluded; yea, ſo far, as therein, and therewith, to oppoſe a more Clear and Heavenly Appearance of God to the Sons of Men; thus do they reſiſt the Viſitations of God's Love to their Souls, and reject 1674. their own Mercies. O that an Enquiring Tender Spirit were more generally raiſed in the Hearts of People, that they would conſider our Relation to the Latter Days, and how much it concerns them, in theſe New-Covenant Times, to be in Covenant with God; which it is utterly impoſſible thoſe ſhould ever be, who rebel againſt the Light, by which he has Viſited them with Daily Reproof and Inſtruction. I have given Him, ſaid the Lord of his Son, for a Light to lighten the Gentiles, and for my Salvation to the Ends of the Earth. This is that True Light, which enlightens the Souls of all, as John teſtified, 1 John 9. and the Nations of them that are ſaved, muſt walk therein. Come, let us walk in the Light of the Lord, Iſa. 2. This Meaſure of Light leads to God, who is Light; and this Meaſure of Grace and Truth, guides the Soul unto Him, who is full of Grace and Truth, where Salvation is known, and Plenteous Redemption witneſſed; Bleſſings and Praiſes be to His Name for ever.

Reader, This Controverſie, begun by S. Grevil, who calls himſelf a Miniſter of the Goſpel, near Banbury, though briefly handled, is of great Weight; for it conſiſts of Two Fundamental Doctrines of the Goſpel, and indeed the very Bottom of our Teſtimony, viz. Chriſt's Manifeſtation of himſelf in the Hearts of His Children; and the End of that Manifeſtation, namely, To make an End of Sin, deſtroy the Works of the Devil, finiſh Tranſgreſſion, and bring in Everlaſting Righteouſneſs, John 1. 3. 5. 8. Dan. 9. 24. Theſe Two Principles, or rather CHRIST JESUS Within, the Principle, and His Work, compleat Redemption, are lately oppoſed by S. G. as laid down by Alexander Parker, in a Book by him ſet forth about Seventeen Years ſince. This is a Sober Conſideration, and, I hope, a plain Enervation of his utmoſt Force, in Defence of thoſe Evangelical New-Covenant-Doctrines. I recommend it to God's Witneſs in thy Conſcience, who will Judge Righteous Judgment; whoſe Servant I am, in Body, Soul, and Spirit, and whom I dare not but confeſs and vindicate before Men.

WILLIAM PENN.

A General Defence of the LIGHT WITHIN, by Way of Introduction.

THO' there be no Paſſage, or Propoſition, to be found from one End of Holy Scripture to the other, more clearly laid down, than that in John 1. 9. That was the True Light that Lighteth every Man that cometh into the World; yet ſo ſtrong hath been the Envy, and ſo ſubtil the Endeavours of the Prince of Darkneſs, as ſcarcely any one Place hath been more wreſted and abuſed, on purpoſe to hinder Mankind from minding the Manifeſtations of the Light, and yielding all ready Obedience to it, as the Way appointed of God to Eternal Life and Salvation.

Some will have it to be a Natural Light, though it be the Very Life of that Word, which is God over All, Bleſſed for ever, and wrapt up within thoſe Verſes, which only concern His Eternal Power and Godhead.

Others will have it read thus; Not, that He Enlightens all Mankind, but that all who are Enlightned, are Enlightned by Him; thereby, not only narrowing and wronging the Text, but rendring God ſo Partial and unjuſt to his Creatures, as to cauſe His Light of Righteouſneſs to ariſe on ſome, without ever viſiting the greateſt Part of Mankind with ſo much as a Day of Salvation; though he ſays, He would not the Death of any, but rather that all ſhould Repent, and come to the Knowledge of the Truth.

There is a Third Sort, that will needs have it underſtood not of any Illumination by a Divine Light, or Spirit, but the Life Chriſt lived, and the Doctrines He Preached, when Viſibly in the World; which neither reacheth the Hundredth Part of Mankind, nor can be conſiſtent with the Nature of that Part of John's Hiſtory, which wholly relates to His Divinity, or what he was before he took Fleſh.

'Tis true, Chriſt was the Light of the World in that very Appearance, and ſhined forth by His Heavenly Doctrine, and Self-Denying Life, a Moſt Holy Example; yet not ſo, as to exclude himſelf from being that Spiritual Light, which ſhineth in the Hearts of the Sons and Daughters of Men. He was full of Grace and Truth, yet of his Grace hath Mankind received, Grace for Grace, which is that Grace of God, that in all Ages hath appeared for Salvation; whoſe Nature and Property is ſo plainly deſcribed, and the Salvation it brings unfolded by the Apoſtle, 2 Tit. 11, 12. viz. Teaching us, that denying Ungodlineſs, and Worldly Luſts, we ſhould Live Godly, Righteouſly and Soberly, in this preſent World. And ſo far is that Univerſal Light and Grace we teſtifie of, from leading us to undervalue Chriſt and the Scriptures, that we cannot but declare to all the World, in Pure Conſcience towards God, and every Moderate Enquirer, that we never had any True Knowledge of God or Chriſt, any Right Senſe of the Work of Converſion upon our Souls, nor any Right Sight or Reliſh of thoſe Heavenly Truths declared in the Scriptures, till we came to know, and be Obedient to, the Manifeſtation of that True Light, which Enlightneth every Man; and the Appearance of That Grace which brings Salvation to our own Souls.

They are ſtanding Truths: That whatſoever may be known of God, is manifeſted in Man; for God hath ſhewed it unto him: That whatſoever is reproved, is made manifeſt by the Light; and that whatſoever doth make manifeſt, is Light, Rom. 1. 19. Epheſ. 5. 13. This cannot be Natural, unleſs of the Divine Nature, which reveals to Men Divine Things. 'Tis rare that we meet with any Adverſary, who denieth it to reprove Evil, and to cheriſh that which is Good. And the Wiſe Man tells us, That the Reproof of Inſtruction is the Way of Life, Prov. 6. 23. If the Light reproves for that which is Evil, and that Reproof Seals up Inſtruction to Life Everlaſting, how dare any call it a Natural Light, common to, yea, a Part of all Men in their Natural Eſtate, eſpecially when the Apoſtle Paul hath ſo long ſince declared, That the Natural Man receiveth not the Things of the Spirit of God; for they are Fooliſhneſs unto him; neither can he know them, becauſe they are Spiritually diſcerned? 1 Cor. 2. 14. Our very Caſe in Defence of the Light Within, againſt the Wiſe Maſter-Builders of the Age.

Nay, ſo far is Man in his Natural Eſtate from being acted and guided by this very Light, which our Enemies call Natural, that Chriſt himſelf ſaith, He hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved: But, on the other Hand, He that doth Truth, cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifeſt that they are wrought in God, John 3. 21. where it is evident, that the very Manifeſtation given, is Divine; much more the Nature of that Light that gives it. Indeed, how is it poſſible for Man to know Chriſt, who is Light, without Light? It was John's Meſſage to Preach, That God is Light, 1 John 1. 5. The ſame Apoſtle teſtifies, That the Blood of Cleanſing is to be found of them that walk in the Light, Ver. 7.

If any object, That this is not that Light wherewith every Man is Enlightned, The ſame Apoſtle in his Hiſtory ſaith, That in the Word was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men, and that very Light was the True Light that lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, 1 John 4. 9. Let ſuch give me as plain a Text againſt either the Sufficiency or Univerſality of the Light, if they can.

It's Properties and Effects prove it Divine, in that, Firſt, It manifeſts God, Rom. 1. 19. Secondly, It manifeſts Evil, Epheſ. 5. 13. Thirdly, It is made the Rule of Walking by the Apoſtle. See then that ye walk circumſpectly, not as Fools, but as Wiſe, ver. 15. Fourthly, It is made the Path to walk in, John 8. 12. 1 John 1. 7. Iſa. 2. 5. Come, let us walk in the Light of the Lord: And the Nations of them that are Saved, ſhall walk in the Light of the Lord, Rev. 21. 23. And ſo ſaith the Scripture of the Spirit of God. Firſt, In that it reproveth for Sin, John 16. 8. Secondly, In that it giveth Underſtanding of the Things of God, Job 32. 8. 1 Cor. 2. 10. Thirdly, That it is a Rule for the Children of God to walk by, Rom. 8. 14. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God. Fourthly, We are alſo to walk in the Spirit, Gal. 5. 16. This I ſay then, walk in the Spirit, and ye ſhall not fulfil the Luſts of the Fleſh: I hope none will deny that this Light, and this Spirit, muſt be of one and the ſame Nature.

But if any ſhall yet object, That this is to be underſtood of a Spiritual Light, and that ours is but a Natural one, I ſhall deſire them to do Two Things, Firſt, To prove that a Natural Light doth manifeſt God, reprove for Evil, and cheriſh that which is Good, ſince whatever is Part of Man in his Degeneration from God, is ſo far from giving one Good Thought, that it cannot rightly reprove an Evil One; and it is granted by our Adverſaries, that what we call Divine, and they call Natural Light, can do both. Secondly, That in Caſe this Light be Natural, and can ſo manifeſt and reprove, that they would aſſign us ſome certain Medium, or Way, whereby we may truly diſcern, and diſtinguiſh, between the Manifeſtations and 1674. Reproofs of the Natural Light, from thoſe of Divine Light, ſince they allow the Manifeſtation of God, and Reproof of Evil, as well to the one as to the other. And I challenge them all to give us one Scripture that diſtinguiſhes between a Natural and Spiritual Light Within, reproving Evil, &c. They may with as much Reaſon talk of a Natural and Spiritual Darkneſs Within: 'Tis true, there is a Natural Darkneſs, to wit, the Night of the outward World; and there is a Spiritual Darkneſs, viz. the miſty and clouded Underſtandings of Men, through Diſobedience to the Light and Spirit of God: Let them aſſign us a third, or rather a ſecond Darkneſs of the Underſtanding in the Things of God, if they can: Chriſt never diſtinguiſhed between Darkneſs and Darkneſs, or Light and Light, in any ſuch Senſe, nor did any of his Diſciples I ever read of; yet both have frequently ſpoken of Darkneſs and Light; what Difference doth the Scripture put, between Spiritual Darkneſs, and Darkneſs mentioned in theſe Places, Luke 1. 79. Math. 4. 16. John 1. 5. Joh. 3. 19. Joh. 8. 12, 35, 46. 1 Theſ. 5. 4. 1 Joh. 1. 6. Acts 26. 18. Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 6, 14. Epheſ. 5. 8. Col. 1. 13. I find none; It is all one Spiritual Darkneſs: Neither is there ſo much as one Scripture that affords us a Diſtinction between Light Within and Light Within, that really are Light; peruſe Math. 4. 16. Luke 2. 32. chap. 16. 8. Joh. 1. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9. chap. 3. 19. 20, 21. chap. 8. 12. Acts 26. 18. Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 6. chap. 6. 14. Epheſ. 5. 8. 13. Col. 1. 12. 1 Theſ. 5. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 9. 1 Joh. 1. 5. 7. chap. 2. 8. Rev. 21. 23, 24. chap. 22. 5. And let the greateſt Enemy to our Aſſertion do his utmoſt to ſever Real Light from Light, or find out Two Lights in theſe Paſſages if he can; if he cannot, he is irrecoverably gone, and that upon his own Conceſſion: For, as he yields to us, that the Light in Controverſie manifeſteth Evil, and reproveth for it; ſo doth Chriſt himſelf teach thus of the Light, John 3. 12. For every one that doth Evil hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved: And the Apoſtle Paul plainly ſaith, Epheſ. 5. 13. But all Things that are reproved, are made manifeſt by the Light; Therefore not Two diſtinct Lights in Kind, but one and the ſame manifeſting, reproving Light: And this the Apoſtle John proves beyond all Exception, to Wiſe and Conſiderate Men; Firſt, In that he calls God Light, c. 1. 5. Secondly, In that he puts no Medium, or Third Thing, between that Light and Darkneſs, ver. 6. If we ſay that we have Fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we lye; intimating, that Men muſt walk either in Light or Darkneſs. I am ſure, that which manifeſts and reproves for Darkneſs, cannot be Darkneſs; And ſo ſay our Adverſaries of our Light. And as if the Apoſtle John would have anticipated their Objection, viz. 'Tis true, your Light within reproves for Evil; but it is not therefore the Divine Light, which leads into higher Things, and which comes by the Goſpel; He thus expreſſeth himſelf, Chap. 2. Darkneſs is paſt, and the True Light now ſhineth. He that ſaith, He is in the Light, and hates his Brother, is in Darkneſs even until now, which is not another Light from God the Light, Chap. 1. For, as Light there is put in Oppoſition to Darkneſs, ſo Light here is put in Oppoſition to Darkneſs: The Darkneſs is one and the ſame, ſo the Light; Wherefore we may plainly ſee, that it is not another Light than that which reproveth a Man for hating his Brother, that brings a Man into Fellowſhip with God, and to the Blood of Cleanſing, as the next Verſe ſpeaks: Therefore that Light which reproveth a Man for hating his Brother, is of a Divine Nature.

In ſhort; That Light which is oppoſite to, and reproves ſpiritual Darkneſs, is a ſpiritual Light: But ſuch a Light is that within, as our Adverſaries themſelves confeſs; therefore Spiritual. It is worth our Notice that the Apoſtle uſeth the ſame Manner of Expreſſion here, Chap. 2. 8. The TRUE Light ſhineth, that he doth in his Hiſtory, Chap. 1. 9.. That was the TRUE Light, intimating the ſame Divine Word or True Light now ſhineth; and that it was that ſame True Light (for there is but one) that reproved ſuch as hated their Brethren; conſequently that Light, that ſo reproveth, is the True Divine Light.

And ſtrange it is that Chriſt and his Diſciples, but eſpecially John, ſhould ſo often make that very Light, which ſtoops to the loweſt Step of Morality, to the Reproof of the groſſeſt Evils, to be no other than the ſame Divine Light, that brings ſuch as follow it to the Light of Life, and thoſe who walk in it to the Blood of Cleanſing, and to have Fellowſhip with God, &c. Nay, not only ſo, but make the very beſt of Man's being a Child of God, to depend upon his anſwering of the Light in a palpable moral Caſe, viz. Not hating of his Brother; And yet that our Adverſaries ſhould ſhut their Eyes from beholding it's Divinity, and conclude it therefore a meer Natural Light; This is both Unreaſonable and Unſcriptural.

But here is the very Ground of their Ignorance and ſlight Apprehenſion of the Light within, They have never known it farther than in the Capacity of a Reprover of Evil, (though that's enough with a conſiderate and tender-ſpirited Man to feel from whence it came) and ſo conclude it unable to give either farther Diſcoveries of God's Will, or Power and Virtue to enable to do it. But to all ſuch as object againſt the Sufficiency of the Light of Chriſt within, either as to it's Knowledge or Power, I ſay, Try it; you are not proper Judges in the Caſe, 'till you have walked in it: If then you meet not with the Blood of Cleanſing, and pure Fellowſhip with God, who is Light, it will be Time enough for you to object. Do not infer from the Diſcovery of ſmall and great Things, two diſtinct Lights, inſtead of two Manifeſtations of one and the ſame Light; ſuch as do the Will of God, ſo far as the Light in the Conſcience enjoins them, ſhall know more of the Doctrine it teacheth all the Children of Light.

However, it hath pleaſed the Man we have now to deal with, to undertake a Refutation of a Book, entituled, a A Teſtimony of the Light within, written about Seventeen Years ſince, by Alexander Parker, a Servant of God in the Work of his Goſpel: But I hope my Reader hath receiv'd that Satiſfaction in what has been already hinted in Defence of the Light of Chriſt within, that he is in a very good Poſture to hear what may be objected againſt it, by one that never yet knew the Power and Efficacy of it. It is the Advantage God hath given us over our Enemies, They fight us Blind-fold, and entangle themſelves in their own Net: With Moderation, Plainneſs and Brevity, I have conſidered his Oppoſition, in Faithfulneſs to God, his Truth, and the Souls of all People.

Urim and Thummim, &c.

SAmuel Grevill, in his Rejoynder to A. Parker, p. 5, brings two Places againſt the Sufficiency of the Light within: The firſt is Deut. 31. 13. That their Children which have not known any thing may hear and learn to fear the Lord your God, as long as ye live in the Land whither ye go over Jordan to poſſeſs it. But this is anſwered without Difficulty; for any thing is not in the Hebrew: And it appears both from the Place it ſelf, and Chap. 11. 2. that thoſe many great and wonderful Works of Deliverance the Lord had wrought for them, and which their Children through Non-age knew not, were only intended; And becauſe the Hearing of them might be a deep Engagement upon their Spirits to fear and worſhip the God of their Fathers, therefore were they to hear of thoſe Noble Acts at the Mouths of their Parents, as the Place ſpeaks. How this Inſtance proves the Inſufficiency of the Shinings of Chriſt's Light in the Conſcience, with Reſpect to their Duty to God and Man in that Day, is left with every Man of Sober Conſcience to judge.

The other is 2 Tim. 3. 15. The Words, Through Faith in Chriſt Jeſus, he omits: The Scriptures, through Faith, are able to make Wiſe, but not without Faith: This doth not prove that therefore Faith cannot make wiſe without the Scriptures; for that was before the Scriptures were written, as in Abraham and others.

To John 16. 2. They thought and apprehended, the Scripture commanded them to do God good Service, when they perſecuted the Saints. Doth this ſet the Scriptures above the true Light, by which only we muſt rightly underſtand them? Not that we would exclude the Scriptures of that Service the Lord has appointed them to, but to maintain the true Light againſt vain Cavils; for God's ſuperadding of Scripture, no more renders the Light Inſufficient, than the Spirit, Grace, yea, God or Chriſt; Man being abroad from the Spirit, and not abiding in the Light, the Lord went forth into outward Means to bring him Home: Is God's Condeſcenſion to Man's Weakneſs a Proof of his Inſufficiency? The Scriptures came from the Light, and teſtify of it, that the Nations of them that are ſaved muſt walk in it; This was the End of the Evangelical Miniſtry. And as for taking true Light from the Scriptures, without true Light within, how abſurd and impoſſible it is, is obvious to all. That Light, that gives to underſtand the right Meaning 1674. of the Scriptures, muſt be true Light; elſe, how can it underſtand right? And how can it be put in us by the Scriptures, when we muſt and do bring it with us to the Scriptures before we read them? Doth the Bible ſend forth a Spirit to read it with? Or doth God ſend it from it? Or doth not he rather illuminate the Soul to underſtand it, as all the Ancient Fathers and Proteſtant Writers held? See what Teſtimony this Man gives for his pretended Light without, againſt the Light within; and after what Rate he diſproves it, to ſatisfy his Neighbour: He manifeſtly ſets the Scripture and the Light within that Harmonize at Variance.

But ſhall the Evil, Envy, Pride, Paſſion, Murder and Darkneſs then in the Jews, Diſcredit, Undervalue, or render Inſufficient the bleſſed Light of the Lord, that at that Time ſhined in them (though their Blindneſs and Darkneſs comprehended it not) Why may I not as well ſay, they had no Scriptures, or that they did all thoſe infamous, hardned Acts againſt Chriſt, by the Scriptures (ſince they thought ſo) as that S. Grevill ſhould infer the one or the other againſt the Light within? Every Man hath Light from the Creating Word, and that is Divine, becauſe the very Life of that Word; and by it, God, who is Light, is only truly known; and while Men hear, obey, and live in the Counſel of it, they walk in the Way of Truth and Path of Life, they feel the Light of Life, and experience the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt to cleanſe them from all Sin.

To his Anſwer about Perfection, viz. That he pleads not for Sin, becauſe he denies perfect Freedom from it, ſince he pleads for Sin, that telleth Men, they may Sin. I ſay, If any hear an Advocate plead that ſuch a Man muſt break the Law as long as he lives, will it not be underſtood, that he pleads for a Toleration of him in the ſame Evils after he hath been pardoned? But if any hear him plead, that the Law-makers ſay the ſame (that is, the Teachers) will they not conclude, that he makes them tolerate Injuſtice, that he blaſphemes and ſlanders them, as the Word ſignifies? yet this is S. G's Caſe in Point of Indulgence of Sin.

To his other Compariſon, p. 6, viz. Who favours a Diſeaſe moſt, He that preſcribes to his Patient to take Antidotes, or He that tells him, He has no Diſeaſe, nor needs to uſe any Means?

I anſwer, He weakens a Man moſt, that perſwades him, That his Diſeaſe is ſo rooted, that it is impoſſible for him to overcome it, yet preſcribes Remedies, and puts the poor Man to Coſt.

Nor doth Chriſt ſay, That all Men muſt offend, and that as long as Heaven and Earth endures; but that one Jot or Tittle from the Law ſhall not paſs, till all be fulfilled: And he that breaks one of the leaſt of theſe Commandments, and teacheth Men ſo, ſhall be called Leaſt in the Kingdom of Heaven, Mat. 5. 19. And if the leaſt be not to be broken, then all ought to be kept.

Becauſe A. P. ſaith, Where God is manifeſt within, he muſt needs be Light; S. G. would make him to conclude, That God, Chriſt and the Spirit are the Light within us. It ſeems he dares not faſten his Conſequences upon the Scriptures, but upon what A. P. alledgeth out of them: And doth not S. G. deny them by Conſequence, as he denies the King that denies the King's Writ, ſince they hold forth that very Doctrine. If to reject Scripture be Erroneous, S. G. cannot be ſound, that makes that Conſequence Matter of Error, which he himſelf acknowledges to be Scriptural: Hear him.

If A. P. intended not, that God and Chriſt are the Light within; to what Purpoſe did he alledge thoſe Scriptures, which ſay, God is Light, and God is in us: Chriſt is Light, and Chriſt is in us? Which, Reader, if I underſtand any Thing, is to allow, that we have Scripture for our Aſſertion, and to give up the Cauſe as far as ever we contended for it, to wit, That God is Light, and Chriſt is Light, and as ſuch, do ſhine or appear in the Hearts of Men, to give them the Knowledge of thoſe Things which concern their Eternal Peace.

But S. G. ſays, If Chriſt were the Light within, the Prophet would not have ſaid, They have no Light in them. That Chriſt is the True Light, John teſtifies, and that he was and is ſuch a Light, as was to enlighten the Gentiles, the Prophet Iſaiah tells us; and that the Nations of them that were ſaved, were to walk in this Light, John the Divine, in his Revelation, aſſures us. Now, unleſs the Soul of Man be not to be lighted with this Light, or that it is not to be underſtood of the Soul, but Body only, that was to walk in the Light of the Church; it will follow, that this Light muſt needs ſhine where the Soul of Man is, which is within; conſequently, that Chriſt is that Light which ſhines within.

Paul, that took Counſel to perſecute Chriſt without, was ſtruck at the Appearing and Shining of Chriſt within; and when it pleaſed God to reveal his Son in him (the true Light that enlightens all Mankind) he conſulted not with Fleſh and Blood, which is their State that reject and vilify his ſpiritual Appearance and Revelation of him in the Soul: But for all their vain Expectations and loud Boaſts, in that State they ſhall never inherit the Kingdom of God; that is God's Word of Truth. As to the Prophet's Words, they are not to be underſtood, as if thoſe wicked Men had no Light from God; but that they rebelling and blinding themſelves againſt it, and following their own Imaginations for Truth, They had no Light in all their Ways; or, as S. G. well ſays, Their conceited Light was Darkneſs; They walked in Darkneſs, and ſo participated or partook not of the Benefit and Bleſſing of the Light; but it ſhined in Darkneſs uncomprehended: There was Light, but it was not riſen upon him, or no Morning riſen in him, as the Words may be rendred: Is there no Sun in the Firmament, becauſe Men that are blind, or ſhut their Eyes, cannot, or will not ſee it? Or, Is a School-Maſter Unlearned or Inſufficient, becauſe any of his Lads play Truant, and neglect his Reproof and Inſtruction? Or, Is it reaſonable for any of us to ſay, that ſuch Scholars have no School-Maſter, becauſe they are idle and regard not their Book, notwithſtanding his daily Checks and Reprehenſions of them? Or, Can they be ſaid to have no Leſſon, becauſe they neglect to get it?

In ſhort, Chriſt is the great Prieſt, Prophet, King, Judge and Law-giver under the New Covenant: He is the Shepherd that daily overlooks and feeds his Flock; and ſuch as know not him ſo revealed in them, to be the very Hope of their Glory, are in a Reprobate Eſtate: And how he ſhould be within, and not be Light, who is the true Light it ſelf, from whom all they that have Divine Light, received it, will lye on S. G's Part to ſhew. And ſo far are we from leſſening the Scriptures thereby, That they are they which teſtify of Chriſt to be the true Light that enlightens all: And with their Holy Record have we great Unity, and our Souls bleſs God for them, and the Benefit we have received, and yet do, in reading of them, through the Revelation of his Holy Spirit, without which they are but a ſealed Book; as well ſaid Learned Biſhop Jewel againſt Harding, p. 532, 534.

Acts 14, 15. 17.

In Page 7, he would ſet theſe as Contraries, Great Light and No Light, as without a Medium; and ſo argues, Becauſe Great Light was before deny'd to the Epheſians, c. 2. 12. therefore they had no Light, and ſo make as if God had left himſelf without a Witneſs amongſt them, which is a worſe State than the Lycaonians, who had a Senſe of his Wiſdom, Power and Goodneſs from his viſible Works, which outward Witneſs had been Inſufficient, without an * inward Witneſs to join with it, and evidence it more cloſely unto them. No better Succeſs had the Preaching of the Goſpel had among the Epheſians without it, which becauſe their Light in Time of their Ignorance of thoſe Things, which then in due Time God revealed unto them in a greater Meaſure, did not teach (it being too high for their State) Therefore by his Conſequence they had none, nor any before that Time: For the † Myſtery was hid from Ages and Generations, that then was made manifeſt to his Saints; for if they had, as he ſeems to reaſon, it would have taught them Baptiſm, Supper, &c. Nay farther, as he argues, All the Opinions that the Epiſcopalians and Preſbyterians hold, Common Prayer or Directory, whether you will; and not only to Thou and Thee Magiſtrates, as they did always, but to ſtir up People for them or againſt them, as ſerves their own Intereſt.

Col. 1. 26. Eph. 2. 7. & 3. 5.

So Tryphon asked J. Martyr, as I remember, why Chriſt came no ſooner.

It is true indeed, an Outward Literal Knowledge of theſe Things, by the Help of Literature, as Men now have them, the Jews and Gentiles had not; for they were not written, as they are now, with Ink, but with the Spirit in the Heart, and they reſiſting that, could not know him * outwardly, becauſe (though they

* Paul teaches, that whatever is reproved, is made manifeſt by the Light Epheſ. 5. 13. And whatever may be known of God, is manifeſted in Man, Rom. 1. 19. And that which manifeſts is Light, as ſaith the ſame Apoſtle, Epheſ. 5. 13. And he deſired to be made manifeſt to the Conſcience. Then there was Light; for Men were reproved, Rom. 2. 15. and they could not be reproved without it, Epheſ. 5. 13.

† Was not that Myſtery the great Work of Redemption? And were not Thouſands redeemed before? If it was hid, it was to ſuch as had loſt it by Rebellion. It was the ſame Light, not the ſame Degree that ever ſaved.

* This proves not they had no Light; at moſt, it only ſhews to us, that it did not ſhine ſo clearly forth, which ſtill implies, that it was the ſame in Nature. How could thoſe in Job rebel againſt the Light, knew the Words and Sentences, yet) they knew not the Voices and Senſes of the Prophets, but look'd for a Conqueror like David; as the Gentiles, like Jupiter, &c. And why may not Men now, with their Light he ſpeaks of, miſtake the Scriptures of the New, as they then did of the Old Teſtament, as he ſaith, the Quakers may do with theirs; unleſs he can prove, that his Light is the true one, becauſe he ſays it is Natural Reaſon, and the Quakers falſe, becauſe they maintain it to be of the Divine Nature, Word, Reaſon or Wiſdom, that was in the Beginning with God, and was and is God, as ſay ſeveral Fathers in our Defence: For Chriſt that lightens every one that comes into the World, is call'd λόγος, the Word or Reaſon of God, who as Irenæus ſaith, Rationabiliter & ſenſibiliter Legem ſtatuit, (John 1. 9. Prov. 8. 4.31. Iren. l. 5. c. 18.) eſtabliſhed the Law reaſonably and ſenſibly. And Ardentius interprets λόγον, in Iren. Verbum, Sermo, Ratio, Word or Reaſon. And ſaith Irenæus, p. 326. Man, being made reaſonable, loſt Reaſon, and living unreaſonably, gave himſelf over to the Earthly Spirit, Pſal. 48. 21. (Juſtin Martyr Apol. pro Chriſtianis, p. 51.) And Juſtin Martyr ſaith, that Chriſt was πᾶς λόγος, whole Reaſon, as his Interpreter Langius renders it; and that which the Philoſophers and Poets conformed to, was σπερματικοῦ λόγου μέρος μετουσία, a Part or Partaking of the Reaſon that was ſown; and he ſaith, The Seed of the Word or Reaſon is ſown or ingrafted in all kind of Men, p. 46. (Origen Commen. on Rom. 2. 14. p. 428.) And Origen, his Author, uſeth almoſt the ſame Words, The Law ſown in the Soul by common Notions, and the Word written in the Heart. And Juſtin, in the Place quoted, makes ἔννοια and λόγος, common Notion, and Word or Reaſon, and Νοῦς, or Mind, Synonymous, or of the ſame Signification, as Origen and Irenæus do; Almoſt the very Words of ſome of the Ancient Philoſophers; For Plotin calls it a Divine Principle, that makes the good Man, which ſays he, is the Root of the Soul. (Stan. Vit. Philoſop.) And Cleanthes, The Eternal Nature, ſown and diffuſed through the Race of Man, and is the moſt ſure and infallible Guide, Hieron calls it a Domeſtick God; Seneca diffuſed Reaſon; Epictetus, God within; Plutarch, a living Rule, interior Guide, and Everlaſting Foundation of Virtue; Philo, The Immortal Law, engraven on the Minds of Men, no lifeleſs Precepts written on Paper, &c. (Urſin & Paræus Queſt. 9.) Nor do Modern Writers much, if at all, vary: David Paræus, another of his Authors, ſaith, in Urſin's Body of Chriſtian Doctrine, augmented, corrected and conſummated by him, Queſt. 6. The Image of God contains all the Natural Notions of God, of his Will and Works, that is, perfect Wiſdom in the Mind, perfect Righteouſneſs and Holineſs in the Heart, and all outward Actions. Perfect Wiſdom is here ſaid, ſaith he, not that which is ignorant of nothing; but that which is competent to a created Nature ſufficient to it's Felicity: So there is an Homonymy or double Signification of the Word Perfect. (Queſt. 92.) And in Queſt. 92, he ſaith, We were created, redeemed, and ſanctified to this End, that we ſhould KEEP THE LAW MORAL AND NATURAL, BEING THE SAME IN THIS LIFE AND THE ETERNAL, IT NOT BEING ABROGATED AS TO OBEDIENCE. Now theſe Men, as Irenæus ſaid of the Poets and Philoſophers, Every one ſeeing that which was connatural, from Part of the Divine-ſown Reaſon, ſpoke excellently and where right, and conſiſtent with themſelves, they are ours; ſo far Irenæus. And the Reader may take theſe quoted, better from us, than S. G's, from him, upon meer Truſt.

Some Ancient Fathers and Proteſtant Writers expound the Word Nature as I do, ſays S. Grevill, if you will truſt him: I ſay the like of my Expoſition, and have already quoted them, and told him how far I credit them; and therefore in Pag. 8. he wrongs the Quakers; for they would not cite them if they gave no Credit to them, as he would have People to believe, as Paul would not have quoted the Greek Poet, if he had not believed that to be Truth that he ſaid concerning God, (Acts 17. 27.) That we are his Off-ſpring; which he brought to prove, that he is not far from every one. (Grot. on that Place.) On which Place Grotius cites, for the Eſſential Preſence of God, as he terms it, ſeveral Heathens, Jews and Chriſtians, no fewer than Ten: I ſhall inſtance but in one. Minutius Felix, who ſays, God is every where, not only very near us, but infuſed; which becauſe *A. And ſo not only many primitive and latter Chriſtian Doctors, but alſo many others, that deny the rational Soul to be ex traduce, or by Generation, but infuſed, to be as great Blaſphemers, as he would make the Quakers. And if he can produce neither Scripture (as I am ſure he cannot) nor ancient nor modern Writers, for his Gift of the Spirit that comes by Generation, He muſt be the Author of that new Doctrine: A Gift or Grace is not one's Self, nor a Part of one's Self, nor one's own originally; but another's, freely conferred; χαρισθέντα, Graces or Things freely given.

He ſays, To do as we would be done to, is ſown in our Natures; then the Seed of the Law and the Prophets contain'd what more eminently appeared, and was extended in the Goſpel, even to the Love of Enemies, with the Reaſon of it; for if you love them that love you, &c. which the Gentiles had in them in Effect, tho' not in Letters. And D. Paræus ſaith, In the State of Sin, a Man is not apt to do or think any Good of himſelf according to the Scriptures, Epheſ. 2. 9. and 2 Cor. 3. 5. &c. Then neither the Law, nor the Work of the Law, was of themſelves, elſe how could they condemn them that had the Law, and tranſgreſſed it. And the Scripture ſaith, That which may be known of God is manifeſt in Men; for God hath ſhewed it to them; and God hath ſhewed unto thee, O Man! what is good, &c. Mic. 6. 8. which S. G. denies, calling it a Special Preſence; from what Ground, he ſhews not, nor can he; for the Manifeſtation is common and univerſal, the Words therefore prove it; conſequently, there is a common Preſence; and indeed a ſpecial Manifeſtation implies a Common.

He cavils about the Word Perfect, diſtinguiſhed before out of Paræus, and tells of Darkneſs dwelling with Light, and Ignorance with Knowledge; I know not for what, unleſs it be to confeſs to us, That his Knowledge is not without Ignorance: But it ſeems he is afraid, leſt his Kingdom of Darkneſs, Ignorance and Sin, ſhould be deſtroy'd; therefore proceeds to write againſt a Freedom from Sin in this Life, and to oppoſe the Expoſitions of the Fathers and Proteſtant Doctors (which it ſeems are of leſs Credit with him than the Quakers) that hold, That the Doctrine in Chriſt's Sermon, tends to a Righteouſneſs beyond that of the Law, charging them, as if they meant, that Chriſt ſet up a Righteouſneſs or a Law, above his own Perfect, Everlaſting, Spiritual Law, which ſome call Natural and Moral; “ The ſame in “ Nature, ſaith Origen, Entire, agreeing with the Eternal and Immoveable Rule “ of Righteouſneſs in God, abiding the ſame from the Beginning to the End “ of the World; and therefore were we Redeemed and Regenerated by the Holy “ Ghoſt, that we ſhould keep this Law in this, and the Life Eternal, that is, Love “ God and our Neighbour with all our Heart, not a New Doctrine, but the Old, “ which was from the Beginning: Which Law Natural, Noah and Abraham kept “ (ſaith Tertullian) and were Juſtified in it. And farther, In this Primordial and “ General Law of God given to Adam, were all the Precepts of the latter Law gi“ ven forth in their Seaſons; for, What Wonder, if he increaſe the Diſcipline “ who Inſtituted it? And God at a certain Seaſon exhibited a ſubſequent Law to “ the Gentiles; and that which was promiſed again by the Prophets, Reformed “ to the Better, that it ſhould be kept.

Theſe are their Words, which ſhew what Law was meant; namely, the Law of Moſes, which was added becauſe of Tranſgreſſion, till the Seed ſhould come; before which Time, many Things were winked at, and ſuffered, becauſe of the Hardneſs of their Hearts, that from the Beginning were not ſo, which Chriſt brings to, that He might recover all that was Loſt, and ſo give Power by His Spirit, to them that walk after it, that his Law might be fulfilled in them, in the Everlaſting Righteouſneſs of it, the very End of his Coming, “ The Law being obſcured by “ the Fall, much obliterated and loſt, leſt the Relicks in the Minds of Men might “ be thought to be an Opinion, GOD Prepared It, ſaith Urſin; which they that “ walked after the Fleſh could not keep, and the Knowledge of it did only condemn “ them, and in that Manifeſtation and Capacity might be ſaid to be Weak, and all “ thoſe Rites and Sacrifices added, ever unable to purifie the Conſcience: But they “ that Love Him, keep His Commandments, and they are not Grievous. So that it was the Relicks of the Law Natural repeated in the Decalogue, that Chriſt (as they ſay) came to ſet up a Righteouſneſs beyond; and not only to repeat and confirm the Relicks, but reſtore the Whole in due Seaſon, and bring on the Perfection, to be Merciful (as ſaith Calvin himſelf) and Love Enemies, “ Beyond which Remigius ſaith (as *S. But S. G. pag. 10. having taken away their Diſtinctions, by his Diſtinctions of the Moral Law, comprehending all Ceremonies, &c. relating to the Old Teſtament and New, under the Name of Parker, he tacitly chargeth not only Remigius and Calvin, but alſo Chryſoſtom, and many other Fathers and Doctors quoted, to be of the ſame Mind with the Scribes and Phariſees, in their Narrow Interpretations of the Law in ſome particular Precepts of it; for this he flings on A. P. for ſaying but the ſame Things; whiſe indeed it is to be feared that S. G. is one of thoſe who reſt ſatisfied with a Partial and Outward Obſervation of Things, making void, or at leaſt, declining the Weightier Matters of the Law, ſince he ſuggeſts, that an Endeavour is enough without keeping them.

But of the Difference of the Times and States under the Law and Goſpel, in Manifeſtation and Power, he ſays nothing, whatever he knows; for that would croſs his Intereſt grounded on this Kingdom of Sin, in putting an entire End to it: But how can he without Hypocriſie, ſay in the Lord's Prayer, Thy Kingdom come, Thy Will be done in Earth as it is in Heaven; whilſt he is ſo far from believing it, and promoting it, that he ſets himſelf to oppoſe it, and diſpute againſt it? And how can the doing of God's Will in Earth, as it is in Heaven, ſtand with Praying for Forgiveneſs of Sins all their Life long? What doth this but over-turn the whole Condition of the Goſpel: Unleſs thou takeſt up my Croſs, and follow me, thou canſt not be my Diſciple?

He is not (I perceive) for being Baptized with the Baptiſm Chriſt was Baptized with; nor for Drinking of that Bitter Cup he drank of; He is rather for huſhing himſelf and others aſleep in this pernicious Hope, That Chriſt hath taken up the Croſs, been Baptized, and drank that Bitter Cup for them, and ſo they need not do it over again; otherwiſe he would not dare to hold and maintain ſuch a Continuance of Imperfection as he doth. He is not of the Apoſtle's Mind, that prayed for a Sanctification of the then Believers, not in Part, but throughout, in Body, Soul and Spirit. God will bring down this Kingdom, and it ſhakes already.

Pag. 11.

Pag. 11. As to his Reconciliation with God in his Continuation in Sin, they are inconſiſtent, conſidered in the ſame Degree: So that we may truly ſay, Whilſt there is no Separation from Sin, there is no Reconciliation with God; but if there be Separation from Sin in ſome Meaſure, there is Reconciliation with God in ſome Meaſure: As Separated, ſo Reconciled; perfectly Separated, perfectly Reconciled: As we ſee in Natural Things, ſo full of Air, ſo empty of all elſe.

But he makes A. P. to ſay, Till a Man be perfectly Separated from Sin, he is altogether out of Reconciliation with God; but proves it not, nor indeed is ſuch Doctrine proveable out of his Book.

Whereas he ſays, God's Commandments do not ſhew Man's Power: If he mean the Power that is given of God to Man, it is falſe; for that were to make God Unjuſt, and an Hard Maſter; for, where-ever God commands, it follows, that He hath given Power to do: And where He is not obeyed, it is a Sign that that Power is withſtood, loſt, or taken away, and Man hardened through Diſobedience. And without that Principle of Faith and Love, by a meer Performance of Outward Obſervations, to think that a Man may be Juſtified, which only fulfills the Law, is as impoſſible and abſurd, as if a Man ſhould think one ſhould rather live by Virtue of Outward Raiment or Apparel, than by Bread and Subſtantial Nouriſhment. God gave ſuch a Meaſure of His Spirit to the Iſraelites, that if they had loved and followed it, and not been ſtiff-necked, they might have continued in the Obedience to all Things that were written in the Book of the Law to do them, (unleſs God commanded Impoſſibilities) and in that Way that they were commanded them, to wit, to ſeparate them from the Heathen: And they, if they had been thankful, and glorified God by their Obedience to what they knew of Him, had not been given up to a Reprobate Senſe; and if they had followed the Goodneſs of God, leading to Repentance from Time to Time, and had not had an impenitent Heart, they had received according to their Deeds, Glory, Honour, and Peace; for if it be given to the Good Gentile, then ſurely to the Good Jew. And if the Jews in Chriſt's Day had not brought forth Wild Grapes, and been like their Fore-Fathers, that rebell'd againſt God's Good Spirit (under Pretence of magnifying the Scriptures, and contending for the Faith of their Fathers) they had not been blinded like them, nor the Vineyard taken from them, nor theirs laid Waſte.

To his Sinning, through always needing more Grace; He that is capable of receiving more, and refuſeth and reſiſteth it, ſinneth; but to uſe his own Similitude, A Little One (as Chriſt calls ſome of His) that hath but a Little Heart, yet if he give it all to God, he can do no more, he ſinneth not, but fulfills the Law.

The Hebrews were chid becauſe they had not improved their Time; which if they had done, they had not ſinned. Peter and the Reſt of the Apoſtles, were in that Manner of Speech taught and inſtructed, of the Power and Efficacy of Faith in it's Extent, which they ſhould receive after they were endued with Power from on High, which they were commanded to wait for, that had they neglected, they had ſinned; and to expect it before the Time (as for a Child to aſpire to the Things of a Man) is the Part of much Heat and Confidence, and is Good to be diſcountenanced ſometimes, though not always to be diſliked. Not to be at preſent what they are exhorted to be for the future, to make that Tranſgreſſion, is to ſet Tranſgreſſion in Order of Time before the Law; whereas, where there is no Law, there is no Tranſgreſſion; for Sin is the Tranſgreſſion of the Law that is known: To him that knoweth to do Good, and doth it not, to him it is Sin; but in the Time of Ignorance God winks.

The Corinthians were exhorted to be in Underſtanding Perfect, as the Word τέλειοι ſignifies: To accuſe them of Imperfection, and ſo of Sin, becauſe then Children, and in their Minority (though Born of God in John's Senſe) were to accuſe not only the Saints departed, but all the Angels, of Sin, becauſe they have not attained to that Meaſure of Wiſdom that God is, upon his Principle; for his Argument implies as if there were no End of needing of Grace. I wonder he has forgotten his School-Diſtinction of a quo & ad quem, for Men may be Perfect from Sin, and not perfectly grown up to the Wiſdom and Knowledge of all the Weighty Myſteries of the Goſpel.

Ignatius Epiſt. to the Epheſians, ſaith, He that poſſeſſeth the Word of JESUS, can truly hear alſo his Silence, that he may be Perfect, pag. 26.

For his Notion of Sanctification and Purification, I ſay, Where the Conſcience is not defiled, it is purified; and Men are Sanctified, or dedicated to God by the Truth, and the Belief and Obedience of it, and there is no Sinning; elſe, how can they be Temples and Tabernacles for God to dwell and be Worſhipt in?

For the Place he brings that Men muſt Sin becauſe they are Men, he might better have given that Reaſon for the Devil's Sinning, becauſe he is a Devil; for Sinning is not Man's State, as Man, though in joyning with the Devil he may Sin, as the Word יחטא ſignifies, being Potential; and ſo Paginus renders it by Peccet; but he makes uſe of a bad Tranſlation, His Holy Ghoſt, as his Words imply, to countenance his bad Concluſion, That becauſe they may Sin, therefore they muſt Sin. See more in Dr. Gell's Eſſay to the Tranſlation of the Bible, pag. 762, 768, 772.

And becauſe the Pſalmiſt, Pſal. 130, being in the Deep by Reaſon of Iniquity, prayed for Forgiveneſs, ver. 3. 4. And becauſe the Apoſtle James ſaith, In many Things we Sin all, he concludes, that not only David, but the Apoſtles too, in their beſt Condition, even to their Death, did ſin; and that James was a Curſer to his Death, becauſe he ſaid, With the Tongue Curſe we Men, taking Advantage of theſe Holy Men, to make them Offenders for their Words: But what Good Man will believe him? No Wonder if he traduce the Quakers, and pervert their Words, when he is one of them that David ſpeaks of, that wreſt his Words, and imagine Evil of him. And for any Thing we know (for we cannot take his Words without Quotation) he may as much wrong, or wreſt thoſe Paſſages out of Origen, Theophylact, Chryſoſtom, Ambroſe, and the Proteſtant Writers, that he ſays he has read, about Death's deſtroying of Sin, which is for Deſtruction it ſelf; In my Mind the Devil may more fitly be ſaid to correct it: For if they that are Dead have ceaſed from Sin, then the Damned ſhall not Blaſpheme God, or elſe their Blaſphemy is not Sin; which Proteſtant Writers ſay not, nor the Fathers ever taught.

Grotius on the Place. 1 Pet. 4. 1. Zegerus on the Place. But Grotius a Famous Proteſtant Writer, interprets it thus: That as the Dead return not to their former Life, ſo neither He that is truly Dead to Sin, ought to return to his former Life again. And Zegerus, another, ſaith, That is, being looſed and freed from Sinning, ſo that he may not ſin, unleſs he will. But this Man would have it, as if Paul meant, that Bodily Death took away the Poſſibility of Sinning, and Life the Poſſibility of not Sinning. However, he acknowledges, that by the Death of the Body of Sin, is meant, the Separation of Sin from Man, and being freed from Sin, and ceaſed from Sinning; yet ſays, that in Rom. 6. there is not a Word to dehort them not to ſuffer any Sin to be in them: But how can a Man let Sin be in him, and he not Sin? For it is not a Sin to be tempted, but to enter into the Temptation: He that ceaſes from ſinning, ceaſes from Sin; and whenſoever any yields to obey Sin, then he is the Servant of Sin: Can any Man commit a Sin, but he is captivated under the Power of it? And therefore in that Condition Paul cryed out, as a Diſtreſſed Captive, for Deliverance from the Body of Death, not from the Natural Body; for, before that was diſſolved, he ſaid, I have finiſhed my Courſe, I have kept the Faith; that is, He had endured to the End, and arrived at Perfection. Eraſmus ſaith, It was in the Perſon of another, which the Apoſtle ſpoke in Rom. 7. And Grotius on the ſame Place, will not have it Paul's Condition when he wrote the Epiſtle to the Romans. It is to be noted, ſays he, that Paul ſpeaks in the Firſt Perſon, not that he deals concerning himſelf, but for Modeſty's Sake, he had rather ſo expreſs odious Things, which he calls to tranſfer in a Figure, 1 Cor, 4. 6. ſo in 1 Cor: 6. 12, 15. chap. 10. 29, 30. chap. 13. 2. Gal. 2. 18. Chryſoſtom ad 1 Cor. 12. ſays, He takes heavy Things on his own Perſon. Hieron ad Daniel, Becauſe he is one of the People, he reckons their Sins in his own Perſon, which alſo we read, the Apoſtle did in the Epiſtle to the Romans. But this Man interpreting it, the Death of the Body, inſtead of the Body of Death, firſt gives a Reaſon, why Sin muſt be deſtroyed by the Death of the Body, namely, becauſe it entred by the Conjunction and Union of the Soul with the Body; but that he proves not, and it were to diſprove himſelf in Pag. 8. For there he ſaith, The Light is Reaſon, wherewith God hath endued Man's Soul, and is a Natural Gift, that comes by Generation: How then, ſay I, is it conjoyned and united to it, if it be generated with it? For ſo 'tis one with it. Are there two Generations, one of the Body, and another of the Soul; one with Sin, and another without it; and the latter united to the former, that it may receive Sin, and ſay, A Body haſt thou prepared me, O God, to do, not thy Will on Earth, as it is in Heaven, but the Will of the Devil, that at my firſt Entrance into it, and during my Continuance in it, I may always do thy Enemy ſome Service, who muſt have a Place allowed him in it as long as it lives? Is not this Blaſphemous, and contrary to the Scriptures, which ſays, He that defiles the Temple of God, him will God deſtroy.

I would fain know of S. G. how the Man of Sin got entrance to defile this Temple, if it was not through the Mind, by entring that with his Temptation, of becoming as God, knowing Good and Evil, which was ſome time after that God had breathed into Man the Breath of Life. If he ſays, it was, as inevitably he muſt, then will it follow, that Sin came not by Conjunction of Soul and Body, as he teaches, but after that Conjunction; and ſo his Reaſon for Death's deſtroying of Sin, which implies the Neceſſity of ſinning till Men dye, is quite overturned. Beſides, how can an Houſe of Clay, a lifeleſs Lump of Earth, be capable of Pollution any ways, but by him or them, that inhabit or enter it, as becoming his or their Organ, Inſtrument or Habitation?

Again, S. G. to prove that Death deſtroys Sin, brings Rom. 7. 24. as in the common Tranſlation, This Body of Death; whereas the Greek has it ἐκ τοῦ σώματος τοῦ θανάτου τούτου, who ſhall deliver me from the Body of this Death, which conſidered with the Context, ſhews it to be metaphorically and ſpiritually intended, which agrees with Ambroſe's Interpretation, produced by Zegerus on that Place, and which he approves (viz.) all Sins: J. Capellus ſays, It is the Maſs of Sin, not the Maſs of the viſible Body. And Druſius ſays, ſome do underſtand it turbam malorum, a Multitude of Evils. And as for Chryſoſtom, Theodoret and all thoſe Proteſtant Writers he has read (who knows who or where) you may either believe him upon truſt, or read all their Books, till you find his Interpretation; for particular Citation he affordeth us not.

Zegerus on Rom. 7. 24. I. Capellus and Druſius on Rom. 7. 24.

But he asks, how A. P. will prove that the Body of Sin is the ſame with the Law of Sin? A Thing eaſily done after his way of proving Things; for Grotius ſaith, ‘That the Law of the Members is the ſtrong Affections of the Fleſh, and the Law of Sin the Vehemency of Affections ariſing from the Fleſh, and the Body of Sin, ch. 6. 6. A Conjunction of many Members, that is Vices, Col. 3. 5. And indeed, the Scripture mentioned ſhews that one and the ſame Thing is intended: And it is but reaſonable for any to believe, that the Body of Sin gives Law to them that are under the Power of it.

Grotius on Rom. 7. 23, 24.

Ibid. on Rom. 6. 6.

But S. G. from Gal. 5. 17. where 'tis tranſlated, The Spirit luſteth againſt the Fleſh, ſo that ye cannot do the Things ye would, ſeems thus to infer, that therefore Men muſt of Neceſſity fulfil the Luſts of the Fleſh, and cannot do otherwiſe: Whereas it ſhould be tranſlated, ſo that ye may not do the Things that ye would; which is thus interpreted by D. Gell, That the Spirit hinders them that they may not do the Will of the Fleſh.

See D. Gell's Eſſay, ſerm. 19. p. 775. pag. 15.

But ſays S. G. Paul ſaith not, Rom. 6. 14. No Sin ſhall be in you, but Sin ſhall not have Dominion over you. I anſwer, Nor doth he ſay, that Sin ſhould be in them, and ſerve them: Where Men ſin, Sin hath Dominion. But tell me, S. G. Is not the ſtrong Man to be caſt forth, Sin taken away, and the Devil's Works deſtroyed?

Mat. 12. 26, 27, 28, 29. Luke 11.

Again, ſaith S. G. Fleſh is the Root of Evil Affections and Luſts. But if that Doctrine be true, ſay I, then God in giving Men Bodies of Fleſh is the Author of the Root of Evil Affections and Luſts; conſequently the Life of them is not a Bleſſing but a Curſe.

John 3. 5, 6.

Farther, S. G. tells us, That the legal keeping of God's Commandments, is an univerſal and perpetual keeping of them; but the Evangelical is not ſo, but an Aim and Endeavour: Which if I underſtand any Thing, is to make God in theſe New Covenant Times, to indulge in Man a ſlacking of Obedience to his Righteous Law. At this rate Chriſt came not that we ſhould fulfil the Law, but only that we ſhould endeavour it: Strange Goſpel! Are Men under a leſs Obligation to Holineſs, now they have more plentiful Aſſiſtances to compaſs it? Is this the Way to finiſh Sin, reſtore Man's Nature, and cloath it with Everlaſting Righteouſneſs? which is ſo far from deterring Man from not obſerving God's Law inviolably, that he teaches, that an Endeavour to keep it, without exactly keeping it, is the Priviledge and Obedience of the Goſpel.

Whether this Man writes like a Goſpel-Miniſter, or Servant of the God of this World, let the Conſcientious Reader judge. But he was not always of this Mind; for in pag. 10. he ſeems to plead for the higheſt and moſt exact Obedience, not only to the Law, as underſtood by the Jews in point of Moral Righteouſneſs, but as Chriſt wound it up to an higher Degree of Righteouſneſs. But let us hear what Bp. Sanderſon ſaith, in this Matter, a Man venerable I ſuppoſe, in S. G's Account.

‘The Precepts of Chriſt in the new Law, as the Holy Fathers of the Church every where witneſs, are much more excellent as to ſome Things, than the Precepts of Moſes in the Old Law; not only in reſpect that they are propounded more fully, clearly and plainly; but alſo, inaſmuch as they riſe higher, and call up Chriſtians to a more eminent Degree of Perfection, and that with more efficacious Allurements; namely, on the one Hand propounding the Example of Chriſt paſt; and on the other, the moſt ample Reward of the Kingdom of Heaven for the future. As in thoſe two great Duties of Chriſtian-Life moſtly appears, of loving Enemies, and taking up the Croſs, commanded in the new Law. And they are Commands univerſally obligatory; to the Obſervation whereof, all that profeſs the Faith and Name of Chriſt, are bound under Crime of moſt grievous Sin (namely, of denying Chriſt) and Penalty of Eternal Damnation, unleſs they repent. And he himſelf brings in P. Andrews thus, That a Man moved by God's Spirit, out of Love to God, may be ſaid to fulfil the Law. So that here are two Biſhops advancing Evangelical Obedience above that of the Law, in Point of Strictneſs and Purity, againſt this Man's libertine Undervalue, and dangerous Diminution of it.

B. R. Sand de conſc. reg. Prel. 4. Sect. 34. his Oxf. lect.

But this Adverſary thinks he ſays a great deal againſt us, in telling People, That it is an Error to think, that any can be ſaved partly by their own Righteouſneſs.

And

1674. And alas! whoever ſaid it was not, that is rightly called a Quaker? We know better; and that it is by Grace we are ſaved; yet ſo, As that we muſt be thereby taught to deny Ungodlineſs and Worldly Luſts, and to live Soberly, Righteouſly, and Godlily in this preſent World, which is not our own Righteouſneſs, but the Righ- Tit. 2. 11,12. teouſneſs of God's Grace, that is all-ſufficient for ſo great Salvation: And another 2 Cor. 12. 9. Sort of Salvation, than that which comes by and in the Way of this Grace, is a Satanical Deluſion, ſuited to the corrupt Minds of Men, that would be ſaved from Wrath, the Wages, but be indulged in Sin, the Work. However, 'tis plain by the Verſes foregoing, That the Law there ſpoken of, is the Ceremonial Law, which not only they, but other Churches in thoſe Times had, and made ſome Scruple of relinquiſhing, as may appear in his Epiſtles all along, wherein he dehorts them from any ſuch Obſervation, which they inclined to, even upon an Opinion of Neceſſity; And which the ſaid Bp. S. from Gal. 5. 2. obſerves, not only to be Ibib. §. 29. dead, but deadly, after Auguſtin's Diſtinction. But that Chriſtians are held to the Law moral, not as given by Moſes; but as declarative of the Law Natural, which before he had called Divine; He, the ſaid Bp. Sand. doth with others agree, which §. 31. as Bp. Andrews well ſays, muſt be fulfilled with the Motion and Power of the Spirit of Chriſt, who was ſent, that the Righteouſneſs of the Law might be fulfilled in us, by walking after the Spirit, whereas, the Fleſh is weak, or a Man in his fleſh- Rom. 8. 3. ly State being weakned, cannot perform it. Bp. Sanderſon ſaith farther, B. San. ibid. §. 32. John 15. 22. 'The new 'Law, that is the Goſpel, binds all to whom it is preached to the Obedience, both of 'Faith and Life: To believe in Chriſt as a Redeemer, and obey him as Law-Giver, 'both which, unleſs they do, for their Duty neglected they ſhall ſuffer Everlaſting 'Puniſhment.

S. Grevil expounds 1 John 3. 9. Whoſoever is born of God, he cannot Sin, that is, He cannot make a Trade of it, from J. Leigh.

Anſw. H. Grotius, a Man, worthily of greater Authority, calls that a pernicious Grotius on 1 John. 19. A direct Knock to S. G. 'Expoſition, whereby, ſays he, they infer, that a Study and Endeavour to live well 'ſuffices for one to be accounted a Son of God, although the Things be not fulfilled, 'the Cuſtom of Sin prevailing; and he brings Tertullian in his Book, De Pudicitiâ, ſaying thus of Sin and Sinners 'He that is born of God, will not at all commit theſe, Mat. 7. 18. and ſhall not be a Son of God if he ſhall commit them: So a good Tree cannot bring 'forth evil Fruit; but it may become barren, rotten, vicious, and after it is ſo de- 'generated, it may be cut down; alſo an evil Tree may become good, and then 'conſequently no more an evil Tree. And likewiſe Chryſoſtom on Rom. 8. hath the ſame Compariſon. And Jerom Didymus's Diſciple, l. 1. adv. Pel. ſaith, 'He 'that is born of God, ſins not, as long as the Seed of God abides in him, vid. lively. And on Matt. 7. 'A Good Tree cannot bring forth Evil Fruit, as long as it per- 'ſeveres in the Study of Goodneſs.

But, S. Grevil ſaith, He hopes Parker will not ſay, God gives his People the Enjoyment of Heaven in this Life.

I anſwer, Biſh. Hall ſaith it, and entituleth his Book, Heaven upon Earth, acknowledging the ſame in Nature, though not in Degree: How ignorant is this Man of Heb. 6. 5. Scripture, or forgetful? Doth not Paul in the Epiſtle to the Hebrews (ſuppoſing he wrote it) ſpeak of ſome that may have taſted of the Powers of the World to come, and may fall from that Taſte?

But what means he by his always needing more and more Grace? If a Man be filled, he needs no more. And a Man needs no more in this State, than what he is capable of in this State. And for his Part, it ſeems he needs no more; for he hath more than he uſeth, though there is great need he ſhould make more uſe of what he has. S. Grevil ſcoffingly comparing the Quakers Speakers with Paul, ſays, If they could give that which they think is the Spirit, they would make more Quakers; as much as to ſay, if Paul could have given the Spirit, more of his Hearers ſhould have had the Spirit; and conſequently, he was not a Miniſter of the Spirit in that 2. Tim. 1. 6. Senſe; as as if it had been Paul's Fault: But was not the Holy Ghoſt given by Paul's Hands? Acts 19. When he had laid his Hands upon them, the Holy Ghoſt came upon them, and they ſpake with Tongues and propheſied, What Gift was that Timothy receiv'd by the laying on of his Hands, called, the Gift of God? It plainly appears, that God by the Miniſtry of Paul did give the Spirit to ſeveral; and Gal. 3. 5. was he not at that Time a Miniſter of the Spirit? Was not he that miniſtred the Spirit to the Galatians, a Miniſter of the Spirit himſelf? It muſt follow undeniably; many Thouſands were by his Miniſtry turn'd from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan to the Power of God, to walk in the Spirit with God. And for all S. G's unworthy Taunts; whether thoſe that are now called forth, as they were, not by Men, nor of Men, to wit, the Quakers Speakers, as he is pleaſed to call them; or thoſe that are made, called and upheld by Men, to miniſter the Letter, Writings or Declaration of the Goſpel, after their own Imaginations, as S. Grevil and his Fraternity not unlike the falſe Prophets of old Time (which he calls, but falſely, the Doctrine whereby the Spirit is conveyed) do awaken more Conſciences, and turn more to walk in the Spirit, to bring forth the Holy Fruits of the Spirit: Let the Fruits, that are brought forth in the World under both their Miniſtries, ſpeak.

To prove that the Scripture or Writing is the Goſpel; He ſaith, The Scripture preached the Goſpel to Abraham; therein producing a Place againſt himſelf; for it plainly proves the Scripture is not the Goſpel, ſince the Goſpel was preached to Abraham by God, before it was recorded or written by Moſes; That we chuſe to call the Goſpel, which the Scripture declares of, that is, The Good-Will of God to Men, by his Mercy, Power and Goodneſs manifeſted to them; and that may be reſiſted, as well in an inward Manifeſtation, as outward Declaration; for Stephen ſaid to the Jews, Ye do always reſiſt the Holy Ghoſt, as your Fathers did, &c. Jonas alſo diſobeyed the immediate Call of God.

Acts 7.

And whereas he ſaith, John Baptiſt preached the Goſpel? That is alſo clearly againſt himſelf; for that was before the four Books, which he maintains to be the Goſpel, were written.

The Goſpel is called a Myſtery, hid from Ages and Generations, and is ſtill hid from all the Rebellious and Diſobedient, who walk not after the Spirit, but their own Luſts: But ſo are not thoſe four Books, ſo call'd; neither are they the glorious Goſpel, but that which they declare of.

Epheſ. 6. 19. chap. 3. 3, 16. Col. 1. 26. 1 Tim. 1. 11.

None of thoſe Fathers he ſpeaks of, I dare ſay, if he quoted the Places, would be found to countenance his Definition: for he confeſſes, they ſay, It forgives and juſtifies, which the four Books do not; they only declare ſuch Things to Believers. If Matthew and John, and Paul and Peter were not the Goſpel, becauſe they were Powerful Inſtruments to declare it; no more are their Books and Writings: They were not the glad-Tidings, but the Bringers and Publiſhers of it; their Books are no more, if ſo much, not being vivâ voce, as they ſay; the like Power not uſually accompanying the meer or dead Letter, as the living Voice.

Where did ever any hear or read, that the Reading of Peter's Sermon converted 3000. at one Time? Ignatius ſaith, The Goſpel is ἀπαρτισμὸς ἀφθαρσίας, the Perfection of Incorruption; Paper and Ink are not ſo. And ſaith Origen, John calleth the Goſpel Everlaſting, which may be properly called Spiritual, that the Books are not, tho' they hold out Spiritual Things. Clemens Alexandrinus ſaith, The Angel, Exod. 32. held forth the Evangelical and leading Power of the Word: That Evangelical Power was not then of the Books, but of the Word, which was and is God bleſſed for ever. Chryſoſtom plainly ſaith, they are not the Goſpel. R. Allen on the Goſpel ſaith, It is a Divine Meſſage from God himſelf, that teacheth and aſſureth, &c. How can it be Divine and work Aſſurance, if it be not a Spiritual and inward Work, which the Books are not, nor of themſelves can work. Peter Martyr ſaith, It is ſuch a Doctrine as offered Chriſt unto us, and his Spirit and Grace, whereby is miniſtred Strength unto us to perform thoſe Things that are commanded, which the Books of themſelves ſtill cannot do, though they declare of that which can: Not that we would leſſen them, as our ungodly Wreſting Adverſaries ſay; or that we would take off People from reading them; but if they of themſelves could do, or had that Power which belongs to the Everlaſting Goſpel, how comes it that ſo many Studiers of them receive no clearer Knowledge and living Senſe of God, Chriſt, the Holy Spirit, Scriptures, &c? We do teach, That to read them with a good Uuderſtanding, Men muſt come to that which gives it, which is the Inſpiration of the Almighty, Job 32. 8.

But it is worth our while to conſider what Work he makes of A. P's ſaying, That the Goſpel is the Power of God to Salvation; an abſolute plain Scripture, as any in the Bible. A. P. doth not deny that the Goſpel was before all Time, conſequently that it is the Eſſence of God, and he is a Diſciple of the Heretick Swingfield. Did ever Man pretending to Senſe or Seriouſneſs, make ſuch wild, foreign and lame Concluſions? Theſe are, it ſeems, to ſerve for Bugbears, to ſcare the People: He might as well have ſaid, The Quakers believe the Life Everlaſting, and conclude, Therefore they make it the Eſſence of God; which as reaſonably proclaims the Church of England a Company of Hereticks; nay, all the World that believe that 1674. Article, as he can brand A. P. for one, becauſe he ſaid, The Goſpel is the Power of God, and Everlaſting, which the Scripture calls it.

In theſe Things he truly partakes with the Falſe Brethren he ſpeaks of, mentioned Acts 15. 24. who did not only teach and eſtabliſh againſt the aboliſhing Power of the Goſpel, tranſient Obſervations, but their own vain Traditions for Doctrines, glorying in them, as did the Jews, crying, The Temple, The Ordinances, while they neglected the weightier Things, and made void the Commandment of God and Chriſt, the Old Commandment and the New Commandment, the ſame that was from the Beginning, the Firſt and the Laſt, even that which endures for ever.

Methinks theſe Hireling Miniſters are like ſome Mercenary Souldiers, or Souldiers of Fortune, as they are called, that cannot bear to think of the Enemy's being totally routed, leſt their War end, and their Pay with it: Such Perſons, inſtead of purſuing the Enemy, turn about againſt their valiant and faithful Followers, that cry, They run, They run, we ſhall utterly rout and ſubvert them: No! rather than heighten and purſue that Reſolution, they will baſely betray the Cauſe, and it's moſt ſincere Abettors, into the Arms of the publick Enemy; They make no Scruple of doing this Evil, not that Good, but Gain may come of it: They had rather the Devil were unſubdued, than they disbanded, that his being unconquered might be a Pretence for keeping ſuch Mercenaries always on foot; who are therefore the greateſt Enemies of Chriſt's Kingdom in the Hearts of his Children.

Theſe are they that will flee, becauſe they are Hirelings, and care not for the Flock, John 10. And it ſo falls out, that now we have not only the old Adverſaries, but theſe alſo betwixt them and us, who inſtead of going on againſt them, firſt turn themſelves manifeſtly againſt us, and endeavour what they can to obſtruct our March: But the Lord God Jehovah is ſufficient, our Pillar of Cloud by Day, and Fire by Night; he goes before us; Power and Might and Majeſty are with him, whoſe Holy Pure and Clear Voice we have certainly heard, and in whoſe Bleſſed Appearance we have firmly Believed; and it is ſo well with us, who retain our firſt Love to him and his precious Truth in the inward Parts, that we can ſing for Joy, though in a weary Land, and in the midſt of many Diſtreſſes. And this we know aſſuredly, That he will ſhake terribly the Nations, and bring Amazement upon the People; Their Conſciences will be ſuddenly awaken, and with terrible Judgment will he plead with all the Proud Profeſſing, as well as Prophane, Fleſh in this Land; it ſhall wither as the Graſs, and the Beauty of it fade as the Flower of the Field: And in that Day ſhall Obedience to, and Communion with the Light of Chriſt within, be honourable and deſirable in the Sight of Thouſands; and the Truth ſhall have the Victory, and the Dominion ſhall not be any longer the Devil's, but the Saints of the Moſt High, over Hell, Death and the Grave; the Ancient of Days will bring it to paſs: Then ſhall Babylon fall, and her Merchants howl; for the great Judgment will ſurprize them, as Travail a Woman with Child, and the Lord God will reckon with them for the Souls of his People. O fear before the Lord, ye Prieſts! and turn you unto him all ye Children of Men.

William Penn's Juſt Complaint againſt, and Solemn Offer of a Publick Meeting to, the Leading Baptiſts aſſembled at Barbican, the 28th of the 6th Month, 1674.

On the Behalf of Himſelf, George Whitehead, and the reſt of his Friends.

FOraſmuch as there is a very ſcandalous Report raiſed and propagated, both in City and Country, againſt George Whitehead and my ſelf, as if “We had purpoſely neglected to meet the Baptiſts at their publick Aſſembly held in Barbican “in London, the Day and Month aforeſaid (to take Cognizance of Thomas Hicks's “Proceedings againſt the People, called Quakers, according to our Appeal) notwithſtanding that the ſaid Baptiſts had given us Notice by Letters, dated the “15th of that Month, manifeſtly diſcovering thereby, that we were afraid to “ſtand by our printed Charges, and unable to make good what we had written a-

“ gainſt him, in the Face of a publick Auditor (a Practice, if true, baſe and unworthy of Chriſtian Men) I cannot with-hold this brief Defence and Information from City and Country, thus horribly impoſed upon, and groſly abuſed into a Miſapprehenſion of the Matter.

I do ſay then, and moſt ſincerely affirm, that I never had any Account of that Meeting, by either Letter, or Meſſenger, directly or indirectly, till about Ten that very Night after the Meeting had been: Nor did I receive any other during the Time of my Abſence, from the 8th to the 28th of the ſaid Month, at what Time came with it ſeveral Letters that had been ſent after me in my Journey, which miſſing me, were returned. Moreover, the Letter directed to me, was not delivered to Philip Ford in order to be ſent to me, though reſident in the ſame City, till four Days after the Date thereof, who peruſing and conſidering it's Contents, returned among other Things, this for Anſwer:

William Kiffin, H. Knolleys, &c. Theſe ſerve only to give you Notice, that W. P. was gone into the Eaſt of England about three Weeks ago, and I know not how to give him Notice hereof. This I thought good to let you know, and do judge that you ought to let others know it, that ſo vain Boaſting may be prevented as much as in us lyeth; Philip Ford.

And for G. Whitehead, I am alſo aſſured by his Letter from Briſtol, that he received no Account of the Meeting till the 29th of the laſt Month, being the Day after it's Appointment; nor did his Wife know where to ſend to him before his Arrival at that City, as ſhe affirms to me, and ſhe told their Meſſenger when he brought the Letter to her, and thereupon immediately returned it: How then we could know of the Meeting, much more how we conld be juſtly thought on Purpoſe to decline the Meeting, is left with impartial Readers to judge.

However it ſeems very ſtrange and unreaſonable to us, that any Men ſhould ſo abſolutely take upon them to concern us in a Meeting without our Knowledge and Conſent. They could not but think us Men of Occaſions, and ſuch too, as might as well call us to remote as adjacent Places: Wherefore to expect we ſhould appear at their ſole Appointment of Time and Place, without any the leaſt Proviſion againſt ſuch Emergencies, was to require Impoſſibilities at our Hands: But then to triumph over our undeſigned Abſence, what is that leſs than to aggravate their Injuſtice to us? To God's Witneſs in all Conſciences we leave our Caſe.

And now be it known to all to whom this cometh, that I was ſo far from refuſing a publick Meeting, whatever ſome have untruly reported, that I offered John Gladman, a Member of theirs, to meet the ſaid T. Hicks with the Bible in one Hand, and his Dialogue in the other, which was rejected: And as I never refuſed a fair and publick Meeting, at any Time, to this People, whenever offered (and I have Reaſon to believe the ſame of G. Whitehead) ſo for him and my ſelf, do I hereby give them a Solemn Offer, to meet us publickly at ſuch Time and Place, as we and they ſhall mutually appoint, to prevent any Surprize to either Party: At what Time we ſhall be ready, with the Aſſiſtance of Almighty God, to maintain our Charge againſt T. Hicks, in his three Dialogues, which were and are the Subject Matter of the Controverſy depending.

W. PENN.

Naked Truth needs no SHIFT:

Or, An ANSWER to a LIBELLOUS SHEET, Entituled,

The Quaker's Laſt Shift Found Out.

IT is with no ſmall Regret, Sober Reader, that I am thus neceſſitated to Vindicate my own and my Friends Innocency, againſt theſe unfair Aſſaults: I prefer Peace before War, and heartily deſire loving Neighbourhood, rather than daily Conteſt; but this is our Satisfaction, we did not begin with them, but were begun with by them: And ſuch great and general Accuſations call for the like Defences;

1674. ſince where Charges go unanſwer'd, Guilt is moſt uſually reflected, eſpecially where WE are concerned; there being a Sort of Men devoted to miſconſtrue whatever we ſay or do, with whom it is become Criminal to defend our ſelves; and deſerving to be chid for ſaying, They wrong us: Such continu'd unchriſtian Proceedings againſt us will, I hope, induce all Impartial People to hold me excuſed for publiſhing this ſecond Vindication, which I intreat them in the Love of God to conſider, that they may the better find out where the SHIFT lieth, whether in us, or this Nameleſs Author and his Abettors.

The Intent of my Paper was, to meet with the Vox populi, or common Fame, that as we might be defended, ſo the People diſabuſed, by declaring, that notwithſtanding thoſe Defamatory Reports City and Country had credited againſt us, we had not receiv'd their Information of the Meeting, much leſs deſignedly avoided it; That it was unfair to concern us in a Meeting without our Conſent; and that we made them a ſolemn Offer of a Publick Meeting, &c.

Now let us ſee how well he hath made good his Title-Page, in which he calls his Paper an Anſwer to mine.

He tells us, that we made an Appeal to the Baptiſts againſt T. Hicks, and that upon this Appeal the Teachers and Elders among them deſired T. H. that he would in a publick Meeting bring forth his Evidences and Witneſſes: That Mr. Kiffin and Mr. Knowls wrot Letters the 15th of Aug. to W. P. and G. W. informing them of Time and Place.

But what is all this, to prove that we receiv'd any certain Account from them of the Meeting; that we purpoſely avoided the Meeting; and that we were ſo far unconcern'd in it, as that our Conſent to meet was unneceſſary? The Ground of my Paper.

He ſays that G. W. had Notice at the Vizes, having ſeen a Letter of T. Hicks, ſent to one in that Town: Bnt ſuppoſe it to be true; what is that to me, the Perſon moſt of all concern'd in the Matter? Or, how doth this reach P. Ford's Letter, writ to inform them of my Abſence, and to deſire the Meeting might be ſuſpended, to prevent vain Boaſting? Was it ſuſpended? No. And hath not vain Boaſting followed? Yes. A Surreptitious Meeting! A vain Triumph! Doth not this Proceeding rather give cauſe to ſuſpect a Deſign to meet in our Abſence, that made it of no Moment to the Meeting, after they heard of it, though before they wrote for, deſired and expected our Preſence.

But, ſaith he, W. P. was at Home the Night before: Grant it: Muſt I therefore hear or know of any ſuch Meeting, or my Concernment in it? I received no Account, I ſay again, of either the Meeting, or my Relation to it, directly or indirectly, 'till about Ten the Night after it was over. And for G. W's Knowledge of the Meeting, it is expreſt with Injuſtice both to him and my ſelf; for he had not that Account which belonged to him to have; Therefore not His Account. What was a Rumour to him; or T. Hicks's Letter to another Man, receiving no Account himſelf, much leſs any Account of his Concern in the Meeting, 'till the 29th of the laſt Month, which was the Day after the Meeting. Beſides, Muſt we take it for granted that G. W. was juſt then at Leiſure to take Poſt for the Meeting; under both it had been well nigh impoſſible for him to reach it; for this Author tells us, that T. H. writ not 'till the Tueſday before the Friday (ſo called) on which the Meeting was appointed; which was to give him little above a Day to ride about Fourſcore Miles: Moreover, He was then pre-engaged for Briſtol; and ſo ignorant of his Concernment in the Meeting, that he writ afterwards to his Wife to Know if our Friends were concerned in it. This his Shift is too Thread-bare to palliate that unworthy Surprize.

But, Others had Notice, ſaith he. What then? ſay I. Were not we the Perſons chiefly concerned? Could any Body elſe have anſwer'd for T. Hicks beſides himſelf? Who then could fill up our Room, eſpecially in Matters of Fact? If T. H. was thought fit to be there to explain and vindicate his Dialogues, then ſhould we in Defence of our Anſwers: But, if our Abſence might ſo eaſily be diſpenſed with, why ſhould T. H's Preſence have been ſo requiſite? For T. H. and his Books, againſt our Books only, were unreaſonable Odds. The Plea ſhould have lain between Books and Books, the Controverſy being written: And if it was needful that as well he as his Dialogues ſhould be there, then that as well we as our Anſwers; though I cannot ſee with what Liberty we could have defended our ſelves, ſince Such as offered to ſay any Thing in our Behalf were interrupted; which gives us Cauſe enough to believe, that this Perſon was beſide the Matter, when he tells us, that the Baptiſts were glad to ſee any of us there.

But he ſays, That I Prevaricate, in ſaying, The Baptiſts concerned us in that Meeting, when we concern'd the Baptiſts in that Meeting: A Shift to be ſure, though not his Laſt. I would fain know, if we were not concern'd in that Meeting, becauſe we concerned the Baptiſts in that Meeting; as I take it, we were reciprocally concerned in that Meeting, and therefore equally intereſted in the Appointment of Time and Place; for was there not the ſame Reaſon that we ſhould be there, vivâ voce to make good the Charge in our Book, as that T. H. ſhould be there, vivâ voce to endeavour to clear his Book from our Charge? Never can they defend themſelves from that Injuſtice. It is not the Part of a juſt Judge, to hear and determine for one Party in the Abſence of another. Beſides, For what End did they pretend to give us Notice, if not that we ſhould be there? It muſt not be forgot, that while in their Letter to me they deſire and expect it, in the Letter to J. Oſgood they render it needleſs; nay, it was aſſerted by one eminent among them in that Meeting, as I am credibly inform'd, That neither G. W. nor W. P. were concerned to be preſent: If ſo, Why was our undeſigned Abſence reputed and reported to be the Conſequence of our Fears?

But the Man thinks he hath a ſtronger Argument than all this, in my Book (intituled, The Spirit of Truth Vindicated, &c. p. 78, "That to which an Appeal is "made, muſt be capable of giving an Infallible Judgment, and ſo a true Judge, "or elſe the Appeal is Fooliſh. He is ſo wiſe as to leave the Application to his Reader, for which Way he could make it bear to his Purpoſe, I know not: But let it ſuffice, Firſt, That I made not the Appeal by him recited, as the Poſtſcript of my Book proveth: Next, Nor can any ſober Man think, we intended by our Appeal to the Baptiſts, our abiding by their Judgment, be it right or wrong; The very Words of it ſhew the Appeal to the Baptiſts, was not to try whether T. H. was guilty, but for Judgment againſt him, having proved him guilty; for that were to admit of their Judgment, to conclude us againſt our ſelves; they themſelves will not think us ſo kind to them: Take the Appeal as this Perſon recites it; Now, if you the Teachers and Elders, among the Baptized People, do not publickly clear your ſelves of T. Hicks, and theſe his unjuſt Proceedings againſt us; we may take it for granted, that you own his Work, and may juſtly deal with him as the Baptiſts great Champion, peculiar Agent or Repreſentative, &c. Now I would fain know which Way this binds us from all farther Meeting, upon the ſame Score? Nothing can be well clearer, than that this Appeal aim'd no farther, than to know whether the Baptiſts did and would own or reject T. H's Proceedings, that we might the better underſtand whom to addreſs our ſelves to next Time. There is great Difference in the Nature of Appeals: And the Reaſon of my Writing, as he citeth me, was, to prove the Light capable of giving an infallible Judgment, from my Adverſary's acknowledging it to be the Gift of God, and appealing to it, as a right Diſcerner, for Judgment about what is right, and what is wrong, which this Perſon, T. H. like, left out: Howbeit, thus far, what he cites reacheth our preſent Caſe; for, doubtleſs, they had Power to give Judgment againſt T. H. if they had been but as willing to uſe it, having ſuch clear Evidences in our Books before them. Nevertheleſs, this doth not prove, That we knew of the Meeting, that we were unconcerned in it, or that we deſignedly ſhunned it: The Foundation of our Paper, no Ways ſhaken by this Libeller's Sheet. The Meeting was pretended for a Church-Examination; but almoſt every where, in and about London, noiſed by the Baptiſts themſelves to have been for a Diſputation, and our Abſence accordingly interpreted: A manifeſt Injury to our Books, Perſons and Profeſſions.

For my Offer to J. Gladman, he meanly ſhifts it, and ſeems to creep out at the Word Formal; ſo that we are to read it thus, 'William Penn did offer, but not 'formally Challenge, to meet T. Hicks with the Bible in one Hand, and with his 'Dialogue in the other. Let it be ſo; I hope it is enough to ſatisfy the World, that an Offer was made and rejected: Nor is my printed one more Formal; for it was on Purpoſe made to remove all Obſtruction to a Meeting, upon Terms formally propoſed; for which I ſhall produce a Witneſs in convenient Time and Place. In the mean while it is to be conſidered, that the Perſon miſtakes, when he makes T. H. to have offered W. P. any ſuch Meeting, whatever he might do to G. W. as the very Page he refers to in T. H's Third Dialogue proves: Farther, That he never offered me any Meeting, but in private, and that too, not 'till after he had twice

1674: publickly wrong'd me, which was refuſed, not to decline a Meeting, but as reputing it too mean a Satisfaction.

For his reflective Commendation of my Prudence, becauſe I did not, after their Example, appoint a Meeting without their Notice; it ſpeaks ſo much the Juſtice of my Proceeding, that it reflects Folly upon the Mention of it, and not a little Falſeneſs too, ſince a Meeting to be agreed upon by two Parties, cannot be ſaid to be lodged in any one of their Breaſts, without telling a manifeſt Untruth.

His black Menace of us and our Religion, with ſome Hydrean Piece, ſuddenly to be publiſhed, we are very little ſolicitous about; our Conſciences are approv'd to God in this Matter, and we hope (through his Aſſiſtance (however miſ-repreſented to the World) before we have done, to approve our Cauſe Juſt in the Minds of impartial People.

To conclude, ſince he tells us, That the Baptiſts have received Satisfaction in T. H's Proceedings againſt us (and great Cauſe we have to believe, that ſome of them were not ignorant of his Libel) I do hereby ſoberly renew my ſolemn Offer to them, and expect from them a Publick Meeting, wherein we may haveLeave too, vivâ voce, to repeat and defend our Charges, as T. H. manifeſtly had to read and vindicate his Dialogues. And be it known to all thoſe Baptiſts, that though the Controverſy fall in T. Hicks, by our Appeal to them, yet that it riſeth in them by their Juſtification of him: Therefore, as we can never acquieſce in their Proceedings, which he calls a Satisfaction, that have prov'd thus plainly injurious; ſo from them do we yet expect that Satisfaction, which we are bold to aſk, and in Honeſty they are bound to give us, in the Face of a ſober Auditory, at ſuch Time and Place, as they and we, on Conference, ſhall mutually appoint.

POSTSCRIPT.

OUR Inducement to the Publication of theſe two Papers was not Vain Glory, or Worldly Reputation, (which Chriſt Jeſus our Lord and Saviour, hath taught us to die to) but ſingly the Glory of God, the Honour of his Truth, and the Reſcuing of the Minds of People, from thoſe falſe Reports they have been lately enſnared into the Belief of, to the Hurt of their Immortal Souls.

LIBELS No PROOFS.

WHereas I lately Publiſhed A Juſt Complaint, againſt the Partial Proceedings of ſeveral of thoſe called Anabaptiſts againſt us, at their Meeting in Barbican, the 28th of the laſt Month, with a Solemn Offer for another, upon Juſt and Equal Terms, in Order to Debate ſuch Matters of Difference as are now depending between us, it hath pleaſed Some-Body (but we know not who) to attempt the Anſwering of it, in a Sheet, called, The Quaker's Laſt Shift Found Out. And becauſe I knew not but the Baptiſts might own it (a Defence of their Actions being thereby endeavoured) To the End the World might not be Abuſed, by Shifts, under the too common, but baſe, Diſguiſe of Reprehending them, I replyed, ſhewing, that Not One of the ſeveral Reaſons inducing me to the Publication of my Firſt Paper was enervated; with a Renewal of my former Solemn Offer for a Publick Meeting, and much more, requiſite to our Juſt Defence, and the People's farther Information.

Since when, I perceive a Rejoynder is abroad, made up of Folly, Falſhood, and thoſe mean Shifts his former would undeſervedly have faſtened upon us, and the Whole wrapt up in a Bungling Sort of Drollery. But I am to tell the Man and the World, That I am not obliged to wait the Motion, or watch the Bark of every Libeller: Let Men ſhew their Faces, and tell their Names, or Fight with themſelves. Common Charity ſhould protect every Man from the Attacks of a Nameleſs Author, eſpecially, when againſt a People that are Innocent. Nothing but Malice, or Money, or ſome Evil Thing, can encourage any to ſuch baſe Practices. The Worthieſt of Men and Actions, have no Outward Fence againſt this Flail; but with the Worſt muſt walk unprotected from ſuch Aſſaſſinates. A Juſt Diſdain is the Beſt Anſwer; and that is what I now make him. My Complaint is out, and my Solemn Offer abroad, and that with my Name at Length: It lyes at the Baptiſt's Door, and we wait for their Reſult. And if this Libeller will dare to tell us His Name, who covereth his Untruths by concealing it, I do hereby offer, either in Print, or at that ſo much deſired Meeting, to prove him Guilty of Folly, Lyes and Slanders, which now it can be of little Service to attempt, ſince, when that is done, at this Rate No Body will appear Guilty. Theſe Unchriſtian and Unmanly Practices on all Hands againſt us, we patiently undergo, having Full Confidence in G O D, that He will yet give us an Opportunity, in which to prove our Innocency, and detect our many Adverſaries of foul Injuſtice towards us.

William Penn's RETURN TO John Faldo's REPLY, CALLED A Curb for W. Penn's Confidence, &c.

Writ in Defence of His Answer to John Faldo's Printed Challenge.

MY Anſwer to John Faldo's Challenge, was in Terms ſo Modeſt, that no Man not bent to be Abuſive, and reſolv'd againſt all Candor and Moderation, could have taken ſuch Pains as he hath done, to bedirt it. Would I ſo ill beſtow my Time, I could nigh fill as great a Compaſs with the Hard Names he flings upon it; The Refuge and Practice of Petulant and Empty Adverſaries. His Title charges it with Falſe Inſinuations and Juglings: I ſeriouſly profeſs, I never intended any Thing with more Truth, Plainneſs and Softneſs, than that ſhort Anſwer. And truly, that which renders this Uſage at any Time uneaſie, is the faſtning unjuſtly that Character upon me and my Friends, which is moſt deſervedly their own, thereby concealing and ſecuring the Offender, and ſubſtituting the Innocent in his Room, to the Deceiving of the Simple, and expoſing us to the Bait of the Rude and Ignorant Multitude: But it is our Lot, and mine at this Time more particularly; I was treated at another Rate, whilſt I could cry Hoſanna to His Order.

But let us hear what he ſays to prove that my Anſwer contains Falſe Inſinuations and Juglings. I told him, That it was unfairly done of him to chuſe the Barbican-Meeting, to divulge his Challenge to me, which I had receiv'd no Notice of. To this he replies, That the Meeting was occaſion'd by the Quaker's Appeal: Which, beſide that it is nothing to the Purpoſe, is a Great Untruth: Did we occaſion any Meeting, wherein we were concerned to be preſent without our Notice and Conſent, either as to Matter or Manner, Time or Place, taking the Word Occaſion in the common Acceptation of it? No Body ſurely, but J. Faldo, and ſuch Prejudgers can think ſo. For Shame be Juſt!

But he believes, Such a Critical Seaſon ſeldom happens, wherein both G. W. and I were before ſo long a Seaſon out of the Reach of ſo Publick a Concern. What then? Therefore were we not then out of Reach? What would he be at? Lamentable Weakneſs! Is this to juſtify His Cowardly Braggs? I will call them ſo now, ſince ſofter Terms far'd ſo ill at his Hands. But let J. F. know, That for that Glorious Goſpel of JESUS CHRIST our Lord, he with as much Envy as Untruth, 1674. truth, ſuggeſts us to deny, we are frequently engaged in remote Places, and that for Weeks, and ſometimes Months, where no Letters can be ſent to us with any previous Knowledge where to find us; inſomuch as that our Neareſt and Deareſt Relations may have taken their Leave of this World, and exchanged their Houſes for Graves before our Return, or Knowledge of their Condition, which might have been better conſidered by this Stipendiary Reſident, who, though he gets more Money by it, is not expoſed to that and many other Hardſhips.

But to palliate the Unjuſt Procedure of the Baptiſts againſt us, at their Firſt Barbican-Meeting, he tells us, A Tale of G. Whitehead's ſurprizing him with a Diſpute upon Three Days Notice, which he ſaith, Was not according to the Agreement made betwixt him and ſome of our Friends, to wit, Mutual Conſent; which granted to him, neither helps the Baptiſts, nor hurts us: For, Firſt, G. Whitehead went principally to a Meeting of our Friends, and if he might have Opportunity to allay the Heat of this Vapouring Adverſary. Secondly, It was ſo far left with J. Faldo, either to accept or reject, as that it was moſt remote from the Thoughts of G. W. upon his Refuſal, to aſſemble the Inhabitants of the Place, and in his Abſence exclaim both againſt his Faith and Practice; our manifeſt Suffering from T. Hicks and his Confederates. Thirdly, There can be nothing well Falſer, than his inſinuating, the Iſſue of that Meeting to have been his Quiet from the Quakers; if by Quiet, he underſtands any Fear upon them from his Force of Argument to encounter him; ſince he could neither recover our Half-Proſelyte, as he is pleaſed to call that Perſon, once an Hearer of him; nor did he reſt one Month without a fair Offer of another Meeting from ſome of our Friends, near the Place of his Reſidence, which, as I am informed, he declined: I blame him not for ſo doing. But ſuppoſe G. W. was as culpable as he repreſents, who ſo little deſerved his Reflection, how doth this excuſe T. Hicks, or extenuate his own Injuſtice, who, without any Notice given to G. W. or my ſelf, did ſo publickly at Barbican, in our Abſence, abuſe the one, and challenge forth the other, in Defence of himſelf and Friends, from a Charge then exhibited by him againſt our Faith and Principles, ſuggeſting to the Auditory, as if what were in Reality but his own crooked Conſequences (deteſted of us) had been the Expreſs Articles of our Creed. If yet he can preſume to believe himſelf Modeſt, Juſt, or Chriſtian, his Caſe is deſperate, and I heartily pity his Miſtake.

But he faults me for ſaying, He could not but know of my being at a great Diſtance, telling me, That I either make him an Extraordinary Gnoſtick, or my ſelf ſuch an Over-Laſher, as needs to have my Words well meaſured after me. Truly, if J. Faldo hath the Doing of it, I am ſure to be wronged, unleſs he hath changed his Wont. How near a-kin he is to the Gnoſticks in other Reſpects, I will not undertake to determine; only if what Epiphanius writes of their Self-Conceit, be true, J. F. has printed himſelf one of the Extraordinarieſt Gnoſticks of this Age: But I will ſtand to my Words, that he muſt needs know of my Abſence, for they that gave him Notice of the Meeting, being ſome of the Perſons concern'd, might alſo inform him, that I was at a great Diſtance, they receiving that Anſwer: But leſt he ſhould deny all this, as probable as it is, the Prolocutor's Gloſs upon the Word EAST, doth the Buſineſs to an Hair's Breadth; for unleſs J. Faldo's Ears happen like J. Ives's, to be all of a ſudden thick of Hearing, or to have as great an Impediment as T. Hicks's Tongue (that is, in Caſes unpleaſant to them) he could not but obſerve, that W. K. inſinuated, as if I had Voyag'd to the Eaſt-Land, or the Eaſt-Indies, too far for the Noiſe of J. Faldo's Charge to be heard, as Empty as it was. But I muſt not forget, and yet take no Delight to remember, that Grave Perſon purpoſely left out England, joyn'd to Eaſt, in the Letter, that he might better break his Jeſt.

But be it as it will, I cannot but return J. Faldo an Alluſion in his firſt Book, it may be, not in the very Words, yet the ſame Senſe, viz. That he doth with me in this, as nicely and unjuſtly, as ſome Phyſicians, who ſtrictly prohibit that to their Patients, they Eat themſelves with Great Guſto.

I farther told him, as he obſerves, That I had twice Defended our Faith in Print againſt him, and that a conſiderable Book lay at his Door unanſwer'd. To this he gives me ſeveral Returns, worth noting, for ſomething or other: One is this, That he perfectly knows the contrary; To what? That I have twice Defended our Belief. The Quibble is here; I have twice Writ, but not twice Defended; Notable! But he goes of late for a Critick. However, Who ſays ſo? John Faldo. Doth he prove as well as ſay? No ſuch Matter. He would not be miſtaken, yet in aſſerting he tranſcends; for he farther tells us, That I have not Overthrown One Line of his Books; in which, as he explicitly proves his own Impudence and Oſtentation, ſo implicitly he calls many, far from Quakeriſm, as he terms it, Fools or Knaves, for their contrary Judgment.

But to the next Reaſon; My Prints have Confirmed him; which, though no Evidence to others of the Reaſonableneſs of his Belief, yet a great One to me, that that Scripture is fulfilling upon him, Wicked Men ſhall wax worſe and worſe. But this is not all:

He tells us, That it is not a Conſiderable Book: Who expected J. Faldo ſhould ſay any other? But doth he not hold himſelf obliged to help others to the ſame Creed, if his Heat be any better than Mercenary? Should he not endeavour to diſintangle thoſe that are otherwiſe Opinionated of the Matter? Doubtleſs he thinks it not leſs deſerving his Pains, than thoſe his firſt Book pretended to refute: If he doth, he would have done well to point in what; if he doth not, why doth he not anſwer me as well as them? Or why did he begin at all, if he intended not to make Good what he ſaid? But I would not be thought to imitate Pharaoh's putting the People to make Brick without Straw, by urging him to Defend that which indeed is Indefenſible: Only, it is worth our Notice, That the Book is not Conſiderable; But prithee, Why? I think ſo. Ergo, What? It is not conſiderable. This Way of arguing calls J. Faldo an Idle Meddler, for ever Writing an Half Crown or Three Shilling Book, to terminate here, My Adverſary is not Conſiderable. So much Wit, Folly, or Shuffle, call it what he will, would have ſaved him much Brain-Work in the Beginning; but it may do the Man ſome Good: Folks ſay ſo of Experience Dear Bought; and, Better Repent Late than Never; though it's commonly judg'd to be a Repentance Per Force.

Well, but there's more behind, viz. Whatever Qualities my laſt Book had, he tells me, It is more than I knew, that ever he ſaw it; He is ſure, I never laid it at his Door, by ſending One of them to him. If he had ſaid, By receiving One of them, it had paſt him; for I might have ſent it, and it might have many Ways miſcarried: But I will not preſs him with this, nor talk either of Gnoſticks, or Over-Laſhers, to Laſh him with. And that I may right my ſelf, and ſhew him how willing I was it ſhould lie at his Door, I did, to the beſt of my Remembrance, order him One, and if it came not to his Hand, it neither accuſeth me, nor excuſeth him. John Faldo ſent me none of his, and I think I never gave that for a Reaſon, why either of them lay not at my Door.

But it ſeems J. Faldo hath lately been at Bedlam, and one would think ſo by the Story he tells; An Impertinent One it is; Some-Body ſaid ſomething of W. P. &c. But who he knows not; here is the Upſhot. What I ſhould ſay I know not; for he neither directs me to the Perſon, nor Houſe: So I muſt be contented to leave it as I found it, with J. Faldo and Bedlam, a Place that ſuits the Relation.

He hath not yet done: My Book is ſaid to be Printed in 1673, and it ſtuck in the Birth till many Months were paſt of the Year 1674. This hits the Book in the Head, provided the Title-Page may ſtand for one. But how doth J. Faldo know it ſtuck ſo many Months in 1674? Which Way came he ſo well acquainted with the Secrets of the Preſs? But let us ſee what this Objection amounts to. The Title is either printed firſt or laſt: If firſt, ſay in 73, would he have the Printer foreſee all thoſe Difficulties that may obſtruct the coming forth of the Book till 74, in order to ſet down 73, 74? This were to make a Gnoſtick of him with a Witneſs; or if he doth not, his Book ſhall be charg'd with an Untruth: If the Title be printed laſt (which I ſuppoſe is common) ſay in 74, and he ſets down 74, he tells an Untruth of the Book, though not of the Title: Should the Printer then have ſet it down 73, 74, becauſe ſome of the Book was printed in 73, this had been an Untruth, reſpecting the Title-Page, for that was all, and only printed in 74.

That ever a Man that loves Reputation at the Rate they that know him ſay he doth, Should be ſo Idle in Print! Suppoſe his Obſervation True; Is the Book therefore not Conſiderable? Or doth it not lye at his Door? Or is W. P. to be blamed, which is the Buſineſs in Hand? What he would be at I know not; unleſs he deſign'd to ſhew that he is a Critick, and well ſkill'd in Annals. But I am of Opinion, That Baronius (after the Old Proverb) may ſleep in a whole Skin for all John Faldo's Attempts:

His next Reaſon for not giving my Rejoynder any Return, is, as he ſays elſewhere, Magnipotent. I have Two Thouſand Pounds per Annum in Poſſeſſion, as reported: I only waſte Paper, but he (Alas for him) muſt write no more than is Deem'd Convenient and Satisfactory.

I perceive that John Faldo is govern'd much by Reports, and that may be One Reaſon why the Man reports ſo much Untruth: But if he will make that Report Good, I will give him a Years Rent, and let him waſte Paper, or waſte it in Paper, and then call it An Anſwer to W. P. if he pleaſeth. I obſerve that his Want of it, is the Reaſon of his not being a better Friend to the Printer; for his Words, that He muſt write no more than what is deemed Convenient, imply, That had he wherewithal, he might Write and Waſte, and Waſte and Write. But what is the True Engliſh of this Apologetical Sentence? It is to be ſuſpected this, viz. I muſt write no more than can be Sold: The Bookſellers do not deem more of my Writings Convenient and Satisfactory. I cannot believe that J. Faldo could not write what he deems both Convenient and Satisfactory. But what is become of that Greedy Appetite in Learned and Unlearned after his Books, not only Certified by the Bookſellers, but with a moſt Nauſeous Self-Glorying, proclaimed by himſelf in his Vindication? For my Part, I know not what elſe to infer from all this, than that his Books are become a Drug; at leaſt, they ſo far ſtick undigeſted in the People's Stomachs, if not unſold in the Bookſellers Shops, as there is neither Appetite enough in the one, nor Room enough in the other, for more of the Labours of the Author of Quakeriſm No Chriſtianity.

But he thanks me that I have put one Argument into his Mouth, viz. Wherefore hath W. P. made ſuch a Buſtle againſt Mr. Hicks and me, ſeeing he hath not toucht, or much leſs anſwer'd, the far greater Part of my firſt Book?

O that John Faldo would but learn to write Truth, and not cover great Weakneſs and Baſeneſs with ſo much Untruth! Have I not anſwered to every Charge in the firſt Book? Examin'd two, three, four or five of his Witneſſes at a Time to each Charge; that is, Teſtimonies out of our Friend's Books, he brought to juſtifie it? It ſeems then, that my not fully Anſwering of his firſt Book, is one Reaſon why he hath hitherto declin'd Publiſhing ſomething againſt my ſecond; but had the Man been of this Mind before, doubtleſs he would never have writ a Second.

But what ſaith J. Faldo to my ſecond Book, wherein I charge him, In Point of Fact, with ſo many horrid Abuſes of our Principles and Writings? Not one Word; unleſs that it is a Conſiderable Book for Railing, Confidence, abuſing Authors, Impertinencies, Falſhoods, and unfaithful Citing what I pretend to Confute. What Fence can be had againſt ſuch a Flail? Is this through the Aboundings of the Mans Modeſty? Am I not like to be Cur'd of my Confidence, by a Curb made up of ſuch Links? Certainly, unleſs J. Faldo hath as little Brains as this Character of my Book ſhows him to have of Honeſty, he cannot think this Entertainment ſhould prevail with me to ſtep over the Kennel to meet ſuch A ——. If ever Man was wrong'd, I am in that Expreſſion, though his Saying, and Not Proving, helps it a little.

I will at preſent overlook all but the laſt ill Quality he faſtens upon my Rejoynder, and that is, Not fairly citing his Reply: I think I may ſay, I have quoted the Better Half of his Reply into my Rejoynder, and that with ſuch Diſtinction, as any Capacity may diſcern his Matter from mine: And where he hath quoted One Line of mine, I have quoted Three of his. But I cannot think this the Way to Curb my Confidence; or to Act the Modeſt Man, To Charge and not Prove; Nay, to Overlook ſo much Charg'd and Prov'd againſt him in My Rejoynder, That is, Unfairly Citing us, groſly Perverting what is Cited, Adding, or Diminiſhing, as beſt anſwer'd his Ends; Overlooking my Matter and Arguments, and Evading the Strength of moſt of what he Cited; Charging Conſequences unfairly drawn upon us for our Principles, and abuſing our Writings to maintain that Abuſe; which is not only prov'd in the Body of the Diſcourſe, but ſumm'd up at the End of My Rejoynder, to help the Reader's Memory. And ſo far hath the Man been from Defending himſelf Doctrinally, that he ſuffers himſelf to remain without all Defence againſt my Charges.

But he hath told us very ſeaſonably, His farther Writing is not deem'd Convenient or Satisfactory; A great deal of Wiſdom, believe me, in the Deemers; and a great Share of Submiſſion in this Adverſary. I confeſs it is no Argument to do Indiſcreetly a third Time, becauſe a Man hath done ſo twice before. Had I return'd him a Scurrilous, Frothy, and Evaſive Pamphlet (like his Reply) to his Great Book, I ſhould have blam'd my ſelf, not him; but I did Conſcientiouſly conſider it, and beſtow'd a Large and Grave Diſcourſe upon it, faithfully Citing, and (I hope) as fully Enervating it. But to this he objects, and that ſeems the Strength of his Sheet, if there be any in it, that is, That he made Twelve Citations out of our own Books, and brought Thirteen Texts of Scripture to prove (One Point of many) and that I took but Two of each; which granted, makes nothing againſt me, but Proves himſelf Weak, 1674. Weak, to ſay no worſe: For either each of them he brought was Pertinent, or not; If not, then his urging them, calls him Impertinent; If Pertinent, I anſwer'd the Law, that ſaith, In the Mouth of Two Witneſſes, &c. for I examin'd Two, I thought of his Conſiderableſt, and found them nothing to his Purpoſe, but that he had aggravated his Evil, by groſly abuſing our Books, to prove his Infamous Charge: Now I would fain know, if it became not J. Faldo rather to have ſhown how weakly I invalidated his Evidence, and prov'd him an Abuſer of our Words; than to tell the World, I took but Two into Conſideration; for if he be gone upon them, he is gone upon all; for they are not a Jot more to his Purpoſe, if ſo much, as thoſe examin'd: And I did not hold my ſelf obliged to anſwer every Impertinent Line in his Book: If I ſkipt the Strength of his Evidence, or that thoſe I left, had ſomething not expreſt, or implyed in the other, it had been proper for him to have particularly and expreſly excepted againſt me; all which he not doing, His Objection is Frivolous, and amounts to no more than a Mean Shuffle.

But he tells the World, That alſo a whole Chapter of Apoſtolical Inſpirations lye at my Door untouch'd, and that they may judge at what Rate I have anſwered his Book.

Poor Man! Is this all he can do, after he hath thought fit to give us a ſecond Book? Muſt his firſt be his Aſylum ſtill? Why did he not tell T. H. and W. K. ſo, to excuſe his coming to Barbican? Is he for Diſputing notwithſtanding, and yet not for Writing? It ſeems then that it is not deemed Inconvenient to Diſpute, but Write. Well! But why will J. Faldo drop Things againſt himſelf, and, as he terms it, put Inſtances in my Mouth, to prove him a moſt Diſingenuous and Impudent Perſon? For did I tell him, That what concern'd us upon the Point of Inſpiration, I had treated on at large elſewhere, and there was no need of a Repetition? Now hath he ſhewn or attempted an Enervation of that? Nothing leſs. Or that we were concerned in that more than in his 4th Chapter? No ſuch Matter. Or hath he given us one Reaſon, why I ought to have conſidered it? Or dare he ſay, the other contain'd not the Matter of it? What more can we ſay to a Man of this Fore-head? I told him of Scores of Paſſages given by him under our Name, he had not ſo much as cited Perſon or Book for, as well as abundance wilfully abuſed by him, that he did cite: To all which he is as mute as if I had never accuſed him, or he had nothing to ſay in his own Vindication. Is his Recrimination (ſuppoſe a Reaſon for it in it's Place) a valid Anſwer? Would he have thought this enough to his two Books? How eaſily could we have told J. F. Thou haſt abuſed our Religion, Books, and Perſons; but would he have accepted this as a ſufficient Anſwer or Rejoynder? He tells the World of our denying the Man's Nature, or Man Chriſt Jeſus, and brings a Company of wreſted and miſapply'd Sentences to vail his Abuſe from the Vulgar; when we moſt faithfully and honeſtly believe it, and never ſpeak or write undervaluingly of it: But becauſe we preſs and exalt his Spiritual Appearance, or Chriſt, as come in Spirit to the Soul for it's particular Redemption, the Work of our Day; the other being granted on all Hands; therefore Men of his Leaven infer, That we make Void the outward Coming and Sufferings of Chriſt, and utterly deny and reject him, as he is the Man Chriſt Jeſus. I wiſh for their Sakes that thus traduce us, they were as far from drawing ſuch Conſequences, as our Faith is from countenancing them. Of this I have ſpoke largely both in my Anſwer and Rejoynder, diſingenuouſly overlook'd by this Adverſary.

But he faults me for ſaying, That W. Smith's Catechiſm is ſcripturally written, &c. but never takes Notice of his unworthy Aſſertion, nor my Anſwer, as he ought to have done. The Matter was this: J. Faldo making uſe of this Inſtance to prove we preferred our own Writings before the Scriptures, viz. That we called our own Sayings and Books, The Voice of the Son of God as uttered forth by him, &c. Truth's Principles; Shield of Truth, &c. I anſwered, that thoſe Titles were given with Reſpect to that Divine Truth they declared of and teſtified unto; not in Compariſon with the Scriptures: That not one of thoſe Books were deſtitute of Scripture; but is either generally writ in a Scriptural Style, or particularly defended by expreſs Scripture cited; therefore of Neceſſity the Scripture muſt alſo partake with them in common of thoſe famous Titles: And thus far have they the Preference, that they are quoted on Purpoſe to give the Truth we write of greater Credit; What is that greater Credit than to be exactly agreeable with them?

This and more I gave for Anſwer; He replieth thus:

1674. I leave it to my Reader to give a Name to this Paſſage, the like to which for a daring Untruth the World hath ſcarcely been acquainted with; yet the Man pretends, beſides all other Graces, to * Infallibility.

Many a large Libel I could produce, where there is not one Quotation of Scripture. W. Smith, in his Directory for Religious Principles, conſiſting of about two hundred Pages, hath not one Scripture quoted, nor one Exhortation to read the Scriptures; but, as his main Scope, denies and throws Dirt upon them.

This was J. Faldo's Reply, I ſhall now contract the Subſtance of my Rejoynder to it.

Firſt, I did not ſay that there was not one Book without Plenty of expreſs Scripture, but that thoſe Books (whoſe Titles he quoted) were either generally in a Scripture Style, or particularly defended by Plenty of expreſs Scriptures.

Secondly, To confute me, he produceth one of thoſe Books, wherein he ſaith, one Scripture was not quoted; as if that was ſufficient to prove, it was not written generally in a Scripture Style, one half of the Queſtion; Upon which I made him this Challenge, to give me one Book, out of a Scripture Style, that is not Controverſial, or any Controverſial Book without expreſs Scripture cited: If he could not, his vain Inſults ſhould fall upon his own Head. In this Particular, though he has overlook'd all the reſt of my Diſcourſe in Defence of our Faith, Writings and Principles, he undertakes me in his pretended Curb to my Confidence, in theſe Words, To accept W. P's Challenge is no bold thing; and to ſhew his unparallelled Falſehood and Confidence, I ſhall need to give you but a few Inſtances out of W. Smith's Catechiſm and Primmer.

But, John Faldo, Do Three Inſtances, few enough to be ſure, prove two hundred Pages generally unſcriptural, the Terms of the Queſtion? Methinks this ſhews more Confidence than a Man that undertakes to Curb another Man's Confidence ought to have; but all J. Faldo's Sayings are to be conſtrued cum grano ſalis. But to the firſt Inſtance.

Child. I would know, Father, how it is concerning thoſe Things call'd Ordinances, as Baptiſm, Bread and Wine, which are much uſed in their Worſhip?

Father. Why Child, as to thoſe Things, they roſe from the Pope's Invention—And then the Prieſt gives it to the People, and tells them that it is the Blood of Chriſt ſhed for them, when it is Wine, and not Blood, Smith's Catech. p. 39.

I ſee nothing unſcriptural in either Queſtion or Anſwer; unleſs J. Faldo quibbles upon the Pope. 'Tis true, he roſe not 'till ſeveral hundred Years after the Scriptures were written; but if there be an Uſe of thoſe Things call'd Sacraments, invented by the Pope, after another Manner than they were ever practiſed by the ancient Chriſtians, which is undeniable with J. Faldo, and that ſuch an unſcriptural Uſe may be called an Invention, and that the Pope be a Man, yea, the Man of Sin, as alſo J. Faldo, I ſuppoſe, and many more do conceive, and all this Scripturally; then, I hope, it cannot with any ſober Pretence, be deny'd, but that W. S's Anſwer is very Scriptural. But what makes this great Pretender to Truth and Modeſty decline taking any Notice of that Charge I publiſhed againſt him upon Occaſion of his moſt groſs Abuſe of W. Smith upon theſe Words? who would needs have it, that W. Smith calls the Lord's Supper the Pope's Invention, when I expreſly prov'd out of the ſame Place, that W. Smith intended it of the preſent Practice of them, and not of any Primitive Inſtitution? W. Smith's Words are theſe: The whole Practice of thoſe Things, as they uſe them, had their Inſtitution by the Pope, and were never ſo ordained of Chriſt; for he did not ordain Sprinkling of Water in a Child's Face, or to make a Sign of a Croſs in his Forehead, nor God-fathers and God-mothers to undertake for it; neither did he ordain Bread and Wine to be ſo (or after that Manner) uſed and received. If this be to make Baptiſm and the Supper Popiſh, what becomes of his Antipædobaptiſts and all Proteſtants, that maintain the ſame reſpectively? But moſt evident it is, W. Smith intended not that Baptiſm and Supper uſed by the Ancient Chriſtians; but moſt true it is, that J. Faldo made W. Smith to intend ſo. I leave the Reader to give a Name to this

* It is frequent with him, and that Sort of Adverſaries, to fling Infallibility in our Teeth; and here he doth it with manifeſt Deriſion, as if it was a greater Evil to be Infallible, than to Err; but let the Reader know, that we do not ſo much as pretend to any ſuch Thing, as meer Men; for as ſuch, Humanum eſt errare; but in our Judgment of the Things of God, ſo far as we receive it from the Grace of God. And if this be a Piece of Quakeriſm in Oppoſition to Chriſtianity, in J. Faldo's Account, the Scripture muſt anſwer for it; only I cannot but take Notice how he beats the Air, who either defends or propoſes any Religion upon Fallible Grounds.

Carriage; the like to which, for a Daring Perverſion, I yet know no Body guilty of, J. Faldo and T. Hicks excepted. 1674.

Now for the next Inſtance brought to prove our Books unſcripturally written.

Child. 'Then the Scriptures are to be own'd and believed as a true Teſtimony 'of what the Saints were made Partakers of in that Day.

Father. Yes, they are to be own'd and believ'd, and they that do not ſo, they are to be denied.

An admirable Confeſſion to the Scriptures: Is this the Way to prove W. Smith's Book unſcripturally written? That there is not an Exhortation to read the Scriptures, and that the whole Scope of it is, to throw Dirt upon them, yea, to deny them, though J. Faldo himſelf tells us, that W. Smith teacheth, that thoſe ought to be deny'd that do not own them; but the Truth is, J. Faldo's Proofs againſt the Quakers are like Hebrew, to be read backwards; He hath a Faculty, beyond the common Rate of Men, to facilitate his own Confutation. But he makes W. Smith farther to anſwer.

Thou muſt take Heed, Child, of giving more unto the Scriptures, than unto them belongs, leſt in ſo doing thou diminiſheſt from the Glory of Chriſt.

What of all this? May not People Idolize, as well as undervalue the Scriptures? Ought they to be put in the Room of Chriſt? Or is it ill done, to exhort People to prefer Chriſt before the Scriptures? How can J. Faldo call this Part of W. Smith's Anſwer Unſcriptural, and yet believe thoſe Words of Chriſt to be any Part of Scripture? Search (or rather, ye ſearch) the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have Eternal Life, and they are they which teſtify of me, and ye will not come unto me that ye might have Life, John 5. 39, 40. I am the Way, the Truth and the Life, John 14. 6. Chriſt himſelf here teacheth us, to give him the Preference; and implicitly rebuketh the Jews from expecting Eternal Life in the Scriptures rather than in Him, who is the Way, the Truth and the Life.

His laſt Inſtance is this:

Child. 'I am ſenſible that there is ſomething in my Conſcience that lets me 'ſee my ſecret Thoughts, and the Intents of my Heart; but I have not known 'what it hath been, nor hitherto have much regarded it.

Father. That is the True Light, &c.

Child. 'But if I ſhould turn to it, and obey it when it reproveth me for Sin, 'is there Power in it to ſave me from Sin, and to deliver me from Iniquity?

Father. Yes, Child; All Power in Heaven and Earth is in it, &c.

Now judge, Reader, ſaith J. F. if all theſe Things are contain'd in the Scripture. But I will help the Reader to judge rightly in this Matter; and queſtion not if by Containing he means as he ought, the Subſtance of ſuch Anſwers, and not that they are ſo laid down, to prove them to be according to Scripture; and therefore Scriptural.

1. That it is God, who ſearcheth the Heart, tryeth the Reins, and telleth unto Man his Thoughts, the Prophet affirms; and I know no Body that pretends to Chriſtianity, denyeth it.

2. The Apoſtle aſſerts, That which may be known of God is manifeſt in Men; for God hath ſhewn it unto them, Rom. 1. 19.

3. That it was the Apoſtolical Meſſage, That God is Light, 1 John 1. 5.

4. That whatſoever doth make manifeſt is Light, Epheſ. 5. 13.

5. That Chriſt, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever, is that True Light, which (thus) enlightneth every Man.

6. That all Power in Heaven and in Earth belongs to Chriſt, the true Light.

Now unleſs he denies Chriſt to be God, or Chriſt to be Light, or, that He, the True Light, ſo ſearcheth, &c. or that all Power in Heaven and Earth belongs to Him, it will naturally follow, that to ſay, All Power in Heaven and in Earth belongs to God, Chriſt or the Light of the World, is Equivalent: For we do not aſſert, as ſome Ignorantly, and ſome Maliciouſly have printed and reported, That all Power in Heaven and Earth is in the Manifeſtation; but in him that gives the Manifeſtation. I have taken great Care, with ſeveral others, to explain our Belief in this Matter, if poſſible, to prevent ſuch Evil-minded Men as this Adverſary, from making ſo ill an Uſe of our Innocent Expreſſions, and giving their own Monſtrous Conſequences for our Scriptural Principles.

Thus much to evidence to my Reader, how groundleſly J. F. flung Unparallel'd Falſhood and Confidence upon me for aſſerting, that thoſe Books before-mention'd 1674. were generally written in a Scripture Style; and with what Weakneſs he hath endeavoured to diſprove me.

I ſhall, among a Multitude of Inſtances that might be given, produce Ten, to ſhew to my Reader with what Truth thoſe Imputations belong to J. Faldo, and how exactly he character'd himſelf when he beſtow'd that Reflection upon me.

1. J. Faldo affirms, that W. Smith not only quoted never a Scripture, and writ unſcripturally, but that he had not one Exhortation to read the Scriptures, nay, that the main Deſign of the Book was to deny them, and throw Dirt upon them; yet J. F. thus cites him concerning the Scriptures:

Child. ' Then the Scriptures are to be own'd and believ'd, &c.

Father. Yes, they are to be own'd and believ'd, and they that do not ſo are to be denied.

To this let me add another notable Paſſage in the ſame Diſcourſe, cited by me in that very Page of my Rejoynder, where my Challenge lay (which he thought no Boldneſs to accept) though he was ſo modeſt as not to be ſo bold with this Paſſage.

' Queſt. Of what Service are the Scriptures as they are given forth and record' ed without?

Anſw. Much every Way unto thoſe that have receiv'd the ſame Spirit from whom they were given forth; for unto ſuch they are Profitable, and make wiſe unto Salvation; and are unto them of Service, for Inſtruction, Edification and Comfort, Rejoynd. p. 61. Is there no Exhortation lodg'd in theſe Words? And is this to Deny or throw Dirt upon the Scriptures? If any ſhall object W. Smith's making the Spirit neceſſary to the profitable Reading of the Scriptures, let them go to W. Tindal, J. Bradford, Bp. Jewel, J. Philpot, Luther, Calvin, Peter Martyr and others, they will preach them the ſame Doctrine; which I have obſerv'd in my Rejoynder, and may eaſily be found in my Catalogue of Authors.

2. My ſecond Inſtance ſhall be this, That he makes W. Smith call the Scriptures Traditions of Men, Earthly Root, Darkneſs, Confuſion, Corruption; And out of the Light and Power of God; which he only aſcrib'd to degenerated Men, their Worſhip, Imaginations and Traditions. See Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity, pag. 117, 119. Vind. p. 41, 45. My Rejoynder from pag. 141. to 157.

3. That the Quakers underſtand by Knowledge according to the Fleſh, the Uſe of the Underſtanding, though ſanctified, Qu. no Chr. p. 41. Vind. p. 24, 25. My Anſwer. p. 35. Rejoynd. p. 424.

4. That I. Pennington ſhould call Viſible Worſhip as ſuch, the City of Abomination, Vind. p. 50. Rejoynd. p. 194, 195.

5. That by Traditions of Men, we underſtand the Scripture, or written Word, Qu. no Chr. Part 3. p. 86. My Anſwer, p. 250.

6. That the Quakers mean by the Vail that is over People, their Belief of the Man Chriſt Jeſus born of the Virgin Mary to be now exiſting in Heaven, Ibid. p. 87. Vind. p. 93. My Anſwer, p. 251, 252. Rejoynd. p. 395, 396.

7. I take occaſion to cenſure Men's adding their Comments and Gloſſes fram'd from Study to any Part of the Scripture; and J. Faldo cites me, as complaining of ſuch as frame them from the Study of the Scriptures; as if Studying of the Scriptures, and Men's Adding their own Gloſſes to the Scriptures, were one and the ſame Thing, Vind. p. 42, 43. My Rejoynd. p. 159.

8. From E. Burrough's making the Light of Chriſt within to be one in Nature with the Spirit of Chriſt; J. Faldo infers, That the Quakers hold the Soul to be God, as if that had been ſaid of the Soul which was ſaid of the Light of Chriſt ſhining in the Soul, or that they were Synonymous, Vind. from p. 75 to 87. Rejoyn. p. 348, 349, 350.

9. Becauſe E. B. rejected that Carnal Notion that confines the Infinite, Omnipreſent God, to a Reſidence only above the Stars, he makes no Difficulty of inferring that we deny the Manhood of Chriſt Jeſus. As moſt abſurd as baſe! Q. no C. p. 9, 10. My Anſwer, p. 14. Vind. p. 9. Rejoynd. p. 420.

10. From our affirming that ſuch a kind of Reading of Scripture as the Phariſees uſed, and to thoſe Ends, makes Men harder to be wrought upon to true Converſion than the Heathen, J. Faldo infers, that reading the Scriptures, and getting Knowledge thence puts Men into a worſe Condition than the Heathen; and that there's ſcarcely any Thing more Dangerous than reading the Scriptures: Yea, he accuſeth us of Charging the Miſcarriages of Men's Souls on the Knowledge the Scripture by God's Bleſſing doth convey, Vind. p. 21, 37. Rejoyn. p. 126, 127, 325.

Thus much, and I wiſh there had been no Occaſion for this, to evidence the falſe and unworthy Practice of J. Faldo againſt the Writings and Sayings of our Friends, in order to compaſs his Deſigns: I ſhall now give ſome touch upon his Confidence, ſince he hath entituled me to an unparallel'd Share, and counts himſelf the fit Perſon to Curb me for it.

J. Faldo began with us in a great Book called Quakeriſm No Chriſtianity; I anſwered him in a Book, entituled Quakeriſm a New Nickname for Old Chriſtianity; againſt this he put forth his Vindication, unto which I made my Rejoynder, conſiſting of Twenty Three Chapters, in which I vindicated our Principles, ſtripping them of thoſe frightful Vizards and hateful Diſguiſes he put upon them, confirm'd them by many Scriptures and Reaſons, and to compleat our Defence, produc'd in favour of the whole above Two Hundred Teſtimonies out of both ancient and modern Authors.

Beſides all this I faulted his Conduct and Behaviour in this Controverſy, in above Four Hundred Particulars; and that under diſtinct Sections, moſt of which were not leſs unworthy of a good Chriſtian, yea, an honeſt Heathen, I will ſay, of any fair Controvertiſt, than the Ten I juſt now mention'd. Notwithſtanding this great Obligation upon him, either to anſwer my Book, or enter Mute to any farther Proceed in this Debate; in my Abſence at the firſt Barbican Meeting, before a great Concourſe of People, after T. Hicks had won the Goal by running Alone, the Man, as one in Love with ſuch Romance-Trophies, ſtarts up like ſome Herald at Arms, bids Defiance to the Quakers and their Religion, gives forth his Challenge to W. Penn, to diſpute him, ay, that he would; and inſtead of his Glove, flung a Paper to bind it, which when all came to all, was but ſome of the Contents of his firſt Book twice largely anſwered; and becauſe no farther Notice was taken of this Giant, partly by not receiving his Paper ſo ſoon as he might expect, and partly by reaſon of theſe other Conteſts that claim Precedency; That he might not be thought No-body, when ſo many ſtrove to be Some-body againſt us, he prints it, without all Conſideration had to my Rejoynder, or ſo much as an Apology for his Silence to it, which, at leaſt, had become a Modeſt Perſon to give: After all this can any Man think J. Faldo Baſhful, or one that is ſo out of Love with Confidence in himſelf, as that he is fit to Curb it in others? Methinks he ſhould not believe that repetitious Farthing or Half-penny-Paper feat enough to excuſe him; or ſo ſufficient to acquit him of old Debts, as that without any Breach of Modeſty or common Honeſty, he might encreaſe his former Score by freſh Charges: It is but reaſonable that he ſhould make good what he hath done firſt; and not, that we ſhould gratifie every impertinent, tautological Humour of J. F.

But what ſaith John Faldo, to this Part of my Anſwer to his Challenge? viz. But that I may acquit my ſelf of that Duty incumbent on me for the Truth, I do hereby ſignifie, That in as much as the Controverſy depending between T. Hicks, &c. and us, takes in the moſt of the Particulars of his Charge, we freely conſent, that he ſhould come in with them for a Share as Confederate in the ſame Work, and uſe his utmoſt Abilities to maintain his Accuſations; And if in any Thing his Charge is ſingular, we ſhall be ready to hear and fairly debate it at the ſame Meeting or Meetings, to avoid freſh and unneceſſary Conteſts as much as may be. To this he thus replieth:

1. I muſt fall into a Confederacy with the Antipædobaptiſts, in the ſame Work: Hold a little Mr. Penn! If I have my Option, I muſt deal with you ſingly; More confuſe rather than aſſiſt: But it ſeems I muſt be wholly at your Appointment; for, although you had conſented that in your Conteſt about Mr. Hicks's Dialogues there ſhould Four of each Party have Liberty to ſpeak; yet I no ſooner began to oppoſe you (being deſired to be one of the Four) but you told me, you were not to diſpute with me, but Mr. Hicks, and call'd to T. Hicks, and were follow'd by the Quakers Clamours of Hicks, Hicks, which anſwer'd your End, and forc'd my Silence.

Contradiction and Falſhood make up his Paragraph. Was he not of the Confederacy, when he tells us himſelf, that he was not only a Party with them, but One of the Four pitcht upon to manage their Cauſe?

But if he have his Option, he muſt deal with me ſingly.

It is Time for him indeed, who hath been a double-dealing ſo long: But certainly, if the Man were not more than ordinarily fond of hearing himſelf talk, or extravagantly ambitious of a ſingle Crown, he would be contented with a Partner; but this Option holds no Concord with his Adoption into Confederacy: He hath begun already as one of the four, what hinders that he ſhould not continue ſo? But he thinks that more than one confounds rather than aſſiſts: If ſo, what made

1674. made T. Hicks have three to help him? And why did J. Faldo attempt it? Certainly he did not deſign to confound T. Hicks. To all this Confuſion of his let me add his Untruth: He chargeth me with telling him at the Barbican-Meeting when he began to ſpeak, I was not there to diſpute with him, which is falſe to a Tittle; Either his Ears were as infirm, as his Voice was low, or elſe he ſaith this to ſerve his preſent Occaſion: However, I ſaid no ſuch Thing; but underſtanding it to be him that ſpoke from ſome better acquainted with his * Perſon, I anſwered, That the Noiſe of the Multitude was ſo great, We could not hear what he ſaid; Though had I given that Anſwer he made for me, I think it had been very reaſonable, ſince he never told us, That he was One of the four; beſides, more than that fixt Number had ſpoken before him. That the Quakers ſhould clamour, Hicks, Hicks, to anſwer my End, and force his Silence, is as true as the reſt; It was the Multitude that frequently and importunately cryed, Hicks, Hicks, Hicks; as looking upon it unreaſonable that one who had ſhown himſelf ſo arch in abuſing us, ſhould pretend ſuch Inability to anſwer our Charge, as that other Folks muſt moſtly manage his Affair. But that to ſilence him was to anſwer my End, is both to tell A— and proclaim the good Opinion he has of himſelf, as if it ſtood our Cauſe ſo much upon, to have him ſilent, and T. Hicks ſpeak: Poor T. Hicks! This was not kindly done of J. F. but perhaps he meant it of his better Elocution and Skill in ſtating the Queſtion, recommended to us in his Curb to my Confidence: Modeſt Man that he would be thought!

But what ſaith he to this Part of my fair Offer, That if in any Thing his Charge be ſingular, we ſhould be ready to debate it at the ſame Meeting or Meetings with the Baptiſts, to avoid Unneceſſary Conteſts; ſince moſt of the Particulars of his Charge are taken in by the Controverſy depending between us and the Baptiſts: It is not only an Untruth (ſays J. F.) but a meer Shift; for in the One and Twenty Propoſals to be debated by them, there is not one of the Particulars of my Charge: Beſides, in the Poſition to be diſputed on, not only the Matter, but the Form, and each Term, is of great Conſideration. Which is as much as to ſay, if I underſtand J. Faldo's Meaning, that after we have diſputed the Matter of the ſame Queſtions with T. H. and his Three Aſſiſtants, they muſt be diſputed over again upon J. Faldo's new Model, which one Nice and Humourſom Impertinency ſhall make Diſputes both Endleſs and Uſeleſs: Let him beſtow his Skill upon T. Hicks, his Cauſe wants it, and do their utmoſt together. But he would faſten an Untruth upon me, for ſaying, that moſt of the Particulars of his Charge are taken into that Controverſy, affirming, That in our One and Twenty Propoſals there was not one of the Particulars of his Charge: To which I need ſay no more but this, The Charge we exhibited againſt T. Hicks contain'd ſo many particular Charges: I grant they related to Matter of Fact, and in that ſenſe the Particulars of J. Faldo's Charge againſt us, were not explicitly there; yet they that pleaſe to read what follows the One and Twenty Particulars, as given into the Baptiſts, exhibited and read at Barbican, and ſince printed in our firſt Account, will find that we offer, after a full Conſideration and Determination upon the foreſaid Particulars, to come to Doctrinal Points, which are chiefly in Controverſy between us and them upon T. Hicks*'s Three Dialogues*; and I hope J. Faldo is not grown quite ſo deſperate as to deny, that moſt, if not all the Particulars of his Charge, fall in with T. Hicks's Attempts againſt us, and that materially too. I have heard as if ſuch a Confeſſion was one Part of his Speech at the firſt Barbican-Meeting: However, if he denies their Endeavours to have been ſo harmonious, I offer to prove them ſo; but could I not do it, yet I made Proviſion for him, wherein his Caſe is ſingular. Beſides, I deſire the Reader to take Notice, I did not ſay, the Particulars of J. Faldo's Charge were expreſt in the Catalogue of our Charge of Matter of Fact againſt T. Hicks, but that they ſell in with the Controverſy, which Word Controverſy takes in both Fact and Doctrine: And ſince he could fall in with T. Hicks upon Matter of Fact at Barbican, wherein he was not concerned, there can be no juſt Pretence for him to refuſe falling in with T. H. in Matter of Doctrine, wherein he is concerned: So that, in ſhort, I am neither guilty of Untruth, who never ſaid, that moſt of the Particulars of his Charge were concerned in the One and Twenty Particulars of Fact exhibited againſt T. H. but in the Controverſy, which is moſt true; nor yet of Shifting, in referring him to our Meeting with T. Hicks, ſince I therein only offer what his own Words and Practice countenance me in, eſpecially, ſince I farther add (as before ſaid) That if in any Thing his Charge was ſingular from that Controverſy, we ſhould be ready to hear and fairly debate at the ſame Meeting, to avoid freſh and unneceſſary Conteſts. One would think this were pretty fair to a Man under J. Faldo's Circumſtances with us. I leave the Reader to ſay where the Shift and the Untruth lieth. Only let me add Two Paſſages more, that will not a little help him to make a true Judgment of the Man. 1674.

* I never ſaw him before; and he aſſerts in his printed Paper, that he never ſaw me till the Barbican-Meeting; yet ſeveral Months before in his printed Vindication, he ſaith, he had ſpoken with me.

The one is his telling the World, That by my Manuſcript Letter to him, I do in effect unſay all again, that I ſaid of accepting his Challenge in my Printed Anſwer, and yet neither prints the Letter, though but ſhort, nor that Paſſage he faſtens his Conſequence upon. It's true, I told him, that it was our preſent Reſolution to ſtick to the Matter of Fact againſt T. H. and ſo much he prints; but what is that to the Purpoſe? Will any ſuch Paſſage bear an Ergo, W. Penn unſaith all he ſaid of Accepting the Challenge, &c? Or, therefore W. Penn will never proceed to Matter of Doctrine, becauſe he firſt reſolves to ſtick to Matter of Fact, the Method agreed upon?

The other Paſſage is this: For my Part, though I ſhall not refuſe any Opportunity offered to defend the Chriſtian Religion from it's Adverſaries; yet I expect that Mr. Penn ſhall undertake to defend the Quakers (and himſelf eſpecially) from my Charge intire as it is exhibited, and until then I ſhall look on him as declining it.

At what rate I decline a Meeting, and how well J. Faldo proves it, impartial Men may judge: But one would think by what he ſaith, as if he were another Tertullian, and the Quakers a pack of obſtinate Heathens. He is unfit to defend Chriſtianity, whoſe Works prove he doth not underſtand it, unleſs the Jew outward, with all his Envy, be the Jew inward; or a froward Phariſee, a good Chriſtian: No, No. J. Faldo, we affirm, hath firſt charged impious Errors upon us, and then abuſed our Writings to countenance them with; And though this be largely and effectually diſcovered not only in my Anſwer (at which he let fly a ſquibbing Reply) but in my Rejoynder too (being a more particular Reſumption of the whole Controverſy, and unto which he never yet made any Return) we ſee he hath Forehead enough to inſinuate as if the Quakers ſtill remained undefended. This is the Man that undertakes to Curb my Confidence, who begs ſo unreaſonably and importunately, and doth as good as threaten, if I refuſe his Terms; and which aggravates the Matter, he would have People believe, that I ſhift defending the Quakers, whilſt he is yet ſo manifeſt a Debtor to our Defences.

Well, but for all this, that it may ſufficiently appear we neither did nor do decline a Meeting with him; Let it be obſerved, 1*ſt*, That I gave him timely Notice of our Wheeler-ſtreet-Meeting, with an Invitation to be there, and went more in Expectation of him than T. Hicks, from a Report that T. H. would not, but that John Faldo intended to be preſent, though both thought fit to be abſent. 2*dly*, If he yet thinks it convenient to embrace that Offer already made, viz. To be one of the four, a Place he confeſſeth to have accepted at the Barbican-Meeting, even about another Man's Fact. Or Laſtly, If through the Apprehenſion he hath of T. H's ill Elocution, and great Conceit he hath of his own Oratory, with his better Skill at Forming and Terming the Queſtion, he can prevail with the Baptiſts, to be their Mouth in the preſent Controverſy, we ſhall through God's Aſſiſtance be ready to embrace any convenient Time and Place for a free and publick Meeting.

And that he may not think himſelf unconcerned in this Propoſal, nor want any Encouragement we can well give him to accept it, I do hereby offer at ſuch a Meeting or Meetings, firſt, To prove him, as well as T: Hicks, an Abuſer of us and our Writings by Forgery and Perverſion; And next, to maintain thoſe Doctrines which are indeed believed and aſſerted by us, to be Scriptural, and therefore Chriſtian. And if this will not pleaſe him I ſhall not think my ſelf obliged to gratify every nice and critical Humour he is troubled with; but leave him to tire himſelf with the Pain of his own manifeſt and merited Diſquiet: Though my Soul beſeecheth Almighty God, if it pleaſe him, to turn him and the Hearts of our Enemies, that they may ſee how much they wound Chriſtianity, in pretending to defend it, and grieve that Holy Spirit which would lead them into Holineſs, Meekneſs, Patience and Love, by theſe Tempeſtuous Aſſaults upon the Faith, Practice and Perſons of their Harmleſs Neighbours.

I am a Real Friend in the Univerſal Principle of God to all Men, and therein ſeek Peace with all Men,

THE SKIRMISHER Defeated, AND TRUTH Defended.

BEING An Answer to a Pamphlet, Entituled, A Skirmiſh made upon Quakeriſm.

By William Penn.

Jam iii. 13, 14, 16. Who is a Wiſe Man, and endued with Knowledge among you? Let him ſhew out of a Good Converſation his Works with Meekneſs of Wiſdom: But if ye have bitter Envying and Strife in your Hearts, Glory not, and Lye not againſt the Truth: For, where Envying and Strife is, there is Confuſion, and every Evil Work.

OF all the Evils that attend Controverſie about Religion, there is none more Odious and Provoking, than that of Miſ-ſtating Principles, and giving That under Men's Names, to the World, for their Doctrine and Judgment, which they abhor to believe, much more to aſſert and divulge to others. And this I hope, I may without Offence add, That to be Miſrepreſented hath moſtly been the Lot of TRUTH in all Ages, and Her peculiar Difficulty and Suffering from the World: For, no ſooner has Almighty God Bleſt Mankind with farther Diſcoveries of His Heavenly Will, and Divine Helps to perform it, than ſome or other, and thoſe not a Few, have immediately oppoſed themſelves to that Work, and the Lovers and Abettors of it: Nor have thoſe Adverſaries been of the Rabble, Men of no Letters, Education, or Pretence to Religion, by no Means, much the contrary, the Learned Crew, the Clergy, that Great Corporation of Religion; it hath been generally ſuch, the Chemarims, Men of the Black Robe, that from a Pretence to Greater Knowledge than others, an Education in the Studies of Divinity, a Peculiar Warrant and Miſſion, with the Countenance of Worldly Authority, have uſed their Skill, and employed their Abilities to traduce TRUTH, and ſtigmatize Her Followers; expoſing Both to the Fury or Mockery of the World: Tell me when this fell out otherwiſe, and allow me Scripture-Story but to be True and Sacred.

I pretend not now to write an Hiſtory, no nor to Epitomize that which is already writ, nor need I, for the Caſe is evident; but becauſe Examples are ſo ready, I will inſtance in Him that ſaid, I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life: One While the Scribes and Phariſees took hold of his Nonconformity to their Cuſtoms, and then He was a Deſpiſer of Moſes, a Breaker of the Law, One that made Void the Traditions of the Fathers: Another While, He was a Mean Fellow, but a Carpenter's Son; And what Man of Quality would follow Him? Or who would make a Meſſiah of a Mechanick? Or a Saviour of ſo Servile an Offspring? But when this would not do, Then He was a Samaritan, and had a Devil, and Caſt out Devils by Beelzebub the Prince of Devils; thereby rendring His Perſon hateful to the Jews, that refuſ'd all Commerce with the Samaritans, and his Wonderful Works ſuſpected of a Diabolical Power, leſt the People ſhould believe in Him. But this Trick failing, and the People believing, leſt any of Note ſhould be taken with him, they fling out, That he was a very Idiot, one that knew not Letters; and that none followed him but thoſe that were Curſed, and knew not the Law, the Rabble, the Vulgar, and Illiterate People. But when this Stratagem ſucceeded not to leſſen his Reputation, and queſtion his Pretences, they bruited up and down, that for all his pretended Perfection, He was a Looſe Perſon, a Wine-Bibber, a Companion of Publicans and Sinners, not fit to be the Leader of a Strict Sect, nor qualified for ſo Glorious a Work as that of the Meſſiah's. God ſtill blaſting their Deſigns, and the People flocking after Him, admiring His Doctrine, His Authority, His Wiſdom, and His Miracles, the Jewiſh Council of Doctors and Rabbies roundly accuſe Him of Blaſphemy, and have the Confidence and Cruelty to ſeek his Life, telling Pilate, that They have a Law, and by their Law he ought to Dye; but Pilate ſcrupling the Matter, and finding their Proofs ſhort, faints in their Buſineſs, which they perceiving, with one loud Cry, as it were Daring Pilate to deny them their Murderous Ends, tell him, He is an Enemy to Cæſar, hoping, though Pilate would not concern himſelf with their Laws and Cuſtoms, yet that being Cæſar's Deputy and Officer, he would not ſuffer any Man to live that was a Declared Enemy to Cæſar's Government; and they had their End.

Nor did his Diſciples fare better, who were accounted Enemies to the Law and Scriptures, Seducers, Deceivers of the People, Peſtilent Fellows, Sowers of Sedition, Turners of the World upſide down, &c. But who were they that made this Lamentable Oppoſition? Were they Literally Heathens, or Profeſſedly Infidels? No ſuch Matter; for that might have in ſome Senſe extenuated the Crime, at leaſt have ſpoil'd our Parallel; but they were the Offspring of Abraham, Great Scripturians, to whom pertain'd the Covenants, Promiſes, Adoption, and if we will take their Word for it, Children of God, in Bondage to None; though it's not to be doubted but that they were by Nature Heathens, and for all their Great Profeſſion, Infidels in Spirit, and Great Slaves to Sin, and Children of the Evil One, all this While. Now this has been our Caſe, who are in Reproach called Quakers.

In the Firſt Place, we muſt honeſtly and plainly confeſs, before Almighty God, and all Men, that we have been of the Common Maſs of Mankind, and had our Converſation in the Times paſt, in the Vanities, Pleaſures, Sports and Luſts of this World, Living in ſome Reſpect, Without God and Chriſt in the World (though under a Profeſſion both of God and Chriſt, as the moſt Part of Chriſtendom (ſo called) do at this Day;) and in this dead Eſtate to the Living Senſe and Enjoyment of God and Chriſt in our Souls, the Lord Viſited us, and by His own Convincing and Reproving Light, Power and Spirit, hath he awakened us, and brought us to behold Him, whom we, under all our Profeſſion of Religion, had more or leſs grieved and pierced with our Vain Thoughts, Idle Words, and Unholy Actions; and to Sorrow with True Godly Sorrow, and be in unfeigned Bitterneſs, as for our Firſt-Born, or our Only Child; the Lord thus Redeeming us through his Holy Rebukes and Judgments, from an Evil Converſation, and Converting us to Himſelf by His own Righteous Law in our Hearts. And when it had pleaſed God thus to rouſe us out of our Carnal Security, and Fire our Houſe of Empty Profeſſion about our Ears, and open the Book of Conſcience, and call us to Judgment, kindling his Holy Terrors in our Hearts, becauſe of our paſt Converſation, that had been in the Vain and Sinful Faſhions and Cuſtoms of the World, calling God our Father, and not Born of Him, and Chriſt Lord, and not by His Holy Spirit, neither had taken up His Daily Croſs, to the ſlaying of our own Wills and Carnal Affections, notwithſtanding the great Profeſſion that we in Words made of Him, and the Chriſtian Religion, we came to ſee that True Chriſtianity was another Thing than the World apprehended, and that as he was no more a Jew that was one One outward, ſo neither was he a Chriſtian that was one outward; but he was a True Jew and Chriſtian that was one inward, whoſe Praiſe is not of Men, but of God; in this Zeal that God had begotten in us for his Living Way, the Spiritual Circumciſion, the Right Chriſtianity, namely, To be Chriſt-like, to do the Will of God in Earth as it is done in Heaven, to Live Unſpotted from the World, and no more we to Live, Rule and Order, but Chriſt that Liveth in us, which is to have Eternal Life abiding in us. In this Godly Zeal, I ſay, for this Pure and Living Way, we frequently teſtified to all People, What GOD had done for us, where He found us, what He Diſcovered to us, what He Condemned us for, what He Redeemed us from, and what He had brought us to, earneſtly recommending the Light of Chriſt Within, that manifeſts the Mind of Chriſt unto them, vehemently decrying the Lifeleſs Profeſſion they Worſhipped GOD the Eternal Spirit, in; and ſhewing to them a more Excellent Way, becauſe a more Pure and Spiritual Way; manifeſting to them how that they called Chriſt their 1676. Lord, and did not obey Him; their Saviour, and were not ſaved from Sin by Him; yea, how they Magnify'd Him in the Hiſtory, and Crucify'd Him in the Myſtery, warning them of their Carnal Faith, Hope and Security they lived in, which cleanſed not their Conſciences from dead Works, nor overcame the Vain and Wicked Spirit of the World, particularly exhorting them to turn away from their Hireling Teachers, that had cauſed them to err; who, though they ſaid, Thus ſaith the Lord, the Lord never ſpoke by them; and God ſaid of Old, Such ſhould not profit the People, who Fed and Clothed themſelves of the Flock, but had no Heavenly Bread, no Green Paſtures, no Pure Fountain to feed and refreſh the Flock with; and that all ſhould learn of the Lord, that Teacheth his People himſelf by His own Good Spirit in their Inward Parts, according to the Tenour of his Second and Everlaſting Covenant, That they turn not again unto Folly.

For this Teſtimony Sake hath the Devil raged, and plotted our Ruin ever ſince we have been a People, now like a Lion, then like a Lamb; one While in the Appearance of a Serpent, another While in the Shape of a Dove; but the Lord God Jehovah hath kept us hitherto, none of his Weapons have yet proſpered, and 'tis our Faith none ever ſhall; for our Confidence is in him whom the Winds and Seas obey.

Sometimes they tell us of our Novelty, as the Jews did Chriſt; Abraham was before thee, ſay the Jews; Before Abraham was, I am, ſays Chriſt; the Chriſtians were counted Upſtarts both by Jews and Gentiles; yet their Way, and ſo ours, the Pure, Plain, Spiritual Religion and Worſhip, was before Jew or Gentile were; anon we are Ignorant, Illiterate, Mechanical; by and by we are Subtil Jeſuits, Crafty Deceivers; then Familiſts, as quickly Papiſts; by ſome counted Enemies to Cæſar; by others Temporizers: Our Viſage is continually marr'd in the Eyes of the Outſide Chriſtians, as was our Bleſſed Lord's and Maſter's in the Eyes of the Outſide Jews; for what can eſcape their Cenſure; there is a Sort of Men nothing pleaſes; one ſays we are Socinians, owning Chriſt to be but Meerly a Man; another, that we are Sabellians and Valentinians, and deny the Manhood of Chriſt; ſtarts up a Third, and ſays, The Quakers expect to be Juſtified by their own Works; a Fourth preſently crys out, They will do nothing unleſs the Spirit moves them (how are the Works ours then?) Some Impriſon us, becauſe for Conſcience-Sake we cannot take up Arms; Others, For Fear we ſhould. Again, our Plainneſs in Apparel is concluded Singularity; Our Proper Speech, Rudeneſs; Our Scripture-Dialect, Canting; If we conſcientiouſly refuſe them our Hat, 'tis Pride; If out of Pure Tenderneſs we cannot Swear, 'tis Contempt of Authority; and if we deny to Pay the Parſon Tythes, 'tis reputed Robbery, though we have nothing for our Money of him: In fine, our Silence goes for Sullenneſs; our Sobriety for Moroſity; our Frugality for Covetouſneſs; and for our Doctrines, they are only Antipodes to Truth; for we are made to Deny God, Chriſt, Spirit, the Immortality of the Soul (yet that we hold our Souls to be God, Chriſt, and Holy Spirit too) that we deny the Scriptures, Miniſtry, Church-Ordinances, Juſtification and Salvation by Chriſt, the Reſurrection, Rewards and Puniſhments; and which is yet farther obſervable, as it fared with our Deareſt Maſter and His Followers then, The Scribes, Phariſees, Sadducees, Galileans, &c. ready before to devour one another, immediately united, and combined to oppoſe, traduce, trap, and enſnare them; ſo has it fallen out with us; for the Hand of every Party hath been lifted up againſt us; I ſcarcely know one that is under any Conſiderable Notice in Chriſtendom, (however Violent and Irreconcileable among themſelves) that hath refuſed that Common League and Confederacy, or that hath not by ſome or other of it's principal Agents, Vigorouſly, if not Scornfully and Perſecutingly, decry'd and oppos'd us; yet we are Alive, and a People, Bleſſed be the Name of the LORD. This leads me to aſk the Queſtion, Why did they ſo uſe our Bleſſed Lord and His Diſciples? The Anſwer is eaſie, Becauſe they ſaw Him not, they knew Him not, nor His Followers as they were; they had loſt their Divine Savour, and profeſſed the Words and Sayings of Moſes and the Prophets, not in their Life and Spirit; and I can give no other Reaſon why we are ſo little known to the World of Chriſtians in our Age, than that they hold generally the Chriſtian Profeſſion out of the Chriſtian Nature, Life and Spirit; for we are the moſt miſ-underſtood and miſtaken of any People, whence it follows, that our Antagoniſts of every Party, have charged us with Doctrines and Principles not of our owning, but their own Miſtaking, if not Inventing, which is worſe. 'Twere too tedious to enumerate all their Attempts, there are not leſs, I believe, than One Hundred Books extant, Two Thirds of the moſt of them are Imagination, Romance, mance, Fiction, and no Judgment, or Doctrine of ours. This is Notorious by our Anſwers; and I hope every Man's Word is to be taken about what his own Faith is, though not in the Proof of his Faith, to be a True Faith.

Of later Times, Two Perſons have excelled in this Way of oppoſing us, Thomas Hicks and John Faldo; they are both Anſwered, according to their reſpective Tracts; and their farther Defence remaineth hitherto unattempted by any.

'Tis with a Paſſage in my Anſwer to J. Faldo's firſt Book, that this ſame I. C. ſtiled, A Miniſter of the Goſpel, and a Skirmiſher too, offers at an Encounter: I queſtion not his Courage ſo much as his Skill; he ſhows Will enough, but his Abilities fail him: I am willing enough to perſwade my ſelf, That he is more Novice than Soldier in this War, and that this is rather a Spurt of Heat, then a Deliberate Action; for Wiſe Men count their Coſt, Fools only invade without Force. I hope he will not be angry with me for this Opinion of him; I am ſure he ought not, if he be A Miniſter of the Goſpel; I know not how he will take it as a Skirmiſher, an Employment of ſo different a Nature; but certain it is, that Miſtake is more pardonable than Malice, and Ignorance excuſable than Fiction: I would not willingly fall upon him with thoſe ſevere Terms, and put him upon that Difficulty I have been conſtrained to treat others with, and reduce them to; I would chuſe rather to inform, than chide him; only I muſt tell him, that he is fallen into the Road of as great and arch a Perverter of our Writings and Sayings, as any Enemy that ever appear'd againſt us, and improved his Miſtake upon us, by as many Foul, Impious, and Deteſtable Conſequences (even to a Tautology) as any other Adverſary hath done, which would make one think, that there was more of Deſign than Accident, and Premeditation than Inadvertency in the Buſineſs. Be it as it will, the Man pretends to be offended at me, and endeavours to make others offended too. 'Tis highly fit as a Chriſtian-Man, that I do my Beſt to remove the Reaſon of it, and that I ſhall, by the Help of Almighty God.

Firſt then, I will ſet down that Paſſage of mine, which he makes the Reaſon of writing his Pamphlet, and annex ſome of the Conſequences he draws from my Words, by which he would render them and me Odious to his Reader, and then fall to my Defence, which will not be difficult, and, I hope, not tedious to my ingenuous and inquiring Reader.

No Command in the Scripture is any farther obliging upon any Man, than as he finds a Conviction upon his Conſcience — It is Conviction that can only oblige to Obedience — When any Man is Convinced, that what was commanded another, it required of him, then, and not till then, he is rightly Authorized to perform it.

Theſe Parcels has he cull'd out of a Book of mine, called, Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity, I writ in Anſwer to John Faldo's Book, Entituled, Quakeriſm No Chriſtianity.

Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity, pag. 71, 72.

Let's now ſee the Uſe he makes of them, and what Language he makes them to ſpeak.

That this Poſition opens the Flood-Gate to all Error, Atheiſm, Impiety, and Wickedneſs; and that it is the Overthrow of all Law and Government, pag. 2. That Sins of Ignorance are no Sins; for all Conviction is by Knowledge. — That this juſtifies Paul's Blaſphemy and Perſecution, and groſs Sins againſt the Goſpel, becauſe he did it ignorantly, pag. 3. It juſtifies all Erroneous Doctrines, and Practical Miſapprehenſions, and whatever Vices lie in the Underſtandings of Men. —— Penn's Poſition doth juſtifie the Iriſh Rebellion, the French Maſſacre, the Marian Perſecution, the Ten Perſecutions of the Primitive Churches, the Gun-Powder Treaſon, Judaiſm, Mahometaniſm, Paganiſm, Popery, and all Erroneous Sects and Parties in the World, with all their Falſe Principles and Practices. Chriſt ſaith, It is Life Eternal to know God and Jeſus Chriſt, Joh. 17. 3. Penn's Poſition ſaith, If you are Ignorant and Unconvinced, no Law can lay hold on you; if you be deluded, and practiſe according to the Conviction of your deluded Mind, you are warranted by the Commands of God, which do all center in Conviction, pag. 4. Again, If this Poſition be true, then Conſcience and Conviction is God; and whatever Conſcience ſays, muſt be done, be it Right or Wrong; and it lies in the Power of Conſcience, to make void all the Laws of God, and do what it pleaſeth. —— It will alſo follow, That he is the moſt free from Sin who hath the moſt Seared Conſcience, and that the ready Way to Obedience and Salvation, is to Debauch and Sear the Conſcience. —— If Conviction be the Ground of Obedience, and the Authority of Scripture depend upon

1676. the Rectitude and Purity of Conſcience, then all Rational Laws, Order and Government, both divine and human, are overturned, and a Stop is put to all Religion and Piety towards God, to all Conſcience, Honeſty and Charity towards Men——So Princes and Rulers may command and make never ſo good Laws, Conſcience may come and ſay, I deny all thoſe Laws and the Makers of them; Children may refuſe to obey Parents; Servants, Maſters; and Inferiors, Superiors; if Conſcience ſhall be unconvinced, and if it be deluded, Subjects may murder their Princes; Children, their Parents; Servants, their Maſters; one Man another; there can be no Law, but Conſcience; and whatſoever Conſcience ſays, muſt ſtand, p. 5, 6. —— The Quakers Conſcience ſays one Thing, the Papiſts another, the Pagans, the Turks, the Jews, the Tyrants, the Traytors, the Hereticks, the Worldlings, the Hypocrites, the Proud, the Adulterers Conſcience, how many contrary Conſciences are theſe? How many Gods ſhall we have, and contradictory Laws, if Conſcience and Conviction be the only Thing which obligeth to Duty, p. 6, 7. Theſe, with abundance more of the like Nature, are the Conſequences he rather beſtows upon, than draws from my Words, as particularly he hath laid them down; pray hear his Farewel after ſuch a violent and virulent Skirmiſh, I would be glad to make the beſt of your Poſition, but I muſt profeſs my Conſcience and Conviction, p. 13. I refer my ſelf and what I have here writ, to impartial Cenſure, warning and entreating all People, as they love their Souls, to take Heed of Quakeriſm——Keep your Poiſon to your ſelf, and none will periſh by it but your ſelf; but if you will needs vend it, and in the View of the Nation, and ſuch at leaſt as know the Engliſh Tongue, ſet up a Poſition ſubverting all Religion, Law and Government, and levelling all holy and profitable Rules and Commands to Men's Luſts, leaving no Man in the World under any Obligation, or any Duty to God or Man, farther than he is convinced in his Conſcience; be it known to you, that Jeſus Chriſt hath his Servants abroad, to bear Teſtimony for him againſt ſuch GOD-BLASPHEMING AND SOUL-DAMNING ERRORS; and if you repent not, this that I have written ſhall riſe up in Judgment againſt you, and ſhall be an Aggravation of your Miſery in that Day.

Prepare to anſwer the Righteous Judge, if your Conſcience be blinded and ſeared now, it will be open and awaken then.

This, Reader, concludes his two Sheets of Skirmiſh upon me: But, by the Way, it ought to ſound very ſtrangely to my Reader, that a Man ſhould profeſs Conſcience and Conviction for this long Anathema againſt Conſcience and Conviction: But by that Time he is as well acquainted with theſe Sort of Men as I am, he will leave off wondering that ſuch Men contradict themſelves; indeed they live by it.

But what ſhall I do or ſay to this Goliah? Behold the Spoil of his Skirmiſh! He has invaded my Body and Soul, Religion and Life; theſe he thinks he leads away in Triumph after him; for I am (if he may be believed) by my Doctrine, an Heretick, a Blaſphemer, an Atheiſt, a Traytor, a Regicide, a Parricide, a Murderer of my Kindred and Neighbours, a Deſtroyer of all Government, Divine and Human, and a common Enemy to Mankind, unfit for this World, and for Heaven in the next, unleſs I repent, which ought to be very queſtionable to ſo diſſolute and impious a Wretch, as this pretended Miniſter of the Goſpel in his Skirmiſh hath been pleaſed to render me; what remains, but that the Dogs or the Lyons devour me, the Rabble or Government ſacrifice me? I am only fit for Prey, if this be true; what now ſhall I do, revile him? by no Means; revenge my ſelf by a bitter and invective Anſwer? No ſuch Matter; but may not I be angry with him? Not a Jot; What then? Pity and Inform him, though a Parſon; I think ſo too; wherefore overlooking all ſuch Provocations, I begin and proceed in this Method.

Firſt, I cannot but take it very ill, in Caſe I were unſound in any one Doctrine, not through Inadvertency, but knowingly and premeditately, that he, without any farther Search or unqueſtionable Proof, ſhould fault and impeach the Way I profeſs, and upbraid an entire People with my Miſtake; I aſk if this be the Way to perſwade me that he is a true Miniſter of the Goſpel, one that is zealous to promote the Commandments of God, that in doing this hath broke that of loving his Neighbour as himſelf, and doing unto others as he would have them do unto him; William Penn holds a groſs Error, therefore the People called Quakers, and the Way they profeſs, muſt be ſkirmiſh'd upon with the foul Names of Murderers, Rebels, Traytors, Atheiſts, Hereſy, Blaſphemy, &c. What Part of Logick or Philoſophy is this? None, I think; I am ſure there is neither Law nor Goſpel for it; but 'tis too frequent with many to live in the Tranſgreſſion of thoſe Commandments they verbally admire, even then when they are pleading for them.

In the next Place, I muſt needs obſerve to him his Diſingenuity in telling me, He would be glad to make the beſt of my Poſition, after he had manifeſtly made the worſt he could, his two Sheets being ſtuffed with the moſt abominable Conſequences it had been poſſible for any Man to invent or aggravate againſt me; this ſeems to be a Degree beyond Ignorance, and looks very ſcurvily for a Man of his Function and Pretences, Skirmiſhing laid aſide.

But that which weighs the moſt with me to ſuſpect my preſent Adverſary of unfair Dealing, (to let ſuch Words as Forgery ſlip for this Time) is his taking my Matter to Pieces, clipping Sentences, and dropping that by the Way, which read with the reſt, would, in my Apprehenſion, have defended the Paſſage from the Poſſibility of any reaſonable Exception. Shall four Lines and an Half of a Book of above 250 Pages, and thoſe cull'd too out of three ſeveral Places, reprobate the Book, the Author, his Religion, and the Body of People he relates to? I hope he has ſo much Conſcience and Conviction left, upon ſecond Thoughts, (if for my ſake he is not out of Charity with both) as to condemn this Sort of Proceeding with us; but perhaps he will tell me, I make too much of it, and that it was but a Skirmiſh; if ſo, then no Battle or ſolid Encounter of both Armies, and if not, How came we and our Religion to be defeated, and taken, in his Apprehenſion; doubtleſs this muſt go but for a Vapour, and proves the Parſon more a Man of his Words than of his Deeds.

Nor is this all the Ground of my Jealouſy, for unleſs he had met with my Book by Accident, and had caſt his Eye only on thoſe three Places, not reading what went before, came between, or followed after, (a Thing ſcarcely poſſible) and upon that tranſient Notice had ſally'd forth, and ſkirmiſh'd upon me, (a Raſhneſs no Man in his Wits would be guilty of) or that when he had fallen ſo patly on thoſe three Places, he reſolv'd to ſee no more for fear of being better inform'd, a Diſingenuity greatly unbecoming a Man of his Pretenſions, it muſt and will follow, that he did knowingly and on Purpoſe omit both giving his Reader the Reaſon of this Part of the Controverſy between me and John Faldo, and my Senſe at large in Defence of our firſt Poſition; which done, would have ſav'd him the Trouble and Danger of a Skirmiſh, and me the preſent Pains of giving him this Repulſe. And here I intreat the Reader's Patience for a little Digreſſion, if yet it be one.

John Faldo writes a Book, called, Quakeriſm no Chriſtianity; in it he charges the People called Quakers with ſeveral erroneous Principles, whereof one is in general Terms, That we deny the Scriptures, upon this he beſtows Nine Chapters; One of them is taken up with this Title, That the Quakers affirm the Doctrines, Commands, Promiſes, and Holy Examples expreſſed in Scripture, as ſuch, not to be at all Binding upon them. To this Book I return'd my Anſwer, entituled, Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity; I follow him Chapter by Chapter in my Courſe, I undertake him upon this Head. To prove his Charge, he produces a Paſſage out of Edward Burroughs's Writings, much at the ſame Rate that this Adverſary quotes me, and ſuch Harmony they hold, that they fall both upon the ſame Conſtruction of us, as if they had compared Notes, or had abuſed us by Inſtinct. This I complain of in my Anſwer to J. C. how comes J. C. to make the ſame falſe Step, and yet have read that Anſwer; E. Burroughs's Words were theſe, as cited by J. F. That is no Command of God to me, what he commanded to another; did any of the Saints which we read of act by the Command which was to another, not having the Command to themſelves——This J. F. improves at the ſame Rate that J. C. doth mine, to wit, That it opens a Way to all Lewdneſs and Impiety, and hath all Iniquity in the Womb of it, extending theſe Words to all Laws, which (as I make appear in my Anſwer, however overlook'd by this Man) were limited by E. B. and me, to Temporary and extraordinary Caſes.

Had J. F. been quiet here, I could have hoped that he had both ſeen and ſorrowed for his Miſtake; but he perſiſts in his horrid Abuſe of E. B. and begins at the ſame Rate with me for defending him: This is in his Vindication of his former Book, to which I Rejoyn at large in Defence of my Anſwer, reſume the Controverſy entirely, diſtinguiſh of his Fallacies and Miſrepreſentations, and aſſert and maintain our own Principles, confirming them with ſome Hundreds of reputed Authorities, as well of former as more modern Ages. In this Diſcourſe (hitherto unattempted by any) I make a farther Defence of E. B's and my own Senſe from

J. F's

1676. J. F's Miſconſtruction, which it had become this pretended Miniſter of the Goſpel to have conſulted, before he had engaged himſelf upon ſo ſtrange a Skirmiſh.

That this Injury done me may more diſtinctly appear, I ſhall here ſet down once more (I hope without Offence to the Reader) the preſent Parſon's Text, not his Sermon, that's too tedious.

——No Command in the Scripture is any farther obliging upon any Man, than as he finds a Conviction upon his Conſcience——It is Conviction that can only oblige to Obedience——When any Man is convinced that what was commanded another is required of him, then, and not 'till then, he is rightly authoriz'd to perform it.

I omit to mention his Comment; but every Thing that is vicious, prophane and diabolical he makes to follow upon theſe Premiſes.

That my Reader may the better ſee whether my Matter and Deſign, at large, merits any ſuch Conſtructions, I chuſe to inſert, and that as the beſt and brieſeſt Way, the 5th Chapter of my Rejoynder to J. Faldo, which contains his Charge and Proof, my Anſwer (thus pared and patched by J. C.) his Reply, and my Rejoynder, as a more compleat Defence of E. B's and my Aſſertion againſt the vile Interpretations of J. Faldo, ſo dextrouſly followed by J. C. and therefore equally fit for him.

Here follows the 5th Chapter of my Rejoynder to J. F. containing a Vindication of my Doctrine from any ſuch Evil Conſequences as are by I. C. charged upon it, with this farther Advertiſement, that the Reader obſerve, that thoſe Lines of Capital Letters are the Paſſages quoted by I. C. and all the reſt of my Anſwer in the Common Letter, with Comma's on the Sides, herein recited, and much more, is wilfully omitted by my Adverſary; alſo the Reader is deſired to conſider of the Notes at the Bottom, by which he will be helped to underſtand the Diſingenuity of I. C. againſt me, my Friends, and our holy Profeſſion.

Of Scripture-Commands, what are binding, and what not. Our Adverſary's Diſingenuity obſerved.

p. 34. BUT however, he has fail'd in his laſt Chapter, doubtleſs he thinks he has done my Buſineſs in this; he begins like himſelf.

Rep. My Charge and Argument in this Chapter is, The Quakers affirm the Doctrines, Commands, Promiſes, holy Examples expreſſed in Scripture, as ſuch, not to be at all binding to us; ſuch an Argument, and ſo prov'd by me (mark Reader) as a Thouſand Penns can never invalid it.

Rejoyn. What can there be more conceited than this? He muſt live very lonely, and far from Neighbours, that proclaims ſo much Praiſe to himſelf, and have wonderful Confidence to bid Defiance ſo vainly to others.

Reader, I beſeech thee for the Truth's Sake, on whoſe Side ſoever thou ſhalt find it to be, to examine with all Impartiality his Charge, our Anſwer; his Reply, and our Rejoynder: If his Honeſty, Reaſon and Juſtice hold any Proportion to his great Confidence, we yield: But if upon an impartial Conſideration he ſhall be found to clip and pervert our Matter, and to ſhuffle with us in his own, once do a poor People Right, in giving Judgment againſt this horrible Injuſtice.

The Charge thou haſt heard, the Proof was this, That is no Command of God to me, what he commanded to another: Did any of the Saints, which we read of, act by that Command which was to another, not having the Command to themſelves, &c.

Now, before I give my Anſwer, as it was ſet down in my Book, I ſhall inſert his Quotation of my Anſwer.

Rep. (p. 34, 35.) To this, ſaith P. I anſwer briefly and plainly, and he is as good as his Word. No Commands, ſaith he, in the Scripture, are any farther obliging upon any Man, than as he finds a Conviction upon his Conſcience, otherwiſe Men ſhould be engaged without, if not againſt Conviction; a Thing unreaſonable in a Man.

Rejoyn. He has a notable Way of Contracting his Adverſary's Anſwer; I will ſet down what I writ, faithfully, plainly, and briefly.

Page 71,72,73. “ Edward Burroughs's Expreſſions may be taken two Ways, and “ both ſafe enough to the Honour and Credit of the Scripture, though not to the “ Charity or Honeſty of J. Faldo. Now follows that Part he cited. NO COMMAND IN THE SCRIPTURE IS ANY FARTHER OBLIGING UPON ANY “ MAN, THAN AS HE FINDS A CONVICTION UPON HIS CONSCIENCE, (a) other-

“ (a) otherwiſe Men ſhould be engaged without, if not againſt Conviction, a “ Thing unreaſonable in a Man; Therefore the Apoſtle, when he wrote to the “ Church, exhorted them not to do thoſe Things whereof they were (b) aſhamed, “ to ſhun what was manifeſted to be Evil; and affirms, that whatever might be “ known of God was manifeſted within, for God had ſhewn it unto them. (c) SO
“ THAT CONVICTION CAN ONLY OBLIGE TO OBEDIENCE; and ſince
“ what works that Conviction is the manifeſting Light, univerſal Grace, or quickning “ Spirit in the Heart of Mankind, it follows, that the principal Ground for “ our Faith in the Scriptures, and Reaſon of our Obedience to the holy Precepts therein “ contained, is the Manifeſtation, Conviction and ſecret Drawings of the Light
“ or Spirit of God in the Conſcience: And thus E. B's Words are ſound and ſcriptural, “ for the Scriptures are chiefly believ'd to be true upon Conviction, therefore “ every Practice therein; AND WHEN ANY MAN IS CONVINCED, “ THAT WHAT WAS COMMANDED ANOTHER, IS REQUIRED OF “ HIM, THEN, AND NOT TILL THEN, HE IS RIGHTLY AUTHORIZED
“ TO PERFORM IT. Again, Such Commands either relate to Ordinary or Extraordinary “ Caſes; (d) By Ordinary Caſes, I mean ſuch as chiefly concern Faith
“ and Holy Life, which are general, permanent and indiſpenſible, and then I deny
“ his Conſequence. By Extraordinary Caſes, I underſtand Moſes's going to Pharaoh, “ the Prophets ſeveral Manners of Appearance to the Kings, Prieſts and People
“ of Iſrael, with other Temporary Commands, relating to outward Services; &c.
“ (e) And ſo we ſay, that what is commanded One Man, is not binding, as ſuch, “ upon another: But when the Lord ſhall ſay, If thou ſinneſt, thou ſhalt die; If “ thou keepeſt my Commands, thou ſhalt live; Be ye holy, for I the Lord your God “ am holy; —— For your ſelves KNOW YE NOT how ye ought to follow us? &c.
“ I ſay, theſe Precepts and Examples are obliging upon all; Why? Becauſe they “ more or leſs meet with a Conviction in the Conſciences of all: For I am perſwaded, “ none that has a reaſonable Soul, who has not (f) out-lived his Day, but “ would readily ſay, Theſe are true and weighty Sayings; For Faith in God, and
“ an holy ſelf-denying Life, are neceſſary both to Temporal and Eternal Happineſs.

It was, Reader, to this ſober Anſwer he flung out his foregoing Rant, and makes this following Comment and Reply, viz. ſays J. Faldo.

Rep. They are no Commands unleſs we think ſo. 'Tis no Sin to break all the Commands in the Bible, if our Conſciences can be ſo blind, dead or hardened, as not to tell us 'tis a Sin. They who thought they did God good Service in killing his Servants did not ſin in the leaſt, becauſe they were not convinced of a Command to the contrary. To vindicate my whole Chapter concerning the Scriptures. 'Tis a Principle that hath all (g) Iniquity in the Womb of it. Who can find Names for ſuch Impious Principles? Penn hath oppoſed, ſcorned the Truth, vilified it's Teachers and Defenders, ſo as ſcarce ever Man did; vented the moſt pernicious Errors, told abundance of thoſe Things that are known to himſelf to be falſe.

Rejoyn. Reader, This is all the Juſtice and Reaſon I can have from this pretended meek and ſuffering Non-conforming Parſon. What would ſuch Men do, had they as much Power as Anger? But I ſhall leave him with his Pride and Paſſion.

(a) Ought any Man to obey what he does not know? and is not Knowledge Conviction? I provoke him or any to give me a Scripture for that. But more of this anon; obſerve what follows.

(b) The Apoſtle here does plainly exhort them to make their Conviction their Rule, for there was ſomething in them that brought Shame over them for their Evil Deeds, the true Light and Spirit, that makes known what of God is to be known in Man.

(c) True ſtill; for Man can't ſee without Eyes, nor act without Knowledge: But the Queſtion is What Conviction this is; the Words prove that it is by the Light and Spirit of God; then the ſeared Conſcience and debaucht Mind I. C. ſpeaketh of are plainly excluded; here I mention the Conviction and that which works it; What Countenance doth either give I. C. to heap theſe foul and Impious Conſequences upon me?

(d) This plain Diſtinction I made is left out by him, that he might the better have his Ends and conceal the Injuſtice of his Work.

(e) This is a direct Contradiction to his Inference and Allegation, who would have me to hold, that what is in any Caſe commanded one Man, is not binding upon another, when I limit it to Extraordinary Caſes, and juſt after ſay, that the Moral Commands of God are obliging upon all. How is it then that I deny the Ten Commandments to belong to all Men, or that I hold, Men may kill, ſteal, &c. and not be culpable? O diſingenuous Man!

(f) This Out-living their Day plainly ſhews, that I excluded ſeared Conſciences; how then do I make a ſeared Conſcience my Rule of Obedience, or the readieſt Way to Salvation?

(g) Is not this the Language of I. C? Are they not Brethren in Abuſe?

ſion. Is there any Thing more clear, than that he extends the Words of E. Burroughs to Ordinary Caſes, which were wholly writ about Extraordinary; and that he takes no more Notice of my Diſtinction, than if there had been none made? As if it had been formerly an equal Sin for any not to be Circumciſed, and to (h) Murder his Father or Prince; or that there was the ſame Conviction univerſally upon the Conſciences of all Men, not to wear Linſey-Woolſey, as to do by others as they would have others do to them. Levit. 19. 18, 19.

That what we ſay was E. Burrough's Meaning his own Words undeniably prove: ‘ One, ſays he, was ſent to (i.) baptize, and another to preach the Goſpel: which were particular and extraordinary Commands. He clearly ſhuffles and evades the dint of my Anſwer, and would run us within the Borders of Ranteriſm. The (k) Queſtion is not, Are God's Commands no Commands, unleſs we think ſo, and therefore no Sin to break all the Commands in the Bible, which is the Comment he beſtows) upon us) but whether this or that ſpecial Injunction to any Particular Perſon or Perſons, to this or that peculiar End, be warrantably imitable, without ſufficient Conviction and Commiſſion: Muſt J. F. Baptize becauſe John Baptized? or turn Preacher becauſe Peter was one? E. B. only denyed Imitation of Ancient Times in Temporary and Shadowy Services, and all thoſe Preachings, Prayings, Ordinances and Churches, that have not (as Peter Martyr well expreſſes it) the Holy Spirit for their Root. So that inſtead of his holding a Principle that hath all Iniquity in the Womb of it, John Faldo firſt perverts his Words, and then to confute them both implies a Denial of the Holy Spirit to be the only right Leader to the Performance of Goſpel Prayer, Preaching and Ordinances, and of gathering of Evangelical Churches, and does as good as tell us, that God's Commandments are ſuch to him, not becauſe of any Conviction in himſelf of the Juſtneſs of them, but from the Teſtimony of the Scriptures, which for all his high Boaſts of Chriſtianity, is a State far beneath thoſe noble Gentiles, who not having an outward Law, were a Law unto themſelves, having the Effects of it written in their Hearts, their Conſcience bearing witneſs, &c.

And this we may boldly ſay, That ſuch as ever acted from that inward Senſe, never thought they did God good Service in Killing his Servants, whilſt great Admirers of the Letter of the Scriptures, and who, as concerning this Commandment, Thou ſhalt not Murder, thought themſelves moſt unblameable, believed, They did God good Service in killing his Servants.

Nor can I think it ſo great a Diſgrace to our Cauſe, that we ingenuouſly profeſs the Reaſon why we deſire to fear God, and keep his Commandments, doing unto others as we would have them do unto us, not ſo much to be from the Letter of the Scripture, as the Convictions of the Eternal Light and Spirit of God in our Conſciences; as it ought to be unto John Faldo and his Adherents, who ground their Obedience upon the Letter of the Scripture, and not upon ſuch internal Convictions. What is it but to ſay, They could Lye, Swear, Steal, Kill, &c. (l) without any Remorſe, did they not find ſuch Injunctions and Prohibitions upon record? A Conſequence ſo deteſtable, yet ſo natural to their Principles, that if this render them not able Guides to the very Confines of Ranteriſm and Atheiſm, I ſhall gladly ask an Excuſe for my Ignorance. But that I may Leave nothing undone that may compleat the Satisfaction of every moderate Inquirer, I ſhall farther weigh and rejoyn to theſe Words of his.

They who thought they did God good Service in killing his Servants, did not ſin in the leaſt, becauſe they were not convinced of a Command to the contrary; nor the Idolaters in the Caſe of Baal, becauſe they thought Baal to be a God indeed.

Now, Reader, obſerve the Evaſion: (m) This Paſſage relates not to Men's practi-

(h) Is not this a plain Diſtinction? What could be plainer againſt any ſuch Conſequences as J. C. draws, and to prove that I underſtood not what he renders me to have intended?

(i) How plentiful are the Evidences of our Innocency; and how diſtinctly may the Reader ſee that E. B. writ of Particular and Extraordinary Commands?

(k) Let me pray the Reader, and prevail with him to dwell a while upon this Paſſage, and do an Innocent Man, yea, an Abuſed People, Juſtice. Does this plead for Ranteriſm, Atheiſm, Blaſphemy, Murder, &c. as J. C. tells us?

(l) This is the Tendency of his Doctrine, who flies out upon Conſcience and inward Conviction, as if they were the only great Enemies of his Salvation.

(m) This notable Clauſe clears our Senſe more particularly, and gives a very plain Diſcovery of our Enemy's Diſingenuity. We ſpeak of Poſitive, J. F. and J. C. conclude our Argument againſt all moral Commands: Theſe are Miniſters of the Goſpel all this while, if they may be believed.

practiſing what God commands, or our Tenderneſs in imitating other Saints without Commiſſion, for fear we ſhould offer ſtrange Fire, which is our Queſtion; but their doing that which God never commanded, yea, which Mankind in all Ages hath adjudged impious, and which to be ſure, his Holy Spirit, that, E. B. ſaid, All Men ſhould wait to be convinced, aſſiſted and led by, in fulfilling God's Commandments, never moved any to. He unworthily draws a general Concluſion againſt us from meer particular Premiſes. It ſeems Men are to act without, if not againſt Conviction, upon his Principle; and that it is the ſame Thing with him, to commit moral Enormities from an Hardned Heart, and to be tender of taking up an external Practice, or performing ſome Religious Duty, without the Convictions and Leadings of the Holy Spirit. The Apoſtle ſaid to ſuch as had not as yet ſo full clearneſs as others, That if any were otherwiſe-minded, God would reveal it. Phil. 3. 15. He did not injoyn them, during that Scruple, to believe or practiſe the Thing doubted; but therefore did Perſecutors act inexcuſably in their fiery Zeal, becauſe their blind Conſciences checkt them not: Again, If Blindneſs came from Education, it is, though Blindneſs ſtill (and therefore it was baſely done of J. Faldo to ſay in our Names, that it is not Sin in the leaſt, &c.) more excuſable: for in the Days of ſuch Ignorance God winks: But if it be a (n) Blindneſs, proceeding from long Diſobedience and Rebellion againſt the Convictions and Strivings of the good Spirit of God, as his word Hardned implies, then, I ſay, it is not only very heinous in God's Sight, but thoſe Perſons can never be excus'd either from great Guilt, or the Senſe of it in themſelves, let them or J. F. talk never ſo much of Conſcience.

Beſides, the moſt Eſſential, and Univerſally Neceſſary Commands of God were through all Ages confeſt; both before there was any of thoſe Writings, we rightly call the Scriptures of Truth, from the Law of Nature, as many ſtile it, or rather the Law of God placed in Man's Nature, and ſince, where they have never been; Therefore, whatever particular hardned and ſeared Conſciences may ſay, we have the Conſent of Mankind, and their own Rebellion and Lewdneſs againſt them. But the Words of J. Faldo in plain Terms import, as if, 1*ſt*, Men were not generally convinced of the Righteouſneſs of the Moral Commands of God; but that Men keep them becauſe they are in the Bible only; which runs againſt the Teſtimony of Scripture, the Conſent of Ages, and the Writings and Judgment of the moſt honeſt and learned Proteſtants. 2*ly*, As if it were a like Evil, Conſcientiouſly to forbear Running, Willing and Striving in Matters of Worſhip without the Spirit's Conduct, and ſearedly to plead for the Commiſſion of Murder and Idolatry, becauſe Men of ſuch Conſciences boggle not at it (though that is more than J. F. can prove, I mean that they have no Stroke or Remorſe) 3*ly*, As if we could Worſhip, Preach, gather Churches, and adminiſter Goſpel-Ordinances aright without the Spirit. 4*ly*, That he is not convinced by any other Teſtimony than the Scripture without, of any Tranſgreſſion againſt God's Law. 5*ly*, It ſuppoſes, that if Men ſtay'd till the Spirit mov'd, they ſhould ſtay long enough (who vainly prate of Praying by the Spirit notwithſtanding) never conſidering that the Spirit ſtandeth ready to Reveal it ſelf to their Aſſiſtance and Aſſurance, who wait for it, and that all the Children of God are led by the Spirit of God, which being our Poſition, had it but been weighed by this Adverſary, he could not (methinks) have been ſo unjuſt in his Aggravations.

'Tis true, ſhould we believe as he doth, that the Spirit is not to be waited for now adays to lead us, or that it is not ready to our Information, when we wait for it's Diſcoveries and Leadings, our Aſſertion would look very abſurd and looſe; for it were to let fall all Worſhip, but not upon our own Principle, as I ſaid before; for firſt, all Worſhip to God ought to be performed by the Aſſiſtance of his Holy Spirit; for of our ſelves we can do nothing that is good! And ſecondly, God's Spirit is ready to aſſiſt, inſtruct and comfort thoſe that wait diligently and patiently for it; yea, God hath given it to the Rebellious, that it may judge them, if it do not lead them. It is ſuch Proteſtant Doctrine, that I wonder Men ſhould not know their admired Anceſtors Faith when they meet it: O great Degeneration into Hardneſs and Ignorance! Laſtly, There is the ſame to be ſaid againſt him that pretends

(n) What ſays my Reader to this Paſſage and plain Proviſion made by me, againſt blinded, deluded and hardened, Minds and Conſciences? Does this agree well with my preſent Adverſary's ſwaggering Conſequences, eſpecially that which makes me to deny Sins of wilful Ignorance? What Goſpel can a Man ſo qualified be Miniſter of?

to ground all upon the Scripture, that he objects againſt us, who plead for the Conviction of Conſcience, which the Inſtance of the Jews Murder of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt unanſwerably proves. There was a Law, that Blaſphemers ſhould be put to Death; by this Law they apprehended Jeſus, adjudged and got him to be executed: Theſe Men above any Age exalted the Scriptures as the Only Rule. Where lies the Miſtake? Not in the Scripture, but in their blind and envious Application of it. Now I aſk, if the only Way for them to have come to the true Senſe and Knowledge of him, and eſcaped that Wicked Murder and the deplorable Conſequences of it had not been to have waited upon God for the (o) Conviction, Diſcoveries and Guidance of his Holy Spirit, ſince Fleſh and Blood and the utmoſt Wit of Man, with the Exactneſs of the meer Letter of the Scriptures, could never give unto that Generation, the certain Diſcerning, Knowledge and Savour, of him, whoſe very Words themſelves were Spirit and Life? It was by a Divine Touch, Senſe and Knowledge given from above, that he was truly diſcern'd, own'd and follow'd of thoſe that believ'd in him, and cleaved to him; (p) therefore ſaid Chriſt, No Man cometh to me but whom my Father draweth: Where was that Drawing but within. Again, Simon Peter, Fleſh and Blood hath not revealed (what? who I am) but my Father that is in Heaven. So that at laſt, Men muſt come to this Spiritual Senſe in themſelves, to underſtand and apply the very Commands of Scripture; otherwiſe, not Juſtice, but deteſtable Murder, may under the Name of it be confidently perpetrated; Whererefore we Exhort all, To have Recourſe unto God's Spirit, that illuminates certainly, and gives to act unblameably, by which the Scriptures are only underſtood as they ſhould be, and People brought into the Poſſeſſion of that Life of Righteouſneſs, they plentifully declare of. Had it not been for this inward Diſcerning, there had been no Ground for the Aboliſhment of the whole Jewiſh Service, which followed ſome Years after Chriſt's Aſcenſion. And it is the ſame Eternal Spirit that is the great Rule and Judge now, which God promiſed more particularly to ſhed abroad in the latter Days, and is the great inſeparable Priviledge from the New and Everlaſting Covenant.

But to conclude, Why ſhould it ſeem ſo Heterodox in J. Faldo's Judgment, ſince if Men believe the Scripture upon the Teſtimony of the Spirit, they practiſe it by the Knowledge and Power of the ſame; How elſe could Paul have decry'd Jewiſh Ceremonies; or we know, what to take, and what to leave? Or why do we omit any Command therein mentioned? They Circumciſed, therefore muſt I Circumciſe? They Baptized, muſt I therefore Baptize? With forty more particular Caſes, wherein nothing can ſecure any from the Imitation of them, ſet Conviction or Spiritual Diſcerning aſide. I will offer two or three Teſtimonies from approved Men in our Defence.

W. Tindal's Works, pag. 319. ibid. p. 80.

William Tindal, that ancient faithful Proteſtant Martyr, whom J. Fox, that writ the Books of Martyrs, calls, the Engliſh Apoſtle, ſpeaks thus, That 'it is impoſſible to underſtand in the Scripture more than a Turk, for whoſoever (or any that) 'hath not the Law of God writ in his Heart to fulfil it. Again, 'Without the Spirit it is impoſſible to underſtand them.'

John Jewel, Biſhop of Saliſbury, in his excellent Book againſt the Papiſts, writ above One Hundred Years ago, ſays thus to our Purpoſe 'The Spirit of God 'is bound neither to Sharpneſs of Wit, nor to abundance of Learning: Oftentimes the Unlearned ſee that Thing, that the Learned cannot ſee. Chriſt ſaith, 'I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, that thou haſt hid theſe Things 'from the Wiſe and the Politick, and haſt revealed them unto the Little Ones. Therefore Epiphanius ſaith, 'Only to the Children of the Holy Ghoſt all the Holy Scriptures 'are plain and clear. Again, 'Fleſh and Blood is not able to underſtand the Holy 'Will of God without Special Revelation. 'Therefore Chriſt gave Thanks unto 'his Father, and likewiſe opened the Hearts of his Diſciples, that they might 'underſtand the Scriptures, Without this ſpecial Help and Promoting of God's Holy 'Spirit, the Word of God is unto the Reader, be he never ſo wiſe or well learned, 'as the Viſion of a ſealed Book.

(o) This farther proves what Conviction as well as what Commands I underſtood; and ought to ſhame my Adverſary, if he has any Ingenuity in him, for that ill Uſe he has made of my Words about Conſcience and Conviction.

(p) What ſays I. C. to this? Is the Conſcience and Conviction I make ſo neceſſary, a blind, dark, ſeared Conſcience? Do I leave it there? Is that the Language of my Doctrine? Is it not a Conſcience convinced and taught by God's Holy Spirit? Let what follows, and the Three Teſtimonies be weighed.

Now

Now unleſs Men are bound to do what they do not underſtand how to do, then only are they to do them when they are Revealed or Diſcovered to them, which being by the Spirit only, according to their Doctrine, the Teſtimony and Diſcoveries of the Spirit are requiſite to our underſtanding of the Scriptures, which implies, and comprehends a Diſcriminating Knowledge, or certain Diſcerning of what we ſhould practiſe from what is not obliging upon us to practiſe, and conſequently, that we ought not to run Head-long without ſuch Knowledge.

T. Collier's Works, pag. 247.

T. Collier, an Ancient and Eminent Man among the Weſtern Separatiſts of our Nation, writeth thus: " For me to ſpeak of God, becauſe another ſpeaks of Him; " and to be able to talk much of God, as I read of Him in Scripture, Not Being " Made One In the Same Truth, I ſee and ſpeak But What Another Hath " Spoken; and ſo may ſpeak truly ſometimes of God, but it is by Hear-ſay, " Another Man's Truth, But Not Mine; ſo, I doubt, many a Soul, Boaſts In " Another Man's Light.—— Again, I ſee that External Actings according to a " Rule without, is nothing, if not flowing from a Principle of Life and Love within. Which is more than E. B. ſaid, of whom J. Faldo (with unworthy Reflection, and baſe Wreſtings) hath ſaid ſo much.

Thus far goes my Rejoynder, and, I hope, far enough to defeat our Skirmiſher, and rout all his Falſe Conſequences in the plain Field; I will not abound in my own Senſe, but ſhall leave every Impartial Reader to determine, whether E. Burrough, or W. Penn for him, underſtood, and intended, thoſe Paſſages to all the Commandments of God, or thoſe only that are of a peculiar and extraordinary Nature, which are both by J. F. and J. C. ſo odiouſly reſented and improved, even to all Atheiſm and Impiety.

But for farther Satisfaction to my Reader, and to compleat this Adverſary's Defeat, I will ſuppoſe him making this Acknowledgment and Objection, viz.

I grant that both J. F. and my ſelf, have unworthily wrong'd E. B's Words and Senſe, and W. Penn's too, as to the Main Scope of the Controverſie, believing they intended what they ſaid, not of all the Commands of God, and I am willing to let go the Laſt of the Three Paſſages I cite in my Pamphlet, viz. " When any Man is Convinced that what is Commanded another, is required of him, then, and not " till then, he is rightly Authorized to perform it, believing this related to Extraordinary Caſes; but I am yet diſſatisfied with the other Two Paſſages ſtill, viz. " No " Command in the Scripture is any farther obliging upon any Man, than as he " finds a Conviction upon his Conſcience. —— " It is Conviction that can only " oblige to Obedience. I ſtill believe that all thoſe Horrid Conſequences I Skirmiſht him with, are due to that Doctrine. What more can J. C. ſay for himſelf than this Objection imports? I ſhall now defend my Words, as he hath laid them down, from any ſuch Inferences as he has given in their Name.

To make my Anſwer clear, it is to be conſider'd; Firſt, What is that Conſcience I mean; next, What the Conviction, and by whom given; which underſtood, corrects his Folly (to ſay no worſe) and ends the Debate with his Defeat.

To ſay nothing here of the Various Definitions that are of Conſcience, nor is it ſo proper, for the Queſtion is, About what Conſcience, I ſhall keep to the Diſtinction in Scripture; the Scripture mentions Two Sorts of Conſcience, a Good and an Evil Conſcience; the Queſtion will be, Which I meant; if the laſt, as ſays J. C. I am gone; if the former, he is routed; not the latter, ſay I, for Two Reaſons, the One, Becauſe a Wicked Seared Conſcience, as ſuch, rejects all Conviction; the other, becauſe I have particularly declared againſt J. F. that I ſpoke not of any ſuch Conſcience; nay, I have excepted, and made Proviſion againſt any ſuch Conſtruction in my very Anſwer; ſo to take and render me then is Injurious. But if I meant it of a Corrected, Rightly Qualified Conſcience, ſuch as the Apoſtle ſpeaks of, Rom. 2. 14, 15. That bears Witneſs in the Gentiles to the Work of the Law of God writ in their Hearts, then it will follow, that this Skirmiſher is beſide the Saddle, and hath Shoulder'd himſelf out of the Point.

But next, What is Conviction that obligeth? Is it Imagination only? Or, A Diabolical Suggeſtion to Kill, Rob, Lye, &c. as ſays I. C. No ſuch Matter, but a Clear Underſtanding and Sound Judgment, and upon Right Concluſions, from the Manifeſtation of the Light, Grace, or Spirit of God, that attends all People whoſe Day is not over for their Conviction and Converſion to God: This I do Verbally provide for, in my Anſwer and Rejoynder to J. Faldo, yet hath I. C. ſo ſtrangely render'd both me and my Aſſertions therein: Certainly this Man is the Greateſt of Novices in our Controverſie and Religion, or incomparably baſe; for either he ſuppoſeth 1676. poſeth that we do not hold, That all Men are Enlightned with a Meaſure of Saving Light, ſo as that Men cannot plead Ignorance of what is fit for them to do, which is our known Principle, and he confeſſeth it, p. 13. Or, that if he doth ſo know, he muſt admit that this Divine Light is idle and inſufficient to convince People : Or, Laſtly, believing neither, he doth very ill to tell the World in our Name, That we make Debauched and Seared Conſciences, our Rules of Obedience to Salvation, and ſubject the Laws of God and Man to the Acknowledgment of ſnch depraved Conſciences.

Again, Where there is no Law, there is no Tranſgreſſion, and where the Law is not known, there is no Law: Now I. C. would have us believe, p. 8. and 9. that the very Ten Commandments, as well as the Sayings of CHRIST, and Writings of His Apoſtles, are ſo Spiritual and Myſterious, that Carnal Men, as ſuch, cannot know them, no, not ſo much as to underſtand what God means, when he ſays, Thou ſhalt Not Kill : Now, if this Tale be True, What's become of J. C. for if the Scripture ſays, Where there is no Law, there is no Tranſgreſſion, and Reaſon aſſures us, That where a Law is not known, there is no Law , and that J. C. tells us, That no Man that is not Spiritual, can know God's Laws and Commands, even when they are publiſh'd, and that the Spirit of God only gives the Spiritual Knowledge of them ; will it not unavoidably follow, That no Command obligeth without Conviction, ſince no Command tyes without Knowledge, which is Conviction, ſays J. C. p. 3. Yet again, the whole Bible J. C receives for Truth, either by Authority or Revelation, both which Ways require Conviction ; for if he goes upon the Foot of Authority, he muſt be ſatisfied in his Conſcience, that thoſe who Writ, divulged, preſerved, and recommended it, have not put any Trick or Abuſe upon him, which is Credit upon a Sort of Conviction ; if he embraceth the Bible upon the Revelation and Teſtimony of the Spirit in himſelf (the Old Proteſtant Plea) that is not poſſible without Conviction, for Evidence is Knowledge, and Knowledge Conviction ; and if I muſt have the Conviction of God's Spirit for the Whole, I muſt have it for the Parts ; and therefore no Command in Scripture is any farther obliging upon any Man, than as he finds a Conviction upon his Conſcience ; the contrary makes God a very Hard Maſter ; for 'tis to ſay, That He Reaps where He hath not Sown ; that His Laws are Binding where they are not known, and that He requires an Obedience, without giving Men the Underſtanding of their Duty. Again, they are Chriſt's own

Contradictions too, his Miſtakes I have already ſhown : I ſhall now touch briefly upon his Contradictions, wherein he is as Kind as he was Cruel, and gives but all that he plundered from us, and ſo ends the Skirmiſh. His Firſt Contradiction is this.

I grant

1676.

I grant you, that no Man ſtands bound to obey any Command, which it is utterly impoſſible for him to know and be convinced of: But doth this aſſoil and clear him from yielding the Cauſe? — But where nothing hinders a Man from knowing his Duty, but his own Neglect and Wilful Careleſneſs, and where a Man ſhall by Sin debauch and ſear his Conſcience, will you excuſe this Man. — If indeed the Caſe were ſo, that no Conviction could be, or none that I could any Way compaſs, then I were in no Fault, but where it is my Fault if I be unconvinced — in ſuch Caſe God may juſtly charge me with the Omiſſion of Duty, and the Commiſſion of Evil — and by granting this, I aſſoyl and clear the Juſtice of God.

No doubt, in the leaſt, and a Seaſonable Peccavi for what he has done, for, how wide is this off what I have ſaid, of which J. C. has ſaid ſo very ill? I ſay, No Command is obliging without Conviction; J. C. ſaith, No Command is obliging without Conviction, provided he doth not hinder his own Convincement. As if I ſtated it, that Let Men ſhut their Eyes, ſtop their E.rs, rebel, blaſpheme, give themſelves up to all Superfluity of Naughtineſs, till Conſcience is Seared as with an hot Iron, yet without the Conſcience be convinced, or that God by Force make it to ſee, hear, and be ſenſible whether it will or no, Men are not obliged by any of his Commands; for this is the very Way he ſtates the Caſe for me, though I do ſo particularly provide againſt any ſuch diſſolute and infamous Pretences. This is ſo plain, that when I ſay, that Conviction only obliges to Obedience, I add, that what works the Conviction, is the Manifeſting Light, Univerſal Grace, or Quickning Spirit in the Heart of Mankind; ſo that let us now ſee the real Difference betwixt this Skirmiſher's Grant at the End of the Day, and what he ſo furiouſly flew upon in the Beginning. Saith he, I am bound to obey no Command, but what I am convinced of, provided I do not neglect or reject the Means of my Convincement, p. 11. Say I, No Command is farther obliging upon me, than as I find a Conviction in my Conſcience by the Light, Grace, or Spirit of God, unto which all Men ſhould have regard; for that follows in my ſame Anſwer as an Explanation and Guard to that Aſſertion, moſt unworthily neglected by my Adverſary, only to make Room for this vain and fruitleſs Skirmiſh. Now, unleſs my Conviction, by the Grace of God, be neglecting the Means of Conviction, as moſt undoubtedly it is not (it being the only Way of True Conviction) What Iota of Difference is there between my Aſſertion, and his Conceſſion? For Inſtance, no Man is bound to anſwer a Queſtion he doth not hear, ſay I; No Man is bound to anſwer a Queſtion he does hear, if he did not ſtop his Ears, or refuſe to hear, ſaith he, as if I admitted, that Men might ſtop their Ears, and yet be excuſable, which is to read my Aſſertion thus, No Man is bound to anſwer a Queſtion that he will not hear; and no Command is obliging upon a Man that will not be convinced. The moſt contradictory to my Aſſertion that can well be, eſpecially when I neither lay the Obligation upon every Conviction, but that only which comes from the Holy Spirit of Truth, that is always preſent to convince all of their Duty; nor ſubject that Conviction to the corrupt Wills of Men.

I ſhall here ſum up all my Authorities into one, and that is W. Perkins, a Famous Man in his Time, whoſe Judgment may, perhaps, ſway a little to correct the Extravagancy of this Young Skirmiſher.

W. Perkins's Works of Conſcience, pag. 512.

——— " Such Perſons as have not ſo much as heard of Chriſt, though they are " apt and fit to be bound in Conſcience by the Goſpel, in as much as they are the " Creatures of God, yet are they not indeed actually bound, till ſuch Time as the " Goſpel be Revealed, or, at the leaſt, Means of Revelation offered. Reaſon I.
" Whatſoever Doctrine or Law doth bind Conſcience, muſt in ſome Part Be Known
" by Nature or by Grace, or by both; the Underſtanding muſt Firſt of all conceive,
" or, at the leaſt, have Means of conceiving, before Conſcience can conſtrain, becauſe
" it Bindeth by Virtue of known Concluſions in the Mind, therefore Things that are " Altogether Unknown, and unconceived of the Underſtanding, do not bind in Con-
" ſcience. Now that the Goſpel is unknown of many, I have already proved,
" therefore it binds them not in Conſcience. II. Paul ſaith, Rom. ii. 12. They which ſin without Law, ſhall be condemned without Law. To this he brings Auguſtine, Tract 89, on John 15. 22. ſaying, That the Gentiles may have an Excuſe for not believing in Chriſt. Biſhop Sanderſon is of the ſame Judgment in his Oxford Lectures on Conſcience.

Now for his next Contradiction, which is in ample Manner thus.

God and Conſcience will never ſmite for meer (p. 11.) and total Impoſſibilities; what are they J. C? To obey a Command, which it is utterly impoſſible to know or be convinced of: Very well, enough of this before; but what's the Matter with Conſci-ence? How comes this ſtrange Advance of a ſudden from the Bar to the Bench? What, a Regicide, a Parricide, a Murderer, an Adulterer, a Drunkard, a Thief, a Traytor, a Tyrant, a Blaſphemer, an Atheiſt, and now a Judge, and ſuch a Judge too as takes Place next God himſelf in Judgment; God and Conſcience will never ſmite and condemn, &c. O Powerful Conſcience! And O Righteous Conſcience too! What, a juſt Judge at laſt! Both able and equal? Certainly then it can be no Error to follow thy Dictates, nor make thy Convictions the Meaſures of our Obedience; but tell me, O Conſcience, if Princes and Rulers make never ſo good Laws, wilt thou come and ſay, I deny all theſe Laws, and the Makers of them; Children may murder their Parents; Subjects, their Princes; Servants, their Maſters; one Man another? pag. 5, 6.

Doſt thou require Men to do all theſe Impieties under Pain of Damnation? If not, go to I. C. for Satisfaction, for he has grievouſly abuſed thee.

In ſhort, Reader, ſo perplext is the Man in his Skirmiſh, that he ſeems to have ſcar'd no Body ſo much as himſelf; he has frightned himſelf with his own Bulbeggar, and, as it happens, with young Hotſpurs, Conceit carries them on, but leaves them in the Fray, to get off as they can: So it has fallen out with I. C. he is in, and he knows not how to get out again.

One While he appeals to God and Conſcience; If God and Conſcience approve me, p. 2. Here he makes Conſcience the Rule of his Writings, as well as God; another While, We may do the moſt horrid Crimes, and yet Conſcience ſtand to them, and not only not ſmite us, but approve us, and praiſe us, p. 5. By and by, God and Conſcience will never ſmite and condemn for meer Impoſſibilities; here again it is joyned with God in Righteous Judgment, p. 11.

Again, If Conviction be the Ground of Obedience, and the Authority of Scripture depend upon the Rectitude and Purity of Conſcience, then all Rational Law, Order and Government, Divine and Human, is overturned, and a Stop put to all Religion and Piety towards God, to all Conſcience, Honeſty and Charity toward Men. Let God command what he will, Conſcience may come and ſay, I deny this Command, and him that commanded it, p. 5.

I deſire to know of this Man, by what Trope or Figure it is that he makes adhering to Conſcience the Way to overturn and ſtop Conſcience: That's the firſt Caſe of Conſcience I have to aſk of him.

The Second is this, How Conſcience can be coupled with Honeſty and Charity, nay, with God Himſelf, and yet have the Impudence to tell God, I deny Thy Command, and Thee too; Is not this ſtrange Divinity? Surely this Man is but a Parſon by the by, for he violates the common Rules of Theology, as their own Schools teach.

But once more in Honour of Conſcience, and to make her Amends, as he began with the Leave of Conſcience, he Ends, if we will believe him, with the Judgment of Conſcience, hear him.

I would be glad to make the Beſt I can of your Poſition, but I muſt proteſt my Conſcience and Conviction: Thus doth he make that his Guide his whole Pamphlet reprobates.

The next Contradiction is this, that Conſcience is made by him to be killed with Sin, as if it were a Juſt Principle; and by and by he renders it the Seared Active Sinner, p. 5. Once more:

Laſtly, he tells us, That he grants that without the Light Within, we could not at all come to the Knowledge of the Scriptures, p. 12. yet, That the Light Within, gives the Drunkard Leave to be Drunk.

Again, The Light Within, which ſhould be his GUIDE, like a Negligent, Drunken Coach-Man, ſleeps, and the Horſes run away, or he drives into Pits and Bogs; ſo doth the Light Within take Part with the Fleſh and Satan againſt you, p. 13.

Theſe Contradictions ſpeak for themſelves, though againſt him; the Reader may eaſily judge at what a Paſs this Parſon Skirmiſher hath reduced himſelf, that writes at this Random-Rate.

But what farther of his Elaborate Studies in Divinity? Why this, If Scripture go (ſays he) farewel God, and Chriſt, and Heaven, and all Law, and Rule, p. 13.

Now God forbid that the Scriptures ſhould go; but ſince in telling a Fib of us (as if we ſlighted them) he has adventured ſuch an Axiom abroad in the World, I think fit thus to animadvert: Doth God, Chriſt, Heaven, all Law and Rule depend upon Scripture? Strange Change! The Creator depends upon the Creature; the Saviour upon his Meſſage; Heaven upon the Hiſtory of it? Ridiculous, as well as Blaſphemous. Well, but this is the worſt Senſe; let us ſee if we can find the Beſt, and that is this, Farewel to our Knowledge and Enjoyment of God, Chriſt, Heaven, &c. if the Scriptures were loſt; but this is alſo Extravagant, ſince God hath not ſo tyed up himſelf to Scripture; the Scripture it ſelf tells us, Of a Law writ in the Heart, and that this is not an Inferior State neither, but that of the New and Everlaſting Covenant, Heb. 8. Again, Was there no God, Chriſt, or Heaven, Law or Rule before Scripture? The contrary is notorious, the World had enjoy'd many Ages before the Scriptures were in Being; Paradiſe needed them not; and Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob had them not; and can this Parſon think there was no Knowledge of God, Chriſt, Heaven, Law, or Rule in thoſe Ages? Wonderful! What croſs Proſpects doth this Man take of Religion! But what becomes of his ſpiritual Laws writ in Man's Nature? Pag. 8, 9. if all would be loſt with the Scriptures, (which God preſerve) how croſs is this to the Apoſtle's Sentence in this very Place, Rom. 2. For the Gentiles, which have not the Law, do by Nature the Things contained in the Law, and are a Law unto themſelves: It ſeems here was God, Heaven, Law and Rule without Scripture.

Laſtly, He would needs have it, That Men may commit all Sorts of Impiety upon Conviction; ſee p. 4, 5, 10, 11. Whereas all theſe Evils are committed againſt Conviction, ſays every Orthodox Man, be they Sins of Wilfulneſs, Searedneſs or Ignorance; for Wilfulneſs reſiſts Conviction; Searedneſs overlays, ſmothers or kills it, if it be poſſible; and Ignorance is Darkneſs or Blindneſs, which is juſt oppoſite to Conviction.

Perhaps he thought any Thing would do againſt the Quakers, eſpecially if Skirmiſh and Imprimatur began it; but can he in his Conſcience think (for he now tells us he hath one, and he can appeal to it too) that the Light within helps to the Underſtanding of Scripture, and ought to be our Guide; and yet that it ſhould be a lewd, drunken, fleſhly, ſatanical Principle, and a Rebel againſt God that gave it for thoſe excellent Ends of knowing Scripture, and regulating our Converſation accordingly? Shall I return him his own Saying? Quis talia fando temperet a lachrymis? Though we had all gone Aſtray, I ever thought our Guide had kept the Way, and that ſhould be our Condemnation: but this Man teacheth other Doctrine, namely, that the Guide God hath given us leads to be drunk, and takes Part with the Fleſh and Satan againſt God. What follows, but that every Man is diſcharged from adhering to ſuch a Guide, eſpecially ſince the People in the Coach are not to be blamed, if the Coach-man drive them into Pits or Bogs; but ſeriouſly, Parſon, is there no Soul-damning or God-blaſpheming Error in this Doctrine, that chargeth him with making ſo ill Proviſion for the Rule of Man's Life; wouldſt not thou take a better Coach-man, leſt thy Horſes, with thy Wits, ſhould run away? And hath the Almighty ſo ill helped us with a Guide, and yet denounced ſo many heavy and eternal Puniſhments, in caſe I miſs my Way? This falſe Step in Divinity drives me to obſerve three or four more, and ſo conclude.

Page 8, 9, 11. The next is this, That the Indians have no Knowledge of Good or Evil; which not only contradicts the Teſtimony of Travellers, and the Judgment of all Learned Men; and, which is more, the Scripture too, that demanded of old, Upon whom does not his Light ariſe? And tells us, That every Man has a Meaſure of Light, and that the Grace of God appeareth to all Men; but the Parſon alſo contradicts himſelf; for he tells us of Laws of God writ in Man's Nature; which includes Indians, if Indians be Men.

His next Error expreſſed or implied by ſeveral Places of his Pamphlet is, That all Men are not convinced, reproved or condemned, though they may have the Means of it. (p. 9, 10.) I affirm that all Men are Convinced, though they lay it not to Heart; for Men ſee their Sin, unleſs they have ſinned their Sight away, in caſe that can entirely be. God hath ſhewed unto thee O Man what is good: Mic. 6. 8. What Man is this? the Jew? yes, and the Gentile too: O Man! that is, Mankind; and can Man ſee the Good and not the Evil, or can he ſee either and not be convinced? Monſtrum Horrendum Ingens: Pray how is Man left without Excuſe, if God ſhows him not Good and Evil? and can he ſee, and not be convinced? Sight is Conviction.

But when all is done, granting the Man his black Opinion of Conſcience and Conviction; what can he ſay of a Quaker's Conſcience that I cannot ſay of a Proteſtant's? Will he bewray his own Neſt, or mark his own Noſe? What other Argument uſed Luther, Melancthon, Zuinglius, Calvin and Beza, &c. abroad; B. Hooper, J. Bradford, I. Philpot, B. Jewel, &c. at home? for their Separation from the Church of Rome.

1676. Rome. Does not this Man know, that all thoſe horrid Conſequences he has heapt upon my Aſſertion, may be (and ſome of them have been) urged againſt the Men named and their Followers by the Popiſh Church, yea, and by one another too? Is this Man a Proteſtant? Why not a Papiſt? Anſw. Becauſe of Conſcience and Conviction to the contrary; Hold there, ſays the Papiſt, the Church is above a private Conſcience; and what know I but your Conſcience will lie, ſteal, rebel againſt the Government, and at laſt cut Throats. O by no Means, I. C. may ſay, I am no ſuch Man, my Conſcience teaches me better Things: Never tell me of that, ſays the Papiſt, whilſt you make Conſcience and Conviction the Rule of your Actions towards the Church, I have Cauſe to fear that will one Time or other pretend a Conviction to follow all Manner of Luſts, to overturn Law and Government, and to ſtop all Religion and Piety towards God, all Conſcience, Honeſty and Charity towards Men, p. 15. But God and Conſcience approve me, ſays I. C. p. 2. I cannot believe more than I can believe; nor do God and Conſcience ever ſmite for meer Impoſſibilities, p. 11. and I muſt proteſt Conſcience and Conviction for what I do, p. 13. And thus I. C. comes off with his Papiſt. Would one think then that this Man ſhould fall ſo ſeverely upon me for having any Regard to Conſcience and Conviction? One would think he were beſide himſelf, as well as the Truth: But I am not without Hopes of his Information and Repentance; till then I could adviſe the Imprimatur-Man, not to be ſo Licentious; and in the mean while, it can do him no harm to meditate well upon this Paſſage of Scripture, And he cauſes all, both great and ſmall, rich and poor, bond and free, to receive a Mark in their Right Hands or in their Foreheads; and that no Man might Buy or Sell, ſave he that had the Mark or the Name of the Beaſt, Rev. 13. 16, 17.

I ſhall conclude with the Judgment of B. Andrews, W. Perkins, and B. Wilkins, upon Conſcience, and that ſhall be my Contribution to the Parſon's better Proficiency in Divinity; for I hear he is but lately and by Accident of the Trade.

Lanc. Andrews, Bp. of Winton, on the Commandments, chap. 6, ſaith, 'In the 'WORST of Men, when God puts the Bit in their Mouths, thoſe Sparks (viz.) 'that he hath placed in Man, will fly out. N. 5. He calls Conſcience, God's Deputy or Vice-gerent.

W. Perkins, Treatiſe of Conſcience, in his Works Theological, vol. 1, pag. 17: London 1636. 'Conſcience is a Part of the Underſtanding in all reaſonable 'Creatures, determining of their particular Actions, either with them or againſt 'them.—— Underſtanding hath two Parts, Theoretical and Practical; under the 'latter is Conſcience, becauſe it's Property is to judge of the Goodneſs or Badneſs 'of Things, or Actions done —— Reaſon of the Name of Conſcience, ſcire to 'know, is of one Man alone by himſelf; and conſcire is when two at the leaſt 'know ſome one ſecret thing, either of them knowing it together with the other: 'Therefore the Name συνείδησις, or conſcientia, Conſcience, is that Thing that 'combines two together, and makes them Partners in the Knowledge of one and 'the ſame Secret. ——Man, by a Gift given him of God, knows, together with 'God, the ſame Things of himſelf: And this Gift is named Conſcience. ——It is '(as it were) a little God, ſitting in the middle of Men's Hearts, arraigning them 'in this Life, as they ſhall be at the Tribunal of God in the laſt Judgment. '—— Power in the Soul, the Property whereof is to take the Principles and Concluſions of the Mind, and apply them, and by applying, either to Accuſe or Excuſe————If Conſcience be loſt, it is only in Reſpect of the Uſe thereof, as 'Reaſon in a Drunkard, and not otherwiſe————Conſcience is a Thing of a divine Nature, and is a Thing placed of God in the midſt, between him and Man, 'as an Arbitrator, to give Sentence, and to pronounce either with Man or againſt 'Man unto God.

Biſhop Wilkins's Real Character, Definition of Conſcience, 'It's a Faculty whereby we apply general Principles to particular Caſes, being a practical Judgment or 'Memory, relating to Matters of Duty. The Oppoſite to it, Unconſcionableneſs, 'Searedneſs, Profligateneſs, &c.

Theſe Teſtimonies give great Honour to Conſcience, as the generality of Profeſſions give to Men. By them it appears, that Inſenſibility is not Conſcience or Conviction; and the Truth is, unconſcionable implies that conſcionable is reaſonable, juſt and good.

For our Parts, we believe that God has placed his Witneſs in every Soul, Heart and Conſcience; and that all Mankind ſhall be accuſed or excuſed by it; they that rebel againſt it, to them ſhall it be a Never-dying Worm; to them that love and obey it, an Everlaſting Comforter.

By this hath God awakened and redeemed us from a vain Converſation: 'Tis his ancient Light and Spirit that ſtrove with the old World, and ſtrives with this. To no other Spirit is our Teſtimony, neither Conſcience or Conviction, than that which is according to the Nature of it. And as I can make my Appeal to the Neighbours of I. C. and all other People elſe-where, if ever our Conſciences or Convictions have led us to any ſuch deteſtable Enormities, as he charges upon our Doctrines and Principle; and if we have not rather had our Converſation among them in all Gentleneſs, Sobriety, and Honeſty; ſo do I warn all, to whom this comes, that they judge us not with unrighteous Judgment, nor readily receive the Reports and Suggeſtions of prejudiced Men againſt us and our Holy Way. It's no eaſy Thing to Fleſh and Blood, for us to live uprightly in the Profeſſion of it; meer Outſide, Hiſtorical Faith, large Shews, much Talk for Religion, will not do the Matter, if the Heart remains unſubjected, the Affections unmortified, and no Peace with God ſealed to the Soul; Depart from me, will be the laſt diſmal Sentence.

Therefore my dear Countrymen, Grieve not God's Holy Spirit; encline your Hearts to his pure Word; 'tis nigh you, (Rom. 10.) that you ſhould obey it and do it; it will reform and regenerate you; it will create all Things new, from an Hard to a Broken Heart, from a vain to a contrite Spirit; new Affections, new Deſires, new Love, new Friendſhip, new Words, new Works, new Cuſtoms and Faſhions, (not like the World's, that ſhall paſs away, and Vexation of Spirit only remain in lieu of them for ever) Then ſhall the Peace of God flow into your Souls as a River, and nothing ſhall ever harm or make you afraid.

Truly, Friends, a Vain, Worldly, Unwatchful Converſation unrepented of, be your Profeſſion and Church what they will, will one Day harm and make you afraid; for God will reward all People according to their Works: At that ſolemn Day it will not be, well talkt, or well profeſt, but Well done good and faithful Servants; Why? Becauſe they have kept his Holy Sayings; Remember what Chriſt ſaid, (by whom God will judge the Secrets of all Hearts in the Day of Account) that for every idle Word which Man ſpeaketh, ſhall he give an Account in the Day of Judgment.

As one that knows the Terrors of the Lord, I would perſwade all Men to turn to the living God; For if the Righteous ſcarcely be ſaved, where ſhall the Ungodly and Sinner appear? For the Kingdom of God ſtands in Righteouſneſs, Peace and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt; and Sinners have nothing to do there: Neither think, that you are ſav'd by Chriſt from Wrath, and not ſaved from Sin; or that he has ſaved you from the Guilt, though the Nature and Acts of Sin remain; no ſuch can walk with God here; for they muſt be tranſlated, changed, renewed; much leſs can they enjoy the Lord hereafter. Wherefore caſt about, and ſee how it is with you; hearken while it is to Day; your faithful Monitor is in your own Boſom, and waits and knocks to be let into your moſt inward Affection, that he may be your Delight, the prime Object of your Love; and bleſſed are they that are not offended in him, but believe in him, and confeſs him before all Men; the Outſide Jew deſpiſed him then, the Outſide Chriſtian ſlights him now; but bleſſed be God, this ſpiritual Appearance of Chriſt in the Soul, to the Jews (the Profeſſors) a Stumbling-block, to the Greeks (the wiſe Men) Fooliſhneſs, is unto us, who have believed therein, the mighty Power of God to our Salvation; and the worſt Deſire I have for you is, That you alſo may ſincerely believe, and when Time with you ſhall be no more, receive, with all thoſe that in the Self-denying Life of Holy Jeſus walk, and faint not, to the End of their Days, Glory, Honour and Eternal Life, Amen.

A BRIEF
ANSWER TO A
Falſe and Fooliſh LIBEL, CALLED The QUAKERS OPINIONS.

For their Sakes that Writ it and Read it.

By WILLIAM PENN.

Being Defamed, we Entreat, 1 Cor. 4. 13.

The PREFACE.

Sober Reader,

THE End of Controverſy with good Men, is the Advancement of Truth; with ill Men, of themſelves and their baſe Intereſts; in all which God is Judge, who judgeth righteouſly, and will reward every one according to their Works, nor doth his Judgment ſlumber.

Moſt Parties in Europe boaſt themſelves of being Chriſtians, an excellent Character indeed; but the worſt is, there is little more than a Boaſt in it. I am not uncharitable; I have firſt judged my ſelf. Let none deceive themſelves. To be like Chriſt, is to be a Chriſtian, and not elſe; and Chriſtians are in Concord; for Chriſt is not divided, neither is that Body, of which he is truly Head, at Variance; how much Diſcord, ſo much Degeneracy from God; for he is one, and ſo are thoſe that are born of him; the Children of God are not divided, becauſe one and the ſame Holy Spirit leads them.

That which is the Guide of one, is the Guide of all; and by this ſhall it be known who are God's Children, if they bring forth the Fruits of his Divine Spirit, which, ſaith the Apoſtle, are theſe, Love, Joy, Peace, Long-ſuffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Faith, Meekneſs, Temperance, againſt ſuch there is no Law. And they, ſays he, that are Chriſt's, have crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts; this only will avail in the great Judgment of the Lord. Therefore I beſeech all vain Contenders to conſider of their own Standing, what their Work is, who Employs them, and what their Wages will be.

Tell me, thou vain Diſputer and vitious Liver, what is Religion without Holy Love? what is Faith without Good Works? what is Worſhip without Godly Fear; and Chriſtianity, without true Self-denial? It is not he that cries, Lord, Lord, but he that does the Will of my Father, ſaid Chriſt, ſhall be accepted. There is a great talk of Man's Lapſe in Adam, and Reſtoration in Chriſt, but they ſerve only for a ſound with too many: For did People ſincerely believe that they are fallen from true Love, Meekneſs, Patience, Humility, Mercy, Juſtice, Purity, &c. and did they but conſider, that they are not reſtored to thoſe Heavenly Qualifications, but that they live in fleſhly Luſts of one ſort or other, ſome in Voluptuouſneſs, others in Envy; and therefore not really reſtored or redeemed by Chriſt, nor truly in a State of Salvation, but in peril of Eternal Miſery, certainly they would not paſs away their little Span of precious Time in ſo much worldly Pleaſure, neglect of God, and Careleſneſs of the other World, if they have any the leaſt hope of it.

Reader, the Petulancy of ſome Adverſary or other has given occaſion for this little Treatiſe: The Deſign of which is both to reprove him, and to hinder others from being abuſed by him, that ſo the Innocency of a People, whom God hath raiſed by his own Power and Wiſdom to glorify him in their Bodies Souls and Spirits (which are his) may be delivered from the Miſtakes of his Ignorance, and the Reflections of his Malice.

And truly, my fervent Prayers to Almighty God are, that he would yet more and more ſend forth his Light and his Truth to inform the Underſtandings, and overcome the Hearts of all People, that they may experimentally know the Redemption of their Souls from the Prevalency of Sin, and the Power of the God of this World's Luſts, by the Blood of Jeſus, who is the Lamb of God that takes away the Sin of the World; then ſhall Love, Faith and Holineſs increaſe and all Unrighteouſneſs come to an End, Amen.

An ANSWER to a Falſe and Fooliſh Libel, &c.

OPINION I.

THE Quakers deny the Authority of the Holy Scriptures, as the Rule of Faith and Practice unto Chriſtians.

Anſwer, This we flatly deny, and charge our Adverſary to make it good in terminis, in ſo many Words, or retract his Charge. For the Authority of the Scriptures is the Spirit * and Power of God, which we ſay is our Rule and Guide, as it was the Rule of the Holy Men of God both before the Scriptures were written, and when they ſpoke and writ them. And to ſay we deny it to be our Rule, is to ſay we deny our own Principle, for owning of which you are angry with us. Moſes is taken on all Hands to have been the firſt Penman of Sacred Story, and that we cannot riſe higher than his Time for Scripture, conſequently then the Scripture muſt take date; but who will deny that Abel had a Rule to worſhip God by, Enoch to walk with God by, Noah to preach by, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob to believe by? If they had none, ſay ſo; if they had, what was it, if not the Spirit of Truth and Holineſs, that ſtrove with the old World, but was reſiſted? And if the Spirit of God was the Rule of Faith, Worſhip and Practice, then, have we got another Rule in the room of it now? No ſuch Matter; thoſe that loved and feared God in all Ages were ruled and guided by the Spirit of God; and though many Helps have been afforded Men by the Father of Mercies and Lights, yet ſtill the Spirit of Truth is the great Rule in and through them all. This is the Rule of all Rules, as God is the Light of all Lights; yea, this is that Rule of the New Creature; for the walking of the true Chriſtian is in and after the Spirit; yea, 'tis the Mark of being a Child of God to be led and guided by the Spirit of God, this is the Scripture's Teſtimony. Gal. 6. 15. Rom. 1. 15, There is no Condemnation to thoſe that walk not after the Fleſh, but after the Spirit; and as many are led by the Spirit of God, are the Sons of God. The Argument is plain, and altogether as unanſwerable; That which is to lead Chriſtians, is to rule Chriſtians; but the Spirit of Truth is to lead Chriſtians, conſequently the Spirit of Truth is to Rule Chriſtians. So that to deny that the Spirit of Truth is the Guide and Rule of Chriſtians, is to gainſay the Teſtimony of Scripture, and the very Tenour and Nature of the ſecond, new and everlaſting, Covenant of Life and Salvation; for in that State the Law is writ in the Jer. 35. 33. 34.

Heart, and the Fear and Spirit put in the inward Part; and what for, if not to rule and guide the Soul in the Path of Life?

Heb. 8. 13. To conclude, As the Spirit of Truth revealed to the Prophets Things to come, and was a Rule to them in diſcerning, receiving, declaring and writing thoſe Things, ſo is the ſame Spirit of Truth the Rule and guide to all God's People in their reading and underſtanding of them now written: and bleſſed are they that read with a good Underſtanding,

And that the Simplicity of none may be abuſed, we declare, as we have frequently done, that the Scriptures of Truth were given forth by the Holy Men of God, as they were moved by the Spirit of God; and that they are a Rule, yea, an OPINION. II. The Quakers deny the Reſurrection of the Body.

Luke 20. 35, Anſw. The Quakers deny no Reſurrection, that is according to Scripture; we 36, 37, 38. own the Reſurrection both of the Juſt and Unjuſt; and that our Adverſaries ſhall
John 11. 25. know one Day to their Confuſion, if they repent not. And as the Charge is laid
1 Cor. 15. down, we literally deny it, and require our Adverſaries to prove it: For we de-

Rev. 20. 5. of God: and every Seed ſhall have it's own Body; and Wo to the Wicked in that Day.

OPINION III. The Quakers deny the Perſon of Jeſus Chriſt.

Acts 4. 12. Anſw. If by Perſon of Chriſt is meant the Man Chriſt Jeſus, we deny the 2 Tim. 1. 10. Charge; for there is no other Name given under Heaven, by which Salvation can
Rom. 3. 25. be obtained. 'Tis Chriſt alone that hath brought Life and Immortality to light:
1 John 2. 2. He is the Propitiation, the Mediator and Interceſſor; and by him only can Man

I would have our fooliſh and envious Adverſaries look at home, and prepare for the Day of their Account to God, and leave off their Envy and Bitterneſs, and OPINION IV. The Quakers hold, that the Light in every Man is a ſufficient Guide unto Salvation.

Anſw. This is unfairly laid down; but we ſay, that the Light of Chriſt in every Man is a ſufficient Guide to Salvation; and who dares deny it? I am the Light of John 8. 12.
the World, ſaith Chriſt, they that follow me ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, but have the Light of Life. And ſaith John, If we walk in the Light, the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt 1 John 1. 7.
ſhall cleanſe us from all Unrighteouſneſs. And it was the Doctrine in old Time,
The Path of the Juſt is as the ſhining Light, that ſhines more and more unto the Prov. 4. 18.
perfect Day. And the Prophet Iſaiah prophetically writes of the latter Days thus, Iſa. 2. 5.
Come, let us walk in the Light of the Lord, and by the ſame Prophet ſaith the Lord, I will give thee (Chriſt) for a Light to the Gentiles, that thou may'ſt be my ch. 49. 6.
Salvation to the Ends of the Earth. And the Apoſtle Paul had that good Opinion of the Light, that he adviſed the Saints of old, to put on the Armour of Light, that Rom. 13. 12, they might walk honeſtly as in the Day, not in Rioting and Drunkenneſs, not in 13, 14.

Chriſt, and make not Proviſion for the Fleſh, to fulfil the Luſts thereof. And it is nothing John 9, 14, 16 in our Day: for the ſame Spirit that rejected that Light, Grace and Truth, with 1 Cor. 12. 7. which he was filled in the Day of his bodily Appearance, is the ſame that reſiſts and ſlights that Light, Truth and Grace, which from his Fulneſs is diſtributed to the Children of Men; but as it was then, ſo it is now the Condemnation of the John 3. 19.

World, that Light is come into the World, and that Men love Darkneſs rather than Light, and the Reaſon is plain, becauſe their Deeds are Evil. Every Thing loves it's like.

OPINION V. They hold that Perfection is attainable in this Life.

Anſw. This alſo is not fairly laid down, being without diſtinction; and did not Compaſſion to the well-minded incline me to deliver our Judgment in theſe Matters,
I would have put our Adverſary upon the Proof of his Aſſertions, without giving him the leaſt help by a Sight of our true Principles, till he had firſt ſeen and acknowledged his own Ignorance and Inadvertency. We own Perfection according to the Scriptures; Walk thou before me, ſaid God to Abraham, and be thou Gen. 17. 1. perfect: Who dare quibble this into an Imperfection? or who dare charge God with commanding what was impoſſible to be done? Noah was a juſt Man, and perfect in Gen. 5. 22.
his Generation, and Noah walked with God; ſo did Enoch. Job alſo was a perfect and 6. 9.
Man, and upright, one that feared God and eſchewed Evil. This Chriſt exhorted Job 1. 1.
his Diſciples to, Be ye therefore Perfect even as your Father which is in Heaven is Matt. 5. 48.
perfect. This alſo the Apoſtle Paul prays for, That they might be ſanctified throughout, 1 Theſ. 5. 23.
in Body, Soul and Spirit. Again thus, And the very God of Peace ſanctifie you Epheſ. 4. 13.
Wholely; and I pray God your Spirit, and Soul, and Body be preſerved Blameleſs unto the Coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Yet farther, Till we all come in the Unity 1 Tim. 3. 17. of the Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God unto a Perfect Man. Again,
That the Man of God may be Perfect. And to the Hebrews ſaith the Author of Heb. 6. 1.
that Epiſtle, Let us go on to Perfection; and once more in the ſame Epiſtle he ſaith, and 13. 21.
The God of Peace make you Perfect in every good Work to do his Will. This alſo was the Apoſtle Peter's Prayer for the Holy Strangers ſcattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Aſia and Bythinia, The God of all Grace, who hath called us into his Eternal Glory by Chriſt Jeſus, make you Perfect. I will conclude with the Doctrine 2 Pet. 5. 10. of the Beloved Diſciple, that lay in the Lord's Boſom, and can give a better Account of his Mind and Doctrine than any of our Adverſaries can do, thus, If we walk in the Light as (God) is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, 1 John 1. 7. and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all Sin. Again, I write unto ch. 2. 13.
you Young Men, becauſe ye have overcome the Wicked One. Again, Whoſoever ch. 3. 9.
abideth in Chriſt, Sinneth not; whoſoever is born of God, doth Not commit Sin;
for his Seed remaineth in him, and he Cannot Sin, becauſe he is born of God. Again,
If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his Love is Perfected in us; God is Love, and he that dwelleth in Love dwelleth in God, and God in him: Herein is our Love made Perfect, that we have Boldneſs in the Day of Judgment, becauſe as he is, ſo are we in this World. What ſay Rioters and Envious Perſons to this, ſuch as revile, waſt and deſtroy their Neighbours for the Exerciſe of a peaceable Conſcience?

ſcience? Doth the Love of God abide in them? Are they like unto the God of Love in this World? Can they hope for his Mercies in that World which is to come, who are cruel and abuſive to their honeſt Neighbours in this? But more of Chap. 5. 4, 18. that another Time. Yet again, Whoſoever is born of God overcometh the World, and ſinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himſelf that the Wicked One toucheth him not. What think the Enemies of Perfection of this?

Chap. 3. ver. 4, 5, 8, 9. To conclude: They that deny Perfection from Sin, deny the End of Chriſt's Coming, if this Beloved Diſciple may be Judge; for ſaith he, Chriſt was manifeſted to take away our Sins; and whoſoever abideth in him, ſinneth not: For this Purpoſe, the Son of God was manifeſted, that he might deſtroy the Works of the Devil; and whoſoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin. And without Offence let me ſay, our Adverſaries may better employ themſelves, than to turn Advocates for the Devil and his Kingdom, as they ſeem to do, by charging the Doctrine of Perfection upon the Quakers, as an Evil Opinion; for no Man in his Wits, can believe they intend us any Reputation or Credit, when they ſet the Mark of Perfection upon our Creed. But is it not a Shame that Men, who profeſs themſelves to be Chriſtians, the Diſciples of that Self-denying JESUS, ſhould make their Lord's Office our Reproach, and the End of His Bleſſed Coming a Mark of Hereſy? Why? Was He ſent but to Save? And how does He Save, if People muſt neceſſarily live in Sin, that eternally loſeth them, and to Save them from which He is Mat. 1. 21. come? And thou ſhalt call His Name JESUS, ſaid the Angel, becauſe He ſhall Save His People from their Sins: Alas! What have Men to be Saved from, if not from Sin? For Sin ſet aſide, Man is Good, and All is Good; If then Sin loſes Men Heaven and Happineſs, Men muſt be Saved from it, or they will be eternally loſt; for in that State Chriſt will profit them nothing.

To the Quotations I ſhall make a Brief Return.

The Firſt Quotation: G. Whitehead ſaith, That the Light Within muſt be God, becauſe to deny it ſo to be, is to deny the Omnipreſence of God.

To what is here alledged, thus brought to diſrepute our Holy Religion, I anſwer, That this Adverſary has not told us whether they were Words ſpoken or written: If ſpoken, where be the Witneſſes? If written, where is the Book or Paper? 1 John 1. 5. However, the Words are not Indefenſible; For God is Light, and in Him is no Darkneſs at all; Acts 17. 27, 28. and He is Omnipreſent, therefore in Man; and in Him we live, move, and have our Being, yea, more eſpecially; Jer. 23. 23, 24. for it is He that ſearcheth the Heart, and tryeth the Reins, and that telleth unto Man his Thoughts. Job 25. 3. Upon whom, ſaid one of Old, Doth not His Light ariſe?

To the Second Quotation, viz. It is Damnable Hereſie to deny the Worſhipping the Meaſure of Light in every Man. And that the Spirit which God breathed in Adam, was not Man's Spirit, but another; the Breath of our Noſtrils, the Anointed Lord; this is that True Light which lighteth every Man that comes into the World: See Robert Weſt's Book, called Damnable Hereſies Diſcovered, pag. 6.

I anſwer. Firſt, That I have not the Book cited, or cannot find it. Secondly, That the Man is not entirely in Society with us, but there has been ſome Diſſatisfaction in the Minds of our Friends about him in ſeveral Reſpects, and particularly this Book was not received or printed by us. Yet Laſtly, I know not but many Good Things may be in it; but if in any Thing it be unſound, it will not lie at our Door: Nor do I believe that the Paſſage it ſelf may not be Vindicated, and that by Authority of Reaſon, Scripture, and the Conſent of Ancient and Modern Authors: I will only ſay, that every Appearance of God, is God; the Light that comes from God, is God; for God is Light, and cannot be divided from himſelf; and the Word Meaſure of Light, relates to our Capacity, that receive and know only by Meaſure, and not to God, who, properly ſpeaking, is Immeaſurable. And true it is, that the Breath God breathed into Adam was Divine, if the Learned Rabbies, Commentators on that Scripture, be of any Credit, as may be ſeen in My Rejoynder to John Faldo; for a meer Human Soul could not make Adam live to God, much leſs make him the Image of His Creator. And if it was the Divine Life, I hope none will queſtion if that Life be Chriſt, who ſays expreſly of himſelf, I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life; who alſo ſays, I am the Light of the World; and this is John's Teſtimony, In the Word (that made all Things) was Life, and that Life is the Light of Men; And this (ſays he) is that True Light which enlightens every Man that comes into the World. So much to that Paſſage,

To the Third Quotation out of G. Fox and R. Hubberthorn's Book, called, Truth's Defence, pag. 101, I anſwer, Firſt, That the Quoter has wrong'd the Paſſage, and falſified the Book; for there is that quoted is not there. The Words are theſe, as given by our Adverſary in the Name of G. F. and R. H. We do deny the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and alſo to be a Standing Rule; and that it is dangerous for ignorant People to read them. See Fox and Hubberthorn, in Truth's Defence, pag. 101.

I anſwer, All theſe Words [We do deny the Scriptures to be the Word of God, and alſo to be a Standing Rule] are not to be found there, they are added; which is a great Piece of Injuſtice; for the laſt Part, which lies as if we would deny that ignorant People ſhould read the Scriptures, hear the Words themſelves.

“ Query. The Prieſt aſks, Whether the Scriptures being Carnal, and the Letter killing, as you (Quakers) ſay, we may read them without Danger?

To this G. Fox and R. Hubberthorn anſwer:

“ The Letter which killeth is dangerous; for thou takeſt it here to War with “ againſt the Saints, with thy Carnal Mind and Expoſitions. —— Again thus, Here
“ you read with Danger, who ſpeak of them, and ſpeak a Lye; and it's Dange“ rous to read that, and make a Trade of that, which the Prophets, Chriſt, and
“ the Apoſtles ſpoke forth freely; and you wreſt the Scriptures to your Deſtructi-
“ on; and to you 'tis Dangerous to read, &c.

Now let all People of Candour, yea, common Senſe judge, if this Sort of reading and uſing the Scripture be not dangerous: Thus the Phariſees and Jews uſed the Scripture againſt Chriſt. But does this give Ground to our Adverſary to ſay, We hold it Dangerous for ignorant People to read the Scripture, becauſe we ſay that a Covetous, Perſecuting, or Malicious End, or Uſe of Scripture, is Dangerous? O the Perverſion that is made of the Words and Senſe of this Paſſage! The Lord forgive him, or them, that deal thus with us. Hear what the ſame Page ſays, But I ſay, Bleſſed is he that doth read and doth underſtand. This I have elſewhere obſerved more at large.

To the Fourth Paſſage, viz. That J. N. in Anſwer to the Jews ſays, It is the the Devil that contends for the Scriptures to be the Word of God.

I can ſay the leſs, becauſe I have not the Book out of which it is pretended to be quoted: But certain it is, that the Devil, that loves not the very Form of Godlineſs, but to exalt it againſt the Power, and ſhelter himſelf for a Saint, has more than once, on the ſame Score, pleaded for the Scripture againſt Chriſt, and the Letter againſt the Spirit; not that he loveth the Scripture, or that the Scripture oppoſeth either Chriſt or the Spirit, but that he hath ſubtilly uſed the very Scripture, as little as he loves it, both to tempt and oppoſe even Chriſt himſelf. This is plain in his tempting Chriſt in Scripture-Language, and in the Perſecutions of the Jews both againſt Chriſt and His Diſciples, for which they urged Scripture; they relied upon them for Life-Eternal, and not upon Chriſt; Him they ſet at Nought then, as much as the Falſe Chriſtians ſlight his Light now. And it was Chriſt's Complaint then, In them you think (ſaid he) to have Eternal Life, but you will not come unto me that you may Life. Thus the outward Jew ſet up the Scripture againſt Chriſt in the Fleſh, and thus the outward Chriſtian ſets up the Scripture againſt Chriſt in the Spirit, or, in His Spiritual Appearance in the Soul, inſomuch that a Man runs the Hazard of being proclaimed a Blaſphemer, that ſpeaks but of Chriſt Within, yet it is expreſs Scripture; and of being ſtigmatized for an Heretick, that calls Chriſt only that Word of God, to whom only that Name is given in the Evangelical Writings, though at the ſame Time a Man confeſs the Holy Scriptures to be given forth by Divine Inſpiration, and that they are the Words of God. That The Word is His Name, John will be our Warrant in the Beginning of his Hiſtory; and that His Name is called The Word of God, John alſo affirms in his Revelation. I will end with this, that Luke the Evangeliſt, in his Dedication of his Hiſtory to his Excellent Theophilus, now Part of the Sacred Scripture, calls it, A Declaration of thoſe Things that were moſt ſurely believed among them, and not the Word of God. We take him for our Pattern; when he is confuted, it will be Time enough for us to confeſs our Miſtake.

Mat. 4. 6. 12. John 5, 9. and 19. 7. & 5. 39, 40.

John 1. 1. Revel. 19. 13.

Luke ch. 1.

To the Fifth Quotation, viz. That G. Fox ſays, The Soul is Part of God, of His Being, without Beginning, and Infinite. Great Myſtery, pag. 68, 9, 29. I anſwer briefly:

That G. F. ſpeaks of the Divine Soul, or Life of Man, that comes from God, by which Man liveth to God, ſo Auguſtine calls it Anima Animæ, the Soul of the Soul, or

1678. or Life of Man's Soul; ſo Rabbi Nunchmanni and Hiſkuni, in the Comment of Paulus Fagius take it, ſaying, It's of the Being of God, His own Breath. This is without Beginning, reſpecting God; and Infinite, or without End, reſpecting Man. Where is the Hereſie of this?

To the Sixth Quotation out of the Works of G. F. Junior, viz. We own the Scriptures as a True Declaration of the Saints Conditions.

I anſwer: The Allegation is frivolous on the Side of our Adverſary; for he doth not deny what G. F. aſſerts, nor does G. F. deny, but that there are many Scriptures which are Promiſſory, Threatning, and Prophetick: Does our owning the Scriptures to be an Account of the Experiences of the Saints of Old Time, exclude any farther Character? Or ſay that they are no more? What! Have People loſt their Senſes, or muſt any Thing ſerve to blemiſh Quakers? What Injuſtice is here! For Shame do as you would be done by.

To the Seventh Paſſage, alledged out of George Whitehead's Apology, p. 49. viz. That what is ſpoken from the Spirit of Truth in any, is of as Great Authority as the Scriptures, yea, and greater.

I anſwer in G. W's own Words, which are theſe, "That which was ſpoken from "the Spirit of Truth in any, is of as great Authority as the Scriptures or Chapters "are, and greater, as proceeding immediately from that Spirit, as Chriſt's Words "were of greater Authority, when he ſpoke, than the Phariſees reading the Letter; "and they and their Speaking we deny: This, ſays he, was my Anſwer.

Now I appeal to the Juſt Witneſs of God in every Conſcience, if this Adverſary was not very diſingenuous, to take no Notice of this Diſtinction: For, in ſhort, Two Things are in our Friend's Words; Firſt, That what comes from the ſame Spirit of Truth, is of the ſame Authority; and who denies that? No Body that is in his Senſes. Next, That what is ſpoken by the immediate Motion, Life and Power of the Spirit, is of more Authority, (that is, Force and Efficacy to move, quicken, enliven, or operate upon the Hearers) than the bare reading of a Chapter in the Scripture, eſpecially by ſuch as the Phariſees were, as a Letter cannot give that Impreſſion which we may juſtly ſuppoſe the Lively Preſence, Mind and Voice of the Perſon that writ it might. But the End of our Adverſary plainly is this, to make us undervalue the Truth of the Scripture, and to debaſe the Authority of the Scripture with Relation to it's Verity; as if what was ſaid now by the Spirit of Truth in any Godly Man, were more True than that which was ſpoken by the ſame Spirit in former Ages, which is a groſs Suggeſtion. The Difference lying in theſe Two Things, Firſt, Whether Chriſt's Words, ſpoken by his own Mouth, were not of greater Force, Vigour and Authority, to influence or quicken an Auditory, than the ſame Words written, and now read. Secondly, Whether the Words of Chriſt, when ſpoken by his own Mouth, were not of more Life and Authority than the Scriptures read by the Phariſees. The firſt is True, and much more the laſt; let this Adverſary then be aſhamed of his Injuſtice. Chriſt ſaid of the Words that he ſpoke, The Words that I ſpeak, they are Spirit, and they are Life; that is, as they proceeded from His Gracious Lips, and as they were uttered from that Divine Power, Glory and Authority, which dwelt in Him. John 6. 63.

To the Eighth Quotation, That Richard Stubbs, a Quaker, ſhould ſay, That the Chriſt Born of the Virgin, and that dyed at Jeruſalem, was a Falſe Chriſt, and an Antichriſt.

I anſwer, There was never any ſuch Man a Quaker that I know of, nor did ever any owned by us, utter ſo horrid a Blaſphemy; we deteſt all ſuch Impiety: Beſides, the Story I ſuppoſe, came out of an idle Pamphlet, printed about Seven Years ſince, by a fooliſh Perſon in London, to get Money; a Fiction like to that of the Iſland of Pines, &c. But if True, Where's the Witneſſes? Shall the Say-ſo, or Authority of an Enemy prevail? What muſt any Stuff ſerve to bedirt the Quakers, no Matter what, nor from whom? There is a Righteous God that will have the Judgment of theſe Things.

To the Ninth Paſſage, cited out of G. F's Great Myſtery, pag. 206. viz. If there be any other Chriſt than He that is Crucified Within, He is a Falſe Chriſt.

I anſwer, I have not the Book by me, but I will ſtand by the Paſſage; for either there is no ſuch Thing as a Chriſt Within, or if there be, there muſt be Two Chriſts: Or, Laſtly, it is the ſame Chriſt that ſuffered without, which is alſo crucified by Sin within. Now I leave our Adverſary to chuſe which of theſe Three he will accept of. Is there no Chriſt within? Or, Is there Two Chriſts, one within, and another without? Or, Is there but one Chriſt both without and within? Chuſe him whether. But I would tell our Adverſary, that a Chriſt was Revealed in Paul, and forming in the Hearts of the Galatians, and was in the Holy Ancients, the Hope of Glory, and ſo he is in his People in this Day, Bleſſed be the Name of the Gal. 1. 16. &

Lord. Yea, 'twas the Apoſtolical Exhortation: Examine your ſelves whether ye 4. 19. be in the Faith, prove your own ſelves: Know ye not your own ſelves, how that 2 Cor. 13. 4.
Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be Reprobates. So that ſuch as deny Chriſt within, are out of the Apoſtolical Faith, and Reprobates. It was both Chriſt's Promiſe and Prayer, for ſays He to His Diſciples, Let not your Hearts be troubled; ye Believe John 14. 1. in God, Believe alſo in me. I will not leave you Comfortleſs, I will come to you, 3, 18, 19, 20.
I will come again. Yet a little While, and the World ſeeth me no more, but ye ſee me: Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo: At that Day ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. That Chriſt prayed for this Fellowſhip is as clear: Neither pray I for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall believe on me Chap. 17. 20, through their Word; that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me, and I in 21,22,23,25, thee, that they alſo may be one in us, that the World may believe that thou haſt ſent 26.
me; and the Glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them, that they may be one even as we are one. I in them, and they in me, that they may be made Perfect in one: And that the World may know, that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me. O Righteous Father! The World hath not known thee, but I have known thee, and theſe have known that thou haſt ſent me; and I have declared unto them thy Name, and will declare it, that the Love wherewith thou haſt loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

This is the Bleſſedneſs of the Righteous, even in this World, the True Diſciples of JESUS, that forſake All for His Name, that take up His Croſs Daily to their Vain Affections and Luſts, and boldly confeſs Him before all Men, by a Life of True Mat. 10. 38.
Self-Denial. O that all People would receive Him into their Hearts, that is, into Chap. 16. 24. their Love and Affections: Behold, He ſtands at the Door and knocks; ſhut not thy Mark 8. 34. Luke 9. 23.

and cleanſe thee by His Own Spirit, and by His Own Water, and by His Own Blood, that bear Witneſs for him on Earth, and theſe Three are but One: Then ſhall the 1 John 5. 8.
Love of God abound in thy Soul, towards God, and towards thy Neighbour; this is Chriſtianity Indeed: And the Truth is, 'tis want of Chriſt being known more within People, to purge their Hearts, and purifie their Conſciences, that ſo much Vanity and Ungodlineſs are to be found among Chriſtians: People can let the Devil be within them, but they will not allow Chriſt to be within them. But I would aſk them and you, How the ſtrong Man of Sin muſt be bound, that keeps the Houſe Mat. 12. 29.
(the Heart) and his Works deſtroyed, if Chriſt, the ſtronger than he, have no Entrance and Sway in the Conſcience? For this know, that from within proceed Evil Chap. 15. 19, Thoughts, Murders, Adulteries, Fornication, Thefts, Falſe Witneſs, Blaſphemies; 20.
theſe, and ſuch like, are the Things which defile the Man. Now, Who ſhall purge this Heart, and with what? Muſt not Chriſt do it, He that Baptizes with Fire and Chap. 3. 11, with the Holy Ghoſt, whoſe Fan is in His Hand, and who will thorowly purge his 12.
Floor? This was John's Record, that was ſent of God for that End. Now let thoſe that call themſelves Chriſtians, conſider Seriouſly, and in the Fear of God, if their Floors, their Hearts, be purged; if the Dirt and Chaff be ſwept away, if Chriſt's Baptiſm of Fire, has burnt up their Vain Thoughts, Luſts and Affections, or not; for by Fire will God plead with all Fleſh. And let ſuch conſider, if they have been yet Baptiz'd with the Holy Ghoſt, that makes People Alive to God, and whether they live to God, and meditate in His Pure Law, or rather if they be not Carnally-Minded, which is Death, let them ſee if Pride don't profeſs Chriſtianity, and if Wantonneſs, Vanity, Covetouſneſs, Faſhion, Envy, Wrath, Malice, and ſuch like, don't make Profeſſion of Religion, Read, Pray, Preach, go to Church, and the like.
I ſay, in the Fear of Almighty God, let all that profeſs Him, and the Chriſtian Religion, examine themſelves, and prove themſelves, Whether Jeſus Chriſt Live in them, and Rule in them, or another Nature, Principle and Spirit; for God will not be mocked, ſuch as Men Sow, ſuch muſt they Reap, in the Terrible Day of Judgment.

To the Tenth Quotation out of G. F's Way to the Kingdom, viz. That the Four Books of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, are not the Goſpel.

I anſwer, If this be a Piece of Hereſie, we have Good Company; for Paul, Ignatius, Juſtin Martyr, Origen, Chryſoſtom, and ſome of our Engliſh Martyrs, are of this Mind. Paul ſays, The Goſpel is the Power of God; but it were Blaſphemy Rom. 1. 16.
with a Witneſs, to call theſe Four Narratives, or Declarations, the Power of God, 1678. in which there are the Sayings and Actions of the Devil, and Wicked Jews and Perſecutors recorded, as well as the Expreſſions and Deeds of Chriſt and His Diſciples.

Ignatius, in his Epiſtle to the Philadelphians, calleth it very near to Paul's Expreſſion of the Goſpel, ἀπαρτισμὸς ἀφθαρσίας, The Perfection of Incorruption, which theſe Four Books are not, that are compoſed of Paper and Letters, containing meer Reports and Records, though never ſo True; or the Conſequence would be, that the Writings of the Prophets (becauſe Ignatius ſaith in the ſame Epiſtle, that the Prophets have announced and declared the Goſpel) are the Goſpel in our Adverſary's Account, if he believes Ignatius, that lived ſoon after. But it's clear that our Adverſaries refuſe the Prophets Writings that Title, and do not give it even to the Apoſtolical Epiſtles, yet are diſpleaſed with our Tenderneſs, in not Stiling theſe Four Books, or Hiſtories, The Goſpel.

When Juſtin Martyr ſpeaks of theſe Four Books, eſpecially when he citeth out of them the Mocking of Chriſt, propheſied of in the Pſalms, and of Chriſt's Silence to Pilate, he ſaith, γέγραπται & δεδήλωται, it is written and expreſſed, not in the Four Evangeliſts, or in the Four Evangelia, or in the Goſpel, or in the Writings of the Four Evangeliſts, as they do commonly now; But, ſaith he, ἐν τοῖς ἀπομνημονεύμασι τῶν Ἀποστόλων αὐτοῦ, in the Records or Hiſtory of his (Chriſt's) Apoſtles: Yea, he is ſo far from calling the Books of Scriptures either the Law or Goſpel, that he ſaith, Chriſt Jeſus is αἰώνιος νόμος καὶ καινὴ διαθήκη, the Eternal Law and the New Teſtament, which according to the Propheſy ſhould come forth to the Univerſal World.

Eph. 6. 19. & 3. 3. Col. 2. 26. 1 Tim. 1. 11. Chryſoſtom not only refuſed an Oath, but denied thoſe Four Books to be Evangile or Goſpel, though he refuſed not to call them, The Writings of the Four Evangeliſts. So ſaid William Thorp, as may be ſeen in the Book of Martyrs. Beſides, the Goſpel is called, A Myſtery hid from Ages and Generations, which Four Books were not; and it is ſtill hid from all Envious, Proud, Luſtful, Vain, and Evil-minded People.

To conclude: The Bible it ſelf declares of the Goſpel, but is not that Goſpel; it declares of the Spirit, bnt is not that Spirit; it declares of the Light, bnt is not that Light; and it declares of the Eternal Power and Word, but it is not that Eternal Power and Word of God: Neither is the Light, Power and Spirit, in the Scripture, though they were in thoſe that gave them forth, and live and abide for ever in Him, who is the Fulneſs of all Wiſdom, Life and Truth, who is Lord and Author of the Holy Scriptures, given forth by Divine Inſpiration.

To the laſt Citation and Exception, viz. that G. F. ſays, That we ought not to Pray to God to give us a Sight of our Sins.

I anſwer, That this Adverſary miſgives his Words, and ſuggeſts by thoſe he cites, another Thing than is plainly and honeſtly intended by G. F. in his own Words; they are theſe, And to you that Tempt God, and ſay, The Lord give us a Sight of our Sins; mark, he ſpeaks to thoſe that Tempt God, and let me add, Mock God too; for to ſuch he ſpeaks, as what follows declares, viz. Prieſts and People (ſays G. F.) does not the Light which Chriſt hath Enlightned you with, let you ſee your Sin? That Lying and Swearing, Curſed Speaking, Theft, Murder, Whoredom, Covetouſneſs, Pride, Luſt and Pleaſures, all theſe Things to be the Works of the Fleſh, and Fruits of Darkneſs? Mark now, this Light Within you lets you ſee it, ſo you need not Tempt God to give you a Sight of your Sins; for ye know enough, and waiting in the Light, Power and Strength will be given to you.

Now, let the Impartial judge if the Conſequence of theſe Words be, That we muſt not Pray to God to give us a Sight of our Sins that we don't ſee, which muſt be our Enemies Suggeſtion, or nothing, or not rather, That we ſhould not Tempt and Mock God, by Praying for a Sight of our Sins, whilſt we ſee, and that there is not a forſaking of the Sins that we do already ſee. I aſk, Does it follow, that becauſe we ſhould not Tempt or Mock God, in Praying for a Sight of the Sins we have a Sight of, and yet don't forſake, that therefore we muſt not Pray to God for a Sight of thoſe Sins that we have no Sight of, having firſt renounced thoſe we have had a Sight of? Well, the Lord keep our Lives out of the Power of a Jury, that would take this Latitude of Conſtruction.

The following Words of that good Man are theſe, and very ſavoury and Chriſtian they are; 'For they that wait upon the Lord, their Strength ſhall be renew-'ed (but for what, if not to forſake Sin, and ſerve the Lord God) 'and living in 'the Light, and walking up to God, it will bring you to true Hunger and Thirſt 'after Righteouſneſs, that you may receive the Bleſſing from God, and give over 'tempting of God to give you a Sight of your Sins. And why? Becauſe you ſee more than you forſake; forſake what you ſee, before you pray for more Sight; for all ſuch Prayer in ſuch Diſobedience is a meer Mockery, and God will not be mocked: and be it known to all, that God has determined not to hear the Prayers of the Wicked; for they are, ſays the Prophet, an Abomination unto Him. This yet appears to be his Senſe by the following Paragraph; ‘And to all you that ſay, ‘God give us Grace and we ſhall refrain from our Sin; there ye have got a tempting cuſtomary Word; for the free Grace of God has appeared to all Men, and ‘this is the Grace which ſhews you Ungodlineſs and Worldly Luſts: Now, thou ‘that liveſt in Ungodlineſs, Lying, and Swearing, and Theft, and Murder, and ‘Drunkenneſs, and Filthy Pleaſures, and luſting after the World, thou art he that ‘turns the free Grace of God into Wantonneſs, and caſts his Laws behind thy ‘Back, and walkeſt deſpightfully againſt the Spirit of Grace. O vain Man! yet ‘thou canſt ſay God is merciful, and live in thy Wickedneſs, paſſing on thy Time ‘without the Fear of God, ſporting thy ſelf in thy Wickedneſs.

What think you now? Does this Man ſay, that People ought not to pray for a Sight of their Sins, which they ſee not, in order to Repentance, or can he mean ſo? let Candour ſpeak. For that, as I ſaid before, muſt be the Meaning of this Adverſary, or he means nothing, becauſe in the other Senſe all muſt grant that Men ought not to tempt, provoke and mock God by praying for a Sight, when they have it and don't uſe it. What then is the Concluſion of this Matter? why plainly this, that from G. F. ſaying, that thoſe who ſay the Lord give us a Sight of our Sins, that have a Sight of them already and forſake them not, do therein tempt God: This Enemy of ours, makes no Scruple of Conſcience to infer and conclude that G. F. ſays, that we ought not to pray to God to give us a Sight of our Sins at all, without any regard to the Diſtinction of having the Sight already, be it that ſuch have forſaken what God has given them a Sight of, or that they have Sins they have yet no Sight of, yet G. F. ſays, we muſt not pray for a Sight of our Sins, if this Adverſary may be credited. Well, the Lord God Almighty, who is the Searcher of all Hearts, knows the End of this Perſon in writing and ſpreading theſe Calumnies and Perverſions, and with him I leave him and his Work, but ſo, as that I ſincerely deſire, that he may have a Sight of his Sin againſt God and an harmleſs People, if he acts ignorantly; and that he may ſincerely repent, and find Mercy with the Lord, if he acts maliciouſly, before he goes hence and be no more ſeen; for its not a ſlight Thing to miſcharge, and that ſo peremptorily too, an entire People, about Matters of the World that is without End.

I ſhall conclude this Defence with theſe three Things, the firſt is, that moſt of the Opinions he calls ours are not ſo evinced, or ſo much as attempted to be proved, by the Author of the Libel againſt us. 2dly, Thoſe that are endeavoured to be faſtened on us, have not their due Proof, one Perſon it may be is produced to make good a Charge againſt a Body of People; would our Adverſaries be thus uſed? would they be concluded by the Word or Act of any one Member of their numerous Communion? Certainly no: Beſides, the Proofs that are brought, are ſome lame, others perverted, and ſome forged, which looks very diſhonourable on the Part of our Accuſer, firſt to miſ-charge, then miſ-cite, and laſtly rack Words, well intended, to extort, if poſſible, a Confeſſion of Guilt: But the Truth is, Error can only be maintained by Error, and therefore there is no wonder in the Caſe. This is the Uſage we have moſtly met with, but, Thanks be to God, we are neither ſurprized nor unprepared.

Laſtly, I do hereby offer a fair and free Conferrence with the Author or Authors of the Libel, or any other that can ſoberly pretend to a Conſcientious Diſatisfaction about our Faith or Practice, at ſuch Time as ſhall be mutually agreed upon to be convenient.

And this I offer, not out of Vanity or Oſtentation, but in Duty to God my great Lord and Maſter, and in good Will to all ſuch Perſons; and did not theſe Conſiderations prevail, to carry me to this Condeſcenſion, my manifold Affairs, and the many and large Books I have already writ on occaſion of theſe and the like Imputations, would have diſſwaded me from any freſh undertaking of this Nature, and ſufficiently guarded me againſt all Reflections upon my Silence.

I am a Friend to all Mankind,

WILLIAM PENN.

ENGLAND's

ENGLAND's Great Intereſt, in the CHOICE of this New PARLIAMENT: Dedicated to All Her Free-Holders and Electors.

SINCE it hath pleaſed God and the King, to begin to revive and reſtore to us our Ancient Right of Frequent Parliaments, it will greatly concern us, as to our preſent Intereſt, and therein the Future Happineſs of our Poſterity, to act at this Time with all the Wiſdom, Caution and Integrity we can. For beſides, that 'tis our own Buſineſs, and that if by a Neglect of this Singular Opportunity, we deſert our Selves, and forſake our own Mercies, We muſt expect to be Left of God, and Good Men too. It may be there has never happened, not only in the Memory of the Living, but in the Records of the Dead, ſo odd and ſo ſtrange a Conjuncture as this we are under. It is made up of ſo many unuſual and important Circumſtances (all affecting us to the very Heart) that whether we regard the Long Sitting of the Late Parliament, or it's abrupt and moſt unexpected Diſſolution, or the Prorogation of the laſt, and it's ſurpriſing Diſſolution, or the ſtrong Jealouſies of the People, and that Univerſal Agitation that is now upon the Spirit of the Nation, and the Reaſons and Motives thereof (ſo far as we can reach them) there ſeems never to have been a Time, wherein this Kingdom ought to ſhow it ſelf more Serious and Diligent in the Buſineſs of it's own Safety.

To be plain with you, All is at Stake: And therefore I muſt tell you, That the Work of this Parliament is,

Firſt, To purſue the Diſcovery and Puniſhment of the Plot: For that has been the Old Snake in the Graſs, the Trojan Horſe, with an Army in the Belly of it.

Secondly, To remove, and bring to Juſtice, thoſe Evil Counſellors, and Corrupt and Arbitrary Miniſters of State, that have been ſo Induſtrious to give the King Wrong Meaſures, to turn Things out of their Ancient and Legal Channel of Adminiſtration, and Alienate his Affections from his People.

Thirdly, To Detect and Pnniſh the Penſioners of the former Parliament, in the Face of the Kingdom: This Breach of Truſt, being Treaſon againſt the Fundamental Conſtitution of our Government.

Fourthly, To ſecure to us the Execution of our Ancient Laws by New Ones, and, among the reſt, ſuch as relate to Frequent Parliaments, the only True Check upon Arbitrary Miniſters, and therefore feared, hated, and oppoſed by them.

Fifthly, That we be ſecur'd from Popery and Slavery, and that Proteſtant-Diſſenters be eaſed.

Sixthly, That in Caſe this be done, the King be releaſed from his Burdenſome Debts to the Nation, and eas'd in the Buſineſs of his Revenue. And let me be free with you, if you intend to ſave Poor England, You muſt take this General Meaſure, viz. To guide and fix your Choice upon Men, that you have Reaſon to believe are Well-Affected, Able and Bold, To Serve the Country in theſe Reſpects.

The Words of the Writ, (at leaſt, the Import of them) are, To Chuſe Wiſe Men, Fearing God, and Hating Covetouſneſs: And what to do? ſays the ſame Writ, To Adviſe the King of the Weighty Matters of the Kingdom. Let us not then play the Fools or Knaves, to Neglect or Betray the Common Intereſt of our Country by a baſe Election: Let neither Fear, Flattery, nor Gain Biaſs us. We muſt not make our Publick Choice, the Recompence of Private Favours from our Neighbours; they muſt excuſe us for that: The Weight of the Matter will very well bear it. This is our Inheritance, All depends upon it: Men don't uſe to lend their Wives, or give their Children to ſatisfie Perſonal Kindneſſes; nor muſt we make a Swop of our Birth-Right, (and that of our Poſterity too) for a Meſs of Pottage, a Feaſt, or a Drinking-Bout; there can be no Proportion here: And therefore none muſt take it ill, that we uſe our Freedom about that, which in it's Conſtitution, is the Great Bulwark of all our Ancient Engliſh Liberties. Truly, our not conſidering what it is to Chuſe a Parliament, and how much All is upon the Hazard in it, may, at laſt, Loſe us Fatally by our own Choice. For I muſt needs tell you, if we miſcarry, it will be our Own Fault; we have no Body elſe to blame: For ſuch is the Happineſs of our Conſtitution, That we cannot well be deſtroy'd, but by our ſelves: And what Man in his Wits, would Sacrifice his Throat to his own Hands?

We, the Commons of England, are a great Part of the Fundamental Government of it; and Three Rights are ſo peculiar and inherent to us, that if we will not throw them away for Fear or Favour, for Meat and Drink, or thoſe other little preſent Profits, that Ill Men offer to tempt us with, they cannot be altered or abrogated. And this I was willing to give you a brief Hint of, that you may know, What Sort of Creatures you are, and what your Power is, leſt through Ignorance of your own Strength and Authority, you turn Slaves to the Humours of thoſe, that properly and truly are but your Servants, and ought to be uſed ſo.

The Firſt of theſe Three Fundamentals is Property, that is, Right and Title to your own Lives, Liberties and Eſtates: In this, every Man is a Sort of Little Sovereign to himſelf: No Man has Power over his Perſon, to Impriſon or hurt it, or over his Eſtate to Invade or Uſurp it: Only your own Tranſgreſſion of the Laws, (and thoſe of your own making too) lays you open to Loſs; which is but the Puniſhment due to your Offences, and this but in Proportion to the Fault committed. So that the Power of England is a Legal Power, which truly merits the Name of Government. That which is not Legal, is a Tyranny, and not properly a Government. Now the Law is Umpire between King, Lords and Commons, and the Right and Property is One in Kind through all Degrees and Qualities in the Kingdom: Mark that.

The Second Fundamental, that is, your Birthright and Inheritance, is Legiſlation, or the Power of making Laws; No Law can be made or abrogated in England without you. Before Henry the Third's Time, your Anceſtors, the Freemen of England, met in their own Perſons, but their Numbers much increaſing, the Vaſtneſs of them, and the Confuſion that muſt needs attend them, making ſuch Aſſemblies not practicable for Buſineſs, this Way of Repreſentatives was firſt pitch'd upon as an Expedient, both to Maintain the Common Right, and to avoid the Confuſion of thoſe mighty Numbers. So that now, as well as then, No Law can be made, no Money Levied, nor a Penny Legally Demanded (even to defray the Charges of the Government) without your own Conſent: Than which, tell me, what can be Freer, or what more Secure to any People?

Your Third Great Fundamental Right and Priviledge is Executive, and holds Proportion with the other Two, in Order to compleat both your Freedom and Security, and that is, Your Share in the Judicatory Power, in the Execution and Application of thoſe Laws, that you agree to be made. Inſomuch as No Man, according to the Ancient Laws of this Realm, can be adjudg'd in Matter of Life, Liberty, or Eſtate, but it muſt be by the Judgment of His Peers, that is, Twelve Men of the Neighbourhood, commonly called a JURY; though this hath been infringed by Two Acts, made in the late Long Parliament, One againſt the Quakers in Particular, and the Other againſt Diſſenters in General, called, An Act againſt Seditious Conventicles, where Perſons are adjudged Offenders, and Puniſhable without a Jury; which, 'tis hoped, this enſuing Parliament will think fit in their Wiſdom to Repeal, though with leſs Severity, than one of the ſame Nature (as to puniſhing Men without Juries) was by Henry the Eighth, who, for Executing of it, Hang'd Empſon and Dudley.

Conſider with your ſelves, that there is nothing more your Intereſt, than for you to underſtand your Right in the Government, and to be conſtantly Jealous over it; for your Well-Being depends upon it's Preſervation.

In all Ages there have been Ill Men, and we, to be ſure, are not without them now, ſuch as being conſcious to themſelves of ill Things, and dare not ſtand a Parliament, would put a Final Diſſolution upon the very Conſtitution it ſelf, to be ſafe, that ſo we might never ſee another.

But this being a Taſk too hard to compaſs, their next Expedient is, To make them for their Turn, by Directing and Governing the Elections; and herein they are very Artificial, and too often Succeſsful: Which indeed is worſe for us than if we had none. For thus the Conſtitution of Parliaments may be deſtroy'd by Parliaments, and we, who by Law are Free, may hereby come to be made Slaves by Law. If then you are Free, and reſolve to be ſo, if you have any Regard to GOD's Providence, in giving you a Claim to ſo Excellent a Conſtitution, if you would not void Your own Rights, nor lay a Foundation of Vaſſallage to your Unborn Followers, the Poor Poſterity of your Loins, for whom God and Nature, and the Conſtitution of the Government, have made you Truſtees, then ſeriouſly weigh theſe following PARTICULARS.

1679. I. In your preſent Election, Receive no Man's Gift, or Bribe, to Chuſe him; but be aſſured, That he will be Falſe to you, that baſely Tempts you to be Falſe to your Country, your ſelf, and your Children. How can you hope to ſee GOD with Peace, That turn Mercenaries in a Matter, on which depends the Well-Being of an Whole Kingdom, for preſent and future Times? Since at a Pinch, One Good Man Gains a Vote, and Saves a Kingdom; And what does any County, or Burgeſs-Town in England know, but all may depend upon their making a Good Choice? But then to Sell the Providence of GOD, and the Dear-bought Purchaſe of your Painful Anceſtors for a Little Money, (that after you have got it, you know not how little a While you may be ſuffered to keep it) is the Mark of a Wretched Mind. Truly, ſuch ought not to have the Power of a Freeman, that would ſo abuſe his own, and hazard other Men's Freedom by it: He deſerves to be caſt over Board, that would Sink the Veſſel, and thereby drown the Company embark't with him.

Honeſt Gentlemen will think they give enough for the Choice, that pay their Electors in a conſtant, painful, and chargeable Attendance; But Such as give Money to be Choſen, would get Money by being Choſen; they deſign not to ſerve you, but themſelves of you; and then fare you well. As you will anſwer it to Almighty GOD, I intreat you to ſhew your Abhorrence of this infamous Practice: It renders the very Conſtitution contemptible, that any ſhould ſay, I can be Choſen, if I will ſpend Money, or give them Drink enough: And this is ſaid not without Reaſon, Elections, that ought to be Serious Things, and Gravely and Reaſonably perform'd, being generally made the Occaſions of more Rudeneſs and Drunkenneſs, than any of the Wild May-Games in Uſe among us.

Thus by making Men Law-Breakers, they are it ſeems, made fit to Chuſe Law-Makers, their Choice being the Purchaſe of Exceſs. But muſt we always owe our Parliaments to Rioting and Drunkenneſs? And muſt Men be made Uncapable of all Choice, before they chuſe their Legiſlators? I would know of any of you all, if in a Difference about a Private Property, an Horſe or a Cow, or any other Thing, you would be as eaſie, indifferent, and careleſs in chuſing your Arbitrators? Certainly you would not: With what Reaſon then can you be unconcern'd in the Qualifications of Men, upon whoſe Fitneſs and Integrity depends all, you, and your Poſterity may enjoy? Which leads me to the other PARTICULARS.

II. Chuſe no Man that has been a Reputed Penſioner; 'tis not only againſt your Intereſt, but it is diſgraceful to you, and the Parliament you chuſe. The Repreſentative of a Nation ought to conſiſt of the Moſt Wiſe, Sober, and Valiant of the People; not Men of mean Spirits, or Sordid Paſſions, that would Sell the Intereſt of the People that chuſe them, to advance their own, or be at the Beck of ſome Great Man, in Hopes of a Lift to a Good Employ: Pray beware of theſe. You need not be ſtreightned, the Country is Wide, and the Gentry Numerous.

III. By no Means chuſe a Man that is an Officer at Court, or whoſe Employment is Durante bene placito, that is, At Will and Pleaſure; nor is this any Reflection upon the King, who being One Part of the Government, ſhould leave the other Free, and without the leaſt Awe or Influence, to bar, or hinder it's Proceedings. Beſides, an Officer is under a Temptation to be Byaſt, and to ſay True, An Office in a Parliament-Man, is but a ſofter and ſafer Word for a Penſion: The Pretence it has above the other, is the Danger of it.

IV. In the next Place, Chuſe no Indigent Perſon, for thoſe may be under a Temptation of abuſing their Truſt, to gain their own Ends: For ſuch do not Prefer you, which ſhould be the End of their Choice, but Raiſe themſelves by you.

V. Have a Care of Ambitious Men and Non-Reſidents, ſuch as live about Town, and not with their Eſtates, who ſeek Honours and Preferments Above, and little, or never, embetter the Country with their Expences or Hoſpitality, for they intend themſelves, and not the Advantage of the Country.

VI. Chuſe No Prodigal or Voluptuous Perſons, for beſides that they are not Regular enough to be Law-Makers, they are commonly Idle; and though they may wiſh well to your Intereſt, yet they will loſe it, rather than their Pleaſures; they will ſcarcely give their Attendance, they muſt not be relied on. So that ſuch Perſons are only to be preferred before thoſe, That are Sober to do Miſchief: Whoſe Debauchery is of the Mind: Men of Unjuſt, Mercenary, and Siniſter Principles; who, the Soberer they be to themſelves, the Worſe they are to you.

VII. Review the Members of the Laſt Parliaments, and their Inclinations and Votes, as near as you can learn them, and the Converſation of the Gentlemen of your own Country, that were not Members, and take your Meaſures by both, by that which is your True and Juſt Intereſt, at this Critical Time of the Day, and you need not be divided or diſtracted in your Choice.

VIII. Rather take a Stranger, if recommended by an Unqueſtionable Hand; than a Neighbour Ill Affected to your Intereſt. 'Tis not pleaſing a Neighbour, becauſe Rich and Powerful, but Saving England, that you are to Eye: Neither Pay, or Return Private Obligations at the Coſt of the Nation; let not ſuch Engagements put you upon Dangerous Elections, as you love your Country.

IX. Be ſure to have your Eye upon Men of Induſtry and Improvement. For thoſe that are Ingenious, and Laborious to Propagate the Growth of the Country, will be very tender of weakning or impoveriſhing it: You may truſt ſuch.

X. Let not your Choice be flung upon Men of Fearful Diſpoſitions, that will let Good Senſe, Truth, and your Real Intereſt in any Point ſink, rather than diſpleaſe ſome one or other Great Man. If you are but Senſible of your Own Real Great Power, you will wiſely chuſe thoſe, that will, by all Juſt and Legal Ways, firmly keep, and zealouſly promote it.

XI. Pray ſee, that you chuſe Sincere Proteſtants; Men that don't play the Proteſtant in Deſign, and are indeed Diſguis'd Papiſts, ready to pull off their Maſk, when Time ſerves: You will know ſuch by their Laughing at the Plot, Diſgracing the Evidence, Admiring the Traytor's Conſtancy, that were forc'd to it, or their Religion and Party were gone beyond an Excuſe or an Equivocation. The contrary, are Men that thank God for this Diſcovery, and in their Converſation Zealouſly direct themſelves in an Oppoſition to the Papal Intereſt, which indeed is a Combination againſt Good Senſe, Reaſon and Conſcience, and to introduce a blind Obedience without (if not againſt) Conviction. And that Principle which introduces Implicit Faith and Blind Obedience in Religion, will alſo introduce Implicit Faith and Blind Obedience in Government. So that it is no more the Law in the one than in the other, but the Will and Power of the Superior, that ſhall be the Rule and Bond of our Subjection. This is that Fatal Miſchief Popery brings with it to Civil Society, and for which ſuch Societies ought to beware of it, and all thoſe that are Friends to it.

XII. Laſtly, Among theſe, be ſure to find out, and caſt your Favour, upon Men of Large Principles, ſuch as will not Sacrifice their Neighbour's Property to the Frowardneſs of their own Party in Religion: Pick out ſuch Men, as will Inviolably Maintain Civil Rights, for all that will Live Soberly and Civily under the Government.

Chriſt did not Revile thoſe that Reviled Him, much leſs did He Perſecute thoſe that did not Revile Him. He rebuk'd His Diſciples, that would have deſtroyed thoſe that did not follow, and conform to them, ſaying, Ye know not what Spirit ye are of; I came not to Deſtroy Men's Lives, but to Save them. Which made the Apoſtle to ſay, That the Weapons of their Warfare were not Carnal, but Spiritual. This was the Ancient Proteſtant Principle, and where Proteſtants Perſecute for Religion, they are Falſe to their own Profeſſion, and Turn Papiſts even in the worſt Senſe, againſt whom their Anceſtors did ſo ſtoutly exclaim. Read the Book of Martyrs of all Countries in Europe, and you will find I ſay True: Therefore beware alſo of that Popery. Conſider, that ſuch Partial Men don't love England, but a Sect; and prefer Impoſed Uniformity, before Virtuous and Neighbourly Unity. This is that Diſturber of Kingdoms and States, and until the Good Man, and not the Opinionative Man, be the Chriſtian in the Eye of the Government, to be ſure, while Force is uſed to propagate or deſtroy Faith, and the outward Comforts of the Widow and Fatherleſs, are made a Forfeit for the Peaceable Exerciſe of their Conſciences to God, He that Sits in Heaven, and Judgeth Righteouſly, whoſe Eye pities the Oppreſſed and Poor of the Earth, will with-hold His Bleſſings from us.

O lay to Heart, the Grievous Spoils and Ruins that have been made upon your harmleſs Neighbours, for near theſe Twenty Years, who have only deſired to enjoy their Conſciences to God, according to the Beſt of their Underſtandings, and to Eat the Bread of Honeſt Labour, and to have but a Penny for a Penny's-Worth among you: Whoſe Ox or Aſs have they taken? Whom have they wronged? Or when did any of them offer you Violence? Yet Sixty Pounds have been diſtrained for Twelve, Two Hundred Pounds for Sixty Pounds. The Flocks been taken out of the Fold, the Herd from the Stall; not a Cow left to give Milk to the Orphan, nor a Bed for the Widow to lie on; whole Barns of Corn ſwept away, and not a Penny return'd; and thus bitterly proſecuted even by Laws made againſt Papiſts. And what is all this for? Unleſs their Worſhipping of God according to their Conſcience; for they injure no Man, nor have they offered the leaſt Moleſtation to the Government.

1679. Truly, I muſt take Liberty to tell you, If you will not endeavour to redreſs theſe Evils in your Choice, I fear God will ſuffer you to fall into great Calamity by thoſe you hate. You are afraid of Popery, and yet many of you practiſe it; For why do you fear it, but for it's Compulſion and Perſecution? And will you compel or perſecute your ſelves, or chuſe ſuch as do? If you will, pray let me ſay, You hate the Papiſts, but not Popery. But God defend you from ſo doing, and direct you to do, as you would be done by; that chuſing ſuch as love England, her People, and their Civil Rights, Foundations may be laid for that Security and Tranquillity, which the Children unborn may have Cauſe to riſe up and bleſs your Names and Memories for. Take it in good Part, I mean nothing but Juſtice and Peace to all; and ſo conclude my ſelf,

Your Honeſt Monitor and Old England's True Friend,

PHILANGLUS.

ONE
Project for the Good of England:
THAT IS,
Our CIVIL UNION is our CIVIL SAFETY.
Humbly Dedicated to the GREAT COUNCIL,
The Parliament of ENGLAND.

RELIGION, as it is the nobleſt End of Man's Life, ſo it were the beſt Bond of Human Society, provided Men did not err in the Meaning of that excellent Word. Scripture interprets it to be Loving God above all, and our Neighbours as our ſelves; but Practice teacheth us, that too many meerly reſolve it into Opinion and Form; in which, not the Text, but the Comment too often prevails; whence it comes to paſs, that thoſe Bodies of Men, who have but one Common Civil Intereſt, are miſerably diſtracted in Favour of their adopted Notions, upon which they are impatient to beſtow an Earthly Crown. And this is the Reaſon of that Miſchief and Uncertainty that attend Government. No ſooner one Opinion prevails upon another, (though all hold the Text to be ſacred) bnt Human Society is ſhaken, and the Civil Government muſt receive and ſuffer a Revolution; inſomuch, that when we conſider the Fury and Unnaturalneſs of ſome People for Religion, (which ſhews they have none that's True, (Religion making Men moſt Natural as well as Divine) we have Reaſon to bewail the Miſ-underſtanding as well as Miſ-living of that venerable Word.

But ſince 'tis ſo hard to diſabuſe Men of their wrong Apprehenſions of Religion, and the true Nature and Life of it, and conſequently as yet too early in the Day to fix ſuch a Religion upon which Mankind will readily agree as a common Baſis for Civil Society, we muſt recur to ſome lower but true, Principle for the Preſent, and I think there will be no Difficulty of Succeeding.

'Tis this, That Civil Intereſt is the Foundation and End of Civil Government, and where it is not maintained entire, the Government muſt needs decline. The Word INTEREST has a good and bad Acceptation; when it is taken in an ill Senſe, it ſignifies a Purſuit of Advantage without Regard to Truth or Juſtice; which I mean not: The good Signification of the Word, and which I mean, is a Legal Endeavour to keep Rights, or augment honeſt Profits, whether it be in a private Perſon or a Society. By GOVERNMENT, I underſtand a Juſt and Equal Conſtitution, where Might is not Right, but Laws rule, and not the Wills or Power of Men; for that were plain Tyranny.

This Government muſt have a Supreme Authority in it ſelf to Determine, and not be ſuperſeded or controuled by any other Power, for then it would not be a Government, but a Subjection, which is a plain Contradiction.

Having thus explained the Terms of the Principle I have laid down, I repeat it, viz. That Civil Intereſt is the Foundation and End of Civil Government, and prove it thus: The Good of the Whole is the Riſe and End of Government; but the Good of the Whole muſt needs be the Intereſt of the Whole, and conſequently the Intereſt of the Whole, is the Reaſon and End of Government. None can ſtumble at the Word Good, for every Man may eaſily and ſafely interpret that to himſelf, ſince he muſt needs believe, 'tis Good for him to be preſerv'd in an undiſturb'd Poſſeſſion of his Civil Rights, according to the Free and Juſt Laws of the Land, and the Conſtruction he makes for himſelf will ſerve his Neighbour, and ſo the whole Society.

But as the Good of the People is properly the Civil Intereſt of the People, and that, the Reaſon and End of Government; ſo is the Maintenance of that Civil Intereſt entire, the Preſervation of Government. For where People are ſure of their Own, and are protected from Violence or Injury, they cheerfully yield their Obedience, and pay their Contribution to the Support of that Government. But on the contrary, where Men are inſecure of their Civil Rights, nay, where they are daily violated, and themſelves in Danger of Ruin, and that for no Sin committed againſt the Nature of Civil Intereſt, (to preſerve which, Government was inſtituted) we ought to ſuppoſe their Affections will flag, that they will grow dead-hearted, and that what they pay or do, may go againſt the Grain: And to ſay true, ſuch Unkindneſs is ready to tempt them to believe they ſhould not of Right contribute to the Maintenance of ſuch Governments as yield them no Security or Civil Protection. Which unhappy Flaw in the Civil Intereſt, proves an untoward Crack in the Government; Men not being cordially devoted to the Proſperity of that Government that is exerciſed in their Deſtruction; and how far that Fraction upon the Common Intereſt of the People may affect the Government I cannot tell, but to be ſure it is inſecure to any Government, to have the People (it's Strength) divided, as they will be, where their Intereſt is ſo disjointed by the Government; One Protected, the Other Expos'd. Wherefore, Wiſe Governments have ever taken Care to preſerve their People, as knowing they do thereby preſerve their own Intereſt, and that how Numerous their People, ſo large their Intereſt. For not only Solomon has told us, That the Honour of a Prince is in the Multitude of his People, but Experience teaches, that Plenty of People is the Riches and Strength of a Wiſe and Good Government; as that is, where Vice is corrected and Virtue encouraged, and All taken in and ſecured in Civils, that have the ſame Civil Intereſt with the Government.

But as the Good and Intereſt of the Whole is the Riſe and End of Government, ſo muſt it ſuppoſe, that the Whole (which takes in all Parties) concurs in ſeeking the Good of the Government; for the Reaſon of the Government will not ſuffer it to protect thoſe that are Enemies to it's Conſtitution and Safety; for ſo it would admit of ſomething dangerous to the Society, for the Security of which, Government was at firſt Inſtituted.

It will follow, that thoſe that own another Temporal Power ſuperior to the Government they properly belong to, make themſelves Subjects not of the Government they are born under, but to that Authority which they avow to be ſuperior to the Government of their own Country, and conſequently Men of another Intereſt, becauſe 'tis their Intereſt to purſue the Advantages of that Power they acknowledge to be ſovereign; But thoſe that own, embrace and obey the Government of their own Country as their temporal ſupreme Authority, and whoſe Intereſt is one and the ſame with that of their own proper Government, ought to be valued and protected by that Government.

The Principle thus far lies General, I will now bring it to our own Caſe:

ENGLAND is a Country Populous and Proteſtant, and though under ſome Diſſents within it ſelf, yet the Civil Intereſt is the ſame, and in ſome Senſe the Religious too. For, firſt, all Engliſh Proteſtants, whether Conformiſts or Nonconformiſts, agree in this, that they only owe Allegiance and Subjection unto the Civil Government of England, and offer any Security in their Power to give of their Truth in this Matter. And in the next Place, they do not only conſequentially diſclaim the Pope's Supremacy, and all Adheſion to Foreign Authority under any Pretence, but therewith deny and oppoſe the Romiſh Religion, as it ſtands degenerated from Scripture, and the firſt and pureſt Ages of the Church; which makes up a great Negative Union.

And it cannot be unknown to Men read in the Reaſons of the Reformation, that a Proteſtation made by the German Reformers againſt the Imperial Edicts of Charles the Fifth, impoſing Romiſh Traditions, gave Beginning to the Word Proteſtant.

In ſhort, It is the Intereſt of the Ruling, or Church-Proteſtants of England, that the Pope ſhould have no Claim or Power in England. It is alſo the Intereſt of the Diſſenting Proteſtants, that the Pope ſhould have no Claim or Power here in England, becauſe they are ſubject to the ſame Miſchiefs and Sufferings in their Civil and Religious Rights that the Church-Proteſtants are liable to; if then both are like to loſe by Pope and Foreign Authority, their Intereſt muſt needs be one againſt Pope and Foreign Authority; and if they have but one Intereſt, it will follow, that the Church-Proteſtant cannot prejudice the Diſſenting-Proteſtant, but he muſt weaken and deſtroy his own Intereſt

The Civil Intereſt of Engliſh Proteſtants being thus the ſame, and their Religious Intereſt too, ſo far as concerns a Negative to the Uſurpation and Error of Rome; I do humbly aſk, if it be the Intereſt of the Government, to expoſe thoſe to Miſery that have no other Civil Intereſt than THAT of the Government? Or if it be juſt or equal that the Weaker ſhould be proſecuted by the more powerful Proteſtants, whoſe Intereſt is poſitively the ſame in Civils, and in Religion Negatively? One would think 'twere reaſonable that they ſhould not ſuffer by Proteſtants, who if Popery have a Day, are likely to ſuffer with them, and that upon the ſame Principles. Experience tells us, That the wiſeſt Architects lay their Foundations broad and ſtrong, and raiſe their Squares and Structure by the moſt exact Rules of Art, that the Fabrick may be ſecure againſt the Violence of Storms; but if People muſt be deſtroy'd by thoſe of the ſame Intereſt, truly that Intereſt will ſtand but Totteringly, and every Breath of Oppoſition will be ready to ſhake it.

'Twas the Inconfutable Anſwer Chriſt made to the Blaſphemers of that Power by which he wrought Miracles; A Kingdom divided againſt it ſelf cannot ſtand: what he ſaid then, let me on another Occaſion ſay now, an Intereſt divided againſt it ſelf muſt fall.

I know ſome Men will take Fire at this, and by crying The CHURCH, The CHURCH, hope to ſilence all Arguments of this Nature; But they muſt excuſe me, if I pay no Manner of Regard to their Zeal, and hold their Devotion both Ignorant and Dangerous at this Time. It is not the Way to fill the Church, to deſtroy the People. A Church without People is a Contradiction, eſpecially when the Scripture tells us, that 'tis the People that makes the Church.

And 'tis not without an Appearance of Reaſon that ſome good and wiſe Men are apprehenſive, that the greateſt Sticklers for perſecuting Proteſtant Diſſenters in Favour of the Church of England, are Men addicted and devoted to the Church of Rome, or at leaſt animated by ſuch as are; who, deſpairing of doing any great Feats, if known, hide themſelves under theſe Pretences; but the Meaning of it is to debilitate the Proteſtant Cauſe in general, by exciting the Church of England, to deſtroy all other Proteſtant Intereſts in theſe Kingdoms, that ſo nothing may remain for Popery to conflict with but the few Zealous Abettors of that Church.

And that this may not look diſingenuous, or like a Trick of mine, I will enforce it by a Demonſtration. It is plain Fact, that the Church of Rome hath ever ſince the Reformation practiſed the Reſtoration of her Religion and Power in theſe Kingdoms. It is as evident that Religion is with her a Word for Civil Intereſt, that is, that ſhe may have the Rule over Men both Body and Soul. For 'tis Government ſhe aims at, to have the Reins of Power in her Hand, to give Law and weild the Scepter.

To do this ſhe muſt either have a greater Intereſt than the Proteſtants that are now in Poſſeſſion, or elſe divide their Intereſt, and ſo weaken them by themſelves, and make them Inſtruments to her Ends. That her own Force is Inconſiderable is clear: She has nothing within Doors to give her Hope but the Diſcord of Proteſtants. It follows then that ſhe muſt of Neceſſity beſtir her ſelf, and uſe her Arts to enflame the Reckoning among Proteſtants, and carry their Diſſents about Religious Matters to a Diviſion in the Civil Intereſt. And it is the more to be fear'd, becauſe whatever ſhe has been to others, ſhe has been ever true to her ſelf.

If this then be the only Domeſtick Expedient left her, we are ſure ſhe will uſe it; and if ſo, it muſt needs be of great Importance with all Proteſtants to let fall their private Animoſities, and take all poſſible Care that their Diſſents about Faith or Worſhip, (which regard the other World) divide not their Affection and Judgment about the Common and Civil Intereſt of their Country: becauſe if that be kept entire, it equally fruſtrates the Deſigns of Rome, as if you were of one Religion. For ſince, as I ſaid before, Religion, with the great Men of that Church, is nothing elſe but a ſofter Word for Civil Empire, preſerve you but your Civil Intereſt from Fraction, and you are in that Senſe of one Religion too; and that ſuch an one, as you need not fear the Temptation of Smithfield, if you will but be true to it.

This being the Caſe, I would take Leave to aſk the Zealous Gentlemen of the Engliſh Church, If Conformity to the Faſhion of their Worſhip be dearer to them than England's Intereſt and the Cauſe of Proteſtancy? If their Love to Church-Government be greater than to the Church and her Religion, and to their Country and her Laws? Or, laſtly, Whether in Caſe they are ſincere in their Allegations for the Church, (which, I confeſs ingenuouſly, I am apt to ſuſpect) it is to be ſuppoſed that the preſent Church-men (Conformiſts I mean) are better able of themſelves to ſecure Proteſtancy and our Civil Intereſt againſt the Attempts of Rome, than in Conjunction with the Civil Intereſt of all Proteſtant Diſſenters? If they ſay, yes, I would have them at the ſame Time, for the ſame Reaſon, to give it under their Hands, that 'tis a ſtanding Rule in Arithmetick, that ONE is more than SIX, and that hitherto we have been all miſtaken in the Art of Numbers.

Being brought to this Pinch, I conceive they muſt ſay, that they had rather deliver up their Church to the Power and Deſigns of Popery, than ſuffer Diſſenters to live freely among them, though Proteſtants, of one Negative Religion, and of the ſame Civil Intereſt; or elſe haſten to break thoſe Bonds that are laid upon Diſſenters of truly tender (and by Experience) of peaceable Conſciences; and by Law eſtabliſh the free Exerciſe of their Worſhip to Almighty God, that the Fears, Jealouſies, Diſaffection and Diſtraction, that now affect the one common Intereſt of Proteſtants, may be removed; for it ſeems impoſſible to preſerve a diſtinct Intereſt from both. But to which of theſe they may incline, I muſt not determine; and yet I hope, they will not be of the Mind of a late Monk of Cullen, that in his publick Exerciſe exhorted the Civil Magiſtrates to chuſe to have their City Poor and Catholick, that is Popiſh, rather than Great and Opulent by the Admiſſion of trading Hereticks; but if they ſhould, may our Magiſtrates have at leaſt their Prudence; for the Culleners gave him the Hearing, but were as true to their Intereſt, as the Monk to his Superſtition.

Under Favour, the Civil Government is greatly concern'd to diſcountenance ſuch Biggotry; for it Thins the People, Leſſens Trade, Creates Jealouſies, and Endangers the Peace and Wealth of the Whole. And, with Submiſſion, of what ſhould the Civil Magiſtrate be more tender, than of ſuffering the Civil Intereſt of a Great People to be diſturb'd and narrow'd for the Humour of any one Party of them? for ſince the Civil Intereſt lies as large, as the People of that Intereſt, the People muſt be preſerv'd in order to preſerve that Common Intereſt. Other Notions ever did divide and weaken Empire, and in the End they have rarely miſs'd to pull the Old Houſe about their Ears, that have govern'd themſelves by ſuch diſproportionable Meaſures: By all Means, intereſt the Affections of the People in the Proſperity of the Government, by making the Government a SECURITY to their particular Rights and Properties.

I aſk, if more Cuſtom comes not to the King, and more Trade to the Kingdom, by encouraging the Labour and Traffick of an Epiſcopalian, Preſbyterian, Independent, Quaker and Anabaptiſt, than by an Epiſcopalian only? If this be true, why ſhould the reſt be render'd uncapable of Trade, yea, of Living? What Schiſm or Hereſy is there in the Labour and Commerce of the Anabaptiſt, Quaker, Independent and Preſbyterian, more than in the Labour and Traffick of the Epiſcopalian?

I beſeech you give me Leave, Is there ever a Church-man in England, that in Diſtreſs would refuſe the Courteſy of one of theſe Diſſenters? If one of them ſhould happen to fall into a Pond or Ditch, would he deny to be helped out by a Diſſenter's Hand? Is it to be ſuppoſed, he would in ſuch a Pickle be Stomachful, and chuſe to lie there, and be Smother'd or Drown'd, rather than owe Aid to the Good-will of a poor Phanatick? Or if his Houſe were on Fire, may we think that he would have it rather burnt to the Ground than acknowledge it's Preſervation to a Non-conformiſt? Would not the Act be Orthodox, whatever were the Man? So in Caſe of being Sick, Impriſon'd, Beſet, Benighted, out of the Way, far from Kin-

1679. dred or Acquaintance, with an hundred other Caſes that may happen daily, can we think, that ſuch Men would aſk Queſtions for Conſcience Sake, or charge Schiſm upon the Relief given them? No, no; Self will always be true to it's Intereſt, let Superſtition mutter what it will.

But ſince the Induſtry, Rents and Taxes of the Diſſenters are as current as their Neighbours, who loſes by ſuch narrowneſs more than England, than the Government and the Magiſtracy? For till it be the Intereſt of the Farmer to deſtroy his Flock, to ſtarve the Horſe he rides, and the Cow that gives him Milk, it cannot be the Intereſt of England to let a great Part of her Sober and Uſeful Inhabitants be deſtroy'd about Things that concern another World. And 'tis to be hoped, that the Wiſdom and Charity of our Governors will better guide them both to their own real Intereſt and their People's Preſervation, which are inſeparable; that ſo they may not Starve them for Religion, that are as willing, as able, to work for the Good of King and Country.

I beſeech you, let Nature ſpeak, who is ſo much a better Friend to Human Society, than Falſe or Froward Opinion, that ſhe often rectifies the Miſtakes of a Prejudiced Education, that we may ſay, how Kind, how Gentle, how Helpful does ſhe teach us to be to each other, till that Make-bate OPINION (falſly called Religion) begins the Jangle, and Foments to Hatred.

All the Productions of Nature are by Love, and ſhall Religion propagate by Force? If we conſider the poor Hen, ſhe will teach us Humanity. Nature does not only learn her to hatch, but to be tender over her Feeble Chickens, that they may not be a Prey to the Kite. All the Seeds and Plants that grow for the Uſe and Nouriſhment of Man, are produced by the kind and warm Influences of the Sun. Nothing but Kindneſs keeps up Human Race: Men and Women don't get Children in Spite, but Affection. 'Tis wonderful to think by what friendly and gentle Ways Nature produces, and Matures the Creatures of the World; and that Religion ſhould teach us to be Froward and Cruel, is Lamentable: This were to make her the Enemy inſtead of the Reſtorer of Nature. But I think, we may without Offence ſay, That ſince True Religion gives Men Greater Mildneſs and Goodneſs than they had before, that Religion which teaches them leſs, muſt needs be Falſe. What ſhall we ſay then, but that even Nature is a truer Guide to Peace, and better informs us to preſerve Civil Intereſt, than Falſe Religion, and conſequently, that we ought to be true to the Natural and Juſt Principles of Society, and not ſuffer one of them to be violated for Humour or Opinion.

Let us go together as far as our Way lies, and preſerve our Unity in thoſe Principles, which maintain our Civil Society. This is our Common and our Juſt Intereſt, all Proteſtant Diſſenters agree in this, and it is both Wiſe and Righteous to admit no Fraction upon this Pact, no Violence upon this Concord. For the Conſequence of permitting any Thing to break in upon the Principles of Human Society, that is Foreign to the Nature of it, will diſtract and weaken that Society.

We know, that in all Plantations the Wiſdom of Planters is well aware of this: and let us but conſider, that the ſame Ways that plant Countries, muſt be kept to for preſerving the Plantation, elſe 'twill quickly be Depopulated.

That Country which is falſe to it's firſt Principles of Government, and miſtakes or divides it's Common and Popular Intereſt, muſt unavoidably decay. And let me ſay, That had there been this Freedom granted Eighteen Years ago, Proteſtancy had been too potent for the Enemies of it; nor had there been thoſe Diviſions for Popery to make it's Advantage by; at leaſt, not in the Civil Intereſt of the Nation. And where that has been preſerv'd entire, it has been never able to prevail: Witneſs the careful Government of Holland, where the Preſervation of their Civil Intereſt from Fraction hath ſecured them againſt the Growth of Popery, though it be almoſt tolerated by them: So powerful are the Effects of an United Civil Intereſt in Government. Now becauſe the Civil Intereſt of this Nation is the Preſervation of the Free and Legal Government of it from all Subjection to Foreign Claim, and that the ſeveral Sorts of Proteſtants are united, as in the Common Proteſtancy, that is, a General Renunciation of Rome, ſo in the Maintenance of this Civil Government as a Common Security, (for it ſtrikes at both their Rights, Civil and Sacred; their Conſcience, Religion and Law, to admit any Foreign Juriſdiction here) it muſt follow, that had theſe ſeveral, as well Engliſh as Proteſtant Parties, been timely encouraged to this United Civil Intereſt, they had ſecured the Government from this Danger by rendring it too formidable for the Attempt.

But there is a two fold Miſtake that I think fit to remove. Firſt, That the Difference betwixt Proteſtants and their Diſſenters is generally manag'd, as if it were Civil. Secondly, The Difference betwixt Papiſt and Proteſtant is carried on, as if it were chiefly Religious.

To the Firſt, I ſay, 'Tis plauſible, but falſe; it is an Artifice of ill Men to enflame the Government againſt good People, to make baſe Ends by other Mens Ruin; whereas they that diſſent, are at a Ne plus ultra on the Behalf of the Engliſh Government, as well as themſelves. They neither acknowledge nor ſubmit to any other Authority. They hold the one common Civil Head, and not only acquieſce in the Diſtribution of Juſtice by Law; but embrace it as the beſt Part of their Patrimony. So that the Difference between Proteſtants and their Diſſenters is purely Religious, and moſtly about Church-Government, and ſome Forms of Worſhip, apprehended to be not ſo pure and Apoſtolical as could be deſired; and here it is, that Tenderneſs ſhould be exercis'd, if in any Caſe in the World, or St. Paul is Miſtaken.

But as to the Second, under Correction, the Caſe is alter'd, for though it be moſtly manag'd on the Side of Religion, The great Point is meerly Civil, and ſhould never be otherwiſe admitted or underſtood. For want of this Caution Proteſtants ſuffer themſelves to be drawn into tedious Controverſies about Religion, and give occaſion to the Profeſſors and Favourers of that Way to exclaim againſt them, as Perſecutors for Religion, who had reprobated ſuch Severity in the Papiſts to their Anceſtors (a moſt plauſible, and very often a ſucceſful Plea) when in reality the Difference is not ſo much Religious as Civil. Not but that there is a vaſt Contrariety in Doctrine and Worſhip too; but this barely ſhould not be the Cauſe of our ſo great Diſtance, and that Proviſion the Laws make againſt them; but rather that Fundamental inconſiſtency they carry with them to the Security of the Engliſh Government and Conſtitution unto which they belong, by acknowledging a Foreign Juriſdiction in theſe Kingdoms. So that drawing into Queſtion and Danger the Conſtitution and Government, to which Scripture, and Nature, and Civil Pact, oblige their Fidelity and Obedience, there ſeems a Diſcharge upon the Civil Government from any farther Care of their Protection, that make it a Piece of Conſcience to ſeek it's Ruin and which is worſe, a Principle, not to be informed of better Things, for even here not Reaſon or Law, but the Pope muſt be Judge.

This being the Brief and modeſt State of the Caſe, I muſt return to my firſt great Principle, That Civil Intereſt is the Foundation and End of Civil Government: and that how much Men deſert the Intereſt of a Kingdom, ſo much they Wound and Subvert the Government of it. I appeal to all Wiſe and Conſiderate Men of the Truth of this by the preſent Poſture of Affairs and their proper Cauſe.

To come then to our Point, Shall Engliſh Men by Engliſh Men, and Proteſtants by Proteſtants, be Free or Oppreſt? This is, Whether ſhall we receive as Engliſhmen and Proteſtants, thoſe that have no other Civil Intereſt than that which is purely Engliſh, and who ſincerely profeſs and embrace the ſame Proteſtation, for which the Ancient Reformers were ſtiled Proteſtants, or for the Sake of Humour or Baſe Ends diſown them and expoſe them and their Families to utter Miſery?

I would hope bettter of our great Church-Men's Charity and Prudence; but if they ſhould be ſo unhappy as to keep to their old Meaſures, and ſtill play the Gawdy, but empty, Name of Church againſt the Civil Intereſt and Religion of the Nation, they will ſhew themſelves deſerted of God, and then how long it will be, before they will be ſeen and left of all ſober Men, let them Judge. For to ſpeak freely, after all this Light that is now in the World, no Ignorance can excuſe ſuch Zeal, nor will wiſe Men believe it to be either, but a Trick to weaken Proteſtancy, that her declared Enemy may with leſs hazard gain the Chair. And there is not ſo much reaſon to fear Profeſt Roman Catholicks, as thoſe Gentlemen, who valuing themſelves by their reſpects to the Church and Tenderneſs of it's Independent Honour, have the Opportunity with leſs Suſpicion of letting in Popery at the Back door. Theſe are Men that pay off the Phanatick in the Name of the Church, but for the good of the Pope, to whoſe Account thoſe Endeavours muſt be placed.

But it will go a great Way to our Deliverance, if we are not Careleſs to obſerve the Secret Workings of thoſe that have vow'd our Miſery, and of them, ſuch as are in Maſquerade, and wear the Guiſe of Friends, are moſt Dangerous: But ſome Men are Pur-blind, they can ſee Danger as near as their Noſe, but in a Difficulty, that is not a Foot from them, they are Preſumptive, Ruſty and not to be govern'd. Could ſome Church-men but ſee the Irreparable Miſchiefs that will attend them (if ſincere to their preſent Profeſſion) unleſs prevented by a Modeſt and Chriſtian condeſcenſion to Diſſenting Proteſtant Chriſtians, they would never ſuffer themſelves to be Miſ-guided by Stiff and Rigid Principles at this Time of Day.

If Chriſtianity, that moſt Meek and Self-denying Religion, cannot prevail upon them, methinks the Power of Intereſt, and that Self-intereſt too, ſhould have ſome Succeſs, for in thoſe Caſes they uſe not to be obſtinate.

But I expect it ſhould be told me, That this is the Way to Ruin the Church, and let in an Anarchy in Religion: Cujus contrarium verum. I am glad to obviate this, before I leave you, ſeeing the Contrary is moſt true; for it leaves the Church and Church-men as they are, with this Diſtinction, that whereas now Conformity is Coercive, which is Popiſh, it will be then Perſwaſive, which is Chriſtian. And there may be ſome hopes, when the Parſons, deſtitute of the Magiſtrates Sword, ſhall of neceſſity enforce their Religion by good Doctrine and Holy Living; nor ought they to murmur, for that which ſatisfied Chriſt and his Apoſtles ſhould ſatisfy them: His Kingdom is not of this World, therefore they ſhould not Fight for him, if they would be his Servants and the Children of his Kingdom, Chriſt, and not Civil Force, is the Rock his Church is built upon. Nor indeed has any Thing ſo Tarniſht the Cauſe of Proteſtancy, as the Profeſſors of it betaking themſelves to Worldly Arms to propagate their Religion. David could not wear Saul's Armour, and true Proteſtants cannot uſe Popiſh Weapons, Impoſition and Perſecution. In ſhort; 'Tis the very Intereſt of the Church of England, to preſerve the civil Intereſt entire, or elſe Popery will endanger all; but that cannot be unleſs all of that Civil Intereſt be preſerved; therefore Proteſtant Diſſenters ſhould be indulg'd.

But ſome will ſay, There is a Difference even among Diſſenters; Some will give a Security to the Civil Government by taking the Oaths; others will not, and be it through Tenderneſs, how do we know, but Papiſts will ſhrow'd themſelves under the Wings of ſuch Diſſenters, and ſo in Tolerating Proteſtant Diſſenters to fortify Proteſtancy, in reality Popery will be hereby ſhelter'd incognito.

I anſwer, Firſt, That ſuch Oaths are little or no Security to any Government, and though they may give ſome Allay to the Jealouſy of Governours, they never had the Effect deſired. For neither in private Caſes, nor yet in Publick Tranſactions have Men adher'd to their Oaths, but their Intereſt. He that is a Knave, was never made Honeſt by an Oath: Nor is it an Oath, but Honeſty, that keeps Honeſt Men ſuch. Read Story and conſult our Modern Times, tell me what Government ſtood the firmer or longer for them? Men may take them for their own Advantage, or to avoid Loſs and Puniſhment: But the Queſtion is, What real Benefit, or Security comes thereby to the Government? It is certain they have often enſnared a Good Man, but never caught one Knave yet: We ought not to put ſo great a Value upon Oaths, as to render the Security of our Government ſo low and hazardous.

God's Providence and the Wiſdom of our Anceſtors have found out a better Teſt for us to reſt upon, and that is, our Common Intereſt, and the Laws of the Land DULY executed: Theſe are the Security of our Government.

For Example, a Man Swears he will not Plot, yet Plots; pray what Security is this Oath to the Government? But though 'tis evident, that this be no Security; that Law which Hangs him for Plotting, is an unqueſtionable one. So that 'tis not for wiſe Governours, by Swearing Men to the Government to think to ſecure it; but all having agreed to the Laws, by which they are to be governed, let any Man break them at his Peril. Wherefore good Laws, and a Juſt Execution of them, and not Oaths, are the Natural and Real Security of a Government.

But next, though ſome may ſcruple the Oaths, 'tis not for the Sake of the Matter ſo much as Form, which you know is not the Caſe of Roman Catholicks, (pray diſtinguiſh) and thoſe very Perſons, whoever they be of Proteſtant Diſſenters, I dare ſay, they will very cheerfully promiſe their Allegiance on the ſame Penalties, and ſubſcribe any Renunciation of Pope and Foreign Authority, which the Art of Man can Pen; nor ſhould it be hard for you to believe they ſhould ſubſcribe what they have always liv'd.

To that Part of the Objection, which mentions the danger of Papiſts concealing themſelves under the Character of Proteſtant Diſſenters; under Favour I ſay, it is moſt reaſonable to believe, that thoſe who will deny their Faith upon Record, as thoſe that ſubſcribe your Declaration do, will ſwallow the Oaths too; for the Declaration flatly denies the Religion, but the Oaths only the Pope's Supremacy, which even ſome of themſelves pretend to reject. Therefore thoſe that can ſincerely ſubſcribe the Declaration cannot be Papiſts.

If it be yet objected, that Papiſts may have Diſpenſations to ſubſcribe the Teſt, or a Pardon, when they have done it; I anſwer, they may as well have Diſpenſations to take the Oaths, or Pardons when they have taken them, and theſe laſt ſix Months prove as much. There is no Fence againſt this Flail. At this rate they may as well be Proteſtants, as Proteſtant-Diſſenters; Miniſters or Biſhops in Churches, as Speakers or Preachers in Meeting-houſes: This Objection only ſhows the Weakneſs of both Oaths and Declaration for the Purpoſe intended, and not, that they can hide themſelves more under one People than another. For they that can have a Diſpenſation or Pardon for one Act, can have it for another; eſpecially when the Matter of the Declaration is of a more general weight to them, than that of the Oath; all which confirms my former Judgment of the Inſecurity of ſuch Oaths to any Government.

Give me leave then upon this to ask you, if you will bring a certain Ruin upon any Proteſtant Diſſenters for the Sake of ſuch an uncertain Security to your ſelves? for this is the Queſtion; I beſeech you to weigh it as becomes wiſe and good Men: ſhall they be Reprobated for tenderly refuſing, what being perform'd, cannot ſave or ſecure you?

Conſider, you have no Reaſon to believe, but thoſe that are allow'd to ſubſcribe the Declaration, or that will be pardon'd when they have done it, may be allow'd to take the Oaths, or will be pardon'd or abſolv'd, when they have taken them: but you are certain on the other Side, that the Impoſing of the Oaths will be a great Snare to many Proteſtant-Diſſenters, that love the Government, and renounce both Pope and Popery; They will be ruin'd; which to me is of the Nature of an Argument for thoſe People: For their not taking the Oaths, proves plainly, they have no Diſpenſations nor hopes of Abſolution, and therefore no Papiſts; ſhall they then lie under the Severities intended againſt Papiſts, who have none of their Diſpenſations or Abſolutions to deliver them from them? This is (with Submiſſion but in plain Terms) to make the Caſe of the Kingdom worſe; for it deſtroys thoſe who are not Guilty, and whom, I believe, you would not deſtroy.

Having brought the Matter to this, I ſhall firſt offer you a new Teſt; Next, the Ways of taking it, with moſt Aggravation againſt the Party rejecting or breaking it; And laſtly, how you may ſecure your ſelves from Papiſts diſguiſing themſelves among Proteſtant-Diſſenters; that ſo nothing may remain a Remora in the Way, that ſhall not be removed, to leave you a plain and even Path to Peace and Safety.

The New TEST:

I A. B. do ſolemnly and in good Conſcience, in the Sight of God and Men, acknowledge and declare, that King Charles the ſecond is Lawful King of this Realm, and all the Dominions thereunto belonging. And that neither the Pope nor See of Rome, nor any elſe by their Authority have Right in any Caſe to Depoſe the King, or Diſpoſe of his Kingdom, or upon any Score whatever to abſolve his Subjects of their Obedience, or to give leave to any of them to Plot or Conſpire the Hurt of the King's Perſon, his State or People; and that all ſuch Pretences and Power are Falſe, Pernicious and Damnable.

And I do farther ſincerely profeſs, and in good Conſcience declare, that I do not believe, that the Pope is Chriſt's Vicar, or Peter's Lawful Succeſſor, or that He or the See of Rome, ſeverally or joyntly, are the Rule of Faith or Judge of Controverſy, or that they can abſolve Sins: Nor do I believe, there is a Purgatory after Death; or that Saints ſhould be pray'd to, or Images in any Senſe be worſhip'd. Nor do I believe, that there is any Tranſubſtantiation in the Lord's Supper, or Elements of Bread and Wine, at or after the Conſecration thereof by any Perſon whatſoever. But I do firmly believe, that the Preſent Communion of the Roman-Catholick Church is both Superſtitious and Idolatrous. And all this I do acknowledge, intend, profeſs and declare without any Equivocation, or reſerv'd, or other Senſe, than the plain and uſual Signification of theſe Words, according to the real Intention of the Law-makers, and the common Acceptation of all true Proteſtants.

This is the Teſt I offer; large in Matter, becauſe comprehenſive of Oaths and Teſt too, yet brief in Words.

The next Thing is the Ways of taking it with moſt Aggravation upon the Refuſers or Violaters of it.

1679. 1. That in all Cities and great Towns, Notice be given by the Magiſtrates thereof to the Inhabitants of every Ward or Pariſh to appear on ſuch a Day, be it New-Years-Day or Aſh-Wedneſday rather (when the Pope Curſes all Proteſtants) at their Publick Hall, or other Places of Commerce, where the Magiſtrates ſhall firſt openly Read, Subſcribe, and Seal the Teſt. Then that it be read again by the proper Officer of the Place to the People, and that thoſe that take it, Do Audibly Pronounce the Words after him that reads it; and when they have ſo done, that they Subſcribe and Seal it. That ſuch Subſcriptions be Regiſter'd, and Copies of each Pariſh's Subſcription, tranſmitted to the Pariſh, and affixt upon ſome publick Place for all that will to ſee.

2. That in the Countries, the Pariſhes of each Hundred or Rape, may be likewiſe Summon'd to appear upon the Day aforeſaid, at the Head Market-Town in the ſaid Hundred or Rape, and, that the Juſtices of the Peace within that Part of the Country, ſhall firſt Read, Subſcribe, and Seal the ſaid Teſt, in View of the People, and then that the People Say, Subſcribe, and Seal the Teſt, as is before expreſt. Which being done, let the ſaid Subſcriptions be collected into One Volumn, and kept in the County Court as a Book of Record; and that to each Pariſh, be tranſmitted a Copy of the ſaid Pariſh's Subſcription, to be affixt upon ſome Publick Place within the ſaid Pariſh, for all to ſee.

Laſtly, Let this be done Annually, that is, upon every New-Years-Day, or Aſh-Wedneſday, as a Perpetual Teſtimony of the People's Affection to the King and Government, and their Abhorrence of the Practices of Rome.

The Abuſe of this Diſcrimination ſhould be very Penal; For 'tis a Great Lye upon a Man's own Conſcience, and a Cheat put upon the Government: Your Wiſdom can beſt proportion and direct the Puniſhment; but it can ſcarcely be too ſevere, as our Buſineſs ſtands.

But as in Caſe of ſuch Hypocriſie, a ſevere Penalty ſhould be inflicted, ſo pray let Proviſion be made, that if any Perſon ſo ſubſcribing, ſhould be afterwards call'd by the Name of Jeſuit or Papiſt, without very good Proof, it ſhould be deem'd and puniſh'd in open Seſſions, for a Slander and Breach of Peace, yet ſo, as that the Penalty may be remitted at the Requeſt of the Abuſed Party.

I ſhould think that this Buſineſs, carefully done, might render needleſs my Anſwer to the laſt Objection, viz. Which Way ſhall we be able to prevent Papiſts from paſſing for Proteſtant Diſſenters, that ſo the Security propounded to the Government, be not baffled by Diſguiſe? For no Papiſt can ſubſcribe this, but he will Lye in the Face of the Government and Country, and that Yearly, and upon Record too; which is Ten Times more than a Tranſient Oath, mutter'd with One Word ſpoken, and another dropt. However, that we may carry it as far as Human Prudence can go, ——

I yet offer Two Expedients:

Firſt, That upon Jealouſie of any Perſon's being a Papiſt, or Popiſhly Inclined, who is known to frequent the Aſſemblies of Proteſtant Diſſenters, Four of that Party, of moſt Note and Integrity, unto which he pretends to adhere, ſhould be Summoned to appear before thoſe Juſtices of the Peace, unto whom the Complaint is made, to teſtifie their Knowledge of the Perſon ſuſpected, his Education, Principles, and Manner of Life; which Way of Inſpection, as it goes as far as Man can reach, ſo can it ſcarcely fail; for thoſe Perſons will not only diſcover their own Hypocriſie if they conceal him, but expoſe themſelves and their Friends to Ruin. So that to ſay True, The Government has the Intereſt and Security of an Entire Party, for the Diſcovery of every ſuch ſuſpected Perſon.

But if this will not do, then

Secondly, Be you pleaſed to refer the Diſcrimination of ſuſpected Perſons, to the Good Old Way of the Government, that is, The Enquiry and Judgment of Twelve Men of the Neighbourhood; to wit, A Jury, provided always, that they be ſuch as have taken, or will themſelves take the Teſt; elſe, that they may be Excepted againſt by the Party ſuſpected.

Indeed a Good Expedient may be made out of both, for the Firſt may be the Evidence to the Laſt, and I think you will hardly fail of your Ends.

I ſhall conclude with this Requeſt, Firſt, to Almighty God, that He would pleaſe to make us truly and deeply ſenſible of His preſent Mercies to us, and to Reform our Hearts and Lives to improve them thankfully. And, Secondly, to you, that we may be Loving, Humble and Diligent, one to, and for another; for as from ſuch Amendments we may dare promiſe great and ſudden Felicity to England, ſo if Looſneſs in Life,

Life, and Bitterneſs in Religion be not ſpeedily Reprehended and Reform'd, and the Common Civil Intereſt maintained entire, God will, I juſtly fear, Repent He has begun to do us Good, Adjourn the Day of our Deliverance to that of our Repentance and Moderation, and Overcaſt theſe Happy Dawnings of His Favour, by a thick and diſmal Cloud of Confuſion and Miſery: Which GOD Avert! 1679.

Theſe Things that I have written, are no Wild Gueſſes, or May-Be's, but the Diſeaſe and Cure, the Danger and Safety of England; in treating of which, that God that made the World knows, I have not gratified any private Spleen or Intereſt (for I am ſorry at the Occaſion) but ſingly and conſcientiouſly intended His Honour, and the Laſting Good of England, to which all Perſonal and Party Conſiderations ought ever to ſubmit.

A BRIEF

EXAMINATION AND STATE of Liberty Spiritual,

BOTH

With Reſpect to Perſons in their Private Capacity, and in their Church Society and Communion.

Written for the Eſtabliſhment of the Faithful, Information of the Simple-Hearted, and Reproof of the Arrogant and High-minded, by a Lover of True Liberty, as it is in Jeſus.

William Penn.

To go amongſt the People of the Lord, called Quakers.

If the Son ſhall make you Free, ye ſhall be Free indeed. John 8. 36.
If we walk in the Light as he is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all Sin, 1 John 1. 7.

To the People of the Lord, called QUAKERS.

Dear Friends and Brethren,

IT hath of long Time reſted with ſome preſſure upon my Spirit, for Zion's Sake, and the Peace of Jeruſalem, to write ſomething of the Nature of True Spiritual Liberty; LIBERTY, one of the moſt Glorious Words and Things in the World, but little underſtood, and frequently abuſed by many. I beſeech Almighty God to preſerve you, his People, in the right Knowledge and Uſe of that Liberty, which Jeſus Chriſt, the

the Captain of our Salvation, hath purchaſed for us, and is redeeming us into, who hath led Captivity captive, and is giving Gifts to them that truly believe in his Name. Chriſt's Liberty is obtain'd through Chriſt's Croſs; they that would be his Free-men, muſt be his Bonds-men, and wear his bleſſed Yoke. His Liberty is from Sin, not to Sin; to do his Will, and not our own; no, not to ſpeak an Idle Word. 'Tis not I that live (ſaith the Apoſtle) but Chriſt that liveth in me, who had ſet him Free from the Power of Sin, and brought Immortality to Light in him; whence he learned this to triumph, O Death, where is thy Sting! O Grave, where is thy Victory! This is the Perſonal Freedom that comes by Jeſus Chriſt, to as many as receive him in the Way, and for the End for which God hath given him, to wit, to be a Saviour and a Leader, to ſave us from our Corruptions, and guide us in the Narrow Way of his Holy Croſs, and through the ſtrait Gate of Self-denyal; which leads to Eternal Life. And as many as have enter'd at this Door, are come to have Unity with God, and one with another; To love him above all, and their Neighbours as themſelves; yea, to prefer each other before themſelves. Such will not violate the great Law of their Lord and Maſter; Love one another; the New, and yet the Old Commandment: Theſe dwell in Love, and ſo they dwell in God; for God is Love. 'Twas the beloved Diſciple's Teſtimony, and it comes up to what another Man of God hath ſaid, namely, The Church that dwells in God, if ſhe dwells in God, then in Love; conſequently her Members are in Union, of one Mind in Church Matters, ſince ſhe has but one Head to Rule her.

Peruſe this brief Diſcourſe in this Love, and it may be to Edification. My Aim is to aſſert the Truth, detect Error, and point in true Brotherly Kindneſs at thoſe Shoals and Sands ſome by Miſtake, or Overboldneſs, have and may run upon. O Friends! I greatly deſire, that the Spirit of Love, Wiſdom, and a ſound Underſtanding, of Meekneſs, Judgment and Mercy, may ever reſt upon you, that blameleſly you may be kept, an Holy Family, at Unity with it ſelf, to the Lord God your Redeemer, that he over all may in you, through you, and by you, be Exalted, Honoured and Praiſed, who is worthy and bleſſed for ever.

A Brief EXAMINATION, &c.

Queſt. WHAT is Spiritual Liberty?

Anſw. It is twofold; there is a true and a falſe Liberty, as a true and falſe Spirit, the right diſcerning of which concerns every one's Eternal Well-being.

Qu. What is true Spiritual Liberty?

Anſw. Deliverance from Sin by the Perfect Law in the Heart, The Perfect Law of Liberty, James 2. otherwiſe called, The Law of the Spirit of Life in Chriſt Jeſus, that makes free from the Law of Sin and Death; elſe-where ſtiled, The Law of Truth writ in the Heart, which makes Free indeed, as ſaith Chriſt, If the Son ſhall make you Free, ye ſhall be Free indeed. So that the Liberty of Gods People ſtands in the Truth, and their Communion in it, and in the Perfect Spiritual Law of Chriſt Jeſus, which delivers and preſerves them from every Evil Thing that doth or would embondage. In this bleſſed Liberty, it is not the Will nor Wiſdom of Man, neither the vain Affections and Luſts that rule, or give Law to the Soul; for the Minds of all ſuch as are made Free by the Truth, are by the Truth conducted in doing and ſuffering through their Earthly Pilgrimage.

Qu. What is Falſe Liberty?

Anſw. A Departing from this bleſſed Spirit of Truth, and a Rebelling againſt this Perfect Law of Liberty in the Heart, and being at Liberty to do our own Wills; upon which cometh Reproof and Judgment.

Qu. But are there not ſome Things wherein we ought to be left to our own Freedom?

Anſw. We are not our own, for we are bought with a Price; and in all Things ought we to glorify God with our Bodies, Souls and Spirits, which are the Lord's.

Qu. But muſt we have a Motion or Command from the Spirit of Truth for all Things that we do?

Anſw. That may be according to the Truth, which may not be by the immediate Motion or Command of the Truth; for that is according to the Truth, that is not againſt the Mind of the Truth, either particularly or generally expreſt. The Truth commands me to do all to the Praiſe and Glory of God; but not that I ſhould wait for a Motion to do every particular Thing. For Example: The variety of Actions in Trading, Commerce and Husbandry, the Variety of Fleſh, Fiſh and Fowl for Food, with more of the ſame Nature, in all which there is a Choice and Liberty, but ſtill according to the Truth, and within the Holy Bounds and Limits of it.

Anſw. Yes; but it muſt ſtill be according to the Mind of God's Truth: There are Things enjoyned, ſuch as relate to our Duty to God, to our Superiors, to the Houſhold of Faith, and to all Men and Creatures, theſe are Indiſpenſible. There are alſo Things that may be done or left undone, which may be called Indifferent; as what ſort of Meat I will eat to day, whether I will eat Fleſh, Fiſh or Herbs, or what Hours I will eat my Meals at, with many ſuch outward Things of Life and Converſe; yet even in ſuch Caſes I ought to act according to the Truth, in the Temperance and Wiſdom of it.

Qu. But doth not Freedom extend farther than this; for ſince God hath given me a Manifeſtation of his Spirit to profit withal, and that I have the Gift of God in my ſelf, ſhould I not be left to act according as I am free and perſwaded in my own Mind, in the Things that relate to God, leſt looking upon my ſelf as obliged by what is revealed unto another, though it be not revealed unto me, I ſhould be led out of my own Meaſure, and act upon another's Motion, and ſo offer a blind Sacrifice to God?

Anſw. This is true in a Senſe, that is, if thou art ſuch an one that canſt do nothing againſt the Truth, but for the Truth, then mayſt thou ſafely be left to thy Freedom in the Things of God, and the Reaſon is plain; becauſe thy Freedom ſtands in the Perfect Law of Liberty, in the Law of the Spirit of Life in Chriſt Jeſus, and in the Truth, which is Chriſt Jeſus, which makes thee Free indeed, that is, perfectly Free from all that is Bad, and perfectly Free to all that is Holy, Juſt, Lovely, Honeſt, Comely, and of good Report; but if thou pleadeſt thy Freedom againſt ſuch Things, yea, obſtructeſt and ſlighteſt ſuch Good, Wholeſome and Requiſit Things, thy Freedom is Naught, Dark, Perverſe, out of the Truth, and againſt the perfect Law of Love and Liberty.

Qu. But muſt I conform to Things whether I can receive them or no? Ought I not to be left to the Grace and Spirit of God in my own Heart?

Anſw. To the firſt Part of the Queſtion, Nay; to the laſt, Yea. But now let us conſider what is the Reaſon thou canſt not receive them: Is the Fault in the Things themſelves? Are they inconſiſtent with Truth, or will not the Truth own or aſſent unto them, or is the Fault in thee? that is to ſay, Is it thy Weakneſs, or thy Careleſneſs; If thy Weakneſs, it is to be born with, and to be informed; if thy Careleſneſs, thou ought'ſt to be admoniſhed; for it is a dangerous Principle, and pernicious to true Religion, and which is worſe, it is the Root of Ranteriſm to aſſert, That nothing is a Duty incumbent upon thee, but what thou art perſwaded is thy Duty; for the Seared Conſcience pleads his Liberty againſt all Duty, the Dark Conſcience is here unconcerned, the Dead Conſcience is here uncondemned, unleſs this Diſtinction be allowed of, that there may be an Ignorance or an Inſenſibility from Inability or Incapacity, or a Dark Education; and an Ignorance and Inſenbility, from Careleſneſs, Diſobedience, Prejudice, &c. So that though thou art not to conform to a Thing ignorantly, yet thou art ſeriouſly to conſider, why thou art ignorant, and what the Cauſe of ſuch Ignorance may be; certainly it can't be in God, nor in his Gift to thee; it muſt then needs be in thy ſelf, who haſt not yet received a Senſe for or againſt the Matter, about which thou art in doubt. To the ſecond Part of the Queſtion, Ought I not to be left to the Grace of God in my own Heart? Anſ. That is of all Things moſt deſirable, ſince they are well left that are there left; for there is no Fear of want of Unity, where all are left with the one Spirit of Truth; they muſt be of one Mind, they can't be otherwiſe. So that to plead this againſt Unity, is to abuſe the very Plea, and to commit the greateſt Contradiction to that very Doctrine of Scripture, viz. That all ſhould be guided by the Grace and Spirit of God in themſelves; for the End of that Doctrine is certainty. They ſhall all know me, ſaith the Lord, from the leaſt to the greateſt. And I will give them one Heart, and one Way, that they may fear me for ever, for the Good of them, and of their Children after them, Jer. 32. 39. And I will give them one Heart, and I will put a new Spirit within you, and I will take the Stony Heart out of their Fleſh, and will give them an Heart of Fleſh, Ezekiel 11. 19. And the Multitude 1681. of them that believed were of one Heart, and of one Soul, Acts 4. 32. Is not this Unity too? I will reſtore unto you a pure Language; they ſhall be of one Heart and of one Mind, and great ſhall be their Peace. Therefore I muſt ſay to thee, Friend, What if thou wilt not be left with the Grace and Spirit of God in thy ſelf, nor wait for it's Mind, nor be watchful to it's Revelations; nor humble and quiet till thou haſt received ſuch neceſſary Manifeſtations, but pleadeſt againſt the Counſel of the Spirit of the Lord in other faithful Perſons, under the Pretence of being left to his Spirit in thy ſelf; by which Means thou oppoſeſt the Spirit to the Spirit, and pleadeſt for Diſ-unity, under the Name of Liberty; I aſk thee, May not I exhort thee to the Practice of that I am moved to preſs thee to the Practice of? If not, thou art the Impoſer, by reſtraining me from my Chriſtian Liberty; and not only ſo, but away goeth Preaching, and with it the Scriptures, that are both appointed of God for Exhortation, Reproof and Inſtruction.

Queſt. But are there not various Meaſures, diverſities of Gifts, and ſeveral Offices in the Body?

Anſw. True; but therefore are not the Members of one Mind, one Will, and one Judgment in common and univerſal Matters, eſpecially relating to the Family and Church of God; And indeed there can't be a falſer Reaſoning than to conclude Diſcord from Diverſity, Contrariety from Variety. Is there Contrariety of Bloods, Lifes, Feelings, Seeings, Hearings, Taſtings, Smellings, in one and the ſame Body, at one and the ſame Time? No ſuch Matter: Experience is a Demonſtration againſt all ſuch Inſinuations. So that though it be granted, that there is Diverſity of Gifts, yet there is no Diſagreement in Senſe; and though Variety of Offices, yet no Contrariety in Judgment concerning thoſe Offices. Well, ſay the Holy Scriptures of Truth, there is but one God; the Lord our God is but one Lord; there is but one God and Father of all Things; (that are good) and there is but one Lord, one Faith, and One Baptiſm; and his Light, Life and Spirit is at Unity with it ſelf in all; what comes from the Light, Life or Spirit in one, it is the ſame in Truth and Unity to the reſt, as if it did riſe in themſelves: This is ſeen in our Aſſemblies every Day, and will be throughout all Generations in the Church of God, among thoſe that live in the lowly Truth, in which the pure Senſe and ſound Judgment ſtands; God is not the God of Confuſion, but Order: Every one in his Order is ſatisfied, hath Unity and true Fellowſhip with whatever comes from the Life of God in another; for this precious Life reacheth throughout the Heritage of God, and is the common Life that giveth the common Feeling and Senſe to the Heritage of God. Degree or Meaſure in the ſame Life can never contradict or obſtruct that which is from the ſame Life for the common Benefit of the Family of God. The Lord is the Unmeaſurable and Incomprehenſible Glorious Being of Life, yet have we Unity with him in all his Works, who are come to his Divine Meaſure of Light and Truth in our own Hearts, and live therein; and ſhall we not have Unity with that which proceeds from a Fellow Creature? In ſhort, the Saints Way is in the Light, wherein there is neither Doubt nor Diſcord; yea, they are Children of the Light, and called Light, and The Lights of the World; and can it be ſuppoſed that ſuch ſhould diſagree and contradict each other in their exterior Order and Practice in the Church before the World; O the bleſſed ſeamleſs Garment of Jeſus! where that is known, theſe Things can never riſe. But yet again, The Juſt Man's Path is not only a Light, but a ſhining Light, Brightneſs it ſelf: Certainly there can be no Stumbling. It is alſo ſaid, That Light is ſown for the Righteous; then the Righteous ſhall never want Light upon any Occaſion: And ſaith that beloved Evangeliſt and Apoſtle of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, They that walk in the Light, have Fellowſhip one with another, 1 John 1. Whence it is eaſy to conclude, they that go out of the Fellowſhip, go out of the Light; but if they that walk in the Light, have Fellowſhip one with another, what ſhall we ſay of thoſe that plead being left to the Light to juſtify their not having Fellowſhip one with another? and, which is yet worſe, who ſuppoſe People may conſcientiouſly and Juſtifiably Diſſent within themſelves, and that by Reaſon of the Variety of the Degrees of the Spirit and Grace that are given of God unto them; as if the leſſer Degree may diſſent from the greater, becauſe of it's not being able to comprehend it. And to make this Principle more Authentick, ſuch tell us, This is the Ancient Principle of Truth; and object, How will you elſe be able to maintain the Quakers Principles? The Fallacy of all which, lieth (as I ſaid before) in not rightly diſtinguiſhing between Diverſity and Diſagreement, Variety and Contrariety; for this Diverſity hath Concord, and this Variety hath Unity? And it is a Blindneſs that hath too much of late happened to ſome, by going from the one Life and Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, firſt to fall into Diſagreements, and then plead for it, under the Notion of Diverſity of Meaſures. I would aſk all ſuch Perſons, who arrogate to themſelves ſuch a peculiar Knowledge of the Ancient Principles of Truth, or the Quakers firſt Principles; 1ſt, Whether they believe there be a Chriſtian Body? 2dly, Whether this Body hath an Head? 3dly, Whether Chriſt be not this Head? 4thly, Whether this Head be without Eyes, Ears, Smell and Taſte, and this Body without Senſe and Feeling? If not, Whether this Head Seeth, Heareth, Smelleth, Taſteth DIFFERINGLY and CONTRARILY to it ſelf? And whether this Body hath a contrary Feeling at the ſame Time about the ſame Thing? And if it be true, that the Church of Chriſt, redeemed by his moſt precious Blood to live to him, ſee with the ſame Eye, hear with the ſame Ear, ſpeak with the ſame Mouth, live by the ſame Breath, and are led by the ſame Spirit, where is this Diſagreement, Contrariety or Diſſent about the Things of his Church?

Queſt. But the Members of Chriſt's Church in the Primitive Times had different Apprehenſions; as the Apoſtles, and the People gathered by them.

Anſw. Pray let me know who they were, and in what Caſes?

Queſt. The Perſons were PAUL and PETER, and thoſe Chriſtians that differed about Meats; and the Scripture is plain in the Caſe.

Anſw. The Difference between Peter and Paul (in the Acts) teſtifies the Weakneſs of Peter, and the Place juſtifies Paul's Reproof of his too great Compliance with the Jews in ſome of their Rites; which makes againſt Liberty of various Practices, in the Church of Chriſt, and not for indulging them. That Inſtance about the Difference of Chriſtians as to Meats, &c. has nothing in it to the End for which it is alledged; for this related not to Church-Order or Communion, but Private and Perſonal Freedoms, what each might do with Reſpect to themſelves; that is, they might make Laws to themſelves, in Things that only concern'd private Perſons, and it centred there; Here, What I will eat, When I will eat, Things to my ſelf, and for my ſelf, as a Man having Power over my own Appetite: The Liberty in Things Private, Perſonal, and Indifferent, makes nothing for Diſſenting about Church Matters in Things of Communion and Society, and that alſo are not indifferent, as to eat Fiſh, or eat Fleſh, or eat Herbs, plainly is: But neceſſary; As to be careful and orderly about the External Buſineſs of the Church: Theſe are no Jewiſh Rites, nor Shadowy Ceremonies, no Meats nor Drinks that are Private and Perſonal, where Weakneſs is apt to miſtake (That were an Unneceſſary and an Unchriſtian Yoke to bear) but Things comely, orderly, and of good Report, that tend to Purity, Peace and Diligence in Things acceptable to God, and requiſite among his People in their Temporal Chriſtian Capacity. And herein the Apoſtle Paul exerciſed his Godly Authority; and we find that not only thoſe that oppoſed themſelves to it, as thinking, he took too much upon him, (demanded a Mark of Chriſt's ſpeaking in him) are in Scripture branded with Contention. But the true Believers, that had in themſelves a Mark of Chriſt's ſpeaking in him, were of One Mind, and avoided ſuch as were given to Contention; for it was not the Cuſtom of the Churches of Chriſt. Thus were Chriſt's People of One Heart, in Things relating to their Communion. Yet a little farther; They that have the Mind of Chriſt, are of one Mind; for Chriſt is not divided: They that have Chriſt for their Head, have One Counſellor and Prophet, One Seer and Biſhop, they diſagree not in their Judgments in Things relating to him, and the Good of his Church; they have one and the ſame Guide; For the one Spirit, into which they have all drank, and by it are baptized into one Body, leads them all. Now to every Member is a Meaſure of the ſame Spirit given to profit with; and though every Member is not an Eye, nor an Ear, nor a Mouth, yet every Member hath Unity with the Eye, with the Ear, with the Mouth, in their proper and reſpective Acts, and they one with the other: The Eye ſees for the Mouth, the Mouth ſpeaks for the Eye, and the Ear hears for both; this Variety hath no Diſcord, but in this Diverſity of Gifts and Offices, each Member is ſenſible of the other, and moves and Acts by one and the ſame Life, Spirit and Guidance, which is Omnipreſent, proportionable to every Member in it's diſtinct Office. It muſt be granted, that there are Helps in the Church, as well as that there is a Church at all; and the Holy Ghoſt has compared thoſe Helps (as is before-mentioned) to ſeveral Members and Senſes of Man's Body, as an Eye, an Hand, a Foot, Hearing, Smelling, &c. All then cannot be the Eye, neither can all be the Hand, for then they would confound their Office, and act diſagreeably to the Ordination of the great Orderer of his Church. And if I will not comply with him that God hath made an Eye, becauſe I am not that Eye, or an Hand, becauſe I am not that Member my ſelf, nor a Party to the Action, or Performance of that Member, I reſiſt the Lord, though under Pretence of reſiſting Man for the Lord's Sake. And truly, this is the Rock that ſome of our own Time, as well as Perſons of former Ages, have ſplit upon, they have not been contented with their own Station in the Body, they have not kept to their own Gift, nor been taken up with the Duty of their own Place in the Church. If he that is a Foot would be an Hand, and the Hand covets to be an Eye, envying others their allotted Station, through Height of Mind, and walking looſe from the Holy Croſs, there can be no ſuch Thing as Concord and Fellowſhip in the Church of Chriſt.

Farthermore, ſince the Spirit of the Lord is one in all, it ought to be obey'd through another, as well as in one's ſelf; and this I aſſirm to you, That the ſame lowly Frame of Mind that receives and anſwers the Mind of the Spirit of the Lord in a Man's ſelf, will receive and have Unity with the Mind of the ſame Spirit through another, and the Reaſon is plain; Becauſe the ſame Self-evidencing Power and Virtue that ariſeth from the Meaſure of the Spirit of Truth in one's ſelf, and that convinceth a Man in his own Heart, doth alſo attend the Diſcovery of the Mind of the ſame Spirit, when delivered by another; for the Words of the Second Adam, the quickning Spirit, through another, are Spirit and Life, as well as in thy own Particular; this is diſcern'd by the Spiritual Man that judgeth all Things, although the Carnal Man pleadeth, Being left to his Freedom; and it may be talks of being left to the Spirit in himſelf too; the better to eſcape the Senſe and Judgment of the Spiritual Man. It is my earneſt Deſire, that all that have any Knowledge of the Lord, would have a tender Care how they uſe that Plea againſt their faithful Brethren, that God put into their Mouths againſt the perſecuting Prieſts and Hirelings of the World, namely, I muſt mind the Spirit of God in my ſelf; for though it be a great Truth that all are to be left thereunto, yet it is as true, that he whoſe Soul is left with the Spirit of Truth in himſelf, differs not from his Brethren that are in the ſame Spirit; and as true it is, that thoſe who err from the Spirit of Truth, may plead, being left to the Spirit in themſelves, againſt the Motion and Command of the Spirit through another, when it pleaſeth not his or her High Mind and perverſe Will; for a Saying may be true or falſe, according to the ſubject Matter it is ſpoken upon, or applied to; We own the Aſſertion, we deny the Application: There lies the Snare. 'Tis true, the People of God ought to be left to the Guidings of the Spirit of God in themſelves; but for this to be ſo applied, as to diſregard the Preachings or Writings of Chriſt's enlightned Servants, becauſe by them applied properly to the Preaching or Writing of falſe Prophets and Seducers, will by no Means follow. I ſay the Doctrine is true, but not excluſively of all external Counſel or Direction; therefore falſe in Application, where Men are allowed to have had the Fear of God, and the Mind of his Spirit, and are not prov'd to have acted in their own Wills and Wiſdom, or without the Guidance of the Spirit of God, about the Things of his Church and Kingdom.

Queſt. But though this be True, which hath been alledged for Heavenly Concord, yet what if I do not preſently ſee that Service in a Thing, that the Reſt of my Brethren agree in; In this Caſe, what is my Duty and theirs?

Anſw. It is thy Duty to wait upon God in Silence and Patience, out of all Fleſhly Conſultations; and as thou abideſt in the Simplicity of the TRUTH, thou wilt receive an Underſtanding with the Reſt of thy Brethren, about the Thing doubted. And it is their Duty, whilſt thou behaveſt thy ſelf in Meekneſs and Humility, to bear with thee, and carry themſelves tenderly and loving towards thee; but if on the contrary, thou diſturbeſt their Godly Care and Practice, and groweſt Contentious, and exalteſt thy Judgment againſt them, they have Power from God to Exhort, Admoniſh, and Reprove thee; and (if thou perſevereſt therein) in His Name to refuſe any farther Fellowſhip with thee, till thou repenteſt of thy Evil.

Queſt. But leſt I ſhould miſtake, when thou ſpeakeſt of True Liberty, that it ſtands in being made Free by the Truth, from all Unrighteouſneſs, doſt thou mean, That no other Perſons ought to have the Liberty of Exerciſing their Diſſenting Conſciences, but that Force may be Lawful to reduce ſuch as are reputed Erroneouſly Conſcientious?

Anſw. By no Means: It were a great Wickedneſs againſt God, who is Lord of the Souls and Spirits of Men, and ought to preſide in all Conſciences, who, as the Apoſtle ſaith, Is the Only Potentate, and hath Immortality. For though I give the True Liberty of Soul and Conſcience to thoſe only that are ſet Free by the Power of Chriſt, from the Bondage of Sin, and Captivity of Death, yet do I not intend, that any Perſon or Perſons ſhould be in the leaſt harm'd for the External Exerciſe of their Diſſenting Conſciences in Worſhip to God, though Erroneous; for though their Conſciences be blind, yet they are not to be forced; ſuch Compulſion giveth no Sight, neither do Corporal Puniſhments produce Conviction: This we above all People, in our Day, have withſtood, in Speaking, Writing and Suffering, and, bleſſed be God, continue ſo to do with Faithfulneſs. For Faith is the Gift of God, and forced Sacrifices are not pleaſing to the Lord.

Queſt. But according to thy Argument, it may be my Fault, that I have not the Gift of Faith; and upon this Preſumption, it may be, thou wilt inflict ſome Temporal Penalties upon me.

Anſw. No ſuch Matter; for ſuch Kind of Faults are not to be puniſhed with Temporal or Worldly Penalties; for whether the Errors be through Weakneſs or Wilfulneſs, not relating to Moral Practice, all External Coercion and Corporal Puniſhment is excluded. For the Weapons of our Warfare are not Carnal, but Spiritual.

Queſt. But what then is the Extent of the Power of the Church of Chriſt, in Caſe of Schiſm or Hereſy?

Anſw. The Power that Chriſt gave to his Church was this, That Offenders, after the firſt and ſecond Admonition, (not Repenting) ſhould be Rejected: Not Impriſoned, Plundered, Baniſhed, or put to Death; this belongs to the Whore and falſe Prophet: O! all theſe Things have come to paſs for Want of Humility, for Want of the ancient Fear, and keeping in the quiet Habitation of the Juſt: The Truth in you all ſhall anſwer me. And this I affirm, from the Underſtanding I have received of God, not only that the Enemy is at work to ſcatter the Minds of Friends, by that looſe Plea, What haſt thou to do with me? Leave me to my Freedom and to the Grace of God in my ſelf, and the like; but this Propoſition and Expreſſion, as now underſtood and alledged, is a Deviation from, and a Perverſion of the Ancient Principle of Truth; for this is the plain Conſequence of this Plea, if any one (eſpecially if they are but lately convinced) ſhall ſay, I ſee no Evil in paying Tythes to Hireling Prieſts, in that they are not claimed by Divine Right, but by the Civil Laws of the Land. I ſee no Evil in Marrying by the Prieſt, for he is but a Witneſs. Furthermore, I ſee no Evil in Declining a Publick Teſtimony in Suffering Times, or hiding in Times of Perſecution, for I have Chriſt's and Paul's Examples. I ſee no Evil in Worſhipping and Reſpecting the Perſons of Men; for whatever others do, I intend a ſincere Notice that I take of thoſe I know, and have a good Eſteem for. Laſtly, I ſee no Evil in keeping my Shop ſhut upon the World's Holidays and Maſsdays, (as they call them) though they are rather Lewdly and Superſtitiouſly than Religiouſly kept; for I would not willingly give any Offence to my Neighbours. And ſince your Teſtimony is againſt Impoſition, and for leaving every one to the Meaſure of the Grace which God hath given him, not only, No Man hath Power to reprove or judge me, but I may be as good a Friend as any of you, according to my Meaſure. And now, here is Meaſure ſet up againſt Meaſure, which is Confuſion it ſelf —— Babel indeed: This is that very Rock both Profeſſors and Prophane would long ſince have run us upon, namely, That a Way is hereby opened to all the World's Libertines, to plead the Light within for their Exceſſes; Which indeed grieves the Spirit of God, and was ſeverely judged by our Friends in the Beginning, and is ſtill reproved by them that keep their Habitation, though ſome are become as wandring Stars through their own Pride, and the Prevalency of the Hour of Temptation that hath overtaken them; whereas had they kept in the Channel of Love and Life, in the Orb and Order of the Celeſtial Power, they had ſhined as fixed Stars in the Firmament of God for ever. And from the deep Senſe that I have of the Working of the Enemy of Zion's Peace, to rend and divide the Heritage of God, who under the Pretence of crying down Man, Forms and Preſcriptions, is crying down the Heavenly Man Chriſt Jeſus, his bleſſed Order and Government, which he hath brought forth by his own Revelation and Power through his faithful Witneſſes. This I farther teſtify, Firſt, That the Enemy, by theſe fair Pretences, ſtrikes at the Godly Care and Travail that dwells upon the Spirits of many faithful Brethren, that all Things might be preſerved Sweet, Comely, Virtuous, and of good Report in the Church of God. Secondly, That there never was greater Neceſſity of this Godly Care than at this Day, ſince we were a People, wherein the Croſs, by too many, is not ſo cloſely kept to as in Days paſt, and in which there is not only a great Convincement, but a young Genera-1681. tion deſcended of Friends, who though they retain the Form their Education hath led them into, yet many of them adorn not the Goſpel with that ſenſible, weighty, and heavenly Converſation as becomes the Children of the Undefiled Religion, and the Seed of that precious Faith which works by the Love that overcomes the World. And the Lord God of Heaven and Earth, that hath ſent his Son Chriſt Jeſus a Light into our Hearts and Conſciences, to whoſe Search and Judgment all ought to (and muſt) bring their Deeds, and render up their Account, beareth Holy Record, that for this End hath he moved upon the Spirits of his Servants, and for this good End only have his Servants given forth, recommended, and put in Practice, thoſe Things that are now in Godly Uſe among his People, whether in this or other Nations, relating to Men's and Women's Meetings, and their divers and weighty Services. And farther; in the Fear of the Almighty God, I ſhall add, That Heavenly Peace and Proſperity dwell with thoſe who are found in an holy and zealous Practice of them; wherefore I warn all, that they take Heed of a ſlighting and obſtinate Mind, and that they have a Care how they give Way to the Outcry of ſome, falſly, entituled, Liberty of Conſcience againſt Impoſition, &c. for the End thereof is to lead back again, and give Eaſe to the Carnal Mind, which, at laſt, will bring Death again upon the Soul to God, and the living Society of his Children. And indeed, it is a great Shame that any who have ever known the Truth of God in the inward Parts, and the ſweet Society of Brethren, eſpecially thoſe who were early in the Work of this bleſſed Day and heavenly Diſpenſation, ſhould ſo far depart from the Fear and Awe of the Lord, as to uſe ſuch Unſavoury, as well as Untrue Expreſſions; this is very far from that meek Spirit of Jeſus, and the firſt Love, which they pretend to have ſo ſingularly kept in, which beareth all Things, ſuffereth all Things, and endureth all Things, and teacheth to keep the Word of Patience in the Hour of Tribulation; Nay, but this is judging of Spiritual Things with a Carnal and Prejudiced Mind, ſtumbling at the Matter, for the Sake of the Perſons through whom it comes, not eying nor weighing the Spirit the Thing ariſes from, but the Perſon by whom it is ſpoken, which darkens the Eye of the Underſtanding, and blinds, by Prejudice, the Mind that ſhould diſcern, taſte and judge; from whence many Miſchiefs have ſprung to the Church of Chriſt in divers Ages: Nor is it the leaſt Evil this Spirit of Strife is guilty of, even at this Day, that it uſeth the Words, Liberty of Conſcience and Impoſition, againſt the Brethren, in the ſame Manner as our ſuffering Friends have been always accuſtomed to intend them againſt the perſecuting Prieſts and Powers of the Earth, as if it were the ſame Thing to admoniſh and reprove Conceited, High-minded, Looſe or Contentious Perſons in the Church, as to compel Conformity in Matters of Faith and Worſhip, by Worldly Violence, upon the Perſons and Eſtates of Conſcientious Diſſenters: O ſuch Iniquity God will not leave unreproved!

'This, Dear Friends, I ſend amongſt you, as a Token of my true Love, in the Revelation of the free Spirit of our God and Father, who have ever been a Friend to true Liberty, as in the State according to Law, ſo in the Church according to Scripture, and as it ſtandeth in the Truth of Jeſus, that makes them who love it free indeed. Let us all keep low, and remember the Rock from whence we were hewn, and dwell in a tender and reverent Senſe of the daily Mercies and Providences of the Lord, looking well to our own Growth and Proſperity in his heavenly Way and Work, then ſhall the Deſire of our Hearts be more and more after him, and the Remembrance of his Name; and with our Love to God, will our Love increaſe one towards another, helping and aiding one another: And I no ways doubt, but God that has brought us out of the Land of Ægypt, and out of the Houſe of Bondage, and delivered us from the Mouth of the Lyon and the Paw of the Bear, will preſerve his People from this Uncircumciſed Spirit that is not in Covenant with God, nor under the Yoke of his Holy Royal Law of True Spiritual Liberty; for they that keep and walk in the Light of Jeſus, are fenced from the Power of this Crooked Serpent, that ſeeks whom he may betray; nor are any ſtung by him but the Unwatchful, the Liſteners and Harkners after his jealous Whiſpers, and detracting Inſinuations: They are ſuch as make their Dwelling in the Earth, where his Region is, and where he creeps and twiſts, who is Earthly, Senſual and Deviliſh, and ſo is all the Wiſdom that comes from him.

My Dear Friends: Keep, I pray you, in the Simplicity of the Truth, and Croſs of JESUS, and wait for your Daily Bread, and to be Daily Renewed from the Lord; look to your Increaſe about Eternal Riches, and be ſure to lay up Treaſure in Heaven that fadeth not away, that your Faith and Hope may have Eternal Foundations 1681. dations, which the croſs Occurrences of Time, and Fears of Mortality cannot move: And beware of that Looſe and Irreverent Spirit, which has not thoſe in high Eſteem among you, that are Faithful in the Lord's Work, and that labour in His Bleſſed Word and Doctrine. I plainly ſee a Coldneſs and Shortneſs on this Hand; and be the Pretence as it will, it is not pleaſing to the Lord. They that love Chriſt, his Servants are dear to them, and they bear a tender Regard to their Trials, Travails, Spendings and Sufferings, who ſeek not yours, but you, that you may all be Preſented Blameleſs at the Coming of the Great God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt; that ſo the Goſpel-Miniſtry and Teſtimony may be held up with Holy Fervent Love, and Godly Eſteem, to the keeping under every raw and exalted Mind, and whatever may ſlight and turn againſt it, leſt God that has Richly Viſited us with His Fatherly Viſitations, and Day ſpringing from on High, ſhould remove His Bleſſing from amongſt us, and place His Candleſtick among other People. Be Wiſe therefore, O Friends! For behold He is at the Door that muſt have an Account of your Stewardſhip: Be watchful, keep to your Firſt Love and Works, that ſo you may endure to the End, and be Saved. And having Overcome, you may have Right to Eat of the Tree of Life, which is in the Midſt of the Paradiſe of God.

The God of Peace, who hath brought Our Dear Lord Jeſus from the Dead, and us with Him, more abundantly enrich you all with Wiſdom and Knowledge, in the Revelation of Himſelf, through Faith in His Son, by whom in theſe Laſt Days He hath ſpoken to us, who is the Bleſſed and Only Potentate, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, who only hath Immortality; to whom be Honour and Power Everlaſting. Amen.

Your Friend and Brother, in the Tribulation and Salvation of the Enduring Kingdom of our God,

Worminghurſt in Suſſex,
the 20th of the 9th
Month, 1681.

William Penn.

A LETTER from WILLIAM PENN, Proprietary and Governour of Pennſylvania in America, to the Committee of the Free Society of Traders of that Province, Reſiding in London. Containing a General Deſcription of the ſaid Province, it's Soil, Air, Water, Seaſons and Produce, both Natural and Artificial, and the Good Increaſe thereof. With an Account of the Natives, or Aborigines. 1683.

My Kind Friends:

THE Kindneſs of yours by the Ship Thomas and Anne, doth much oblige me; for by it I perceive the Intereſt you take in my Health and Reputation, and the Proſperous Beginning of this Province, which you are ſo kind as to think may much depend upon them. In Return of which, I have ſent you a long Letter, and yet containing as brief an Account of My ſelf, and the Affairs of this Province, as I have been able to make.

In the firſt Place, I take Notice of the News you ſent me, whereby I find ſome Perſons have had ſo little Wit, and ſo much Malice, as to Report my Death, and to mend the Matter, Dead a Jeſuit too. One might have Reaſonably hop'd, that this Diſtance, like Death, would have been a Protection againſt Spite and Envy; and indeed, Abſence being a Kind of Death, ought alike to ſecure the Name of the Abſent as the Dead; becauſe they are equally unable, as ſuch, to defend themſelves: But they that intend Miſchief, do not uſe to follow Good Rules to effect it. However, to the Great Sorrow and Shame of the Inventors, I am ſtill Alive, and No Jeſuit, and I thank God, Very Well. And without Injuſtice to the Authors of this, I may venture to infer, That they that wilfully and falſly Report, would have been glad it had been So. But I perceive many frivolous and Idle Stories have been invented ſince my Departure from England, which, perhaps, at this Time, are no more Alive than I am Dead.

1683. But if I have been Unkindly uſed by ſome I left behind me, I found Love and Reſpect enough where I came; An Univerſal Kind Welcome, every Sort in their Way. For here are ſome of ſeveral Nations, as well as divers Judgments: Nor were the Natives wanting in this, for their Kings, Queens, and Great Men, both viſited and preſented me; to whom I made ſuitable Returns, &c.

For the PROVINCE, the General Condition of it take as followeth.

I. The Country it ſelf in it's Soil, Air, Water, Seaſons and Produce, both Natural and Artificial, is not to be deſpiſed. The Land containeth divers Sorts of Earth, as Sand Yellow and Black, Poor and Rich: Alſo Gravel both Loomy and Duſty; and in ſome Places, a faſt fat Earth, like to our Beſt Vales in England, eſpecially by Inland Brooks and Rivers, GOD in His Wiſdom having ordered it ſo, that the Advantages of the Country are divided, the Back-Lands being generally Three to One Richer, than thoſe that lye by Navigable Waters. We have much of another Soil, and that is a Black Haſel-Mould, upon a Stony or Rocky Bottom.

II. The Air is Sweet and Clear, the Heavens Serene, like the South-Parts of France, rarely Overcaſt; and as the Woods come by Numbers of People to be more clear'd, that it ſelf will Refine.

III. The Waters are generally Good, for the Rivers and Brooks have moſtly Gravel and Stony Bottoms, and in Number hardly Credible. We have alſo Mineral Waters, that operate in the ſame Manner with Barnet and North-Hall, not Two Miles from Philadelphia.

IV. For the Seaſons of the Year, having by God's Goodneſs now lived over the Coldeſt and Hotteſt, that the Oldeſt Liver in the Province can remember, I can ſay ſomething to an Engliſh Underſtanding.

Firſt, Of the Fall, for then I came in: I found it from the 24th of October, to the Beginning of December, as we have it uſually in England in September, or rather like an Engliſh mild Spring. From December, to the Beginning of the Month called March, we had ſharp froſty Weather; not foul, thick, black Weather, as our North-Eaſt-Winds bring with them in England; but a Sky as clear as in Summer, and the Air dry, cold, piercing and hungry; yet I remember not, that I wore more Clothes than in England. The Reaſon of this Cold is given, from the Great Lakes that are fed by the Fountains of Canada. The Winter before was as mild, ſcarce any Ice at all; while this, for a few Days, Froze up our great River Delaware. From that Month, to the Month called June, we enjoy'd a Sweet Spring, no Guſts, but gentle Showers, and a fine Sky. Yet this I obſerve, that the Winds here, as there, are more Inconſtant Spring and Fall, upon that Turn of Nature, than in Summer or Winter. From thence, to this preſent Month, which endeth the Summer, (commonly ſpeaking) we have had extraordinary Heats, yet mitigated ſometimes by Cool Breezes. The Wind that Ruleth the Summer-Seaſon, is the South-Weſt; but Spring, Fall and Winter, 'tis rare to want the Wholeſome North-Weſtern ſeven Days together: And whatever Miſts, Fogs or Vapours, foul the Heavens by Eaſterly or Southerly Winds, in Two Hours Time are blown away; the One is followed by the Other: A Remedy that ſeems to have a peculiar Providence in it to the Inhabitants; the Multitude of Trees yet ſtanding, being liable to retain Miſts and Vapours, and yet not one Quarter ſo thick as I expected.

V. The Natural Produce of the Country, of Vegetables, is Trees, Fruits, Plants, Flowers. The Trees of moſt Note, are the Black Walnut, Cedar, Cyprus, Cheſnut, Poplar, Gumwood, Hickery, Saſſafrax, Aſh, Beech and Oak of divers Sorts, as Red, White and Black; Spaniſh Cheſnut and Swamp, the moſt Durable of all: Of All which, there is Plenty for the Uſe of Man.

The Fruits that I find in the Woods, are the White and Black Mulberry, Cheſnut, Wallnut, Plumbs, Strawberries, Cranberries, Hurtleberries, and Grapes of divers Sorts. The Great Red Grape (now Ripe) called by Ignorance, The Fox-Grape, (becauſe of the Reliſh it hath with unſkilful Palates) is in it ſelf an Extraordinary Grape, and by Art, doubtleſs, may be Cultivated to an Excellent Wine, if not ſo Sweet, yet little inferior to the Frontiniack, as it is not much unlike in Taſte, Ruddineſs ſet aſide, which in ſuch Things, as well as Mankind, differs the Caſe much: There is a White Kind of Muſkadel, and a Little Black Grape, like the Cluſter-Grape of England, not yet ſo Ripe as the other; but they tell me, when Ripe, ſweeter, and that they only want Skilful Vinerons to make good Uſe of them: I intend to venture on it with my Frenchman this Seaſon, who ſhews ſome Knowledge in thoſe Things. Here are alſo Peaches, and very Good, and in Great Quantities, not an Indian Plantation without them; but whether Naturally here at firſt, I know not, however one may have them by Buſhels for little; they make a Pleaſant Drink, and I think not inferiour to any Peach you have in England, except the True Newington. 'Tis diſputable with me, whether it be Beſt to fall to Fining the Fruits of the Country, eſpecially the Grape, by the Care and Skill of Art, or ſend for Foreign Stems and Sets, already Good and approved. It ſeems moſt Reaſonable to believe, that not only a Thing groweth Beſt, where it naturally grows; but will hardly be equalled by another Species of the ſame Kind, that doth not naturally grow there. But to ſolve the Doubt, I intend, if God give me Life, to try Both, and hope the Conſequence will be as Good Wine, as any European Countries, of the ſame Latitude, do yield.

VI. * The Artificial Produce of the Country, is Wheat, Barley, Oats, Rye, Peaſe, Beans, Squaſhes, Pumpkins, Water-Melons, Muſk-Melons, and all Herbs and Roots that our Gardens in England uſually bring forth.

VII. Of Living Creatures; Fiſh, Fowl, and the Beaſts of the Woods, here are divers Sorts, ſome for Food and Profit, and ſome for Profit only: For Food, as well as Profit, the Elk, as big as a ſmall Ox, Deer bigger than ours, Beaver, Racoon, Rabbits, Squirrels, and ſome eat Young Bear, and commend it. Of Fowl of the Land, there is the Turkey, (Forty and Fifty Pound Weight) which is very great; Pheaſants, Heath-Birds, Pigeons, and Partridges in Abundance. Of the Water, the Swan, Gooſe, White and Gray; Brands, Ducks, Teal, alſo the Snipe and Curloe, and that in Great Numbers; but the Duck and Teal excel, nor ſo Good have I ever eat in other Countries. Of Fiſh, there is the Sturgeon, Herring, Rock, Shad, Catſhead, Sheepſhead, Eel, Smelt, Pearch, Roach; and in Inland Rivers, Trout, ſome ſay, Salmon, above the Falls. Of Shell-Fiſh, we have Oyſters, Crabs, Cockles, Conchs, and Muſcles; ſome Oyſters Six Inches long; and one Sort of Cockles as big as the Stewing-Oyſters, they make a Rich Broth. The Creatures for Profit only, by Skin or Fur, and that are Natural to theſe Parts, are the Wild Cat, Panther, Otter, Wolf, Fox, Fiſher, Minx, Muſk-Rat: And, Of the Water, the Whale for Oil, of which we have good Store, and Two Companies of Whalers, whoſe Boats are Built, will ſoon begin their Work, which hath the Appearance of a Conſiderable Improvement. To ſay nothing of our Reaſonable Hopes of Good Cod in the Bay.

VIII. We have no Want of Horſes, and ſome are very Good and Shapely enough; Two Ships have been Freighted to Barbadoes with Horſes and Pipe-Staves, ſince my coming in. Here is alſo Plenty of Cow-Cattle, and ſome Sheep; the People Plow moſtly with Oxen.

IX. There are divers Plants, that not only the Indians tell us, but we have had Occaſion to prove by Swellings, Burnings, Cuts, &c. that they are of great Virtue, ſuddenly Curing the Patient: And for Smell, I have obſerved ſeveral, eſpecially one, the Wild Myrtle; the other I know not what to call, but are moſt Fragrant.

X. The Woods are adorned with Lovely Flowers, for Colour, Greatneſs, Figure and Variety: I have ſeen the Gardens of London beſt ſtored with that Sort of Beauty, but think they may be improved by our Woods: I have ſent a few to a Perſon of Quality this Year for a Tryal.

Thus much of the Country, next of the Natives, or Aborigines.

XI. The NATIVES I ſhall conſider in their Perſons, Language, Manners, Religion and Government, with my Senſe of their Original. For their Perſons, they are generally Tall, Streight, Well-built, and of ſingular Proportion; they tread ſtrong and clever, and moſtly walk with a Lofty Chin: Of Complexion, Black, but by Deſign, as the Gypſies in England. They greaſe themſelves with Bears-Fat Clarified, and uſing no Defence againſt Sun or Weather, their Skins muſt needs be Swarthy. Their Eye is little and black, not unlike A ſtraight-look'd Jew. The thick Lip and flat Noſe, ſo frequent with the Eaſt-Indians and Blacks, are not common to them; for I have ſeen as Comely European-like Faces among them of both, as on your Side the Sea; and truly an Italian Complexion hath not much more of the White, and the Noſes of ſeveral of them have as much of the Roman.

* Note, That Edward Jones, Son-in-Law to Thomas Wynn, Living on the Schulkil, had with Ordinary Cultivation, for One Grain of Engliſh Barley, Seventy Stalks and Ears of Barley: And 'tis common in this Country, from One Buſhel Sown, to Reap Forty, often Fifty, and ſometimes Sixty: And Three Pecks of Wheat Sows an Acre here.

XII. Their

1683. XII. Their Language is loſty, yet narrow, but like the Hebrew; in Signification full, like Short-Hand in Writing; One Word ſerveth in the Place of Three, and the Reſt are ſupplied by the Underſtanding of the Hearer: Imperfect in their Tenſes, wanting in their Moods, Participles, Adverbs, Conjunctions, Interjections: I have made it my Buſineſs to underſtand it, that I might not want an Interpreter on any Occaſion: And I muſt ſay, that I know not a Language ſpoken in Europe, that hath Words of more Sweetneſs or Greatneſs, in Accent and Emphaſis, than theirs: For Inſtance, Octocockon, Rancocas, Oricton, Shak, Marian, Poqueſien, all which are Names of Places, and have Grandeur in them. Of Words of Sweetneſs, Anna, is Mother, Iſſimus, a Brother, Netcap, Friend, Uſque Oret, Very Good, Pane, Bread, Metſe, Eat, Matta, No, Hatta, To Have, Payo, To Come; Sepaſſen, Paſſijon, the Names of Places; Tamane, Secane, Menanſe, Secatereus, are the Names of Perſons. If one aſk them for any Thing they have not, they will anſwer, Mattá ne Hattá, which to Tranſlate is, Not I have, inſtead of I have not.

XIII. Of their Cuſtoms and Manners, there is much to be ſaid, I will begin with Children: So ſoon as they are Born, they waſh them in Water, and while very Young, and in cold Weather to chuſe, they Plunge them in the Rivers, to harden and embolden them. Having wrapt them in a Clout, they lay them on a ſtraight thin Board, a little more than the Length and Breadth of the Child, and ſwadle it faſt upon the Board to make it ſtraight; wherefore all Indians have flat Heads; and thus they carry them at their Backs. The Children will go very Young, at Nine Months commonly; they wear only a ſmall Clout round their Waſte, till they are big; if Boys, they go a Fiſhing till Ripe for the Woods, which is about Fifteen; then they Hunt, and after having given ſome Proofs of their Manhood, by a Good Return of Skins, they may Marry, elſe it is a Shame to think of a Wife. The Girls ſtay with their Mothers, and help to Hoe the Ground, Plant Corn, and carry Burthens; and they do well to uſe them to that Young, they muſt do when they are Old; for the Wives are the True Servants of the Huſbands; otherwiſe the Men are very Affectionate to them.

XIV. When the Young Women are fit for Marriage, they wear ſomething upon their Heads for an Advertiſement, but ſo as their Faces are hardly to be ſeen, but when they pleaſe: The Age they Marry at, if Women, is about Thirteen and Fourteen, if Men, Seventeen and Eighteen; they are rarely Elder.

XV. Their Houſes are Mats, or Barks of Trees, ſet on Poles, in the Faſhion of an Engliſh Barn, but out of the Power of the Winds, for they are hardly higher than a Man; they lye on Reeds or Graſs. In Travel, they lodge in the Woods about a Great Fire, with the Mantle of Duffills they wear by Day, wrapt about them, and a few Boughs ſtuck round them.

XVI. Their Diet is Maze, or Indian Corn, divers Ways prepared; ſometimes Roaſted in the Aſhes, ſometimes beaten and boiled with Water, which they call Homine; they alſo make Cakes, not unpleaſant to Eat: They have likewiſe ſeveral Sorts of Beans and Peaſe, that are good Nouriſhment; and the Woods and Rivers are their Larder.

XVII. If an European comes to ſee them, or calls for Lodging at their Houſe, or Wigwam, they give him the beſt Place, and firſt Cut. If they come to Viſit us, they Salute us with an Itah, which is as much as to ſay, Good be to you, and ſet them down, which is moſtly on the Ground, cloſe to their Heels, their Legs upright; it may be they ſpeak not a Word, but obſerve all Paſſages: If you give them any Thing to Eat or Drink, Well, for they will not aſk; and be it Little or Much, if it be with Kindneſs, they are well-pleaſed, elſe they go away Sullen, but ſay nothing.

XVIII. They are Great Concealers of their own Reſentments, brought to it, I believe, by the Revenge that hath been practiſed among them; in either of theſe, they are not exceeded by the Italians. A Tragical Inſtance fell out ſince I came into the Country: A King's Daughter thinking herſelf ſlighted by her Huſband, in ſuffering another Woman to lye down between them, roſe up, went out, pluck'd a Root out of the Ground, and Eat it, upon which ſhe immediately dyed; and for which, laſt Week, he made an Offering to Her Kindred, for Atonement, and Liberty of Marriage; as Two others did to the Kindred of their Wives, that dyed a Natural Death: For till Widowers have done ſo, they muſt not Marry again. Some of the Young Women are ſaid to take undue Liberty before Marriage, for a Portion; but when Married, Chaſte: When with Child, they know their Huſbands no more, till delivered; and during their Month, they touch no Meat they Eat, but with a Stick, leſt they ſhould defile it; nor do their Huſbands frequent them, till that Time be expired.

XIX. But in Liberality they excell, nothing is too Good for their Friend; give them a Fine Gun, Coat, or other Thing, it may paſs Twenty Hands before it ſticks; Light of Heart, Strong Affections, but ſoon ſpent; the moſt Merry Creatures that Live, Feaſt and Dance perpetually, they never have much, nor want much: Wealth Circulateth like the Blood, all Parts partake; and though none ſhall want what another hath, yet exact Obſervers of Property. Some Kings have Sold, others preſented me with ſeveral Parcels of Land; the Pay, or Preſents I made them, were Not Hoarded by the particular Owners, but the Neighbouring Kings and their Clans being preſent when the Goods were brought out, the Parties chiefly concerned, conſulted what, and to whom they ſhould give them. To every King then, by the Hands of a Perſon for that Work appointed, is a Proportion ſent, ſo Sorted and Folded, and with that Gravity, that is admirable. Then that King ſub-divideth it in like Manner among His Dependents, they hardly leaving themſelves an Equal Share with One of their Subjects: And be it on ſuch Occaſions as Feſtivals, or at their Common Meals, the Kings diſtribute, and to themſelves laſt. They care for Little, becauſe they want but Little, and the Reaſon is, A Little contents them: In this they are ſufficiently revenged on us; if they are Ignorant of our Pleaſures, they are alſo Free from our Pains. They are not diſquieted with Bills of Lading and Exchange, nor perplexed with Chancery-Suits and Exchequer-Reckonings. We Sweat and Toil to Live; their Pleaſure feeds them; I mean, their Hunting, Fiſhing and Fowling, and this Table is ſpread every where: They Eat twice a Day, Morning and Evening; their Seats and Table are the Ground. Since the Europeans came into theſe Parts, they are grown great Lovers of Strong Liquors, Rum eſpecially; and for it exchange the Richeſt of their Skins and Furs. If they are heated with Liquors, they are reſtleſs till they have enough to Sleep; that is their Cry, Some more, and I will go to Sleep; but, when Drunk, one of the moſt Wretchedeſt Spectacles in the World.

XX. In Sickneſs, impatient to be Cured, and for it give any Thing, eſpecially for their Children, to whom they are extremely Natural: They drink at thoſe Times, a Teran, or Decoction of ſome Roots in Spring-Water; and if they Eat any Fleſh, it muſt be of the Female of any Creature. If they dye, they Bury them with their Apparel, be they Man or Woman, and the Neareſt of Kin fling in ſomething Precious with them, as a Token of their Love: Their Mourning is Blacking of their Faces, which they continue for a Year: They are Choice of the Graves of their Dead; for leſt they ſhould be loſt by Time, and fall to common Uſe, they pick off the Graſs that grows upon them, and heap up the Fallen Earth with great Care and Exactneſs.

XXI. Theſe poor People are under a dark Night in Things relating to Religion, to be ſure, the Tradition of it; yet they believe a GOD and Immortality, without the Help of Metaphyſicks; for they ſay, There is a Great King that made them, who dwells in a Glorious Country to the Southward of them, and, that the Souls of the Good ſhall go thither, where they ſhall Live again. Their Worſhip conſiſts of Two Parts, Sacrifice and Cantico: Their Sacrifice is their Firſt Fruits; the Firſt and Fatteſt Buck they kill, goeth to the Fire, where he is all Burnt, with a Mournful Ditty of him that performeth the Ceremony, but with ſuch Marvellous Fervency, and Labour of Body, that he will even Sweat to a Foam. The other Part is their Cantico, performed by Round-Dances, ſometimes Words, ſometimes Songs, then Shouts, Two being in the Middle that Begin, and by Singing and Drumming on a Board, direct the Chorus: Their Poſtures in the Dance are very Antick, and differing, but all keep Meaſure. This is done with equal Earneſtneſs and Labour, but great Appearance of Joy. In the Fall, when the Corn cometh in, they begin to Feaſt one another; there have been Two Great Feſtivals already, to which all come that will: I was at one my ſelf; their Entertainment was a Great Seat by a Spring, under ſome Shady Trees, and Twenty Bucks, with hot Cakes of New Corn, both Wheat and Beans, which they make up in a ſquare Form, in the Leaves of the Stem, and bake them in the Aſhes; and after that they fell to Dance. But they that go, muſt carry a Small-Preſent in their Money, it may be Six-Pence, which is made of the Bone of a Fiſh; the Black is with them as Gold, the White, Silver; they call it all Wampum.

XXII. Their Government is by Kings, which they call Sachema, and thoſe by Succeſſion, but always of the Mother's Side: For Inſtance, the Children of him that 1683. is now King, will not ſucceed, but his Brother by the Mother, or the Children of his Siſter, whoſe Sons (and after them the Children of her Daughters) will reign; for no Woman inherits; the Reaſon they render for this way of Deſcent, is, that their Iſſue may not be ſpurious.

XXIII. Every King hath his Council, and that conſiſts of all the Old and Wiſe Men of his Nation, which perhaps is Two Hundred People: Nothing of Moment is undertaken, be it War, Peace, Selling of Land or Traffick, without adviſing with them; and which is more, with the Young Men too. 'Tis admirable to conſider, how Powerful the Kings are, and yet how they move by the Breath of their People. I have had occaſion to be in Council with them upon Treaties for Land, and to adjuſt the Terms of Trade; their Order is thus: The King ſits in the Middle of an half Moon, and hath his Council, the Old and Wiſe on each Hand; behind them, or at a little diſtance, ſit the younger Fry, in the ſame Figure. Having conſulted and reſolved their Buſineſs, the King ordered one of them to ſpeak to me; he ſtood up, came to me, and in the Name of his King ſaluted me, then took me by the Hand, and told me, He was ordered by his King to ſpeak to me, and that now it was not he, but the King that ſpoke, becauſe what he ſhould ſay, was the King's Mind. He firſt pray'd me, To excuſe them that they had not complied with me the laſt Time; he feared, there might be ſome fault in the Interpreter, being neither Indian nor Engliſh; beſides, it was the Indian Cuſtom to deliberate, and take up much Time in Council, before they reſolve; and that if the Young People and Owners of the Land had been as ready as he, I had not met with ſo much delay. Having thus introduced his Matter, he fell to the Bounds of the Land they had agreed to diſpoſe of, and the Price, (which now is little and dear, that which would have bought twenty Miles, not buying now two.) During the Time that this Perſon ſpoke, not a Man of them was obſerved to whiſper or ſmile; the Old Grave, the Young Reverend in their Deportment; they do ſpeak little, but fervently, and with Elegancy: I have never ſeen more natural Sagacity, conſidering them without the Help, (I was going to ſay, the Spoil) of Tradition; and he will deſerve the Name of Wiſe, that out-wits them in any Treaty about a Thing they underſtand. When the Purchaſe was agreed, great Promiſes paſt between us of Kindneſs and good Neighbourhood, and that the Indians, and Engliſh muſt live in Love, as long as the Sun gave Light. Which done, another made a Speech to the Indians, in the Name of all the Sachamakers or Kings, firſt to tell them what was done; next, to charge and command them, To Love the Chriſtians, and particularly live in Peace with me, and the People under my Government: That many Governours had been in the River, but that no Governour had come himſelf to live and ſtay here before; and having now ſuch an one that had treated them well, they ſhould never do him or his any wrong. At every Sentence of which they ſhouted, and ſaid, Amen, in their Way.

XXIV. The Juſtice they have is Pecuniary: In Caſe of any Wrong or evil Fact, be it Murther it ſelf, they Atone by Feaſts and Preſents of their Wampum, which is proportioned to the Quality of the Offence or Perſon injured, or of the Sex they are of: For in caſe they kill a Woman, they pay double, and the Reaſon they render, is, That ſhe breedeth Children, which Men cannot do. 'Tis rare that they fall out, if Sober; and if Drunk, they forgive it, ſaying, It was the Drink, and not the Man, that abuſed them.

XXV. We have agreed, that in all Differences between us, Six of each Side ſhall end the Matter: Don't abuſe them, but let them have Juſtice, and you win them: The worſt is, that they are the worſe for the Chriſtians, who have propagated their Vices, and yielded them Tradition for ill, and not for good Things. But as low an Ebb as theſe People are at, and as glorious as their own Condition looks, the Chriſtians have not out-liv'd their Sight with all their Pretenſions to an higher Manifeſtation: What good theu might not a good People graft, where there is ſo diſtinct a Knowledge left between Good and Evil? I beſeech God to incline the Hearts of all that come into theſe Parts, to out-live the Knowledge of the Natives, by a fixt Obedience to their greater Knowledge of the Will of God; for it were miſerable indeed for us to fall under the juſt Cenſure of the poor Indian Conſcience, while we make Profeſſion of Things ſo far tranſcending.

XXVI. For their Original, I am ready to believe them of the Jewiſh Race, I mean, of the Stock of the Ten Tribes, and that for the following Reaſons; firſt, They were to go to a Land not planted or known, which to be ſure Aſia and Africa were, if not Europe; and he that intended that extraordinary Judgment upon them, might make the Paſſage not uneaſy to them, as it is not impoſſible in it ſelf, from the Eaſter-moſt Parts of Aſia, to the Weſter-moſt of America. In the next place, I find them of like Countenance, and their Children of ſo lively Reſemblance, that a Man would think himſelf in Dukes-place or Berry-ſtreet in London, when he ſeeth them. But this is not all; they agree in Rites, they reckon by Moons; they offer their firſt Fruits, they have a kind of Feaſt of Tabernacles; they are ſaid to lay their Altar upon Twelve Stones; their Mourning a Year, Cuſtoms of Women, with many Things that do not now occur.

So much for the Natives, next the Old Planters will be conſidered in this Relation, before I come to our Colony, and the Concerns of it.

XXVII. The firſt Planters in theſe Parts were the Dutch, and ſoon after them the Sweeds and Finns. The Dutch applied themſelves to Traffick, the Swedes and Finns to Huſbandry. There were ſome Diſputes between them ſome Years, the Dutch looking upon them as Intruders upon their Purchaſe and Poſſeſſion, which was finally ended in the Surrender made by John Rizeing, the Swediſh Governour, to Peter Styreſant, Governour for the States of Holland, Anno 1655.

XXVIII. The Dutch inhabit moſtly thoſe Parts of the Province, that lie upon or near to the Bay, and the Swedes the Freſhes of the River Delaware. There is no need of giving any Deſcription of them, who are better known there than here; but they are a plain, ſtrong, induſtrious People, yet have made no great Progreſs in Culture or Propagation of fruit Trees, as if they deſired rather to have enough, than Plenty or Traffick. But I preſume, the Indians made them the more careleſs, by furniſhing them with the Means of Profit, to wit, Skins and Furs, for Rum, and ſuch ſtrong Liquors. They kindly received me, as well as the Engliſh, who were few, before the People concerned with me came among them: I muſt needs commend their Reſpect to Authority, and kind Behaviour to the Engliſh; they do not degenerate from the Old Friendſhip between both Kingdoms. As they are People proper and ſtrong of Body, ſo they have fine Children, and almoſt every Houſe full; rare to find one of them without three or four Boys, and as many Girls; ſome ſix, ſeven and eight Sons: And I muſt do them that Right, I ſee few Young Men more ſober and laborious.

XXIX. The Dutch have a Meeting-place for Religious Worſhip at New-Caſtle, and the Swedes, three, one at Chriſtina, one at Tenecum, and one at Wicoco, within half a Mile of this Town.

XXX. There reſts, that I ſpeak of the Condition we are in, and what Settlement we have made, in which I will be as ſhort as I can; for I fear, and not without Reaſon, that I have tried your Patience with this long Story. The Country lieth bounded on the Eaſt, by the River and Bay of Delaware, and Eaſtern Sea; it hath the Advantage of many Creeks, or Rivers rather, that run into the main River or Bay; ſome Navigable for great Ships, ſome for ſmall Craft: Thoſe of moſt Eminency are Chriſtina, Brandywine, Skilpot and Skulkill; any one of which have room to lay up the Royal Navy of England, there being from four to eight Fathom Water.

XXXI. The leſſer Creeks or Rivers, yet convenient for Sloops and Ketches of good Burthen, are Lewis, Meſpilion, Cedar, Dover, Cranbrook, Feverſham, and Georges below, and Chicheſter, Cheſter, Toacawny, Pemmapecka, Portqueſſin, Neſhimenck and Pennberry in the Freſhes; many leſſer that admit Boats and Shallops. Our People are moſtly ſettled upon the upper Rivers, which are pleaſant and ſweet, and generally bounded with good Land. The Planted Part of the Province and Territories is caſt into ſix Counties, Philadelphia, Buckingham, Cheſter, Newcaſtle, Kent and Suſſex, containing about Four Thouſand Souls. Two General Aſſemblies have been held, and with ſuch Concord and Diſpatch, that they ſate but Three Weeks, and at leaſt ſeventy Laws were paſt without one Diſſent in any material Thing. But of this more hereafter, being yet Raw and New in our Geer: However, I cannot forget their ſingular Reſpect to me in this Infancy of Things, who by their own private Expences ſo early conſider'd Mine for the Publick, as to preſent me with an Impoſt upon certain Goods Imported and Exported: Which after my Acknowledgments of their Affection, I did as freely Remit to the Province and the Traders to it. And for the well Government of the ſaid Counties, Courts of Juſtice are eſtabliſht in every County, with proper Officers, as Juſtices, Sheriffs, Clerks, Conſtables, &c. which Courts are held every two Months: But to prevent Law-Suits, there are three Peace-makers choſen by every County-Court, in the Nature of common Arbitrators, to hear and end Differences betwixt Man and Man; and Spring and Fall there is an Orphan's Court in each County, to inſpect and regulate the Affairs of Orphans and Widows.

XXXII. Philadelphia, the Expectation of thoſe that are concern'd in this Province, is at laſt laid out, to the great Content of thoſe here, that are any ways Intereſted therein: The Situation is a Neck of Land, and lieth between two Navigable Rivers, Delaware and Skulkill, whereby it hath two Fronts upon the Water, each a Mile, and two from River to River. Delaware is a glorious River, but the Skulkill being an Hundred Miles Boatable above the Falls, and it's Courſe North-Eaſt toward the Fountain of Suſquahannah (that tends to the Heart of the Province, and both Sides our own) it is like to be a great Part of the Settlement of this Age. I ſay little of the Town it ſelf, becauſe a Plat-Form will be ſhewn you by my Agent, in which thoſe who are Purchaſers of me, will find their Names and Intereſts: But this I will ſay for the good Providence of God, that of all the many Places I have ſeen in the World, I remember not one better ſeated; ſo that it ſeems to me to have been appointed for a Town, whether we regard the Rivers, or the Conveniency of the Coves, Docks, Springs, the loftineſs and ſoundneſs of the Land and the Air, held by the People of theſe Parts to be very good. It is advanced within leſs than a Year to about Four-ſcore Houſes and Cottages, ſuch as they are, where Merchants and Handicrafts are following their Vocations as faſt as they can, while the Country-men are cloſe at their Farms: Some of them got a little Winter-Corn in the Ground laſt Seaſon, and the generality have had an handſom Summer-Crop, and are preparing for their Winter-Corn. They reaped their Barley this Year in the Month called May; the Wheat in the Month following; ſo that their is Time in theſe Parts for another Crop of divers Things before the Winter-Seaſon. We are daily in hopes of Shipping to add to our Number; for bleſſed be God, here is both Room and Accomodation for them; the Stories of our Neceſſity being either the Fear of our Friends, or the Scare-crows of our Enemies; for the greateſt hardſhip we have ſuffered, hath been Salt-Meat, which by Fowl in Winter, and Fiſh in Summer, together with ſome Poultry, Lamb, Mutton, Veal, and Plenty of Veniſon the beſt Part of the Year, hath been made very paſſable. I bleſs God, I am fully ſatisfied with the Country and Entertainment I can get in it; for I find that particular Content which hath always attended me, where God in his Providence hath made it my Place and Service to reſide. You cannot imagine, my Station can be at preſent free of more than ordinary Buſineſs, and as ſuch, I may ſay, It is a troubleſom Work; but the Method Things are putting in will facilitate the Charge, and give an eaſier Motion to the Adminiſtration of Affairs, However, as it is ſome Mens Duty to plow, ſome to ſow, ſome to water, and ſome to reap; ſo it is the Wiſdom as well as Duty of a Man, to yield to the Mind of Providence, and chearfully, as well as carefully, imbrace and follow the Guidance of it.

XXXIII. For your particular Concern, I might entirely refer you to the Letters of the Preſident of the Society; but this I will venture to ſay, Your Provincial Settlements both within and without the Town, for Situation and Soil, are without Exception: Your City-Lot is an whole Street, and one ſide of a Street, from River to River, containing near one hundred Acres, not eaſily valued, which is beſides your Four Hundred Acres in the City-Liberties, part of your Twenty Thouſand Acres in the Country. Your Tannery hath ſuch Plenty of Bark; the Saw-Mill for Timber, and the Place of the Glaſs-houſe are ſo conveniently poſted for Water-carriage, the City-Lot for a Dock, and the Whalery for a ſound and fruitful Bank, and the Town Lewis by it to help your People, that by God's Bleſſing the Affairs of the Society will naturally grow in their Reputation and Profit. I am ſure I have not turned my back upon any Offer that tended to it's Proſperity; and though I am ill at Projects, I have ſometimes put in for a Share with her Officers, to countenance and advance her Intereſt. You are already informed what is fit for you farther to do, whatſoever tends to the Promotion of Wine, and to the Manufacture of Linnen in theſe Parts, I cannot but wiſh you to promote it; and the French People are moſt likely in both Reſpects to anſwer that Deſign: To that end, I would adviſe you to ſend for ſome Thouſands of Plants out of France, with ſome able Vinerons, and People of the other Vocation: But becauſe I believe you have been entertained with this and ſome other profitable Subjects by your Preſident, I ſhall add no more, but to aſſure you, that I am heartily inclined to advance your juſt Intereſt, and that you will always find me,

Your Kind Cordial Friend,

W. Penn.

Philadelphia, the 16th of the 6th
Month, called Auguſt, 1683.

An EPISTLE to the People of GOD called Quakers, in the Province of Pennſylvania, and the Territories thereunto belonging.

Dear Friends,

THE Salutation of my Love is unto you that make a Profeſſion of the bleſſed Way of Truth in the inward Parts, deſiring both Night and Day, with tender and fervent Supplication to the God of the Light that hath ſprung upon us in a living and powerful Viſitation, that we may all anſwer the Love and Mercy of the Lord to us, ſo plenteouſly manifeſted.

Friends, It is upon me, and long hath been, from the God of Truth and Righteouſneſs, to communicate to you a ſhort Word of Counſel and Advice: God hath brought us hither, and we are yet among the Living; He hath a Work for us to do here, tho' the Spiteful and Envious will not believe us: O! that we may be faithful to the Meaſure of Grace received, that the Evil-minded may be diſappointed. Friends, keep in the Senſe of that which firſt viſited you, and kept you, and he that was with you to bleſs you in your native Country, will be with you and bleſs you and yours, and make you a Bleſſing to them that you are come among, that know him not, in this Wilderneſs alſo; for the Earth is the Lord's, and his Preſence fills it, and his Power upholds it, and it is a precious Thing to enjoy and uſe it in the Senſe and Feeling of the ſame; truly this Honour have all the Saints, to whom he will give it for a quiet Habitation: Have a Care of Cumber, and the Love and Care of the World: 'Tis the Temptation that lieth neareſt to thoſe that are redeemed from Looſeneſs, or not addicted to it. The Moon, the Figure of the changeable World, is under the Foot of the true Woman, whoſe Seed —— we ought to approve our ſelves, God hath ordained it for a Footſtool, and we muſt not make a Throne of it, nor doth it become them who ſeek Heavenly Places in Chriſt Jeſus. O! ſhew forth a bleſſed Example, for the Lord's Sake; and truly, bleſſed is that Man and Woman, who in the inviſible Power rule their Affections about the viſible Things, and that uſe the World as true Travellers and Pilgrims, whoſe Home is not here below; ſuch do not extort, grind or oppreſs their Neighbours in their Dealings, but are content with moderate Gain, looking to the Bleſſing that follows, knowing right-well, that they that over-value and over-care, fall into divers Snares and Sorrows, that hurt and pierce the Soul's Peace. And in like Manner, Dear Friends, have a Care of Looſeneſs, for it becometh us to be watchful, and gird up the Loyns of our Minds, and be ſober, and hope to the End. Are we from under outward Sufferings and Tryals that once we knew, and that carry an Humiliation with them upon the Spirits of People? Let us be more Circumſpect, that we forget not the Lord nor his tender Mercies towards us; for he is God, and he can find us out, and Trouble, and Vex, and plague the Diſobedient and Careleſs here, as well as in other Lands. Be zealous, therefore, for the Lord, for he is a Jealous God, and eſpecially over thoſe that have betrothed themſelves unto him by the Profeſſion of his Holy Truth, yea, he will be avenged of the Hypocrite and Rebellious, but the Obedient he will bleſs, which my Soul prayeth you may be, that ſo I may never have an Occaſion to exerciſe any other Power than that of Love and Brotherly Kindneſs. And, Dear Friends, remember who it was that ſaid to his Children and Followers, Ye are Brethren, have a Care of Unnaturalneſs in the Profeſſion of the Truth: To be without Natural Affection to one another in the Truth, is a Mark of Apoſtacy, wherefore love one another, and help, and aſſiſt, and comfort one another; this was the new and living Commandment of our bleſſed Lord and Maſter, which if you keep, then can you not fall out, backbite, ſlander, go to Law, or hate one another in the Sight of the World, and that for the Things that periſh; verily, if any do theſe Things, the Wrath of God will overtake them.

O, Friends! Let us call to Mind the Day that hath dawned upon us, and what Manner of Perſons we ought to be: Beſides, you know that the Eyes of the Inhabitants of the Lands, and thoſe of neighbouring Countries, yea, the People of remote Regions are upon us, and our Doings, how we Live, how we Rule, and how we Obey, 1684. and Joy would it be to ſome to ſee us halt, bear evil Tidings of our Proceedings, as it would be an heavy, and an unſpeakable Grief to thoſe that wiſh well to our Zion. Friends, God requireth great Watchfulneſs from you, eſpecially Elders and Teachers in the Church of Chriſt, that they watch over their own and other's Families, that whatever appears in any, contrary to the Teſtimony and Mind of Truth, may be brought to Judgment, and diſowned, that the Camp of the Lord may be kept clean of the Uncircumciſed that reſiſt the Spirit.

My Friends, Remember that the Lord hath brought you upon the Stage, he hath now tryed you with Liberty, yea, and with Power too; he hath now put precious Opportunities into your Hands, have a Care of a perverſe Spirit, and do not provoke the Lord by doing thoſe Things, by which the Inhabitants of the Land grieved his Spirit, that were before you, but ſanctify God, the living God in your Hearts, that his Bleſſings may fall and reſt as the Dew of Heaven upon you, and your Off-ſpring, then ſhall it be ſeen to the Nations, that there is no Inchantment againſt Jacob, nor Divination againſt Iſrael, but your Tents ſhall be goodly, and your Dwellings glorious: Which is the daily humble Supplication of my Soul to my God and your God, and to my Father, and your Father; that am, with unfeigned Love, in that laſting Relation,

Your tender faithful Friend and Brother,

William Penn.

A
OF THE Duke of Buckingham's BOOK
OF RELIGION and WORSHIP,
FROM THE
Exceptions of a Nameleſs Author.

Deceit is in the Heart of them that imagine Evil; But to the Counſellors of Peace is Joy. Prov. 12. 20.

To the READER.

It pleas'd me ſo well to ſee any Thing in Defence of Religion, under the Name of the Duke of Buckingham, that I was quite of another Mind to the Gentleman that troubled himſelf with an Anſwer; And thought if he had ſaid leſs to his Point, it ſhew'd, to his greateſt Honour, by his own Senſe, the Force of his Convictions, and how Little ſerv'd him to the Belief of a Deity.

That ſo much Wit and Quality, that have made ſo Great Figure in the World, ſhould give this Onſet to Atheiſm, that had ſo long ſtol'n the Credit of both, to give her ſelf Value with Men of Higheſt Rank, might have eſcap'd a Reprimand from the Deiſt or Chriſtian; And This was enough to ſend the Atheiſt a Challenge.

That his Diſcourſe was not labour'd with Repetitious Thought, nor writ in the Language of the Schools, is owing to his better Genius, and more Senſible Education. It needs no Apology, and is it's own Encomium; To be ſure it is like Himſelf, and That is an Original.

In this Evening of his Time, I heartily wiſh him the Felicity of living the Irreproveable Life of his Admir'd Inſtinct, eſpecially, ſince He believes it is not out of his Power, and that ſuch extraordinary Rewards follow it. And This will add a Demonſtration to his Probabilities for Religion.

I would then preſs the Nobility and Gentry of England, to the Imitation of ſo Illuſtrious an Example, and that thoſe Virtues might be recovered, that once made the Diſcipline of their Anceſtors ſo much the Honour of their King, the Safety of their Country, and the juſt Fear and Admiration of all Foreigners.

For the Perſon that undertook to anſwer the Duke's Diſcourſe, in my Opinion, he has, with the Duke, abus'd his Time; As all do, that Miſtake, write looſly, beg the Queſtion, pervert the Senſe; And, to Crown their Work, Contradict themſelves.

I bear the Noble Peer this Friendſhip, and his Eſſay may Challenge it for a Duty: But I am particularly Intereſted in a Reply, by a Reflection the Author gives me in his Anſwer. 'Twere Juſtice to vindicate a leſs Man, when aſſaulted in my Name. But there is another Reaſon; His Arguments were too low an Entertainment for the Duke, and therefore fit for a Man of my inferior Talents. While I Reprehend his Performance, I muſt not be too confident in my own, eſpecially when I have not his Six Hours Haſte to offer in Excuſe of my ſelf; For, to my Dulneſs I muſt own, it has coſt me the beſt Part of Six Days, and therefore Time for me to reſt. Such as it is, Friendly Reader, Take, Read, and Judge. I am no Sceptick, for I believe what I write. If I err, I am to be informed: The Way muſt be Reaſon, as it is with all reaſonable Men, and as I profeſs my ſelf ſuch, ſo from them I expect the Mercy that all Men need and deſire, when it comes to their Turn to be where I am, I mean upon the Stage of Cenſure. Farewel,

Juſt Reader, Thine of long ſtanding,

William Penn.

HIS firſt Paragraph contains his Wonder, that the Duke ſhould eſpouſe the Cauſe of Whiggiſm in her old Age, when a caſt Miſtreſs, and ſcorn'd of all. And all that know the D's Humour would wonder too, if the Thing were true; and if not, the Wonder turns upon the Man's Confidence. It has been the D's Fault to love freſher Game; But This is as much below his Wit, as the other againſt his Inclination. But if the Story cou'd be true, I am not of the Anſwerer's Mind; it was not his Pity but Policy, to entertain her; perhaps, to know the Secrets of his Great Peer, p. 1, for ſo Cecil ſerv'd Eſſex.

But what is Whiggiſm? He tells us very briefly, 'tis Toleration and Perſecution; and that thoſe Qualities made her ſo amiable to the Aſſociating Lords. How this affects the D. that was not of their Knot, is unaccountable, and how thoſe Lds. lov'd the perſecuting Part of her, is as hard to underſtand; unleſs he means it of the Excluſion, and Proſecution of the Popiſh Plot; and if that be it, He does Ill to rail at the Rom. Cath. and their Religion too, p. 15, 21. as able to ruin the whole Earth, and lay the Foundation of Eternal Miſchiefs to Mankind. But if Toleration be a Part of Whiggiſm, it may touch the D. in general: Only in this the Man is miſtaken, ſhe came not laſt to his Hands, he was the firſt of all the Peers of England that had her: And to his Credit be it ſpoken, in This he is conſtant, and more the ſame George D. of B. than this Author fancies him, p. 8.

But

1685. But muſt the D's Book of the weightieſt Matters, be diſgrac'd with Whiggiſm?
“ Is it Whiggiſh to aſſert a God, his Providence of the World, the Immortality of “ the Soul, the Duty of Divine Adoration, Freedom of our Wills from Abſolute “ Predeſtination, the Unreaſonableneſs of one Man's forcing another Man's Con-“ ſcience in Religion, the Neceſſity of good Works, and Rewards and Puniſh-

Muſt ſo noble a Deſign be blaſted with ſo odious a Name? And his Eſſay branded without Diſtinction? Don't we all know that the State-Diſſenter was eſteem'd the Whig, and the great Offence of Whiggiſm the Interruption of the Line? Which muſt be the Perſecuting Part of Whiggiſm in this Man's Account, or none. And can the Duke be guilty of this, for writing a Diſcourſe againſt Perſecution of any Body for Religion? If Indulgence be Whiggiſm, let him remember who it was that lately wanted it. And if Perſecution be Whiggiſm too, who it is that he makes Whigs now: Himſelf a great One to be ſure, p. 28, 29, & 30. In the mean Time, the Duke of Buckingham, it ſeems, Has enter'd the Liſts, is become a Champion, and a Glorious Protector of Whiggiſm, alias, Toleration of Diſſenting Chriſtians; A greater Honour, I think, he could hardly have done him: And in this I am of his Mind.

His ſecond Paragraph begins with a Queſtion every Body may anſwer, to wit, If it was not boldly done of him to anſwer a Peer of his High Rank, p. 2. And for my Part, I think ſo, and ſomething worſe; conſidering the Abuſe, Slightneſs, Untruth and Contradiction with which he has perform'd it. For the Duke cannot think it ill done of him to anſwer, but to anſwer ill, no Body can think well done, and that's his Caſe.

But to fight this Noble Peer with Succeſs, he unhappily tells us, He has armed himſelf with an Invulnerable Conſcience; And I am afraid ſo, becauſe he ſhews himſelf inſenſible of his Injuſtice and Indecency to a Peer, that himſelf ſays, Is of the Higheſt Rank, in the Beginning of his Anſwer, and flies to the Penal Laws to ſupport himſelf at the latter End of it.

But he would have us believe, His Nature and Education are moſt ſoft and obliging; and, if we may truſt him, it is pity his Religion ſhould have ſpoiled him, or that a Man ſhould be the worſe for that which ſhould have made him better.

He ſays, Though in approaching ſo near his Grace, he cannot be procul a Jove, he will be ſure to be procul a Fulmine. This, I preſume, was to paſs for Wit, but he is ſomewhat unlucky in it, and either jeers the Duke, or Himſelf; For this is to tell us the Duke's Arguments have no Force; or if they have, he has Wit enough to keep out of their Way. I might add a Third, perhaps he preſumes upon his Goodneſs, which I perceive is more than Jupiter himſelf muſt hope for in ſome Countries, from the Malitia of the Pulpit. But, now I think of it, who knows but he meant Scandalum Magnatum, and that by concealing his Name, he ſhould eſcape the Thunderbolt; leſt that might happen to turn the Wine of his Hopes into the Vinegar of Deſpair; his own ſweet Metaphor.

He ends this Paragraph, p. 4, with beſpeaking his own Impunity, And profeſſing a profound Veneration for his Grace's High Character. He more than once labours to perſwade the Duke to let him abuſe him Gratis: To be ſure, I ſhan't oppoſe the Charity, but adviſe him to prove himſelf the better Chriſtian by exerciſing it. But methinks it ſhews the Man's Fear, and that, his Guilt; as his Hope, the Duke's Goodneſs, and his Diffidence in the Invulnerableneſs of his own Conſcience. He would have ſomething elſe to truſt too.

It is an odd Thing to beſpeak a Man's Sanctuary where he intends the Wrong, and preſume upon the Goodneſs of the Perſon to abuſe him ſafely. He profoundly reſpects the Duke, and yet makes him to keep, and be the Champion of Whiggiſm; and then too, When every Body elſe, for Fear or Shame, has forſaken her. I will end with this, That he that intitles a Man to the Sin, does his beſt to intitle him to the Puniſhment too: Which, in my Judgment, ſhews a wild and an ill Conſcience in the Anſwerer.

His third Paragraph, p. 4, declares, His own Belief is unavoidable, and his Book, That they that don't avoid their own Belief, to believe as he believes, are juſtly puniſhable; and why? Becauſe he believes as the Church believes, that is, by Law Eſtabliſh'd. Here's the Reaſon of his Creed: And they that offer to have any better, are dangerous to the Government, p. 19, 22 and 23. I think I don't wrong him with Conſequences; the Places import him as much. There is little elſe in this Paragraph, but that he has a Mind to ſhew his Affectation and Ignorance of French,

French, by Opinionatre, inſtead of Opiniatreté, and cautions us to take Heed of him, for he does not know, But he may be Mad before he has done, at leaſt, Freakiſh and Unruly. He would place it to the Infection of the Duke's Wit; but his Book proves he has eſcap'd the Contagion.

But in his fourth Paragraph, p. 5 & 6, It wants, Temperamentum ad pondus. If ſo, it ſhews the Man Light-headed; for that which has pondus, will not be taken with that which has none. All true Wit has Weight; for Wit is an apt and ſtrong Expreſſion of a Thing, ſuch as ſtrikes our Underſtanding Truly and Lively. I ſhould take his Praiſe and Pleaſure to be the beſt Argument in his Book, againſt the Duke, but that they are Diſſembled. 'Tis a kind of a civil Way of taking Leave, to be Rude, (all Abuſe is ſuch:) For to tell us, of his Grace's Facetious Pen, taking Air, Pleaſant and Witty Reaſonings; In fine, The Tarantula of his Paper (which is a Fly, that makes Folks Dance and Caper,) as if the Duke had written a Farce, is Idle. It may be the Encomium of a Play, but it makes an ill Character for a Religious Eſſay.

But this ſticks in his Stomach too, That Noble Cavaliers ſhould trouble their Heads with Religion; And who knows but he has Reaſon, for 'twere the Way to make Chaplains neceſſarily Learned, or unneceſſary and uſeleſs to their Maſters. He wonders as much at Noble Cavaliers writing of Religion, as to ſee a Blew-Apron Knight correcting Euclid's Elements. And yet I think they uſe to wear Green ones that Teach them. I thought he would allow it to Nobles after Mechanicks; But this ſhews he is of the Tribe of ——, and has no Charity for thoſe that han't enough to believe in Verbum Miniſtri. I expect in the next Book, the Gentleman will plead his Charter againſt ſuch Interlopers. But the Duke hates Ingroſſers, and is too Old to mend: 'Tis Labour loſt; He is and will be the ſame D. of Buckingham he was Forty Years ago, in the Point Controverted. Arguments drawn from Selfiſh Topicks, and private Intereſts, move ſlowly with Men of large and Generous Minds.

This is worſe by half than Praying in Latin, (which he is againſt, p. 15.) if I were to be Judge; For Men may learn that, but our Nobility muſt not meddle in Religion, though it ſeems They helpt to make His. However, he graciouſly allows this Noble Peer's Notions to be fine, and many of them Natural and True, yet in a Breath, His Conceptions are greatly to the Diſadvantage of Religion, and why? Becauſe the Duke (poor Man) had not attended their Conſequences; of which, in Things Natural and True, I had always thought there had been no Danger.

He concludes with a Story of an Airy Gentleman of his Acquaintance (for he's of that Element) that being preſſed with the Conſequences of his odd Opinions, would cry, A Pox upon Conſequences, I hate theſe Conſequences: Who the Story belongs to, the Reader muſt Judge: But if the Anſwerer be not more Inconſequent than the Duke; I will ſhare in the Blame, that for all him, had no Share in the Fault.

In his next Period, p. 6, 7, he looks like a Man of the White Apron; and I think it is as Lawful for a Blue one to talk of Euclid's Elements, as for that to meddle with Religion; and, of the Two, that ſpots leaſt: He ſays, He will not read us an Anatomical Lecture upon his Grace's Paper, nor curiouſly diſſect every Nerve and Muſcle. This is, belike, to excuſe both his Skill and Courſeneſs; he was for ſhorter Work, though it ſavoured ſomewhat more of the Butcher. From hence he ſhifts Callings and turns Cook, Couſin German to t'other; and without ſo much as waſhing his Hands, falls to talk of Haſhing of Books, and ſerving them up with Lemon and Anchovies. Men uſe the Metaphors of their Calling and Genius; but he ſhews ill Judgment: For an Aſs in a Chair were as true Painting, as this Wit: That Sauce, in my Opinion, had done much better with a Calve's Head. And now he promiſes us his Matter in a Lump; and, to ſay true, it looks as if it came out of the Mine of Confuſion, Groſs enough.

He firſt ſalutes the Duke's Method to confute the Atheiſt, p. 8, and will not have the Mutation of Things in the World a Reaſon againſt the Eternity of it, no more than the Duke's to render him not the ſame George Duke of Buckingham he was Forty Year ago. But in this the Gentleman is ſhort, and beſide the Cuſhion: For though I fancy the Duke would ſay him many kind Things to be the ſame he was Forty Years ago, yet becauſe he is the ſame Perſonality under Mutations, to conclude, The World may be Eternal, notwithſtanding it's proper Revolutions, is a mighty Non-ſequitur. For it is to ſay, becauſe a Thing is, it muſt always be. I ſhould rather think, that becauſe the Duke is a Being of Time, and once was not, 1685. and again will not be, that George Duke of Buckingham he is, and therefore he ſuffers thoſe Mutations, we ſee him under: It is a good Argument, that the Revolutions we daily ſee the World ſubject to, makes it, at leaſt probable, that it is a Being of Time, that once was not, and again will not be the World it is.

In Truth, there is no Parity in his Alluſion, and therefore his Argument is fallacious; For how does this follow, that the World may be Eternal for all it's Changes, becauſe George D. of B. is the ſame he was Forty Years ſince, notwithſtanding his Bodily Mutations. I muſt return him his Complement, which he, with leſs Reaſon makes the Duke, that his Argument is not too Logical. A Thing's being the ſame, does not neceſſarily conclude it never had a Beginning, and to be ſure it's Mutation, be it of Accidents only, does not make it's Eternity more credible.

If the Duke were Eternal, for all his Change, it were a good Argument that the World might be ſo too, under all it's Revolutions; But that the Duke's being that Individual he was Forty Years ago, for all his Mutations of Body, ſhould prove the World Eternal, notwithſtanding the Changes of it, is as unaccountable as his Poiſon of Wit, p. 4.

I take it to be a better Way of Arguing, that if the Duke was born, grows old, and muſt die, though he be the ſame Duke of Buckingham he was Forty Years ago, the World, that feeds him, had a Beginning, grows old, and will have an End, though it be the ſame in Nature that it was Five Thouſand Years ago. And of this, the daily Mutations, we ſee it ſubject to, are almoſt a Demonſtration.

For all the Productions of the World Die, and all that are nouriſh'd of it End: It can neither give nor feed a Life beyond Time. And that it ſelf ſhould yet be Immortal, that neither makes nor keeps any thing elſe ſo, is againſt that Parity of Reaſon, which we obſerve about all other Things, and cannot refuſe here. All Productions are of the Nature of the Thing Producing: And tho' it may reaſonably be ordained by ſome Superior Being, to entertain and nouriſh many Generations of Mankind, 'tis Incomprehenſible that it ſelf ſhould be Eternal, whoſe Nature and Powers we ſee ſo ſhort and finite by the Revolutions and Mortality of the Creatures they exert and feed. Plain it is, upon our Notion of Creation, this Dilemma vaniſhes, but upon Production, it will remain.

If it ſhould be objected: But the World out-lives Man, and the Creatures it produces; and if the Abſurdity of the World's being Eternal, is taken from it's Productions not being like it Self, why does not the World, ſuch as it is, produce or feed a Life as durable as it's own? I anſwer, That it differs mightily, Men beget Lives longer and ſhorter than their own; are they not therefore Mortal? Or did they not beget them? It is one Thing to talk of Mortal Production out of an Eternal Being, and another Thing to ſay that a Temporal Being ſhould produce or nouriſh another leſs durable than it ſelf: Beſides, the Objection granting the Queſtion of the Non-Eternity of the World, it is eaſy to conceive that the Supreme Agent, whoſe Wiſdom and Power made it, contriv'd that excellent Fabrick, Houſe or Stage of Life, more durable than that of any Man or Age, to entertain ſo many Generations of Mankind, as he deſigned to inhabit and ſubſiſt in it. It lies much in the Frame and Conſtitution of the Subject. Men make Clocks that go a Week, a Month, a Year, Seven Years, and are out-liv'd by the Works of their own Hands. They may allow it to thoſe of the Supreme Agent to ſurvive them, without the Neceſſity of their being Eternal.

But, Argumentum ad hominem, the World cannot to him be mutable and Eternal; For 'tis plain, that he allows Impaſſibility (which he knows, with Philoſophers, takes with it Immutability) to be an Attribute of God, and that God only is Eternal, p. 9. Now I cannot apprehend why he refuſes Mutability to be an Argument againſt Eternity, or how the World may be Eternal tho' Mutable, when he argues that God is only Impaſſible or Immutable, becauſe he is Eternal. Let him have a Care of his Airy Gentleman's Fate, p. 6. And yet if he be as much a School-man as he would have us believe, he muſt know that the Argument the Duke has advanc'd againſt the Atheiſts, is celebrated by the Schools. And tho' the Apoſtle's Teſtimony is a Begging of the Queſtion to an Atheiſt, 'tis doubtleſs Orthodox with this Perſon; and he tells us, That the Things that are ſeen are Temporal, and the Faſhion of this World paſſeth away.

But for all this, he fancies the Duke has done little, and that he could do Wonders againſt the Atheiſt, and therefore, If he were to diſcourſe him, he would preſs him with this Dilemma. If the World be Eternal, it muſt be the Cauſe of it's own Exiſtence, p. 9. And this he urges without Mercy upon his Atheiſt, and runs thro' all the Conſequences of it, with as much Confidence and Vanity as if he had firſt obliged the World with the Knowledge of the Secret; and when all is done, it is better ſaid by the Duke, and with leſs Exception, in the main Queſtion, p. 5. And to ſay true, it grows upon every Common in the Country. But with his Leave, I take the Duke's Argument of the Non-Eternity of the World, from the Mutability of it, to be much the Better of the Two; for the Abſurdity of any Thing being the Cauſe or Effect of it's own Exiſtence, which this Man ſays, Is the Conſequence of the World's being Eternal, being perhaps as applicable to one Eternal as another, is no Credit to his better Way of diſcourſing an Atheiſt, and proving a Deity. For a Thing to be the Cauſe or Effect of it ſelf, is, in my poor Opinion, not too Logical, and, I am afraid, too near a-Kin to Nonſenſe. His making the Duke to hint at nothing elſe in Proof of a God, is diſ-ingenious; for there is one Thing mentioned, he takes no Notice of, p. 5. For, ſays the Duke, Whether the World has been Created out of Nothing is not Material to our Purpoſe, becauſe, if a Supreme Intelligent Agent has fram'd the World to be what it is, and has made us to be what we are, we ought as much to ſtand in Awe of it, as if it had made both us and the World out of nothing. Which plainly imports thus much; That though the Matter of the World were Eternal, the Wiſdom and Power, of that Being which diſpos'd and fram'd it into the Glorious and Regular Thing we all ſee it is, ſhew Him to be what we call GOD, and Us that we ſhould fear Him; which is beſt done by a Sober and Regular Life, becauſe that is moſt ſuitable to the Law of our Nature, and conſequently the Mind of the Great Workman.

The Built and Skill then of the World thus proving the Supreme Intelligence, and at the ſame Time, that He is the Object of the Adoration of His Creatures, we are naturally brought to the Duke's next Point, too weakly oppoſed by his Unwary Anſwerer, viz. That Man only, of all other Creatures, having had Conceptions, at leaſt, Suſpicions of a Deity, and another World; It is probable there is ſomething nearer a Kin to the Nature of God in Man, than in any other Animal whatſoever; and that Inſtinct of a Deity, ought to be our Guide and Director, in chuſing the Beſt Way for our Religious Worſhip of God. This is the Paſſage the Gentleman falls upon, and tells us, p. 11, 12. That that is as fair a Plea for the Alcoran, as the New Teſtament; for Pythagoras's Golden Verſes, as St. Paul's Epiſtles. But which Way, he leaves us to gueſs? And yet we ſhall not gueſs, to ſay, That Pythagoras's Golden Verſes are much nearer a Kin to St. Paul's Epiſtles, than the Alcoran to the New Teſtament. For the one has Great and Excellent Truths, without Impoſture; the other not. And tho' leſs Nobly deſcended, and of inferior Authority, ſo far as they are Right, it is no Diſhonour to St. Paul's Epiſtles, that Pythagoras writ Truth, nor to the Inſtinct that his Verſes are ſo far approved by it. And if this Gentleman would but allow the Duke the Law, which is yet leſs than the Courteſy, of the Learned, he knows how Fruitful the Doctrine of Idea is, to the Defence of the Duke's Inſtinct.

To ſay True, it were enough to refer the Reader to the Duke's Paper, and that of his Anſwerer. The Natural, Plain, and eaſie Deduction of the one, from p. 11. to p. 19. the Diſingenious Citation, Perverſion, and Confuſion of the other throughout, will make him think I might have ſpar'd my ſelf the Pains of following him here. But that it may appear beyond all Doubt, let us hear him at large, how well he grounds his Exceptions.

He ſays, If he be not miſtaken, (and that is modeſtly condition'd) His Grace muſt mean Humane Reaſon, not Regulated by any Publick and Politick Reaſon of a Community, but as every Private Man's Reaſon dictates to him. And that then the Duke has this Conſequence, That it is one of the greateſt Crimes a Man can be Guilty of, to force us to act or ſin againſt that Inſtinct of Religion, and ſomething a-Kin to the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt. For this Doctrine, thus haſh'd and dreſt by himſelf, he is angry with me; And but that His Grace is no Minor, he ſhould ſuſpect the Pennſylvanian had Tutor'd him with his Quakriſtical Doctrine: Mighty Civil to the Duke, and very Juſt to me. I am ſorry the Duke pays ſo dear for my Acquaintance, and that I cannot have the Honour to have ſuch a Pupil without a Jeer upon his. The Man might have Nam'd me plainer if he had pleas'd, without Fear of the fatal and murdering Blow of Scandalum Magnatum, though not without Great Scandal. But in this we are both Debtors to his ſingular Goodneſs, that whoſoever got the Child, he reſolves to be Goſſip; and for that Purpoſe has provided Four Names, which are theſe Four enſuing Conſequences.

Firſt, That Reaſon is the Sole Guide of every Man's Religion, tho' neither Sole nor Reaſon are any Terms of the Duke's Doctrine, and that the Duke excuſes the Omiſſion of Scripture, becauſe of the Qualifications of the Men his Diſcourſe was deſign'd to, that he might come cloſe to their own Natures, and not beg the Queſtion. But in it's due Place he recommends Chriſtianity as the Beſt Religion, p. 18. and then to be ſure he cannot neglect the Scripture.

His Second Conſequence he pins upon the Duke, is as Juſt as the former, That Divine Revelation is not Neceſſary to Salvation; when it is evidently the Meaning of that Part of the Duke's Diſcourſe, That People uſe the Light that God has given them, to chuſe a Religion by, and recommends the Chriſtian for the Beſt. Is it the Way to deny Reveal'd Religion, to preſs Men to chuſe, with the Beſt Skill they have, The Chriſtian, that is the Trueſt Revelation? Certainly this Man muſt be beſide himſelf a little, or he could hardly be ſo much beſide the Matter.

His Third Conſequence is yet more diſingenious than the other, for he makes the Duke to ſay, That it is a moſt horrid Sin to lead Men out of the Errors Natural Religion, and Bare Reaſon, of Neceſſity lead Men to, whoſe very Eſſay was on Purpoſe to lead Natural Men, by the Way of Firſt Principles, to embrace Revealed Religion. But is it, in Good Earneſt, a Sin to lead Men out of Errors, becauſe it is a Sin to force Men againſt their Conſciences? What Man can have an Happier Talent than this: The very Gift of Conſequences. To ſhift Force for Lead, and Conſcience for Error, ſhews his to be Invulnerable with a Witneſs. In one he forges, and begs the Queſtion in the other: No Man could be more dextrous at it: Doubtleſs he will in a While, be as much out of Humour with Conſequences, as his Airy Gallant; for no Man can make more. I muſt not perſwade a Man, becauſe I muſt not Force him; I muſt not Lead a Man, becauſe I muſt not drag and whip him: In fine, I muſt not Inform a Man, becauſe I muſt not knock him on the Head. If this be the Gentleman's Leading, I ſhall have a Care how I take him for a Guide. There's a Sort of Men, whoſe Mercies are Cruelties, and who, with all their Pretence to Reveal'd Religion, have not the Juſtice and Mercy of a poor Benighted Pagan.

His Laſt Conſequence he draws from the Duke's Poſition and Deductions, is this, That Men who believe a God, and follow the Dictates of Reaſon in his Worſhip, may be Saved in any, in all Religions, provided they know no Better.

But how this Conſequence can with any Juſtice be charged upon the Duke, that ſo expreſly, p. 18. prefers the Chriſtian Religion, is paſt my Skill. For unleſs he will make the Duke to ſay, That no Religion is neceſſary to Salvation, when he writes to perſwade People to have one, he muſt confeſs, He makes the Chriſtian to be It, becauſe he recommends That to our Belief and Practice, confirming it to himſelf from the Agreeableneſs of it's Doctrine, with what he is prompted by his Pious Inſtinct to believe to be True. Can any Man then ſay with any Conſcience, that is Juſt, That the Duke of Buckingham thinks Men may be Saved in any, and in all Religions, when he firſt makes Religion neceſſary, and then tells us, That in his Conſcience he believes the Chriſtian to be the True: As if his Buſineſs had been to Prophane, and not advance the True Religion.

And I cannot but wonder how this wild Conception came in his Head, ſo diſagreeable to the Duke's Reaſon, Inſtinct and Deductions. If he had ſaid, In any, or all Perſwaſions, he had Magnify'd the Duke's Charity, with this Diſtinction, That Men of Sincerity in all Perſwaſions may be Saved, and not that Men may ſhift Perſwaſions for Intereſt, and yet go to Heaven: Tho' if it were ſo, perhaps this Doctor might have the Better of the Two by the Notion; Hypocriſy being none of the Duke's Vice. But to ſay, That Men may be Saved in any, or in all Religions, is ſomewhat harſh upon the Duke; and yet if in all theſe Religions a Man muſt be, a Man that believes in God, and lives Virtuouſly, and in Modes of Worſhip knows no Better than the Tradition of his Fathers, it is hard to Damn him; And this Gentleman muſt produce better Authorities for his Severity, before it will have Credit with Men of Senſe and Bowels,

Now, though this does not touch the Duke's Diſcourſe any more than his Charity, to admit that a Diſſenter, a Roman-Catholick, a Jew, a Turk, an Indian may be Saved, let us ſee how well it may be ſupported. St. Peter ſeems to have been of this Man's Mind in the Preamble to the Story of Cornelius, Acts 10. till better taught; and who knows what this Man may be in Time. Of a Truth I perceive (ſays Peter) that God is no Reſpecter of Perſons, but in every Nation he that feareth him, and worketh Righteouſneſs, is accepted of him. This was a Gentile, a Roman, neither Jew nor Chriſtian, yet Devout, a Juſt Man, One Fearing God; And as ſuch, with all, of all Nations of the ſame Quality, declared by this Great Apoſtle, accepted with God. So that it ſeems here is (greatly doubtleſs againſt this Gentleman's Mind) ſome Acceptance for the poor Men of the Duke's Inſtinct. Well, but let us ſuppoſe them to be Comparatively Benighted, Was not Cornelius ſo too? Yet we ſee the Conſequence, He was accepted as he was; and why, but becauſe Sincere, and he knew no Better? He ſtood the fairer for Revealed Religion, this prepared him for it: Nay, we are told by the ſame unqueſtionable Authority, That in the Times of Ignorance, God winked. And ſuch to be ſure, he thinks theirs are, and I think are like to be, for all him: For if I miſtake not, the Man is for the Promiſe at Home, let what will betide them abroad. If he can but Sit under his Own Vine, let the Boar, the Devil, take the Turk, and all the reſt for him. Extraordinary Calls are ceas'd; for there's Extraordinary Pains and Perils in the Caſe, and though he may love Souls well, yet who ſhall Pay him.

Well, but if God Winks at the Ignorant, muſt this Man be ſo prying? And if the Judge of the whole Earth will not be ſtrict, Ought he to turn Inquiſitor? Or muſt it be an Heinous Error becauſe he ſays it, That Men that Fear God, and follow the Dictates of Reaſon in Religion, and know no better, may be Saved? Moſt Unjuſt then is his Clamour, againſt the Divinity of Calviniſts, as Inhuman, p. 4. That Damns Men, p. 13. for not being better than they know how to be.

But the Man builds the Things he deſtroys; For he more than any Body believes One of theſe Three Things; Firſt, That there is no ſuch Thing as Salvation, or that Men may be Sav'd in the Religion as it is by Law Eſtabliſh'd, in all Countries: Or that Men are bound to ſubmit to the Religion Eſtabliſhed by Law, let the Iſſue in t'other World be what it will: For that Power he gives abſolutely into the Magiſtrate's Hands; And who can be judge upon him? The Engliſh of all which, I take to be this, that Men may be of any, or all Religions, but not in the ſame Country, for fear of ſuffering for it; But, Cum fueris Romæ Romano vivito more. One after another, at Rome a Papiſt, at London a Proteſtant, at Conſtantinople a Mahometan. This Principle, ſo Naturally his own, is the Conſequence of his Malice upon the Duke; for he would have the Duke's Deduction of the Reaſonableneſs of Men's chooſing their Religion, by the Direction of that which in themſelves is neareſt a-kin to the Nature of God, to imply, that for all that, Men may be of any, and of all Religions, a pretty Way to ſhift with all Winds, and Sail the Compaſs round: But in this he has more than avenged the Duke's Quarrel upon himſelf; for he cannot make himſelf more Ridiculous, than in attempting to make the Duke ſo Unreaſonable.

And he is juſt as fair to Reaſon, as he has been to the Duke: For if he ſays True, A Man may follow the Dictates of it, and be of all Religions too: Such a Gypſie is Reaſon with him. And if you aſk him, Why Reaſon is ſo proſtitute a Thing, that nothing comes amiſs to her; His Anſwer is extraordinary, For (ſays he) it can never lead Men to the Knowledge of the Belief of a Trinity, the Incarnation, Death, Paſſion, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, or Divinity of Chriſt. Ergo What? Ergo, It will bow to any elſe, though it be never ſo Idle and Extravagant. Is not this ſad Work for a Doctor?

But if the Dictates of Reaſon will fall in with any Religion, they may embrace the Chriſtian as well as another, and then he's gone again. He will certainly hate Conſequences too, when he has but thought of his own, that ſo inevitably attended his Conceptions, to the Diſadvantage of Religion. But the Duke's Inſtinct, or that which God has placed in our Hearts, ſo near a-kin to the Nature of God, he ſays, muſt be Reaſon, and that Reaſon he makes an arrant Strumpet; for he aſſures us, She is a Prolifick Parent of Idolatry, Superſtition, Will-Worſhip, and a Thouſand Abſurdities more in Religion, and quotes All Times, Places, and Ages for Proof, p. 14. But as it happens, names not one of them to the Point aſſerted.

Now the little Skill I have in Books, tells me quite other Things to the Tale of this Anſwerer: That Superſtition and Idolatry are the moſt Unreaſonable Things in the World; that they could never Bribe Her at any Time; and 'till Senſuality had darkened and overlaid Men's Reaſon, It was impoſſible for Superſtition and Idolatry to obtain that Empire, that in Prejudice of Reaſon, they have at any Time got upon the Belief of any Part of Mankind. And if we will be juſt to Ethnick Ages, we find Men among them of extraordinary Light; That, As having no Law, became a Law unto themſelves, and that were of the Uncircumciſion that kept the Law, as the Apoſtle of the Gentiles ſpeaks. Such were Pythagoras, Anaxagoras, Socrates, Plato, 1685. Xenocrates, Plotin, Antipater, Zeno, Epictetus, Seneca, Plutarch, Cato, Cicero, and others. And to be free with the Duke's Undertaker, I take Old Plutarch to be much a Better Chriſtian, who calls this Inſtinct, The Everlaſting Foundation of Virtue: A Law written, not in Pillars of Wood or Stone, but in the Hearts of Men. But that he may meet with ſome Rebuke, for much is owing him on this Account, I ſhall take upon me to examine his Imputations, be it upon this Inſtinct, or be that Reaſon, I will not quarrel the Word.

I do ſay then, That he muſt either deny that God hath plac'd any ſuch Thing in Man, to diſtinguiſh him from other Animals; or if that be True, He is to chuſe his Religion without conſulting it. If the Firſt, he makes us all Beaſts, and himſelf an Atheiſt; If the Laſt, our Religion is in-evident, we know not what, for we are not to take the Judgment of the Divine Gift in our Election: What a Religion muſt that be? If his Argument were True, here would be indeed as fair a Plea for the Alcoran as the New Teſtament. But it were Blaſphemous ſo to ſpeak of the Duke's Inſtinct, For it is that Notion of God which is innate, and, as it were, Congenial to us: We bring it with us into the World. The peculiar Seal and Mark of Divinity: A kind of Counter-part of himſelf in Man; his Picture in little: The Attributes that are Infinite in him, being here Epitomiz'd and Reſembled in Man, that by It he may have a Right Knowledge of his Creator, and Senſe of his Duty. Antiquity offers a Cloud of Witneſſes, both Pagan and Chriſtian. Juſtin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus and Origen, exceed. But the Oppoſition is too mean to draw out ſo great an Artillery; It will be Time enough when a greater Force appears to aſſault ſo Venerable a Truth: And in the mean Time I will attend him in his Exceptions, ſuch as they are. But perhaps he will excuſe himſelf, becauſe he does not certainly know what the Duke means by that Part of us, which is neareſt a-kin to the Nature of God. For he ſays, If he be not miſtaken, it muſt be Reaſon. But if I be not miſtaken, he had better have known firſt, and not have drawn poſitive Concluſions from doubted Premiſſes. But ſuppoſe the Duke underſtands Reaſon by that Inſtinct, rather than a Divine Gift to guide our Reaſon and Underſtanding, Will Reaſon plead the Cauſe of the Alcoran, as ſoon as that of the New Teſtament? What has God done then to make us Reaſonable? I had thought that the New Teſtament had been a more Reaſonable Book, and that God Almighty had not made Man ſo deceivable a Creature, or fram'd him with ſuch falſe Intellects; and ſubmitted him to ſuch dangerous Errors. And though he might have made him Feeble, yet not ſo ſquint-ey'd or tender ſighted that he could not ſee ſtraight, or tell Colours, or diſtinguiſh an Alcoran from the New Teſtament.

I pray, is the Alcoran as Credible as Chriſt's Sermons upon the Mount, to the Multitude, to His Diſciples? Wherein we find the Moſt Excellent Morality, Piety, and Purity of Diſcipline; ſo ſuitable to our Underſtandings, that they ſeem to anſwer the Perfection of Reaſon? I know he will tell us, he means it of Revealed Religion, as he does, p. 13. Reaſon (ſays he) can never lead us to the Knowledge of the Belief of the Trinity, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, or Divinity of the Son of God. To be led to the Knowledge of the Belief of any Thing, is odly ſaid; but let it paſs: However, there is a Difference between Miracles and Fables; Arrant Fopperies and Fictions; ſo ill counterfeited too, that a Man of ſmall Sight muſt needs diſcern them.

Tradition, and prejudic'd Education, indeed give Credit often to ſuch Things; but Reaſon does not chuſe, but is overborn: Beſides, we have as good Authority for our Saviour's Miracles, as for any Thing we did not ſee: Of Mahomet's we have not the like; And this is farther to be ſaid, If Reaſon cannot work them, it never oppoſed them: On the contrary, it leads us to believe them, and Revealed Religion for their Sakes; For a Man muſt be an Hog to oppoſe himſelf to ſo overcoming an Evidence, in Lieu of a Man that is led by Reaſon.

It ſeems to me, as if this Gentleman dare not venture his Religion with Reaſon, that oppoſes Reaſon to Religion. The New Teſtament is ſo far from refuſing Reaſon any Share in our Chriſtianity, that it is made a Duty to us to give a Reaſon of our Chriſtian Hope, 1 Pet. 3. 15. And it were abſurd to give a Reaſon for that which a Man receives without Reaſon, and is impoſſible to Receive by it, or for Reaſon to apprehend; and if it could, it judges ſo ill, that it will as ſoon proſtrate it ſelf to the Alcoran as to the New Teſtament.

But this is not all the Duke's Fault, perhaps he would go a great Way to yield him his Point; if he did but mean Political Reaſon, or Reaſon regulated by a Community. This he explains, p. 19. For his Community is the Government: But had not this been a fine Receipt to keep Chriſtianity out of all Countries? For had this Reaſon of Community prevailed, there had been neither Chriſtians nor Proteſtants. Without racking a Syllable of his excellent Argument, I think I may ſay, It pleads as much for the Alcoran as the New Teſtament, and more in Turkey: For if the Political Reaſon of the Community of a Country, is ſtill to conclude thoſe that dwell in it, Turks, muſt be Turks; Infidels, muſt be Infidels; Idolaters, muſt be Idolaters ſtill: In which alſo I perceive he is a Republican, after all his Railing at Common-Wealth's Men: For the Community over all Cauſes, with him, judges. I don't know but it may run as far as Excluſion too: To be ſure it would, if all had agreed; for all Meaſures of Right or Wrong, True or Falſe, are by my Man humbly ſubmitted to the Political Reaſon of the Community; What is this but to ſay, That every Religion is beſt where it is Eſtabliſh'd, though the moſt diſagreeing among themſelves, and any, or all of them, with the True?

Nor is this the Extent of the Duke's Error, He is not only for Reaſon, guiding and chuſing, but he would have every private Man's Reaſon dictate for himſelf. This is a Peſtiferous Doctrine in the Anſwerer's Account; and yet ſhould a Man chuſe without himſelf, for himſelf, he muſt certainly be beſide himſelf. Who ſhould chuſe for a Man but himſelf, if he muſt anſwer for himſelf? It would certainly be moſt unreaſonable to judge a Man for a Thing he is not allow'd the Liberty of his Choice in: Nor do I think a Man can have any Reaſon to render for his Religion, that receives his Religion without the Suffrage of his own Reaſon.

Have our Bodies Eyes, and our Souls none? Shall our Temporal Part act upon Sight, and our Eternal upon Truſt, and That not of God, but of Man? That when the poor Labourer will be Judge of his Pay, and not truſt his very Miniſter about the Currentneſs of a Gront, we ſhould be left without Diſtinction about that Treaſure, which is of Eternal Moment to us: Surely then, Underſtandings are of no Uſe in Heaven: But I know not how to believe it. To be a Child in Malice is excellent; But under Favour, in Underſtanding, not. To truſt out our Souls upon Human Say-ſo's, is to go into Coats again; And to be ſure, a Child's Coat, is a Fool's, upon a Man's Back. Let them wear Bibs that Slabber, and the Blind follow the Dog and the Bell. In Religion, Authority concludes Minors; but Conviction determines Men.

That this Gentleman ſhould pretend to Proteſtancy, and rail at a Man's Judging for himſelf, is abſurd. If the Reaſon of the Community muſt guide, let him not be ſo angry with the Romaniſts, for ſaying, Believe as the Church Believes; when he ſays, Believe as the State requires: The One preſſes Conformity as by the Catholick Church Eſtabliſh'd; the other crys, As by Law Eſtabliſh'd: A Doctrine Calculated to all Meridians.

I fear he grants too much for the Quarrel, but let Him look to that? For the one pre-ſuppoſes the Holy Ghoſt to conduct, to juſtify the Determination; The other ſcorns her Words, but won't bate one Jot of Conformity. I ſhall only tell him, that taking the Tranſlation of the Bible to have been an Appeal to the People, made by the firſt Reformers, againſt the Church they Diſſented from; If, as this Man ſuggeſts, the Engliſh of reading it now, be, that we muſt not make any Judgment to our ſelves of what we read, the Appeal cannot be determined, and our Caſe is not mended; On the contrary, it is made a Temptation of Trouble and Miſchief to Us: For, whereas the Inſpir'd Doctor tells us, that in Religious Matters, We are to be perſwaded in our own Minds, That they commended Themſelves and Doctrines to Men's Conſciences, ſo making Them Judges for Themſelves. That Conſcience Accuſes and Excuſes, ay, our own Hearts, that all are to walk as they have Received, and not uſurp a Judging Power over our fellow Chriſtians Faith or Liberty; We are told now, that all our Faith and Worſhip muſt be ſubmitted to the Political Reaſon of the Community, we are of, hit or miſs. I take this to be leaping blind fold into t'other World in Matters of Salvation.

But it may be, he will tell me, that he has nothing to ſay againſt Reaſon conſider'd in it's Purity, and un-deprav'd, only, That it cannot lead us to the Knowledge of Revealed Religion; and he ſays as much, p. 13. But this will not do, or elſe do worſe than before; For if by Reaſon he means a Reaſonable Capacity, he does not mean as the Duke means, and ſays, and then he is miſtaken indeed in what his Grace calls that Part of us that is neareſt a-kin to the Nature of God, to wit, His Inſtinct in Us, and is underſtood by this Noble PEER to be the Guide and Director of our Underſtandings in our Choice, and which gives the Rectitude and True Judgment.

1685. On the other Hand, if he underſtands Reaſon abſtractly, and as the Principle it ſelf; It can no more be deprav'd, than the Sun darkn'd by the Miſts and Vapours of the Earth. And truly it is juſt as reaſonable to accuſe the Law of Moſes with the Death of our Saviour, and the Goſpel with the Errors and Impieties of Chriſtians, as to charge to the Account of Reaſon all the ill Things, that Men pretending to it, have committed. And yet to do the worſt of them right, the moſt Idolatrous, Unnatural and Senſeleſs, Rites the darkeſt Ages of the World ever had, they have diſcharg'd their Reaſon, and plac'd them, in all Times, to the unaccountable Tradition and Authority of their Prieſthood: Where, for this Time, I will leave them too: Only I muſt needs ſay, I wiſh the Duſt this Man has ſo vehemently rais'd upon Reaſon, be not to put out our Eyes too, that we may be leſs Reſty, and lead better. For if ſuch Men once get us out of our Depth, we are gone. Truſt thick and three-fold; And the more Un-Intelligible, the more Venerable; this will be the Maxim.

But if I may, I would wonder for all that, how after all, He can ſo expreſly contradict himſelf, as p. 14. to allow Reaſon to Judge, and p. 36. To ſend his Readers thither to convince others of their Duty both in their Spiritual and Civil Capacity. He muſt have relented him mightily, or having been in a Fit, is come to himſelf, or elſe his own Reaſon has had the Wind, and is too many for his Prejudices, or he could not have given himſelf ſo quickly ſo great a Reprimand; But this ſhews the Nature and Power of Reaſon, that it will riſe to it's own Evidence and Vindication, even in the moſt Unreaſonable Men.

But this Author tells the World, That granting the Duke to have carried his Poſtulatum of the Being of a Supreme and Perfect Power, he would have followed his Blow at another Rate, and ſent his Reader another Road, which ſhews the Duke's little, and his better, Skill and Courage; tho' he might have been ſo modeſt as to let us have been the Judges of that: He did not catch this of his Grace's Pen. And pray what would he have done? why, after a Flood of Words (and this is all.) he tells us, That he would have ſent them to the Scriptures. And by this, one would think that the Man had never read the Book he pretends to Anſwer; For that Noble Peer expreſly tells us in the Beginning of his Diſcourſe, that he has to do with Men that deny their Authority, and therefore to uſe it to prove what he aſſerts, were to beg the Queſtion. And I do aſſure him, ſo ſoon as he had Gain'd the Poſtulatum of the being of a Supreme and Perfect Power, he recommends them to the Chriſtian Religion, of which I had always underſtood till now, the Scriptures had been the Creed.

Well, but in caſe of doubtful places he has an Interpreter, a Judge for Him at hand too, and That is the Society of Chriſtians; why could not he as well have ſaid the Church; and then have told us which Church; for there is not one of a dozen that don't alledge the Text for their Authority. But to do him Right, he has given us a Rule to know her by; he takes it, (Good Proteſtant) from Vincentius Lirinenſis, and a Golden one it is, he aſſures us; But for all that, I fancy it has an Iron Rod at the Tail for him.

'Tis this, Quod ubiq; quod ſemper, quod ab omnibus, id verè quidem Catholicum eſt, and that this would have ſhewn the Duke a Thouſand Errors, p. 15. Now, methinks, out of meer Pity, I am not willing to allow his Rule; For if I ſhould, firſt this ſhowing Rule, will infallibly ſhew him, that the Duke's Inſtinct and the Penſilvanian's Doctrine, (to his unſpeakable Grief,) has the Hope to be Eſtabliſh'd by it. For there is nothing more Ancient, more Univerſal, more conſtantly credited, at all Times, in all Places, by all Nations, than a Divine Inſtinct in the Natures of Men: And then, if this attempt upon the Duke has not been Unreaſonable, as to the Penſilvanian, an Honour as much above his Hope, as his Adverſary's Intentions, let Him Judge.

My ſecond Reaſon of Unwillingneſs is this, he ſays, p. 16. This Rule would have taught the Duke to avoid the cruel Divinity of Calviniſts which his Grace laſhes with ſo much Truth and Juſtice: Where, beſides the Non-ſenſe of teaching a Man to diſlike a Thing, he already is allow'd to have laſht with Juſtice, he confirms the Judgment of his Inſtinct, by which, he was led to laſh the Doctrine, for a Golden Rule.

But laſtly, as he has Eſtabliſh'd the Thing he would overthrow, ſo it's to be fear'd, he has overthrown the Thing he would Eſtabliſh; And would not a well-natur'd Man be ſorry for that.

For moſt evident it is that the Church of England is not every where, there's for His Ubique: And ſome tell us, that She was not always what ſhe is, there's for His Semper: And that every Body is not of Her Communion, this Gentleman's Invectives againſt Diſſenters prove; the Roman Church charges Novelty; She flies to Scripture; The Roman Church diſputes the Senſe, the Church of England appeals to the firſt Doctors of the Church; the Romaniſts to the Senſe of the Church upon the Doctors. Now ſays He, The Society of Chriſtians muſt be Judge, p. 15. Not the Few that ſeparate from the Many; For then they will be Judge in their own Cauſe, and the Diſſenters at Home will expect the ſame Priviledge; If the Church they Diſſent from, they are gone; If the Scripture, 'tis the Subject to be Judged. This muſt iſſue therefore, either in no Judge, or in an External Judge, or in an Internal Judge. If no Judge, we are left without Deciſion till the laſt Judgment. If an External Judge, it muſt either be the Church or Civil Government. If the Church, the Romaniſts think they carry it. If the Civil Government, to be ſure the Church of England has it there. If laſtly, an Internal Judge, that every Man ſhould try, faſten and examine for himſelf, the Duke's Inſtinct (much againſt this Gentleman's Mind) will come in for a Share in the Choice of a Man's own Religion, and that within the Rule too.

The next Point he falls upon, is the Duke's Maxim about Perſecution, he does not think it Antichriſtian at Home, but the Duke under a Miſtake of the Reaſon, Nature, and Neceſſity of thoſe Humane Laws Diſſenters are proſecuted by. p. 17. And upon this he beſtows eight Pages, which in a Lump, comes to thus much. That though he allows, that puniſhing the Profeſſors of a True Religion, purely for Religion, (living otherwiſe inoffenſively to the Civil Government) is Perſecution, and truly Antichriſtian, which was the Primitive Chriſtians caſe under the Heathen Emperours of Rome; yet the Laws againſt Papiſts and Diſſenters are out of a Political, not Religious Neceſſity, to ſecure the Peace and Safety of the Government; And if this be Antichriſtian, the whole World, all Ages, Times, Governments, and Governours muſt have been, and are Antichriſtian, and it turns his Admiration into Wonder, that his Grace ſhould be of this Mind that had his Share in paſſing thoſe Laws. I perceive his diſ-ingenuity continues to the Duke. For beſides that, he loves Wondring, he might know that the Duke's Share was to Vote againſt them, and ſo that he did not eſpouſe Toleration, a caſt Miſtreſs; The Duke's Diſcourſe relates to Men of Conſcience, not Rebellion; And to conclude, more or leſs than the Queſtion contains, is not fair or ſound.

The Duke ſays, 'tis Antichriſtian to perſecute: His Anſwerer ſays, 'Tis truly ſo of the true Religion; And pray where does the Duke ſay it, of the falſe? But I am ready to think that if Perſecution, in all the World, were ſtopt, till that were determin'd, we ſhould at leaſt gain one Age of Peace: And to have any of it before, is, at leaſt in this Author, unaccountable, and a begging of the Queſtion.

But he would not have Danger enſue to Government, and therefore draws upon the Duke this unnatural Conſequence; That the whole World, and all Governments and Governours are Antichriſtian; whilſt that Noble Peer meddles not with Government, nor Solicits Freedom for them that diſturb it. He declares himſelf for Men's having Liberty to Worſhip God according to their Perſwaſion, and the Reaſon of it. If Men will miſ-call Conſcience, his Plea is no Shelter; Currat Lex, His Argument is ſafe: The Conſequence is the partial Application of his Anſwerer. The Duke thinks perhaps, 'twere more eaſie and Honourable to let ill Men not have that to ſay againſt good Government, You trouble us for our Conſciences, ſince in it's ſelf, there is no Real and Proper Overt-Act of Sedition, meerly in performing a differing Sort of Worſhip; and that there are, or may be Laws enough provided to ſecure the State from thoſe civil diſorders, that any ſuch Man might attempt under that Pretence. Here, ſuch People would not only juſtly ſuffer, but without a cover too: The Diſgrace and Odium, in the Opinion of all, as well as Penalty, falling only upon the Criminals Head. I do with the laſt Duty and Deference a Man can bear to his King and Country, Wiſh and Pray for their Proſperity: I would by no Means that any Man ſhould be indulg'd to their Detriment: I ſhould, beſides my civil Obligations, cancel thoſe of Conſcience before Almighty God, if I thought it; But I cannot prevail with my ſelf, to believe that the Government may not be ſafe, by ſome civil Proviſion, with the moſt ſuſpected Diſſenter: Elſe 'twere paſt a ſcruple with me that his Liberty ſhould at all Times purchaſe the publick Safety.

1685. This Gentleman allows all Diſſenters may not be Guilty; if ſo, it muſt be a dangerous Execution; eſpecially when the Juſtice of our humane Laws had rather an hundred Criminals ſhould eſcape, than that one Innocent ſhould periſh. But he ſays, he has not Momus's Windows to ſee, and know them by. I am ſure he has too much of his Mind, or he had not troubled the World with ſuch a Bundle of Exceptions: But if he can't diſtinguiſh them, will that excuſe his deſtroying them? I am ſorry this Gentleman's Divinity has no more Bowels, nor better Senſe; for if Mankind be left without the Knowledge of Guilt from Innocence, They muſt puniſh in the Lump; They muſt be unjuſt.

This is Judging without Overt-acts; by Gueſs and Jealouſy. A Way that may make an Innocent Guilty, and a Guilty Perſon Innocent. To be caſt without Evidence is wrong, and what Witneſs is there of that which is only in foro Conſcientiæ? then what Judge? A Piece of cruel Enthuſiaſm. I know not what to call it. Not only Chriſtianity, but Gamaliel; ay, our owns Laws would have taught Him a better way of finding out Criminals, yet His excels.

Well, But the Laws againſt Papiſts, (He ſays) are occaſioned from their Unchriſtian Machinations and King-killing Doctrine, able to ruin the whole Earth, and lay the Foundations of Eternal Miſchief to Mankind; And for thoſe againſt Diſſenters, They were made, becauſe of their Rebellious, Excluding, Covenanting, Aſſociating, Murdering Principles. p. 15. 16. 21. 22.

Now though this Man would think it imprudent in me, and I, that it is none of my Buſineſs, to vindicate the Perſons charged upon His Imputations; yet I have ſo much Juſtice, I confeſs, as not to condemn Parties by Particulars, and Charity as to be ſatisfied with their ſolemn diſclaiming of ſuch Practices: For I did never love that one Man ſhould have the making of another Man's Faith or Confeſſion, eſpecially if He were His Adverſary.

I muſt tell Him alſo, I cannot admire His Wiſdom, Manners, or Juſtice, in his Reflection upon the Roman Catholicks, after the Aſſurances that ſo great an One of their Communion has given Him and His Friends of their Security and Protection: For if they are a People able to ruin the whole Earth, and lay the Foundation of Eternal Miſchief to Mankind; believe me, England is in an ill pickle, and though I am an ill Judge, He has in it put but a Scurvy Complement upon the King. But if by the King's Promiſe p. 33. He means that the King is to deſtroy the Men of His own Faith, to ſupport and ſecure Theirs; I ſhall only admire, firſt His Underſtanding, and next His Charity.

For Diſſenters, I ſhall ſay no more, than that it may be, the Wars made Them, rather than They made the Wars, and that Things, older than the Act of Oblivion, are in Law, buried by it. And with Submiſſion, this Gentleman's Conſcience, for ought I know, might have done as well to let Them alone.

For the late Occaſion He takes, let him be juſt, and He will find the Excluders, almoſt, every Sunday at their Pariſh Churches: And if three Quarters of them were to pray for their Lives, it may be they could better Read their Clergy, than ſay their Prayers without the Publick Liturgy. What follows? Shall I recriminate the Uſage of the late King about the Declaration of Indulgence? And ſay, that ſome Men lov'd Him well for their own Ends? And that when they were not humour'd exactly, They would pout, ſlack their Loyalty, and grow paſſive, let Things go as they will for them: A Thing almoſt threatn'd by this Loyal Gentleman, p. 33. May not this be aggravated, and with as many harſh Words, by a Man of Words and no Charity? But I would be modeſt, and that not of Prudence, but Choice, for I hope He would give His Replicant the Liberty He expects, and takes with the Great Peer he anſwers.

And I muſt ſay I cannot but extreamly admire, that leſs than twelve Lines, ſo ſoftly dropt by the Duke in Favour of Liberty of Conſcience, ſhould have almoſt as many Leaves of little Invectives to anſwer them. Believe me, it impeaches His Pretences to Chriſtianity, and renders Him to have more of the Fire-brand than of the Loyal Subject.

I ſhould end here; but there are two Things more I think muſt be mentioned, that nothing carrying any Pretence to Weight may be omitted.

Firſt, That the Reaſon of the Penal Laws is purely Political and not Spiritual, to obviate the Overacts, Acts of Treaſon and Rebellion; for a Man may be of any Religion to himſelf, and privately exerciſe it too, not exceeding ſuch a number above their Families.

Secondly, That Toleration is the way to overthrow Religion, and with it the Government, eſpecially as now Eſtabliſhed; and is a fatal Enemy to Monarchy:

To the firſt, I ſay, Fact muſt Rule us; I would deſire to know if the Act of Uniformity, Printed with the Liturgy, be purely Political and not Spiritual? I hope, without Offence I may ſay, it is not. The Laws of the 23d and 28th of the Queen, Requiring People to come to Church, will not let People be of any Religion to themſelves; for unleſs they are, at leaſt once a Month, at Divine Service, and ſhow, to joyn in the Publick Worſhip, by Law Eſtabliſh'd, they pay twenty Pounds Monthly, and have two Thirds of their Real Eſtate expos'd to Sequeſtration. And this is done in one Place or another every Day. So that it is not true in Fact, That People may have any Religion to themſelves; becauſe, both thoſe that keep at home, and within the number allow'd by the Act againſt Conventicles, and thoſe that exceed it, are notwithſtanding preſented upon the Statutes of the Queen; Nay, I have known ſome Perſons proſecuted by them all, at one and the ſame Time.

And, with all due Reſpect to the Wiſdom of our former Legiſlators, if this Gentleman's Gloſs be true, I think Improprieties ſhould no more have been Enacted, than Impoſſibilities or Contradictions. To make a Man Dangerous to the State, for not going to Church; or a Breaker of the Peace, for being at a Meeting of an hundred People, when their Perſons were Naked, their Entertainment meer Devotion, and their Behaviour very quiet and Innoffenſive, ſounds in the Uſe of Words, very harſh. It puts me in Mind of a Witty Paſſage of the Lord Chancellor Hyde, when the Bill prohibiting the Importation of Iriſh Cattle was read in the Lord's-Houſe, hearing it ſtiled a Nuſance; Pray, (ſays he) let it for this Time be called Adultery, for one Word is juſt as fit as t'other. Inadequate and unſuited Expreſſions are oftentimes of dangerous conſequence. No Man knows where the Practice may ſtop. Religion ſhould ſweeten and humble the Spirits of Men, abate their Paſſions, and excite their Obedience to their Superiors. And it is one of the ſtrangeſt Things in the World that greater Numbers may meet on Twenty other Occaſions every Day, with leſs fear of the Breach of the Peace. As that Religion cannot be good that makes any Man the worſe for having it: So I am not for beheading any Thing before it is born, or puniſhing People for fear of what they may do. I would hope the beſt, and that if they had that Freedom they deſire in the Exerciſe of their Religious Perſwaſion, their Condition would teach their Wit, it were too good to hazard, that if their Duty or Gratitude did not oblige them, their very Intereſt muſt; and there is hardly one of them ſo ſtupid, as not to underſtand and purſue the Ways that preſerve it.

For that of Toleration, it is my Opinion, he does ill to diſtinguiſh it from Liberty of Conſcience; For if he mean the ſame Thing, it needed not have had a freſh Head with other Conſequences; nor was requiſite that I did farther conſider it.

And I am heartily ſorry, I muſt ſay, that to the End of his Anſwer he hardly fails of his uſual Way of Conſtruction: For after having made Toleration as ill a Thing as he could, and as ſuch, the Duke to be the Patron of it; He falls on with a whole Volley of hard Words, aſking the Duke, p. 27, 28, 29. If he would give Toleration to a Rebellious, Aſſociating, Sanguinary, Inhumane, Blaſphemous, Murdering Conſcience, ſuch as that of Calviniſts, that Decrees Damnation without free Conditions, Kill'd his Maſter, Father and Brother, and that particularly uſed him ſo ill. But this is ſo far from determining, that in ill Language it miſerably begs the Queſtion, by the Reflection of falſe and Scandalous Conſequences, upon what the Duke ſaid in favour of Indulgence.

Is there no ſuch Thing as Conſcience, becauſe it may be falſly pretended? Or ſhall a ſober and Moral Conſcience be deny'd Indulgence, becauſe ſome or other may, or do miſuſe it? And that He may have ſomething to think on; I aſk if thoſe Calamities were the Effects of a Toleration? If ſo, pray when was there one to do us ſo much Miſchief? The Difficulty, I know, he will have to find one, makes me aſk him another Queſtion: If Eaſe to Men in that Reſpect, were not the Way of greateſt Safety to the Publick, at leaſt, fit to be tried. I muſt ſay, this Gentle-Man takes too many Things for granted, and needs a very merciful Adverſary: One that will do leſs than not exact the uttermoſt Farthing, though he himſelf will reap where he hath not Sown, and Compel Conformity where he cannot convince. The very Point, he ſays, His Grace has with ſo much Juſtice laſht the Calviniſts for, and that he himſelf did but juſt now call Inhumane and Blaſphemous.

Good Nature, with all that little Prudence that falls to my Share, makes it eaſier to me to believe that a Chriſtian Toleration were the beſt Way to prevent the 1685. Miſchiefs that are ſaid to be the Effects of it. I ſay, by all Means Secure the Government; But withal, pray let us ſee if that may not be done, by ſome other and eaſier Method; It is Pity that it ſhould coſt the Liberties or Eſtates of ſo vaſt a People as do diſſent, and, I would hope, without ſo much as an ill Thought to the King or his Government.

But he is ſo in love with the Chaſe, that without any more to do, he ſends us to the French King, p. 29. To take Meaſures for England in point of Religion: Which is pretty well for an Engliſhman and a Proteſtant, and perhaps a Doctor too.

This in any Man had not been well, but in an Engliſh Proteſtant, with his Leave, is Impious, ſince it is to draw that King's Severity into Example, and render it a Prudence to be imitated here. A Notion, he has taught me to call, in him, Atheiſtical, becauſe it cannot be done by a Proteſtant, Whoſe Conſcience, as he ſays, will not let him be of any, and of all Religions. This yields little Conſolation to the French Proteſtants: And if he would but think well upon it, not too much to the Engliſh Church; For, if he ſays true, That Lewis the Fourteenth does well to compel an Union of his Subjects in his own Religion; He has recommended a Policy that goes a great Way to diſcharge the King of his Promiſe, and make us all of his: I don't know whether Coleman's Letters ſay ſo much as this, that we made the Proof of the Plot. This may make Roman Catholicks amends for Page 27, 28, 29.

To conclude: He is ſo fond of the Inſtance, that he appeals to Crown'd Heads in General; If a Toleration be not inconſiſtent with their Safety. A Man had need be well aſſured, at leaſt as far as an Invulnerable Conſcience, to try his Appeal, but that I am, and therefore join Iſſue with him; ſubmitting with all my Heart, to their Royal Evidence in the Deciſion of the Point: But becauſe it requires more Room than agrees with the Succeſs of this Reply, in an Age that loves not length, I have choſen to make it a Diſcourſe of it ſelf, and refer him thither: The Title, A Perſwaſive to Moderation: And ſhall conclude this with the Wiſe and Chriſtian Judgment of King CHARLES the Firſt, in his Advice to the late King.

“ Take Heed (ſays he) of abetting any Factions, your Partial Adhering to any “ one Side, gains you not ſo great Advantages in ſome Men's Hearts, Who are prone “ to be of their King's Religion, as it loſeth you in Others; Who think themſelves “ and their Profeſſion, firſt Deſpiſed, and then Perſecuted by You. A Chriſtian “ Toleration often Diſſipates their Strength, whom Rougher Oppoſition Fortifies. This was the Counſel of a Crowned Head: The Judgment of his Adverſity: Always the Soundeſt: Reſentments could not Blind it, nor Revenge of Wrongs, Precipitate it. In which, he acted the Chriſtian Prince, and not the Amilcar.

Let us then remember his Counſel with his Afflictions, and the one the more endear the other to us; leſt we deſpiſe ſome of the beſt Fruits of the Autumn of his Life, to wit, his Wiſdom and Goodneſs, that the Guſts of Time and Troubles he lay under did not ſhake; and which he has recommended to us for a Guide in Future Times, to prevent them.

ANIMADVERSIONS on the APOLOGY of the Clamorous Squire, againſt the Duke of Buckingham's SECONDS, as Men of no Conſcience.

The INTRODUCTION.

IT is a Judgment upon ſome Men, not only to miſtake, but to refuſe to be informed; as it is the worſt of Natures to be afraid that other Men ſhould be in the Right.

All Diſſenters muſt be in the Wrong, whether they be or no: And they muſt not mean any Thing that is Good, by good Words, whether they do or no. Though it were

were that they ſhould ſay, they would not have the Government or National Church deſtroy'd, and only pray for a little Room to exerciſe their own Way quietly, and that they will pray for, and pay Tribute cheerfully to their Auſpicious Cæſar.

And why all this Unkindneſs and Injuſtice, but for fear ſuch Men of Wrath and Intereſt ſhould want a Pretence to deſtroy them? Which, in my Opinion, ſhews them ill Sons of the Church, that unwillingly believe well of others, and had rather they were in the Wrong than in the Right.

For in all the late Pamphlets againſt Liberty of Conſcience, there's not one Word of winning one poor Diſſenter to the Church, no more than of Tolerating them out of the Church. But how peaceable ſoever he be, he is caſt out for a Veſſel of Wrath, good for nothing but to be Hang'd here, and Damn'd hereafter.

It is a Melancholy Proſpect for him, but not without Inſtruction, and ſome Hope: For Extremes do the Authors of them no Good: And theſe Flaſhes may be but a Lightning before Death, I mean, of Severity.

It is always darkeſt before Day: Eaſe and Liberty of Conſcience, for all this, may yet dawn under the Government of our Brave King.

And who would not hope a little longer, that has ſtaid all this While? Will other Princes give better Terms in their Countries, or keep them better? Let's then be Patient and Humble, and pray God to mollify the Hearts, even of them that hate us. Vincit qui patitur. And ſo I come to the ſevere Gentleman againſt the Duke of BUCKINGHAM and his SECONDS, for Men of No Conſcience; in which we ſhall have a Meaſure of his, of his own giving, and that will ſhew it to be none of the beſt.

Animadverſions on the Apology, &c.

HE begins, Page 3, with the Loyalty of the Houſe of Commons, and the Reaſon of his Judgment, to wit, If we conſider, Who has choſen them, and Who are choſen. Now, no Body doubts their Loyalty, without this lucky Reaſon given by the Squire, of Who choſe them, and Who are choſen. The Caſe is plain, and needed not his officious Note upon the Houſe, for Spectacles to the People.

But if it be ſo, The Diſſenters Inſolence is inſufferable in their Pleas for Liberty of Conſcience. Which I take to be a Reflection upon that Great Aſſembly; it prejudges their Wiſdom and Goodneſs. What knows he which Way Reaſon of State may incline their Judgment; or what Motives may induce their Debates and Reſolves. Is it Inſolence, and that unſufferable too, for Men humbly to pray, they may have Leave to ſay their Prayers in another Way than that which is common?

If any Man has done Ill, muſt the Principle ſuffer, and the Party pay the Reckoning, eſpecially if neither be in the Fault? Here's a Loyal Parliament, Ergo, A Million of People muſt be Ruin'd. A fine Chriſtian, and as good a Stateſman. I hope, there's Preference of one, without Deſtruction of the reſt, and Rebuke without Ruin. The Diſſenter may live, though the Church-man only be preferr'd. And only let him be preferr'd, ſo that t'other may not be confounded.

He ſays, Pag. 3, 4, Liberty of Conſcience has embroil'd three Nations in Blood, and yet the Patrons of it allow'd it not to one another, as Preſbyterians, Independents, &c: Nor did they to King Charles the Firſt, the Church of England, or Roman Catholicks. He might have added the Quakers too, that ſuffered more Cruelties than any other Party, under them.

But I pray, How does this ſhake the Reaſonableneſs of Liberty of Conſcience? For, Firſt, That was not any Part of the ſtated Quarrel between the K. and Parliament. Secondly, If they that made the War, diſown'd it, and deny'd it, How were they Patrons of it? Or how did that Principle come to lay three Kingdoms in Blood? It ſeems then that Liberty of Conſcience muſt pay the Reckoning of the Men that are againſt it; or that becauſe thoſe Men were againſt it (and therein doubtleſs did very Ill) therefore the Church of England would do ill to give it. Make this good, and he ſhall be my Oracle.

But why? For Fear they ſhould be undone by giving it, becauſe they were undone that did not give it. Mighty well argued! This Gentleman bids for the firſt Doctor next A C T at Oxford.

You would not give it to me, that you wou'd not, and therefore why ſhould I give it to you? No ſuch Matter; Truly, I don't intend it. This is pretty Logick! 'tis Demonſtration, backward. But Paſſion, though it rules Women, it ſhould not rule in the Church. Wiſe and Good Men conſider the Right and Prudence of a Thing, to which private Paſſions are made to ſubmit.

Page 5. But the Proteſtant Diſſenters deſerve no Liberty, becauſe in Seventy Two they were for Liberty with the Papiſts, in Eighty without them, and now in Eighty Five it is not only lawful, but neceſſary, that the Roman Catholicks have their Liberty too.

Granting this to be ſo, What's that to Liberty of Conſcience? It only ſhews the Partiality of the Men, and perhaps that would have been granted him for a Word's aſking. This Proves nothing againſt the Principle, though the Squire upon this ſo fiercely concludes all the Villanies in the World againſt Liberty of Conſcience. But when he has done all he can, they were not Diſſenters, under Correction, that in Eighty proſecuted the Roman Catholicks, and refuſed them Liberty, but Church of England-men, and ſuch of them too, as would not allow it to ſome Proteſtant Diſſenters, for Fear that Papiſts ſhould hide themſelves amongſt them, and they therefore muſt ſwallow the moſt ſevere Teſts that could be fram'd to ſhew themſelves not Friends to that Communion. And, to tell Truth, and I beſeech the Gentleman not to take it amiſs, that I ſay, the Diſſenters were invited to the Share they had in Oppoſition to Popery, by Church-men, ay, they were for a Comprehenſion, to make the Church ſtand broader, the better to receive the Aſſaults of Rome without Hazard. And had the Diſſenter been more modeſt to his Miſtreſs, and not ſo Malepert and officious, he had doubtleſs been upon better Terms with her now. However, her Anger muſt not endure for ever, nor deſtroy her Servant for being too buſy or eager in the Service ſhe call'd him to.

Well, But the Duke of Buckingham*'s* Seconds are Men of no Conſcience, becauſe they charge the Excluſion upon the Members of the Church of England. This is ſo bitterly reſented, that we are told, That an honeſt Turk would have ſcorn'd ſo baſe a Practice, within five Years after the Fact, and in a Caſe wherein the whole Nation knows the contrary.

If Excluſion, or no Excluſion, be to determine the true from the falſe Church of England-men, as Page 7, the Propoſition will be doubly falſe; For there are Men that were not for Excluſion, that were not Members of the Church of England, and there are Members of the Church of England, that were for the Excluſion. And to this Charge in the Reply and the Defence, he gives no Anſwer but Anger, which for a Man to avoid, when the Queſtion lies upon it, and that grounded upon Matter of Fact, ſhews his Fear of Succeſs, and that, the Weakneſs of his Cauſe. But ſince the Diſſenters by Wholeſale are to bear the Blame, I do affirm the Excluders were Conformiſts, and are yet Communicants of your Church, and the greateſt Part of them upon Education and conſtant Practice too: And that this is Truth, and no Slander, read the Liſt, and 'tis a Demonſtration. Nay, I challenge the Gentleman to name ſix Perſons of all the Excluders, that diſſent from the Eſtabliſh'd Church.

Nor is this of Yeſterday; for if we look back, we ſhall ſee the moſt celebrated Biſhops of your Church barring the Succeſſion in the Law of the 13th and 27th of Q. Eliz. and when that Queen pleaded Conſcience in not aſſenting to a Law to put our King's Great-Grandmother, Mary Queen of Scots to Death, the ſame Reverend Biſhops undertook to remove the Scruple; yet nothing but, Away with theſe Diſloyal Diſſenters.

Own them then ingenuouſly, that they are Members of your own Church, and that their Defection began within your ſelves; and that, for all your Invectives, and turning them over now to the Diſſenters, becauſe you are aſhamed of them, they are in Communion with you ſtill, and daily Conformiſts to the Worſhip, and as ſuch, are admitted to the accuſtomed Rites and Privileges of your Church. Page 7. To charge all Addreſſes, and the Oxford Parliament, to the Account of Diſſenters, is not wiſe, any more than true, for it is to give the greater Numbers to the Diſſenting Party, ſince it is plain, how unequal they were that fell in with that Excluding Humour in the Kingdom.

But this is not all he has ſaid, to prevent the Legiſlative Goodneſs to Diſſenters. They muſt not have Liberty, leſt it be charged upon the Government as a Deſign to bring in Popery and Arbitrary Power.

I remember a Story of Harry Martin, that when Cromwell came to diſſolve the Rump, to juſtify his Action, among other Things, he accuſed ſome of their Members of an Evil Life, ſaying, Here ſits a Drunkard, and there (pointing to him) ſits an Whore-maſter; Harry Martin ſitting between two ſober grave Men, jogg'd them, ſaying, Which of you Two does he mean? The Diſſenters muſt be blam'd by thoſe that are Guilty. 'Tis hard to ſuffer for Faults, and be chid by them that did them.

No, 'twas the Gentlemen of that Communion that impeach'd the Prerogative, in the Declaration of Indulgence, and ſet the Political Capacity of the King in Oppoſition to his National, and to make their Buſineſs more popular, beſtowed that Comment upon it, of a Deſign in the Court to let in Popery and Arbitrary Government.

Upon the whole Matter, 'tis not unworthy of ſome Thought, that this Way of making Whigs and Fanaticks of all, that in every Point come not up to an Hair, though otherwiſe Men of Virtue, Piety, Wiſdom, and perfectly Church-men, may prove of ill Conſequence; for it narrows, where it is Wiſdom to enlarge, and greatens, where Prudence enclines to leſſen. I mean the Credit of Number.

This makes me the more admire one Expreſſion, viz. pag. 8, That the Members of the Church of England have turn'd over to the Diſſenters all the Excluders, and laid the Bill of Excluſion at their Doors, and waſh'd her Hands of them, as Pilate did of our Saviour's Blood. Where, beſides the falſe Politicks of making ſo many Thouſand Diſſenters in two Lines, and that without all Hope of Recovery, he unhappily makes the Church of England-men cowardly Pilate, and the Excluders to anſwer the Place of our bleſſed Saviour. A pretty Alluſion to credit the Church, and diſgrace Excluders.

This is not the happieſt Part of his Apology.

But I would have hoped, that a Man who ſhews not to want a Share of Wit and Expreſſion, ſhould be ſo diſingenuous, as from the Author's of the Defenſive Sheet ſaying, “ Take off the Thing that Pinches, and ſee then whether the “ Church-men or the Fanaticks and Catholicks will be moſt governable. To infer, Perſecute the Church-men, beſtow the Biſhopricks and Church-Revenues amongſt the Catholicks and Fanaticks, and ſee which will be the beſt qualified, and moſt dutiful Subjects. A rare Expedient.

May I not better ſay, a rare Conſequence? As if eaſing Diſſenters, and not wringing their Backs, were ſtripping the Church, and clothing Diſſenters in Velvet, than which, nothing leſs was thought of. This Incharity and Injuſtice ruin all. Such Men cannot hope to eſcape the Judgment of God, that are ſo Injurious in their Judgment to Men.

But he is angry with his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, for leading the Dance; and if a Dance it muſt be, it is an old Country One, at which he has been Excellent of long Time, And who would not Dance to ſuch a Fidler? But how Tranſubſtantiation comes to be beholding to the Duke, whoſe Concluſion excludes it utterly, of which a Boy of Seven Years Old is Judge, let the Gentleman conſider once more.

However, his Grace may happen to aſk this Gentleman once in his Life, If he be the Man that charges him with leading the Dance to Men of No Honour, No Conſcience, No Honeſty, and that advocates a Cauſe of ſo much Treaſon and Impiety, as is laid to the Charge of Liberty of Conſcience.

To the Diſſenter's Objection, Pag. 10. he ſays, in their Name, That all the ill Things they have done, is becauſe there are Laws made againſt them, and that they would be quiet, if they might have their Liberty; and tells us, That their ill and diſloyal Practices in Queen Elizabeth's Time, drew the firſt Law upon them, and that was the 35th of the Queen. But that is no Anſwer to the Objection, for they were made Dangerous, as Conventicles are now, by Suſpicion and Prevention, not that they did any ill Thing deſerving that Severity; but Church Refractorineſs, Biſhop Whitgift was pleaſed to Tranſlate into Sedition: The Old Way, Indeed my Lord, they are Enemies to Cæſar, and Exalters of another King, One JESUS. So that 'tis begging the Queſtion, to ground this Law on the Seditious Practice of the Diſſenters; and we are to learn when any of our Time had a Toleration to abuſe, or when any ſuch Thing was in being, to charge our Political, or Eccleſiaſtical Calamities upon. I only pray to be informed, I ſay, When, Where, and How? For I am intirely of his Mind, pag. 10. That Wiſe Men will try as few Concluſions in Government (if ſettled) as is poſſible; and yet when only One Concluſion is left to be tryed, 1686. tryed, and that ſo neceſſarily prayed and preſt, methinks 'tis not unwiſe to make the Experiment, when Mercy, Goodneſs and Charity are on that Side.

But alas! the Author of this Apology is not contented to faſten upon an Occaſion given, and improve it with all the Aggravation of an unkind Nature, but turns Fortune-Teller, and reads us a Lecture by the flying of his Jackdaw, of our own Inſides and future Devices: A downright Divination and Enthuſiaſm, as if he had been on an Errand to Delphos. Hear him, pag. 11. That we were all thunder ſtruck, dreaded a Prince we had offended, and that had ſo much Diligence and Courage to repay us, and therefore turned Trimmers, went to Church, took the Sacrament, gave up the Game, ſet up for Loyal: And that in this Melancholy Frame, it was his Grace found us when he publiſh'd his Eſſay, and that no meaner Perſon durſt do it, though enough follow him.

Now the firſt Part of the Story is falſe, and the laſt ſilly and ſaucy, as well as Untrue. I ſee Diſſenters Vertues (as few as they are) muſt be their Vices for a Need: Their Quietneſs is from the Stroke of Guilt, and their Conformity only Hypocriſie for Safety: They have a fine Time of it, and are mightily oblig'd to this Gentleman's Goodneſs and Juſtice, much Good may it do them. But the Duke out of Meaſure, is made Brave in a bad Cauſe, a Cataline at leaſt, or if you will, a Corah, that is, leading them back to Egypt again: A mighty Charge; and but that it is not True, 'twere an Impeachable Buſineſs; and becauſe it is not, let this Gentleman take Heed of a Scandalum Magnatum.

But this Cry for Liberty here, is to break out with Argyle's Plot in Scotland. This is ſhrewdly hit. Politick every bit of it. I thought Argyle's Presbyterians and Liberty had not agreed ſo well together: I have heard ſuch Folks hold as ill an Opinion of it, as this Gentleman, for his Ears.

But beſides all this, he tells us, Our Time is ſhort, we muſt in pure Deſpair do Feats; and what are they but to maul and diſgrace the Church Party at any Rate? But if they will give us as good Quarter as they have receiv'd from the three or four Pamphlets for Liberty, I dare make the Bargain, that the Diſſenters ſhall look no farther after Biſhopricks, nor Church-Livings, and I would to God it might reſt there.

What a Stir is here, that Men pray to be quiet? O! but we know you won't be quiet, and therefore you ſhan't be quiet: There is nothing ſo idle, as being very Cunning, and making every Thing a Plot. So Tacitus makes Tiberius to have a deep one, in going to the Houſe of Office: To be ſure it was a neceſſary one.

His Concluſion is hard upon us, that Advocate, the Cauſe of tender Conſciences, ſaying, We are Men of no Honour, no Conſcience, nor Honeſty, but leaves the Proof to be underſtood.

Certainly he cannot have too much of thoſe good Qualities, that advocates Tertullus-like, againſt tender Conſciences, and to give him his Due, he is ſenſible of it; for he preſently acknowledges his Sharpneſs, but excuſes it with the Baſeneſs of thoſe that dare affirm the Excluders were Church of England-men. But for all that, it falls out to be true, and nothing but Truth pinches any Body.

He concludes in Defence of the Church of England's Severity, and ſays, Tell me how Chriſt can be Head of oppoſite Bodies? But what then? Muſt you perſecute where your Head forbids it? Though he is not Head of oppoſite Bodies, he does not deſtroy the Bodies of which he is not Head. But what does this Man think of an oppoſite Head and Body, the Head of one Mind, and the Body of another? An Head and no Member. Riddle me, Riddle me, What's this?

He bids us, Conſider this following Place of Scripture, and bleſs the World with a Comment, Rev. 11. 20.

Notwithſtanding I have a few Things againſt thee, becauſe thou ſuffereſt (or tolerateſt) that Woman, Jezebel, which calleth her ſelf a Propheteſs, (a godly Woman) to teach and ſeduce my Servants to commit Fornication, and to eat Things ſacrificed to Idols. Now, ſays he, I would fain know how long Toleration has been a Chriſtian Virtue, Rev. 11.

By this, never truſt me, one would think him a Divine, every Inch of him, that can ſo cleverly take Not Tolerating IN Communion, for Not Tolerating OUT of Communion.

But is this the Diſſenters Caſe? Have they aſk'd for the Churches, or do they uſurp the Pulpits? Or out of your Communion either, do they teach the Uſe of Fornication and Idolatrous Food? What Stuff is this for a Man of ſome Wit and Words? Beſides, Jezebel was a Perſecutor, and believ'd a Whore, which, with all the Manners I have, I would fain know to whoſe Church it is the moſt Part of our Engliſh Jezebel's go?

For his Query, How long Toleration has been a Chriſtian Virtue? 'Tis plain, ever ſince Chriſt came, That bid the Tares ſhould grow with the Wheat 'till the Harveſt, which his own bleſſed Comment ſays, Is the End of the World, where I ſhould be glad to meet this Gentleman, upon my Word. 'Till then, I would fain have him and his Friends let us alone, and then do their Worſt.

> Luke 9. 54, 55, 56, They ſaid, Lord, wilt thou that we command that Fire come down from Heaven, and conſume them, even as Elias did? But Jeſus turned about, and rebuked them, and ſaid, Ye know not what Spirit ye are of: For the Son of Man is not come to deſtroy Men's Lives, but to ſave them.

An Expoſition upon which, becauſe the Queſtion is perfectly in the Text, is humbly begg'd,

Of His, to Command,

With Liberty of Conſcience.

A PERSWASIVE to Moderation to Church-Diſſenters, in Prudence and Conſcience: Humbly ſubmitted to the KING and His Great Council.

The EPISTLE.

HAVING of late Time obſerv'd the Heat, Averſion and Scorn with which ſome Men have treated all Thoughts of Eaſe to Church Diſſenters, I confeſs I had a more than ordinary Curioſity to examine the Grounds thoſe Gentlemen went upon: For I could not tell how to think Moderation ſhould be a Vice, where Chriſtianity was a Virtue, when the Great Doctor of that Religion commands, that Our Moderaton be known unto all Men; and why? For the Lord is at Hand: And what to do? but to judge our Rancor, and retaliate and puniſh our Bitterneſs of Spirit. And, to ſay true, 'tis a ſevere Reflection we draw upon our ſelves, that though Pagan Emperors could endure the Addreſſes of Primitive Chriſtians, and Chriſtian Cæſars receive the Apologies of Infidels, for Indulgence, yet it ſhould be thought, of ſome Men, an Offence to ſeek it, or have it of a Chriſtian Prince, whoſe Intereſt I dare ſay it is, and who himſelf ſo lately wanted it: But the Conſideration of the Reaſon of this Offence, will increaſe our Admiration; for they tell us, 'tis dangerous to the Prince to ſuffer it, while the Prince is himſelf a Diſſenter: This Difficulty is beyond all Skill to remove, that it ſhould be againſt the Intereſt of a Diſſenting Prince to indulge Diſſent. For though it will be granted there are Diſſenters on differing Principles from thoſe of the Prince, yet they are ſtill Diſſenters, and Diſſent being the Prince's Intereſt, it will naturally follow, that thoſe Diſſenters are in the Intereſt of the Prince, whether they think on it or no.

Intereſt will not lye: Men embark'd in the ſame Veſſel, ſeek the Safety of the Whole in their Own, whatever other Differences they may have. And Self-Safety is the higheſt worldly Security a Prince can have; for though all Parties would rejoyce their own Principles prevailed, yet every one is more ſolicitous about it's own Safety, than the other's Verity. Wherefore it cannot be unwiſe, by the Security of All, to make it the Intereſt as well as Duty of All, to advance that of the Publick.

1686. Angry Things, then, ſet aſide, As Matters now are, What is beſt to be done? This I take to be the Wiſe Man's Queſtion, as to conſider and anſwer it, will be his Buſineſs. Moderation is a Chriſtian Duty, and it has ever been the Prudent Man's Practice. For thoſe Governments that have uſed it in their Conduct, have ſucceeded beſt in all Ages.

I remember it is made in Livy the Wiſdom of the Romans, that they relaxed their Hand to the Privernates, and thereby made them moſt faithful to their Intereſt. And it prevailed ſo much with the Petilians, that they would endure any Extremity from Hannibal, rather than deſert their Friendſhip, even then, when the Romans diſcharged their Fidelity, and ſent them the Deſpair of knowing they could not relieve them. So did one Act of Humanity overcome the Faliſci above Arms: Which confirms that noble Saying of Seneca, Mitius imperanti Melius paretur, the mildeſt Conduct is beſt obeyed. A Truth Celebrated by Grotius and Campanella: Practiſed, doubtleſs, by the braveſt Princes: For CYRUS exceeded, when he built the Jews a Temple, and himſelf no Jew: ALEXANDER aſtoniſhed the Princes of his Train with the profound Veneration he paid the High Prieſt of that People: And AUGUSTUS was ſo far from ſuppreſſing the Jewiſh Worſhip, that he ſent Hecatombs to Jeruſalem to increaſe their Devotion. Moderation fill'd the Reigns of the moſt Renowned Cæſars: And Story ſays, they were Neros and Caligulas that loved Cruelty.

But others tell us that Diſſenters are moſtly Antimonarchical, and ſo not to be indulged, and that the Agreement of the Church of England and Rome in Monarchy and Hierarchy, with their Nearneſs in other Things ſhould oblige her to grant the Roman Catholicks a ſpecial Eaſe, excluſive of the other Diſſenters. But with the Leave of thoſe Worthy Gentlemen, I would ſay, no Body is againſt that which is for him: And that the Averſion apprehended to be in ſome againſt the Monarchy, rather comes from Intereſt than Principle: For Governments were never deſtroy'd by the Intereſts they preſerve.

In the next Place, it is as plain, that there is a Fundamental Difference between thoſe Churches in Religion and Intereſt. In Religion, it appears by a Compariſon of the Thirty Nine Articles with the Doctrine of the Council of Trent. In Intereſt, they differ; Fundamentally, becauſe our Church is in the Actual Poſſeſſion of the Churches and Livings that the other Church claims. What better Mixture then can theſe two Churches make than that of Iron and Clay? Nor do I think it well judged, or wiſe, in any that pretend to be Sons of the Church of England, to ſeek an Accommodation from the Topick of Affinity, ſince 'tis that ſome of her Diſſenters have always objected, and ſhe as conſtantly deny'd to be true.

I ſay, this Way of Reconciling or Indulging Roman Catholicks ſtumbles far greater Numbers of People of nearer Creeds, and gives the Church of England the Lye. But ſuppoſe the Trick took, and they only of all Diſſenters had Indulgence, yet Their Paucity conſidered, I am ſure, a Pair of Sir Kenelm Digby's Breeches would ſet with as good a Grace upon the late Lord Rocheſter's Dwarf. Upon the whole Matter, Let Men have Eaſe, and they will keep it; For thoſe that might plot to get it, would not plot to loſe it. Men love the Bridge they need and paſs: And that Prince who has his People faſt by Intereſt, holds them by the ſtrongeſt human Tye; for other Courſes have failed as often as they have been tried. Let us then once try a True Liberty: Never did the Circumſtances of any Kingdom lye more open and fair to ſo bleſſed an Accommodation than we do at this Time.

But we are told, The King has promiſed to maintain the Church of England: I grant it: But if the Church of England claims the King's Promiſe of Protection, her Diſſenters cannot forget That of his Clemency: And as they were both great, and admirably diſtinguiſhed, ſo by no Means are they inconſiſtent or impracticable.

Will not his Juſtice let him be wanting in the One? And can his Greatneſs of Mind let him leave the Other behind him in the Storm, unpity'd and unhelp'd? Pardon me, we have not to do with an inſenſible Prince, but one that has been Touch'd with our Infirmities: More than any Body fit to judge our Cauſe, by the Share he once had in it. Who ſhould give Eaſe like the Prince that has wanted it? To ſuffer for his own Conſcience, looked Great; but to deliver other Men's, were Glorious. It is a Sort of paying the Vows of his Adverſity, and it cannot therefore be done by any one elſe, with ſo much Juſtice and Example.

Far be it from me to ſolicite any Thing in Diminution of the Juſt Rights of the Church of England: Let her reſt protected where ſhe is. But I hope, none will be thought to intend her Wrong, for refuſing to underſtand the King's Promiſe to her, in a Ruinous Senſe to all Others; and I am ſure ſhe would underſtand her own Intereſt better, if ſhe were of the ſame Mind. For it is morally impoſſible that a Conſcientious Prince can be thought to have ty'd himſelf to compel others to a Communion, that himſelf cannot tell how to be of; or that any thing can oblige him to ſhake the Firmneſs of thoſe he has confirmed by his own Royal Example.

Having then ſo Illuſtrious an Inſtance of Integrity, as the Hazard of the Loſs of Three Crowns for Conſcience. Let it at leaſt excuſe Diſſenters Conſtancy, and provoke the Friends of the Succeſſion to Moderation, that no Man may loſe his Birth-Right for his Perſwaſion, and us to live Dutifully, and ſo Peaceably under our own Vine, and under our own Fig-Tree, with Glory to God on High, to the King Honour, and Good-will to all Men.

A PERSWASIVE to Moderation, &c.

MOderation, the Subject of this Diſcourſe, is in plainer Engliſh, Liberty of Conſcience to Church Diſſenters: A Cauſe I have, with all Humility, undertaken to plead, againſt the Prejudices of the Times.

That there is ſuch a Thing as Conſcience, and the Liberty of it, in Reference to Faith and Worſhip towards God, muſt not be denied, even by thoſe, that are moſt ſcandal'd at the Ill Uſe ſome ſeem to have made of ſuch Pretences. But to ſettle the Terms: By Conſcience, I underſtand the Apprehenſion and Perſwaſion a Man has of his Duty to God: By Liberty of Conſcience, I mean, A Free and Open Profeſſion and Exerciſe of that Duty; eſpecially in Worſhip: But I always premiſe this Conſcience to keep within the Bounds of Morality, and that it be neither Frantick nor Miſchievous, but a Good Subject, a Good Child, a Good Servant, in all the Affairs of Life: As exact to yield to Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's, as jealous of withholding from God the Thing that is God's.

In brief, he that acknowledges the civil Government under which he lives, and that maintains no Principle hurtful to his Neighbour in his Civil Property.

For he that in any Thing violates his Duty to theſe Relations, cannot be ſaid to obſerve it to God, who ought to have his Tribute out of it. Such do not reject their Prince, Parent, Maſter or Neighbour, but God who enjoyns that Duty to them. Thoſe Pathetick Words of Chriſt will naturally enough reach the Caſe, In that ye did it not to them, ye did it not to me; for Duty to ſuch Relations hath a Divine Stamp: And Divine Right runs through more Things of the World, and Acts of our Lives, than we are aware of: And Sacrilege may be committed againſt more than the Church. Nor will a Dedication to God, of the Robbery from Man, expiate the Guilt of Diſobedience: For though Zeal could turn Goſſip to Theft, his Altars would renounce the Sacrifice.

The Conſcience then that I ſtate, and the Liberty I pray, carrying ſo great a Salvo and Deference to publick and private Relations, no ill Deſign can, with any Juſtice, be fix'd upon the Author, or Reflection upon the Subject, which by this Time, I think, I may venture to call a Toleration.

But to this ſo much craved, as well as needed, Toleration, I meet with two Objections of weight, the ſolving of which will make Way for it in this Kingdom. And the firſt is a Diſbelief of the Poſſibility of the Thing. Toleration of Diſſenting Worſhips from that eſtabliſh'd, is not practicable (ſay ſome) without Danger to the State, with which it is interwoven. This is Political. The other Objection is, That admitting Diſſenters to be in the Wrong, (which is always premiſed by the National Church) ſuch Latitude were the Way to keep up the Diſ-union, and inſtead of compelling them into a better Way, leave them in the Poſſeſſion and Purſuit of their old Errors, This is Religious. I think I have given the Objections fairly, 'twill be my next Buſineſs to anſwer them as fully.

The Strength of the firſt Objection againſt this Liberty, is the Danger ſuggeſted to the State; the Reaſon is, the National Form being interwoven with the Frame of the Government. But this ſeems to me only ſaid, and not only (with Submiſſion) not prov'd, but not true: For the Eſtabliſh'd Religion and Worſhip are no other Ways interwoven with the Government, than that the Government makes 1686. Profeſſion of them, and by divers Laws has made them the Currant Religion, and required all the Members of the State to conform to it.

This is nothing but what may as well be done by the Government, for any other Perſwaſion, as that. 'Tis true, 'tis not eaſy to change an Eſtabliſhed Religion, nor is that the Queſtion we are upon; but State Religions have been chang'd without the Change of the States. We ſee this in the Governments of Germany and Denmark upon the Reformation: But more clearly and near our ſelves, in the Caſe of Henry the Eighth, Edward the Sixth, Queen Mary and Elizabeth; for the Monarchy ſtood, the Family remained and ſucceeded under all the Revolutions of State-Religion, which could not have been, had the Propoſition been generally true.

The Change of Religion then, does not neceſſarily change the Government, or alter the State; and if ſo, a fortiori, Indulgence of Church-Diſſenters, does not neceſſarily hazard a Change of the State, where the preſent State-Religion or Church remains the ſame; for That I premiſe.

Some may ſay, That it were more facile to change from one National Religion to another, than to maintain the Monarchy and Church, againſt the Ambition and Faction of divers Diſſenting Parties. But this is improbable at leaſt. For it were to ſay, That it is an eaſier Thing to change a whole Kingdom, than with the Sovereign Power, followed with Armies, Navies, Judges, Clergy, and all the Conformiſts of the Kingdom, to ſecure the Government from the Ambition and Faction of Diſſenters, as differing in their Intereſts within themſelves, as in their Perſwaſions; and were they united, have neither Power to awe, nor Rewards to allure to their Party. They can only be formidable, when headed by the Sovereign. They may ſtop a Gap, or make, by his Acceſſion, a Ballance: Otherwiſe, 'till 'tis harder to fight broken and divided Troops, than an entire Body of an Army, it will be always eaſier to maintain the Government under a Toleration of Diſſenters, than in a total Change of Religion, and even then it ſelf has not fail'd to have been preſerved. But whether it be more or leſs eaſy, is not our Point; if they are many, the Danger is of Exaſperating, not of making them eaſy; for the Force of our Queſtion is, Whether ſuch Indulgence be ſafe to the State? And here we have the firſt and laſt, the beſt and greateſt Evidence for us, which is Fact and Experience, the Journal and Reſolves of Time, and Treaſure of the Sage.

For, Firſt, The Jews, that had moſt to ſay for their Religion, and whoſe Religion was Twin to their State, (both being joined, and ſent with Wonders from Heaven) Indulged Strangers in their Religious Diſſents. They required but the Belief of the Noachical Principles, which were common to the World: No Idolater, and but a Moral Man, and he had his Liberty, ay, and ſome Privileges too, for he had an Apartment in the Temple, and this without Danger to the Government. Thus Maimonides, and others of their own Rabbies, and Grotius out of them.

The Wiſdom of the Gentiles was very admirable in this, that though they had many Sects of Philoſophers among them, each diſſenting from the other in their Principles, as well as Diſcipline, and that not only in Phyſical Things, but Points Metaphyſical, in which ſome of the Fathers were not free, the School-men deeply engaged, and our preſent Academies but too much perplexed; yet they indulged them and the beſt Livers with ſingular Kindneſs: The greateſt Stateſmen and Captains often becoming Patrons of the Sects they beſt affected, honouring their Readings with their Preſence and Applauſe. So far were thoſe Ages, which we have made as the Original of Wiſdom and Politeneſs, from thinking Toleration an Error of State, or dangerous to the Government. Thus Plutarch, Strabo, Laertius, and others.

To theſe Inſtances I may add the Latitude of Old Rome, that had almoſt as many Deities as Houſes: For Varro tells us of no leſs than Thirty Thouſand ſeveral Sacra, or Religious Rites among her People, and yet without a Quarrel: Unhappy Fate of Chriſtianity! the beſt of Religions, and yet her Profeſſors maintain leſs Charity than Idolaters, while it ſhould be peculiar to them. I fear, it ſhews us to have but little of it at Heart.

But nearer Home, and in our own Time, we ſee the Effects of a diſcreet Indulgence, even to Emulation. Holland, that Bog of the World, neither Sea nor dry Land, now the Rival of talleſt Monarchs; not by Conqueſts, Marriages, or Acceſſion of Royal Blood, the uſual Ways to Empire, but by her own ſuperlative Clemency and Induſtry; for the one was the Effect of the other: She cheriſhed her People, whatſoever were their Opinions, as the reaſonable Stock of the Country, the Heads and Hands of her Trade and Wealth; and making them eaſy in the main Point, their Conſcience, ſhe became Great by them; This made her fill with People, and they filled her with Riches and Strength.

And if it ſhould be ſaid, She is upon her Declenſion for all that. I anſwer, All States muſt know it, nothing is here Immortal. Where are the Babylonian, Perſian, and Grecian Empires? And are not Lacedæmon, Athens, Rome and Carthage gone before her? Kingdoms and Commonwealths have their Births and Growths, their Declenſions and Deaths, as well as private Families and Perſons; But 'tis owing neither to the Armies of France, nor Navies of England, but her own Domeſtick Troubles.

Seventy Two ſticks in her Bones yet: The growing Power of the Prince of Orange, muſt, in ſome Degree, be an Ebb to that State's Strength; for they are not ſo unanimous and vigorous in their Intereſt as formerly: But were they ſecure againſt the Danger of their own Ambition and Jealouſy, any Body might inſure their Glory at five per Cent.. But ſome of their greateſt Men apprehending they are in their Climacterical Juncture, give up the Ghoſt, and care not, if they muſt fall, by what Hand it is.

Others chuſe a Stranger, and think one afar off will give the beſt Terms, and leaſt annoy them: Whilſt a conſiderable Party have choſen a Domeſtick Prince, Kin to their early Succeſſes by the Fore-father's Side (the Gallantry of his Anceſtors) And that his own Greatneſs and Security are wrapt up in theirs, and therefore modeſtly hope to find their Account in his Proſperity. But this is a Kind of Digreſſion, only before I leave it, I dare venture to add, that if the Prince of Orange changes not the Policies of that State, he will not change her Fortune, and he will mightily add to his own.

But perhaps I ſhall be told, That no Body doubts that Toleration is an agreeable Thing to a Commonwealth, where every one thinks he has a Share in the Government; ay, that the one is the Conſequence of the other, and therefore moſt carefully to be avoided by all Monarchical States. This indeed were ſhrewdly to the Purpoſe, in England, if it were but true. But I don't ſee how there can be one true Reaſon advanc'd in Favour of this Objection: Monarchies, as well as Commonwealths, ſubſiſting by the Preſervation of the People under them.

But, Firſt, if this were true, it would follow, by the Rule of Contraries, that a Republick could not ſubſiſt with Unity and Hierarchy, which is Monarchy in the Church; but it muſt, from ſuch Monarchy in Church, come to Monarchy in State too. But Venice, Genoa, Lucca, ſeven of the Cantons of Switzerland, (and Rome her ſelf, for ſhe is an Ariſtocracy) all under the loftieſt Hierarchy in Church, and where is no Toleration, ſhew in Fact, that the contrary is true.

But, Secondly, This Objection makes a Commonwealth the better Government of the Two, and ſo overthrows the Thing it would eſtabliſh. This is effectually done, if I know any thing, ſince a Commonwealth is hereby rendred a more copious, powerful and beneficial Government to Mankind, and is made better to anſwer Contingencies and Emergencies of State, becauſe this ſubſiſts either Way, but Monarchy not, if the Objection be true. The one proſpers by Union in Worſhip and Diſcipline, and by Toleration of Diſſenting Churches from the National. The other only by an Univerſal Conformity to a National Church. I ſay, this makes Monarchy (in it ſelf, doubtleſs, an admirable Government) leſs Powerful, leſs Extended, leſs Propitious, and finally leſs Safe to the People under it, than a Commonwealth; In that no Security is left to Monarchy under Diverſity of Worſhips, which yet no Man can defend or forbid, but may often arrive, as it hath in England, more than five Times, in the Two Laſt Ages. And truly 'tis natural for Men to chuſe to ſettle where they may be ſafeſt from the Power and Miſchief of ſuch Accidents of State.

Upon the whole Matter, it is to reflect the laſt Miſchief upon Monarchy, the worſt Enemies it has could hope to diſgrace, or endanger it by; ſince it is to tell the People under it, that they muſt either conform, or be deſtroy'd, or to ſave themſelves, turn Hypocrites, or change the Frame of the Government they live under. A Perplexity both to Monarch and People, that nothing can be greater, but the Comfort of knowing the Objection is Falſe. And that which ought to make every reaſonable Man of this Opinion, is the Cloud of Witneſſes that almoſt every Age of Monarchy affords us.

I will begin with that of Iſrael, the moſt exact and ſacred Pattern of Monarchy, begun by a valiant Man, tranſlated to the beſt, and improv'd by the wiſeſt of Kings, whoſe Miniſters were neither Fools, nor Fanaticks: Here we ſhall find Proviſion for Diſſenters: Their Proſelyti Domicilii were ſo far from being compelled to their National Rites, that they were expreſly forbid to obſerve them. Such were the Egyptians that came with them out of Egypt, the Gibeonites and Canaanites, a great People, that after their ſeveral Forms, worſhipt in an Apartment of the ſame Temple. The Jews with a Liturgy, they without one: The Jews had Prieſts, but theſe none: The Jews had Variety of Oblations, theſe People burnt Offerings only. All that was required of them was the natural Religion of Noah, in which the Acknowledgment and Worſhip of the true God, was, and it ſtill ought to be, the main Point; nay, ſo far were they from Coercive Conformity, that they did not ſo much as oblige them to obſerve their Sabbath, though one of the Ten Commandments: Grotius and Selden ſay more. Certainly this was great Indulgence, ſince ſo unſuitable an Uſage lookt like prophaning their Devotion, and a common Nuſance to their National Religion. One would think by this, that their Care lay on the Side of preſerving their Cult from the Touch or Acceſſion of Diſſenters, and not of forcing them, by undoing Penalties, to conform. This muſt needs be evident: For if God's Religion and Monarchy (for ſo we are taught to believe it) did not, and would not, at a Time when Religion lay leſs in the Mind, and more in Ceremony, compel Conformity from Diſſenters, we hope we have got the beſt Preſidents on our ſide.

But if this Inſtance be of moſt Authority, we have another very exemplary, and to our Point Pertinent; for it ſhews what Monarchy may do: It is yielded us from the famous Story of Mordecai. He, with his Jews, were in a bad plight with the King Ahaſuerus, by the ill Offices Haman did them: The Arguments he uſed were drawn from the common Topicks of Faction and Sedition, That they were an odd and dangerous People, under differing Laws of their own, and refuſed Obedience to his; So denying his Supremacy. Diſſenters with a witneſs: Things moſt tender to any Government.

The King thus incenſed, commands the Laws to be put in Execution, and decrees the Ruin of Mordecai with all the Jews: But the King is timely intreated, his Heart ſoftens, the Decree is revok'd, and Mordecai and his Friends ſaved. The Conſequence was, as extream Joy to the Jews, ſo Peace and Bleſſings to the King. And that which heightens the Example, is the Greatneſs and Infidelity of the Prince: Had the Inſtance been in a Jew, it might have been placed to his greater Light, or Piety: In a petty Prince, to the Paucity or Intireneſs of his Territories: But that an Heathen, and King of One Hundred and ſeven and twenty Provinces, ſhould throughout his vaſt Dominions not fear, but practiſe Toleration with good Succeſs, has ſomething admirable in it.

If we pleaſe to remember the Tranquility, and Succeſs of thoſe Heathen Roman Emperours, that allowed Indulgence; that Auguſtus ſent Hecatombs to Jeruſalem, and the wiſeſt honoured the Jews, and at leaſt ſpared the divers Sects of Chriſtians, it will certainly oblige us to think, that Princes, whoſe Religions are nearer of kin, to thoſe of the Diſſenters of our Times, may not unreaſonably hope for quiet from a diſcreet Toleration, eſpecially when there is nothing peculiar in Chriſtianity to render Princes unſafe in ſuch an Indulgence. The admirable Prudence of the Emperour Jovianus, in a quite contrary Method to thoſe of the Reigns of his Predeceſſors, ſettled the moſt Imbroiled Time of the Chriſtian World, almoſt to a Miracle; for though he found the Heats of the Arrians and Orthodox carried to a barbarous Height, (to ſay nothing of the Novatians, and other diſſenting Intereſts) the Emperour eſteeming thoſe Calamities the Effect of Coercing Conformity to the Prince's or State's Religion, and that this Courſe did not only waſte Chriſtians, but expoſe Chriſtians to the Scorn of Heathens, and ſo ſcandal thoſe whom they ſhould convert, he reſolutely declared, That he would have none moleſted for the different Exerciſe of their Religious Worſhip; which (and that in a trice (for he reigned but ſeven Months) calm'd the impetuous Storms of Diſſention, and reduced the Empire, before agitated with the moſt uncharitable Conteſts) to a wonderful Security and Peace; Thus a kindly Amity brought a Civil Unity to the State, which endeavours for a forc'd Unity never did to the Church, but had formerly filled the Government with incomparable Miſeries, as well as the Church with Incharity: And which is ſad, I muſt needs ſay, that thoſe Leaders of the Church that ſhould have been the Teachers and Examples of Peace, in ſo ſingular a Juncture of the Churches ferment, did, more than any, blow the Trumpet, and kindle the Fire of Diviſion. So dangerous is it to Super-fine upon the Text, and then Impoſe it upon Penalty, for Faith.

Valentinian the Emperour (we are told by Socrates Scholaſticus) was a great Honourer of thoſe that favoured his own Faith; but ſo, as he moleſted not the Arrians at all. And Marcellinus farther adds in his Honour, That he was much Renown'd for his Moderate Carriage during his Reign; inſomuch, that amongſt ſundry Sects of Religion, he troubled no Man for his Conſcience, impoſing neither This nor That to be obſerved; much leſs, with menacing Edicts and Injunctions, did he compel others, his Subjects, to bow the Neck, or conform to that which himſelf Worſhipped, but left ſuch Points as clear and untoucht as he found them.

Gratianus, and Theodoſius the Great, Indulg'd divers Sorts of Chriſtians; but the Novatians of all the Diſſenters were prefer'd: Which was ſo far from Inſecuring, that it preſerv'd the Tranquility of the Empire. Nor till the Time of Celeſtine Biſhop of Rome, were the Novatians diſturbed; And the Perſecution of them, and the Aſſumption of the ſecular Power, began much at the ſame Time. But the Novatians at Conſtantinople were not dealt withal; for the Greek Biſhops continued to permit them the quiet Enjoyment of their diſſenting Aſſemblies; as Socrates tells us in his fifth and ſeventh Books of Eccleſiaſtical Story.

I ſhall deſcend nearer our own Times; for notwithſtanding no Age has been more furiouſly moved, than that which Jovianus found, and therefore the Experiment of Indulgence was never better made, yet to ſpeak more in View of this Time of Day, we find our Contemporaries, of remoter Judgments in Religion, under no manner of Difficulty in this Point. The Grand Seignior, Great Mogul, Czars of Muſcovia, King of Perſia; the Great Monarchs of the Eaſt have long allow'd and proſper'd with a Toleration: And who does not know that this gave Great Tamerlane his mighty Victories? In theſe Weſtern Countries we ſee the ſame Thing.

Cardinal d'Oſſat in his 92d Letter to Villeroy, Secretary to Henry the Fourth of France, gives us Doctrine and Example for the Subject in hand; "Beſides (ſays he) " that Neceſſity has no Law, be it in what Caſe it will; our Lord Jeſus Chriſt in" ſtructs us by his Goſpel, To let the Tares alone, leſt removing them may endanger " the Wheat. That other Catholick Princes have allow'd it without Rebuke. That " particularly the Duke of Savoy, who (as great a Zealot as he would be thought " for the Catholick Religion) Tolerates the Hereticks in three of his Provinces, " namely, Angroyne, Lucerne and Perone. That the King of Poland does as much, " not only in Sweedland, but in Poland it ſelf. That all the Princes of the Auſtrian " Family, that are celebrated as Pillars of the Catholick Church, do the like, not " only in the Towns of the Empire, but in their proper Territories, as in Auſtria " it ſelf, from whence they take the Name of their Honour. In Hungary, Bohe- " mia, Moravia, Luſatia, Stirria, Camiolia and Croatia the like. That Charles the " Fifth, Father of the King of Spain, was the Perſon that taught the King of " France, and other Princes, how to yield to ſuch Emergencies. That his Son, the " preſent King of Spain, who is eſteemed Arch-Catholick, and that is, as the Atlas " of the Catholick Church, Tolerates notwithſtanding, at this Day, in his Kingdoms " of Valentia and Granada, the Moors themſelves in their Mahometiſm, and has " offered to thoſe of Zealand, Holland, and other Hereticks of the Low Countries, " the free Exerciſe of their pretended Religion, ſo that they will but acknowledge " and Obey him in Civil Matters. It was of thoſe Letters of this extraordinary Man, for ſo he was (whether we regard him in his Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, or his greater Chriſtian and Civil Prudence) that the great Lord Fulkland ſaid, A Miniſter of State ſhould no more be without Cardinal d' Oſſat's Letters, than a Parſon without his Bible. And indeed, if we look into France, we ſhall find the Indulgence of thoſe Proteſtants, hath been a flouriſhing to that Kingdom, as their Arms a Succour to their King. 'Tis true, that ſince they helpt the Miniſters of his Greatneſs to Succeſs, that haughty Monarch has chang'd his Meaſures, and reſolves their Conformity to his own Religion, or their Ruin; but no Man can give another Reaſon for it, than that he thinks it for his Turn to pleaſe that Part of his own Church, which are the preſent neceſſary and unwearied Inſtruments of his abſolute Glory. But let us ſee the End of this Conduct, it will require more Time to approve the Experiment.

As it was the Royal Saying of Stephen, King of Poland, That he was a King of Men, and not of Conſcience; a Commander of Bodies, and not of Souls. So we ſee a Toleration has been practiſed in that Country of a long Time, with no ill Succeſs to the State; the Cities of Cracovia, Racovia, and many other Towns of Note, 1686. Note, almoſt wholly diſſenting from the common Religion of the Kingdom, which is Roman Catholick, as the others are Socinian and Calviniſt, mighty oppoſite to that, as well as to themſelves.

The King of Denmark, in his large Town of Altona, but about a Mile from Hamburgh, and therefore called ſo, that is, All-to-near, is a pregnant Proof to our Point. For though his Seat be ſo remote from that Place, another ſtrong and inſinuating State ſo near, yet under his Indulgence of divers Perſwaſions, they enjoy their Peace, and he that Security, that he is not upon better Terms in any of his more immediate and Uniform Dominions. I leave it to the thinking Reader, if it be not much owing to this Freedom, and if a contrary Courſe were not the Way for him to furniſh his Neighbours with Means to Depopulate that Place, or make it uneaſie and chargeable to him to keep?

If we look into other Parts of Germany, where we find a Stout and Warlike People, fierce for the Thing they opine, or believe, we ſhall find, the Prince Palatine of the Rhine has been ſafe, and more potent by his Indulgence, witneſs his Improvements at Manheim: And as (believe me) he acted the Prince to his People in other Things, ſo in this to the Empire; for he made bold with the Conſtitution of it in the Latitude he gave his Subjects in this Affair.

The Elector of Brandenburg is himſelf a Calviniſt, his People moſtly Lutheran, yet in Part of his Dominions, the Roman Catholicks enjoy their Churches quietly.

The Duke of Newburg, and a ſtrict Roman Catholick, Brother-in Law to the preſent Emperor, in his Province of Juliers, has, not only at Dewsburg, Mulheim, and other Places, but in Duſeldorp it ſelf, where the Court reſides, Lutheran, and Calviniſt, as well as Roman Catholick, Aſſemblies.

The Elector of Saxony, by Religion a Lutheran, in his City of Budiſſin, has both Lutherans and Roman Catholicks in the ſame Church, parted only by a Grate.

In Auſburg, they have two chief Magiſtrates, as their Duumvirat, one muſt always be a Roman Catholick, and the other a Lutheran.

The Biſhop of Oſnabrug is himſelf a Lutheran, and in the Town of his Title, the Roman Catholicks, as well as Lutherans, have their Churches: And which is more, the next Biſhop muſt be a Catholick too: For like the Buckets in the Well, they take turns: One way to be ſure, ſo that one be but in the Right.

From hence we will go to Sultzbach, a ſmall Territory, but has a great Prince, I mean, in his own extraordinary Qualities; for, among other Things, we ſhall find him act the Moderator among his People. By Profeſſion he is a Roman Catholick, but has Simultaneum Religionis Exercitium, not only Lutherans and Roman Catholicks enjoy their different Worſhips, but alternatively in one and the ſame Place, the ſame Day; ſo ballancing his Affection by his Wiſdom, that there appears neither Partiality in him, nor Envy in them, though of ſuch oppoſite Perſwaſions.

I will end theſe Foreign Inſtances with a Prince and Biſhop, all in one, and he a Roman Catholick too, and that is the Biſhop of Mentz; who admits, with a very peaceable Succeſs ſuch Lutherans, with his Catholicks, to enjoy their Churches, as live in his Town of Erford. Thus doth Practice tell us, that neither Monarchy nor Hierarchy are in danger from a Toleration. On the contrary, the Laws of the Empire, which are the Acts of the Emperour, and the Soveraign Princes of it, have Tolerated theſe three Religious Perſwaſions, viz. The Roman Catholick, Lutheran and Calviniſt, and they may as well tolerate three more, for the ſame Reaſons, and with the ſame Succeſs. For it is not their greater Nearneſs or conſiſtency in Doctrine, or in Worſhip; on the contrary, they differ much, and by that, and other Circumſtances, are ſometimes engaged in great Controverſies, yet is a Toleration practicable, and the Way of Peace with them.

And which is cloſeſt to our Point, at home it ſelf, we ſee that a Toleration of the Jews, French and Dutch in England, all Diſſenters from the National Way: And the Connivance that has been in Ireland: and the down-right Toleration in moſt of the Kings Plantations abroad, prove the Aſſertion, That Toleration is not dangerous to Monarchy. For Experience tells us, where it is in any Degree admitted, the King's Affairs proſper moſt; People, Wealth and Strength being ſure to follow ſuch Indulgence.

But after all that I have ſaid in Reaſon and Fact, why Toleration is ſafe to Monarchy, Story tells us that worſe Things have befallen Princes in Countries under Eccleſiaſtical Union, than in Places under divided Forms of Worſhip; and ſo Tolerating Countries ſtand to the Prince, upon more than equal Terms with Conform- ing ones. And where Princes have been expoſed to hardſhip in tolerating Countries, they have as often come from the Conforming, as Non-conforming Party; and ſo the Diſſenter is upon equal Terms, to the Prince or State, with the Conformiſt.

The firſt is evident in the Jews, under the Conduct of Moſes; their Diſſention came from the Men of their own Tribes, ſuch as Corah, Dathan and Abiram, with their Partakers. To ſay nothing of the Gentiles.

The Miſeries and Slaughters of Mauritius the Emperor, prove my Point, who by the greateſt Church-men of his Time was withſtood, and his Servant that perpetrated the Wickedneſs, by them, ſubſtituted in his Room, becauſe more officious to their Grandure. What Power but that of the Church, dethroned Childerick, King of France, and ſet Pepin in his Place? The Miſeries of the Emperours, Henry the fourth and fifth, Father and Son, from their rebellious Subjects, raiſed and animated by the Power of Conformiſts, dethroning both, as much as they could, are notorious. 'Tis alledg'd, that Sigiſmund King of Sweedland, was rejected by that Lutheran Country, becauſe he was a Roman Catholick.

If we come nearer home, which is moſt ſuitable to the Reaſons of the Diſcourſe, we find the Church-men take part with William Rufus, and Henry the firſt, againſt Robert their elder Brother; and after that, we ſee ſome of the greateſt of them made Head againſt their King, namely Anſelm Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and his Party, as did his Succeſſor Thomas of Becket to the ſecond Henry. Stephen uſurp'd the Crown when there was a Church Union: And King John lived miſerable for all that, and at laſt died by one of his own Religion too. The Diſſentions that agitated the Reign of his Son Henry the third, and the Barons War, with Biſhop Groſteeds Bleſſing to Mumford their General: The Depoſition and Murther of the ſecond Edward, and Richard, and ſixth Henry, and his Son the Prince. The Uſurpation of Richard the Third, and the Murther of the Sons of Edward the fourth, in the Tower of London. The civil War that followed between him and the Earl of Richmond, afterwards our Wiſe Henry the ſeventh, were all perpetrated in a Country of one Religion, and by the Hands of Conformiſts. In ſhort, if we will but look upon the civil War that ſo long raged in this Kingdom, between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, and conſider that they profeſſed but one and the ſame Religion, and both back't with Numbers of Church-men too (to ſay nothing of the Miſerable end of many of our Kings princely Anceſtors in Scotland, eſpecially the firſt and third James) we ſhall find Cauſe to ſay, That Church-Uniformity is not a Security for Princes to depend upon.

If we will look next into Countries where Diſſenters from the National Church are Tolerated, we ſhall find the Conformiſt not leſs Culpable than the Diſſenter.

The Diſorders among the Jews, after they were ſettled in the Land that God had given them, came not from thoſe they tolerated, but themſelves. They caſt off Samuel, and the Government of the Judges. 'Twas the Children of the National Church, that fell in with the Ambition of Abſolom, and animated the Rebellion againſt their Father David. They were the ſame that revolted from Solomon's Son, and cryed in behalf of Jeroboam, To your Tents, O Iſrael!

Not two Ages ago, the Church of France, too generally fell in with the Family of Guiſe, againſt their lawful Soveraign, Henry the Fourth: Nor were they without Countenance of the greateſt of their Belief, who ſtiled it an Holy War: At that Time, fearing (not without Cauſe) the Defection of that Kingdom from the Roman See. In this Conjuncture, the Diſſenters made up the beſt Part of that King's Armies, and by their Loyalty and Blood, preſerv'd the Blood Royal of France, and ſet the Crown on the Head of that Prince. That King was twice Aſſaſſinated, and the laſt Time Murdered, as was Henry the third, his Predeceſſor; but they fell, one by the Hand of a Churchman, the other, at leaſt by a Conformiſt.

'Tis true, that the next civil War was between the Catholicks and the Huguenots, under the Conduct of Cardinal Richlieu, and the Duke of Rohan: But as I will not juſtifie the Action, ſo their Liberties and Cautions ſo ſolemnly ſettled by Henry the Fourth, as the Reward of their ſingular Merit, being by the Miniſtry of that Cardinal invaded, they ſay, they did but defend their Security, and that rather againſt the Cardinal, than the King, whoſe Softneſs ſuffered him to become a Property to the great Wit and Ambition of that Perſon: And there is this Reaſon to believe them, that if it had been otherwiſe, we are ſure that King Charles the Firſt would not in the leaſt have countenanced the Quarrel.

1686. However, the Cardinal, like himſelf, wiſely knew when to ſtop: For though he thought it the Intereſt of the Crown, to moderate their Greatneſs, and check their Growth, yet having freſh in Memory the Story of the foregoing Age, he ſaw, 'Twas Wiſe to have a Ballance upon Occaſion. But this was more than recompenc'd in their fixt Adheſion to the Crown of France, under the Miniſtry and Direction of the ſucceeding Cardinal, when their Perſwaſion had not only Number, and many good Officers to value it ſelf upon, but yielded their King the ableſt Captain of the Age, namely, Turene: It was an Huguenot then, at the Head of almoſt an Huguenot Army, that fell in with a Cardinal himſelf (ſee the Union Intereſt makes) to maintain the Imperial Crown of France, and that on a Roman-Catholick's Head: And together with their own Indulgence, that Religion, as National too, againſt the Pretences of a Roman-Catholick Army, headed by a Prince Brave and Learned of the ſame Religion.

I mention not this, to prefer one Party to another; for contrary Inſtances may be given elſe-where, as Intereſts have varied. In Sweedland a Prince was rejected by Proteſtants; And in England and Holland, and many of the Principalities of Germany, Roman-Catholicks have approv'd themſelves Loyal to their Kings, Princes and States. But this ſuffices to us that we gain the Point; for it is evident in Countries where Diſſenters are Tolerated, the Inſecurity of the Prince and Government may as well come from the Conforming, as Diſſenting Party, and that it comes not from Diſſenters, becauſe ſuch.

But how Happy and Admirable was this Civil Union between the Cardinal and Turene? Two moſt oppoſite Religions, both follow'd by People of their own Perſwaſion: One ſays his Maſs, t'other his Directory: Both invoke One Deity, by ſeveral Ways, for One Succeſs, and it followed with Glory, and a Peace to this Day. O why ſhould it be otherwiſe now! What has been may be: Methinks Wiſdom and Charity are on that Side ſtill.

It will doubtleſs be objected, That the Diſſenting Party of England, fell in with the State-Diſſenter in our late Civil, but Unnatural War: And this ſeems to be againſt us, yet Three Things muſt be confeſſed: Firſt, That the War rather made the Diſſenters, than the Diſſenters made the War. Secondly, That thoſe that were then in being, were not Tolerated, as in France, but proſecuted. And, Laſtly, That they did not lead, but follow great Numbers of Church-Goers, of all Qualities, in that unhappy Controverſie; and which began upon other Topicks than Liberty for Church-Diſſenters. And though they were herein blameable, Reaſon is Reaſon, in all Climates and Latitudes. This does not affect the Queſtion: Such Calamities are no neceſſary Conſequences of Church-Diſſent, becauſe they would then follow in all Places where Diſſenters are Tolerated, which we ſee they do not: But theſe may ſometimes indeed be the Effects of a violent Endeavour of Uniformity, and that under all Forms of Government, as I fear they were partly here under our Monarchy. But then, this teaches us to conclude, that a Toleration of thoſe, that a contrary Courſe makes uneaſie and deſperate, may prevent or cure Inteſtine Troubles; as Anno Forty Eight; it ended the Strife, and ſettled the Peace of Germany. For 'tis not now the Queſtion, How far Men may be provoked, or ought to reſent it; but, Whether Government is Safe in a Toleration, eſpecially Monarchy: And to this Iſſue we come in Fact, That 'tis Safe, and that Conformiſts (generally ſpeaking) have, for their Intereſts, as rarely known their Duty to their Prince, as Diſſenters for their Conſciences. So that the Danger ſeems to lye on this Side, of forcing Uniformity againſt Faith, upon ſevere Penalties, rather than of a diſcreet Toleration.

In the next Place, I ſhall endeavour to ſhew the Prudence and Reaſonableneſs of a Toleration, by the great Benefits that follow it.

Toleration, which is an Admiſſion of Diſſenting Worſhips, with Impunity to the Diſſenters, ſecures Property, which is Civil Right, and That Eminently the Line and Power of the Monarchy: For if no Man ſuffer in his Civil Right for the Sake of ſuch Diſſent, the Point of Succeſſion is ſettled without a Civil War, or a Recantation; ſince it were an abſurd Thing to imagine, that a Man born to Five Pounds a Year, ſhould not be liable to forfeit his Inheritance for Non-Conformity, and yet a Prince of the Blood, and an Heir to the Imperial Crown, ſhould be made incapable of Inheritance for his Church-Diſſent.

The Security then of Property, or Civil Right, from being forfeitable for Religious Diſſent, becomes a Security to the Royal Family, againſt the Difficulties lately labour'd under in the Buſineſs of the Succeſſion. And though I have no Commiſſion for it, beſides the great Reaſon and Equity of the Thing it ſelf, I dare ſay, there can hardly be a Diſſenter at this Time of Day ſo void of Senſe and Juſtice, as well as Duty and Loyalty, as not to be of the ſame Mind. Elſe it were to deny that to the Prince, which he needs, and prays for from him. Let us not forget the Story of Sigiſmund of Sweedland, of Henry the Fourth of France, and eſpecially of our Own Queen Mary. Had Property been fix't, the Line of thoſe Royal Families could not have met with any Let or Interruption. 'Twas this Conſideration that prevail'd with Judge Hales, though a ſtrong Proteſtant, after King Edward's Death, to give his Opinion for Queen Mary's Succeſſion, againſt that of all the Reſt of the Judges to the contrary: Which Noble Preſident, was recompenc'd in the Loyalty of Archbiſhop Heath, a Roman Catholick, in favour of the Succeſſion of Queen Elizabeth: And the ſame Thing would be done again, in the like Caſe, by Men of the ſame Integrity.

I know it may be ſaid, That there is little Reaſon now for the Prince to regard this Argument in Favour of Diſſenters, when it was ſo little heeded in the Caſe of the Preſumptive Heir to the Crown. But as this was the Act and Heat of Conforming Men within Doors, ſo if it were, in Counſel or Deſire, the Folly and Injuſtice of any Diſſenters without Doors, ſhall many entire Parties pay the Reckoning of the few buſie Offenders? They would humbly hope, that the ſingular Mildneſs and Clemency, which make up ſo great a Part of the King's publick Aſſurances, will not leave him in his Reflection here.

'Tis the Mercies of Princes, that above all their Works, give them the neareſt Reſemblance to Divinity in their Adminiſtration. Beſides, it is their Glory to meaſure their Actions by the Reaſon and Conſequence of Things, and not by the Paſſions that poſſeſs and animate private Breaſts: For it were fatal to the Intereſt of a Prince, that the Folly or Undutifulneſs of any of his Subjects, ſhould put him out of the Way, or tempt him to be unſteady to his Principle and Intereſt: And yet, with Submiſſion, I muſt ſay, it would be the Conſequence of Coercion: For, by expoſing Property for Opinion, the Prince expoſes the Conſciences and Property of his own Family, and plainly Diſarms them of all Defence, upon any Alteration of Judgment. Let us remember, That ſeveral of the ſame Gentlemen, who at firſt Sacrificed Civil Rights for Non-Conformity in common Diſſenters, fell at laſt to make the Succeſſion of the Crown the Price of Diſſent in the next Heir of the Royal Blood. So dangerous a Thing it is to hazard Property to ſerve a Turn for any Party, or ſuffer ſuch Examples in the Caſe of the meaneſt Perſon in a Kingdom.

Nor is this all the Benefit that attends the Crown by the Preſervation of Civil Rights; for the Power of the Monarchy is kept more Entire by it. The King has the Benefit of his whole People, and the Reaſon of their Safety is owing to their Civil, and not Eccleſiaſtical Obedience: Their Loyalty to Cæſar, and not Conformity to the Church. Whereas the other Opinion would have it, That no Conformity to the Church, No Property in the State: Which is to clog and narrow the Civil Power, for at this Rate, No Church-Man, No Engliſh-Man; and, No Conformiſt, No Subject. A Way to alien the King's People, and practiſe an Excluſion upon him, from, it may be, a Fourth Part of his Dominions. Thus it may happen, that the ableſt Stateſman, the braveſt Captain, and the beſt Citizen may be diſabled, and the Prince forbid their Employment to his Service.

Some Inſtances of this we have had ſince the late King's Reſtoration: For upon the firſt Dutch-War, Sir William Penn being commanded to give in a Liſt of the ableſt Sea-Officers in the Kingdom, to ſerve in that Expedition, I do very well remember he preſented our preſent King with a Catalogue of the knowingeſt and braveſt Officers the Age had bred, with this Subſcrib'd, Theſe Men, if his Majeſty will pleaſe to admit of their Perſwaſions, I will anſwer for their Skill, Courage and Integrity. He pickt them by their Ability, not their Opinions; and he was in the Right; for that was the beſt Way of doing the King's Buſineſs. And of my own Knowledge, Conformity robb'd the King at that Time of Ten Men, whoſe greater Knowledge and Valour, than any One Ten of that Fleet, had in their Room, been able to have ſaved a Battel, or perfected a Victory. I will Name Three of them: The Firſt was Old Vice-Admiral Goodſon, than whom, No-body was more Stout, or a Seaman. The Second, Captain Hill, that in the Saphire, beat Admiral Everſon Hand to Hand, that came to the Relief of Old Trump. The Third, was Captain Potter, that in the Conſtant Warwick, took Captain Beach, after Eight Hours ſmart Diſpute. And as evident it is, That if a War had proceeded between this Kingdom and France Seven Years ago, the Buſineſs of Conformity had deprived the King of many Land-Officers, whoſe Share in the late Wars of Europe, had made knowing and able.

But which is worſt of all, ſuch are not Safe, with their Diſſent, under their own Extraordinary Prince. For, though a Man were a Great Honourer of his King, a Lover of his Country, an Admirer of the Government: In the Courſe of his Life, Sober, Wiſe, Induſtrious and Uſeful; if a Diſſenter from the Eſtabliſht Form of Worſhip, in that Condition there is no Liberty for his Perſon, nor Security to his Eſtate: As Uſeleſs to the Publick, ſo Ruin'd in himſelf. For this Net catches the Beſt. Men True to their Conſcience, and who indulged, are moſt like to be ſo to their Prince; whilſt the reſt are left to cozen him by their Change; for that is the Unhappy End of Forc'd Conformity in the Poor Spirited Compliers. And this muſt always be the Conſequence of neceſſitating the Prince to put more and other Teſts upon his People, than are requiſite to ſecure him of their Loyalty.

And when we ſhall be ſo Happy in our Meaſures, as to conſider this Miſchief to the Monarchy, it is to be hop'd, it will be thought expedient to diſ-intangle Property from Opinion, and cut the untoward Knot ſome Men have tyed, that hath ſo long hamper'd and gaul'd the Prince as well as People. It will be then, when Civil Puniſhments ſhall no more follow Church Faults, that the Civil Tenure will be recover'd to the Government, and the Natures of Acts, Rewards and Puniſhments, ſo diſtinguiſh'd, as Loyalty ſhall be the Safety of Diſſent, and the whole People made uſeful to the Government.

It will, perhaps, be objected, That Diſſenters can hardly be obliged to be True to the Crown, and ſo the Crown unſafe in their very Services; for they may eaſily turn the Power given them to ſerve it, againſt it, to Greaten themſelves. I am willing to obviate every Thing, that may with any Pretence be offerr'd againſt our intreated Indulgence. I ſay No, and appeal to the King himſelf (againſt whom the Prejudices of our late Times ran higheſt, and who therefore has moſt Reaſon to Reſent) If ever He was better Lov'd or Serv'd, than by the Old Round-headed Seamen, the Earl of Sandwich, Sir William Penn, Sir J. Lawſon, Sir G. Aſcue, Sir R. Stanier, Sir J. Smith, Sir J. Jordan, Sir J. Harmon, Sir Chriſtopher Minns, Captain Sanſum, Cuttins, Clark, Robinſon, Molton, Wager, Tern, Parker, Haward, Hubbard, Fen, Langhorn, Daws, Earl, White; to ſay nothing of many yet Living, of Real Merit, and many Inferior Officers, Expert and Brave. And to do our Prince Juſtice, He deſerv'd it from them, by his Humility, Plainneſs and Courage, and the Care and Affection that he always ſhew'd them.

If any ſay, That moſt of theſe Men were Conformiſts, I preſume to tell them, I know as well as any Man, they Serv'd the King never the Better for that: On the contrary, 'twas all the Strife that ſome of them had in themſelves, in the doing that Service, that they muſt not ſerve the King without it; and if in that they could have been Indulged, they had perform'd it with the greateſt Alacrity. Intereſt will not lye. Where People find their Reckoning, they are ſure to be True. For 'tis Want of Wit that makes any Man falſe to himſelf. 'Twas he that knew all Men's Hearts, that ſaid, Where the Treaſure is, there will the Heart be alſo. Let Men be eaſie, ſafe, and upon their Preferment with the Prince, and they will be Dutiful, Loyal, and moſt Affectionate.

Mankind by Nature fears Power, and melts at Goodneſs. Pardon my Zeal, I would not be thought to plead for Diſſenters Preferment; 'tis enough they keep what they have, and may live at their own Charges. Only I am for having the Prince have Room for his Choice, and not be crampt and ſtinted by Opinion; but imploy thoſe who are beſt able to ſerve him: And, I think out of Six Parties, 'tis better picking, than out of One, and therefore the Prince's Intereſt is to be Head of all of them, which a Toleration effects in a Moment, ſince thoſe Six (divided Intereſts, within themſelves) having but One Civil Head, become one intire Civil Body to the Prince. And I am ſure, I have Monarchy on my Side, if Solomon and his Wiſdom may ſtand for it, who tells us, That the Glory of a King is in the Multitude of his People.

Nor is this all, for the Conſequences of ſuch an Univerſal Content, would be of infinite Moment to the Security of the Monarchy, both at Home and Abroad. At Home, for it would Behead the Factions without Blood, and Baniſh the Ringleaders without going abroad. When the Great Bodies of Diſſenters ſee the Care of the Government for their Safety, they have no Need of their Captains, nor theſe any Ground for their Pretences: For as they us'd the People to value themſelves, and raiſe their Fortunes with the Prince, ſo the People follow'd their Leaders to get that Eaſe, they ſee their Heads promiſed, but could not, and the Government can, and does give them.

Multitudes cannot Plot, they are too many, and have not Conduct for it, they move by another Spring. Safety is the Pretence of their Leaders: If once they ſee they enjoy it, they have yet Wit enough not to hazard it for any Body: For the Endeavours of Buſie Men are then diſcernable; but a State of Severity gives them a Pretence, by which the Multitude is eaſily taken. Men may indiſcreetly Plot to get what they would never Plot to loſe. So that Eaſe is not only their Content, but the Prince's Security.

This I ſay, upon a Suppoſition, That the Diſſenters could agree againſt the Government; which is a begging of the Queſtion: For it is improbable (if not impoſſible without Conformiſts) ſince, beſides the Diſtance they are at in their Perſwaſions and Affections, they dare not hope for ſo Good Terms from one another, as the Government gives: And that Fear, with Emulation, would draw them into that Duty, that they muſt all fall into a Natural Dependence, which I call, Holding of the Prince, as the Great Head of the State.

From Abroad, we are as Safe as from within our ſelves: For if Leading Men at Home are thus diſappointed of their Intereſt in the People, Foreigners will find here no Interpreters of their dividing Language, nor Matter (if they could) to work upon. For the Point is gain'd, the People they would deal in, are at their Eaſe, and cannot be bribed; and thoſe that would, can't deſerve it.

It is this that makes Princes live Independent of their Neighbours: And, to be loved at Home, is be feared Abroad: One follows neceſſarily the other. Where Princes are driven to ſeek a foreign Aſſiſtance, the Iſſue either muſt be the Ruin of the Prince, or the abſolute Subjection of the People; not without the Hazard of becoming a Province to the Power of that Neighbour that turns the Scale. Theſe Conſequences have on either Hand an ill Look, and ſhould rebate Extremes.

The Greatneſs of France carries thoſe Threats to all her Neighbours, that, politically ſpeaking, 'tis the Melancholieſt Proſpect England has had to make ſince Eighty Eight: The Spaniard at that Time, being ſhorter in all Things but his Pride and Hope, than the French King is now, of the ſame Univerſal Monarchy. This Greatneſs, begun with the Eleventh Lewis, ſome will have it, has not been ſo much advanced by the Wiſdom of Richlieu, and Craft of Mazarene, no, nor the Arms of the preſent Monarch, as by the Aſſiſtance or Connivance of England, that has moſt to loſe by him.

O. Cromwell began, and gave him the Scale againſt the Spaniard. The Reaſon of State he went upon, was the Support of Uſurp'd Dominion: And he was not out in it; for the Exile of the Royal Family was a great Part of the Price of that Aid: In which we ſee, how much Intereſt prevails above Nature. It was not Royal Kindred could ſhelter a King againſt the Solicitations of an Uſurper with the Son of his Mother's Brother.

But it will be told us by ſome People, We have not degenerated, but exactly followed the ſame Steps ever ſince, which has given ſuch an Increaſe to thoſe Beginnings, that the French Monarchy is almoſt above our Reach. But ſuppoſe it were true, What's the Cauſe of it? It has not been old Friendſhip, or nearneſs of Blood, or Neighbourhood. Nor could it be from an Inclination in our Miniſters, to bring Things here to a like Iſſue, as ſome have ſuggeſted; for then we ſhould have clogged his Succeſſes, inſtead of helping them in any Kind, leſt in ſo doing, we ſhould have put it into his Power to hinder our own.

But perhaps our Croſs Accidents of State may ſometimes have compelled us into his Friendſhip, and his Councils have carefully improved the one, and huſbanded the other to great Advantages, and that this was more than made for our Engliſh Intereſt: And yet 'tis but too true, that the extreme Heats of ſome Men, that moſt inveighed againſt it, went too far to ſtrengthen that Underſtanding, by not taking what would have been granted, and creating an Intereſt at Home, that might naturally have diſſolv'd that Correſpondence Abroad.

I love not to revive Things that are uneaſily remembred, but in Points moſt tender to the late King, he thought himſelf ſometimes too cloſely preſſed, and hardly held; and we are all wiſe enough now to ſay, a milder Conduct had ſucceeded better: For if reaſonable Things may be reaſonably preſt, and with ſuch private Intentions, as induce a Denial, Heats about Things doubtful, unwiſe or unjuſt, muſt needs harden and prejudice.

Let us then create an Intereſt for the Prince at Home, and Foreign Friendſhips (at beſt, uncertain and dangerous) will fall of Courſe; for if it be allowed to Private Men, ſhall it be forbid to Princes only, to know and to be true to their own Support?

It is no more than what every Age makes us to ſee in all Parties of Men. The Parliaments of England, ſince the Reformation, giving no Quarter to Roman Catholicks, have forc'd them to the Crown for Shelter. And to induce the Monarchy to yield them the Protection they have needed, they have with mighty Addreſs and Skill, recommended themſelves as the Great Friends of the Prerogative, and ſo ſucceſsfully too, that it were not below the Wiſdom of that Conſtitution, to reflect what they have loſt by that Coſtiveneſs of theirs to Catholicks. On the other Hand, the Crown having treated the Proteſtant Diſſenters with the Severity of the Laws that affected them, ſuffering the Sharpeſt of them to fall upon their Perſons and Eſtates, they have been driven ſucceſſively to Parliaments for Succour, whoſe Priviledges, with equal Skill and Zeal, they have abetted: And our late Unhappy Wars are too plain a Proof, how much their Acceſſion gave the Scale againſt the Power and Courage of both Conformiſts and Catholicks, that adhered to the Crown.

Nor muſt this Contrary Adheſion be imputed to Love or Hatred, but Neceſſary Intereſt: Refuſal in one Place, makes Way for Addreſs in another. If the Scene be changed, the Parts muſt follow; for as well before, as after Cromwell's Uſurpation, the Roman Catholicks did not only promiſe, The moſt ready Obedience to that Government, in their Printed Apologies for Liberty of Conſcience; but actually treated by ſome of their Greateſt Men, with the Miniſters of thoſe Times, for Indulgence, upon the Aſſurances they offer'd to give of their Good Behaviour to the Government, as then Eſtabliſh'd.

On the other Hand, we ſee the Preſbyterians, That in Scotland began the War, and in England promoted and upheld it to Forty Seven, when ready to be ſupplanted by the Independents, wheel to the King. In Scotland they Crown him, and come into England with an Army to reſtore him, where their Brethren joyn them; but being defeated, They Help, by Private Collections, to ſupport him Abroad; and after the Overthrow of Sir George Booth's Attempt, to almoſt a Miracle, reſtore him. And which is more, a Great Part of that Army too, whoſe Victories came from the Ruin of the Prince they reſtored.

But to give the laſt Proofs our Age has of the Power of Intereſt, againſt the Notion oppos'd by this Diſcourſe. Firſt, the Independents themſelves, held the Greateſt Republicans of all Parties, were the moſt Laviſh and Superſtitious Adorers of Monarchy in Oliver Cromwell, becauſe of the Regard he had to them; allowing him, and his Son after him, to be Cuſtos Utriuſq; Tabulæ, over all Cauſes, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Civil, Supreme Governour. And next, the Conformiſts in Parliament, reputed the moſt Loyal and Monarchical Men, did more than any Body queſtion and oppoſe the late King's Declaration of Indulgence; even They themſelves would not allow ſo much Prerogative to the Crown, but pleaded and oppoſed his Political Capacity.

This proves the Power of Intereſt, and that All Perſwſions center with it: And when they ſee the Government engaging them with a Fix'd Liberty of Conſcience, they muſt for their own Sakes ſeek the Support of it, by which it is maintained. This Union, directed under the Prince's Conduct, would Awe the Greatneſs of our Neighbours, and ſoon reſtore Europe to its Ancient Ballance, and that into his Hand too: So that He may be the Great Arbiter of the Chriſtian World. But if the Policy of the Government, places the Security of it's Intereſt in the Deſtruction of the Civil Intereſt of the Diſſenters, it is not to be wondred at, if they are leſs found in the Praiſes of it's Conduct, than others, to whom they are offered up a Sacrifice by it.

I know it will be inſinuated, That there is Danger in Building upon the Union of divers Intereſts; and this will be aggravated to the Prince, by ſuch as would engroſs His Bounty, and intercept His Grace from a great Part of his People. But I will only oppoſe to that meer Suggeſtion, Three Examples to the contrary, with this Challenge, That if after Rummaging the Records of all Time, they find one Inſtance to contradict me, I ſhall ſubmit the Queſtion to their Authority.

The Firſt, is given by thoſe Chriſtian Emperors, who admitted all Sorts of Diſſenters into their Armies, Courts and Senates. This, the Eccleſiaſtical Story of thoſe Times, aſſures us, and particularly Socrates, Evagrius, and Onuphrius.

The next Inſtance, is that of Prince William of Orange, who by a timely Indulgence, united the ſcattered Strength of Holland, and, all animated by the Clemency, as well as Valour of their Captain, crown'd his Attempts with an extraordinary Glory; and, what makes, continues Great,

The laſt, is given us by Livy, in his Account of Hannibal's Army; "That they conſiſted of divers Nations, Languages, Cuſtoms and Religions: That under all their Succeſſes of War and Peace, for Thirteen Years together, they never mutiny'd againſt their General, nor fell out among themſelves. What Livy relates for a Wonder, the Marquis Virgilio Malvetzy gives the Reaſon of, to wit, their Variety and Difference, well managed by their General; for, ſaid he, "It was impoſſible for ſo many Nations, Cuſtoms and Religions to combine, eſpecially when the General's equal Hand gave him more Reverence with them, than they had of Affection for one another. This (ſays he) ſome would wholly impute to Hannibal; but however great he was, I attribute it to the Variety of People in the Army: For (adds he) Rome's Army was ever leſs given to Mutiny, when ballanced with Auxiliary Legions, than when intirely Roman. Thus much in his Diſcourſe upon Cornelius Tacitus.

And they are neither few, nor of the weakeſt Sort of Men, that have thought the Concord of Diſcords a firm Baſis for Government to be built upon. The Buſineſs is to Tune them well, and that muſt be the Skill of the Muſician.

In Nature we ſee all Heat conſumes, all Cold kills: That three Degrees of Cold to two of Heat, allays the Heat, but introduces the contrary Quality, and overcools by a Degree; but two Degrees of Cold to two of Heat, makes a Poize in Elements, and a Ballance in Nature. And in thoſe Families where the eveneſt Hand is carried, the Work is beſt done, and the Maſter is moſt reverenced.

This brings me to another Benefit, which accrues to the Monarchy by a Toleration, and that is a Ballance at Home: For though it be improbable, it may ſo happen, that either the Conforming or Non-conforming Party may be undutiful; the one is then a Ballance of the other. This might have prevented much Miſchief to our ſecond and third Henry, King John, the ſecond Edward, and Richard, and unhappy Henry the Sixth, as it undeniably ſaved the Royal Family of France, and ſecured Holland, and kept it from Truckling under the Spaniſh Monarchy. While all hold of the Government, 'tis that which gives the Scale to the moſt Dutiful; but ſtill, no farther than to ſhew it's Power, and awe the Diſorderly into Obedience, not to deſtroy the Ballance, leſt it ſhould afterwards want the Means of Over-poizing Faction.

That this is more than Fancy, plain it is, that the Diſſenter muſt firmly adhere to the Government for his Being, while the Church-man is provided for. The one ſubſiſts by it's Mercy, the other by it's Bounty. This is tied by Plenty, but that by Neceſſity, which being the laſt of Tyes, and ſtrongeſt Obligation, the Security is greateſt from him, that it is fancy'd moſt unſafe to Tolerate.

But beſides this, the Tranquility which it gives at Home, will both oblige thoſe that are upon the Wing for Foreign Parts, to pitch here again; and at a Time when our Neighbouring Monarch is waſting his People, excite thoſe Sufferers into the King's Dominions, whoſe Number will encreaſe that of his Subjects, and their Labour and Conſumption, the Trade and Wealth of his Territories.

For what are all Conqueſts, but of People? And if the Government may by Indulgence add the Inhabitants of Ten Cities to thoſe of it's own, it obtains a Victory without Charge. The Ancient Perſecution of France and the Low Countries, has furniſh'd us with an invincible Inſtance; for of thoſe that came hither on that Account, we were inſtructed in moſt uſeful Manufactures, as by Courſes of the like Nature, we loſt a great Part of our Woollen Trade. And as Men, in Times of Danger, draw in their Stock, and either tranſmit it to other Banks, or bury their Talent at Home for Security (that being out of Sight, it may be, out of Reach too (and either is fatal to a Kingdom) ſo this Mildneſs obtained, ſetting every Man's Heart at reſt, every Man will be at Work, and the Stock of the Kingdom employ'd: which, like the Blood, that hath it's due Paſſage, will give Life and Vigour to every Member in the publick Body.

And here give me Leave to mention the Experiment made at Home by the late King, in his Declaration of Indulgence. No Matter how well or ill built that Act of State was, 'tis no Part of the Buſineſs in Hand, but what Effect the Liberty of it had upon the Peace and Wealth of the Kingdom, may have Inſtruction in it to 1686. our preſent Condition. 'Twas evident, that all Men laboured cheerfully, and traded boldly, when they had the Royal Word to keep what they got, and the King himſelf became the Univerſal Inſurer of Diſſenters Eſtates. Whitehall, then, and St. James's, were as much viſited and courted by their reſpective Agents, as if they had been of the Family: For that which eclipſed the Royal Goodneſs, being by his own Hand thus remov'd, his benign Influences drew the Returns of Sweetneſs and Duty from that Part of his Subjects, that the Want of thoſe Influences had made barren before. Then it was that we look'd like the Members of one Family, and Children of one Parent. Nor did we envy our eldeſt Brother, Epiſcopacy, his Inheritance, ſo that we had but a Child's Portion: For not only Diſcontents vaniſh'd, but no Matter was left for ill Spirits, foreign or domeſtick, to brood upon, or hatch to Miſchief. Which was a plain Proof, that it is the Union of Intereſts, and not of Opinions, that gives Peace to Kingdoms.

And with all Deference to Authority, I would ſpeak it, the Liberty of the Declaration ſeems to be our Engliſh Amomum at laſt: The Sovereign Remedy to our Engliſh Conſtitution. And, to ſay true, we ſhifted Luck (as they call it) as ſoon as we had loſt it; like thoſe that loſe their Royal Gold, their Evil Returns. For all Diſſenters ſeemed then united in their Affection to the Government, and followed their Affairs without Fear or Diſtraction. Projects, then, were ſtale and unmerchantable, and no Body cared for them, becauſe no Body wanted any: That gentle Opiate, at the Prince's Hand, laid the moſt Buſy and Turbulent to Sleep: But when the Loſs of that Indulgence made them uncertain, and that uneaſy; Their Perſons and Eſtates being again expoſed to pay the Reckoning of their Diſſent, no doubt but every Party ſhifted then as they could: Moſt grew ſelfiſh, at leaſt, jealous, fearing one ſhould make Bargains apart, or excluſive of the other. This was the fatal Part Diſſenters acted to their common Ruin: And I take this Partiality to have had too great a Share in our late Animoſities; which, by freſh Accidents falling in, have ſwelled to a mighty Deluge, ſuch an one as hath overwhelmed our former civil Concord and Serenity. And pardon me, if I ſay, I cannot ſee that thoſe Waters are like to aſſwage, 'till this Olive-Branch of Indulgence be ſome Way or other reſtored: The Waves will ſtill cover our Earth, and a Spot of Ground will hardly be found in this glorious Iſle, for a great Number of uſeful People to ſet a quiet Foot upon. And, to purſue the Allegory, What was the Ark it ſelf, but the moſt apt and lively Emblem of Toleration? A Kind of Natural Temple of Indulgence. In which we find two of every living Creature dwelling together, of both Sexes too, that they might propagate; and that as well of the unclean as clean Kind: So that the baſer and leſs uſeful Sort were ſaved. Creatures never like to change their Nature, and ſo far from being whipt and puniſh'd to the Altar, that they were expreſly forbid. Theſe were Saved, theſe were Fed and Reſtored to their Ancient Paſtures. Shall we be ſo mannerly as to complement the Conformiſts with the Stile of Clean, and ſo humble as to take the Unclean Kind, to our ſelves, who are the leſs Noble, and more Clowniſh Sort of People? I think verily we may do it, if we may but be ſaved too by the Commander of our Engliſh Ark. And this the Peaceable and Virtuous Diſſenter has the leſs Reaſon to fear, ſince Sacred Text tells us, 'Twas Vice, and Not Opinion, that brought the Deluge upon the reſt. And here (to drop our Allegory) I muſt take Leave to hope, that though the Declaration be gone, if the Reaſon of it remain, I mean the Intereſt of the Monarchy, the King and His Great Council will graciouſly pleaſe to think a Toleration, no Dangerous nor Obſolete Thing.

But as it has many Arguments for it, that are drawn from the Advantages that have and would come to the Publick by it, ſo there are divers Miſchiefs that muſt unavoidably follow the Perſecution of Diſſenters, that may reaſonably diſſwade from ſuch Severity. For they muſt either be ruined, fly, or conform; and perhaps the laſt is not the Safeſt. If they are Ruin'd in their Eſtates, and their Perſons Impriſoned, modeſtly computing, a Fourth of the Trade and Manufactury of the Kingdom ſinks; and thoſe that have helped to maintain the Poor, muſt come upon the Poor's Book for Maintenance. This ſeems to be an Impoveriſhing of the Publick. But if to avoid this, they tranſport themſelves, with their Eſtates, into other Governments; nay, though it were to any of the King's Plantations, the Number were far too great to be ſpared from Home. So much principal Stock wanting to turn the yearly Traffick, and ſo many People too, to conſume our yearly Growth, muſt iſſue fatally to the Trade one Way, and to the Lands and Rents of the Kingdom the other Way.

And laſtly, If they ſhould reſolve, neither to ſuffer nor fly, but conform to prevent both. It is to be enquired, if this Cure of Church-Diviſion be ſafe to the State; or not rather, a raking up Coals under Aſhes, for a future Miſchief? He whom Fear or Policy hath made Treacherous to his own Conſcience, ought not to be held True to any thing but his own Safety and Revenge. His Conformity gives him the firſt, and his Reſentment of the Force that compels it, will on no Occaſion let him want the laſt. So that Conformity cozens no Body but the Government: For the State Fanatick (which is the unſafe Thing to the State) being chriſten'd by Conformity, he is eligible every where, with Perſons the moſt devoted to the Prince: And all Men will hold themſelves protected in their Votes by it.

A Receipt to make Faction keep, and preſerve Diſloyalty againſt all Weathers. For whereas the Nature of Teſts is to diſcover, this is the Way to conceal the Inclinations of Men from the Government. Plain Diſſent is the Prince with a Candle in his Hand: He ſees the Where and What of Perſons and Things: He diſcriminates, and makes that a Rule of Conduct: But forc'd Conformity is the Prince in the Dark: It blows out his Candle, and leaves him without Diſtinction. Such Subjects are like Figures in Sand, when Water is ſlapt upon them, they run together, and are indiſcernible: Or written Tradition, made illegible by writing the Oaths and Canons upon it: The ſafeſt Way of blotting out Danger.

I know not how to forbear ſaying, that this neceſſary Conformity makes the Church dangerous to the State: For even the Hypocriſy that follows, makes the Church both conceal and protect the Hypocrites, which, together with their Liberality to the Parſon, Charity to the Poor, and Hoſpitality to their Neighbours, recommends them to the firſt Favour they have to beſtow. That Fort is unſafe, where a Party of the Garriſon conſiſts of diſguiſed Enemies; for when they take their Turns at the Watch, the Danger is hardly evitable. It would then certainly be for the Safety of the Fort, that ſuch Friends in Maſquerade were induſtriouſly kept out, inſtead of being whipt in.

And it was ſomething of this, I remember, that was made an Argument for the Declaration of Indulgence, in the Preamble, to wit, the greater Safety of the Government, from Open and Publick, than Private, diſſenting Meetings of Worſhip; as indeed the reſt bear the ſame Reſemblance. For theſe were the Topicks, Quieting the People, Encouraging Strangers to come and live among us, and Trade by it; and laſtly, Preventing the Danger that might ariſe to the Government by Private Meetings: Of greater Reaſon then from Private Men, not leſs diſcontented, but more concealed and ſecure by the Great Brake of Church Conformity. It is this will make a Comprehenſion of the next Diſſenters to the Church dangerous, tho' it were practicable, of which Side ſoever it be. For in an Age, the preſent Frame of Government ſhall feel the Art and Induſtry of the Comprehended. So that a Toleration is in Reaſon of State to be prefer'd. And if the Reaſons of the Declaration were ever good, they are ſo ſtill, becauſe the Emergencies of State that made them ſo, remain; and our Neighbours are not leſs powerful to improve them to our Detriment.

But it will be now ſaid, Though the Government ſhould find it's Account in what has been laſt alledged, this were the Way to overthrow the Church, and encourage Diſſenters to continue in their Errors. Which is that ſecond main Objection I propoſed at firſt, to anſwer in it's proper Place, and that I think is this:

I humbly ſay, if it prove the Intereſt of the three conſiderable Church-Intereſts in this Kingdom, a Relaxation, at leaſt, can hardly fail us. The three Church Intereſts are, That of the Church of England; That of the Roman Catholick Diſſenter; and, That of the Proteſtant Diſſenter.

That the Church of England ought in Conſcience and Prudence to conſent to the Eaſe deſired.

I pray, firſt, that it be conſidered, how great a Reflection it will be upon her Honour, that from a Perſecuted, ſhe ſhould be accounted a Perſecuting Church: An Overthrow none of her Enemies have been able to give to her many excellent Apologies. Nor will it be excuſed, by her ſaying, She is in the Right, which her Perſecutors were not; ſince this is a Confidence not wanting in any of them, or her Diſſenters: And the Truth is, it is but the Begging of a Queſtion, that will by no Means be granted.

No body ought to know more than Churchmen, that Conſcience cannot be forced: That Offerings againſt Conſcience, are as odious to God, as uneaſie to them that make them. That God loves a free Sacrifice. That Chriſt forbad Fire, though from Heaven (it ſelf) to puniſh Diſſenters; and commanded that the Tares ſhould grow with the Wheat till the Harveſt. In fine, that we ſhould love Enemies themſelves: And to exclude worldly Strife for Religion; That his Kingdom is not of this World. This was the Doctrine of the Bleſſed Saviour of the World.

Saint Paul purſues the ſame Courſe: Is glad Chriſt is Preached, be it of Envy; the worſt Ground for Diſſent that can be. It was he that aſk't that hard, but juſt Queſtion, Who art thou that judgeſt another Man's Servant? To his own Lord he ſtandeth or falleth. He allows the Church a Warfare, and Weapons to perform it, but they are not Carnal, but Spiritual. Therefore it was ſo adviſed, that every Man in Matters of Religion, ſhould be fully perſwaded in his own Mind, and if any were ſhort or miſtaken, God would, in his Time, Inform them better.

He tells us of Schiſmaticks and Hereticks too, and their Puniſhment, which is to the Point in Hand: He directs to a firſt and ſecond Admonition, and if that prevail not, reject them: That is, refuſe them Church Fellowſhip, diſown their Relation, and deny them Communion. But in all this there is not a Word of Fines or Impriſonments, nor is it an excuſe to any Church, that the Civil Magiſtrate executes the Severity, while they are Members of her Communion, that make or execute the Laws.

But if the Church could gain her Point, I mean Conformity, unleſs ſhe could gain Conſent too, 'twere but Conſtraint at laſt. A Rape upon the Mind, which may encreaſe her Number, not her Devotion. On the contrary, the reſt of her Sons are in danger by their Hypocriſie. The moſt cloſe, but watchful and Revengeful Thing in the World. Beſides, the Scandal can hardly be removed: To over-value Coin, and Rate Braſs to Silver, Beggars any Country; and to own them for Sons ſhe never begat, debaſes and deſtroys any Church. 'Twere better to indulge foreign Coin of intrinſick Value, and let it paſs for it's Weight. 'Tis not Number, but Quality: Two or three ſincere Chriſtians, that form an Evangelical Church: And though the Church were leſs, more Charity on the one Hand, and Piety on the other, with exact Church-Cenſure, and leſs civil Coercion, would give her Credit with Conſcience in all Sects; without which, their Acceſſion it ſelf would be no Benefit, but diſgrace, and hazard to her Conſtitution.

And to ſpeak prudently in this Affair, 'tis the Intereſt of the Church of England, not to ſuffer the Extinction of Diſſenters, that ſhe may have a Counter-Ballance to the Roman Catholicks, who, though few in Number, are great in Quality, and greater in their foreign Friendſhips and Aſſiſtance. On the other Hand, it is her Intereſt to Indulge the Roman Catholick, that by his Acceſſion, ſhe may at all Times have the Ballance in her own Hand, againſt the Proteſtant Diſſenter, leaning to either, as ſhe finds her Doctrine undermined by the one, or her Diſcipline by the other; or laſtly, her Civil Intereſt endangered from either of them.

And it is certainly the Intereſt of both thoſe Extremes of Diſſent, that She, rather than either of them ſhould hold the Scale. For as the Proteſtant Diſſenter cannot hope for any Tenderneſs, excluſive of Roman Catholicks, but almoſt the ſame Reaſons may be advanced againſt him. So on the other Hand, it would look imprudent, as well as unjuſt, in the Roman Catholicks, to ſolicite any Indulgence excluſive of Proteſtant Diſſenters. For beſides that, it keeps up the Animoſity, which it is their Intereſt to bury; the Conſequence will be, to take the Advantage of Time, to ſnatch it from one another, when an united Requeſt for Liberty, once granted, will oblige both Parties, in all Times, for Example-ſake, to have it Equally preſerved. Thus are all Church Intereſts of Conformiſts and Diſſenters rendered conſiſtent and ſafe in their Civil Intereſt one with the other.

But it will laſt of all, doubtleſs, be objected, That tho' a Toleration were never ſo deſirable in it ſelf, and in it's Conſequence beneficial to the Publick, yet the Government cannot allow it, without Ruin to the Church of England, which it is obliged to maintain.

But I think this will not affect the Queſtion at all, unleſs by maintaining the Church of England, it is underſtood that he ſhould force whole Parties to be of her Communion, or knock them on the Head: Let us call to mind, that the Religion that is true, allows no Man to do Wrong, that Right may come of it. And that nothing has leſſen'd the Credit of any Religion more, than declining to ſupport it ſelf by it's own Charity and Piety, and taking Sanctuary in the Arms, rather than the Underſtandings of Men. Violences are ill Pillars for Truth to reſt upon. The Church of England muſt be maintain'd: Right, but can't that be done without the Diſſenter be deſtroyed? In vain then did Chriſt command Peter to put up his Sword, with this Rebuke, They that take the Sword, ſhall periſh with the Sword, if his Followers are to draw it again. He makes killing for Religion, Murder, and deſerving Death: Was he then in the Right, Not to call Legions to his Aſſiſtance? And are not his Followers of theſe Times in the Wrong, to ſeek to uphold their Religion by any Methods of Force. The Church of England muſt be maintain'd, therefore the Diſſenters, that hold almoſt the ſame Doctrine, muſt be Ruin'd. A Conſequence moſt unnatural, as it is almoſt impoſſible. For beſides that, the Drudgery would unbecome the civil Magiſtrate, who is the Image of divine Juſtice and Clemency, and that it would faſten the Character of a Falſe Church, upon one that deſires to be eſteemed a True One; ſhe puts the Government upon a Task that is hard to be performed. Kings can no more make Brick without Straw, than Slaves: The Condition of our Affairs is much chang'd, and the Circumſtances our Government are under, differ mightily from thoſe of our Anceſtors. They had not the ſame Diſſents to deal with, nor thoſe Diſſents the like Bodies of People to render them formidable, and their Proſecution miſchievous to the State. Nor did this come of the Prince's Neglect or Indulgence: There are other Reaſons to be aſſigned, of which, the Opportunities Domeſtick Troubles gave to their Increaſe and Power, and the Severities uſed to ſuppreſs them, may go for none of the leaſt. So that it was as involuntary in the Prince, as to the Church Anxious. And under this Neceſſity to tye the Magiſtrate to old Meaſures, is to be regardleſs of Time, whoſe freſh Circumſtances give Aim to the Conduct of Wiſe Men in their preſent Actions. Governments, as well as Courts, change their Faſhions: The ſame Clothes will not always ſerve: And Politicks made Obſolete by new Accidents, are as unſafe to follow, as antiquated Dreſſes are ridiculous to wear.

Thus Sea-men know, and teach us in their daily Practice: They humour the Winds, though they will lie as near as they can, and trim their Sails by their Compaſs: And by Patience under theſe conſtrained and uneven Courſes, they gain their Port at laſt. This juſtifies the Government's change of Meaſures from the change of Things; for res nolunt malè Adminiſtrari:

And to be free, it looks more than Partial, to Elect and Reprobate too. That That the Church of England is prefer'd, and has the Fat of the Earth, the Authority of the Magiſtrate, and the Power of the Sword in her Sons Hands, which comprehend all the Honours, Places, Profits, and Powers of the Kingdom, muſt not be repined at: Let her have it, and keep it all, and let none dare ſeek or accept an Office that is not of her. But to ruin Diſſenters to compleat her Happineſs, (pardon the Alluſion) is Calviniſm in the worſt Senſe; for this is that Horrendum Decretum reduc'd to Practice: And to purſue that ill-natur'd Principle, Men are civilly Damn'd for that they cannot help, ſince Faith is not in Man's Power, though it ſometimes expoſes one to it.

It is a ſevere Dilemma, that a Man muſt either renounce That of which he makes Conſcience in the Sight of God, or be Civilly and Eccleſiaſtically Reprobated. There was a Time, when the Church of England her ſelf ſtood in need of Indulgence, and made up a great Part of the Non-Conformiſts of this Kingdom, and what ſhe then wanted, ſhe pleaded for, I mean a Toleration, and that in a general Style, as divers of the Writings of her Doctors tell us: Of which let it be enough but to mention that excellent Diſcourſe of Dr. Taylor, Biſhop of Down, entituled, Liberty of Prophecy.

And that which makes Severity look the worſe in the Members of the Church of England, is the Modeſty ſhe profeſſes about the Truth of the Things ſhe believes: For though perhaps it were indefenſible in any Church to compel a Man to that which ſhe were infallibly aſſured to be true, unleſs ſhe ſuperſeded his Ignorance by Conviction, rather than Authority, it muſt, doubtleſs, look rude, to puniſh Men into Conformity to that, of the Truth of which, the Church her ſelf pretends no Certainty.

Not that I would leſs believe a Church ſo cautious, than one more confident; but I know not how to help thinking Perſecution harſh, when they Ruin People for not believing that, which they have not in themſelves the Power of believing, and which ſhe cannot give them, and of which her ſelf is not infallibly aſſured. The Drift of this is Moderation, which well becomes us poor Mortals, That for every 1686. Idle Word we ſpeak, muſt give an Account at the Day of Judgment, if our Saviour's Doctrine have any credit with us.

It would much mitigate the Severity, if the Diſſent were Sullen, or in Contempt: But if Men can't help or hinder their Belief, they are rather Unhappy than Guilty, and more to be pitied than blamed. However they are of the reaſonable Stock of the Country, and tho' they were unworthy of Favour, they may not be unfit to live. 'Tis Capital, at Law, to deſtroy Baſtards, and By-blows are laid to the Pariſh to keep: They muſt maintain them at laſt: And ſhall not theſe natural Sons, at leaſt, be laid at the Door of the Kingdom? Unhappy Fate of Diſſenters! to be leſs heeded, and more deſtitute than any Body. If this ſhould ever happen to be the Effect of their own Folly, with Submiſſion, it can never be the Conſequence of the Government's Engagements.

Election does not neceſſarily imply a Reprobation of the reſt. If God hath elected ſome to Salvation, it will not follow of courſe, that he hath abſolutely rejected all the reſt. For tho' he was God of the Jews, he was God of the Gentiles too, and they were his People, tho' the Jews were his peculiar People. God reſpects not Perſons, ſays St. Peter, the good of all Nations are accepted. The Difference at laſt, will not be of Opinion, but Works: Sheep or Goats, All, of all Judgments will be found: And Come, Well done; or Go ye Workers of Iniquity, will conclude, their Eternal State: Let us be careful therefore of an Opinion-Reprobation of one another.

We ſee the God of Nature hath taught us ſofter Doctrine in his great Book of the World: His Sun ſhines, and his Rain falls upon all. All the Productions of Nature are by Love, and ſhall it be proper to Religion only to propagate by Force? The poor Hen inſtructs us in Humanity, who, to defend her feeble Young, refuſes no Danger. All the Seeds and Plants that grow for the uſe of Man, are produc'd by the kind and warm Influences of the Sun. 'Tis Kindneſs that upholds Humane Race. People don't Multiply in Spight: And if it be by gentle and friendly Ways, that Nature produces and matures the Creatures of the World, certainly Religion ſhould teach us to be Mild and Bearing.

Let your Moderation be known to all Men, was the ſaying of a great Doctor of the Chriſtian Faith, and his Reaſon for that Command Cogent, For the Lord is at Hand. As if he had ſaid, Have a care what you do, be not bitter nor violent, for the Judge is at the Door: Do as you would be done to, leſt what you deny to others, God ſhould refuſe to you.

And after all this, ſhall the Church of England be leſs tender of Men's Conſciences, than our common Law is of their Lives, which had rather a Thouſand Criminals ſhould eſcape, than that One Innocent ſhould periſh? Give me leave to ſay, that there are many Innocents (Conſcience excepted) now expoſed, Men honeſt, peaceable and uſeful; free of ill Deſigns; that pray for Cæſar, and pay their Tribute to Cæſar.

If any tell us, They have, or may, ill uſe their Toleration. I ſay, this muſt be look't to, and not Liberty therefore refuſed; for the Engliſh Church cannot ſo much forget her own Maxim to Diſſenters, That Propter abuſum non eſt Tollendus uſus. It ſuffices to our Argument, 'tis no neceſſary Conſequence, and that Fact and Time are for us. And if any miſuſe ſuch Freedom, and entitle Conſcience to Miſbehaviour, we have other Laws enough to catch and puniſh the Offenders, without treating One Party with the Spoils of Six. And when Religion becomes no Man's Intereſt, it will hardly ever be any Man's Hypocriſy. Men will chuſe by Conſcience, which at leaſt preſerves Integrity, though it were miſtaken: And if not in the wrong, Truth recompences Inquiry, and Light makes amends for Diſſent.

And ſince a plain Method offers it ſelf, from the Circumſtances of our caſe, I take the Freedom to preſent it for the Model of the intreated Toleration.

Much has been deſired, ſaid and preſt, in Reference to the late King's being Head of a Proteſtant League, which takes in but a Part of the Chriſtian World; the Roman and Grecian Chriſtians being excluded. But I moſt humbly offer, that our Wiſe Men would pleaſe to think of another Title for our King, and that is Head of a Chriſtian League, and give the Experiment here at Home in his own Dominions.

The Chriſtian Religion is admired of All in the Text, and by All acknowledged in the Apoſtle's Creed. Here every Party of Chriſtians meet, and center as in a General. The ſeveral Species of Chriſtians, that this Genus divideth it ſelf into, are thoſe divers Perſwaſions we have within this Kingdom; The Church of England, Roman-Catholicks, Grecians, Lutherans, Preſbyterians, Independents, Anabaptiſts, Quakers, Socinians: Theſe I call ſo many Orders of Chriſtians, that unite in the Text, and differ only in the Comment; All owning One Deity, Saviour and Judge, Good Works, Rewards and Puniſhments: Which Bodies once Regulated, and holding of the Prince as Head of the Government, Maintaining Charity, and Preſſing Piety, will be an Honour to Chriſtianity, a Strength to the Prince, and a Benefit to the Publick: For in Lieu of an unattainable, (at beſt an unſincere) Uniformity, we ſhall have in Civils Unity, and Amity in Faith.

The Jews before, and in the Time of Herod, were divided into divers Sects. There were Phariſees, Sadducees, Herodians, and Eſſenes. They maintain'd their Diſſent without Ruin to the Government: And the Magiſtrates fell under no Cenſure from Chriſt for that Toleration.

The Gentiles, as already has been obſerved, had their Divers Orders of Philoſophers, as Diſagreeing as ever Chriſtians were, and that without Danger to the Peace of the State.

The Turks themſelves ſhow us, that both other Religions, and divers Sects of their own, are very Tolerable, with Security to their Government.

The Roman Church is a conſiderable Inſtance to our Point; for She is made up of divers Orders of both Sexes, of very differing Principles, fomented ſometimes to great Feuds and Controverſies; as between Franciſcans, Dominicans, Jeſuits, and Sorboniſts; yet without Danger to the Political State of the Church. On the contrary, She therefore caſt her ſelf into that Method, That She might ſafely give Vent to Opinion and Zeal, and ſuffer both without Danger of Schiſm. And theſe Regulars are, by the Pope's Grants, priviledg'd with an Exemption from Epiſcopal Viſitation and Juriſdiction.

GOD Almighty inſpire the King's Heart, and the Hearts of His Great Council, to be the Glorious Inſtruments of this Bleſſing to the Kingdom.

I ſhall conclude this PERSWASIVE, with the Judgment of ſome Pious Fathers, and Renowned Princes.

Quadratus and Ariſtides wrote Two Apologies to Adrian, for the Chriſtian Faith, and againſt the Perſecution of it.

Juſtin Martyr, an Excellent Philoſopher and Chriſtian, writ Two Learned Diſſwaſives againſt Perſecution, which he Dedicated (as I take it) to Antoninus Pius, and Marcus Aurelius Antoninus.

Melito, Biſhop of Sardis, a Good and Learned Man, writ a ſmart Defence for the Chriſtian Religion, and a Toleration, Dedicated to Verus.

Tertullian, in his moſt ſharp and excellent Apology for the Chriſtians, faſtens Perſecution upon the Gentiles, as an inſeparable Mark of Superſtition and Error, as he makes the Chriſtian Patience a Sign of Truth. In his Diſcourſe to Scapula, he ſays, 'Tis not the Property of Religion to Perſecute for Religion; She ſhould be received for Her ſelf, not Force.

Hilary, an early and learned Father, againſt Auxentius, ſaith, The Chriſtian Church does not perſecute, but is perſecuted.

Atticus, Biſhop of Conſtantinople, would by no Means have the Miniſter of Nice to reſpect any Opinion or Sect whatſoever, in the Diſtribution of the Money ſent by him for the Relief of Chriſtians; and by no Means to prejudice thoſe that practiſe a contrary Doctrine and Faith to theirs: That he ſhould be ſure to relieve thoſe that Hunger and Thirſt, and have not wherewith to help themſelves, and make that the Rule of his Conſideration. In ſhort, he made the Hereticks to have his Wiſdom in Admiration, in that he would by no Means trouble or moleſt them.

Proclus (another Biſhop of Conſtantinople) was of this Opinion, That it was far eaſier by fair Means to allure unto the Church, than by Force to compel: He determined to vex no Sect whatever, but reſtored to the Church the Renowned Virtue of Meekneſs, required in Chriſtian Miniſters.

If we will next hear the Hiſtorian's own Judgment upon a Toleration, I am of Opinion ſays he) that he is a Perſecutor, that in any Kind of Way, moleſteth ſuch Men as lead a Quiet and Peaceable Life: Thus Socrates in his Third Book: In his Seventh he tells us, That the Biſhop of Sinada, indeed, did baniſh the Hereticks, but neither did he this (ſays he) according to the Rule of the Catholick Church, which is not accuſtomed to perſecute, lib. 7.

Lactantius tells the angry Men of his Time, thus, If you will with Blood, Evil and Torments, defend your Worſhip, it ſhall not thereby be defended, but polluted.

Chryſoſtom ſaith expreſly, That it is not the Manner of the Children of God, to perſecute about their Religion, but an evident Token of Antichriſt.

Thus the Fathers and Doctors of the firſt Ages. That Emperors and Princes have thus believed, let us hear ſome of Greateſt Note, and moſt preſſing to us.

Jerom, a Good and Learned Father, ſaith, That Hereſie muſt be Cut off with the Sword of the Spirit.

Conſtantius, the Father of Conſtantine the Great, laid this down for a Principle, That thoſe that were Diſloyal to God, would never be Truſty to their Prince. And which is more, he liv'd thus, and ſo dy'd, as his Great Speech to his Great Son, on his Death-Bed, amply evidences.

Conſtantine the Great, in his Speech to the Roman Senate, tells them, There is this Difference between Humane and Divine Homage and Service, that the one is compell'd, and the other ought to be free.

Euſebius Pamphilus, in the Life of Conſtantine, tells us, that in his Prayer to God, he ſaid, Let thy People, I beſeech thee, deſire and maintain Peace, Living free from Sedition to the common Good and Benefit of all the World; and thoſe that are led away with Error, let them deſire to live in Peace and Tranquility with the Faithful: For Friendly Humane Society and Commerce with them, will very much avail to bring them to the Right Way. Let no Man moleſt another, but let every one follow the Perſwaſion of their own Conſcience: But let thoſe that have a True Opinion concerning God, be perſwaded, that ſuch as regulate their Lives by God's Holy Laws, do lead an Holy and Upright Life: But thoſe that will not conform thereunto, may have Liberty to erect and ſet up Altars. But we will Maintain the Church and True Religion, which thou haſt committed to our Defence. Moreover, we deſire that they may Joyfully receive and welcome this General Offer of Peace and Concord.

This was the Judgment of the Moſt Celebrated Emperor that ever profeſſed the Chriſtian Faith. I have cited other Emperors in the Body of this Diſcourſe; but becauſe the Worſt are to be commended when they do well, Valens himſelf, charm'd with the Sweetneſs and Strength of the Philoſopher Themiſtius, in his Elegant Oration, grew Moderate towards the Orthodox, whom a little before he had ſeverely treated: Of which theſe were the Heads; That he Perſecuted without Reaſon People of Good Lives: That it was no Crime to think or believe otherwiſe than the Prince believed: That he ought not to be troubled at the Diverſity of Opinions: That the Gentiles were much more divided in their Judgment than the Chriſtians: That it ſufficeth, that every Sect aimed at the Truth, and lived virtuouſly. We have had Modern Royal Examples too.

Stephen, King of Poland, declared his Mind in the Point controverted, thus, I am King of Men, and not of Conſcience; a Commander of Bodies, and not of Souls.

The King of Bohemia was of Opinion, That Mens Conſciences ought in no Sort to be violated, urged, or conſtrained.

And Laſtly, let me add (as what is, or ſhould be of more Force) the Senſe of King James and King Charles the Firſt, Men, as of Supreme Dignity, ſo famed for their Great Natural Abilities and acquired Learning; It is a ſure Rule in Divinity (ſaid King James) that God never loves to Plant his Church by Violence and Bloodſhed. And in his Expoſition on the Twentieth of the Revelations, he ſaith, That Perſecution is the Note of a Falſe Church.

And in the Advice of King Charles the Firſt, to the late King, he ſays, Take Heed of abetting any Factions; your Partial adhering to any one Side, gains you not ſo great Advantages in ſome Men's Hearts, (who are Prone to be of their King's Religion) as it loſeth you in others, who think themſelves, and their Profeſſion, firſt deſpiſed, then perſecuted by you.

Again, Beware of Exaſperating any Factions, by the Croſneſs and Aſperity of ſome Men's Paſſions, Humours, or Private Opinions, imployed by you, grounded only upon their Difference, in leſſer Matters, which are but the Skirts and Suburbs of Religion; wherein a Charitable Connivence and Chriſtian Toleration, often diſſipates their Strength, whom rougher Oppoſition fortifies, and puts the deſpiſed and oppreſſed Party into ſuch Combinations, as may moſt enable them to get a full Revenge on thoſe they count their Perſecutors, who are commonly aſſiſted by that Vulgar Commiſeration that attends all that are ſaid to ſuffer under the Notion of Religion.

Always keep up Solid Piety, and thoſe Fundamental Truths (which mend both Hearts and Lives of Men) with impartial Favour and Juſtice. Your Prerogative is beſt ſhown and exerciſed in Remitting, rather than Exacting the Rigour of Laws; there being nothing worſe than Legal Tyranny.

PART I.

Part I.

I Muſt own, it is my Averſion at this Time, to meddle with Publick Matters, and yet my Duty to the Publick will not let me be Silent. They that move by Principles, muſt not regard Times nor Factions, but what is Juſt, and what is Honourable; and That no Man ought to ſcruple, nor no Time or Intereſt to Conteſt.

The Single Queſtion I go upon, and which does immediately concern and exerciſe the Minds of the Thinking, as well as Talking Men of this Kingdom, is, Whether it be fit to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſts, in Matters of Religion, or not? I take the Affirmative of the Queſtion, and humbly ſubmit my Reaſons to every Reaſonable Conſcience. I ſay Reaſonable, becauſe That which knows not it's own Duty, Principle and Intereſt, is not ſo, and That which is not willing to do to others as it would be done by, leſs deſerves to be thought ſo.

Now there are Three Sorts of People that will find themſelves concerned in this Queſtion, The Church of England, the Roman Catholick, and the Proteſtant Diſſenter, and theſe make up the whole Body of the Kingdom; If it appear to be their Duty, Principle and Intereſt, the Queſtion is gain'd, and no Body is left to complain; and if I am miſtaken, it is with ſo great an Inclination to ſerve them all, that their Good Nature cannot but plead my Excuſe, eſpecially when they conſider I am neither mov'd by Hopes nor Fears. Private Loſs or Gain being farther from my Thought, than I hope they are from a Good Underſtanding.

I ſay, Firſt, then it is the Duty of all of them, becauſe they all profeſs that Religion which makes it their common Duty to do it; Chriſtianity I mean: For no Chriſtian ought to deprive any Man of his Native Right for Matters of Faith and Worſhip towards God, in the Way that he thinks moſt agreeable to the Will of Lactantius tells the angry Men of his Time, thus, If you will with Blood, Evil and Torments, defend your Worſhip, it ſhall not thereby be defended, but polluted.

Chryſoſtom ſaith expreſly, That it is not the Manner of the Children of God, to perſecute about their Religion, but an evident Token of Antichriſt.

Thus the Fathers and Doctors of the firſt Ages. That Emperors and Princes have thus believed, let us hear ſome of Greateſt Note, and moſt preſſing to us.

Jerom, a Good and Learned Father, ſaith, That Hereſie muſt be Cut off with the Sword of the Spirit.

Conſtantius, the Father of Conſtantine the Great, laid this down for a Principle, That thoſe that were Diſloyal to God, would never be Truſty to their Prince. And which is more, he liv'd thus, and ſo dy'd, as his Great Speech to his Great Son, on his Death-Bed, amply evidences.

Conſtantine the Great, in his Speech to the Roman Senate, tells them, There is this Difference between Humane and Divine Homage and Service, that the one is compell'd, and the other ought to be free.

Euſebius Pamphilus, in the Life of Conſtantine, tells us, that in his Prayer to God, he ſaid, Let thy People, I beſeech thee, deſire and maintain Peace, Living free from Sedition to the common Good and Benefit of all the World; and thoſe that are led away with Error, let them deſire to live in Peace and Tranquility with the Faithful: For Friendly Humane Society and Commerce with them, will very much avail to bring them to the Right Way. Let no Man moleſt another, but let every one follow the Perſwaſion of their own Conſcience: But let thoſe that have a True Opinion concerning God, be perſwaded, that ſuch as regulate their Lives by God's Holy Laws, do lead an Holy and Upright Life: But thoſe that will not conform thereunto, may have Liberty to erect and ſet up Altars. But we will Maintain the Church and True Religion, which thou haſt committed to our Defence. Moreover, we deſire that they may Joyfully receive and welcome this General Offer of Peace and Concord.

This was the Judgment of the Moſt Celebrated Emperor that ever profeſſed the Chriſtian Faith. I have cited other Emperors in the Body of this Diſcourſe; but becauſe the Worſt are to be commended when they do well, Valens himſelf, charm'd with the Sweetneſs and Strength of the Philoſopher Themiſtius, in his Elegant Oration, grew Moderate towards the Orthodox, whom a little before he had ſeverely treated: Of which theſe were the Heads; That he Perſecuted without Reaſon People of Good Lives: That it was no Crime to think or believe otherwiſe than the Prince believed: That he ought not to be troubled at the Diverſity of Opinions: That the Gentiles were much more divided in their Judgment than the Chriſtians: That it ſufficeth, that every Sect aimed at the Truth, and lived virtuouſly. We have had Modern Royal Examples too.

Stephen, King of Poland, declared his Mind in the Point controverted, thus, I am King of Men, and not of Conſcience; a Commander of Bodies, and not of Souls.

The King of Bohemia was of Opinion, That Mens Conſciences ought in no Sort to be violated, urged, or conſtrained.

And Laſtly, let me add (as what is, or ſhould be of more Force) the Senſe of King James and King Charles the Firſt, Men, as of Supreme Dignity, ſo famed for their Great Natural Abilities and acquired Learning; It is a ſure Rule in Divinity (ſaid King James) that God never loves to Plant his Church by Violence and Bloodſhed. And in his Expoſition on the Twentieth of the Revelations, he ſaith, That Perſecution is the Note of a Falſe Church.

And in the Advice of King Charles the Firſt, to the late King, he ſays, Take Heed of abetting any Factions; your Partial adhering to any one Side, gains you not ſo great Advantages in ſome Men's Hearts, (who are Prone to be of their King's Religion) as it loſeth you in others, who think themſelves, and their Profeſſion, firſt deſpiſed, then perſecuted by you.

Again, Beware of Exaſperating any Factions, by the Croſneſs and Aſperity of ſome Men's Paſſions, Humours, or Private Opinions, imployed by you, grounded only upon their Difference, in leſſer Matters, which are but the Skirts and Suburbs of Religion; wherein a Charitable Connivence and Chriſtian Toleration, often diſſipates their Strength, whom rougher Oppoſition fortifies, and puts the deſpiſed and oppreſſed Party into ſuch Combinations, as may moſt enable them to get a full Revenge on thoſe they count their Perſecutors, who are commonly aſſiſted by that Vulgar Commiſeration that attends all that are ſaid to ſuffer under the Notion of Religion.

Always keep up Solid Piety, and thoſe Fundamental Truths (which mend both Hearts and Lives of Men) with impartial Favour and Juſtice. Your Prerogative is beſt ſhown and exerciſed in Remitting, rather than Exacting the Rigour of Laws; there being nothing worſe than Legal Tyranny. 1686.

PART I.

Part I.

I Muſt own, it is my Averſion at this Time, to meddle with Publick Matters, and yet my Duty to the Publick will not let me be Silent. They that move by Principles, muſt not regard Times nor Factions, but what is Juſt, and what is Honourable; and That no Man ought to ſcruple, nor no Time or Intereſt to Conteſt.

The Single Queſtion I go upon, and which does immediately concern and exerciſe the Minds of the Thinking, as well as Talking Men of this Kingdom, is, Whether it be fit to Repeal the Penal Laws and Teſts, in Matters of Religion, or not? I take the Affirmative of the Queſtion, and humbly ſubmit my Reaſons to every Reaſonable Conſcience. I ſay Reaſonable, becauſe That which knows not it's own Duty, Principle and Intereſt, is not ſo, and That which is not willing to do to others as it would be done by, leſs deſerves to be thought ſo.

Now there are Three Sorts of People that will find themſelves concerned in this Queſtion, The Church of England, the Roman Catholick, and the Proteſtant Diſſenter, and theſe make up the whole Body of the Kingdom; If it appear to be their Duty, Principle and Intereſt, the Queſtion is gain'd, and no Body is left to complain; and if I am miſtaken, it is with ſo great an Inclination to ſerve them all, that their Good Nature cannot but plead my Excuſe, eſpecially when they conſider I am neither mov'd by Hopes nor Fears. Private Loſs or Gain being farther from my Thought, than I hope they are from a Good Underſtanding.

I ſay, Firſt, then it is the Duty of all of them, becauſe they all profeſs that Religion which makes it their common Duty to do it; Chriſtianity I mean: For no Chriſtian ought to deprive any Man of his Native Right for Matters of Faith and Worſhip towards God, in the Way that he thinks moſt agreeable to the Will of God; becauſe it is neceſſary to a Chriſtian to believe, That Faith is the Gift of God alone, and that He only is Lord of Conſcience, and is able truly to Enlighten, Perſwade, and Eſtabliſh it; and conſequently that prejudicing Men in their Perſons or Eſtates, or depriving them of any Station in the Government, they might otherwiſe, in their Turn, be capable to ſerve the Publick in, is contrary to the Tenderneſs and Equity of that Religion; which will yet farther appear, if we conſider that Chriſtianity is the Sole Religion of the World, that is Built on the Principles of Love; which brought with it the greateſt Evidences of Truth: Equally convincing our Underſtandings with it's Light, and bearing down our Senſes with it's Miracles: Which ſilenc'd the Oracles of the Heathens by the Divine Power preſent with it, and vanquiſht their Hearts, that had left nothing elſe to conquer, leading Kings and Emperors with their Courts and Armies in Triumph, after the Deſpiſed Croſs of Him, who was the Holy and Bleſſed Author of it.

It was He that laid not his Religion in Worldly Empire, nor uſed the Methods of Worldly Princes to Propagate it; as it came from Heaven, ſo That only ſhould have the Honour of protecting and promoting it. His whole Buſineſs to Mankind, from firſt to laſt, was Love. 'Twas firſt Love in his Father to ſend Him (as Saint John teaches) God ſo loved the World, that He ſent His Son, &c. It was Love in Jeſus Chriſt to come on that Errand; that He, who thought it no Robbery to be Equal with God, ſhould take the Form of a Servant to adopt us Children, and make himſelf of no Reputation with the World, that he might make us of Reputation with God His Father.

And he did not only come in much Love, but preach'd it and preſt it both to Friends and Foes; Love one another; Love Enemies; Do Good to them that Hate you; Forgive them that Treſpaſs againſt you; What you would that other Men ſhould do unto you, do that unto them: By theſe Things ſhall all Men know you are my Diſciples; for I came not to deſtroy Men's Lives, no, not for Religion it ſelf; for my Kingdom, Power, Force, Weapons, and Victory, are not of this World. In all this, Love prevails: It was His Great, His New, His Laſt Commandment; of all his Diſciples, the moſt purſued by His Beloved One, that in his Boſom had learn'd His Heart, as his Divine Doctrine of Love in his Epiſtles tells us.

As He Liv'd in Love, ſo He Died in Love, with us, and for us, and that while we were Rebellious too; ay, He Pray'd and Dy'd for them who put Him to Death, ſhewing us (ſays St. Peter) an Example that we ſhould follow His Steps. And what are they? Doubtleſs the Steps of Love, the Path he trod: To do Good to Mankind, Enemies as well as Friends, that we may be like our Heavenly Father, that cauſes His Sun to ſhine, and His Rain to fall upon the Juſt and Unjuſt. This muſt be the Apoſtle's Meaning, for the Reſt of His Paſſion was inimitable.

Now if this be the Doctrine of Chriſt, the Nature of Chriſtianity, the Practice of the Primitive Church, that like Adam, was Created in full Strength, Beauty and Wiſdom, and ſo an Example to ſucceeding Ages of Religion, and to which we ſo often refer as our Original; with what Pretence to a Chriſtian Conſcience, can any one ſtickle to keep Impriſoning, Baniſhing, Impoveriſhing, Hanging and Quartering Laws on Foot for Religion Sake, but eſpecially againſt ſuch as are by Creed Profeſſors of Chriſtianity as well as themſelves.

I know the Caſe is put hard by thoſe that have the Laws on their Side, We do this to ſave our ſelves; but an harder Caſe than Chriſt's can never be put, whoſe Anſwer in his, ought to reſolve theirs fully.

Chriſt is ſent by his Father for the Salvation of the World: He introduces and proves his Miſſion by Miracles, and the Great Authority of his Word and Doctrine: His Followers fully ſatiſfied who He was, whence He came, what He taught, and how eminently confirm'd, grew impatient at Contradiction; they could not bear the leaſt Diſſent; for when ſome of the Samaritans refuſed to entertain their Lord, becauſe they thought he was going for Jeruſalem, the Place of their greateſt Averſion, theſe Diſciples were for having but the Word from his Mouth, and they would, in Imitation of Elijah, have called for Fire from Heaven to have deſtroy'd them. But He turned and rebuked them, and ſaid, Ye know not what Manner of Spirit ye are of, for the Son of Man is not come to Deſtroy Men's Lives, but to Save them. This Anſwer is to Purpoſe, and for all Times, to be ſure Chriſtian Ones; and the higher the Pretenſions of any Party are to Chriſtianity, the more inexcuſable if they practiſe the contrary. Would not Chriſt then hurt them that refuſed him, and can we hurt our Neighbours for not receiving us? He condemned that Spirit in His Diſciples, and ſhall we uphold the ſame Spirit, and that by Law too, which He condemned by his Goſpel? This is Killing for God's Sake, expreſly charg'd by Chriſt with Impiety. They ſhall think, ſays he to his Diſciples, they do God good Service to kill you; Who ſhould think ſo? Why the Chriſtian Perſecutors. Is it their Property to do ſo? Yes; What ſhall one think then of thoſe Chriſtians that profeſs it.

The Jews were grievouſly puniſhed of God, for that Abomination of Sacrificing their Children to Moloch, but theſe Laws, though they change the Object, they have not leſſen'd the Sin; for they offer up Man, Woman and Child, and tho' they ſay, 'Tis to God, no Matter for that, ſince it makes their Caſe worſe, for 'tis to imagine that ſo Good, ſo Juſt, ſo Senſible, ſo merciful a Being, can take Pleaſure in ſo much Cruelty. Well, But if we muſt not knock Folks on the Head, what muſt we do with them? Take an Anſwer at the Mouth of Truth and Wiſdom: Let the Tares and Wheat grow together till the Harveſt; What's that? He tells you, 'Tis the End of the World; ſo that whatever the Church of England is, 'tis certain Chriſt is for a Toleration, and His Doctrine is always in Faſhion: What He was, He is, and will be; He went not by Reaſons of State, or Cuſtoms of Countries; His Judgment was better Built, who came to give Law, and not to receive it, and 'tis A Light and Rule to all Times. And He that Loves Father, or Mother, or Wife, or Children, or Houſe, or Land, better than HIM, that is, His Doctrine (of which this is ſo great a Part) is not worthy of Him; and I fear no other Reaſon induces the Church of England to decline it.

To confirm what has been ſaid, tho' I deſign Brevity, let me not loſe another Paſſage very pregnant to our Purpoſe; when His Diſciples had accompliſh'd their Firſt Miſſion, at their Return they gave Him the Hiſtory of their Travels: Among the reſt, they tell Him of One they met with, That in His Name Caſt out Devils, but becauſe He would not follow with them, They forbad Him: Here is at leaſt a Diſſenting Chriſtian, tho' a Believer, yet it ſeems not One of that cloſer Congregation; we alſo ſee their Zeal and Sentence. But what ſays the Maſter yet alive, and with them, the Infallible Doctor, in whoſe Mouth was no Guile, who had not the Spirit by Meaſure, and was the Great Wiſdom of God to His People, Was He of the ſame Mind, or did He leave them without Rule in the Point? His Anſwer is this: And JESUS ſaid to them, Forbid Him not, for he that is not againſt us is for us The Prohibition is taken off, and their Judgment revers'd; and from His, to be ſure, there lies no Appeal. For tho' a Power of Deciſion were allow'd to ſome One or more on Earth, in Matters obſcure and undetermin'd, Yet in Caſes already adjudged by the Son of God Himſelf, who had the Chair, and could not Err, there can be no Room for another Judge.

Now to apply it, I muſt firſt ſay, I find no ſuch Diſciples among thoſe that are of the Side of keeping up the Penal Laws; God knows, the Diſparity is but too unequal. But next, if they were all Twelve in Weſtminſter-Abby, and ſhould be of the Side of upholding the Penal Laws (which is the wrong Side they were of before) I ſhould beg their Pardon, if I were of their Maſter's Mind, and objected his Wiſdom to their Zeal, and his Gentle Rule to their harſh and narrow Judgment. And I beſeech the Church of England to conſider, that no Pretence can excuſe Her Diſſent, and leſs Her croſs Practice to the Judgment of Her Saviour: A Judgment that ſeems given and ſettled for the Conduct of the Church on the like Occaſions, in ſucceeding Times: And 'tis pity any Worldly Thing ſhould have Place with Her to divert Her Obedience. Did Chriſt then come to Save Men's Lives, and not to Deſtroy them? And ſhould She (She I ſay that pretends to be a Reformed Church) uphold thoſe Laws that do deſtroy them? HE, Alas! went to another Village inſtead of Burning them, or theirs, for refuſing Him. And She forbids any, that belongs to any other, to lodge in Her's, upon Pain of loſing Life or Eſtate: This may make Her a Samaritan Indeed, but Not the Good One, whoſe Example would have taught Her, inſtead of theſe ſharp and ruder Remedies, to have poured the Oil of Peace and Gladneſs into thoſe Chops and Wounds, that Time, and Heats of all Hands, had made in every Religious Party of Men. Nor does She loſe any Thing by Repealing thoſe Laws, but the Power of Perſecuting, and a Good Church would never have the Temptation. Come, Some-Body muſt begin to Forgive, let Her not leave that Honour to another, nor draw upon Her ſelf the Guilt and Miſchief of refuſing it. She pretends to fear the Strokes of the Romaniſts, but I would fain know of Her, if following their Example will Convert them, or Secure Her? Does She hope to keep them out by the Weapons that have fail'd in their Hands, or can She Honourably cenſure Perſecution in them, and yet uſe it Her ſelf?

But ſhe is extremely ſcandal'd and ſcared at the Severity upon Proteſtants in France. 'Tis certainly very ill; but do not the Laws ſhe is ſo fond of point at the ſame Work, Conformity, or Ruin. And don't we know, that in ſome Places, and upon ſome Parties, her Magiſtrates have plow'd as deep Furrows, eſpecially within theſe ſix and Twenty Years. Husbands ſeparated from their Wives, Parents from their Children, the Widow's Bed and the Orphans Milk made a Prize for Religion, Houſes ſtript, Barns and Fields ſwept clean, Priſons crowded without Regard to Sex or Age, and ſome of both Sorts dungeon'd to Death, and all for Religion. If ſhe ſays they were peeviſh Men, Bigots, or mov'd by private Intereſt, ſhe ſtill made the Laws, and ſays no more for her ſelf than the French ſay for their King, which yet ſhe refuſes to take for an Anſwer. Perhaps I could parallel ſome of the ſevereſt Paſſages in that Kingdom out of the Actions of ſome Members of the Church of England in cool Blood, that are even yet for continuing the Penal Laws upon their plundered Neighbours; ſo that this Reflection of hers upon France, is more popular than juſt from her. But I beſeech her to look upon a Country four Times bigger than France, Germany I mean, and ſhe will there ſee both Religions practis'd with great Eaſe and Amity, yet of this we muſt not hear one Word: I hope it is not for Fear of imitating it. However, 'tis diſingenuous to object the Miſchiefs of Popery to a general Eaſe, when we ſee it is the Way to prevent them. This is but in the Name of Popery to keep all to her ſelf, as well from Proteſtant Diſſenters as Roman Catholicks. How Chriſtian, how equal, how Safe, that narrow Method is, becomes her well to conſider, and methinks ſhe ought not to be long about it.

I know ſhe flatters her ſelf, and others too believe, ſhe is a Bulwark againſt Popery; and with that, without any farther Security to other Proteſtants, wipes her Mouth of all old Scores, and makes her preſent Court for Aſſiſtance. But when that Word Bulwark is examin'd, I fear it appears to mean no more than this, That ſhe would keep out Popery for that Reaſon, for which ſhe apprehends Popery would turn her out, viz. Temporal Intereſt. But may I without Offence aſk her, when ſhe kept Perſecution out? Or if ſhe keeps out Popery for any Body's Sake but her own? Nay, if it be not to hold the Power ſhe has in her Hands, that ſhe would frighten other Parties (now ſhe has done her Worſt) with what Miſchief Popery would do them when it has Power. But to ſpeak freely, can ſhe be a Bulwark in the Caſe, that has been bringing the worſt Part of Popery in theſe ſix and twenty Years, if Perſecution be ſo as ſhe ſays it is. This would be called Canting to the World in others. But I hear ſhe begins to ſee her Fault, is heartily ſorry for it, and promiſes to do ſo no more: And why may not Popery be as wiſe, that has alſo burnt her Fingers with the ſame Work? Their praying for Eaſe by Law, looks as if they choſe That, rather than Power, for Security; and if ſo, Why may not the Papiſts Live as well as ſhe Reign? I am none of their Advocate, I am no Papiſt, but I would be juſt and merciful too. However, I muſt tell her, that keeping the Laws on Foot, by which ſhe did the Miſchief, is none of the plaineſt Evidences of her Repentance: They that can believe it, have little Reaſon to quarrel at the Unaccountableneſs of Tranſubſtantiation. It is unjuſt in Popery to invade her Privileges, and can it be juſt in her to provoke it, by denying a Chriſtian Liberty? Or can ſhe expect what ſhe will not give? Or not do as ſhe would be done by, becauſe ſhe fears others will not obſerve the ſame Rule to her? Is not this doing Evil that Good may come of it, and that uncertain too, againſt an expreſs Command as well as common Charity? But to ſpeak freely, whether we regard the Circumſtances of the King, the Religion of his Children, the Inequality of the Number and Strength of thoſe of each of their Communions, we muſt conclude, that the Averſion of the Church of England to this intreated Liberty, cannot reaſonably be thought to come from the Fear ſhe has of the Prevalency of Popery, but the Loſs of that Power the Law gives her to domineer over all Diſſenters. And is not this a Rare Motive for a Chriſtian Church to continue Penal Laws for Religion? If her Piety be not able to maintain her upon equal Terms, methinks her having ſo much the whip Hand and Start of all others, ſhould ſatisfy her Ambition, and quiet her Fears; for 'tis poſſible for her to keep the Churches if the Laws were aboliſhed; all the Difference is, ſhe could not Force: She might perſwade and convince what ſhe could: And pray, Is not that enough for a true Church, without Goals, Whips, Halters and Gibbets? O what Corruption is this that has prevail'd over Men of ſuch Pretenſions to Light and Conſcience? that they do not, or will not, ſee nor feel their own Principles one Remove from themſelves; but ſacrifice the nobleſt Part of the Reformation to Ambition, and compel Men to truckle their tender Conſciences to the Grandure and Dominion of their Doctors.

But becauſe the Sons of the Church of England keep, at this Time, ſuch a Stir in her Favour, and fix her Excellency in her Oppoſition to Popery, it is worth while to conſider a little farther, if really the moſt feared and diſagreeable Part of Popery, in her own Opinion, does not belong to her, and if it does, ſhould we not be in a fine Condition, to be in Love with our Fetters, and to Court our Miſery?

That Part of Popery which the Church of England with moſt Succeſs objects againſt, is her Violence. This is that only ſhe can pretend to fear: Her Doctrines ſhe partly profeſſes, or thinks ſhe can eaſily refute. No Body counts her Doctors Conjurers for their Tranſubſtantiation, or dangerous to the State for their Beads, or their Purgatory. But forcing others to their Faith, or ruining them for refuſing it, is the terrible Thing we are taught by her to apprehend. Now granting this to be the Caſe, in Reference to the Roman Religion, where it is in the Chair. I aſk, if the Church of England, with her better Doctrines, has not been guilty of this Impiety, and for that Cauſe more blameable than the Church ſhe oppoſes ſo much? If we look into her Acts of State, we find them many, and bitter, againſt all Sorts of Diſſenters. There is nigh twenty Laws made, and yet in Force, to conſtrain Conformity, and they have been executed too, as far and as often as ſhe thought it fit for her Intereſt to let them. Some have been Hang'd, many Baniſh'd, more Impriſon'd, and ſome to Death; and abundance Impoveriſh'd; and all this merely for Religion: Though, by a baſe and barbarous Uſe of Words, it has been call'd Treaſon, Sedition, Routs and Riots; the worſt of Aggravations, ſince they are not contented to make People unhappy for their Diſſent, but rob them of all they had left, their Innocency. This has been her State Act, to coin Guilt, and make Men dangerous, to have her Ends upon them. But that Way of Palliating Perſecution, by rendering a Thing that it is not, and puniſhing Men for Crimes they never committed, ſhews but little Conſcience in the Projectors. The Church of England cries out againſt Tranſubſtantiation, becauſe of the Inviſibility of the Change. She don't ſee Chriſt there, and therefore he is not there, and yet her Sons do the ſame Thing. For though all the Tokens of a Riot are as inviſible in a Diſſenter's Meeting, as that in the Tranſubſtantiation, yet it muſt be a Riot without any more to do; the Engliſh of which is, 'tis a Riot to pray to God in the humbleſt and peaceableſt Manner in a Conventicle.

I know it is ſaid, The Blood-ſhed in the foregoing Reign, and the Plots of the Papiſts againſt Queen Elizabeth, drew thoſe Laws from the Church of England. But this was no Reaſon why ſhe ſhould do ill becauſe they had done ſo: Beſides, it may be anſwered, that that Religion having ſo long intermixt it ſelf with worldly Power, it gave Way to take the Revenges of it. And certainly the Great Men of the Church of England endeavouring to intercept Queen Mary, by proclaiming the Lady Jane Gray, and the Apprehenſion the Papiſts had of the better Title of Mary Queen of Scots, together with a long Poſſeſſion, were ſcurvy Temptations to kindle ill Deſigns againſt that extraordinary Queen. But tho' nothing can excuſe and leſs juſtify thoſe cruel Proceedings, yet if there were any Reaſon for the Laws, it is plainly remov'd, for the Intereſts are joined, and have been ſince King James the firſt came to the Crown. However, 'tis certain there were Laws enough, or they might have had them, to puniſh all civil Enormities, without the Neceſſity of making any againſt them as Papiſts. And ſo the civil Government had ſtood upon it's own Legs, and Vices only againſt it had been puniſhable by it. In ſhort, it was the falſeſt Step that was made in all that great Queen's Reign, and the moſt diſhonourable to the Principles of the firſt Reformers, and therefore I know no better Reaſon why it ſhould be continued, than that which made the Cardinal in the Hiſtory of the Council of Trent oppoſe the Reformation at Rome. That tho' it was true that they were in the Wrong, yet the admitting of it approv'd the Judgment of their Enemies, and ſo good-night to Infallibility. Let not this be the Practice of the Church of England, and the rather, becauſe ſhe does not pretend to it: But let her reflect, that ſhe has loſt her King from her Religion, and they that have got him, naturally hope for Eaſe for theirs by him, that 'tis the End they laboured, and the great Uſe they have for him, and I would fain wonder that ſhe never ſaw it before; but whether ſhe did or no, why ſhould ſhe begrudge it, at leaſt refuſe it now? ſince 'tis plain, that there is nothing we eſteem dangerous in Popery that other Laws are not ſufficient to ſecure us from: Have we not enough of them? let Her think of more, and do the beſt ſhe can to diſcover Plotters, puniſh Traytors, ſuppreſs the Seditious, and keep the Peace better than thoſe we have can enable us to do. But, for God's Sake, let us never direct Laws againſt Men for the Cauſe of Religion, or puniſh them before they have otherwiſe done amiſs. Let Men's Works, not their Opinions, turn the Edge of the Magiſtrate's Sword againſt them, elſe 'tis beheading them before they are born.

Part I.

By the Common Law of this Kingdom there muſt be ſome real and proper Overt-act that proves Treaſon; ſome Malice that proves Sedition; and ſome violent Action that proves a Rout or Riot. If ſo, to call any Sort of Religious Orders, the one, or praying to God in any Way out of Faſhion, the other, is prepoſterous, and puniſhing People for it, down right Murder or Breach of the Peace, according to the true Uſe of Words and the old Law of England.

If the Church of England fears the Growth of Popery, let her be truer to the Religion ſhe owns, and betake her ſelf to Faith, rather than Force, by a Pious, Humble, and a Good Example: To convince and perſwade, which is the higheſt Honour to any Church, and the greateſt Victory over Men. I am for a National Church as well as ſhe, ſo it be by Conſent, and not by Conſtraint. But coercive Churches have the ſame Principle, though not the ſame Intereſt. A Church, by Law Eſtabliſh'd, is a State Church, and that is no Argument of Verity, unleſs the State that makes her ſo be infallible; and becauſe that will not be aſſerted, the other can never oblige the Conſcience, and conſequently the Compulſion ſhe uſes, is unreaſonable. This very Principle juſtifies the King of France, and the Inquiſition. For Laws being equally of Force in all Countries where they are made, it muſt be as much a Fault in the Church of England's Judgment to be a Proteſtant at Rome, or a Calviniſt at Paris, as to be a Papiſt at London: Then where is Truth or Conſcience but in the Laws of Countries! which renders her an Hobbiſt, notwithſtanding her long and loud Clamours againſt the Leviathan.

I beg her, for the Love of Chriſt, that ſhe would think of theſe Things, and not eſteem me her Enemy for performing the Part of ſo good a Friend. Plain-dealing becomes that Character; no Matter whether the Way be agreeable, ſo it be right: We are all to do our Duty, and leave the reſt to God: He can beſt anſwer for our Obedience, that Commands it; and our Dependence upon his Word will be our Security in our Conduct. What Weight is it to a Church, that ſhe is the Church by Law Eſtabliſh'd, when no human Law can make a true Church? A True Church is of Chriſt's making, and is by Goſpel Eſtabliſh'd. 'Tis a Reflection to a Church that would be thought true, to ſtoop to human Laws for her Eſtabliſhment. I have been often ſcandal'd at that Expreſſion from the Sons of the Church of England, eſpecially thoſe of the Robe, what do you talk for? our Religion is by Law Eſtabliſh'd, as if that determined the Queſtion of it's Truth againſt all other Perſwaſions.

The Jews had this to ſay againſt our Saviour, We have a Law, and by our Law he ought to Dye. The Primitive Chriſtians, and ſome of our firſt Reformers, died as by Law Eſtabliſhed, if that would mend the Matter; but does that make it lawful to a Chriſtian Conſcience? we muſt ever demur to this Plea. No greater Argument of a Church's Defection from Chriſtianity than turning Perſecutor. 'Tis true, the Scripture ſays, The Earth ſhall help the Woman, but that was to ſave her ſelf, not to deſtroy others: For 'tis the Token that is given by the Holy Ghoſt of a falſe Church; That none muſt Buy or Sell in her Dominions that will not receive her Mark in their Forehead, or Right Hand. That is, by going to Church againſt Conſcience, or bribing luſtily to ſtay at Home.

Things don't change tho' Men do. Perſecution is ſtill the ſame, let the Hand alter never ſo often; But the Sin may not: For doubtleſs it is greateſt in thoſe that make the higheſt Claim to Reformation. For while they plead their own Light for doing ſo, they hereby endeavour to extinguiſh another's Light that can't concur. What a Man can't do, it is not his Fault he don't do, nor ſhould he be compelled to do it, and leaſt of all puniſh'd for not doing it. No Church can give Faith, and therefore can't force it; for what is Conſtrain'd is not Believ'd; ſince Faith is in that Senſe free, and Conſtraint gives no Time to aſſent; I ſay, what I don't will is not I, and what I don't chuſe is none of mine, and another's Faith can't ſave me tho' it ſhould ſave him. So that this Method never obtains the End deſigned, ſince it ſaves no body, becauſe it converts no body; it may breed Hypocriſy, but that is quite another Thing than Salvation.

What then is the Uſe of Penal Laws? only to ſhew the Sincerity of them that Suffer, and Cruelty of thoſe that make and execute them. And all Time tells us they have ever fail'd thoſe that have leaned upon them; They have always been Loſers at laſt; Beſides, it is a moſt unaccountable Obſtinacy in the Church of England to ſtickle to uphold them, for after having made it a Matter of Religion and Conſcience to addreſs the late King in Behalf of This, to think he ſhould leave Conſcience behind him in Flanders, or when they waited on him to the Crown, that he ſhould ſend it thither upon a Pilgrimage, is want of Wit at beſt, pardon the Cenſure. Could they Conſcientiouſly oppoſe his Excluſion for his Religion, and now his Religion becauſe he will not leave it? Or can they reaſonably maintain thoſe Teſts that excluded him when Duke of York, while they endured none to hinder him from the Crown? I heartily beg the Church of England's Excuſe, if I ſay I can't apprehend her: Perhaps the Fault is mine, but ſure I am ſhe is extremely dark. How could ſhe hope for this King without his Conſcience? or conceive that his Honour or Conſcience would let him leave the Members of his Communion under the Laſh of ſo many Deſtroying Laws? Would ſhe be ſo ſerv'd by a Prince of her own Religion, and ſhe in the like Circumſtances? She would not, let her talk 'till Doom's-day.

To object the King's Promiſe, when he came to the Crown, againſt the Repeal of the Penal Laws, ſhews not his Inſincerity, but her Uncharitableneſs, or that really ſhe has a very weak Place: For it is plain the King firſt declared his own Religion, and then promiſed to maintain her's; but was that to be without, or together with his own? His Words ſhews he intended that his own ſhould Live, tho' t'other might Reign. I ſay again, it is not credible that a Prince of any Sincerity can refuſe a Being to his own Religion, when he continues another in it's well-being. This were to act upon State not Conſcience, and to make more Conſcience to uphold a Religion he cannot be of, than of giving Eaſe to one his Conſcience obliges him to be of. I cannot imagine how this Thought could enter into any Head that had Brains, or Heart that had Honeſty. And, to ſay true, they muſt be a Sort of State Conſciences, Conſciences as by Law Eſtabliſhed, that can follow the Law againſt their Convictions.

But this is not all I have to obſerve from that Objection: It implies too evidently, firſt, that ſhe thinks her ſelf ſhaken, if the Penal Laws be repealed; then by Law Eſtabliſh'd ſhe muſt mean, Eſtabliſhed by thoſe Penal Laws. Secondly, That the King having promiſed to maintain her, as by Law Eſtabliſhed, he ought not to endeavour their Repeal by which ſhe is eſtabliſhed. I confeſs this is very cloſe arguing, but then ſhe muſt not take it ill, if all Men think her ill founded; for any thing muſt be ſo, that is eſtabliſhed by deſtroying Laws? Laws, that Time and Practice have declared Enemies to Property and Conſcience. O let her not hold by that Charter, nor point thither for her Eſtabliſhment and Defence, if ſhe would be thought a Chriſtian Church.

Plutarch had rather one ſhould think there never was ſuch a Man in the World, than that Plutarch was an ill Man. Shall the Church of England, that glories in a greater Light, be more concerned for her Power than her Credit? To be, than to be that which ſhe ſhould be? I would ſay, far be it from her, for her own Sake, and which is of much more Moment, for the Sake of the general Cauſe of Religion.

Let us ſee therefore if there be not another Way of underſtanding thoſe Words more decent to the King, and more honourable for her, viz. that ſhe is in the National Chair, has the Churches and Revenues, and is Mother of thoſe that do not adhere to any ſeparate Communion, and that the King has promiſed to maintain her in this Poſt from the Invaſions of any other Perſwaſion that would wreſt theſe Privileges out of her Hands: This he promiſed formerly; this he has very particularly repeated in his gracious Declaration: But to ruin Men that would not conform, while himſelf was ſo great a Diſſenter, and came ſuch, to her Knowledge, to the Crown, can be no Part of his Promiſes in the Opinion of Common Senſe and Charity. Is there no Difference to be obſerved between not turning her out, and Deſtroying all others not of her Communion: He will not turn her out, there's his Promiſe, and he has not done it; There's his Performance: Nor will he do it, I am confident, if ſhe pleaſes. But there's no Manner of Neceſſity from this Engagement that all Parties elſe are to be confounded. Tho' if it were ſo, 'tis ill Divinity to preſs ſuch Promiſes upon a Prince's Conſcience, that can't be performed with a good One by Any Body.

Let us remember how often ſhe has upbraided her Diſſenters with this, Render to Cæſar the Things that are Cæſar's, whilſt they have returned upon her t'other half of the Text, and render unto God the Things that are God's. It happens now that God and Cæſar are both of a Mind, which perhaps does not always fall out, at leaſt about the Point in Hand. Will ſhe diſſent from both now? Her Caſe, believe me, will be doubtful then. I beg her to be Conſiderate. 'Tis the greateſt Time of Trial ſhe has met with ſince ſhe was a Church. To acquit her ſelf like a Member of Chriſt's Univerſal One, let her keep nothing that voids her Pretenſions. The Babyloniſh Garment will undo her. Practices inconſiſtent with her Reformation will ruin her. The Martyr's Blood won the Day, and her Severity has almoſt loſt it. They ſuffered by Law, ſhe makes Laws for Suffering. Is this an Imitation of their Practice, to uphold the Weapons of their Deſtruction? I muſt tell her, 'tis being a Martyr for Perſecution, and not by it. Another Path than that the Holy Ancients, and our humble Anceſtors trod, and which will lead her to be deſerted and contemned of every Body that counts it ſafer to follow the bleſſed Rule and practiſe of Chriſt and his inſpired Meſſengers, than her narrow and worldly Policies. But that which heightens the Reproach, is the Offer of the Romaniſts themſelves to make a perpetual Civil Peace with her, and that ſhe refuſes. Would the Martyrs have done this? ſurely no. Let her remember the firſt Argument honeſt old Fox advances againſt that Church, is the Church of England's preſent Darling, viz. Penal Laws for Religion; as ſhe may ſee at the Beginning of his firſt Volume: Doubtleſs he was much in the Right, which makes her extremely in the Wrong. Nothing, ſays the Prophet, muſt harm in God's Holy Mountain, and that's the Church, ſays Fox, and therefore he ſays, Chriſt's Church never Perſecutes. Leave then God with his own Work, and Chriſt with his own Kingdom. As it is not of the World, let not the World touch it; no, not to uphold it, though they that bear it ſhould trip by the Way. Remember Uzzah, he would needs ſupport the Ark when the Oxen Stumbled; but was ſtruck Dead for his Pains. The Preſumption is more than parallel. Chriſt promiſed to be preſent with his Church to the End of the World. He bids them fear not, and told them, that ſufficient was the Day for the Evil thereof. How? with Penal Laws? no ſuch Matter; but his Divine Preſence. Therefore it was, He called not for Legions to fight for him, becauſe his Work needed it not. They that want them have another Sort of Work to do: And 'tis too plain, that Empire, and not Religion, has been too much the Buſineſs. But, O let it not be ſo any more! To be a True Church is better than to be a National One; eſpecially as ſo upheld. Preſs Virtue, Puniſh Vice, Diſpenſe with Opinion; Perſwade, but don't Impoſe. Are there Tares in Opinion? let them alone; you heard they are to grow with the Wheat 'till Harveſt, that is, the End of the World. Should they not be plucked up before? No; and 'tis Angels Work at laſt too. Chriſt, that knew all Men, ſaw no Hand on Earth fit for that Buſineſs. Let us not then uſurp their Office. Beſides, we are to love Enemies; this is the Great Law of our Religion; by what Law then are we to Perſecute them? and if not Enemies, not Friends and Neighbours certainly.

The Apoſtle rejoyced that Chriſt was Preached out of Envy, If ſo, I am ſure we ought not to envy Chriſtians the Enjoyment of the Liberty of their Conſciences. Chriſtianity ſhould be propagated by the Spirit of Chriſtianity, and not by Violence or Perſecution, for that's the Spirit of Antichriſtianity. Nor for Fear of it, ſhould we, of Chriſtians, become Antichriſtians. Where is Faith in God? Where is Truſt in Providence? Let us do our Duty, and leave the reſt with Him; and not do Evil that Good may come of it; for that ſhews a Diſtruſt in God, and a Confidence in our own Inventions for Security. No Reaſon of State can excuſe our Diſobedience to his Rule; and we deſert the Principles of our Heavenly Maſter when we decline it. The Queſtion is about Conſcience, about this we can none of us be too tender, nor exemplary. 'Tis in right doing that Chriſtians can hope for Succeſs; and for true Victory only through Faith and Patience. But if to avoid what we fear, we contradict our Principles, we may juſtly apprehend that God will deſert us in an unlawful Way of maintaining them. Perhaps this may be God's Time of trying all Parties, what we will do; whether we will rely upon him or our own feeble Proviſions; whether we will allow what we our ſelves, in our Turn, have all of us deſired; if not, may we not expect to ſuffer the Thing we would inflict? for our Penal Laws cannot ſecure us from the Turns of Providence, and leſs ſupport us under them. Let us conſider the true Ground of the Difficulty that is made, if it be not partial and light in God's Scale; for to that Tryal all Things muſt come, and his Judgment is inevitable as well as infallible. Beſides, if we have not tried all other Methods, we are inexcuſable in being ſo tenacious for this. I do therefore, in all Humility, beſeech all Sorts of Profeſſors of Chriſtianity in theſe Kingdoms, to abſtract themſelves from thoſe Jealouſies which worldly Motives are apt to kindle in their Minds, and with an even and undiſturbed Soul purſue their Chriſtian Duty in this great Conjuncture; Conſidering the Race is not to the Swift, nor the Battle to the Strong, and that for all our Watchmen, 'tis God alone (at laſt) that keeps the City. Not that I would decline a fitting, but an unchriſtian Proviſion: For though the Foundation were never ſo true, yet if our Superſtructure be Hay and Stubble, (our own narrow Devices) the Fire will conſume it, and our Labour will be worſe than in vain. Let us not therefore Sow what we would not Reap, becauſe we muſt Reap what we Sow: And remember who told us, what we meaſure to others ſhall be meaſured to us again. Let us therefore do unto all Parties of Men, as we would be done unto by them in their Turn of Power: Leſt our Fear of their Undutifulneſs, ſhould tempt us out of our Duty, and ſo draw upon our ſelves the Miſchiefs we are afraid of. Sacred Writ is full of this, in the Doctrine of both Teſtaments; and, as we profeſs to believe it, we are inexcuſable if we do not practiſe it. Let the Spirit then of Chriſtian Religion prevail: Let our Policies give Way to our Duty, and our Fears will be overcome of our Hopes, which will not make us aſhamed at the laſt and great Judgment: where, O God! let us all appear with Comfort.

I could yet enlarge upon this Subject; for nothing can be more fruitful. I could ſay, that a Church that Denies Infallibility, cannot force, becauſe ſhe cannot be certain, and ſo Penal Laws (tho' it were poſſible that they could be lawful in others) in her, would be Unjuſt. That Scripture leaves Men to Conviction and Perſwaſion. That the true Church-Weapons are Light and Grace; and her Puniſhments, Cenſure and Excommunication. That Goals and Gibbets are Inadequate Methods for Converſion, and that they never ſucceeded. That this forbids all farther Light to come into the World, and ſo limits the Holy One, which in Scripture is made a great Sin. And, laſtly, That ſuch enſnare their own Poſterity that may be of another Mind, and forfeit by it the Eſtates they have ſo carefully tranſmitted to them. Thus far againſt Impoſition. And againſt Compliance, I could ſay, that it's to betray God's Sovereignty over Conſcience; To defy Men; Gratify Preſumption; Soil and Extinguiſh Truth in the Mind; Obey Blindfold; make over the Soul without Security; turn Hypocrite, and abundance more; each of which Heads might well merit an whole Chapter. But this having been well and ſeaſonably conſidered elſewhere, I ſhall now proceed to the ſecond Part of this Diſcourſe, in which I will be as brief, and yet as full as I can.

PART II. That 'tis the Principle of Men of Note of all Parties.

Part II.

BUT what Need Is there of this, may ſome ſay, when all Parties profeſs to be of the ſame Judgment, That Conſcience ought not to be forced, nor Religion impoſed upon Men at their Civil Peril? I own they are all of that Mind, at one Time or other, and therefore, that I may purge my ſelf of any Animoſity to the Doctrine of the Church of England, I will ingenuouſly confeſs the ſevere Conduct I have argued againſt is not to be imputed to her Principles; but then her Evil will be the greater, that in Fact has ſo notoriouſly contradicted them. I know ſome of her Defenders will hardly allow that too; tho' the more candid give us their Silence or Confeſſion: For they tell us, 'tis not the Church that has done it; which, unleſs they mean, the Laws were not made at Church, muſt needs be falſe, ſince thoſe that made and executed them were of her own Communion, and are that great Body of Members that conſtitute her a Church; but, by her ſhifting them off, 'tis but reaſonable to conclude that ſhe tacitly condemns what ſhe publickly diſowns. One would think then it ſhould not be ſo hard to perſwade her to quit them, in the Way ſhe made them, or to enjoyn her Sons to do it, if that Language be too harſh for her. This ſhe muſt hear of ſome Way, and I pray God ſhe may endeavour to do her Duty in it. She is not alone; for every Party in Power has too evidently lapſed into this Evil; tho' under the Prevalency and Perſecution of another Intereſt they have ever writ againſt Club-Law for Religion. And to the End that I may do the Reformation Right, and the Principles of the Church of England Juſtice, I muſt ſay, that hardly one Perſon of any note, died in the Time of Queen Mary, that did not paſs Sentence upon Perſecution as Antichriſtian, particularly Latimer, Philpot, Bradford, Rogers, very Eminent Reformers. The Apologies that were writ in thoſe Times, are of the ſame Strain, as may be ſeen in Jewel, Haddon, Reynolds, &c. and the Papiſts were with reaſon thought much in the wrong by thoſe Primitive Proteſtants, for the Perſecution that they raiſed againſt them, for Matters of pure Religion. But what need we go ſo far back? Is it not recent in Memory, that Biſhop Uſher was Employ'd to O. Cromwell by ſome of the Clergy of the Church of England for Liberty of Conſcience? Dr. Parr, in the Life of Dr. Uſher Primate of Armagh, fol, 75. has that Paſſage thus.

'Cromwell forbidding the Clergy, under great Penalties, to teach Schools, or to perform any Part of their miniſterial Function; ſome of the moſt conſiderable Epiſcopal Clergy in and about London, deſired my Lord Primate that he would uſe his Intereſt with Cromwell, (ſince they heard he pretended a great Reſpect for him) that as he granted Liberty of Conſcience to almoſt all Sorts of Religions, ſo the Epiſcopal Divines might have the ſame Freedom of ſerving God in their private Congregations (ſince they were not permitted the publick Churches) according to the Liturgy of the Church of England; and that neither the Miniſters, nor thoſe that frequented that Service, might be any more hindered, or diſturbed by his Soldiers: So according to their Deſire, he went and uſed his utmoſt Endeavours with Cromwell, for the taking off this Reſtraint, which was at laſt promiſed (though with ſome Difficulty) and that they ſhould not be moleſted, provided they meddled not with any Matters relating to his Government.

Certainly thoſe Gentlemen were of my Mind, And to give Dr. Hammond his due, who I underſtand was one of them, he left it to the Witneſſes of his End, as his dying Counſel to the Church of England, That they diſplaced no Man out of the Univerſity or preſent Church, but that by Love, and an Holy Life they ſhould prevail upon thoſe in Poſſeſſion to come into their Church. But this lookt ſo little like the Policy and Ambition of the Living, that they reſolved it ſhould be Buried with him. This I had from an eminent Hand in Oxford, a Year or two after his Death. An older Man out liv'd him, and one of the moſt Learned and Pious of that Communion, Biſhop Sanderſon I mean: They were the two great Men of their Sort that was of the Party. Let us ſee what this Reverend Man ſays to our Point.

'The Word of God doth expreſly forbid us to ſubject our Conſciences to the Judgment of any other, or to uſurp a Dominion over the Conſciences of any One. Several Caſes of Conſcience diſcuſſed in Ten Lectures in the Divinity School at Oxford, 3 Lect. 30 Sect. pag. 103. printed 1660.

'He is not worthy to be Chriſt's Diſciple, who is not the Diſciple of Chriſt alone. The Simplicity and Sincerity of the Chriſtian Faith, hath ſuffered a great Prejudice ſince we have been divided into Parties, neither is there any Hope that Religion ſhould be reſtored to her former Original and Purity, until the Wounds that were made wider by our daily Quarrels and Diſſentions, being anointed with the Oyl of Brotherly Love, as with a Balſam, ſhall begin to cloſe again, and to grow entire into the ſame Unity of Faith and Charity, ibid. Sect. 29.

'The Obligation of Conſcience doth not ſignify any Compulſion, for, to ſpeak properly, the Conſcience can no more be compelled than the Free-will. ibid 4. Lecture Sect. 5. pag. 109.

'The expreſs Commandment of God doth oblige the Conſcience properly by it ſelf and by it's own Force; and this Obligation is abſolute, becauſe it doth directly and always oblige, and becauſe it obligeth all Perſons, and the Obligation of it is never to be cancelled. None but God alone hath Power to impoſe a Law upon the Conſcience of any Man, to which it ought to be ſubjected, as obliging by it ſelf,—— This Concluſion is prov'd by the Words of the Apoſtle, There is but one Law-giver, who can both ſave and deſtroy. In which Words two Arguments do offer themſelves to our Obſervation; In the firſt place they aſſert there is but one Legiſlator; not one picked out amongſt many; not one above many; but one excluſively, that is to ſay, One, and but one only. The Apoſtle otherwiſe had made uſe of a very ineffectual Argument, to prove what he had propounded; for he rebuketh thoſe who unadviſedly did paſs their Judgment either on the Perſons, or the Deeds of other Men, as the Invaders of their Rights. Who art Thou (ſaith he) who doſt judge another? As if he ſhould have ſaid, doſt thou know thy ſelf, what thou art, and what thou doſt? It doth not belong to 'Thee to thruſt thy ſawcy Sickle into the harveſt of another Man, much leſs boldly to fling thy ſelf into the Throne of Almighty God. If already Thou art Ignorant of it, then know, that it belongeth to him alone to judge of the Conſciences of Men, to whom alone it doth belong to impoſe Laws upon the Conſciences of Men, which none can do but God alone. ibid pag. 111, 112, 113.

'The Condition and Natural Eſtate of the Conſcience itſelf is ſo placed as it were in the middle betwixt God and the will of Man, as that which is uſually and truly ſpoken of Kings and Emperours, may as truly be verified of the Conſcience of every Man, Solo Deo minores eſſe, nec aliquem in Terris ſuperiorem agnoſcere; They are leſs than God only, and on Earth do acknowledge no Superior. That Speech of the Emperour Maximilian the firſt is very memorable, Conſcientiis Dominari velle, eſt Arcem Cæli invadere; To exerciſe a Domination over Conſciences, is to invade the Tower of Heaven. He is a Plunderer of the Glory of God, and a nefarious Invader of the Power that is due unto him, whoſoever he is that ſhall claim a right to the Conſciences of Men, or practice an Uſurpation over them. ibid. Sect. 11. pag. 115.

And yet this is the ſad Conſequence of impoſing Religion upon Conſcience, and puniſhing Non-conformity with worldly Penalties.

Let us now hear what the late Biſhop of Down ſays in his Lib. of Propheſy to our Point, 'I am very much diſpleaſed that ſo many Opinions and new Doctrines are commenced amongſt us, but more troubled, that every Man that hath an Opinion thinks his own and other Men's Salvation is concerned in it's maintenance, but moſt of all, that Men ſhould be Perſecuted and Afflicted for diſagreeing in ſuch Opinions, which they cannot with ſufficient Grounds obtrude upon others neceſſarily, becauſe they cannot propound them Infallibly, and becauſe they have no Warrant from Scripture ſo to do; for if I ſhall tye other Men to believe my Opinion, becauſe I think I have a Place of Scripture which ſeems to warrant it to my Underſtanding; why may he not ſerve up another Diſh to me in the ſame Dreſs, and exact the ſame Taſk of me to believe the contradictory? Liberty of Propheſy, Epiſt. Dedicat. p. 8, 9.

'The Experience which Chriſtendom hath had in this laſt Age is Argument enough that Toleration of differing Opinions is ſo far from diſturbing the Publick Peace, or deſtroying the Intereſt of Princes and Common-wealths, that it does advantage to the Publick, it ſecures Peace, becauſe there is not ſo much as the Pretence of Religion left to ſuch Perſons to contend for, it being already indulged to them. ibid. pag. 21.

It is a proverbial ſaying, Quod nimia familiaritas ſervorum eſt conſpiratio adverſus Dominum, and they who for their Security run into Grots and Cellars, and Retirements, think that they being upon the defenſive, thoſe Princes and thoſe Laws that drive them to it are their Enemies, and therefore they cannot be ſecure, unleſs the Power of the one, and the Obligation of the other be leſſened and reſcinded; and then the being reſtrained, and made miſerable, endears the diſcontented Perſons mutually, and makes more hearty and dangerous Confederations, ibid. Page 23.

'No Man ſpeaks more unreaſonably, than he that denies to Men the Uſe of their Reaſon in Choice of their Religion. ibid. pag. 169.

'No Chriſtian is to be put to Death, Diſmembred, or otherwiſe directly Perſecuted for his Opinion, which does not teach Impiety or Blaſphemy, ibid. pag. 190.

'There is a popular Pity that follows all Perſons in Miſery, and that Compaſſion breeds likeneſs of Affections, and that very often produces Likeneſs of Perſwaſion; and ſo much the rather, becauſe there ariſes a Jealouſie and pregnant Suſpicion that they who Perſecute an Opinion are deſtitute of ſufficient Arguments to confute it, and that the Hangman is the beſt Diſputant. ibid. Page 197, 198.

'If a Man cannot change his Opinion when he liſts, nor ever does heartily or reſolutely, but when he cannot do otherwiſe, then to uſe Force, may make him an Hypocrite, but never to be a right Believer, and ſo inſtead of erecting a Trophy to God and true Religion, we build a Monument for the Devil. ibid. p. 200.

'The Trick of giving Perſons differing in Opinion over to the ſecular Power, at the beſt is no better than Hypocriſy, removing Envy from themſelves, and laying it upon others, a refuſing to do that in external Act, which they do in Counſel and Approbation. ibid. pag. 209.

Thus far Biſhop Taylor, and one of the moſt Learned Men of the Church of England in his Time.

Let me add another Biſhop, held Learned by all, and in great Reputation with the Men of his Communion, and among them the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament aſſembled, who have ſufficiently declared againſt this perſecuting Spirit on the Account of Religion, by their full Approbation of, and Thanks returned to the Biſhop of S. Aſaph for his Sermon Preached before them November the 5th, 1680. and their Deſire that he would Print and Publiſh that Sermon. The Biſhop ſays, that, ‘ They who are moſt given to Hate and to Deſtroy others, eſpecially thoſe others ‘ who differ from them in Religion, they are not the Church of God, or at leaſt ‘ they are ſo far corrupt in that particular. pag. 8.

Again he ſays, ‘ That, of Societies of Men, Chriſtians, of all others, are moſt ‘ averſe from Ways of Violence and Blood; eſpecially from uſing any ſuch Ways ‘ upon the Account of Religion: And among Chriſtian Churches, where they dif‘fer among themſelves, if either of them uſe thoſe Ways upon the Account of ‘ Religion, they give a ſtrong Preſumption againſt themſelves that they are not ‘ truly Chriſtians. ibid. pag. 9.

‘ There is reaſon for this, becauſe, we know that Chriſt gave Love for the Cha‘racter by which his Diſciples were to be known. John 13. 35. By this ſhall all ‘ Men know that you are my Diſciples, if you have love to one another. And leſt ‘ Men ſhould unchriſten others firſt, that they may Hate them, and Deſtroy them ‘ afterwards, Chriſt enlarged his Precept of Love, and extended it even to Ene‘mies, and not only to ours, but to the Enemies of our Religion, Matt. 5. 43, 44. ibid. Pag. 9.

‘ As our Holy Religion excells all others in this admirable temper, ſo by this we ‘ may uſually judge who they are that excel among Chriſtian Churches, when there ‘ happens any Difference between them, whether touching the Faith, or the Terms ‘ of Communion. They that were the more Fierce, they generally had the worſt ‘ Cauſe. ibid. pag. 12, 13.

‘ The Council of Nice ſuppreſſed the Arrians by no other Force, but putting ‘ Arrians out of their Biſhopricks; they could not think Hereticks fit to be truſted ‘ with cure of Souls; but otherwiſe, as to Temporal Things, I do not find that ‘ they inflicted any kind of Puniſhments; but when the Arrians came to have the ‘ Power in their Hands, when theirs was come to be the Imperial Religion, then ‘ Depriving was nothing, Baniſhment was the leaſt that they inflicted. ibid. pag. 14.

‘ Neither our Religion, nor our Church, is of a perſecuting Spirit. I know not ‘ how it may be in particular Perſons; but I ſay again, it is not in the Genius of ‘ our Church: She hath no Doctrine that teacheth Perſecution. ibid. p. 20.

‘ I would have no Man puniſhed for his Religion, no not them that deſtroy Men for Religion. ibid. pag. 37.

Dr. Stillingfleet comes ſhort of none of them on this Subject. * Our Saviour, ‘ ſays he, never preſſed Followers as Men do Soldiers, but ſaid, If any Man will ‘ come after me, let him take up his Croſs (not his Sword) and follow me. His was ‘ ἥμερος καὶ φιλάνθρωπος νομοθεσία, his very Commands ſhewed his Meekneſs; his Laws ‘ were ſweet and gentle Laws; not like Draco's that were writ in Blood, unleſs ‘ it were his own that gave them. His Deſign was to eaſe Men of their former ‘ Burdens, and not lay on more; the Duties he required were no other but ſuch ‘ as were neceſſary, and withal very juſt and reaſonable. He that came to take a‘way the inſupportable Yoke of Jewiſh Ceremonies, certainly did never intend to ‘ gall the Necks of his Diſciples with another inſtead of it. And it would be ‘ ſtrange the Church ſhould require more than Chriſt himſelf did; and make other ‘ Conditions of her Communion, than our Saviour did of Diſcipleſhip. What ‘ poſſible reaſon can be aſſigned or given why ſuch Things ſhould not be ſufficient ‘ for Communion with a Church, which are ſufficient for Eternal Salvation? And ‘ certainly thoſe Things are ſufficient for that, which are laid down as neceſſary ‘ Duties of Chriſtianity by our Lord and Saviour in his Word. What Ground can ‘ there be why Chriſtians ſhould not ſtand upon the ſame Terms now which they did in ‘ the Time of Chriſt and his Apoſtles? Was not Religion ſufficiently guarded and ‘ fenced in them? Was there ever more true and cordial Reverence in the Worſhip ‘ of God? What Charter hath Chriſt given the Church to bind Men up to more than ‘ himſelf hath done? or to exclude thoſe from her Society who may be admitted ‘ into Heaven? Will Chriſt ever thank Men at the great Day for keeping ſuch out ‘ from Communion with his Church, when he will vouchſafe not only Crowns of

‘ Glory

* Irenicum, a Weapon-Salve for the Churches Wounds, by E. Stillingfleet Rector of Sutton in Bedfordſhire, in Preface to the Reader.

‘ Glory to them, but it may be Aureolæ too, if there be any ſuch Things there? The Grand Commiſſion the Apoſtles were ſent out with, was only to teach what Chriſt had commanded them. Not the leaſt Intimation of any Power given them to impoſe or require any Thing beyond what himſelf had ſpoken to them, or they were directed to by the Immediate Guidance of the Spirit of God.

‘ Without all Controverſy, the main Inlet of all the Diſtractions, Confuſions and Diviſions of the Chriſtian World, hath been by adding other Conditions of Church Communion than Chriſt hath done.

‘ There is nothing the Primitive Church deſerves greater Imitation by us in, than in that admirable Temper, Moderation and Condeſcenſion which was uſed in it towards all the Members of it.

‘ This admirable Temper in the Primitive Church might be largely cleared from that Liberty they allowed freely to Diſſenters from them in Matters of Practice and Opinion; as might be cleared from Cyprian, Auſtin, Jerome, and others.—Leaving the Men to be won by obſerving the true decency and order of Churches, whereby thoſe who act upon a true Principle of Chriſtian Ingenuity may be ſooner drawn to a Compliance in all lawful Things, than by Force and rigorous Impoſitions, which make Men ſuſpect the Weight of the Thing it ſelf, when ſuch Force is uſed to make it enter. In the Preface.

The ſame is in effect declared by the Houſe of Commons, when they returned their Thanks to Dr. Tillotſon, Dean of Canterbury, for his Sermon Preached before them November the 5th, 1678. deſiring him to Print that Sermon, where he ſays, upon our Saviour's Words, ‘ Ye know not what Manner of Spirit ye are of, Ye own your ſelves to be my Diſciples, but do you conſider what Spirit now Acts and Governs you? not that ſurely which my Doctrine deſigns to mould and faſhion you into, which is not a Furious and Perſecuting, and Deſtructive Spirit, but Mild and Gentle, and Saving; tender of the Lives and Intereſts of Men, even of thoſe who are our greateſt Enemies. pag. 6, 7.

‘ No Difference of Religion, no Pretence of Zeal for God and Chriſt can warrant and juſtifie this Paſſionate and Fierce, this Vindictive and Exterminating Spirit. ibid. pag. 7.

‘ He (i. e. Chriſt) came to introduce a Religion, which conſults not only the Eternal Salvation of Men's Souls, but their Temporal Peace and Security, their Comfort and Happineſs in this World. ibid. pag. 8.

‘ It ſeemed good to the Author of this Inſtitution to compel no Man to it by Temporal Puniſhment. ibid. pag. 13.

‘ To ſeparate Goodneſs and Mercy From God, Compaſſion and Charity from Religion, is to make the two beſt Things in the World, God and Religion, good for nothing. ibid. pag. 9.

‘ True Chriſtianity is not only the beſt, but the beſt natured Inſtitution in the World; and ſo far as any Church is departed from good Nature, and become Cruel and Barbarous, ſo far it is degenerated from Chriſtianity. ibid. pag. 30.

Thus far Dr. Tillotſon, who, to be ſure, deſerves not to be thought the leaſt Eminent in the preſent Church of England. Let us hear what Dr. Burnet ſays to it.

‘ Men are not Maſters of their own Perſwaſions, and cannot change their Thoughts as they pleaſe; he that believes any Thing concerning Religion, cannot turn as the Prince commands him, or accommodate himſelf to the Law, or his preſent Intereſts, unleſs he arrive at that Pitch of Atheiſm, as to look on Religion only as a Matter of Policy, and an Engine for Civil Government: Dr. Burnet's Hiſtory of the Rights of Princes, &c. in his Preface, pag. 49.

'Tis to this Doctor's Pains, She owes the very Hiſtory of Her Reformation; and, as by it he has perpetuated his Name with Her's, certainly he muſt have Credit with Her, or She can deſerve none with any Body elſe; for no Man could well go farther to oblige Her.

Let me here bring in a Lay Member of the Church of England, Sir Robert Pointz, in His Vindication of Monarchy, who yields us an excellent Teſtimony to the Matter in Hand: ‘ The Sword availeth little with the Souls of Men, unleſs to deſtroy them together with their Bodies, and to make Men Deſperate, or Diſſemblers in Religion, and when they find Opportunity, to fall into Rebellion, as there are many Examples, pag. 27.

‘ In the Ancient Times of Chriſtianity, ſuch Means were not uſed as might make Hereticks and Schiſmaticks more obſtinate than docible, through the prepoſterous

‘Proceedings of the Magiſtrates and Miniſters of Juſtice, in the Execution of Penal Laws, uſed rather as Snares for Gaining of Money, and Pecuniary Mulcts impos'd, rather as Prices ſet upon Offences, than as Puniſhments for the Reformation of Manners, ibid. pag. 28.

‘The Ancient Chriſtians were forbidden by the Imperial Law, as alſo by the Laws of other Chriſtian Nations, under a great Penalty, To meddle with the Goods of Jews, or Pagans, living Peaceably, ibid. pag. 29.

‘For, the Goods of the Jews, although Enemies to the Chriſtian Religion, cannot for the Cauſe of Religion come by Eſcheat unto Chriſtian Princes, under whom they live. Ibid. pag. 29.

‘It is truly ſaid, that Peace, a Meſſenger whereof an Angel hath been choſen to be, is ſcarce Eſtabliſhed by the Sword; and the Goſpel, the Bleſſed Peace, cannot be publiſhed by the Sound of Cannon; neither the Sacred Word be convey'd unto us, by the Impious Hands of Soldiers; neither Tranquillity be brought to the Perſons and Conſciences of Men, by that which bringeth Ruin unto Nations, ibid. pag. 70.

He has ſaid Much in a Little; the Talent and Honour of Men truly Great. I give this ſtill to the Church of England's Principles, which yet makes it harder for Her, to Juſtifie Her Practice in Her Uſe of Power. But let us hear a King ſpeak, and One the Church of England is bound to hear by many Obligations.

King Charles the Firſt, out of his Tender and Princely Senſe of the ſad and bleeding Condition of the Kingdom, and his unwearied Deſires to apply ſuch Remedies, as by the Bleſſing of Almighty God, might ſettle it in Peace, by the Advice of his Lords and Commons of Parliament, Aſſembled at Oxford, propounded and deſired, That all the Members of Both Houſes might ſecurely Meet in a Full and Free Convention of Parliament, there to Treat, Conſult, and Agree upon ſuch Things, as may conduce to the Maintenance and Defence of the Reformed Proteſtant Religion, with due Conſideration to all Juſt and Reaſonable Eaſe to Tender Conſciences. The King's Meſſage of a Treaty, March 3. 1643. from Oxford, Superſcribed to the Lords and Commons of Parliament Aſſembled at Weſtminſter.

In the King's Twentieth Meſſage for Peace, January 29, 1645, he has theſe Words, That by the Liberty offered in his Meſſage of the 15th preſent, for the Eaſe of their Conſciences who will not Communicate in the Service already Eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament in this Kingdom, He intends that all other Proteſtants, behaving themſelves Peaceable in, and towards the Civil Government, ſhall have the Free Exerciſe of their Religion, according to their own Way.

In the Thirty Third Meſſage for Peace, November 14, 1647, there are theſe Words, His Majeſty conſidering the great preſent Diſtempers concerning Church-Diſcipline, and that the Preſbyterian Government is now in Practice, His Majeſty to eſchew Confuſion, as much as may be, and for the Satisfaction of His Two Houſes, is content that the ſaid Government be Legally permitted to ſtand in the ſame Condition it now is, for Three Years; Provided, that His Majeſty, and thoſe of his Judgment (or any other who cannot in Conſcience ſubmit thereunto) be not obliged to comply with the Preſbyterial Government, but have Free Practice of their own Profeſſion, without receiving any Prejudice thereby. From the Iſle of Wight.

In his Declaration to all his People, January 18, 1645, from Cariſbrook Caſtle, after the Votes of no Addreſs, He ſays, I have Sacrificed to My Two Houſes of Parliament, for the Peace of the Kingdom, All but what is much more dear to me than my Life, my Conſcience and my Honour.

In his Letter to the Lords, Gentlemen and Committee of the Scotch Parliament, together with the Officers of the Army, July 3, 1648, from Cariſbrook Caſtle —— As the Beſt Foundation of Loyalty is Chriſtianity, ſo True Chriſtianity is Perfect Loyalty.

ΕΙΚΩΝ ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ. Ch. 6. Upon His Majeſty's Retirement from Weſtminſter.— Sure it ceaſes to be Counſel, when not Reaſon is uſed, as to Men to Perſwade, but Force and Terror, as to Beaſts, to drive and compel Men to whatever Tumultuary Patrons ſhall Project. He deſerves to be a Slave without Pity or Redemption, that is content to have his Rational Sovereignty of his Soul, and Liberty of his Will and Words ſo captivated. ——— Again, Ibid. Sure that Man cannot be blameable to God or Man, who ſeriouſly endeavours to See the Beſt Reaſon of Things, and faithfully follows what he takes for Reaſon; the Uprightneſs of his Intentions will excuſe the poſſible Failing of his Underſtanding. —— Again, Ibid. I know no Reſolutions tions more worthy a Chriſtian King, than to prefer his Conſcience before his Kingdoms.

Cahp. 12. Upon the Rebellion and Troubles in Ireland.—Some Kind of Zeal counts All Merciful Moderation, Lukewarmneſs, and had rather be Cruel, than accounted Cold, and is not ſeldom more greedy to Kill the Bear for his Skin, than for any Harm he hath done. —— Ib. O my GOD, Thou ſeeſt how much Cruelty among Chriſtians is acted under the Colour of Religion, as if we could not be Chriſtians, unleſs we Crucify one another.

Chap. 13. Upon the calling the Scots, and their coming—Sure, in Matters of Religion, thoſe Truths gain moſt on Men's Judgments and Conſciences, which are leaſt urged with Secular Violence, which weakens Truth with Prejudices; and is unreaſonable to be uſed, till ſuch Means of Rational Conviction hath been applied, as leaving no Excuſe for Ignorance, condemns Men's Obſtinacy to deſerv'd Penalties. —Violent Motions are neither Manly, Chriſtian, nor Loyal. —— The proper Engine of Faction is Force; the Arbitrator of Beaſts, not of Reaſonable Men, much leſs of Humble Chriſtians and Loyal Subjects, in Matters of Religion.

Chap. 14. Upon the Covenant. —— Religion requires Charity and Candor to others of different Opinions —— Nothing Violent and Injurious can be Religious.

Chap. 15. Upon the many Jealouſies raiſed, and Scandals caſt upon the King, to ſtir up the People againſt him. —— In Point of True Conſcientious Tenderneſs (attended with Humility and Meekneſs, not with proud or arrogant Activity, which ſeeks to hatch every Egg of indifferent Opinion to Faction or Schiſm) I have oft declared how little I deſire My Laws and Scepter ſhould intrench over God's Sovereignty, who is the Only King of Men's Conſciences.

Chap. 27. To the Prince of Wales. —— Take Heed of abetting to any Factions; your Partial adhering to any One Side, gains you not ſo great Advantages in ſome Men's Hearts, (who are Prone to be of their King's Religion) as it loſeth you in others, who think themſelves, and their Profeſſion, firſt deſpiſed, then perſecuted by you. —— My Counſel and Charge to you is, That you ſeriouſly conſider the former Real or Objected Miſcarriages, which might occaſion my Troubles, that you may avoid them. —— A Charitable Connivence, and Chriſtian Toleration, often diſſipates their Strength, whom Rougher Oppoſition fortifies. —— Always keep up Sound Piety, and thoſe Fundamental Truths (which mend both Hearts and Lives of Men) with Impartial Favour and Juſtice. —— Your Prerogative is beſt ſhewed and exerciſed in Remitting, rather than exacting the Rigour of the Law, there being nothing worſe than Legal Tyranny.

And as this was the Senſe and Judgment of a King, that Time, and the greateſt Troubles had inform'd with a Superiour Judgment, (and which to be ſure highly juſtifies the Meaſures that are now taken) So Dr. Hudſon, His Plain-Dealing Chaplain, muſt not be forgotten by us on this Occaſion, who took the Freedom to tell His Royal Maſter, That he look'd upon the Calamities he labour'd under, to be the Hand of GOD upon Him, for not having given GOD His Due over Conſcience.

One can eaſily imagine this to be Reformation Language, and then it is not hard to think, how low that Church muſt be fallen, that from ſo Free and Excellent a Principle, is come to make, execute, and uphold Penal Laws for Religion, againſt Her Conſcientious Neighbours; but it is to be hoped, That like Nebuchadnezzar's Image, whoſe Feet was a Mixture of Iron and Clay, and therefore could not ſtand for ever, Perſecution will not be able to mix ſo with the Seed of Men, but that Humanity will overcome it, and Mankind One Day be delivered from that Iron, Hard, and Fierce Nature.

I have done with my Church of England's Evidences againſt Perſecution: And for the Judgment of all Sorts of Diſſenters in That Point, let their Practice have been what it will, nothing is clearer, than that they diſallow of Perſecution, of which their Daily Addreſſes of Thanks to the KING, for His General Eaſe, by His Excellent Declaration, are an undoubted Proof.

Thus then we ſee, it is evident, that it is not only the Duty of all Parties, as they would be thought Chriſtians, to Repeal Penal Laws for Religion, but upon a Fair Enquiry, We ſee it is the avowed Principle of every Party, at one Time or other, that Conſcience ought not to be compell'd, nor Religion impos'd upon Worldly Penalties. And ſo I come to the Third and Laſt Part of this Diſcourſe.

PART III. It is the Intereſt of all Parties, and eſpecially the Church of ENGLAND.

AS I take all Men to be unwillingly ſeparated from their Intereſts, and conſequently ought only to be ſought and diſcours'd in them, ſo it muſt be granted me on all Hands, That Intereſts change as well as Times, and 'tis the Wiſdom of a Man to obſerve the Courſes, and humour the Motions of his Intereſt, as the Beſt Way to preſerve it. And leſt any ill-natur'd, or miſtaken Perſon, ſhould call it Temporizing, I make this early Proviſion; That I mean, no immoral, or corrupt Compliance: A Temporizing, deſervedly baſe with Men of Vertue, and which in all Times, my Practice, as well as Judgment, hath ſhown the laſt Averſion to. For upon the Principle I now go, and which I lay down, as common and granted in Reaſon and Fact, with all Parties concern'd in this Diſcourſe, that Man does not change, that Morally follows his Intereſt under all it's Revolutions, becauſe to be True to his Intereſt, is his Firſt Civil Principle. I premiſe this, to introduce what I have to offer, with Reſpect to the Intereſts to be now treated upon.

And firſt, I ſay, I take it to be the Intereſt of the Church of England, to aboliſh the Penal Laws, becauſe it never was Her Intereſt to make them. My Reaſons for that Opinion are theſe, Firſt, They have been an Argument to invalidate the Sufferings of the Reformers, becauſe if it be unlawful to diſobey Government about Matters of Religion, they were in the wrong. And if they ſay, O but they were in Error that puniſh'd their Non-Conformity; I anſwer, How can She prove that She is Infallibly in the Right? And if this cannot be done, She compels to an Uncertainty upon the ſame Terms. Secondly, She has overthrown the Principles upon which She ſeparated from Rome: For if it be Unlawful to plead Scripture and Conſcience, to vindicate Diſſent from Her Communion, it was Unlawful for Her upon the ſame Plea, To Diſſent from the Church of Rome; unleſs She will ſay again, That She was in the Right, but the other in the Wrong; and She knows this is no Anſwer, but a begging of the Queſtion; For they that Separate from Her, think themſelves as Serious, Devout, and as much in the Right as She could do. If then Conſcience and Scripture, interpreted with the Beſt Light She had, were the Ground of Her Reformation, She muſt allow the Liberty She takes, Or She Eats Her Words, and Subverts Her Foundation; than which nothing can be more Deſtructive to the Intereſt of any Being, Civil or Eccleſiaſtical. Thirdly, The Penal Laws have been the Great Make-Bate in the Kingdom from the Beginning: For if I ſhould grant that She had been once truly the Church of England, I mean, conſiſting of all the People of England, (which She was not, for there were divers Parties Diſſenting from the Firſt of Her Eſtabliſhment) yet ſince it afterwards appear'd She was but One Party, tho' the biggeſt, She ought not to have made Her Power more National than Her Faith, nor Her Faith ſo by the Force of Temporal Authority. 'Tis true, She got the Magiſtrate of Her Side, but She engaged him too far: For She knew, Chriſt did not leave Cæſar Executor to His Laſt Will and Teſtament, and, that That ſhould be the Reaſon why She did ſo, was none of the Beſt Ornaments to Her Reformation. That She was but a Party, tho' the biggeſt, by the Advantages that Temporal Power brought Her, I ſhall eaſily prove, but I will introduce it with a ſhort Account of our State-Reformation here in England.

Henry the Eighth, was a Kind of Hermaphrodite in Religion, or in the Language of the Times, a Trimmer; being a Medly of Papiſt and Proteſtant, and that Part he acted to the Life, or to the Death rather; Sacrificing on the ſame Day Men of Both Religions, becauſe one was not Proteſtant enough, and t'other Papiſt enough for him. In this Time were ſome Anabaptiſts, for the Diſtinction of Church of England, and Calviniſt, was not then known.

Edward the Sixth ſucceeded, a Prince that promiſed Virtues, that might more than ballance the Exceſſes of his Father, and yet by Archbiſhop Cranmer, was compell'd to Sign a Warrant to Burn Poor Joan of Kent, a Famous Woman, but counted an Enthuſiaſt: But to prove what I ſaid of him, 'twas not without frequent Denials and Tears, and the Biſhop taking upon him to anſwer for it at God's Judgment, of which I hope his Soul was diſcharg'd, tho' his Body, by the ſame Law, ſuffer'd the ſame Puniſhment in the ſucceeding Reign. Thus even the Proteſtants began with Blood for Meer Religion, and taught the Romaniſts, in ſucceeding Times, how to deal with them.

At this Time the Controverſie grew warm between the Church of England and the Calviniſts, that were the Abler Preachers and the Better Livers. The Biſhops being moſtly Men of State, and ſome of them looking rather backward than forward, Witneſs the Difficulty the King had to get Hooper Conſecrated Biſhop, without Conformity to the Reſerved Ceremonies.

Queen Mary came in, and ended the Quarrel at the Stake. Now Ridley and Hooper hug, and are the Deareſt Brethren, and Beſt Friends in the World. Hooper keeps his Ground, and Ridley ſtoops with his Ceremonies to t'others farther Reformation. But this Light and Union flow'd from their Perſecution: For thoſe abroad at Frankfort, and other Places, were not upon ſo good Terms: Their Feuds grew ſo great, that the one refuſed Communion with the other; many Endeavours were uſed to quench the Fire, but they were ineffectual; at beſt it lay under the Aſhes of their Affliction for another Time; for no ſooner was Queen Elizabeth upon Her Throne, than they returned, and their Difference with them. They managed it civilly for a While, but Ambition in ſome, and Covetouſneſs in others on the one Hand, and Diſcretion giving Way to Reſentment on the other, they firſt ply the Queen and Her Miniſters, and when that ended in Favour of the Men of Ceremony, the others arraign'd them before the Firſt Reformers abroad, at Geneva, Baſil, Zurich, &c. The Leading Prelates by their Letters, as Dr. Burnet lately tells us, in his Printed Relation of his Travels, clear themſelves to thoſe firſt Doctors of any ſuch Imputation, and lay all upon the Queen, who, for Reaſons of State, would not be brought to ſo Inceremonious a Way of Worſhip, as that of the Calviniſts.

At this Time there were Papiſts, Proteſtants, Evangeliſts, Præciſians, Ubiquitiſts, Familiſts, or Enthuſiaſts, and Anabaptiſts in England; when the very firſt Year of Her Reign, A Law for Uniformity in Worſhip and Diſcipline was Enacted, and more followed of the ſevereſt Nature, and ſometimes executed. Thus then we ſee that there never was ſuch a Thing as a Church of England ſince the Days of Popery, that is, A Church or Communion, containing all the People of the Kingdom, and ſo cannot be ſaid to be ſo much as a Twin of the Reformation; nevertheleſs, She got the Bleſſing of the Civil Magiſtrate: She made Him Great, to be Great by Him: If She might be the Church, He ſhould be the Head. Much Good may the Bargain do her. Now is the Time for Her to ſtand to Her Principle. I never knew any Body exceed their Bounds, that were not met with at laſt. If we could eſcape Men, God we cannot, His Providence will overtake us, and find us out.

By all this then it appearing, that the Church of England was not the Nation, the Caſe is plain, That the Penal Laws were a Make-Bate, for they Sacrificed every Sort of People whoſe Conſciences differed from the Church of England; which firſt put the Romaniſts upon flattering Prerogative, and courting it's Shelter from the Wrath of thoſe Laws. The Addreſs could not be unpleaſant to Princes; and we ſee it was not; for King James, that came in with Invectives againſt Popery, entring the Liſts with the Learned of that Church, and charging Her with all the Marks the Revelation gives to that of Antichriſt, grew at laſt ſo tame and eaſie towards the Romaniſts, that our own Story tells us of the Fears of the Increaſe of Popery in the latter Parliament of his Reign.

In King Charles the Firſt's Time, no Body can doubt of the Complaint, becauſe that was in great Meaſure the Drift of every Parliament, and at laſt One Reaſon of the War. On the other Hand, the Severity of the Biſhops, againſt Men of their own Principles, and in the Main, of their own Communion, either becauſe they were more Zealous in Preaching, more follow'd of the People, or could not wear ſome odd Garment, and leſs, lead the Dance on a Lord's Day at a Maypole, (the Relick of Flora, the Roman Strumpet) or perhaps for Rubbing upon the Ambition, Covetouſneſs, and Lazineſs of the Dignified, and Ignorance and Looſeneſs of the Ordinary Clergy of the Church, (of which I could produce Five Hundred Groſs Inſtances) I ſay theſe Things bred bad Blood, and in Part, gave Beginning to thoſe Animoſities, that at laſt broke forth, with ſome other Pretences, into all thoſe National Troubles that agitated this poor Kingdom for Ten Years together, in which the Church of England became the Greateſt Loſer, Her Clergy turn'd out, Her Nobility and Gentry Sequeſter'd, Decimated, Impriſoned, &c. And whatever She is pleas'd to think, nothing is Truer, than that Her Penal Laws, and Conduct in the Star-Chamber, and High Commiſſion Court in Matters of Religion, was Her Overthrow.

'Tis as evident, the ſame Humour, ſince the Reſtoration of the late King, has had almoſt the ſame Effect. For nothing was grown ſo little and contemptible, as the Church of England in this Kingdom, She now intitles Her ſelf The Church of: Witneſs the Elections of the Laſt Three Parliaments before this. I know it may be ſaid, The Perſons Choſen were Church Goers; I confeſs it, for the Law would have them ſo. But no Body were more averſe to the Politicks of the Clergy; inſomuch that the Parſon and the Pariſh almoſt every where divided upon the Queſtion of their Election. In Truth, it has been the Favour and Countenance of the Crown, and not Her intrinſick Intereſt or Value, that has kept Her up to this Day; elſe Her Penal Laws, the Bulwark of the Church of England, by the ſame Figure, that She is One againſt Popery, had ſunk her long ſince.

I hope I may, by this Time, conclude, without Offence, that the Penal-Laws have been a Make-Bate in the Great Family of the Kingdom, ſetting the Father againſt his Children, and Brethren againſt Brethren; not only giving the Empire to one, but endeavouring to extinguiſh the reſt, and that for this, the Church of England has once paid a ſevere Reckoning. I apply it thus: Is it not Her Intereſt to be careful She does it not a ſecond Time? She has a fair Opportunity to prevent it, and keep Her ſelf where She is; that is, The Publick Religion of the Country, with the Real Maintenance of it; which is a plain Preference to all the reſt.

Violence and Tyranny are no Natural Conſequences of Popery, for then they would follow every where, and in all Places and Times alike. But we ſee in Twenty Governments in Germany, there is none for Religion, nor was for an Age in France; and in Poland, the Popiſh Cantons of Switzerland, Venice, Lucca, Colonia, &c. where that Religion is Dominant, the People enjoy their Ancient and Civil Rights, a little more ſteadily then they have of late Times done in ſome Proteſtant Countries nearer Home, almoſt ever ſince the Reformation. Is this againſt Proteſtancy? No; but very much againſt Proteſtants. For had they been True to their Principles, we had been upon better Terms. So that the Reformation was not the Fault, but not keeping to it better than ſome have done; For whereas they were Papiſts that both obtain'd the Great Charter, and Charter of Foreſts, and in the ſucceſſive Reigns of the Kings of their Religion, induſtriouſly labour'd the Confirmation of them, as the Great Text of their Liberties and Properties, by above Thirty other Laws; we find almoſt an equal Number to deſtroy them, and but One made in their Favour ſince the Reformation, and that ſhrewdly againſt the Will of the High Church-Men too; I mean, The Petition of Right, in the Third Year of Charles the Firſt. In ſhort, They deſire a Legal Security with us, and we are afraid of it, leſt it ſhould Inſecure us; when nothing can do it ſo certainly as their Inſecurity; For Safety makes no Man Deſperate. And he that ſeeks Eaſe by Law, therefore does it, becauſe he would not attempt it by Force. Are we afraid of their Power, and yet provoke it? If this Jealouſie and Averſion prevail, it may drive Her to a Bargain with the Kingdom for ſuch General Redemption of Property, as may Diſſolve our Great Corporation of Conſcience, and then She will think, That Half a Loaf had been Better than No Bread; and that it had been more adviſable to have parted with Penal Laws, that only ſerv'd to Dreſs Her in Satyr, than have loſt All for keeping them; eſpecially when it was but parting with Spurs, Claws and Bills, that made Her look more like a Vultur than a Dove, and a Lion than a Lamb.

But I proceed to my next Reaſon, why it is Her Intereſt to Repeal thoſe Penal Laws, (tho' a greater cannot be advanc'd to Men than Self-Preſervation) and That is, That She elſe breaks with a King heartily inclin'd to preſerve Her by any Way that is not Perſecuting, and whoſe Intereſt She once purſu'd at all Adventures, when more than She ſees was ſuggeſted to Her by the Men of the Intereſt She oppoſed, in Favour of His Claim. What then has befallen Her, that She changes the Courſe She took with ſuch Reſolutions of Perſeverance? For bringing Him to the Crown with this Religion, could not be more Her Duty to His Title, or Her Intereſt to ſupport Her own, than it is ſtill, To be fair with Him. If She ow'd the One to Him, and to Chriſtianity, She is not leſs indebted to Her ſelf the other. Does He ſeek to impoſe His own Religion upon Her? By no Means. There is no Body would abhor the Attempt, or, at all Adventures, condemn it more than my ſelf. What then is the Matter? Why, He deſires Eaſe for His Religion; She does not think fit to conſider Him in this, (No, not the King She brought with this Objection to the Crown) Certainly She is much in the Wrong, and ſhows Her ſelf an Ill Courtier, (tho' it was become Her Calling) firſt, To give Him Roaſt-Meat, then

then beat Him with the Spit. Is not this to quit thoſe High Principles of Loyalty and Chriſtianity She valu'd Her ſelf once upon, and what She can, provoke the Miſchiefs She fears? Certainly this is dividing in Judgment from Him, that She has acknowledged to be Her Eccleſiaſtical Head.

My Fifth Reaſon is, That as the Making and Executing the Penal Laws for Religion affects all the ſeveral Parties of Proteſtant Diſſenters as well as the Papiſts (the Judges in Vaughan's Time, and he at the Head of them, giving it as their Opinion, they were equally expoſed to thoſe Laws) and that they are thereby naturally driven into an Intereſt with them; ſo it is at this Time greatly the Prudence of the Church of England to repeal them, for by ſo doing She divides that Intereſt that Self-preſervation allows all Men to purſue, that are united by Danger: And ſince She is aſſured the Papiſts ſhall not have the leſs Eaſe, in this King's Time than if the Laws were Repealed, and that her Fears are not of the ſucceeding Reigns, how is their Repeal a greater Inſecurity, eſpecially, when by that, ſhe draws into her Intereſt all the Proteſtant Diſſenters, that are abundantly more conſiderable than the Papiſts, and that are as unwilling that Popery ſhould be National as her ſelf. For if this be not granted, ſee what Reputation follows to the Church of England. She tells the King ſhe does not deſire his Friends ſhould be Perſecuted, yet the Forbearance muſt not be by Declaration, to ſave the Government, nor by Law, to ſave her: and without one of theſe Warrants, every Civil Magiſtrate and Officer in England is Perjur'd that ſuffers them in that Liberty againſt Law. How can ſhe be ſincerely willing that ſhould be done, that ſhe is not willing ſhould be done Legally?

But, Sixthly, the Church of England does not know but they or ſome other Party may at one Time or other prevail. It ſeems to me her Intereſt to ſet a good Example, and ſo to beſpeak eaſy Terms for her ſelf. I know of none intended, and believe no Body but her ſelf can place her ſo low, yet if it were her Unhappineſs, I think to have Civil Property ſecured out of the Queſtion of Religion, and Conſtraint upon Conſcience prevented by a Glorious Magna Charta for the Liberty of it, were not a Thing of ill Conſequence to her Intereſt. Let us but conſider what other Princes did for their own Religion, within the laſt Seven Reigns, when they came to the Crown, and we cannot think ſo ſoft and equal a Thing as an Impartial Liberty of Conſcience, after all that has been ſaid of a Popiſh Succeſſor, an ordinary Character of a Prince, or a mean Aſſurance to us: This ought not to ſlip her Reflection. Beſides, there is ſome Care due to Poſterity: Tho' the preſent Members of her Communion may eſcape the Temptation, their Children may not: They may change the Religion of their Education, and Conſcientiouſly chuſe ſome other Communion. Would they ſubmit the Fortunes they leave them to the Rape of Hungry Courtiers, Bigots and indigent Informers, or have their Poſterity Impoveriſh'd, Baniſh'd or Executed for Sober and Religious Diſſent? God knows into whoſe Hands theſe Laws at laſt may fall, what Miſchief they may do, and to whom. Believe me, a King of the Humour of Sir J. K. of the Weſt, or Sir W. A. of Reading, or Sir R. B. or Sir S. S. of London, would, with ſuch Vouchers, quickly make a Golgotha of the Kingdom. If She thinks her ſelf conſiderable in Number or Eſtate, She will have the more to loſe. Let her not therefore Eſtabliſh that in the Prejudice of others, that may in the Hands of others turn to her Prejudice.

Laſtly, I would not have her miſs the Advantage that is deſigned her by thoſe that perhaps ſhe thinks worſt of. I dare ſay no body would willingly ſee the Presbyterian in her Chair, and yet that may happen to be the Conſequence of her Tenaciouſneſs in a little Time. For if the Averſion her Sons promote by wholeſale againſt Popery ſhould prevail, the Remains of it in her ſelf are not like to eſcape that Reformation. I mean, her Epiſcopal Government, and the Ceremonies of her Worſhip, for which ſhe has vex'd the moſt Conſcientious People of this Kingdom above an Age paſt. And the Presbyterian being a Rich, Induſtrious and Numerous Party, as well among the Nobility and Gentry, as Trading and Country People, I cannot ſee but the next Motion, naturally ſpeaking, is like to tend that Way; for other Parties, however well eſteemed, may ſeem too great a Step of Reformation at once, and methinks ſhe has taſted enough of that Regiment, to be once wiſe, and keep the Ballance in her own Hands. And certain it is, that nothing will ſo effectually do this, as the entreated Liberty of Conſcience; for then there will be four Parties of Diſſenters beſides her ſelf, to Ballance againſt any Deſigns that may warp or byaſs Things to their Advancement. And that which ought to induce the Church of England not a little to haſten as well as do the Thing, is this; She is now a Sort of National Church by Power, ſhe will then be the Publick Church by Concurrence of all Parties. Inſtead of Enemies to invade or undermine her, they that ſhould do it are made the Friends of her Safety by the Happineſs they enjoy through her Complacency: And if any ſhould be ſo unnatural or ungrateful to her, the Intereſt of the reſt will oblige them to be her Spies and Security againſt the Ambition of any ſuch Party. I do heartily pray to God that he would enlighten the Eyes of her Leaders, and give them good Hearts too, that Faction may not prevail againſt Charity, in the Name of Religion: And, above all, that ſhe would not be proud of her Numbers, or ſtand off upon that Reflection; for that alone will quickly leſſen them in a Nation loving Freedom as much as this we live in: And what appears in the Town is an ill Glaſs to take a Proſpect of the Country by: There are Pariſhes that have Fifteen Thouſand Souls in them, and if two come to Church it is Matter of Brag, tho' half the reſt be ſown among the ſeveral Diſſenting Congregations of their Judgment. I would not have her miſtaken, though Popery be an unpopular Thing, 'tis as certain ſhe of a long Time has not been Popular, and on that Principle never can be: And if ſhe ſhould Plow with that Heifer now, and gain a little by the Averſion to Popery; when it is diſcerned that Popery does return to the civil Intereſt of the Kingdom they will quickly be Friends. For beſides that, we are the eaſieſt and beſt-natur'd People in the World to be appeaſed: There are thoſe Charms in Liberty and Property to Engliſh Nature, that no Endeavours can reſiſt or diſappoint. And can we reaſonably think the Romaniſts will be wanting in that, when they ſee it is their own (and perhaps their only) Intereſt to do ſo? Theſe are the Arguments which, I confeſs, have prevailed with me to importune the Church of England to yield to the Repeal of all the Penal Statutes, and I ſhould be glad to ſee them either well refuted or ſubmitted to.

I ſhall now addreſs my ſelf to thoſe of the Roman Church, and hope to make it appear it is their Intereſt to ſit down thankfully with the Liberty of Conſcience herein deſired, and that a Toleration and no more, is that which all Romaniſts ought to be ſatisfied with. My Reaſons are theſe: Firſt, The Oppoſition that Popery every where finds: For in Nothing is the Kingdom ſo much of a Mind as in this Averſion: 'Tis no News, and ſo may be the better ſaid and taken. I ſay then this Unity, this Univerſality, and this Viſibility againſt Popery, make the Attempt, for more than Liberty of Conſcience, too great and dangerous. I believe there may be ſome poor ſilly Bigots that hope bigger, and talk farther, but who can help that? there are weak People of all Sides, and they will be making a Pudder: But what's the Language of their true Intereſt, the Infallible Guide of the wiſer Men? Safety certainly; and that in ſucceeding Reigns to chuſe: And if ſo, their Steps muſt be modeſt, for they are Watch'd and Number'd. And tho' their Prudence ſhould ſubmit to their Zeal, both muſt yield to Neceſſity, whether they like it or no. What they convert upon the Square, Perſwaſion I mean, is their own, and much Good may it do them. But the Fear is not of this, and for compelling the averſe Genius of the Kingdom, they have not the Means, whatever they would do if they had them: Which is my Second Reaſon. I ſay they have not the Power, and that is what we apprehend moſt. There are three Things that prove this in my Opinion. Firſt, their Want of Hands, next, Want of Time, and laſtly, their Inteſtine Diviſion; which, whatever we think, is not Inconſiderable. They are few, we muſt all agree, to the Kingdom, upon the beſt Computation that could be made: Out of Eighty Millions of People, they are not Thirty Thouſand, and thoſe but thinly ſown up and down the Nation; by which it appears that the Diſproportion of the Natural Strength is not leſs than Two Hundred and Seventy Perſons to One. So that Popery in England is like a Spirit without a Body, or, a General without an Army. It can hurt no more, than Bullets without Powder, or, a Sword and no Hand to uſe it. I dare ſay, there is not of that Communion, enough at once, to make all the Coal-Fires in London, and yet we are apprehenſive they are able to conſume the whole Kingdom. I am ſtill more afraid of her Fears than of them; for tho' they ſeem high, ſhe thinks their Religion in no Reign has appeared much lower.

O, but they have the King of their Side, and he has the Executive Power in his Hands! True, and this I call the Artificial Strength of the Kingdom. But I ſay, firſt we have his Word to bind him. And tho' ſome may think our Kings cannot be tyed by their People, certainly they may be tyed by themſelves. What if I don't look upon the Act of both Houſes to oblige the King, his own Conceſſion muſt; and that may be given in an Act of State. I take the King to be as well obliged in Honour and Conſcience to what he promiſes his People in another Method, as if it had been by his Royal Aſſent in Parliament; for an honeſt Man's Word is good every where, and why a King's ſhould not I can't tell. 'Tis true, the Place differs, and the Voice comes with greater Solemnity, but why it ſhould with greater Truth I know not. And if the Church of England will but be adviſed to give him the Opportunity of keeping his repeated Word with her, and not deprive her ſelf of that Advantage by Jealouſies and Diſtances that make her ſuſpected, and may force him into another Conduct, I cannot help believing that the King will to a Tittle let her feel the Aſſurance and Benefit of his Promiſes.

But next, we have his Age for our Security, which is the Second Proof, of the Second Reaſon, why the Papiſts ſhould look no farther than a Toleration. This is the Want of Time I mentioned. They have but one Life in the Leaſe, and 'tis out of their Power to Renew; and this Life has lived faſt too, and is got within Seven of Threeſcore; A greater Age than moſt of his Anceſtors ever attained. Well, but he has an Army, and many Officers of his own Religion. And if it be ſo, What can it do? It may ſuppreſs an Inſurrection, but upon the Attempts we fooliſhly fear, they were hardly a Breakfaſt to the Quarters they live in. For if they were together, all the Confines or remote Parts of the Nation would riſe like Graſs upon them; and, if diſperſed, to be ſure they have not Strength for ſuch an Attempt.

But if they are not ſufficient, there is a Potent Prince not far off can help the Deſign, who is not angry with Proteſtancy at Home only. Suppoſe this, Is there not as potent Naval Powers to aſſiſt the Conſtitution of the Kingdom from ſuch Invaſions? Yes, and Land One's too. And as the Proteſtant Governments have more Ships than the other, ſo an equal Land Force, when by ſuch Attempts to make Popery Univerſal, they are awakened to the Uſe of them: But certainly we muſt be very Silly to think the King ſhould ſuffer ſo great a Shock to his own Intereſt, as admitting an Army of Foreigners to enter his Kingdom on any Pretence, muſt neceſſarily occaſion. Theſe Bull-Beggars, and Raw-heads and Bloody-Bones, are the Malice of ſome and Weakneſs of others. But Time, that informs Children, will tell the World the Meaning of the Fright.

The Third Proof of my Second Reaſon, is, The Inteſtine Diviſion among themſelves. That Diviſion, weakens a great Body, and renders a ſmall one harmleſs, all will agree. Now, that there is ſuch a Thing as Diviſion among them is Town-talk. The Seculars and Regulars have ever been two Intereſts all the Roman Church over, and they are not only ſo here, but the Regulars differ among themſelves. There is not a Coffee-Houſe in Town that does not freely tell us that the Jeſuits and Benedictines are at Variance, that Count Da, the Pope's Nuncio, and Biſhop Lyborn, Diſſent mightily from the Politicks of the firſt; Nay, t'other Day the Story was, that they had prevailed entirely over them. The Lords and Gentlemen of her Communion have as warmly conteſted about the Lengths they ought to go, Moderation ſeems to be the Concluſion. Together they are little, and can do little; and, divided, they are Contemptible inſtead of Terrible.

Laſtly, The Roman Church ought to be Diſcreet, and think of nothing farther than the entreated general Eaſe, becauſe it would be an Extreme that muſt beget another in the ſucceeding Reign. For, as I can never think her ſo weak as well as baſe, that after all her Arguments for the Jus Divinum of Succeſſion, ſhe ſhould, in the Face of the World, attempt to violate it in the Wrong of One of another Perſwaſion, (for that were an Eternal Loſs of her with Mankind.) So, if ſhe does not, and yet is Extravagant, ſhe only riſes higher to fall lower than all others in another Reign. This were provoking their own Ruin. And, to ſay true, either Way would, as the Second Letter has it, Diſcredit her for ever, and make true Prophets of thoſe they had taken ſuch Pains to prove falſe Witneſſes. And ſuppoſing her to reckon upon the Juſt Succeſſion, nothing can recommend her, or continue her Happineſs in a Reign of another Judgment, but this Liberty equally maintained, that other Perſwaſions, more numerous, for that Reaſon as well as for their own Sakes, are obliged to inſure her. Here the Foundation is broad and ſtrong, and what is built upon it has the Looks of long Life. The Indenture will at leaſt be quinque-partite, and Parties are not ſo mortal as Men. And as this joyns, ſo it preſerves Intereſt entire, which amounts to a Religious Amity and a Civil Unity at the worſt.

Upon the whole Matter, I adviſe the Members of the Roman Communion in this Kingdom, to be moderate, 'tis their Duty, and it belongs to all Men to ſee it and feel it from them, and it behoves them mightily they ſhould; for the firſt Part of this Diſcourſe belongs to their Hopes, as well as to the Church of England's Fears, viz. The Duty and Spirit of Chriſtianity. Next, Let them do good Offices between the King and his Excellent Children, for as that will be well taken by ſo affectionate a Father, ſo it gives the Lye to their Enemies Suggeſtions, and recommends them to the Grace and Favour of the Succeſſors. And having ſaid this, I have ſaid all that belongs to them in particular. There is left only my Addreſs to the Proteſtant Diſſenters, and a General Concluſion to finiſh this Diſcourſe.

Your Caſe, that are called Proteſtant Diſſenters, differs mightily from that of the Church of England and Rome. For the firſt hath the Laws for her, the laſt the Prince. Thoſe Laws are againſt you, and ſhe is not willing they ſhould be Repealed: The Prince offers to be kind to you if you pleaſe; Your Intereſt, in this Conjuncture, is the Queſtion. I think none ought to be made, that it is the Liberty of Conſcience deſired, becauſe you have much more Need of it, having neither Laws nor Prince of your Side, nor a Succeſſor of any of your Perſwaſions. The Fears of Popery I know reach you; but it is to be remembred alſo, that if the Laws are not Repealed, there wants no New Ones to Deſtroy you, of the Papiſts making; ſo that every Fear you are taught to have of their Repeal, is againſt your ſelves. Suppoſe your Apprehenſions well grounded, you can but be Deſtroy'd; Which is moſt comfortable for you to ſuffer, by Law or without it? The Church of England, by her Penal Laws, and the Doctrine of Headſhip, has Armed that Religion (as it falls out) to Deſtroy you. Nay, has made it a Duty in the King to do it, from which (he ſays) nothing but an Act of Parliament can abſolve him, and that ſhe is not willing to allow. And is it not as reaſonable that you ſhould ſeek their Repeal, that if you ſuffer from the Papiſts, it may be without Human Law, as well as againſt Chriſt's Law, as for the Church of England to keep them in Force, becauſe if ſhe ſuffers, it ſhall be againſt the Laws made to uphold her? For not repealing them, brings you an inevitable Miſchief, and her, at moſt, but an uncertain Safety; tho' 'tis certain, ſhe at the ſame Time will ſacrifice you to it. And yet if I were in her Caſe, it would pleaſe me better to remove Laws that might reproach me, and ſtop my Mouth when turn'd againſt me, and be content; that if I ſuffer for my Religion, it is againſt the Law of God, Chriſtianity, and the Fundamentals of the Old and True Civil Government of my Country, before ſuch Laws helpt to ſpoil it. In ſhort, you muſt either go to Church, or Meet, or let fall your Worſhipping of God in the Way you believe. If the firſt, you are Hypocrites, and give away the Cauſe, and reproach your dead Brethren's Sincerity, and gratify the old Accuſation of Schiſm, Ambition, &c. and finally loſe the Hope and Reward of all your Sufferings. If the ſecond, viz. that you meet againſt Law, you run into the Mouth of the Government, whoſe Teeth are to meet in you and Deſtroy you, as by Law Eſtabliſhed. If the laſt, you deny your Faith, overthrow your own Arguments, fall away from the Apoſtolical Doctrine of aſſembling together, and ſo muſt fall into the Hands of God, and under the Troubles of your own Conſciences and Woundings of his Spirit, of which 'tis ſaid, who can bear them. So that nothing is plainer than that Proteſtant Diſſenters are not oblig'd to govern themſelves after ſuch Church of England Meaſures, ſuppoſing her Fears and Jealouſies better Bottom'd than they are: For they are neither in this King's Time in the ſame Condition, with her, if the Penal Laws remain in Force, nor like to be ſo, if ſhe can help it, in the next Reign, if they are not repealed in this; ſo that they are to be certainly Perſecuted now, in Hopes of an uncertain Liberty then. Uncertain both whether it will be in her Power, and whether ſhe will do it if it be. The Language of Fear and Aſſurance are two Things, Affliction promiſes what Proſperity rarely performs. Of this the Promiſes made to induce the late King's Reſtoration, and the Cancelling of the former Declaration, and what followed upon both are a plain Proof. And tho' the laſt Weſtminſter Parliament inclin'd to it; no Body ſo much oppoſed it as the Clergy, and the moſt Zealous Sons of that Church: And if they could or would not then ſee it to be reaſonable, I can't ſee why one ſhould truſt to People ſo ſelfiſh and ſhort-ſighted. But if ſhe will ſtoop to all thoſe Diſſenting Intereſts that are Proteſtant, it muſt either be by a Comprehenſion, and then ſhe muſt part with her Biſhops, her Common-Prayer, her Ceremonies, and this it ſelf is but Presbyterian; (and ſhe muſt go lower yet, if ſhe will comprehend the reſt) or, if not, ſhe muſt Perſecute, or give this Liberty of Conſcience at laſt; which, that ſhe will ever yield to uncompel'd, and at a Time too, when there is none to do it, while ſhe refuſes it under her preſent preſſing Circumſtances, I confeſs I cannot apprehend. But there is yet one Argument that can never fail to oblige your Compliance with the General Eaſe intreated, viz. That the Penal Laws are againſt our Great Law of Property, and ſo void in themſelves. This has been the Language of every Apology, and that which, to ſay true, is not to be anſwered: How then can you decline to help their Repeal, that in Conſcience, Reaſon and Law, you think void in their own Nature?

Laſtly, There is nothing that can put you in a Condition to help your ſelves, or the Church of England, againſt the Domination of Popery, but that which ſhe weakly thinks the Way to hurt you both, viz. The Repeal of the Penal Laws. For, as you are, you are tyed Hand and Foot, you are not your own Men, you can neither ſerve her nor your ſelves, you are faſt in the Stocks of her Laws, and the Courſe ſhe would have you take, is to turn Martyrs under them to ſupport them: If you like the Bargain you are the beſt natur'd People in the World, and ſomething more. And ſince Begging is in Faſhion, I ſhould deſire no other Boon; for upon ſo plain a Loſs of your Wits, your Eſtates will of Courſe fall a Stray to the Government, ſo that without the Help of a Penal Law, you make an admirable Prize.

I have no Mind to end ſo pleaſantly with you, I have a ſincere and Chriſtian Regard to you and yours. Be not Cozened, nor Captious, at this Juncture. I know ſome of you are told, if you loſe this Liberty, you Introduce Idolatry, and for Conſcience Sake you cannot do it. But that's a pure Miſtake, and improved, I fear, by thoſe that know it ſo, which makes us the worſe; for it is not Introducing Idolatry, (taking for granted that Popery is ſo) but ſaving the People from being Deſtroy'd that profeſs that Religion. If Chriſt and his Apoſtles had taken this Courſe with the World, they muſt have Killed them inſtead of Converting them. 'Tis your Miſtake to think the Jewiſh rigorous Conſtitution is adequate to the Chriſtian Diſpenſation; by no Means: That one Conceit of Judaiſing Chriſtianity in our Politicks, has filled the World with Miſery, of which this poor Kingdom has had it's Share. Idolaters are to be Enlightned and Perſwaded, as St. Paul did the Athenians and Romans, and not knocked on the Head, which mends no Body. And, to ſay a Chriſtian Magiſtrate is to do that, that a Chriſtian can't do, is ridiculous; unleſs, like the Biſhop of Munſter, who goes like a Biſhop one Part of the Day, and a Soldier the other, he is to be a Chriſtian in the Morning, and a Magiſtrate in the Afternoon. Beſides, 'tis one Thing to enact a Religion National, and Compel Obedience to it, (which would make this Caſe abominable indeed) and another Thing to take off Chriſtian Penalties for the Sake of ſuch Miſtakes, ſince that is to give them Power to hurt others, and this only to ſave you from being hurt for meer Religion.

To conclude my Addreſs to you, of all People, it would look the moſt diſingenuous in you, and give you an Air, the leaſt Senſible, Charitable and Chriſtian, not to endeavour ſuch an Eaſe, that have ſo much wanted it, and ſo often and ſo earneſtly preſſed it, even to Clamour. But that you ſhould do it for their Sakes who have uſed you ſo, and that the Inſtruments of their Cruelty, the Penal Laws, ſhould from a Common Grievance become a Darling to any among you, will be ſuch a Reproach to your Underſtandings and Conſciences, that no Time or Argument can wipe off, and which I beſeech God and you to prevent.

The Conclusion.

I Shall conclude with one Argument, that equally concerns you all, and that is this; You claim the Character of Engliſhmen. Now, to be an Engliſhman, in the Senſe of the Government, is to be a Freeman, whether Lord or Commoner, to hold his Liberty and Poſſeſſions by Laws of his own conſenting unto, and not to forfeit them upon Facts made Faults, by Humour, Faction, or Partial Intereſt prevailing in the Governing Part againſt the Conſtitution of the Kingdom; but for Faults only, that are ſuch in the Nature of Civil Government; to wit, Breaches of thoſe Laws that are made by the whole, in Purſuance of common Right, for the Good of the Whole.

This Regard muſt at no Time be neglected, or violated towards any one Intereſt; for the Moment we concede to ſuch a Breach upon our General Liberty, be it from an Averſion we carry to the Principles of thoſe we expoſe, or ſome little ſiniſter and temporary Benefit of our own, we Sacrifice our ſelves in the Prejudices we draw upon others, or ſuffer them to fall under; for our Intereſt in this Reſpect is common. If then as Engliſhmen, we are as mutually intereſted in the inviolable Conſervation of each other's Civil Rights, as Men embark'd in the ſame Veſſel are to ſave the Ship they are in for their own Sakes, we ought to Watch, Serve and Secure the Intereſt of one another, becauſe it is our own to do ſo; and not by any Means endure that to be done to pleaſe ſome narrow Regard of any one Party, which may be drawn in Example at ſome other Turn of Power to our own utter Ruin.

Had this Honeſt, Juſt, Wiſe and Engliſh Conſideration prevail'd with our Anceſtors of all Opinions from the Days of Richard the Second, there had been leſs Blood, Impriſonment, Plunder, and Beggary for the Government of this Kingdom to anſwer for. Shall I ſpeak within our own Knowledge, and that without Offence, there has been Ruin'd, ſince the late King's Reſtoration, above Fifteen Thouſand Families, and more than Five Thouſand Perſons Dead under Bonds for Matters of meer Conſcience to God: But who hath laid it to Heart? It is high Time now we ſhould, eſpecially when our King, with ſo much Grace and Goodneſs leads us the Way.

I beſeech you all, if you have any Reverence towards God, and Value for the Excellent Conſtitution of this Kingdom, any Tenderneſs for your Poſterity, any Love for your Selves, you would embrace this happy Conjuncture, and purſue a common Expedient; That ſince we cannot agree to meet in one Profeſſion of Religion, we may entirely do it in this common civil Intereſt where we are all equally engaged; and therefore we ought for our own Sakes to ſeek one another's Security, that if we cannot be the Better, we may not be the worſe for our Perſwaſions, in Things, that bear no relation to them, and in which, it is impoſſible we ſhould Suffer, and the Government eſcape, that is ſo much concern'd in the civil Support and Proſperity of every Party and Perſon that belongs to it.

Let us not therefore uphold Penal Laws againſt any of our Religious Perſwaſions, nor make Teſts out of each others Faiths, to exclude one another our civil Rights; for by the ſame Reaſon that denying Tranſubſtantiation is made One to exclude a Papiſt, to own it, may be made one to exclude a Church of England Man, a Preſbyterian, an Independent, a Quaker, and Anabaptiſt: For the Queſtion is not who is in the right in Opinion, but whether he is not in Practice in the wrong, that for ſuch an Opinion deprives his Neighbour of his common Right? Now 'tis certain there is not one of any Party, that would willingly have a Teſt made out of his Belief, to abridge him of his native Priviledge; and therefore neither the Opinion of Tranſubſtantiation in the Papiſts, Epiſcopacy in the Church of England Man, Free-will in the Arminian, Predeſtination in the Presbyterian, Particular Churches in the Independent, Dipping of adult People in the Anabaptiſt, nor not ſwearing in the Quaker, ought to be made a Teſt of, to deprive him of the Comforts of his Life, or render him incapable of the Service of his Country, to which by a natural Obligation he is indebted, and from which, no Opinion can diſcharge him, and for that Reaſon, much leſs ſhould any other Party think it fit, or in their Power to exclude him.

And indeed it were ridiculous to talk of giving Liberty of Conſcience (which yet few have now the fore-head to oppoſe) and at the ſame Time imagine thoſe Teſts that do exclude Men that Service and Reward, ought to be continued: For though it does not immediately concern me, being neither Officer nor Papiſt, yet the Conſequence is general, and every party, even the Church of England, will find her ſelf concern'd upon Reflection; For ſhe cannot aſſure her ſelf it may not come to be her turn.

But, Is it not an odd Thing, that by leaving them on foot, every Body ſhall have Liberty of Conſcience but the Government? For while a Man is out of Office, he is Teſt-free, but the Hour he is choſen to any Station, be it in the Legiſlation or Adminiſtration, he muſt wiredraw his Conſcience to hold it, or be excluded with the Brand of Diſſent: And can this be equal or wiſe? Is this the Way to employ Men for the good of the Publick, where Opinion prevails above Virtue, and Abilities are ſubmitted to the Humour of a Party; ſurely none can think this a Cure for Diviſion, or that Animoſities are like to be prevented by the only Ways in the World that beget and heighten them. Nor is it poſſible that the eaſe that ſhould be granted can continue long, when the Party in whoſe Favour they are not repeal'd, may thereby be enabled to turn the Point of the Sword again upon Diſſenters.

I know Holland is given in Objection to this Extent of Freedom, where only one Perſwaſion has the Government, though the reſt their Liberty: But they don't conſider, firſt, how much more Holland is under the Power of Neceſſity than we are. Next, That our Conſtitutions differ greatly. For the firſt, 'tis plain, in the little compaſs they live in; the Uncertainty and Precariouſneſs of the Means of their Subſiſtence: That as they are in more Danger of Drowning, ſo nearer ruin by any Commotion in the State, than other Countries are. Trading is their Support, This, keeps them buſy, That, makes them Rich; and Wealth, naturally gives them Caution of the Diſorders that may ſpoil them of it. This makes the governing Party wary how they uſe their Power, and the other Intereſts tender how they reſiſt it; for upon it, they have Reaſon to fear a Publick Deſolation; ſince Holland has not a natural and Domeſtick Fund to rely upon, or return to, from ſuch National Diſorders.

The next Conſideration is as clear and cogent; our Conſtitutions differ mightily: For though they have the Name of a Republick, yet in their Choice, in order to the Legiſlature, they are much leſs free then we are: And ſince the Freeholders of all the Parties in England may Elect, which in Holland they can no more do than they can be choſen, there is good reaſon why all may be elected to ſerve their King and Country here, that in Holland cannot be choſen or ſerve. And if our Power to chuſe be larger than theirs in Holland, we are certainly then a freer People, and ſo ought not to be confin'd, as they are, about what Perſon it is that muſt be choſen: Methinks it bears no Proportion, and therefore the Inſtance and Objection are improper to our Purpoſe.

But it is ſaid by ſome, That there cannot be two predominant Religions, and if the Church of England be not that, Popery by the King's Favour is like to be ſo. It is certain that two predominant Religions, would be two Uppermoſts at once, which is nonſenſe every where: But as I cannot ſee what need there is for the Church of England to loſe her Churches or Revenues, ſo while ſhe has them, Believe me, ſhe is Predominant in the Thing of the World that lies neareſt her Guides. But if I were to ſpeak my Inclination, I cannot apprehend the Neceſſity of any Predominant Religion, underſtanding the Word with Penal Laws in the tail of it: The Miſchief of it, in a Country of ſo many powerful Intereſts as this, I can eaſily underſtand, having had the Opportunity of ſeeing and feeling it too: And becauſe nothing can keep up the Ball of Vengeance like ſuch a Predominant Religion, and that Penal Laws and Teſts are the Means of the Domination, I, for that Reaſon, think them fit to be Repeal'd, and let Engliſh Mankind ſay, Amen.

I do not love Quibling, but 'tis true, to a Lamentation, that there is little of the Power of Religion ſeen where there is ſuch a predominant one, unleſs among thoſe it Domineers over.

I conclude, they that are ſo Predominant, and they that ſeek to be ſo (be they who they will) move by the ſame Spirit and Principle, and however differing their Pretenſions and Ends may be, the odds are very little to me, by which it is I muſt certainly be Oppreſt.

Dare we then do (for once) as we would be done by, and ſhow the World, we are not Religious without Juſtice, nor Chriſtians without Charity: That Falſe ſelf ſhall not govern us againſt True ſelf; nor Opportunity make us Thieves to our Neighbours, for Gods Sake? The End of Teſting and Perſecuting under every Revolution of Government. If this we can find in our Hearts to do, and yet as Men, and as Chriſtians, as Engliſh Men, we do but do our Duty, let the Penal Laws and Teſts be Repeal'd; and in order to it, Let us now take thoſe Meaſures of Men and Things, that may give our Wiſhes and Endeavours the beſt Succeſs for the publick Good, that our Poſterity may have more Reaſon to bleſs our Memories for their Freedom and Security, than for their Nature and Inheritance.

JUST

JUST MEASURES, in an Epiſtle of Peace and Love, to ſuch Profeſſors of Truth, as are under any Diſſatisfaction, about the preſent Order practis'd in the Church of Chriſt.

Friends,

I Have, with a deep Senſe and Sorrow, often beheld the Diſtance and Diſſatisfaction you are under in Reference to your ancient and faithful Brethren, and that Fellowſhip, which, I am ſure, was once very dear and valuable with you, and I would have the Charity to hope, is what many of you deſire ſtill: And, for your Sakes that would not willingly think amiſs, nor differ, nor divide from thoſe that otherwiſe you have an Eſteem for and are in Judgment one with, as to the Worſhip and Doctrines of Truth, I deſire to open my Mind, both with Tenderneſs and Plainneſs; and if what I ſay has the Voice and Matter of Peace and Love in it, and may be helpful to you, in cloſing with your Brethren again, I ſhall greatly rejoyce: In which, know this, I ſeek you not in the Words of Man's Wiſdom, nor to raiſe Controverſy, nor for Victory, nor any By-ends, but for the Sake of that precious Fellowſhip and ſeamleſs Garment, in which the Truth clothed us all in the Beginning, and with which it will clothe and comfort all its faithful Servants and true Friends to the End. Firſt, I ſhall begin with the Difference, and what you have both in Conference and Writing alledged for the Ground of your Diſſatisfaction and Diſſent: Next, I ſhall conſider the Nature and Merit of it; and laſt of all, give my Senſe upon the whole Matter, in order to a better Underſtanding for the Future.

That there is a Difference, is but too plain, for it has in ſome Parts proceeded to a Separation, as well to Places of Worſhip as in Matters of Diſcipline. The Ground of this Diſſatisfaction, upon which ſo great a Diſtance has been raiſed, you ſay is, Requiring your Compliance with ſome Practices relating to Diſcipline, particularly Women's Meetings about Marriages, before they are admitted to be ſolemnized among us; ſome of you thinking, that there is no Service for Women's Meetings at all; others, no Service in their being diſtinct from Men's Meetings, at leaſt, no Neceſſity for either, and therefore no neceſſary Compliance to be required and inſiſted upon, but every one left to their Liberty in Chriſt, leſt Impoſition and Formality ſhould prevail among us, as they have done in other Religious Societies. In this, I think, I have truly and fairly ſtated the Caſe on your Part, and given your Objection to our Practice, and the reaſon why you diſſent from it.

Now Friends, I ſhall conſider the Nature and Merit of this Diſſatisfaction and Diſſent, wherein I beſeech your Attention, Patience, and Candour, and I hope you will find, that we are clear of the Impoſition and Formality you object or fear.

In the firſt Place, I do not find that you have any juſt Cauſe to fear, in general, an infringement on your Chriſtian Liberty, ſince it has been, and is moſt ſincerely declared by the Brethren, chiefly concerned in the good Order and Service of the Church, that they have no Thought or Deſign of impoſing any Thing upon the Conſciences of Friends; or, that Friends ought to have now, any more than at the Beginning, any other Reaſon or Meaſure of Compliance or Conformity in Matters relating to God, than the Conviction of the Light and Spirit of Chriſt in every Conſcience. But there is this Diſtinction to be conſidered well of, That the Matters in Difference are not ſuch as require ſuch an Exerciſe and Conviction of Conſcience as is pleaded, becauſe they relate not to Faith or Worſhip. Did they require Faith, or did they appertain to Worſhip, as if you were obliged to worſhip God only in ſuch a Place, Time, Geſture, Raiment, with ſuch Words and Forms of Speech, &c. which has been the Caſe of the Diſſenters from the National Church, your Objection and Plea were good: But this about which your Diſſatisfaction ariſes, is purely Diſcipline in Government, and not in Worſhip; Formality in Order, and not in Religion: It is about Methods of regulating our ſelves, as to the Civil or Outward

Part of the Church, as we are a Society; how we may avoid Diſorder, and preſerve the Credit of our Society from Cenſure and Scandal.

For Inſtance, To keep the Neceſſitous; as Poor, Aged, Sick, and Orphans: To reconcile Differences: To take Care of Births, Marriages, and Burials: In fine, To prevent, rebuke and reſtore diſorderly Walkers. To all which, I conceive, there is no Need of an Act of Faith, or other Exerciſe of Conſcience, than as the Apoſtle exhorts, To be ready to every Good Word and Work: I mean, Here is nothing required to be believed as an Article of Faith; here is no Novelty or Formality in Worſhip introduc'd, or any Thing propoſed as an End or Service for our Men and Women's Meetings, that can reaſonably admit of the raiſing of ſuch a Scruple of Conſcience, ſince the Things propoſed are Duties, that all Civil Societies, as well as Church-Fellowſhips, agree in, as requiſite to the Support of the Reputation of Fellowſhips and Societies.

Now this being the Great and True End, Uſe and Service of our Men and Women's Meetings: and that 'tis the End that always denotes and conſtitutes the Nature of the Means, it cannot juſtly be thought to be of the Nature of Impoſition and Formality, as the Words are commonly taken in an ill Senſe, to expect the Compliance of Members of a Society, to ſuch Methods of Order as the Elders thereof have exhorted to, and the Generality of the People have embraced, and which the moſt conſiderable Part of thoſe that Diſſent, declare they Diſſent from, rather for Fear of ſuffering an Infringment of their Chriſtian Liberty, than any Diſlike to the Practice it ſelf: I ſay, this cannot be called, or accounted ſuch an Impoſition upon Conſcience, becauſe they are Expedients of Order, and Methods of Rule about Things univerſally agreed upon. The Thing will not bear the Word; For Inſtance, Becauſe I may ſay it is againſt my Conſcience to confeſs to ſuch an Article or Doctrine of Faith, or to worſhip God after ſuch a preſcribed Form, that therefore it would ſound Reaſonable for me to ſay, It is againſt my Conſcience to ſubmit to the Counſel of the Church for ending of Differences; and it is againſt my Conſcience, after having once told the Brethren I intend to Marry ſuch a Woman, to come again a Fortnight, or a Month after, to aſk if they have informed themſelves of mine and the Woman's Clearneſs, both towards Parents and other Perſons, before we Solemnize it: Surely this would look to Reaſonable People, an Over-tender, or an Over-Righteous, or rather, indeed, an Over-free and large Conſcience, that would ſcruple, at Twice or Thrice publiſhing the Banns, to prevent Undutifulneſs to Parents, and Injury to Pre-engagements, when thoſe, we profeſs to exceed, require in their Communion that it be Thrice done. In like Manner it would look very ſtrange in me, to call a Church-Care of circumſpect Walking up to the Religious Principles of the Society that I have voluntarily embraced, An impoſing, or over-driving me.

But you object, Why muſt we go before Women, and, Why Women apart from Men? This ſtill, Friends, can be no Impoſition, as is before expreſſed, becauſe it is no Matter of Faith, nor Practice of Worſhip, but a referring ſtill to our External Order of Life: And we ſay, Women as well as Men, becauſe they are concerned, for they are Part of the Church of Chriſt; and the Common Banns that are publiſhed in Churches (ſo called) or Markets, exclude not Women to make their Exception any more than Men. But why Women apart, ſay you? We think for a very Good Reaſon; the Church increaſeth, which increaſes the Buſineſs of the Church, and Women, whoſe Baſhfulneſs will not permit them to ſay, or do much as to Church-Affairs before the Men, when by themſelves, may exerciſe their Gifts, of Wiſdom and Underſtanding, in a diſcreet Care for their own Sex, at leaſt; which makes up not the leaſt Part of the Buſineſs of the Church, and this while the Men are upon their proper Buſineſs alſo. So that as Men and Women make up the Church, Men and Women make up the Buſineſs of the Church; and therefore it is very Reaſonable they ſhould be Helpers together, in doing the Church's Buſineſs. This Way Women are made Uſeful and Serviceable in, and to the Church, as were the Holy Women of Old, that were ſo much commended by the Apoſtle, for Deaconneſſes indeed. And, as I ſaid before, their Buſineſſes being hereby diſtinct, Two Buſineſſes are doing at one and the ſame Time, and conſequently, there muſt needs be a greater Diſpatch; which in Country-Places, and Winter-Seaſons, where Friends come Ten or Fifteen Miles to Meetings, muſt needs be very convenient and comfortable. I may add, that there are divers Things that ſeem peculiar to Women, that were not fit for Men, and in which Men did, and would find themſelves often at a Loſs, which renders their diſtinct Meetings farther convenient.

1692. Theſe are the Reaſons and Motives to the preſent Practice of the Church of Chriſt, without infringing Chriſtian Liberty, by compelling Conſcience to any Matter of Faith or Practice, relating to Women; we meaning, by our whole Order and Government, no other Thing than a Careful Eye, and Check upon Practice; an Expediency againſt Irregularity in Converſation, whether towards them that are without, or thoſe that are within the ſame Communion, to which the Strong will ſubmit for the Sake of the Weak.

My own Senſe upon this whole Matter is, That a miſapprehending the Intention of the Brethren, and an undiſtinguiſhing Zeal againſt Impoſitions on the one Hand, and a Fear on the other Side, that thoſe who ſo miſtook and miſrendered the Deſign of the Brethren, were either High-minded and unruly, or prone to undue Liberty, or that they not being the firſt Promoters of this Diſcipline in Government, detracted from them that were, and ſo would leſſen the Credit and Authority of their Endeavours, with ſuch as were peculiar Favourers; and that, in fine, their Diſſent tended to the Breach of Brotherly Love and Unity in the Church. I ſay my Senſe is, That this on each Side, with the Heats that followed, perhaps much worſe than the Thing it ſelf, gave Life to the Diviſion that thoſe that fear the Lord, have truly Mourned for. And ſince I have hinted the Heats that may have attended the Management of this Difference, be not offended that I ſay, the Difference, through thoſe Heats, is now more in Spirit than Fact, in Mind than Matter: It is come in Fact to this, Whether the Care of Converſation ſhould belong to Women as well as Men, eſpecially relating to their own Sex, the Women being ſo great a Part of the Church: And over this, I think, you are got for the moſt Part. 2. Whether the Women may meet ſeparately from the Men? And for Anſwer to this, be pleaſed to take Notice of your own unavoidable Conceſſions: You allow Meetings of Care in General, and do not deny Women abſolutely their Share among the Men, and that particular Members muſt be accountable to the Society they are of, in Point of Converſation, according to the Rules embraced by the ſaid Society. I ſay, You own the End, you allow the Means, you refer the Choice of your Means to the Society, and you, as well as we, expect a Compliance with thoſe Rules. Then the Queſtion is, Whether in Fact, Women's Meetings be a Part of that Diſcipline the Church admits of? And it is evident, that the Church of God does, generally ſpeaking, receive and practiſe it, with Satisfaction and Advantage. I would therefore beſeech you, Friends, to ponder in your Minds, upon what a narrow Point your Diſtance ſtands, and that the main and tender Point is allowed you, viz. Conſcience is Free, and unconcern'd in the Queſtion; and the Viſible Ground of Diſtance being ſo ſmall, weigh with your ſelves by what has been, what may be the Conſequence of this lamentable Breach.

I am as much for Liberty as any Man; I ever was ſo, and hope I ever ſhall be for it; but we muſt refer it to a proper Object, or we ſhall abuſe what we do ſo much prize, and pervert one of the greateſt Priviledges we can pretend to. I do not mean, by the Liberty, that we are to reſign to the Benefit of Society That which is Private or Perſonal; No, this does not enter into Private or Perſonal Liberty, concerning which, the Apoſtles taught us to bear, and not offend one another; as about Meats and Drinks: I may add Clothes, Houſes, Trades, &c. ſo as there be no Exceſs, for that is every where Wrong: Theſe Things regard not Society, but a Man's Self, and his private Liberty alone. What is it to the Society, what or when I eat, what Sort of Clothing I wear, or Houſe I live in, or Trade I will be of, ſo as Exceſs or Uncomelineſs be avoided? This is ſtill in my own Power, and many like Things, hard to be numbred, about which Society is not in the leaſt concerned, nor in which any Member of it is interrupted, or called in Queſtion. In the next Place, we do alſo all agree, that Faith muſt not be forced, nor Worſhip conſtrained, for that grates upon Conſcience, which God only can effectually enlighten or rightly perſwade. But that bears not upon our Queſtion, as I ſaid before; for the Compliance deſired in it, is about Order, not Faith, and that not about Worſhip, but Converſation, in which if you ſubmit your Liberty, it is for the Good of Society, and you have the Returns of it in the Benefit and Comfort thereof. Do you ſerve, or take Care of others, that before were free of that Engagement? Others alſo are tied by the ſame Rules, to ſerve and be concerned for you, that formerly owed you no Obligation; and if you are under the Notice and Reproof of others, as to your Perſonal Conduct, they are equally under yours upon Occaſion; ſo that you loſe nothing but what you get, nor give nothing but what you receive again, and to a right Spirit and a good Mind, this mutual Service will appear Reaſonable, Chriſtian, and Requiſite. And as in no Age, the Reſiſter and Gainſayers of Care and Order, in any of the Lord's Eminent Servants, have paſſed without the Mark of God's Rebuke, ſo thoſe that have conteſted and oppoſed the Wiſdom of God in His Faithful Servants, have ever failed of their Purpoſe, and been finally manifeſted to have been led by a wrong Spirit. And as obſervable it is, that thoſe by whom the Lord has eminently appeared, and who were the firſt Inſtruments of his ſeveral Diſpenſations to the Sons of Men, have always exerciſed that Authority among the People they have gathered, and have been conſtantly preſerved from falling away, though ſome or other have riſen againſt them with that Clamour, as if they had ſet up themſelves, and were gone from what they taught or were, and took too much upon them. But what have they all come to? Read, and Judge.

Nor was it ever heard of, in the Dealings of GOD with the Sons of Men, that He varied, or changed his Diſpenſations in the Life-time of the Inſtruments of any of them, as ſome have been ready to imagine, nor yet in that Age in which He has brought them forth: Which engages me to beſeech you, in the Bowels of the Love of CHRIST, our Only Root of Life and Light, and Love and Peace, that you be like minded with your Friends and Brethren, and ſee that the Life and the Fellowſhip of the Truth be preſerved in the Enjoyment and Practice of Fellowſhip; which will be, if the Love of God, which firſt made us Love one another, be kept in, for that is a Sovereign Antidote againſt all the Poiſon of Diſcontent, Evil Jealouſie, and the Diviſions that are wont to follow. And inſtead of reproaching our Elders and Brethren, whom God has Honoured, and whom we have Honoured, and could have laid down our Lives for, and who know nothing by themſelves, but that they are as True to the Lord, and in as good a Condition in the Truth as ever they were, and have done, and intended in what they have done, as much the Benefit of the Lord's People. I ſay, inſtead of reproaching them with Uſurping Authority, and taking too much upon them, let us conſider, that thoſe whom we have received with ſo much Reverent Love, and as worthy of double Honour in the Greater Things, are not unworthy to be heard and followed by us in Leſſer Matters: Let us regard and value their Care, and Love them for it. So True is that Saying among Men, That is Well Spoken which is Well Taken, that the Bent and Purpoſe of a Man's Spirit, is that which gives the Juſt Reaſon of Acceptance or Rejection.

You have, Dear Friends, judged too much after an Outward Appearance, and, you may ſee, not truly there neither. Open therefore your Hearts, your Souls and Spirits, and taſte, with the Divine Senſe of the Tender and Meek Truth, the Aim and End of Brethren: Herein be a little more truly free and univerſal in your Minds, and you will perceive this Care has a large and long Proſpect for Good. The due Exerciſe of your Spiritual Senſes, will anſwer all your Objections, and ſatisfie every Upright Soul among you; but if you look out, miſtake Liberty, miſtake Impoſition, miſtake Formality, miſtake the Nature and End of Things, and the Intention of your Ancient Friends and Brethren in them, you will judge carnally, and be ready to think, as if outward Rule and Lordlineſs were aimed at, and a departing from the Truth, even whilſt our Care, in the Sight of the Lord, is for the Honour of it, in Reference to the Young, the Weak, and ſuch as may be Careleſs, and ready to fall aſleep; for ſuch ſome yet are, and ſuch are yet like to be; and for their Sakes a Diſcipline, as to Converſation, muſt be, as well as that there are Natural Infirmities, as Sickneſs, Age, &c. that unavoidably call for it. Nor did, or can ever any Community ſubſiſt without it; and the Heats, Prejudice, and Rents, that have ariſen about the How or Manner of it, ſhew the Oppoſition not to be Right, nor of a Good Tendency; the End of that Order, in the Minds and Hands of thoſe from whom we Joyfully received the Teſtimony of the Truth, being the Glory of God, and Good of His People, as a Primitive Chriſtian Society.

To conclude: As this is not a Plea for Impoſition, nor Forms of Worſhip, but Forms of Diſcipline, as to the Government and Behaviour of our ſelves in our Converſe, both with thoſe that are without, and thoſe that are within, and that there is no Viſible Communion, or Society in this World of Bodies, but what is ſubject to them, and muſt in ſome Sort ſubſiſt by them; I beſeech you, that We, as becomes a Reaſonable and Modeſt People, and as Dear Children, may be of One Heart, and One Mind, and walk together as thoſe that have been Partakers of One Life, and that have Drank into One Spirit; for, It is a Comely Thing to ſee Brethren walk together in Love.

1692. O Friends, Let us labour againſt ſecret Animoſities, Watchings for Evil, Detractation, the Sin that flung the Angels out of their Heavenly Station: Let us ſee to our own Spirits, how they are, if Meek, Lowly, Humble, Tender, by which the True and Preſerving Judgment is only known and felt; or, if not High, Fierce, Hard, and Prejudiced; for a Man may come to loſe a Good Frame of Spirit upon very Trifles. It is not always what the Matter is the Diſpute ariſes upon, but how far the Thing is eſpouſed, and what Place a Man ſuffers it to have in his Mind: If Jealouſy, Reputation, Revenge, or Contradiction, prevail, Diviſion muſt follow: Some are apt to reſent Things too ſoon, and carry it too far, even to Obſtinacy, through the Workings of the Evil One in a Myſtery; ſo that though the Pretence of the Quarrel may be ſome Fact or other, yet that has the leaſt Share oftentimes in the Difference, it being enflam'd and encreaſed by the Myſterious Workings of the Spirit of Strife and Variance in the Mind, according to an old Saying, The greateſt Feuds oftentimes ariſe from the ſlighteſt Cauſes. Let me beſeech and prevail with you to read and weigh the Bent and Force of the Apoſtle's Spirit in Rom. 12. alſo 14. 19. & 15. 4, 5, 6. and eſpecially 16. 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 Verſes. Likewiſe 1 Cor. 14. 32, 33. weighty places indeed. 2 Cor. 13. Epheſ. 4. 1, 2, 3, 4. Phil. 3. 16, 17, 18. ch. 4. 8, 9. Col. 3. 12, 14, 15, 16. 1 Theſ. 5. 12, 13, 14. 2 Theſ. 3. 4, 5, 6. The Lord God Almighty diſpoſe your Minds, my Friends, to a tender returning State, and frighten not your ſelves with Deſigns (of the Brethren) that have no Being, but in Jealouſy and Miſapprehenſion: I beſeech you, in the Lord, lay down every Mark or Enſign of Difference or Separation, and behold our Arms as open as ever, to receive you, and let your Heart be as our Heart, and then our Meetings your Meetings: Let the Fear and Awe of the Lord, the becoming Love of his precious Truth, which is Chriſt in us, the Hope of our Glory, who gave himſelf for us, to redeem us from the Enmity, Death, and Curſe Diſobedience had laid us under, melt and cement us as one Lump; Fleſh of Fleſh, and Bone of Bone; ſo ſhall our Joy exceed our Sorrow, and Tears be wiped from our Eyes on this Occaſion; and GOD, our exceeding Great and Glorious Rewarder, be our Crown, Portion, and Diadem for ever.

The INTRODUCTION.

Reader,

OBſerving the prevailing Power of Prejudice, and the too great Eaſineſs of Mankind to be impoſed upon by deſigning Perſons, and eſpecially on the Side of Uncharitableneſs, (ſo depraved is the Nature of Man) and conſidering alſo what Miſchievous Effects that Evil hath produced among too many of all Sorts of People, to the Hurt of Civil as well as Religious Society, by the Coldneſs, Jealouſy, Uncharitableneſs and Animoſity, even to Hatred and Perſecution, (the very Contraries and Reverſe of the true Chriſtian Religion) that have thereby abounded, we have the leſs wondred at the hard Treatment we, as a People, have ſuffered from other Perſwaſions, almoſt all of them having in their Turn, ſome, I hope, Ignorantly; others, I fear, wilfully; Miſrepreſented our Principles, Miſgiven our plain Meanings, and called their own ſtrained Interpretations, ay and their down-right Perverſions too, our Faith and Religion: And thus dreſſing us in the Bear's Skin, the Credulous have been excited to look upon and treat us as Hereticks, Seducers, Blaſphemers, and what not, while (bleſſed be God) our Aim and Bent have been the very Power and Work of Religion upon our Souls, that we might be God's Workmanſhip through Chriſt Jeſus, his bleſſed Son and Heavenly Agent; taking this to be the very Life and Soul of true Religion; the Effect and Fruit of the Divine Nature, which makes us Chriſtians indeed here, and fits us for Glory hereafter. And becauſe we have choſen Retirement, Moderation, Self-denial, which to be ſure are the Solids and Inwards, the Spirit and Subſtance of Religion, and have therefore waved and ſequeſtred our ſelves from more Outward and Pompous Communions, Offence has been taken at us, and we have been diſingenuouſly repreſented to the World; On which Account I have publiſhed this little Treatiſe, for the Sake of others, as well as in our own Vindication, but theirs eſpecially that are under Prejudices from Vulgar Abuſes. I would intreat ſuch to conſider, that if it be an Evil to judge raſhly or untruly of any ſingle Man, how much a greater Sin it is to condemn an whole People: And if the Matter about which the Judgment is made, renders it more or leſs Evil, certainly to condemn the Religion of an whole People in the Lump, which at once comprehends their Faith, Worſhip and Morals alſo, muſt be, if falſe or miſtaken, as great an Injuſtice as can well be committed, and the Almighty will not hold them guiltleſs that have been ſo Uncharitable and Injurious to their Neighbours. And this we have frequently lamented as our great Unhappineſs, above all that our Enemies have been able Argumentatively to urge againſt us, that we are yet unknown of thoſe that ſtick not to condemn us. But they muſt certainly be inexcuſable with Juſt Minds, that will take our Belief at our Enemies rather than at our Own Hands, who beſt ought to know what we Believe. But it will be the Buſineſs of this Little KEY to explain the pretended Obſcurity, and ſhew the Difference between our Principles, and the Vulgar Account and Apprehenſions, and thereby Open a Way into ſo clear and plain an Underſtanding of our true Principles, from our Enemies Perverſions, that we hope, with God's Bleſſing, all Impartial Enquirers will be ſatisfied of our Holy and Chriſtian Profeſſion; And this we alſo earneſtly deſire for their Good, that as we have been called of God, out of the Evil of the World, to be a People to his Praiſe, through his Grace, ſo none may ſtumble or be offended at the Truth we teſtify of; but ſeeing the Excellency of it, by the Peace and Purity it leads into, They may embrace it, and walk in it; which is the beſt Way to end Controverſy, and obtain the Great and True End of Religion, the Salvation of the Soul.

A KEY Opening the Way to every Capacity, &c.

SECT I.

Of the Light within, what it is, and the Virtue and Benefit of it to MAN.

Perverſion 1. THE Quakers hold, That the Natural Light in the Conſcience of every Man in the World, is ſufficient to ſave all that follow it; and ſo they overthrow Salvation by Chriſt. A mighty Error indeed, if it were True:

Principle. But it is at beſt a great Miſtake: For their Belief and Aſſertion is, That Chriſt, who is the Word, that was with God, and was God; (and is ſo for ever) hath lightned every Man that cometh into the World, with his own Light, as he is That true Light, or ſuch a Light, as there is no other to be compared with him; which is the Meaning of the Emphaſis True in the Text, Joh. 1. 9. And that ſuch as follow the Reproofs, Convictions and Leadings of that Light, with which he John 1. 1. 9.

See Iſa. 49. 6. John 1. 4, 9. c. 3. 21. c. 5. 40. c. 8. 12. c. 10. 10.

enlightens the Underſtandings and Conſciences of Men, ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, that is, in Evil and Ignorance of God, but ſhall have the Light of Life; that is, be in a Holy and Living State or Condition towards God: A State of Acceptance and Salvation, which is from Sin here, as well as from Wrath hereafter: And for which End Chriſt was given of God. So that they aſſert the Light of Chriſt, to be ſufficient to ſave, that is, to Convince of Sin, Lead out of it, and Quicken the Soul in the Ways of Holineſs; and not to be a Natural Light, otherwiſe than as all Men, born into the World, have a Meaſure of Chriſt's Light, and ſo it may, in a Senſe, be ſaid to be Natural to all Men, becauſe all Men have it coming into the World. For this Light is ſomething elſe than the bare Underſtanding Man hath as a Rational Creature; Since, as ſuch, Man cannot be a Light to himſelf; but has only a Capacity of ſeeing, by means of the Light with which Chriſt, the Word, Enlightneth him. For we can no more be a Mental or Intellectual Light to our
Rev. 21. 24. ſelves, than we are an External and Corporeal Light to our ſelves: But as the Sun in the Firmament is the Light of our Bodies, ſo the Light of the Divine Word is the Sun of our Souls; the glorious Luminary of the Intellectual World, and they that walk in it, will by it be led to Bleſſedneſs.

Perverſ. 2. The Quakers hold, That the Light within them is God, Chriſt, and the Holy Spirit; ſo that every Quaker has whole God, Chriſt and Holy Spirit in him, which is groſs Blaſphemy.

Princip. This is alſo a Miſtake of their Belief: They never ſaid that every divine Illumination or Manifeſtation of Chriſt, in the Hearts of Men, was whole God, Chriſt, or the Spirit, which might render them guilty of that groſs and blaſphemous Abſurdity ſome would faſten upon them: But that God, who is Light, or John 1. 4. 8. 12. 1 Cor. 15. 45. 47. the Word Chriſt, who is Light, ſtiled the ſecond Adam, the Lord from Heaven, and the Quickning Spirit, who is God over all bleſſed for ever, hath enlightned Mankind with a Meaſure of Saving Light; who ſaid, I am the Light of the World, and they that follow me, ſhall not abide in Darkneſs, but have the Light of Life. So that the Illumination is from God, or Chriſt, the Divine Word; but not therefore that whole God or Chriſt is in every Man, any more than the whole Sun or Air is in every Houſe or Chamber. There are no ſuch harſh and unſcriptural Words in their Writings. It is only a Frightful Perverſion of ſome of their Enemies, to bring an Odium upon their Holy Faith. Yet in a Senſe the Scriptures ſay it, and that is their Senſe, in which only, they ſay the ſame Thing. I will walk in them
John 14. 3, 17, 18, 20. Col. 1. 26, 27. 2 Cor. 13. 5. Gal. 4. 19. and dwell in them. He that dwelleth with you, ſhall be in you: I will not leave you Comfortleſs, I will come to you: I in them and They in me: Chriſt in us, the Hope of Glory. Unleſs Chriſt be in you, ye are Reprobates. Little Children, of whom I travail again in Birth, until Chriſt be formed in you. Now if they who denied his Coming in the Fleſh, tho' high profeſſing Jews, were to be accounted Antichriſts, becauſe Enemies to that Appearance and Diſpenſation of God to Men; what muſt they be reputed, who as ſtiffly diſown his Inward, Nearer and more Spiritual Coming, Formation and Dominion in the Soul; which, is to be ſure, the Higher and Nobler Knowledge of Chriſt? Yea, the Myſtery hid from Ages, and now revealed
Col. 1. 27. to God's People: The Riches of the Glory of the Myſtery which God reſerved to be made known to the Gentiles, of whoſe Stock we are. Certainly tho' they are called Chriſtians, they muſt be no whit leſs Antichriſts than thoſe obſtinate Jews of old, that oppoſed his more viſible and bodily Appearance.

Perverſ. 3. By the Quakers Doctrine every Man muſt be ſaved, for every Man, they ſay, is Savingly Enlightned.

Princip. Not ſo neither: For tho' the Light or Grace of God hath and doth more or leſs appear to all Men, and that it brings Salvation to as many as are Job 3. 20. 21. Tit. 2. 11, 12. Gen. 6. 5. Ezek. 18. 21, 22, 23, 24. Mic. 6. 8. 1 Tim. 2. 4. 2 Pet. 3. 9. His Light is Saving that lighteth them, but it cannot be ſaid to ſave them, while they rebel againſt it. In ſhort, tho' Men are lightned or viſited with a Saving Light or Grace, yet the Quakers never concluded, nor can it rightly be concluded from their Teſtimony, that ſuch Men muſt Neceſſarily and Abſolutely be ſaved, whether they obey, or rebel.

Perverſ. 4. By the Quakers Light or Spirit, they may be moved to Murder, Adultery, Treaſon, Theft, or any ſuch like Wickedneſs, becauſe they ſay that ſuch as are ſo led, have the Light within them.

Princip. This never was their Doctrine, nor is it conſequent of it: For tho' they hold that all have Light, they never ſaid that all obey'd it, or that Evil Men, as ſuch, or in ſuch Things, were led by it: Much leſs could the Light be chargeable with the Sins of thoſe that refuſed to be led by it. For herein they Joh. 3. 20,21. know the Spirit of God, and the Motions of it, from the Spirit of this World, Gal. 5.16-26. and it's Fruits, That the Spirit of God Condemns all Ungodlineſs, and moves and inclines to Purity, Mercy, Righteouſneſs, which are of God.

They deny and abominate that Looſe and Ranting Mind, which would charge the Spirit of God with their unholy Liberty. God's Spirit makes People free from Sin, and not to commit ſin. Neither do they diſtinguiſh, as ſuch looſe People wickedly do, between the Act, and the Evil of it. Wherefore they ſay, that as the Tree is known and denominated by it's Fruits, ſo Spirits are by their Influences, Motions and Inclinations: And the Spirit of God never did incline any one to Evil. And for that Cauſe they renounce this Conſtruction of the Ranters, that Evil is no Evil when they are led to it by God's Spirit: For that Groſly implies, As if the Spirit of God led Man at any Time to that which is Evil in it ſelf, or that it were poſſible to be ſinleſs in the Commiſſion of Sin, as Murder, Theft, Adultery, Revenge, &c. For that never was nor can be the Way and Method of God's Spirit, which is Pure and Holy for ever; and brings all that regard the Convictions and Motions of it, into a Senſe and Sorrow for Sin, and ſo leads them into a State of Reformation, without which, all Profeſſion of Religion is meer Formality, and Hypocriſy. So that Man's Sin and Deſtruction are of himſelf, but his Help is in God alone, through Jeſus Chriſt, our bleſſed Sacrifice, and Sanctifier.

SECT. II. Of Infallibility and Perfection.

Perverſ. 5. The Quakers muſt be all Infallible and Perfect, if they have ſuch an Infallible Light in them.

Princip. No ſuch Matter: This is alſo a great Abuſe of their true Meaning. They ſay, the Principle is Pure, Perfect, Unerrable in it ſelf, or elſe it were very unfit to lead Men out of Error and Impurity. But they never did aſſert themſelves ſuch, merely becauſe it was within them: By no Means. But that all who are led by it, and live according to it's Manifeſtation, are ſo far Perfect, and ſo far infallible in the right Way, as they are led by it, and not a Jot farther. For it is not Opinion, or Speculation, or Notions of what is true; or Aſſent to, or the Subſcription of Articles, or Propoſitions, tho' never ſo ſoundly worded, that according to their Senſe, makes a Man a True Believer, or a True Chriſtian. But it is Rom. 8. 4. a Conformity of Mind and Practice to the Will of God, in all Holineſs of Converſation, according to the Dictates of this Divine Principle of Light and Life in the Soul, which denotes a Perſon truly a Child of God. For the Children of God are Rom. 8. 9.14. led by the Spirit of God, but if any Man have not the Spirit of Chriſt, he is none of his. And let it be noted, that tho' this Spiritual Principle be in Man, yet, it is not of Man but of God, through Jeſus Chriſt. Who can lay down a more Independent Doctrine upon Self, and a more depending one upon the Grace or Gift of God? Let us not, I pray, be miſtaken, nor ſuffer for ſuch Miſapprehenſions, nor be made to hold what we don't, on Purpoſe to diſrepute us with ſober People, or to ſupport the Miſtaken Charges of our Enemies. Yet to ſhew that a State of Perfection from Sin (tho' not in Fulneſs of Wiſdom and Glory) is attainable in this Life; they, among others, refer them to theſe Scriptures, which for Brevity's Sake, are not ſet down at large, but the Reader is deſired to turn to them.

SECT. III. Of the Scriptures, their Truth, Authority, and Service.

Perverſ. 6. The Quakers deny Scripture, for they deny them to be the Word of God.

Princ. They own and ſtile the Scriptures, as They own and ſtile themſelves; viz. A Declaration of thoſe Things moſt truly believed, given forth in former Ages, by the Inſpiration of the Holy Spirit; conſequently that they are profitable for Doctrine, for Reproof, for Correction, for Inſtruction in Righteouſneſs, that the Man of God may be perfect, throughly furniſhed unto all good Works. They are the Form of Sound Words. We profeſs to believe them, and read them, and ſay, it is the Work we have to do in this World, and the earneſt Deſire of our Souls to Almighty God, that we may Feel and Witneſs the Fulfilling of them in and upon our ſelves; that ſo God's Will may be done in Earth, as it is in Heaven. But to call them the Word of God, (the Ground of the Charge) which they never call themſelves, but which they peculiarly Denominate and Call Chriſt by; In Reverence to Chriſt, and in no ſlight to them (which they believe to be of Divine Authority, and embrace as the beſt of Books, and allow to be as much the Word of God, as a Book can be) They do, as in Duty and Reaſon bound, attribute that Title to Chriſt only.

Mark 7. 13.
John 1. 4.
Deut. 30. 14.
Rom. 10. 6, 7, 8.

And yet as the Word of God may, in ſome Senſe, ſignify the Command of God, referring to the Thing or Matter commanded, as the Mind of God, it may be called the Word of the Lord, or Word of God: As, on particular Occaſions, the Prophets had the Word of the Lord to Perſons and Places; that is to ſay the Mind or Will of God, or that which was commanded them of the Lord to declare or do. So Chriſt uſes it, when he tells the Phariſees, that they had made the Word (or Command) of God of none effect, by their Traditions. But becauſe People are ſo apt to think, if they have the Scriptures they have all (for that they account them the only Word of God, and ſo look no farther; that is, to no other Word, from whence thoſe good Words came) therefore this People have been conſtrained, and they believe, by God's Good Spirit, once and again to Point them to the great Word of Words, Chriſt Jeſus, in whom is Life, and that Life the Light of Men; that they might feel ſomething nearer to them than the Scriptures, to wit, the Word in the Heart, from whence all Holy Scripture came, which is Chriſt within them the Hope of their Glory. And to be ſure He is the only right Expounder as well as the Author of Holy Scripture, and without whoſe Light, Spirit, or Grace, they cannot be Profitably read by thoſe that read them.

Perverſ. 7. They deny them to be any Means whereby to reſiſt Temptation.

Princ. This is a very Uncharitable Aſperſion. True it is, that they deny the Scrptures merely, or of themſelves, to be Sufficient to reſiſt Temptations; for then all that have them and read them, would be ſure to be preſerved by them againſt Temptations: But that they ſhould deny them to be any Means or Inſtrument in God's Hand, is either great Ignorance or Injuſtice in their Adverſaries, God hath made uſe of the Scriptures, and daily doth and will make uſe of them for Inſtruction, Reproof, Comfort and Edification, through the Spirit, to thoſe that read them as they ought to do. Thus they ſay, they have felt them, and ſo they have been and are made unto them, through the good Spirit of God, coming in upon their Spirits, in the Reading and Conſidering of them; and wiſh heartily They were more in Requeſt with the Profeſſors of Chriſtianity.

SECT. IV. Of the Holy Spirit of God, and it's Office, with reſpect to Man, and of MINISTRY, &c.

Perverſ. 8. The Quakers aſſert the Spirit of God to be the Immediate Teacher, and that there is no other Means now to be uſed, as Miniſtry, Ordinances, &c.

Princ. They never ſpoke ſuch Language, and their Daily Practice confutes the Reflection. But herein we perceive the great Subtilty of Satan, as well as in other Things, to darken the Appearance of the Truth, and Prepoſſeſs Peoples Minds againſt it. For ſince he cannot hinder the Exaltation of the Spirit above all viſible Inſtruments, nor the Neceſſity of its Manifeſtations, Convictions, Motions and Operations, to be known in the Hearts of Men, and the great Suitableneſs thereof to the Goſpel-Adminiſtration, he would ſpoil all by over-doing the Matter, and carrying our Aſſertions beyond Bounds; For they never denied the Uſe of Means, but to this Day, from the Beginning, they have been in the Practiſe of them. But then they are ſuch Means as are uſed in the Life and Power of God, and not in and from Man's meer Wit, Will, or Carnal Innovation or Imitation; the only Thing they ſtrike at. For Inſtance, they cannot own that to be a Goſpel-Miniſtry, that is without a Goſpel-Spirit, or that ſuch can be ſent of God, that are not taught of God, or that they are fit to teach others what Regeneration and the Way to Heaven are, that have never been Born Again Themſelves; or that ſuch can ever bring Souls to God, that are themſelves Strangers (like thoſe in the Acts 19. 21.)

This Unexperienced and Lifeleſs Miniſtry, is the only Miniſtry, and ſuch the only Miniſters, that the People called Quakers, cannot Own and Receive, and therefore cannot maintain. For the Miniſtry and the Miniſters that are according to Scripture, they both own, Reſpect, and delight in, and are ready to Aſſiſt and Support in their Service for God.

Jo. 14. 16, 17 26 ch. 16. 13 Acts 1. 8. Gal. 1. 1, 15, 16.

It is ſtrange, becauſe they deny all falſe Means, or Means not ſanctified, or uſed in the Openings and Leadings of God's Power and Spirit, that therefore they muſt deny All Means, however Rightly uſed or employed. This is an Injuſtice to their Profeſſion and Practice. Wherefore all are deſired to take Notice, That Evangelical Means and Order they love and deſire to keep: For they diligently aſſemble themſelves together to wait upon God, to inable them to Worſhip him; where they both Pray and Propheſy, one by one, as Prepared and Moved in their Hearts by his Spirit, and as any Thing is revealed to them, according to Primitive Practice; otherwiſe they are ſilent before the Lord. Nor are they without Spiritual Songs, making Melody in their Hearts to God their Redeemer, by the ſame Holy Ghoſt, as often as they are comforted and moved by it, as was the Primitive Practice.

SECT. V. Of the Holy Three, or Scripture TRINITY.

Perverſ. 9. The Quakers deny the Trinity.

Princ. Nothing leſs: They believe in the Holy Three, or Trinity of Father, Word and Spirit, according to Scripture. And that theſe Three are Truly and Properly One: Of One Nature as well as Will. But they are very tender of quitting Scripture Terms and Phraſes for Schoolmen's; ſuch as diſtinct and ſeparate Perſons and Subſiſtences, &c. are; from whence People are apt to entertain groſs Ideas and Notions of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. And they judge, that a Curious Enquiry into thoſe High and Divine Relations, and other ſpeculative Subjects, though never ſo great Truths in themſelves, tend little to Godlineſs, and leſs to Peace; which ſhould be the chief Aim of true Chriſtians. And therefore they cannot gratify that Curoſity in themſelves, or others: Speculative Truths being, in their Judgment, to be ſparingly and tenderly declared, and never to be made the Meaſure and Condition of Chriſtian Communion. For beſides that Chriſt Jeſus hath taught them other Things, the ſad Conſequence, in all Times, of Superfining upon Scripture-Texts, do ſufficiently Caution and Forbid them. Men are too apt to let their Heads outrun their Hearts, and their Notion Exceed their Obedience, and their Paſſion ſupport their Conceits; inſtead of a Daily Croſs, a Conſtant Watch, and an Holy Practice. The deſpiſed Quakers deſire this may be their Care, and the Text their Creed in This, as in all other Points: Preferring Self-denial to Opinion, and Charity to Knowledge, according to that great Chriſtian Doctrine, 1 Cor. 13.

SECT. VI. Of the DIVINITY of CHRIST.

Perverſ. 10. The Quakers deny Chriſt to be God.

Princ. A moſt Untrue and Unreaſonable Cenſure: For their Great and Characteriſtick Principle being this, That Chriſt, as the Divine Word, Lighteth the Souls of all Men that come into the World, with a Spiritual and Saving Light, according to John 1. 9. ch. 8. 12. (which nothing but the Creator of Souls can do) it does ſufficiently ſhew they believe him to be God, for they truly and expreſly own him to be ſo, according to Scripture; viz. In him was Life, and that Life the Light of Men; and he is God over all, bleſſed for ever.

John 1. 1. Rom. 9. 5.

SECT. VII. Of the Manhood of CHRIST.

Perverſ. 11. The Quakers deny the Humane Nature of Chriſt.

Princ. We never Taught, ſaid, or held ſo groſs a Thing, if by Humane Nature be underſtood the Manhood of Chriſt Jeſus. For as we believe him to be God over all bleſſed for ever, ſo we do as truly believe him to be of the Seed of Abraham and David after the Fleſh, and therefore Truly and Properly Man, like us in all Things (and once ſubject to all Things for our Sakes) Sin only excepted.

SECT. VIII. Of Chriſt Jeſus, His Death, and Sufferings.

Perverſ. 12. The Quakers expect to be Juſtified and Saved by the Light within them, and not by the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt.

Princ. This is both unfairly and untruly ſtated and charged upon us. But the various Senſe of the Word Juſtification, obliges me here to diſtinguiſh the Uſe of it; for in the natural and proper Senſe, it plainly implies, making Men Juſt, that were Unjuſt; Godly, that were Ungodly; Upright, that were Depraved; as the Apoſtle expreſſeth himſelf, 1 Cor. 6. 11. And ſuch were ſome of You, but ye are waſhed, but Ye are Sanctified, but Ye are Juſtified in the Name of our Lord Jeſus, and by the Spirit of our God. In the other uſe of the Word, which ſome call a Law-ſenſe, it refers to Chriſt, as a Sacrifice and Propitiation for Sin, as in Rom. 5. 9. Much more then being now juſtified by his Blood, we ſhall be ſaved from Wrath through him: and 1 John 2. If any Man ſin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jeſus Chriſt the Righteous; and He is the Propitiation for our Sins; and not for ours only, but alſo for the Sins of the whole World. Which tho' a great Truth and moſt firmly believed by us; yet no Man can be entituled to the Benefit thereof, but as they come to believe and repent of the Evil of their Ways; and then it may be truly ſaid, That God Juſtifieth even the Ungodly, and looks upon them through Chriſt, as if they had never Sinned; becauſe their Sins are forgiven them for his Beloved Son's Sake.

Not that God looks on People to be in Chriſt, that are not in Chriſt; that is, that are not in the Faith, Obedience and Self-denial of Chriſt; nor Sanctified, nor led by his Spirit, but rebel againſt it; and inſtead of dying to Sin, through a true and unfeigned Repentance, Live and Indulge themſelves daily in it; for they that are in Chriſt, become new Creatures; Old Things are paſt away, and all Things, with them, become new. Wherefore we ſay, that whatever Chriſt then did, both Living and Dying, was of great Benefit to the Salvation of All that have believed, and now do, and that hereafter ſhall, believe in him unto Juſtification and Acceptance with God: But the way to come to that Faith, is to Receive and Obey the Manifeſtation of his Divine Light and Grace in their Conſciences, which leads Men to

1 Joh. 1. 6, 7. fice and Mediator. For we do affirm, that to follow this Holy Light in the Conſcience, and to turn our Minds, and bring all our Deeds and Thoughts to it, is the Readieſt, nay, the Only right Way to have true living and ſanctified Faith in Chriſt, as he appeared in the Fleſh, and to diſcern the Lord's Body, Coming and Sufferings a-right, and to receive any Real Benefit by him, as their only Sacrifice and Mediator: According to the Beloved Diſciples Emphatical Paſſages, If we walk in the
1 Jo. 1. 5, 6, 7 Light, as (God) is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all Sin. And becauſe this People ſay, that Chriſt's outward Coming and Sufferings Profit not to their Salvation, that Live in Sin, and rebel againſt this Divine Light, ſome have untruly and uncharitably concluded, that they deny the Virtue and Benefit of Chriſt's Coming and Sufferings in the Fleſh, as a Sacrifice for Sin. Whereas we only deny and oppoſe a falſe and dangerous Application of them in and to a diſobedient State. For we believe Chriſt came not to ſave Men in their Sins, but from their Sins; and that thoſe that
Rev. 3. 20. open the Door of their Hearts at his Inward and Spiritual Knocks; [to wit, the Reproofs and Convictions of his Light and Grace] have their Conſciences ſprinkled with his Blood (that is diſcharg'd from the Guilt of them) from dead Works, to ſerve the Living God: And that ſo far only as Men come by Faith, Repentance and Amendment to be Chriſt's, Chriſt is theirs, and as he has an Intereſt in their Hearts, they have an Intereſt in his Love and Salvation. That is, ſo far as they are Obedient to his Grace, and take up his Croſs, and follow him in the Ways of Meekneſs, Holineſs and Self-denial, ſo far they have an Intereſt in Chriſt, and no farther. And here there is no Condemnation indeed to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, becauſe ſuch walk not after the Fleſh, but after the Spirit; for we have ſeen a Shoal or Sand here, that we fear many Thouſands have Split upon, which we deſire to avoid, and are earneſt that others may beware of it alſo; viz. that becauſe Chriſt died a Sacrifice for the Sins of the whole World, by which he put Mankind into a Capacity of Salvation, and has given every one a Talent of Grace to work it out by; they preſume upon the Sacrifice, and Sin on, without a through Repentance, Reformation and Converſion to God, not Dying with Chriſt to the World, but Living ing in it, according to the Luſts and Spirit of it. Such as theſe may be aſſured that where Chriſt is gone, they ſhall never come; for ſays the bleſſed Apoſtle, God ſent his Son to bleſs us, by turning every one of us from the Evil of our Way. So that the Contrite, Humble, Meek, and Self-denying People, are thoſe that have the true and full Benefit of Chriſt's Coming, Suffering and Mediation, and of all thoſe Holy Ends for which God his Father Anointed and Gave him to the World, viz. To be the Way, Truth and Life; Light, Leader and Saviour, to be a King, Prieſt, Prophet, Sacrifice, Sanctifier and Mediator. Being ſenſibly felt of all ſuch to Reign over their Hearts, Teach them God's Royal Law, Give them ſaving Knowledge, and to Mediate, Atone for, Sanctify and Juſtify them in the Sight of God his Father, for ever. 1692.

By all which it is evident to any moderate Enquirer, that we acknowledge Chriſt in his Double Appearance as in the Fleſh, of the Seed of Abraham, ſo in the Spirit, as he is God over all, bleſſed for ever. Wherein is a full Confeſſion both to him as a Bleſſed Perſon, and as a Divine Principle of Light and Life in the Soul; the Want of which Neceſſary and Evident Diſtinction occaſions our Adverſaries frequent Miſtakes about our Belief and Application of the Scriptures of Truth concerning Chriſt, in that twofold Capacity.

For it is not another than that Eternal Word, Light, Power, Wiſdom and Righteouſneſs, which then took Fleſh, and appeared in that Holy Body, by whom they have received, or can receive any true Spiritual Benefit. They holding, Light is Only from Him, Forgiveneſs Only through Him, and Sanctification Only by him. So that their aſcribing Salvation from Sin, and Death Eternal, to him in this Age, who now appears by His Holy Spirit to their Souls, as before expreſſed, cannot render him no Saviour in that Age, or make void the End and Benefit of his Bleſſed Appearance then in the Fleſh on Earth, or his Mediation now in Glory, for thoſe that believe in him in this Age. Whoſe Doctrine Pierced, whoſe Life Preached, whoſe Miracles Aſtoniſhed, whoſe Blood Atoned, and whoſe Death, Reſurrection and Aſcenſion, Confirmed that Bleſſed Manifeſtation to be no leſs than that of the Word God (the Life and Light of Men) manifeſted in the Fleſh, according to the Apoſtle Paul, for the Salvation of the World: And therefore Properly and Truly was the Son of Man on Earth, and is now as truly the Son of Man in Glory, as the Head of our Manhood, which ſhall alſo be glorified, if we now Receive him into our Hearts, as the true Light, that leads in the Way of Life Eternal, and Continue in well-doing to the End. John 1. 4, 9. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

SECT. IX. Of Good WORKS.

Perverſ. 13. Thus it is the Quakers ſet up Works, and Meriting by Works, like the Papiſts; whereby Juſtification by Faith in Chriſt is laid aſide.

Princ. By no Means: But They ſay with the Apoſtle James, c. 2. That true Faith in Chriſt cannot be without Works, any more than a Body can live without a Spirit; and that where there is Life, there is Motion, and where there is no Divine Life and Motion, there can be no True Faith; Believing being a Fruit of Divine Life. Nay, by the Compariſon, if they were ſeparable, Works being compared to the Spirit, they would have the better. The very Believing is an Act of the Mind, concurring with God's working in or upon the Mind, and therefore a godly Work. And no ſooner is True Faith begotten in a Soul, but it falls to working; which is both the Nature, and in ſome reſpect, the End of it.

Nor yet do we ſay, that our very Beſt Works, proceeding from the True Faith it ſelf, can Merit; no, nor Faith joyned with them, becauſe Eternal Life is the Gift of God. All that Man is capable of believing or performing can never properly be ſaid to Merit everlaſting Bleſſedneſs, becauſe there can be no Proportion (as there muſt be in Caſe of Merit) between the beſt Works that can be performed in the Life of Man, and an Eternal Felicity. Wherefore all that Man can do, even with the Aſſiſtance of the Holy Spirit, can never be ſaid ſtrictly to Merit, as a Debt due to the Creature: But on the other Hand, That Right Faith, and Good Works, which ariſe out of it, or will follow it, may and do Obtain the Bleſſed Immortality, [which it pleaſeth Almighty God to give, and priviledge the Sons of Men with, who perform that neceſſary Condition] is a Goſpel and Neceſſary Truth. And this the Quakers ground upon, and therefore boldly affirm to the World.

So that they deny all Merit from the beſt of Works, eſpecially by ſuch as ſome Papiſts may conceive to be Meritorious. But as they on the one Hand, deny the Meritoriouſneſs of Works, ſo on the other Hand, neither can they joyn with that Lazy Faith which works not out the Salvation of the Soul with Fear and Trembling:

SECT. X. Of Water-Baptiſm and the Supper.

Perverſ. 14. The Quakers deny the two great Sacraments or Ordinances of the Goſpel, Baptiſm, and the Supper.

Princip. Whatever is truly and properly a Goſpel-Ordinance, they deſire to own and practiſe: But they obſerve no ſuch Language in the Scripture as in the Reflection. They do confeſs the Practice of John's Baptiſm, and the Supper, is to be found there; but Practice only is no Inſtitution, or ſufficient Reaſon of Continuation. That they were then proper, they believe, it being a Time of great Infancy, and when the Myſteries of Truth lay yet Couched and Folded up in Figures and Shadows, as is acknowledged by Proteſtants: But it is their Belief, that no Figures or Signs are Perpetual, or of Inſtitution, under the Goſpel-Adminiſtration, when Chriſt, who is the Subſtance of them, is come: Though their Uſe might have been Indulged to young Converts in Primitive Times, becauſe of the Condeſcenſion of former Practices.

It were to overthrow the whole Goſpel Diſpenſation, and to make the Coming of Chriſt of none Effect, to render Signs and Figures of the Nature of the Goſpel, which is Inward, Spiritual, and Eternal. If it be ſaid, But they were uſed after the Coming of Chriſt, and his Aſcenſion too. They Anſwer, So were many Jewiſh Ceremonies, not eaſily aboliſhed, as Circumciſion, &c. It is ſufficient to them, That Water-Baptiſm was John's, and not Chriſt's, See Matt. 3. 11. Acts 1. 5. That Jeſus never uſed it, John 4. 2. That it was no Part of Paul's Commiſſion, which if it were Evangelical, and of Duration, would certainly have been. 1 Cor. 4. 15, 16, 17. And that there is but One Baptiſm, as well as One Faith, and One Lord, Eph. 5. 4. And that Baptiſm ought to be of the ſame Nature with the Kingdom of which it is an Ordinance, and that is Spiritual. The ſame holds alſo as to the Supper, both alluding to Old Jewiſh Practices, and uſed as a Signification of a near and accompliſhing Work, viz. The Subſtance they repreſented.

If any ſay, But Chriſt commanded that One of them ſhould continue in Remembrance of him; which the Apoſtle to the Church of Corinth explains thus; That Luke 22. 19. thereby they do ſhew forth the Lord's Death 'till he comes. We alledge, that he that Subſtance to the Soul, as the great Bread of Life from Heaven, Signs had their Service with them, to Shew Forth, and Hold in Hand, and in Remembrance of Chriſt: Eſpecially to the People of that Day, whoſe Religion was attended with a Multitude of the like Types, Shadows, and Signs of the One good Thing and Subſtance of all, Chriſt manifeſted in his People. And that great Apoſtle Paul ſays expreſly of the Jewiſh Obſervations, That they were Shadows of the good Things to come, but the Subſtance was of Chriſt. Hence it is, that the People called Quakers cannot be ſaid to Deny Them; that is too hard a Word: But they truly feeling in themſelves the very Thing, which outward Water, Bread and Wine do ſignify, or point forth [to ſay nothing here of their Abuſe, and what in that Caſe may be argued, from the Inſtance of Hezekiah's taking away the Brazen Serpent by God's Command] they leave them off, as fulfilled in Chriſt, who is in them the Hope of their Glory: And henceforth they have but One Lord, One Faith, One Baptiſm, One Bread, and but One Cup of Bleſſings, and that is the New Wine of the Kingdom of God, which is within. 2 King. 18. 4. Mark 14. 25. 1 Cor. 10. 15, 16, 17. Luke 17. 20. 27.

SECT. XI. Of the Reſurrection, and Eternal Recompence.

Perverſ. 15. They acknowledge no Reſurrection of the Dead, nor Rewards to come.

Princ. In this alſo we are greatly abuſed. We deny not, but believe the Reſurrection according to the Scripture; not only from Sin, but alſo from Death and the Grave: But are Conſcientiouſly Cautious in expreſſing the Manner of the Reſurrection intended in the Charge, becauſe 'tis left a Secret by the Holy Ghoſt in the Scripture. Should People be angry with them for not expreſſing or aſſerting what is hidden, and which is more curious than neceſſary to be known, and in which the Objectors themſelves cannot be poſitive? Thou Fool, is to the curious Enquirer, as ſays the Apoſtle: Which makes the Quakers contented with that Body, which God ſhall pleaſe to give them hereafter: Being aſſured that their Corruptible ſhall put on Incorruption, and their Mortal ſhall put on Immortality, but in ſuch a Manner as pleaſeth God. And in the mean Time they eſteem it their Duty, as well as Wiſdom, to Acquieſce in his Holy Will. It is enough they believe a Reſurrection, and that with a Glorious and Incorruptible Body, without farther Niceties; for to that was the ancient Hope. 1 Cor. 15. 36 to 54.

Now as to Eternal Rewards, they not only believe them, but as the Apoſtle ſays of old, above all People, have the greateſt Reaſon ſo to do; for otherwiſe, who is ſo miſerable? Do they inherit the Reproach and Suffering of all that have ſeparated from Time to Time from National Churches? That is to ſay, Are the Outcries that have been againſt the Proteſtants by the Papiſts, and thoſe of the Church of England againſt the Puritans, Browniſts, and Separatiſts, fallen ſo thick upon them, and ſhall They hold Principles inconſiſtent with an Eternal Recompence of Reward? By no Means. It is their Faith, their Hope, their Intereſt, and what they wait and have Suffered for, and preſs, as an Encouragement to Faithfulneſs, upon one another. And the contrary therefore muſt be both an Unjuſt, and an Improbable Suggeſtion of their Adverſaries. 1 Cor. 15. 19.

SECT. XII. Of Civil Honour and Reſpect.

Perverſ. 16. The Quakers deny All Civil Honour and Reſpect, but what is Relative or Equal between Men.

Princ. We Honour all Men in the Lord, but not in the Spirit and Faſhion of this World that paſſes away. And tho' we do not pull off our Hats, or make Curchings, or give flattering Titles, or uſe Complements, becauſe we believe there is no true Honour, but Flattery and Sin in the uſing of them; yet we treat all Men with Seriouſneſs and Gentleneſs, tho' it be with Plainneſs, and our Superiors with a modeſt and awful Diſtance; and are ready to do them any reaſonable Benefit or Service, in which we think real Honour conſiſteth. Whereas thoſe that thus reproach us, are often Proud, Peeviſh, Snappiſh, Abuſive and Oppreſſive one to another; tho' at the ſame Time they can give one another the Cap and Knee, with ſmooth Words, which [too generally] they never mean: Which is far from true Civility, or Honouring all Men in the Senſe that they are exhorted to by the Apoſtle. 1 Pet. 2. 17. ch. 3. 9. Rom. 12. 2. Job 32. 21, 22 1 Pet. 1. 14.

And as for expreſſing our Reſpect to our Superiours in all Countries, we think it beſt done by obeying all Juſt Laws under their Government, according to the Saying ing of the Centurion unto Chriſt, and which Chriſt ſo much approved of, viz. When he ſaid to one, come, and he came; to another go, and he went; to a Third, do this, and he did it. Reaſonable Commands, and Ready Obedience. This is honouring of Government and Governours, and not Empty Titles, and Servile and Fantaſtick Geſtures, and drinking of their Healths 'till they drink away their own: The vain and evil Cuſtoms of the World, taken from the Heathen's Practices, and Adopted by looſe Chriſtians in their Converſation, and ſo become the Faſhion of the Times. And if to diſſent from theſe Things, be to be vile, we are contented to be accounted more Vile, having Chriſt's Commands, Primitive Example, and our own Convictions on our Side.

Luke 7. 8, 9.
2 Sam. 6. 22.

SECT. XIII. Of Civil Government.

Perverſ. 17. The Quakers are Enemies to all Government. Firſt, In that every one acteth according to his own Conceit. Secondly, Becauſe they won't Support Civil Government, Thirdly, Becauſe They Refuſe to give Evidence upon Oath, as the Law requires.

Principle. That this is a Calumny, their Lives and Converſations ſufficiently ſhew; for no People give the Magiſtrates Leſs Trouble, or cauſe that Charge or Burden to Sit lighter upon their Shoulders than theſe People do. And for their Principle, They believe Magiſtracy to be an Ordinance of God, and that He that Ruleth Well, is worthy of Double Honour, and deſerves to be much Valued and Eſteemed: As ſuch certainly do, Who are a Terror to Evil Doers, and a Praiſe to them that do Well. And farther, to ſhew that they are a People that love Order and Good Government, they carefully practiſe it among themſelves: For if there be Twenty Meetings of Worſhip in a County, They, peradventure, make Three or Four Monthly Meetings of Buſineſs, and theſe Monthly Meetings are reſolved into a Quarterly Meeting for the County, by ſuch Members as they ſeverally appoint to conſtitute it. And all the Quarterly Meetings in the Nation, by choſen Men out of themſelves, do conſtitute One General Yearly Meeting; unto which, the Meetings of thoſe People, in all Parts of the World, have their Recourſe, by Choſen Meſſengers, or by Epiſtles. The Buſineſs of which Meetings, in their ſeveral Degrees, is to promote Virtue and Charity, Peace and Unity.

Rom. 13. 1, 2, 3.
Acts 6.

The Quakers will not ſupport Civil Government, and ſo are uſeleſs, if not dangerous to Government.

This alſo is untrue, upon Experience: For what People is more induſtrious under Government, or pay their Taxes better to it than they do? And, Tribute from the People, and Juſtice from the Rulers, are the Support of Government in all Countries. It is true indeed, that they cannot kill, or ſlay their own Kind, and ſo are not fit for Warriors with Carnal Weapons of Deſtruction, becauſe they believe their Bleſſed Lord forbad the Uſe of them to His Followers, when He ſaid, They that take the Sword, ſhall periſh with the Sword; and that the Uſe of the Sword in War, was one of thoſe Things that God ſuffered for the Hardneſs of Men's Hearts, and that from the Beginning it was not ſo: In fine, that it came in with the Fall, and muſt go out with it alſo. And as Chriſt the Repairer of Breaches, and Reſtorer of Paths to dwell in, comes to be known to Rule in the Heart, Love will take Place of Wrath, and Forgiveneſs overcome Injury and Revenge: So the Lamb will be preferr'd before the Lion, and the Lion reſign to, and lye down with the Lamb, and Deſtruction come to a perpetual End. For which Cauſe, the Weapons of this People's Warfare are not Carnal, but Mighty through God, to the pulling down the Strong Holds of Sin and Satan, according to the Apoſtle's Doctrine: Which is the Holy War indeed, ſtiled by the Holy Ghoſt, The Saints Warfare. And ſince ſo Holy, Lamb-like, and Peaceable a State, is both Propheſied of, and promiſed, as the Happineſs of the latter Times; and that It and They take their Beginning in Chriſt, the Beginning and the End of all True Chriſtians; let not this People be thought Uſeleſs, or Inconſiſtent with Government, for introducing that Harmleſs Glorious Way to this diſtracted World (for ſome Body muſt begin it) but rather Adore the Providence, Embrace the Principle, and Cheriſh and Follow the Example. Believing with them, that Chriſt, the Bleſſed Shepherd of His Flock, will ever preſerve the Faithful Followers of his Meekneſs, and Diſciples of His Peaceable and Forgiving Doctrine.

The Quakers refuſe to give Evidence, &c.

It cannot be their Fault, which is ſo much their Deſire, viz. To be able to give Evidence upon all Occaſions. Nor, with Juſtice, can it be reputed their Stubbornneſs, neſs, but their Tenderneſs, ſince they cannot Swear at all, and that the Law requires an Oath in Evidence. Now Chriſt having commanded His Followers Not to Swear at all, and that inſtead of an Oath, or in Caſes where Oaths are allowed under the Law, their Yea, Yea, and Nay, Nay, ſhould ſerve inſtead of Swearing; and that for this Reaſon, becauſe What is more than Yea, Yea, and Nay, Nay, cometh of Evil; and for that Chriſtians are commanded to avoid the very Appearance of Evil, much more that which cometh of Evil: Upon this Account they dare not Swear at all. So that it is for Chriſt's Sake, and the tender Reſpect they bear to his Evangelical, Poſitive and General Precept, that they cannot ſwear, who is the Truth, and has taught them to ſpeak the Truth without an Oath.

Mat. 5. 35. 37.
Jam. 5. 12.

Now if this would be admitted [and often they have prayed that it might be, and, for Want of it, are not only leſs ſerviceable to their Neighbours than otherwiſe they could be, but are great Sufferers in their Perſons and Eſtates] and that the Government would be pleaſed to accept their Yea Yea, and Nay Nay, inſtead of an Oath, as other Countries do in the like Caſes, they would be ready to ſubmit to the ſame Puniſhment in Caſe of Untruth, that is due by Law to Perjury: And upon all Occaſions would be glad to help and ſerve their Neighbours with all their Hearts. Wherefore let not that be made their Fault, that is ſo much againſt their Will, and their Great Unhappineſs and Affliction.

Thus, ſober Reader, thou haſt a brief Account of this People, their Principles and Practice, and therefore thou may'ſt ſee, if thou pleaſeſt, with how little Reaſon they are Deſpiſed by ſome, and Abuſed by others; which hath been their Lot, in a large Meaſure, ever ſince they have been a People: Tho' the whole Bent of their Spirits and Teſtimony, ſince God, by his Grace, hath diſtinguiſh'd them, has been to Promote the Experimental and ſaving Knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt in the World, by turning the Minds of all People from the Darkneſs that is in them, to the Light of Chriſt which is in them, as the Great, Singular, and Neceſſary Agent and Principle, by which only Man is enlightned and enabled to ſee and do the Will of God. For, 'till Men receive and are Quickned by this Divine Principle, they are Hypocrites and not Chriſtians; Baſtards and not Sons.

Neither can they have true and living Faith, whatſoever they profeſs; nor can they truly and acceptably Worſhip God, whatſoever they perform. O then, let the poor Quakers, and their abuſed Principles have better Entertainment with Thee, Reader: And do not conclude becauſe they direct People to the Light of Chriſt in them, that therefore it is a Mere Natural and Not a Divine Light; Or becauſe they aſſert Chriſt to be the Word of God, and that he is revealed in the Heart, according to the Scripture, and that the Scripture, in that excellent Senſe, is not ſo; that therefore they deny the divine Authority of the Scriptures, and that the Mind and Truth thereof, as declared by them, is not in any Senſe the Word of the Lord to Men: Or becauſe they don't receive the Schoolmen's Trinity, that therefore they deny the Scripture-Trinity of Father, Word and Spirit: Or that therefore they deny the Divinity of Chriſt the Word: Or that they deny Chriſt without them, who was the Son of Man, in a ſuffering State on Earth, and is now the Son of Man in Glory, becauſe They Exalt and Preſs an experimental Knowledge of Chriſt within, as the Truth, Subſtance, and Excellency of the Hope of the Glory that hereafter ſhall be revealed, as being the Riches of the Glory of the Myſtery revealed, and to be revealed in theſe latter Days, according to the Scriptures of Truth. Neither do thou ſay, they hope to be ſaved by their Own Works, becauſe they preſs the Neceſſity of well-doing toward Acceptance with God; ſince they maintain, that no Works that are not wrought by the Spirit of God are acceptable with him; or that they hold even ſuch Works to be Meritorious, becauſe they ſay, Good Works are Neceſſary and Rewardable: Or that they are forgiven for what they do, and not for what Chriſt did: Or that they deny the Uſe of Means, becauſe they reject Ungoſpel Ones: Or that they deny Baptiſm and the Supper, becauſe they ſay, they are but Signs of the Spiritual Grace, and that they ſerved but for a Time, and that they Experience their Accompliſhment. Neither ſay that they are Uncivil, and Honour no Man, becauſe they forbear ſuch Titles and Ceremonies, in which true Honour and Civility do not conſiſt: Or that they are againſt Government, becauſe they cannot out of Tenderneſs, and not Obſtinacy, conform to it in Matters relating to Religion and Conſcience; in which Chriſt only is Lord and King: Since, Reader, thou plainly ſeeſt, That they believe the Light to be Divine, and the Scriptures to be of Divine Authority: That they own the Scripture-Trinity, or Holy Three, of Father, Word and Spirit, to be truly and properly One: That Chriſt is God, and that Chriſt is Man: That he came in the Fleſh, Died, Roſe again, Aſcended, and ſits on God's Right Hand, the only Sacrifice and Mediator, for Man's Happineſs: That truly Goſpel-Means and Ordinances are requiſite, and to be reverently practiſed: That good Works are Neceſſary and Rewardable: That all Men are to be honoured in the Lord, according to their Degrees: And that Government in Church and State is God's Ordinance, and both Requiſite and very Beneficial.

Phil. 4. 8.

Now Reader, that which remains, is to recommend Thee to this Divine Principle of Light and Life, which they make the Root and Spring of all true Senſe of God, and Religion in Man: Even the Light Within which they began with, and comes from Chriſt, and indeed is Chriſt the Eternal Word, and which brings all that follow the Convictions and Leadings of it, to Chriſt; that is, to his Nature, which is Meek, Patient, Loving, Humble, Harmleſs, Self-denying and Holy; and hereby to know him in themſelves according to Scripture, to be the Hope of their Eternal Glory. Who, as he is of Abraham after the Fleſh, ſo is he God, the true Light, over all Bleſſed for ever; and Lighteth all, in order to Life and Bleſſedneſs. Unto the Manifeſtation of whoſe moſt Holy and Bleſſed Light within, Thou Reader, art earneſtly exhorted. Bring thy Deeds to it, and Love it, and Walk in it, and thou wilt aſſuredly have the Light of Life; and thy Fellowſhip ſhall be with God, and with his Son and Saints, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son ſhall cleanſe thee from all Sin. And whatſoever Things are True, whatſoever Things are Honeſt, whatſoever Things are Juſt, whatſoever Things are Pure, whatſoever Things are of Good Report, if there be any Virtue, and if there be any Praiſe, think on theſe Things. Which Reader, is, I know, moſt earneſtly deſired on thy Behalf, by this deſpiſed and moſt abuſed People, call'd Quakers. So be it. Amen.

POSTSCRIPT.

Being an Exhortation to all People, to turn ſpeedily to the Lord, and ſeek him while he may be found, whatever Perſwaſion they are of, or Forms they are under, before the Dreadful Day of God's Vengeance overtake them.

O Ye Inhabitants of the World, but more eſpecially you that know this People, and among whom the Teſtimony, which they bear, hath been held forth; Hear, and be intreated for your Soul's Sake! O that ye knew God your Creator, to be alſo your Redeemer! Who does as certainly Viſit you by the Spirit of the Second Adam, as ever he Created you in the Nature of the firſt Adam: That as in one you fell, in the other you may ariſe out of your fallen and foul Eſtate, and become a Reform'd, Regenerate and Choſen People to God. This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed, hear ye him, ſaid God the Father. And what ſays Chriſt, the Son? Learn of me, for I am Meek and Lowly in Heart, and ye ſhall find Reſt unto your Souls. For out of Chriſt; out of his Spirit and Nature, verily we cannot have Peace. No Peace to the Wicked, no Peace to the Proud and Ungodly, ſaith the Lord. O Friends, you muſt take up your Croſs daily and follow him, or ye cannot be his Diſciples, his Followers, his People, his Friends; thoſe in whom he is well pleaſed. Whoſe Doctrine is not ſo much the good Words you read in Creeds and Catechiſms, as it is the Living Teaching of his Spirit in your own Hearts; and whoſe Religion is not Opinion, but Experience; not Notion, but Enjoyment: Life from Death, Converſion, Regeneration: In ſhort, Undefiledneſs, and Holineſs, without which no Man ſhall ſee the Lord.

Here is the Faith of Jeſus: A Faith that overcomes the World, and works by Love, not Violence: Where Zeal and Charity are Companions, and Knowledge doth not puff up, but lives and works by Obedience, This is the Faith and Religion of Jeſus: All others are the Faith and Religion of Hypocrites and Devils; which they may have, and be Hypocrites and Devils ſtill: For tho' they believe, their Faith works not by Love; and though they know the Truth, they obey it not.

Wherefore Friends, it ſtands you much upon to ſee what Faith and Religion you have; and not flatter your ſelves on to Perdition. If it be the True, the Pure, the Undefiled, according to the Apoſtle, James 1. 27. then you will have Light Hearts, and Eaſy Conſciences, and an Hope that will not make you Aſhamed: Elſe, believe it, Heavineſs, Anguiſh and Tribulation will (whatever be your Profeſſion) overwhelm you, in the Day that God ſhall enter into Judgment with you. For which cauſe, O my dear Country Folks, and People, be intreated while it is to Day, to turn unto the Lord with all your Hearts, and hearken to his Voice, in your own Conſciences, that calls you to Holineſs, and Harden not your Hearts againſt his Reproof, for the Reproof of Inſtruction is the Way to Life; Endleſs Life. Did you but ſee that God ſees you every-where, and in every Thing, and that continually, it would abundantly alter the Caſe with you. Then would you ſay as one of old, The Lord was here and I knew it not. Certainly, Fear, Holy Fear would take hold of you, an Awe of the Omnipreſent Majeſty would ſeize you, and you would not do that before God, which you would be aſhamed Men ſhould ſee you do. For no Place is ſecret to him: The Light and Darkneſs are alike: His Witneſs is with you as much alone, as in Company; and may perhaps be better heard by you.

Sin not then in the Face of God, in Contempt of his Witneſs, in Deſpight of his Spirit that is in you; but hear it, receive it, and love it, and you will be born of it, and become the Children of him whoſe Eye Penetrates the darkeſt Coverts, and Findeth out the ſecreteſt Corners. Even he that Searches the Heart, and tries the Reins of Man, and ſets his Sins in order before him, and telleth unto him his moſt inward Thoughts.

This being the Caſe, what Manner of Perſons ought you to be, O ye Children of Men! Do not ſatisfie your ſelves with out-ſides, with a Name, a Profeſſion, a Church-memberſhip, &c. For 'tis not what you ſay, but what you do. But Turn In, and examine your own Hearts, ſee how they ſtand affected towards God and his Law and Truth in your inward Parts. Be Strict and True in the Search, as you would ſave your Souls. If your Minds be ſet on Heavenly Things, and that Holineſs and Charity be the zealous Bent thereof, well will it be with you for ever: To live then will be Chriſt, and to die will be your Eternal Gain. For bleſſed is that People and Nation whoſe God is the Lord. But if the Love and Spirit of the World prevail; If Pride, Covetouſneſs and Luxury, Envy, Bitterneſs and Vain-glory, that are ſo very oppoſite to the Will and Nature of God, and his Holy Lamb; if theſe Things have Power over you, Flatter not your ſelves, you cannot be true Chriſtians, nor in Favour with God, for you take his Name in vain: And your very Prayers and Oblations are an Abomination to the Lord, in that State. God calls for the Heart: My Son give me thy Heart: He has given Man the reſt; but That, God will have for himſelf, if Man will have him for his God and Friend. Cozen not your ſelves therefore, O ye Sons and Daughters of Adam! for believe it, Such as you Sow, Such you muſt Reap, and there is no Repentance in the Grave. And a ſhort, but great Work will God do in the Earth; and great Judgments, of divers kinds, will begin it, and they are at the Door. Yea, they are begun, if ye could but ſee them.

And remember, Salvation is from Sin, or it will never be from Wrath; ſo ſaid the Angel, Thou ſhalt call his Name Jeſus, for he ſhall ſave his People from their Sins: For it is the Pure in Heart that ſee God, and nothing unlike him can pleaſe him, and leſs live with him for ever.

Writ, in behalf of the ſaid People, for the Information and Good of all, by

William Penn.

The New ATHENIANS no Noble BEREANS: Being an Anſwer to the ATHENIAN MERCUTY of the 7th Inſtant, in Behalf of the People called QUAKERS.

I AM heartily ſorry to ſee Men, profeſſing ſo much Ingenuity, fall ſo much below their Pretenſions. Your Deſign, at firſt, carried the Face of Inſtruction, and gave us Hopes of a general Improvement of uſeful Learning; and for that Reaſon your Papers were as welcome to us as any other People; eſpecially thoſe that referred to Natural Philoſophy, Mathematicks, and Hiſtory; inſomuch, that ſome of us collected them as they came out, and others bought them as they were compleated into Volumes; being much concern'd if at any Time trivial or light Queſtions were conſidered, as an unworthy Diverſion from the End by you in the Beginning propoſed. But you have not only been led, upon ſuch Occaſions, to exceed too often the Bounds of Modeſty, but you have taken Occaſion alſo to violate thoſe of Chriſtianity, in falling upon People's Opinions in Religion, inſtead of giving your own Impartially; and, upon their Perſons likewiſe, and at laſt the Society it ſelf; as if your Buſineſs were to expoſe them inſtead of informing them, and to increaſe Animoſities rather than to take up their Time with more peaceable and profitable Subjects. What if you were led to ſpeak of any Principle held by the People called Quakers? Could not that have been done as indifferent Perſons, which you by your very Deſign would beſpeak your ſelves to all Perſwaſions, and not as Party-Diſputants and angry Antagoniſts? Might not the Intention of the People have paſt for good and ſincere, tho' any Part of their Doctrine had, in your Opinion, been unſound; but you muſt uſe hard Words and Names for both Things and Perſons? A ſober and unconcerned Anſwer, upon any Queſtion that might be ſent you relating to their Belief, would have taken better with every Body that deſerved your Pains, and have brought us ſooner to reflect upon our Miſtakes, if ſuch they were: But, in Earneſt, it looks as if you were almoſt aground, and wanted Matter, that ſo ſpecious a Deſign as this firſt ſhewed it ſelf, ſhould dwindle away into Froward Controverſy and Perſonal Invectives about Religion; or that you are not ſufficient for your Work, that can ſo eaſily be moved out of your Province.

I beſeech you leave this prepoſterous Digreſſion, and purſue your own Buſineſs with more Care and Exactneſs; and, before you go, ſuffer your ſelves firſt to be a little better inform'd of what you have ſo irregularly and undeſervedly cenſur'd.

You take Occaſion at theſe Words, Truth is always perſecuted, to ſay, that will indifferently ſerve Turk, Jew, Heathen, or Heretick, as well as the Quakers. This is harſh and unchriſtian. Are none worſe than we? And we as great Hereticks as any? You judge before you convict us: 'Tis too groſs Partiality, and falſe in every Degree. But whatever the Perſecuted be, the Perſecutor, to be ſure, is always in the Wrong, which is your Caſe againſt the Quakers: But you recriminate, and will prove us Perſecutors. That were to the Purpoſe indeed. Let us hear it. You excommunicate ſuch as will not be ſubject to your Injunctions: And good Reaſon too, if they are Injunctions of Civil Order. He that joins himſelf to any Society, is oblig'd to the Rules of that Society; and every Society has, and muſt have that Power upon the Members that conſtitute it, or Confuſion follows, and the Society diſſolves. For inſtance, Injunctions about Civil Controverſies, Care of poor Orphans, due and orderly Proceedings relating to Marriages, &c. are to be comply'd with, without the Reproach of Perſecution: And yet farther too; look upon what Principles of Communion any Perſon enters into any Society, if he leave them, or any of them, it is no Perſecution to diſown him in that Thing wherein he alters; ſo that it touches not Perſon or Eſtate: for that is Perſecution in a proper Senſe; which is not our Caſe. But we Impriſon ſuch as diſturb our Meetings. How this will be proved, is hard to tell; and yet if it be Perſecution, it will light hardeſt elſewhere, even upon thoſe, perhaps, that you account us Hereticks for ſeparating from. But, Thanks be to God, we can and do deny the Charge. See, ſay you, Francis Bugg's one Blow more: But if this be Athenian, it is not Berean, to condemn an whole People upon another Man's Authority, that you are not aſſured was well grounded. Beſides, it is a Book we have anſwered, which you take no Notice of, and that is unfair, if you knew of it; and if you did not, you ought to have aſked, before you had eſpouſed another Man's Allegations. This is not anſwerable to that Candor you profeſs; and we muſt tell you, that Francis Bugg is an Apoſtate Quaker, an angry, unreaſonable and clamorous Man; often and again detected and proved inconſiſtent with himſelf; and you will find, in the Iſſue, of no Reputation to your Charge againſt us. But did you ever read our Orders of Diſcipline, or have you been ever an Eye or Ear-witneſs of our Injunctions upon Conſcience? If you have, you ſhould have mentioned them, and ſhewn us our Fault; but your Evidence here, is what a diſcontented Man ſays, who ſpeaks ex parte, and is Judge in his own Cauſe, againſt a Body of People he was once among, and zealous for; who, upon a private Controverſy, becauſe he had not his own Will, tooks Pet at thoſe that could not be brought to humour him; and from thence, ran out from the very Profeſſion of a Quaker; which ſhews the Foundation wrong, that quits a Principle for being diſpleaſed in a Man or Men. What will become of Society, if ſuch Humours are uncontroulable, or they muſt give the Rule or Law to the whole?

Your next Proof of our being Perſecutors, is from a Paſſage of Geo. Fox and Geo. Roff, in their Letters to O. Cr. by which we perceive your new Acquaintance, and with what Tools you work, which we are ſorry for, both for your Sakes and theirs. But thoſe Paſſages are plainly wreſted by you; for they adviſe O. Cr. to go on in the Work he was called to; and what was that, pray? Is there one Word of impoſing Religion upon the People of thoſe Countries, or forcing them to abjure or renounce their own? No, not a Tittle of it. Where then is the Perſecution? But inaſmuch as they were Countries that did perſecute, by which Means the Truth of God had not a free Entrance or Paſſage, but Inquiſitions in Popiſh, and Conſiſtories in Proteſtant Governments ſuppreſt all that conformed not to their reſpective Eſtabliſhments; therefore he ſhould have made it his Buſineſs to open the Way for a true Liberty of Conſcience, that Truth might not ſuffer under Violence, nor Perſecution for Conſcience Sake oppreſs it's Profeſſors. This is the Upſhot of thoſe Paſſages, their very Scope and Tendency, as will appear to any impartial Reader, that will pleaſe to weigh them with what goes before and follows. But if you call this Perſecution, to be ſure it muſt be ſo to fight for Religion: And if it was unlawful for O. Cr. to fight for Liberty of Conſcience, who was of a fighting Principle, what think you of puniſhing People becauſe of their Conſcience, that would not fight with you? You are very tender of a ſudden, if it may but bruſh at us, while you do not conſider the Blow you give your ſelves and your own Friends, that have but too ſignally appeared in that Spirit and Practice. The Lord inform and forgive them.

You juſtify calling us ſilly Enthuſiaſts, for believing it is not lawful to Swear, and ſay, you are of the ſame Mind, becauſe we, without Reaſon, by the Dictates of our own Fancy, which we call God's Spirit, oppoſe the Saints Practice of old, of which it was propheſy'd it ſhould be uſed under the Goſpel; was ſo by the Apoſtles and Primitive Chriſtians, nay, by God himſelf, therefore the Quakers are ſilly Enthuſiaſts. Thus you.

Now we think this will nor prove us Enthuſiaſts, nor Silly, for we argue from a Text, and not our own Dreams or Fancies. Had we only pretended the Authority of a private Revelation for this Aſſertion, and that not true, then it had been Enthuſiaſm, and we Enthuſiaſts, in the worſt Senſe: It is ſilly indeed, to call an Opinion, grounded upon an expreſs Text of Scripture, either Enthuſiaſm or Silly, when there is not a plainer Text for One God than this of our Saviour's againſt Swearing, Matth. 5. 34. Swear not at all. But if we had overſtrained it, Where's the Sillineſs of it? Is it Enthuſiaſm, or Silly, to ſhut out all vain Swearing, by ſhutting out all Swearing? The Advantage of that exceeds the Diſadvantage of Lying in Evidence, when that Lying is made as puniſhable as Forſwearing. What Sillineſs or Enthuſiaſm is in this, pray you? Scotland and Holland think no ſuch Thing, that have indulged that Tenderneſs.

And if the Text be but ſeriouſly conſidered, the Inference we make is beyond Exception.

Firſt, The Tendency of that Sermon upon the Mount, is to ſhew, that the Righteouſneſs of the Goſpel excels that of the Law; as in the Caſe of Adultery, Divorce, Revenge, &c. But the Law forbad falſe and vain Swearing, therefore this muſt refer to that which was not forbidden under the Law. This is acknowledged by many learned Men, and in particular one of our own Nation, Biſhop Sanderſon, 1692. in his Latin Lectures, of the Obligation of an Oath: But we, for another Reaſon, that ſhall anon be mentioned, think he yet narrows the Extent of that Evangelical Precept, for he refers to Vows only, and not ſwearing in any Caſe; but we, to Swearing at all. And our Reaſons are, Firſt, If it had been Vows only, there had been no Need of ſubſtituting any Way of Speaking in the Room of it. And, Secondly, If the Text cannot therefore refer to Vows in particular, Swearing at all muſt be intended; or nothing is forbidden, that was not forbidden under the Law. Thirdly, Chriſt's prohibiting Swearing, and ſubſtituting ſomething in the Room of it, and that Something purely referring to the Way and Manner of Chriſtians declaring the Truth, it is, to us, evident, that he comprehended all Caſes wherein the Truth of a Thing is in Doubt, and conſequently the End of Swearing: So, ſays Chriſt, Let your ὁ λόγος, your Speech, or your Word, be Yea, Yea; or Nay, Nay. It is rendred Communication in our Tranſlations, that it might refer only to common Diſcourſe, that Word being ſometimes ſo underſtood; and yet Communication comprehends all Acts of Juſtice as well as other Parts of Life: For if it comprehends Diſcourſe in Dealing, it alſo comprehends the Evidence of that Dealing, and the Laws of juſt Dealing; and conſequently the Word Communication cannot leſſen the real Force of our Senſe of the Text; but the Words of the Text do plainly expreſs a Degree, if not a Form of declaring Truth, be it Yea or Nay. And ſince Truth-ſpeaking takes in and relates to Controverſies amongſt Men, as well as other Parts of Human Converſe, this Text is a Meaſure of Truth-ſpeaking on all thoſe Occaſions alſo. Fourthly, Now how far Chriſtian Men may go in declaring the Truth, or where they are to be bounded, the Text is plain, viz. a double, but bare Averment, or Denial: Let your Word or Speech be Yea, Yea; Nay, Nay; That is, let your Anſwers, whenever you are aſked the Truth of a Matter, go no farther than a ſimple Affirmation, or Negation, which you may double if you pleaſe. Fifthly, The Reaſon Chriſt gives for bounding his Followers within Yea, Yea, and Nay, Nay, excludes all Oaths, yea, all that is more than Yea, Yea; and Nay, Nay; to wit, that they come of Evil, becauſe they proceed from Diſtruſt, Infidelity and Impatience: A ſimple Aſſertion declares Truth; more, is a Straining of the Mind, and but to ſtoop to unreaſonable Incredulity, which hath an evil Riſe. Now what is more than Yea, Yea; and Nay, Nay? Why Imprecations are more, an outward Sign denoting an Oath is more, than Yea, Yea; and Nay, Nay; and conſequently cometh of Evil, becauſe below a Chriſtian's Truth and Sincerity to gratify. Sixthly, And truly the Text is ſo far from excluding Judicial Caſes, that it ſerves chiefly to relate to Evidence upon Differences. 1. Becauſe it is in the Room of the ſwearing the Law allowed, which was true ſwearing: And, 2. Becauſe of doubling the Aſſertion Yea, Yea; for a ſingle Yea is enough for a Chriſtian in ordinary Caſes. Well, but you oppoſe to this, the Prophecy, 19 Iſaiah, v. 18. to which, if you pleaſe, we will add two more, ch. 45. v. 23. and Jer. 4. 2. and make your Beſt of them: For beſides, that it begs the Queſtion, that the Prophet treated of Goſpel-times, and not of ſome happy Time before the Period of their Diſpenſation, God might ſpeak to them in the Language of their Time to be interpreted in a more ſpiritual Senſe; and this the Place quoted by you ſhews: For, Verſ. 21, Mention is made of Oblation and Sacrifice, that ſhall be offered in that Day, which, in a Jewiſh Senſe, is not true of Goſpel-times, but in a Goſpel-ſenſe, to wit, Prayers and Praiſings, with Heart and Voice, is true. So it is in the Caſe of Swearing, they ſhall ſwear in that Day, as they ſacrifice in that Day; that is, a Chriſtian's Oath ſhall be his Solemn Ward; and the Difference is not greater between them, than between the Sacrifices and Oblations of Beaſts and Birds under the Law, and the Spiritual Sacrifices and Oblations of the Hearts, Wills and Affections of People under the Goſpel: And thus you ſee, that Prophecy ſtands you in little Stead.

But you object the Practice of the Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 9. God is my Witneſs. 2 Cor. 11. 31. God knoweth I lye not. Gal. 1. 20. Before God I lye not. And you add, If theſe are not formal Oaths, you would fain know what are? In which, if you will not be offended, we will ſay as well as think, you have not been Ingenuous, to be ſo hard upon us, before ye had firſt ſtated and agreed with us what an Oath is; for if that be diſputable, as it may be for what you have done to ſettle it, you argue at Random. Premiſes muſt ever be agreed by Diſputants, or nothing can follow clearly and ſatisfactorily. We may ſay the ſame Thing you ſay, without allowing it the ſame Force and Extent; nay ſwear perhaps, in your Opinion, tho' not in our own; the ſame Words being an Oath, and not an Oath, as they may be uſed and applied in different Manners. For if you ſhould think that an Oath, which we think none, and you argue for Swearing by Proofs, that for that Reaſon are none to us; how do you prove Swearing lawful, or convince us that not Swearing at all is Silly and Enthuſiaſtical, when you have not yet adjuſted what is Swearing at all? This had been well worth your Mercury, for it had been informing, and ſhown good Reading.

But you put it off thus, after citing the Apoſtle's Words, God is my Witneſs, &c. If theſe are not formal Oaths, we'd fain know what are. In which you ſhift your Poſt, and turn Queriſt, inſtead of anſwering Queſtions.

But having ſuch ſuppoſed able Men to deal with, we are not willing to put it off ſo; and therefore return it upon you, to ſtate what an Oath is, which you ſo zealouſly recommend; denying, on our Part, any of thoſe Texts to be an Oath,

As did Baſil the Great, upon Pſalm 15. And Gregory Nazianzen, in his Dialogue againſt Swearing: And Biſhop Sanderſon, in his Defence of Joſeph, in his Oxford Lectures; which will much better defend the Apoſtle from your Imputation.

For what you ſay of Tertullian, you wrong him extremely, and your Reader alſo, by not telling him where to find it: For in his Apology, Chap. 32, whence, we ſuppoſe, your Objection is taken, he does equivocally and improperly own Swearing, That they Swore, tho' not by the Genius of Cæſar, yet, for the Health and Safety of Cæſar, juſt as they did Sacrifice. Hoc ſalvum eſſe volumus, & pro magno id juramento habemus. ‘ Our wiſhing well to Cæſar we have or account for an ‘ Oath, or inſtead of an Oath. And, as the Pythagoreans ſay, There is in all reaſonable Creatures an Oath or Tye, viz. A Mind, not to tranſgreſs the Law of God: And, as Clemens Alexandrinus ſpeaks, That a good Man Swears by his Deeds. So Tertullian urged upon them, That the Chriſtians ſacrificed for the Health of Cæſar as well as they, but it was in the Chriſtian Way, by pure Prayers. So that as he was for Sacrifice, he was for Swearing. Thus to Scapula, C. 1. 2.

And in his Book of Idolatry, Chap. 11, I ſpeak not of Perjury, ſays he, becauſe it is not lawful to Swear. And, Cap. 31, He that ſigns a Bill of Security, containing an Oath, is guilty of Swearing, and tranſgreſſes Chriſt's Command, who hath commanded not to Swear. And ſpeaking of the Temptations Chriſtians were expoſed to, if they ſhould lanch into the Traffick of the World, he adds, Not to ſpeak of Forſwearing, ſeeing it is not lawful ſo much as to Swear.

We are the longer upon this, becauſe he is one of your Authorities. Your other is Athanaſius, That he purged himſelf by an Oath, pleading the Apoſtle's Example. Which, by the Way, looks like an Excuſe for doing it, and as if in other Caſes he did not allow it. But pray take the Pains to read his Annotations upon Chriſt's Paſſion, and you will find, firſt, That he denies all Swearing; and upon our Grounds. The Evangelical Sentence, ſays he, of the Lord is, Let your Yea be Yea, and your Nay, Nay: Thus far we, who are in Chriſt, may confirm our Words with Aſſeverations, but come no nearer to an Oath.

To this he objects himſelf the common Opinion, That God Swore. He anſwers it, That God did not properly and formally Swear, nor could not; for the Nature of an Oath is to Swear by that which is Greater and Better than one's ſelf, Heb. 6. 16. But, if any Thing, ſays he, this muſt be ſaid, His Word is an Oath to Man for Verity, becauſe of his Faithfulneſs and Truth. And he will not have the Apoſtle to have Sworn, nor the moſt celebrated Fathers of and before his Time. So that we return it upon you, that if at any Time they uſed thoſe Expreſſions of the Apoſtle, it was in Church Matters, and becauſe they did not think it an Oath. And if you will pleaſe to turn to Juſtin Martyr's Second Apology, p. 63, you will find he is of the ſame Mind; We ſhould ſpeak, but not ſwear the Truth, and vouches Chriſt's Authority, Mat. 5. for it. Clemens Alexandrinus, lib. 7. and Tertullian's Contemporary, Cyprian, Hilary, Greg. Nyſſen, Cæſarius, Epiphanius, Ambroſe, and Chryſoſtom above all the reſt, ſtyled the Golden Doctor or Father, out of whoſe Diſcourſe, upon this Subject, we obſerve theſe five Things:

1. That Oaths are not lawful under the Goſpel.

2. The Reaſon of it, that their Evangelical Verity is the Chriſtian, and a better Security.

3. That the Riſe of an Oath is Infidelity and Diſtruſt, which are from Evil, and that is below a Chriſtian State; for he that dare not Swear, which once was permitted, dare not Lye, which never was permitted; and therefore his Yea is Yea, and his Nay, Nay.

4. That Swearing was a Condeſcenſion to a weak and low State of the World, to divert People from Swearing by falſe Gods, which was the Evil Cuſtom of thoſe Times; as if God ſhould ſay, I will ſuffer you to Swear, if you will Swear by me that am the true God, and not by their falſe Gods: And that from hence came his Command to Swear by him, not for the Sake of Swearing, but to avoid Idolatry.

5. That this Principle is the only Means of rooting out all Evil Swearing out of the World. Take the Cure for this moſt Pernicious and Epidemical Diſtemper, in the Words of Baſil the Great.

The Remedy conſiſteth in a twofold Admonition: Firſt, not to Swear at all: Secondly, to ſuppreſs the Form of Oaths. I will cloſe with what the Inſtitutions ſay, that go under the Name of Clemens Romanus. Our Maſter hath commanded that we ſhould not Swear, no not by the true God; but that our Word ſhould be more credible than an Oath. This Clemens was very ancient, you know, ſince the Apoſtle Paul mentions him, and that to him ſome of the Ancients aſcribe the Epiſtle to the Hebrews.

We hope, after you have conſidered the Authorities that ſupport this Doctrine, you will be ſo charitable at leaſt to allow that we are neither Silly nor Enthuſiaſts for aſſerting it. This comprehending your Anſwers and Exceptions to the Queries upon this Subject (for againſt a Command ſo plainly proved, they muſt fall of Courſe) we are under no Obligation to conſider them, and yet they ſhall not paſs our Notice, tho' it were but to let you ſee how little they deſerve it.

The firſt Query is, If Chriſt's Coming did not ſuperſede Oaths, ſince it was to end Sin, the Occaſion of Oaths? The Second, If man, improving the Means given him to anſwer that End, may not obtain it? I put them together becauſe you give the ſame Anſwer to both, which is Negative; and for the ſame Reaſon, viz. Becauſe Chriſt did not come to end Sin: And your Reaſon for that is, That if Chriſt intended to have ended Sin by his Coming, it had been ended, which is not ſo, and therefore it was not the End of his Coming. This oppoſes as plain a Text as is in the Bible, 1 Joh. 3. 5, 6. And ye know he was manifeſt to take away our Sins. Whoſoever abideth in him ſinneth not; Whoſoever is born of God doth not commit Sin. The Angel thus declared the End of his Coming, Mat. 1. 21. Chriſt commands Perfection, Ch. 5. 48. Be ye perfect, as your Heavenly Father is perfect. The Heavenly Leaven was given to Leaven the whole Lump, Chap. 13. 33. The Apoſtle deſired, That the Chriſtians of his Time might be ſanctified throughout in Body, Soul and Spirit; which leaves out no Part of Man, nor no Part of any Part unſanctified, 1 Theſ. 5. 23. and exhorted them to preſs forward to the Mark, which was a perfect Man, even to the Meaſure of the Fulneſs of Chriſt. Phil. 3. 14, 15. Eph. 4. 13. In which Paſſages the End of Chriſt's Coming, and the Work and Bleſſing of the Goſpel, was to end Sin, both as to the Guilt and Nature of it; and to ſanctify and regenerate the Soul. Read Phil. 1. 10. 1 Cor. 6. 11. Tit. 3. 5. Heb. 2. 11.

2. Your Reaſon is both weak and dangerous: For if all comes to paſs that Chriſt intends, then he intended not the Converſion of Jeruſalem, notwithſtanding he lamented it ſo, becauſe it came not to paſs. Again, If Chriſt intended to take away the Guilt and Power of Sin, it ſhould accordingly be taken away: but in whole Nations or Believers, how very few can ſay it, or can you ſay it of? Nor know you but that there are ſome that walk blameleſly now as well as then. Your Ignorance is no Argument to the contrary: A Principle may be true for all Men's Practices, and God's End for Good to Man, though Man may fruſtrate it to himſelf.

3. The Scriptures you urge are againſt you, Jam. 3. 2. Here we will joyn Iſſue with you, this Chapter being a ſtrong Proof of our Point; yea this very Verſe: For it ſuppoſes a perfect Man, which you deny, and by the Similies of a Bridle and an Helm, it ſhews how a Man can come to be ſo. But, ſay you, in the Name of the Apoſtle, In many Things we offend all: Yet conſider, pray, that the Apoſtle included himſelf no more there than Verſe 9, where ſpeaking of the Tongue, he alſo ſaith, Therewith bleſs we God, and therewith curſe we Men. You cannot therefore think, I hope, that the Apoſtle was a Curſer; but it was a Way of ſpeaking to fetch in the Guilty, and the better to reach them, by perſonating them or involving himſelf among them.

Hear again the ſame Apoſtle, in this very Chapter, Verſ. 11. 12. Doth a Fountain ſend forth at the ſame Place ſweet Water and bitter? Can the Fig-Tree, my Brethren, bear Olives? Yes, ſay the Athenians, No, ſay the Quakers. Pray who keeps cloſeſt to the Text? Hear him farther, Verſe 17. and Chap. 1. 27. he tells you the Nature and End of their Religion. In few Words, Humanity and Purity, Bowels and Holineſs, they are the pure Religion and undefiled in God's Sight, in his Account; not Creeds but Practice, not Profeſſion tho' of true Words, but Experience and good Living. And, without Offence, had you been of this Religion, you would have been leſs Exceptious at us and ours. Your next Scripture is as unhappily choſen as the former, 1 John 1. 8. If we ſay we have no Sin, we deceive our ſelves, and the Truth is not in us. Now if you pleaſe but to read the Verſe foregoing and following, perhaps you will ſee it is not to your Purpoſe.

If we walk in the Light as (God) is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all Sin. Now follows your Text, If we ſay we have no Sin, (that is, no Sin to be cleanſed from, no Need of Chriſt to take away our Sins) we deceive our ſelves and the Truth is not in us. Obſerve now what follows, we deſire you; If we confeſs our Sins, he is faithful and juſt to forgive us our Sins, and to cleanſe us from all Unrighteouſneſs; which comprehends both the Guilt and Nature of Sin. And that we have not miſinterpreted your Text, the next and laſt Verſe proves our Senſe genuine; If we ſay that we have not ſinned we make him a Lyar, and his Word is not in us: That is, if we ſay we have not ſinned, and ſo have no Need of a Propitiation for Sins paſt, or to be cleanſed from the Sin that is preſent, we make God a Lyar, that ſays we are Sinners, and therefore ſent us his Son to redeem us from Sin. But now we will ſuppoſe your Anſwers good to the Two Queries; Pray what does that leſſen the Validity of not Swearing at all? Though Men are not in all Things perfect, may they not tell Truth, and be believed, without the Force and Strain of an Oath? Muſt all Men be Lyars that are not ſinleſs? Look about you Athenians: If this be not the Caſe, Swear not at all, is both good Doctrine and practicable, for all that you have ſaid to the contrary.

Your Anſwer to the Third Query, If there be a plainer Precept than this of Swear not at all, is a Jeſt at us, but it turns in Earneſt upon your ſelves. Show us, ſay you, a more poſitive Command than that, He that hath Two Coats let him impart to him that has none, which if we followed in Winter Time, you ſay, we ſhould look worſe than we do. But we tell you it is to be followed both Winter and Summer by all that will follow Chriſt; and however ill they look for it here to Scoffers, Chriſt will look very well upon them for it another Day. But you think you pinch us by urging the Text upon us literally, which alas is your Miſtake; for ſo that we do not Swear, we anſwer that Precept though by other Words than Yea and Nay; and if we give of our Abundance to them that want, we anſwer this, though not exactly in a literal Senſe; And now you ſee your Jeſt upon the Looks of the Quakers, makes you look no better than you ſhould do. And thus much for your firſt Paper; what remains being but Heads inſiſted upon in your following Mercuries, where I ſhall find them, and in my next conſider them particularly as they lye.

The Second Part of the New ATHENIANS no Noble BEREANS: Being an Anſwer to the ATHENIAN MERCURY of the 11th of the Fourth Month, called June, in Behalf of the People called QUAKERS.

YOU were certainly very much in Haſte when you poured out ſuch a Mouthful of Charges upon a poor People, that one Half of them, made good, muſt needs lay them as low as you wiſh; But they that count ſo quick, uſually reckon without their Hoſt, and muſt count again; as indeed you do; for in an after Mercury, you retract ſome of your Charges; which ſhews, by the Way, you went without Book in making them. To ſpare you, and ſave Paper, we will not repeat them here together, but as we anſwer them; for they are both foul and fully given.

Your firſt Charge is, We ſpeak contemptibly of the Bible: But we hope not. Your Aſſumption has four Parts of Proof. 1. We own it not, you ſay, as an adequate Rule of Faith and Manners. For this you cite R. B's Apology, p. 25, & 43. And what

1692. what you cite is true; but you cite not all, and ſo leave what you cite more open to Exception, which is by no Means fair. Love but Truth and Ingenuity more than you love your own Credit, or ſlight ours, and we ſhall not doubt the Iſſue, even in your own Thoughts. R. B. tells you wherein the Scripture is not a Rule in all Caſes and Circumſtances, viz. It was not Paul's to go to Jeruſalem, to be ſhut up there, rather than go back to preach to the Churches in Greece: Nor the Rule of Paul's Call, nor of any Miniſter of Chriſt to the Miniſtry; Nor with Reference to their going to this or that Nation to preach the Goſpel rather than any others. It is not a Rule to Propheſie, as to when or what, at one Time or Place, more than another; for though it ſays, 1 Cor. 14. That all may propheſie one after another, as it is revealed to them, which authorizes the Practice, yet it is not the Rule of thoſe Motions of the Spirit; neither to the Party moved to ſpeak, nor to thoſe that hear to judge aright: for no Scripture can tell me if I am moved by the Spirit of God or my own Spirit, or a transformed Spirit; nor can thoſe that hear, judge of it, but by the Spirit of Truth. So that though the Scripture be a Rule of Words, it is the Spirit only that is a Rule to Men's Spirits concerning the Riſe of true Prophecy in any. Again, By what Chapter or verſe can you tell you are Believers? For tho' there are divers can tell what a Believer is, yet how do you know that you are ſuch? By what Rule do you apply Scripture, nay, by what Rule do you believe Scripture? for the Scripture cannot be the Rule of your Belief of it ſelf: And therefore it is that R. B. in our Name, ſays, they are not the principal Ground of all Truth and Knowledge, nor yet the primary adequate Rule of Faith and Manners: But, ſays he, being a faithful Teſtimony of the firſt Foundation, they may be well eſteemed a ſecondary Rule, and ſubordinate to the Spirit, from whence they have their Excellency and Certainty, p. 38. And can you call this contemning of the Scriptures, without ſpeaking contemptibly of the Holy Spirit that gave them forth? He argues thus: If the Spirit only give the Knowledge of God, and by the Spirit we be to be led into all Truth, then the Spirit and not the Scripture is the Foundation of all Truth, and the primary Rule: But the firſt is true; therefore alſo the laſt. Again, That which is not the Rule of Faith to believe the Scriptures, is not the primary adequate Rule of Faith and Manners: But the Scripture is not, nor cannot be, that Rule; therefore, &c. p. 38. 41, 42. You ſhew your ſelves too Mercurial, and ride Poſt over our Arguments, leaving them and the Matter behind you. The Scripture you oppoſe to all this, 1 Tim. 3. 17. and which is all you anſwer, and enough too were it but to your Purpoſe, proves only, that all Scripture by Inſpiration from God is profitable; but it does not ſay, it is ſufficient of it ſelf for the accompliſhing of the Man of God to every good Work; ſo is Preaching, Praying and Meditating profitable: but it does not ſay, that it is the Fountain of all true Knowledge, and the only Rule of Chriſtians, or a Rule in all particular Caſes that may occur to Men: And it is plain the Apoſtle referr'd to the Care of a Paſtor, and to all particular Occaſions. Leſs does he ſay, that the Spirit is not the Rule of Chriſtians; and if it be a Rule at all, it cannot be a ſubordinate one to the Scriptures that came from it: No doubt but they are profitable, very profitable; and bleſſed be God for them; but muſt we contemn them unleſs we prefer them to the Spirit of God? The great and moſt excellent Rule of Chriſtians, Joh. 14. 26. The Comforter ſhall teach you all Things. Ch. 16. 13. The Spirit of Truth will guide you into all Truth. The Apoſtle commended the Church to the Word of God's Grace, which is inward Acts 20. 32. See 1 Cor. 2: 9, 10, 11, 12. which Place attributes all Divine Knowledge to the Spirit of God, it's Searchings and Revelations. Again, Tit. 2. 11, 12. & 1 Joh. 2. 20, 21. Ye have an Unction from the Holy One, and ye know all Things. It abideth in you; and ye need not that any Man teach you, but as the ſame anointing teacheth you all Things, and is Truth and is no Lye: and even as he hath taught you, ye ſhall abide in him. We will cloſe with the Words of Chriſt, whom all are to hear and prefer. Joh. 5. 37, 40. Search the Scriptures (or ye ſearch the Scriptures) for in them ye think ye have Eternal Life; and they are they which teſtifie of me. And (for all that) ye will not come unto me, that ye may have Life. A moſt ſevere Rebuke to the better Jews of his Time; and as great a one to the Chriſtians of that ſtamp now. They valued the Scriptures, but undervalued the Meſſiah when he came, that, from Scripture, they lookt for: What Blindneſs was theirs, that knew him not by ſo many Marks as they gave of him, but turned the Scripture againſt him, that teſtified of him? This is the Caſe of our Oppoſers with us at this Day: They oppoſe the Scriptures to Chriſt the Word, that ſhines in the Heart, and will not come to him, the quickning Spirit, in themſelves, that they might have Life; but think, by them, to have Eternal Life, and they are they that teſtifie of him. Know ye not your own ſelves, ſays the Apoſtle, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be reprobates, 2 Cor. 13. 5.

This is the Doctrine that is our Crime, our Enthuſiaſm, our Error; and we are Seducers, Deceivers, and what not, for aſſerting, recommending and preſſing it. But if this be to be vile, we are like to be more vile; for we muſt bear witneſs to that which the Scripture teſtifies of, viz. the Spirit, and prefer it before the Scripture, when the Scripture does ſo to it ſelf. No Man's Letter is himſelf, nor ſo noble as himſelf. The Scripture is as the Letter or Epiſtle of the Holy Ghoſt to Men; but for that Reaſon 'tis not the Holy Ghoſt, nor to be inſtead of the Holy Ghoſt to us; nor, to be ſure, to be preferred before the Holy Ghoſt. We bleſs God for the Scriptures: we read them with Comfort and Advantage; and they are profitable to the perfecting of the Man of God through the Aſſiſtance of the Spirit: The Scriptures declare the Things of God; but cannot work them in the Man: The Spirit only can do that; for which Cauſe we honour, exalt and prefer the Spirit, as that which fulfils the Scripture, and invite all to receive it, that it may make People ſpiritual; for to be ſpiritually minded is Life and Peace. Wherefore, as often as any of our Expreſſions are conſtrued to leſſen the Holy Scriptures, we ask it as a Piece of Juſtice from all our Readers, to take this Caution with them, we ſpeak comparatively, not with our Books, or with Men, but with Chriſt, his Light and Spirit, from whence the Scriptures came. And in this Senſe it is that R. B. and others, on the like Occaſion, expreſs themſelves, when ſuppoſed to abate of the common Opinion of the Scriptures. For as Face anſwers Face in a Glaſs, ſo we ſay, and know, the Spirit and Scripture anſwer each other. And therefore the comfortable Evidence of a Chriſtian Man, is the Teſtimony of the Spirit of God within him, and the Scriptures of Truth without him. Let it not then be any more a Fault in us to direct People to the Spirit of God, by which only they can come to the Poſſeſſion of the Good Things the Scriptures ſpeak of; for tho' they Exhort, Rebuke, Inſtruct, &c. yet without that great Agent, the Spirit, influencing and enabling the Creature, he ſhall never Experience the Truth of the Scriptures to himſelf in the moſt relative and excellent Parts of it.

2. The ſecond Part of your Aſſumption is, That we deny the Scriptures to be Neceſſary; for which you cite S. Fiſher, Ruſt, p. 112. and R. B. Ap. p. 68. It looks groſs, as you lay it down; but pray take it altogether: They cannot be abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation, where God has not made it neceſſary that they ſhould be at all; for then that would be neceſſary which is not; and People, for ever miſerable, for want of that which is not their Fault, that they have not. Again, It is allowed among Proteſtants, that where the Scriptures or Sacraments are withheld from People, as under Confinement, or providentially in Infidel Countries, there an upright Deſire or Intention anſwers and ſupplies that want; then they are not abſolutely neceſſary: So every where, by Conſequence, where they cannot be had, they cannot be abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation. This is not to render the Scriptures uſeleſs or needleſs, or to raiſe an Indifferency to them where they are enjoyed, by no Means; they are a great Bleſſing, and, as ſuch, to be highly prized; and no Man, that has any Fear of God, or the leaſt Taſte of his Goodneſs, but muſt be of that Mind; but to vindicate God's Mercy and Goodneſs from leaving ſo great a Part of the World without the Means of Salvation, as they muſt be that want the Scriptures, if they are abſolutely neceſſary to Salvation. To end this Head, conſider, 1ſt, How long the World was without them. 2*dly*, How few and particular the firſt Books were: and, at laſt, in how narrow a Compaſs all the Old Teſtament Writings lay, compared with the whole World. And, laſtly, How many Churches were gathered by the Apoſtles before the New-Teſtament Scripture was all in being, which is ſo much more beneficial, proper and advantagious to Chriſtians, both as to Faith and Worſhip, than that of the Old Teſtament: And yet without that, for ſeveral Years, in which Time, doubtleſs, many fell aſleep, they lacked no Rule: They had that which was ſufficient, viz. the Grace of God, which taught them and led them in the Way to Bleſſedneſs.

Your third Proof, Is our equalling Apocrypha with Scripture, and quote S. F. Ruſt. p. 77. But if we don't equal Scripture with Apocrypha, it does not ſhew we ſlight the Scripture, to have more of it than ye allow that Title to: Did we make the Scripture Apocryphal, you had hit the Mark, in your Senſe thereof.

How-

1692. However, firſt, your Communion frequently uſe it to conform their Doctrine, both in Pulpit and in Writing; and particularly the preſent Archbiſhop in his late Sermon before the Queen, upon Pſal. 73. 25. and that with a more than common Emphaſis. And if it were Spurious and a By-blow, as you are pleaſed to call us in reſpect of Religion, why ſhould ſo many eminent Poets of your own chooſe to vouch the Truth of Religion from thoſe Books, rather than Plato, Philo, &c.

3. Remember, if you pleaſe, that they were firſt left out by the Council of Laodicea, which was Three Hundred Sixty Four Years after Chriſt, and received again by the Council of Carthage, Anno 399, which at the Beſt, is but an indifferent Foundation for your Exception. Alſo pray take along with you, the Complaints of Jerom and Epiphanius, among others, of the Partialities that had been, even by the Orthodox, committed upon the New Teſtament, under Pretence of the ill Uſe ſome Hereticks (real or ſuppoſed) made, or might make of them, Jer. ad Luc. Epiſt. 28. Epip. in Anc. 7. 2.

4. Your fourth Part of the Aſſumption to prove your Charge, Is, that we equal our own Writings unto the Scripture, and that it is the ready Way to make it both Blaſphemy and Nonſenſe: And from thence you are pleaſed to call us God's Ape. Waving all your Reflections, that edifies very little, and cannot honour you, pray obſerve your Proofs. G. Fox, Myſtery, pag. 12. and Francis Howgil, Anti. Volunt. defeated, without a Page, affirm the Neceſſity of an Infallible Spirit for Goſpel-Miniſters. O Friends! Whither would you drive Things? What, make that Hereſy, which is the Root of all True Religion, as well as True Miniſtry? Can a fallible Spirit bring People into the Truth, or turn them to God? Is not the Spirit of God an Infallible Spirit? And are not the Children of God led by it? Rom. 8. 14. And we are not aſhamed to ſay, That by that Holy Spirit, we are often conſtrained to Exhort, Rebuke, and inſtruct, as it giveth Utterance; and that God has owned our Labours with a comfortable Harveſt, bleſſed be His Name: But for equalling our Writings with Scripture, we have no ſuch Expreſſions or Thoughts: It is a Word of your own, and a Conceit and Inference of our old Adverſaries. There are Degrees as well as Diverſity of Manifeſtatsons and Operations, but the ſame Lord, and the ſame Spirit: Yet if it will ſatisfy you, we have ever preferred the Bible to all Books and Writings of Saints and Good Men. You have other Proofs: You ſay, that G. Roff writ to O. C. Thus ſaith the Lord, And that Branded Blaſphemer Nayler (whom we, you ſay, to this Day imitate, defend and admire) ſays in his Love to the Loſt. The Word of the Lord to His Beloved City; tho' the Holy Scripture muſt not have that Honour. Now, know ye, if ye pleaſe, that we own the Style, and bleſs God His Word is among us, and when it lays a Neceſſity upon us, we can ſay in Truth, The Word of the Lord: And it is, or ought to be well known to this Nation, that we have ſpoken it in Truth; it having been fulfilled more than once upon thoſe to whom we have been ſent with it. And it is a Blindneſs and a thick Apoſtacy, that has overtaken ſuch as count it monſtrous to have a Viſion, or to know the Word of the Lord in Goſpel-Days; The Days of Light and Life, the Diſpenſation of Spirit and Power, and of the Word of the Lord, according to the Notable Paſſage, Iſa. 9. 21. As for me, this is my Covenant with them ſaith the Lord, my Spirit that is upon thee (ſpeaking of Chriſt) and my Words which I have put into thy Mouth, ſhall not depart out of the Mouth of thy Seed, nor out of the Mouth of thy Seeds Seed, ſaith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever. Alſo that of Joel 2. 28. In the latter Days I will pour out my Spirit upon all Fleſh; without Reſpect to Nation, Age or Sex. But you are very diſingenuous to thruſt into your Citation of J. Nayler's Words, by Parentheſis, whom you ſay we imitate, defend and admire; thereby ſuggeſting, that we defend him in Blaſphemy; which is more than you can prove by any Warrantable Authority: However, hereby you juſtify that Piece of Cruelty, done in that unhappy Age, and uſurped Power (as you ſuggeſt) which many Eminent and Sober People were grieved at: This is abuſive, and out of all Bounds of equal Dealing, and we wiſh you may repent of it: For we are ſo far from imitating, defending and admiring him in that Reſpect, wherein he gave Occaſion of Offence and ſtumbling, that we did not only at that Time diſown his Proceedings, but he very Solemnly condemned them himſelf, which was printed to the World; and he lived an humble, contrite and exemplary Life, and dyed, we believe, in Peace.

That we read our own Epiſtles in our Meetings, and not the Scriptures, is not from Diſreſpect to the Scripture, but becauſe of a particular Occaſion, and a Word of Exhortation thereby communicated. If it were Cuſtomary to read our Friends Writings, as the Scriptures are in the publick Places of Worſhip, and yet did not read the Scriptures, we ſhould deſerve your Reproof; but that is not the Caſe, far be it from us.

The laſt Part of your Aſſumption, by which you would prove us to contemn the Scripture, is our uſing, with the Papiſts, detracting Expreſſions, as a dead Letter, a Noſe of Wax, a Leſbian Rule; and for this you quote S. F. p. 48. It is low with you, that you have no more Evidence. But now be ingenious, Can you think we call the Scriptures ſo, or that we ſay Men make them ſo, or uſe them ſo? Lay your Hands upon your Hearts and think again, Is there any Thing more Proverbial, than to ſay, That Men make a Noſe of Wax of the Scripture? But herein to joyn us with the Papiſts, is ſtill more uncandid; for the very Place you cite, makes an Exception to the Papiſt's Practice, who uſe ſuch Speeches Tauntingly, that is, in Slight, in Contempt of the Scripture. Then S. F. doth it not in any ſuch Senſe; Why then ſhould you make him do it Tauntingly, and with Papiſts, when he ſo particularly provides againſt them both? You'd make ill Jury-Men with ſuch Latitudes. The Scripture of it ſelf is a Dead Letter, for all Letters are ſo in themſelves, and you grant as much in ſpeaking of the Word of God; but if they are made Alive to any Soul, by the Application of God's Holy and Quickning Spirit, they become Living to that Soul, as much as if the Holy Penman had ſpoke them in his Ear; and indeed no Words are Living to any Man, whether writ or ſpoken, but as they are made ſo by the Spirit, in the Heart of ſuch a Man. But Greg. Naz. That we ſuppoſe you reverence, ſpeaking of the Bible, ſaid, Is Religion placed in a Leaf? Feareſt thou (Paper or) Parchment more than God? This had been Heinous in us, and yet it is True. A Leſbian Rule he ſtiled it, ad Hominem. The Truth they declare is ſtable and certain, but Men twiſt, ſhift, and wring them, and ſo they become like the Leſbian Rule, that ſerved all Turns; and for that Reaſon he urged, That Men ſhould come to the Spirit of God, to receive the Mind of the Spirit in the Matter therein doubted or controverted.

Your Second Charge is, That the Quakers will by no Means allow the Scripture to be the Word of God. If you had ſaid in No Senſe too, you would have gone too faſt; and yet your Intention in your Words looks that Way. Let us not differ, pray you, more than needs muſt, to ſupport the Credit of your Charge. You confeſs Chriſt is called the Word of God, but ſo is the Scripture. And we ſay Chriſt is, but ſo is not the Scripture: You produce, Jer. 36. 4, 10, 12. We ſay, at that Rate, there are an Hundred Words of God, becauſe it was the Style the Prophets uſed for every Meſſage. But you go, I confeſs, a great Way to help out the Matter, when you allow, That it is Ridiculous to ſay the very Letters are the Word of God, but the Senſe and Divine Truths therein contained, and conveyed to us by the Co-operation of God's Spirit: For in that Senſe, every Paſſage thereof, given forth by Divine Inſpiration, is the Will, Mind, Command, and if you pleaſe, ſo far the Word of the Lord; and ſo we do not, as you ſay, contradict our ſelves in uſing the ſame Phraſe to our own Writings. But nevertheleſs primarily, and excellently, we attribute that Style to Chriſt the Word, that was with God, and was God, and made All Things: And we do not ſee but you yield it to us.

For your Third Charge, Of turning the Sacred Truths of Scripture into Jejune Allegories, ſince you refer your Proof to another Place, we alſo do our Anſwer.

Your Fourth Charge is, That we ſpeak not very Honourably of our Saviour. But how does that appear? Do we ſay He is No Saviour, or that He is a Deficient Saviour, and leaves Men as Bad as he finds them, as too many ſhew that call Him ſo? And which is worſe, plead to be ſo as long as they live, becauſe, ſay they, He did not come to take away the Nature of Sin, which muſt be left for their Probation, and to ſhew forth God's Mercy to forgive; as if Sin were Serviceable? We have not thus diſhonoured Him I hope. How is it, pray you, that we diſhonour Him? Why, Firſt, You ſay, We make him a Monſter: That's bad indeed, or you are very Irreverent, as well as Unjuſt in your Expreſſion. Robert Barclay, p. 306. you tell us, ſays, He has Two Bodies. Suppoſe ſo; one you grant; The other R. B. calls Vehiculum Dei. Not Two Bodies of the Virgin Mary: How is it a Monſter then? You are more Mercurial than exact. But pray conſider, and Better Late than Never: Did not all the Fathers Feed of Chriſt, as well as Drink of Him, do you think? Read 1 Cor. 3 4. They did Eat the ſame Spiritual Meat, and did all Drink the ſame Spiritual Drink: (For they drank of that Spiritual Rock that followed them, and that was Chriſt.) Now the Word Body is Figuratively uſed, as it imports a Subſtance, that is, the Food of the Saints, their Spiritual Nouriſhment and 1692. Subſiſtence. You ſhould be more deliberate, and not ſo wild and adventurous in your Cenſures. Your Reaſon is, That we ſay Chriſt is actually preſent in every one of our own Bodies; which you ſay, Is a greater Degradation to Him than lying in a Manger. But ſtill we ſee you don't read the Bible, or remember what you read. Peruſe 2 Cor. 13. 5. Examine your ſelves, whether ye be in the Faith; prove your own ſelves: Know ye not your own ſelves, how that Jeſus Chriſt is in you, except ye be Reprobates: So that what you make a Diſhonour to Chriſt, the Apoſtle makes an Evidence of being in the Faith. But this is not the only Point in which you Two differ. Yet know that Chriſt being in our Body, is none of our Phraſe, and ſhews, as in other Charges (and which you ingeniouſly own in your Third Mercury) that you imperfectly know our Principles, tho' you boldly cenſure them. But were it ſo, yet the Apoſtle had defended the Expreſſion, who ſpeaking of the Divine Manifeſtation of Chriſt, and God in Chriſt, in the Creature, ſaith, And this Treaſure have we in Earthen Veſſels, that the Excellency of the Power may be of God, and not of us, 2 Cor. 4. 6, 7. To this add that of Chriſt's Prayer, John 17. 23. I in them, and they in Me; and it is to be hoped you will think a Man a little Better than a Manger, and yet it is no Degrading of Chriſt, To ſay He is where He ſays He is, and where it is Antiſcriptural to ſay, He is not. Your laſt Reaſon for our Diſhonouring of our Saviour, Is our denying Him to be diſtinct from the Father. But ſuppoſe this were True, Why do you ſtrain ſo hard to depreſs us? Pray what were the Diſhonour of it? It might, on our Parts, not look ſo Coherent; but to make the Son the Father, is Diſhonouring the Father, rather than the Son. You had better not be medling, and let this Work alone; it is not your Talent, and ill becomes you. Howbeit know, if you pleaſe, we do think the Son Diſtinct from the Father; for Fatherhood and Sonſhip are certainly not the ſame. And the very Place you cite of R. B. p. 87, 88, you produced to prove your Firſt Reaſon, tells you enough of that.

Now for the Citations out of E. Burrough's Trumpet, p. 17. and J. Parnel's Shield, p. 30. they mean no more than this, That we ſhould not ſatisfy our ſelves only with what Chriſt did, and the Saints enjoyed, ſo long ago, But that we ſhould know and feel Him by His Light and Spirit nearer to us, that we might evidence His Work in our Hearts, and be Partakers of the Experiences of thoſe Bleſſed Saints in Light: And not that we denyed or ſlighted that Bleſſed Manifeſtation of the Son of God in the Fleſh. This we have ſaid again and again upon Occaſion. Iſaac Pennington's Words, Queſt. p. 33. is defended by expreſs Scripture. See Heb. 10. 5. 7. A Body haſt thou prepared me. Then ſaid I, Lo, I come (in the Volume of the Book it is written of me) to do thy Will, O God. The Body, was not He, but His; and if Chriſt dwells in His People, as many Scriptures expreſs, the Body cannot be Chriſt, in a Strict Senſe, becauſe it cannot dwell in them. And therefore the Abſurdity that is flung at us, in Reference to our Uſe of that Expreſſion, returns upon them that have ſo groſs a Conception of Chriſt, and His dwelling in His People. You will have us confound God and His Saints, from a Paſſage in G. F's Myſtery. He is deceived, that ſaith, Chriſt is Diſtinct from His Saints. The Page is not quoted, but we know the Place: We ſuppoſe it is a Miſ-printing gives you that Apprehenſion; Diſtinct for Divided; they are Diſtinct, but not Divided. And this is that which was intended. You are too ready to catch and miſtake alſo, when you oppoſe G. F. Jun. to R. B. One calling The Light, God, the other, The Spiritual Body of Chriſt. For, He who is the Light, is God, and the Light is the Appearance and Manifeſtation of God. You take it ill, that we ſhould allow the Light Within to be Chriſt, and not the Man that Died at Jeruſalem, to be God or Chriſt, in a proper Senſe; they are your own Words.

Indeed, you are very unguarded in your Expreſſions. Nor, ſay you, ſo much as Chriſt in a proper Senſe. We don't underſtand you. Would you have any Thing die but the Body? You deny the Soul's Sleeping, and falſly make it a Principle of ours, with the Addition of a Socinian Dream. If not, then ye ſay, Chriſt Died, as we ſay, ſince that was the Body of Chriſt that Died. You Dream of our Idolizing one another from this Principle of Chriſt being in Men. But take it from us, as you ought in Juſtice, what we believe, and not from Enemies, that ſeek Advantages, and ſcrew, wring, and pervert our Words, that we abhor ſuch Practices. But you have Three Evidences, that, as you think, cannot fail you.

1. That many of us Worſhip'd Naylor. Juſt as much as we Worſhip Francis Bugg, or You. But this we know, That your Many, were a Few, and yet too many, giddy Men and Women, and that their Actions were denied by us, and by themſelves at laſt.

Your Second Proof, as you pretend, is J. Coal's Words in a Letter to G. F. And your laſt Proof, which doubtleſs you think your Beſt, is a Paſſage in a Letter of J. Audland's to G. Fox. But Firſt, where theſe Letters are, you do not tell us, nor give us any ſufficient Authority for them, nor for the Truth of your Copies; which, upon ſo high a Charge, ſhould, in common Juſtice, have been done.

2. Beſides, they are given us in Fractions, and &c's, as appears by your Breaks, and that is alſo unfair. For might not they write to G. F. and yet fall to pray and praiſe God occaſionally alſo? A Thing frequent in Religious Correſpondencies.

3. But if it were a Fault, muſt it include an whole People? Was it writ to them, or printed by them? Be juſt.

4. Is it their Practice? if not, you are to blame; and if it be, you muſt certainly have more Inſtances, and freſher than J. A. who has been deceaſt almoſt thirty Years. But this ſhews your Uncharitableneſs, that any Thing, at any Time, or at any Hand, ſhall ſerve you to back your unwary and unreaſonable Charges againſt us.

5. And we believe J. A. was too good a Man to intend G. F. in that Senſe you take it, and G. F. to accept it, whoſe Labour was to turn the Eyes of People from Man to Chriſt, which lays the Ax to all human and creaturely Exaltation. And G. F. lived a true Example of Humility, and abominated all ſuch Appearances of Evil. And they that ever ſaw or heard him Pray, would not think he ſhould like being any One's Idol, ſince above all Men, he appeared to expreſs the profoundeſt Reverence to God and Chriſt in Prayer; as Strangers, to him and us, have occaſionally obſerved and declared. And as he lived he died, in Care for nothing but the Glory of God, and the Exaltation of the Kingdom of his Son in his People; and, as it was ſaid of David, he left us in a good Old Age, full of Days, and of durable Riches and Honour.

The Third Part of the New ATHENIANS no Noble BEREANS:

Being an Anſwer to the ATHENIAN MERCURY of the 14th of the 4th Month, call'd June, in Behalf of the People called QUAKERS.

THE firſt Part of your Third Mercury finds an Anſwer in the Concluſion of ours to your Second; yet ſince you make ſuch a Voluminous Puther about R. B's Words of the Body of Chriſt, as well as of the Letter to G. F. taking up, in their Aggravation, more than the Room of ſeven other Charges, we ſhall conſider what you ſay: Which is this. If the Nature of this Eternal Light, Subſtance or Spiritual Body that is in all of them, be Material, as it muſt be, becauſe, according to them, a diviſible Subſtance, then there's plain Penetration of Dimenſions, and every Quaker carries about all Tranſubſtantiation in his Belly. But why, pray you, muſt it be a material Subſtance? Do you find it in the Firſt of John, 4 and 9, for there is our Light aſſerted and deſcribed. The Life of the Word is our Light, and your Light, if you pleaſe. In the Word was Life, and that Life the Light of Men; and that was the true Light, that lighteth every Man that comes into the World. Is that Life no Subſtance? And if it be, Is it a Material or Spiritual One? And if it be a Spiritual one, is it, or is it needful it ſhould be, a Diviſible One? Conſider well, Is the Sun divided becauſe all ſee by it? No more is Chriſt: So that Diviſibility is your own Conceit, and not our Opinion or Conſequence of it, but of your miſtaking it: And all the Tranſubſtantiation you thought was in our Belly, proves, at laſt, to be in your own Heads; and 'tis hoped this will help to get it out for you.

Again, you ſay, If Immaterial, let 'em make Senſe of it if they can, for to us 'tis pure Quakeriſm. How now, Athenians! Have you never met with Immaterial Subſtances in your Reading? Then ſurely you have Travelled but a little Way in the Commonwealth of Letters. Both the New and Old Philoſophy muſt be Strangers to you; and, which is worſe, you are ſo to the Bible. Waſh your Eyes, therefore, I pray, and turn to John 6, from 48 to 63, and tell us, if you will or can, Who is the Living Bread there that comes down from Heaven, and what is that Fleſh and Blood Chriſtians muſt feed upon if they would be ſaved? Here is an Immaterial Subſtance or Body for you, one of God's providing, that you in Deriſion call 1692. pure Quakeriſm; but very glad we are of it, and ſhould be more, that you were better acquainted with it. We pity your extream Ignorance of Heavenly Things; for nothing elſe could make you ſo groſs or abuſive, upon ſo Eſſential a Part of Religion, and us for aſſerting it. Take not that ſtrictly which is ſpoken with Conſtruction, nor that properly or literally, which is figuratively and myſtically expreſs'd or to be underſtood, and we ſhall neither appear ſo monſtrous, nor you ſo much miſtaken. You may wring as great Inconſiſtency out of Scripture as any other Book, if you take that Courſe to expound it. Be therefore juſt to us, and ſhew you would inform us, or be informed by us, as ſometimes you would have us to believe; but do not jeer at what you do not underſtand, nor charge what you do not know. For your Aggravation of the Letter to G. F. and the confident Concluſions you make of our Idolatry, they are both untrue and abuſive; It is not our Principle, it was never our Practice; abhorring utterly that extravagant as well as unchriſtian Imputation; no People or Teſtimony, ſince the World began, laying Men lower than we have done, even to a Fault in our Adverſaries Apprehenſion. For we have not only oppoſed an Idolatry to Creatures or Works of Men's Hands, which is the groſſer Sort, but that of the Mind alſo: The Worſhip Men too generally and too zealouſly pay to their own Imaginations, or the Ideas they have fram'd to themſelves of God and Chriſt, and will at any Rate make others do ſo too, if they can. A refined Idolatry too many are guilty of, that exclaim againſt the other; and very pernicious to the Soul's true Knowledge and Enjoyment of God and Chriſt.

Your Fifth Charge is, That we deny the Trinity. But you ſhould in Juſtice, have added, of Perſons, with all the School-Niceties and Diſtinctions that belong to that Sort of Explication of Scripture; for to that only it is your firſt Proof refers, viz. W. P's Sandy Foundation, p. 12. For the Scripture no where calls God the Holy Three of Iſrael, but Holy One of Iſrael. And if he had ſaid Imagined Trinity, p. 16, as you cite, which he does not in the Copy we have, it ought not to be ſo heinous with you, ſince Three Perſons are not to be found in the Bible, which you exalt for the only Rule of Faith. And if you will not allow that Council to be Infallible that formed that Article above 300 Years after Chriſt's Aſcenſion, as to be ſure you will not, I hope it muſt be their Imagination of the Text, if not a Divine Inſpiration. Your Proof 1 John 5. 7. There are Three that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghoſt, and theſe Three are one, will not ſupport your Charge, becauſe it contains not the Matter controverted in it, viz. Three Perſons, for that is the Point in Controverſy. Let it ſuffice, if you pleaſe, that we believe the Scripture, tho' we reject that Interpretation; and that we own Three Witneſſes, and that thoſe Three are One; without allowing the Intricacy and Confuſion of the Schools.

Your Second Proof is from Sweet Sips: But that's no Quaker's Book, and ſo no Proof upon us. Be more Cautious another Time, and know better what you do.

Your Sixth Charge, That we hold, the Soul Sleeps, you your ſelves retract, but would have it a Fruit of your Ingenuity; and becauſe we would encourage a Thing ſo rare with you, we will at this Time ſpare your Diſingenuity in making it. But, as if you were more troubled at our being Clear than Guilty, and at your ſelves for miſſing the Blow at us, than for abuſing us, to recover that Slip, and to make us Amends, your Ingenuous Retraction ends in two other Charges.

1. That we Deny the Reſurrection of the Body. 2. The Diſtinct Exiſtence of the Soul after Death. Your Proof for the Firſt is G. Whitehead's Saying, That he did not believe his Body ſhould riſe again after Death: (But G. W. denies that to be his Anſwer:) And William Penn's not denying it to John Faldo. Whereas they anſwer no otherwiſe than what the Apoſtle ſaid to the Corinthians, Thou ſoweſt not that Body which ſhall be, 1 Cor. 15. 37. How is it then a Crime to deny your groſs Conceit of the Reſurrection? For in all Scriptural Reſpects we reverently and joyfully own the Reſurrection, as we have good Cauſe to do of all People. And if you believe that Death came by Sin, that Innocent, Wiſe, and Upright Man, J. Pennington, 2 Prin. p. 34. was not out of the Way; to ſay, that what we loſt in the firſt Adam we regained in the ſecond; and the Reſurrection, to be ſure, is not the leaſt Part; which is alone through him that was himſelf the firſt begotten from the Dead. And for Sweet Sips, tho' none of ours, yet no Proof for you, for the very Quotation owns the Reſurrection. But curious Queſtions we avoid, and count them the Fooliſh and Unlearned Ones that the Apoſtle forbad, 1 Tim. 6. 4, 5.

2 Tim. 2. 22, 23. being more ſolicitous that we appear accepted with God, than with what Bodies we ſhall appear.

2. That we Deny the Diſtinct Exiſtence of the Soul, is as falſe as that we aſſert the Soul ſleeps; but, perhaps, you think that Sweet Sips will help you out, Ch 26. but for that very Proof you owe us another Retraction; and we wiſh you may do it more ingenuouſly than you did your laſt.

Your Seventh Charge is, That we have been lookt upon as Fly-blows of the Jeſuits. If ſo, upon what Church, pray you, did they beget us? But out of the Abundance of your Hearts your Mouths ſpeak, and that foully, and falſly too, too often. But your Proofs for this? Why, moſt Writers ſay ſo. Do they ſo? where are they pray, and for what Reaſons? but you ſay not a Word of that. This you cannot think a Fruit of your Ingenuity; but it ſeems, if we would peruſe Ignatius's Life, we'd think him as Arrant a Quaker as William Penn himſelf. So that while you take it ill of us to refer you, for our Belief, to our own Books, and don't write new ones to tell you our Religion, you take upon you to ſend us to other People's Books to learn our own, and that with Reflections alſo. In this whatever you think, you are not over modeſt or reaſonable. But if Inſide, be Outſide; if Spirit, be Forms; Plainneſs, Pomp; Conviction, Implicit Faith; and Chriſt's Kingdom be of this World, you are in the Right, or elſe you abuſe us.

Your Eighth Charge makes us to deny the Plenary Satisfaction of Chriſt, and to reſt upon our own Merits. 'Tis ſome Comfort to us, that there is not one Charge that is a Text of Scripture, or delivered in Scripture-phraſe. Where do you find Plenary Satisfaction in the Bible? Or what do you mean by it? You that would have it the only Rule, ſhould make it yours. You cite J. N's Love to the loſt, p, 7. his Righteouſneſs imputed, or put into the Creature; and this you ſquib at, not conſidering that Abraham was really Righteous, when his Faith was imputed, or accounted to him for Righteouſneſs; or you will charge the Holy Ghoſt with wrong Reckonings. But any Thing rather than have Chriſt's Righteouſneſs within Men. Pray read 1 Sam. 22. 15. Pſal. 32. 2. and you will find impute or imputeth ſo applied. Your ſecond Proof is R. B. p. (no where) ſaying, we are juſtified by Chriſt formed in us. And ſo we are in the compleat Senſe of the Word: for the Word comprehends Remiſſion of Sins that are paſt upon Repentance, and Sanctification, or being made Holy and Juſt inwardly. And to be plain with you, we do believe, 1ſt, That Chriſt died for all, and is a Propitiation for the Sins of the World, 1 Jo. 2, 1, 2. 2dly, That he was herein the Effect rather than Cauſe of the Fathers love; as Jo. 3. 16, & 1 Jo. 4. 9, 10. God ſo loved the World, &c. 3dly, That Juſtification, as taken for Remiſſion of Sin, accounting Penitents as juſt as if they had not ſinned, refers to Chriſt as a Propitiation. He was our common Offering for Sin; and as the Word is taken for Man's being made inherently juſt and holy, it refers to Chriſt as the Sanctifier of his People; ſo that 'tis Chriſt ſtill, every Way, by which we hope for Salvation. And for our Works, even the beſt, ſuch as James meant, Jam. 2. they are rewardable, but not meritorious; becauſe there is no proportion between the Work and Wages; for the Wages of Sin is Death, but the Gift of God is Eternal Life, through Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, Rom 6. 23.

Your Ninth Charge is, That we deny the Divinity of Chriſt, (but your Reaſons ſhame your Charge) and this they do with a witneſs, ſay you, if they make him nothing but themſelves: But if we don't, what have you made of your ſelves, think you? Who of us ever ſaid ſo? Are we the Light that lighteth all that come into the World? or did we make the World? Indeed you are very groſs. Your other Proof is as lame; you ſay, we deny him to be God; but not a Word of ours cited to that Purpoſe, for we believe, that Chriſt was God manifeſted in the Fleſh; as Jo. 1. 14. 1 Tim. 3. 16.

Your Tenth Charge is Antartick to your Ninth: For now you ſay we more plainly deny his Humanity. Thus you make us ſhift and take turns at Faith, till you have left us none: But what are your Proofs? G. F. Myſt. p. 71. " Chriſt is not Hu-" mane; where doth the Scripture ſpeak of Humane? We deny the Word Humane. But that all Readers may deny you, till you deny your ſelves the Pleaſure of Abuſing us, we'll repeat the Place as it lies.

Prieſt ſaith Chriſt's Humane Nature, &c.

G. Fox Anſ. " Where doth the Scripture ſpeak of Humane? The Word Humane,
" where is it written? tell us, that we may ſearch for it? Now we do not deny, that
" Chriſt according to the Fleſh was of Abraham, but not the Word Humane; and " Chriſt's Nature is not Humane which is earthly, for that is the firſt Adam. Now

Athenians, if you can, bluſh! What; make us deny that Chriſt came of the Seed of Abraham after the Fleſh, by a Place that owns it, and that owns it fully, ſcripturally, and as it ſhould be owned and worded by Chriſtians, that uſe the Form of ſound Words given them by the Holy Ghoſt, denying only a School-Term borrowed from the Ground: This is hard.

Thus you ſerve us alſo in your laſt Charge, where you will have us to deny Angels, Spirits, Heaven, and Hell, and ſo make an end of us and our Religion. And to prove it, you bring a Book, that is none of ours; and not without Injury to the Author neither; and then conclude us a Compendium of all Hereſies; naming Twenty Two of them in rank and file, and a cum multis aliis at the tail of them. But if they had as foul play from their Judges as we have had from you, they will deſerve a better Name. However, you are obliged to us, that we have abbreviated Hereſy for you, and yet you have not convicted us of any one Point that deſerves that black Name. We muſt ſay, we are ſorry to ſee you act as if you thought us exempted from the common Claims of Humanity; to be dealt with as you pleaſe, and as if Injuries could not be committed upon ſuch Wretches as we are in your eſteem: For you add, diminiſh, pervert, and that boldly; and when you have ſhap't and dreſt up the Monſter, you are pleaſed to write Quaker upon him, and then lead him about the Streets in your Mercuries for a Show, at a Penny a Piece: God Almighty ſhew you Mercy, that allow us none, but refuſe to be juſt: For after all your black Charges, you fall to asking what our Faith is, which ſhould have been firſt done.

You objected upon us, of turning the other Cheek: ſaying, it was Patience per Force.

But you are Miſtaken in Fact, we have put up legal Advantages many Times, and endured and forgiven innumerable perſonal Injuries from thoſe out of Office as well as from thoſe that have been in Government, nay, often-times dared Cruelties and Oppreſſion with a literal Conformity to the Text. Speak not ſo peremptorily what you do not know, you expect better Things from our Religion, than your own, and yet would have ours to be worſe.

2. You ſay, It was not Conſcience, but an unaccountable, not to ſay brutal Stubbornneſs. You have endeavoured to rob us of our Religion, will you now rob us of our Suffering, and the good Intention of it too? for that Word of yours, authorizes all the Impriſonments, Plunders, Baniſhments, and Murders we have ſuffered ſince a People, and if we ſhould ſtrain conſequences, intitles you as arrant Perſecutors as B. Bonner, or Dr. Story.

But, 3*dly*, You ſay we give hard Words; Do we? ſuch as the Things call for, doubtleſs; I hope no perſonal Reflections? Yes, Whitehead complains of a new Perſecution; and with very good Reaſon, when the old is juſtified by you, and you proclaim us a Compendium of Two and Twenty Hereſies, with multis aliis at the End of it; which, in other Words, is ſaying, Take them Dr. Pinfold.

Again, You take it ill, he ſays, you make Beaſts, and Devils, of us; but what elſe, pray, do you make of us, when you cannot make worſe of us than you have?

You add, That we call you Impertinent; and pertinently, we think, to ramble as you have done, from your Province, to ſpread Invectives upon us. Wicked; what can you think it leſs, to abuſe an whole People in the tendereſt Point? Followers of blind Guides; how elſe could you have miſs'd your way ſo much? for 'tis plain nothing can be more miſtaken: 'Tis a wonder, ſay you, dumb Dogs don't come in too, though we have no ſilent Meetings. We can't think why you ſhould wonder at that, ſince you know how much you have Barkt at us. There is no danger of your being dumb, but deaf. And ſince you brought in this to introduce your prophane Jeſt at our ſilent Meetings, we muſt tell you, you may ſee in your ſelves the uſe of Silence, by your abuſe of Speech; and therein a Defence of us, and a Reproof to you. In ſhort, we recommend ſilence to you, as Pythagoras did to his Scholars, till you have learnt to ſpeak better than you do.

The next Thing is your ten Queſtions, an unreaſonable as well as an unſuitable Concluſion; for you firſt Judge; and then Query; and after charging us home, you ask, What's our Belief? It ſhews too great a Levity for Men of your Claim to Senſe; and, tho' not Enthuſiaſtical, yet, if you will not be angry, it looks very ſilly: But becauſe for that Reaſon it does not look malicious, you may have an Anſwer, tho' leaſt of all for your Sakes, by another Hand. But, before we part, pray take this along with you: Our Religion, and the True Religion, which makes People truly Religious, is the Fear of God planted in the Soul by the Grace of God, which ſanctifies and rules the Heart and Affections, and not Creeds of Words, tho' never ſo True; for the Devils have Knowledge and Faith, but their Knowledge does not work by Obedience, nor their Faith by Love; and therefore they are never the Better for it: Nor are Wicked Men, as the World ſhews. Religion then is a Divine Experience and Work in the Soul, by the Divine Spirit. It is Regeneration, and that a New Creature, Gal. 6. 15, 16. And as the Jew Inward is the Circumciſion of the Heart, ſo is that the Character of a True Chriſtian. A ſhort Creed of Words ſerved of Old with an Upright Heart. Thou art the Son of God, Thou art the King of Iſrael, was Nathaniel's Confeſſion. My Lord and my God, was all Thomas his Retraction and Creed, John 20. 28. And Peter's Confeſſion of Faith is little larger, Mat. 16. 18. Thus alſo the Blind, Lame, and Sick, that came believingly to Him.

To be a Chriſtian then, was to be like Chriſt, Meek, Humble, Holy, Loving, Patient; and this His Light and Spirit maketh thoſe that embrace it. Unto which we refer and exhort you, and all to whom theſe Papers may come, as the Great Agent of Man's Happineſs; deſiring earneſtly that our Care may be about our Conformity to our Saviour, rather than Controverſies about Him; ſince the True Religion is to be like Chriſt, 1 Pet. 2. 21. Chap. 3. 10, 11, 12. 1 John 2. 6. Say not then, That we Value our Title to Chriſtianity by Human Laws; you wrong us much: Ours hath an Higher Claim, and ſo muſt yours, if you expect to be Saved by it. We ſpoke not of being therefore Chriſtians in God's Account, but of being eſteemed enough, to Live quieter than your Invectives ſeem to let us, among Men. But it is not the leaſt Part of the Croſs we bear, to be, in almoſt every Thing, ſo much miſunderſtood, and by ſome ſo evilly repreſented. One While they will have us Deny the Divinity of Chriſt, another While, The Humanity. Sometimes we muſt be Socinians, then Sabellians. Very often we are told, That we expect to be Saved by our own Works; and as often, That we will do nothing unleſs the Spirit move us. Again, Sometimes we are ſaid to ſend All to Hell but our ſelves; and preſently, We deny any ſuch Thing. Ay, we are accuſed with Idolatry to Men's Perſons, and yet Scorn'd for denying all Honours or Reſpects to the Perſons of Men. Juſt thus we are made To diſown all Miniſtry, and by and by accuſed, That every one among us is a Miniſter, or may be ſo. It would be tedious to repeat the Contradictions and abſurd Dilemma's Men have brought themſelves into, by their raſh and unjuſt Attempts againſt us; which they will eaſily perceive, that pleaſe to peruſe ſome of our Controverſial Tracts, as, Ruſticus ad Academicos, the Chriſtian Quaker, in Two Parts; R. B's Apology and Defence; Quakeriſm a New Nick-Name for Old Chriſtianity, and the Rejoynder in it's Defence; The Way Caſt up; Reaſon againſt Railing, and Wiſdom Juſtified of Her Children, &c. In which our Belief is diſtinguiſhed and defended, againſt the Abuſes, Men, through Ignorance or Prejudice, have put upon it. God Almighty enlighten and forgive them; that is the Worſt of our Wiſhes, for their many hard Speeches againſt us, and our Holy Profeſſion: Concluding, Your Well-Wiſhing Friends, after all your Unfriendly Uſage.

A REPLY to a Pretended Anſwer, by a Nameleſs Author, to W. PENN's KEY: In which the PRINCIPLES of the People called QUAKERS, are farther Explain'd and Confirm'd. By William Penn.

THO' I ſubmit to Controverſie as my Drudgery, not my Pleaſure, otherwiſe than as it is my Duty, yet, I cannot but ſay, I am glad that the Publick Contradiction of a Nameleſs Author, to a ſmall Treatiſe of mine, called, A Key, clearing our Principles from Vulgar Apprehenſions, gives me farther Occaſion to declare and juſtify them to the World: In the doing of which, I ſhall endeavour, with God's Aſſiſtance, ſo to Govern my ſelf, that my Antagoniſt ſhall ſee it has not been in his Power, with all his ſcornful and abuſive Treatment of me, my Friends, and our Holy Religion, to provoke me to any other towards him in my Reply, than what is ſuitable to Chriſtianity; whilſt with great Levity and Prejudice, He will by no Means allow us to be Chriſtians.

My Reply will be ſhort, but I hope Clear and Satiſfactory; in order to which, I ſhall obſerve this Method.

I. His Miſtakes in Point of Fact, and the Uſe he would make of them. II. His Inſinuations and Inſincerity. III. His Abuſive Terms and Taunts upon us. IV. His pretended Anſwers and Interpretations of Scripture. And, Our Principles, ſo far as declared, and by Scripture defended in the KEY, maintained, againſt the Attempts of this Author, and farther Explained and Confirmed for a Publick Good.

I. His Miſtakes in Point of Fact, and the Uſe he would make of them.

He begins his Anſwer with a Paſſage meerly Perſonal, and not at all Relative to the Nature of the Diſcourſe, viz. about a Pamphlet, writ in Defence of the Bill for excluding the Duke of York, entituled, A few Words about the Touchy Point of Succeſſion: Teaching the Parliament, That when they had made firſt an Addreſs to the Duke to relinquiſh his Right to the Crown; if he refuſed, then (but not before) they might not only Juſtly, but Civilly exclude him by Act ——— When (ſays he) I had peruſed this Piece, without judging the Merits of the Cauſe, or the Wittineſs of the Argument, I concluded that W. P. was then a Man Principled for the Civil Liberties of his Country.

Anſwer. But if I may be ſo bold with this Author, Pray, Why then Principl'd for Civil Liberties, and not afterwards? And why this upon me at all? But why at this Time, and upon this Occaſion, of ſo differing a Nature, to be brought in by Head and Shoulders, as the Proverb is? But what if I never writ ſuch a Pamphlet? (as to be ſure I did not) What's to be ſaid to, and of ſuch an Author in ſuch a Caſe, and in ſuch a Time, and to a Man under My Circumſtances? Let him know then, That I did not only never write ſuch a Pamphlet, but I am ſure that I do not remember I ever read one of ſuch a Title, or heard of it; Nor was I of that Principle, and therefore I return the Civility of his Concluſion to him again; for I thank God I was always ſo much for Civil Liberties, that I thought no Man ought to loſe them for his Religious Principles. And farther, That they were never to be ſecured by this or that Man, but by a Good and Equal Conſtitution of Government, as ſome Papers by me, which I writ at that Time, as well as divers Perſons yet Living, of Good Reputation, can evidence for me.

But his next Paragraph explains the Matter, wherein he ſpeaks thus: I could no otherwiſe reconcile the Folly of his Prevarication in the late Reign, than by imputing them to his intemperate Zeal for a boundleſs Liberty of Conſcience (according to the Doctrine of King James's Declaration.)

In this he would be Charitable, but let him firſt be Juſt; If there were no Prevarications, then there is no Need of an intemperate Zeal for Liberty to ſhadow or reconcile them to my former Principles. And I am ſo much a Friend to him and his Brethren, That I wiſh them free from all Intemperance and Prevarications too, and that in all Reigns. And if it be poſſible, or worth While to reconcile him better to my Conduct, let him peruſe my Great Caſe of Liberty of Conſcience, printed 1671, and my Letter to the Eſtates of Embden, 1672, and my Preſent State of England, 1675. and he will find I was the ſame Man then, and acted by the ſame Principles. Not more intemperate in the Reign that favoured it, than in the Reign I contended with, that did not favour it: And no Man but a Perſecutor, which I count a Beaſt of Prey, and a declared Enemy to Mankind, can, without great Injuſtice or Ingratitude, Reproach that Part I had in King James's Court: For I think I may ſay, without Vanity, upon this Provocation, I endeavoured at leaſt to do ſome Good at my own Coſt, and would have been glad to have done more: I am very ſure I intended, and I think I did Harm to none, neither Parties nor Private Perſons, my own Family excepted: For which I doubt not this Author's Pardon, ſince he ſhews himſelf ſo little concerned for the Maſter of it.

Page 8. Our Adverſary miſſes again notoriouſly in Point of Fact, when he charges me, Of Revenging my ſelf upon J. Faldo and T. Hicks, for baffling of me Twenty Years ago.

Anſwer. I had no Revenge in my Eye when I writ that KEY; for 'twas writ in Pity, not in Anger; to inform, and not to be revenged. I muſt beg my Reader to peruſe it, who then can beſt judge if it taſtes of that rank Spirit, and what Spirit this Man is of, that ſhews ſuch Indignation at it; as well as ſee how meanly he has performed his Pretence of an Anſwer, that meddles not with the Twentieth Part of it, tho' of different Subjects. 1695.

It is not in my Nature to remember Injuries Twenty Years ago, tho' this Man commits them unprovoked: Nor had I any Temptation to it, ſince I had all the Satisfaction I could deſire but their Converſion. Concerning the firſt, I muſt refer my ſelf to Impartial Readers; and of the laſt, the Famous Barbican and Wheeler-Street Publick Diſputes do give this Man the Lye. For at the laſt, T. H. did not appear, and at the firſt he ſhrunk away. And if ever any ſuch Publick Diſpute determined with a viſible Advantage on either Side, the Impartial, not of our Communion, gave it us. And for the Encomium he beſtows upon them, with the Poor Indian, that deſired not to go to Heaven, if the Cruel Spaniard went thither, I muſt ſay, Let not my Soul go where their Souls are gone, if they did not heartily Repent of their Great Wickedneſs, againſt the People of God called Quakers, and their Holy Profeſſion, before they dyed.

Page 9. He ſaith, The Light Within is no Scripture Expreſſion, and the Nation had called nothing the Light Within, but the Effects of the Perceptive Powers of our Minds, that is, our Thoughts.

Anſwer. By Nation, he muſt either underſtand a Parliament or Synod, for I preſume he has not ſpoke with all the Nation. But if the Common-Prayer, Eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament, have any Share in the Senſe of the Nation, or the Synod, or Aſſembly of Divines, that Sat between the Years of Forty and Fifty at Weſtminſter, he will find another Light owned by them, than Man's own Thoughts: Which being all the Light Within that is owned by this Oppoſer, I may well return upon him that Scripture, miſquoted by him, pag. 43. If the Light that is in thee be Darkneſs, how great is that Darkneſs ——— Take Heed that the Light in thee be not Darkneſs.

I ſhall conſider his Abuſe of Scripture in another Place, and ſhall ſay no more upon it at this Time, than that this Darkneſs being our Author's Light, he cannot comprehend the True Light; but with it oppoſes the True Light, and the Children of it. But that the Light Within ſhould not be a Scripture Expreſſion, is very ſtrange: Pray, What is Enlightning, but Light Within? Can a Man's Mind be lighted, and have no Light there? The Light is ſaid to Shine in our Hearts: Can that be, and Not Within? But more of this when I come to conſider his Oppoſitions to the Light.

Page 15, 18, 19. Notwithſtanding their empty Pretence, the Quakers learn their Religion not from the Light Within, but from one another. They cannot Name one that was a Quaker, that was not made ſo by hearing them, or reading their Books. That Quakeriſm is erected by Art, Method and Management; by Conſults and Clubs; all ſubordinate to a General Aſſembly, and not from the Sufficiency of any Principle in themſelves, either of Natural, or Supernatural Donation.

Anſwer. This is alſo Falſe in Fact, there being many that came in a good Meaſure ripe to the Communion of that People, having for the moſt Part the ſame Sentiment, as all did from their own Convictions by the ſame Principle, tho' mediately or miniſterially. But if this Man had conſidered well, he would have ſpared this Abſurdity, for who did the Firſt Quaker hear? He will ſurely allow us a Beginning. However, I would have him know, No Man can ſee Divine Truth by another Man's Speaking or Writing, but through Divine Light, that Shines in himſelf, giving him the Underſtanding thereof: For tho' the Spirit of Man knows the Things of a Man, yet the Things of God knows no Man, but the Spirit of God: And therefore it is upon Conviction, and not Human Authority, that our Religion is built. And 'tis great Uncharitableneſs in this Opponent, as well as Injuſtice, to charge a whole People with a Confederacy againſt themſelves, to their Temporal Wo, and Eternal Deſtruction. That ſo much Sobriety, Patience, Self-denial, Suffering, Conſtancy through all Times and Conditions, ſhould be interpreted Trick, Jugling, Legerdemain, on Purpoſe to cozen the World, and their own Souls; as this Author is pleaſed to render them. But to inform him a little Better, if yet he needs it; thoſe Clubs, as he is pleaſed to term them, that are ſubordinate to a General Aſſembly, are not Meetings to define and enjoyn Faith or Uniformity of Worſhip, wherein Conſcience is more immediately exerciſed; But Meetings of Order and Diſcipline, to take Care of the Poor, of Fatherleſs and Widows, and all that walk up to the Holy Profeſſion they make: Which, I hope, is no Argument againſt 1695. us, as if we embraced our Religion by Rote, and not by the Illuminations and Convictions of the Light and Spirit of Chriſt Jeſus.

Page 52. And W. P. thinks it conſiſtent with the Honour that is due to the Scripture to compare it with Roman Legends.

Anſwer. He would have done well to have cited the Place where I had done ſo ill. I muſt leave it to my Reader to do me Juſtice againſt this groſs Writer, who ſays one of the worſt Things without the leaſt Proof. I am ſure I could no more have been guilty of ſuch an Expreſſion than of renouncing my own Belief; I pray God forgive him: But I would have him remember that he is one Day to be judged for this Abuſe.

I come to the Second Head of my Reply, viz.

II. His Inſinuations and Inſincerity.

Page 4. W. P. aſſerting in ſundry Pieces, Liberty of Conſcience, to be ex Jure Naturali, has deſtroyed all Morality, confounded Bleſſings and Curſes, Good and Evil, ſomewhat worſe than Hobbs himſelf; for he only aſſerts a Natural Liberty, but this a Divine Privilege to do Wickedneſs in the Name of the Lord.

Anſwer. He has not quoted any one Book, leſs the Place, where he makes me capable of being guilty of ſo dangerous a Principle; which, I hope, without being partial, I may ſay, is very diſingenuous. If he can point me to any Part of my Writings, in Defence of that Noble Principle of Liberty, that has not in it a ſufficient Saving to Morality, I will aſk him and the World Forgiveneſs; and if it has, I hope he knows whoſe Part it is to cry Peccavi. But to inſinuate I write for Liberty of Conſcience, as a natural Right for thoſe that ſhould plead Conſcience to overthrow it, becauſe I did maintain it in Favour of thoſe that kept within the Bounds of Morality, is to ſhew none towards me.

Page 6. He very weakly, as well as unworthily inſinuates, a near Relation betwixt me and the Jeſuits. Firſt, Some one of the Society may have at one Time or other had a Title-Page with the Words, Miſrepreſented and Repreſented, in it, which makes up a Part of mine, with which he is ſo angry; as if Title-Pages were Confeſſions of Faith, or that the ſame Words might not be uſed by Men of different Perſwaſions. It is to ſay, becauſe Miſrepreſented may be miſapply'd, therefore 'tis not to be uſed. Any Man may be miſrepreſented, muſt he not therefore repreſent himſelf aright, for Fear of being a Jeſuit? This, to be ſure, gives a very ill Repreſentation of him.

In the next Place he ſays, W. P. imping the Jeſuit again, he repreſents his own Religion as like ours as may be, by the new ſoftning Method of Meaux.

Truly, I don't know what Religion he is of; for he has no more told us that, than his Name; but a Proteſtant, I ſuppoſe, at large: And yet I am ready to think I can ſubſcribe as many of the Doctrines of the Reformation as himſelf. But if our Religion be ſo like it, Why does he labour in his whole Treatiſe to render ours ſo groſly contrary to theirs? Contrary Things don't look alike, for then they cannot properly be ſaid to be contrary. And if we are of ſo ſoftning a Diſpoſition, does he well to be ſo very hard? But truly I think it no Fault to have a Religion unlike his, unleſs it had more of Sobriety and Charity in it. However, the Jeſuits are much beholding to him, whatever I am, it being the firſt Time I have heard their Methods eſteemed ſo ſoft: Nor had they now had, I believe, that Complement from him, but to render us Jeſuitical, or Popiſh at leaſt.

Page 7. He adds, For W. P's Scheme is, firſt to give the Perverſion of Quakeriſm, and then to repreſent it in Equivocal Terms, after his own Way.

By which he would have the Reader think we are inſincere as well as miſtaken, and that we have a Deſign upon our ſelves, to cozen our ſelves as well as the World, in the great Buſineſs of Salvation. But what muſt that Man be that can have ſuch a Deſign? Certainly, a Fool to himſelf, and a Devil to others: But then what muſt They be who render Men ſo abſurd and impious, only to have their Evil Ends upon their Character and Religion? Doubtleſs they muſt be as bad every Jot. I muſt needs tell him, That little Treatiſe was not intended for Criticks, but plain and ordinary Underſtandings; to remove common and vulgar Prejudices, and in a familiar Style, and not after the Biſhop of Meaux's Copy, which was performed with much Addreſs and Exactneſs.

He ſays, My Terms are Equivocal. I am ſure I have moſtly expreſſed my ſelf in thoſe of the Holy Scripture: 'Tis a ſingular and unjuſt Reflection, to ſay I did it in my own Way, for it is in that Way which is common to the Writers of our Perſwaſion, and according to the Language of the Holy Ghoſt. And it's plain from more Places than this of his Book, as p. 23, 41, &c. That he would have that little Piece of mine the Fruit of great Contrivance and Deſign: I know not why, unleſs that he might raiſe the greater Reputation to his own Undertaking; as he tells us p. 5. But that will depend upon the Concluſion, which will beſt ſhew how well he has acquitted himſelf.

Page 11, 12. He farther inſinuates, That we make the Light within the Rule, not only to direct our Belief and Practice of the Chriſtian Religion, but to diſcover to Men the Hiſtory of the Coming and Performances of Jeſus of Nazareth, and that he is Chriſt the Lord; and this without the Help of the Scriptures.

Anſwer. Now this is very inſincere on his Part: For tho' the Light of the Eternal Word be without Doubt ſufficient to reveal or diſcover thoſe Facts where they are not known, if God pleaſeth, yet we never ſaid the Light was our Rule to that Purpoſe, but to judge of that which is revealed; or that the Diſcoveries it made, were of Things paſt and Hiſtorical, but of Things immediate and practical, as of Sin, in Thought, Word and Deed, and to be daily aſſiſted to live Soberly, Righteouſly, and Godly in this World: To Pray and Preach, and Worſhip God; which relating to the Service of Jeſus, and the Service of Jeſus being by him allowed to be the Chriſtian Religion, the aſſerting of that Divine Light to be the Holy Rule of our Chriſtian Conduct to perform thoſe Things, deſerves not ſuch abuſive Inſinuations and Innuendo's as this Author makes upon us.

Page 14. He would have his Reader believe, as if there were not one Paſſage in all my Part of that Book called, The Chriſtian Quaker, he can cite before it be corrected, both Style and Matter, becauſe he only cites one which he thinks fit to correct; calling me for it a Lewd Author, and what elſe he pleaſes: But according to his uſual Practice, he has inſerted no Page to direct us where to find this Aſſertion. If to me he has thought it not needful, I muſt tell him, His Amendment is as needleſs; for when I ſpeak of Chriſt, I ſay He; and when of his Body, I ſay It: Notwithſtanding, he charges me with other Things: But, I think, through the many Books I have written, it will never be found my Practice or Miſtake, whatever may be the Printer's.

Page 23. Since the Quakers will have their Light to be common to all Men, and not natural, there is no ſuch Thing in the Univerſe.

Anſwer. By which he inſinuates, That a Divine Light cannot be communicated to every Man, and be Divine. Would he have ſhewn himſelf a candid Author, one that deſired to have informed and not abuſed us, he would have firſt inſtructed himſelf what we have ſaid on this Occaſion. By Natural we mean mere Man; His Compoſitum or Make; that is of the Nature of Man, as he is Man: By Divine, what is above Man, and from God, to direct Man in all well-pleaſingneſs to him. Yet if by Natural may be meant, that every Man that's born into the World has a Portion of this Light or Illuminating Principle to direct him in the Way to Bleſſedneſs, I ſhould not very much quarrel at the Word, it being in a Sort natural to all Men to have it, becauſe all Men that are born (from whence the Word Nature ſprings) as certainly have it, as that they are born into the World. See John 1. 4. 19. 1 Cor. 12.

Theſe few Inſtances I thought fit to give of the unjuſt Inſinuations and Inſincerity of this Author; which brings me to my Third Head, viz.

III. His Abuſive Terms and Taunts upon us.

Indeed almoſt every Page is fraighted with them. My Key is a Picklock, and we are Imps of the Jeſuits: Our Writings are Apocryphal, our Phraſes like Gypſy-Gibberiſh and Beggars Cant, our Arguments Putid Sophiſms, our Leading Men a Pack of Juglers, Sophiſtical, of Suborned Senſe: Men of Trick and Leger-de-main, abuſing honeſt-meaning Men as Juglers do plain Country People: Ranting Cant, and that I debauch the Scriptures; with much more of this Strain and Style; beſides that Scorn and Levity, which very much unbecomes one that pretends to correct others in Matters of Religion. I would fain have this Author to conſider whether he has acted like one that has any Reverence towards God, or Compaſſion to a miſtaken People, ſuppoſing us to be ſuch. Certainly, whether we are in the Right or no, he muſt needs be in the Wrong, and his Religion vain, that has no better Bridle to his Tongue or Pen; Which ſaid, I ſhall betake my ſelf to my Fourth Head.

IV. His Pretended Anſwers and Interpretations of Scripture conſidered.

The firſt Perverſion, mentioned in my Key, is p. 1, viz. The Quakers hold, That the Natural Light in the Conſcience of every Man in the World is ſufficient to ſave all that follow it : Which, by the Way, after the Flouriſh of an Anſwer to the Key, (at leaſt as to our Doctrine of the Light) is all that's cited by him, ſo that my Explanations of our Principle, in Anſwer to this, and three other Perverſions upon this Doctrine at the ſame Time, are not ſo much as taken Notice of by this Man, that pretends to have conſidered them all. But let us hear what he ſays upon this Perverſion.

Page 7. This is no Perverſion, unleſs an Objection made againſt a Tenet be a Perverſion of a Tenet, which no Body thinks beſides W. P. for we only ſay, That the Quakers believe that a Natural Light is Supernatural and Saving : We miſtake not their Meaning, but oppoſe it as an Error.

Anſwer. He that changes the Terms of a Queſtion abuſes his Antagoniſt, and perverts the Argument, which is the Caſe : For the People called Quakers never ſaid, That a Natural Light was Supernatural or ſufficient to Salvation ; and if Natural be not their Term, then it's a Perverſion of their Principle. For whether they are miſtaken in their Principle, or no, is not the Queſtion ; but whether their Principle is not miſgiven by their Enemies. This Author ſeems to make it Natural in another Place, becauſe we affirm 'tis Common to all, or that All are Enlightned : But this begs the Queſtion in Point of Argument, and will not rectify or defend a Matter that is in Fact falſe : For beſides, that it is not fair in any to charge their Conſequences upon others for Principles, it is plain what any People ſay is their Principle, is the Rule for us to know whether what their Adverſaries ſay is ſo, be their Principle or not. Suppoſe it were true, that what is Common is Natural, yet if we do not ſay ſo, it is a Perverſion of what we ſay ; and as ſuch I give it in my Key. For, as I ſaid before, What any People declare is their Principle, is the Rule for others to know whether what their Adverſaries give for their Principle be theirs or not : Now whether the Light we call Divine be natural or no, ſhall be conſidered in it's Place ; but that a Natural Light ſhould be Supernatural and Saving, is not our Principle, but their Perverſion and Contradiction. Waving then any more of my Key, which he pretends to anſwer, he undertakes to ſtate our Religion and Controverſy between us, in his own Terms and not ours ; which I will not ſay is a Lewd, but Foul Way of treating any People or Opponent, in my Judgment ; and I think I am not miſtaken —— His Words are theſe.

Page 8. If any Thing they ſay deſerves Conſideration, this is the Point ; and of this they ſay, 1. That the Light within is the Rule of the Chriſtian Religion. 2. That it is God and Chriſt. 3. That Quakeriſm is taught them by it.

Anſwer. I could be glad this Author ſaid any Thing that deſerved the Conſideration of good and Wiſe Men ; I am ſure he deſerves their Reproof, that will not let us confeſs our Faith in our own Words, nor expreſs our Religion in our own Way. However, I will obſerve what he ſays, as diſingenuous as it is, and not write Forty Pages upon Four Lines, as he has partially cited out of my Key, and then call it an Anſwer. It is not our Way of Speaking to ſay the Light within is the Rule of the Chriſtian Religion ; but that the Light of Chriſt within us is the Rule of true Chriſtians, ſo that it is not our Light but Chriſt's Light that is our Rule. For in him was Life, and that Life the Light of Men, John 1. 4. 9. c. 8. 12. Life in the Word, Light in Men, and Life (too) where it is obeyed. For Chriſt promiſes the Light of Life to all that follow Him, the True Light that enlightens every Man that cometh into the World. Chriſt himſelf hath made it the Rule of his Followers : But he that doth Truth, cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifeſt that they are wrought in God. So that Chriſtians are to ſquare their Lives by the Light of Jeſus, therefore it is their Rule. It is the Chriſtian Path to Bleſſedneſs. Chriſt exhorts his Followers to walk in the Light. The beloved Diſciple begins his Epiſtles, as he does his Hiſtory of the Goſpel, with the Divinity and Doctrine of the Light ; telling us, That God is Light ; that if we would have Fellowſhip with God, we muſt walk in this Light ; and that the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth thoſe only that walk in this Light , and that Religion without it is a Lye, 1 John 1. To which let me add, That in his Book of Revelations, conſonant thereunto, he ſaith, That the Nations of them that are ſaved ſhall walk in the Light. (of the Lamb, Rev. 21. 23, 24.) The Apoſtle Paul makes it Univerſal ſal and Effectual, in his Epiſtle to the Epheſians, chap. 5. 13. But all Things that are reproved (or diſcovered) are made manifeſt by the Light; for whatſoever doth make manifeſt is Light. Now All being reproved, All have Light; and ſince that Light manifeſts every Thing that is to be known, Chriſt himſelf was known by it, and the Religion he taught, diſcovered by it, to be of God; and ſuch only received him and it, as obeyed this Light in their Conſciences. The ſame Light is by the ſame Apoſtle rendred the Chriſtian's Armour; And let us put on the Armour of Light, ſays he, let us walk honeſtly as in the Day, not in Rioting and Drunkenneſs, not in Chambering and Wantonneſs, not in Strife and Envying; but put ye on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, and make no Proviſion for the Fleſh, to fulfil the Luſts thereof: Making it the ſame Thing to put on the Armour of Light, and to put on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; certainly then Chriſt muſt be that Light, and that Light muſt be Chriſt. But he objects to this Doctrine.

Page 11. The Chriſtian Religion is nothing but the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth —— Nothing then can be the Rule of this Religion but what diſcovers to us that there is one Jeſus of Nazareth, and that he is Chriſt the Lord. But never was any one Man inſtructed by that Light that is in the Conſcience of every Man, that there ever was ſuch an one as Jeſus of Nazareth, much leſs that he was the Lord, and leaſt of all what he required of his Servants, therefore no Light within, common to all Mankind, can be the Rule of the Chriſtian Religion, ſince it was never poſſible for any Man to learn the leaſt Part of the Chriſtian Religion by the Light that is in every Man's Conſcience.

To the firſt Part of what he ſays, That the Chriſtian Religion is nothing but the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, I ſhall eaſily agree: For the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, is the Service of the God and Father of Jeſus of Nazareth; and that is to fear God and keep his Commandments; and to love God above all, and our Neighbours as our ſelves; this is the whole Duty of Man, Eccl. 12. 13. Matt. 22. 37. 39. That which Man has to do in the World for Salvation.

To the Second Part of his Propoſition, viz. That nothing can be the Rule of this Religion but what diſcovers to us that there is one Jeſus of Nazareth, and that he is Chriſt the Lord; I ſhall likewiſe agree upon Diſtinction. I diſtinguiſh then between an Hiſtorical and Spiritual Diſcovery of Jeſus of Nazareth; and ſo of the Rule by which he and his Service are to be known. The Scriptures tell us of the Birth, Life, Miniſtry, Death, Reſurrection, and Aſcenſion of Jeſus of Nazareth, and in brief of the Miniſtry and Sufferings of his bleſſed Followers and Apoſtles, and it muſt be acknowledged to be a great Mercy and Privilege to us, that we have them; but they cannot ſavingly reveal Chriſt to a Soul; neither can they give us the Soul and Subſtance of thoſe Things that are thereby declared. They are an exact Map, or Picture of Things, but not the Things themſelves. It is the Office of the Divine Light and Spirit of Chriſt to ſhew Men theſe Secrets; and to none are they, or can they be known, but thoſe that walk according to the Convictions of it: Firſt, In ceaſing to do Evil, and denying all Ungodlineſs and the World's Luſts; and then, in learning to do well, and living ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World. So that thoſe that read the Scriptures of Truth, by which they have an hiſtorical Knowledge of the Coming of Chriſt, and ſo are a Rule to that Knowledge, as alſo to the Doctrines therein expreſly declared, they muſt come to the Light of the Eternal Word to underſtand them, and, to ſee the Glory of the only begotten of the Father, as thoſe of old beheld it, elſe the Scripture is as a Sealed Book. Who knows God by reading of him, or Chriſt by reading of him, or Regeneration by reading of it, unleſs God is pleaſed by the Light of his Son, the true Key of David, to come in upon the Soul, and open to it the deep Things of God, viz. the New Creation, or the Regeneration of Man. Wherefore the Light or Spirit of Chriſt, which are the ſame, is the firſt Great Rule; even the Rule of underſtanding the Scriptures, which we own to be the Secondary Rule: And we ſay, That a Meaſure thereof is given to all to profit with; to lighten all, and ſearch and lead all in the Way of Holineſs, which is the Way of Eternal Happineſs. His minor Propoſition I muſt deny, viz. But never was any one Man inſtructed by that Light that is in the Conſcience of every Man, That there ever was ſuch an one as Jeſus of Nazareth, much leſs that he was the Lord, and leaſt of all what he required of his Servants.

In this I muſt diſſent from him, eſpecially as to the latter Part; for though, as I have already ſaid, the Scriptures are an Hiſtorical Rule, and Doctrinal too, ſo far as they are Plain and Expreſs, yet the trueſt and moſt powerful Evidence to 1695. authorize our Belief of them, is the Teſtimony of the Light and Spirit of the Eternal Word, from whence they came, and that anſwers to it's own. This the Martyrs aſſerted, as Hooper, Bradford, Smith, Saunders, Rogers, &c. alſo Calvin, Beza, Peter Martyr, and Eraſmus himſelf, refer to it in Proof of the Divine Authority of them; as may be ſeen in the Book of Martyrs, as alſo in the Writings of theſe Authors upon the Authority of the Scriptures. But if the Light we contend for does not ordinarily reveal the Hiſtory of Jeſus Chriſt, who dare ſay it cannot do ſo? Is it not more reaſonable to ſuppoſe that there may be no abſolute Neceſſity of it, ſince then God would have left much the greateſt Part of the World without the Means of Salvation? Yet if it reveal that which he commanded his Servants, both to practiſe and preach, it overthrows his Propoſition, and plainly proves that the Soul and Subſtance of what Chriſt commanded his Followers, is revealed, more or leſs, to all People, in all Nations, by this deſpiſed Light within. And beſides Experience, which I ſhall anon come to, the Holy Scriptures ſpeak as much; for, ſays the Prophet Micah, (Micah 6. 8.) God hath ſhewn to thee, O Man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do juſtly, and love Mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? Here is both Duty and the Way to underſtand it. Now this Duty and Service is the Service of God, and ſo of Jeſus of Nazareth, who came to teach Men ſo to do, viz. To do Juſtly, love Mercy, and walk humbly with God. The Way to know and do this, is God's Illumination of Man. GOD HAS ſhewn unto thee, O Man! How does God ſhew Man? Whatſoever makes manifeſt is Light, ſays the Apoſtle Paul to the Epheſians, Eph. 5. 13, 14. So that 'tis by the Light of the Word, by which he made all Things, that he ſhews unto Man all Things neceſſary to Salvation, viz. What is good, and what he requires of him: What Service, Homage and Obedience he expects. So that here we have both the Univerſality and Sufficiency of the Light. Correſponding herewith is that great Saying of the ſame Apoſtle, to the Romans, Rom. 1. 19. For that which may be known of God is manifeſt in them, for God hath ſhewn it unto them. Which Way, I pray, does God manifeſt the Knowledge of himſelf in Men, but by the Light of the bleſſed Word, by whom he made Man, and without whom nothing was made that is made? In him was Life, and that Life the Light of Men, and this is the true Light that enlightens every Man that cometh into the World, John 1. 4. 9.

Now that the Chriſtian Religion is this Duty, Service and Knowledge of God, we may ſatisfy our ſelves, from that bleſſed Sermon of Bleſſings, preached by Chriſt upon the Mount, Matth. 5. Bleſſed are the poor in Spirit; bleſſed are they that Mourn; (for their Sins, and for want of feeling Peace with God) bleſſed are the Meek; bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after Righteouſneſs; bleſſed are the Merciful; bleſſed are the Poor in Heart; bleſſed are the Peace-makers; and bleſſed are they which are perſecuted for Righteouſneſs Sake. If theſe States were bleſſed, and thoſe under theſe bleſſed Qualifications, then to be ſure ſuch were in the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, tho' he was not then offered up, and that they knew not his Hiſtory. Now that all have a Light to ſhew them the Happineſs of theſe States, the Univerſal Teſtimony of all Ages and Nations aſſures us; and, to deny it, is to ſay the Sun did never Shine, ſince there was a Man in the World.

The ſame may be ſaid of the reſt of his excellent Sermon: As that we ſhould ſeek God, in the firſt Place, and truſt Providence for the reſt, and live by Faith in his Goodneſs: Be Charitable and Devout without Oſtentation: Not ſo much as Luſt in the Mind, and ſpeak Truth without an Oath; bear Abuſes, forgive Enemies, be ſparing of cenſuring others, and finally do, as Well as hear, the Word of God, and to all Men as we would be done to. Theſe excellent Things, more naturally, and excellently expreſt in that Sermon, than in the Writings of the moſt enlightned Gentiles, are yet to be found up and down in the Account given us of their Lives and Doctrines by Strabo, Laertius, Herbert, Stanly, Cudworth, and my Part of the Chriſtian Quaker. By all which it may be ſeen, that the Bleſſed Word, who did himſelf preach ſo plainly and fully, yet conciſely, this admirable Doctrine, had enlightned thoſe Gentiles with great Knowledge, and inſtructed them therein, and that, ſeveral Hundred Years before he came in the Fleſh. I hope the keeping of theſe Commands, and obeying the Precepts of Jeſus of Nazareth, will be allowed to be the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, or elſe nothing is; and if ſo, then I muſt conclude, he may be ſerved and obeyed of thoſe that are not acquainted with his Coming in the Fleſh, and becoming perſonally an Holy Miniſter among the Jews, and, in Concluſion, an Holy Offering for the World. For it is very poſſible that a Man may receive Benefit by a Medicine, of whoſe Compoſition he may be ignorant. And in General Pardons, it is not commonly known by thoſe that ſenſibly have the Advantage thereof, by whoſe Favour and Advice the Prince was influenc'd to grant it.

Since then Humility, Mercy, Patience, Purity, Brotherly Kindneſs, Faith in God, Hope of Life Eternal, Charity to Men, Doing as a Man would be done to, and that with a diſtinct and Religious Reference and Regard to him, that muſt finally judge all Men, muſt neceſſarily belong to the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, ſince 'tis the Subſtance of what Jeſus of Nazareth Preached, and the End of the Labour, Travels and Writings of His Bleſſed Apoſtles, (and that theſe Things were in a Meaſure in the World before the Coming of Jeſus of Nazareth in the Fleſh, and that even thoſe that knew Him, and received Him when He did come, were thoſe that walked up to the Light of the Word, by which alone His Inward Beauty and Glory were ſeen) we may reaſonably conclude, againſt this Author, That the Light with which the Word-God Enlightned Men, was a Divine, Spiritual, and Saving Light, becauſe it Revealed theſe Truths to Gentiles as well as Jews, that had an immediate Tendency to Salvation; and that in all Ages. And that whoſoever have walked according to it's Righteous Dictates, as well before, as ſince the Coming of Chriſt (the Eternal Word) in the Fleſh, did ſo far perform the Service of Jeſus of Nazareth, as they thereby ſerved the God and Father of Jeſus of Nazareth; for ſays Chriſt himſelf, He that doth the Will of my Father, the ſame is my Mother, my Brother, and my Siſter.

To ſum up this, once more, I ſay, We never ſaid the Light Within is given to all Mankind, to reveal Facts done, or Hiſtorical Accounts of Perſons and Actions, tho' we cannot ſay it is not able to do it, but ordinarily the Nature of Things, as to Truth and Falſhood, Obligation and Duty, Commiſſion and Omiſſion; and therefore we ſay, That tho' all did not foreſee the Coming of Chriſt, with the Circumſtances that attended him, as ſome of the Prophets did, That, being an extraordinary Manifeſtation of this Light, yet all had the ordinary Manifeſtation of it, to do juſtly, love Mercy, and walk humbly with the Lord: And ſo they have now, tho' they have not the extraordinary Revelation of the Hiſtory of JESUS of Nazareth; in which reſpect we confeſs the Scriptures to be a Secondary Rule, an Hiſtorical Rule, and a Rule of the Form of Sound Words in Doctrinal Truths: But the Firſt and Great Rule is the Light and Spirit of God, as that was the Rule to them, by whom the Scriptures were given forth, in their giving them forth: And we alſo affirm, The Light and Spirit of God a Rule to Read and Underſtand the Scriptures by; and this was plainly ſeen in Chriſt's Time: For the Jews that rebelled againſt the Light, had the Veil over their Underſtandings, ſo that they could not ſee his Glory, but judged of Him according to outward Appearance, which was not Righteous Judgment; but thoſe that loved the Light in that Day, the truly Conſcientious to God, they brought their Deeds to the Light: They knew Him to be the Eternal Word, manifeſted in the Fleſh, and thereby ſaw his inward Glory, to be that of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of Grace, and full of Truth.

If he object, If all had this Light, Why did not all know him, as indeed that is the Weight of his Objection, and other Adverſaries Oppoſitions.

I anſwer, All have Reaſon, but all are not Reaſonable; all don't uſe it: So all have Light, but all don't obey it. It is not the Light's Inſufficiency, but Man's Diſobedience, that renders him uncapable of the Knowledge of Divine Truth. Chriſt told the Jews, If you do my Will, you ſhall know of my Doctrine, whether it be of God or no. Obeying the Convictions and firſt Motions of this Divine Light, will increaſe our Light and Knowledge. Diſobedience makes an unfruitful Ground, tho' the Seed be Good that is Sown in it: So that the Ignorance of thoſe that have the Light, is not chargeable upon the Light, but their own Darkneſs, which comprehends it not, through Unbelief and Diſobedience. The Scriptures then are the Rule to us, of the Hiſtory of JESUS of Nazareth, and neceſſary to be believed where they are known; but the Divine Light and Spirit, the Firſt and Great Rule by which they are to be truly and profitably read and believed, and without which Chriſt could not have been ſavingly known when He was in the World; nor can He be known now, nor the Scriptures that declare of Him: He is the common Rule to Mankind, who by His Light reveals Common and Eſſential Truths, relating to the Fear of God, and working of Righteouſneſs: And it will be hard for this Man to Name one Nation or Perſon in the World, that knows not the Re-

1695. proofs of this Principle, in Evil-doing; and in doing that which is Right, has not a Reference to the pleaſing of Him, who is the great Rewarder and Preſerver of Men, notwithſtanding his Cavil to the contrary, pag. 12, 13. But I ſhall attend his farther Exceptions.

Page 13. They affirm the Light Within is Chriſt; and I ſay then it is nothing elſe but Jeſus of Nazareth. If they make the Light Within to be Chriſt, and not Jeſus of Nazareth, they make it Antichriſt; and becauſe they Worſhip God in this Appearance (as they ſpeak) they are Antichriſtian Idolaters.

Anſwer. This Way of arguing is very dark, as well as injurious. If by Jeſus of Nazareth he only means what he took of the Virgin Mary, and will not conſider him as the Eternal Word, but as Man, like to us in all Things, Sin excepted, He is not the Light Within, that we declare of, and Worſhip God in.

But this Author at the ſame Time declares not to believe that Chriſt is the Eternal Word, for he ſeems to deny his Pre-exiſtence, much more, that the World, and all that is therein, was made by Him. And how Orthodox that is, let the Impartial judge. If he owns Chriſt to be the Word, God manifeſted in the Fleſh, then I ſay, The Light is Chriſt, as much as Chriſt can be called the Light; and ſo not only John calls Him, John 1. 4, 9. but he calls himſelf ſo, John 8. 12.

This Antagoniſt ſeems too eager and raſh, or he would have reflected better upon the Way of the Holy Ghoſt's ſpeaking in Scripture; for ſometimes Chriſt is ſo called, with Relation to his Divine Nature, and ſometimes with Reſpect to his Manhood. As he was of the Seed of Abraham, he is not God over All, Bleſſed for ever; he is not the Eternal Word, in whom is Life, and that Life is the Light of Men. And as he hungred, thirſted, ſorrowed, wept, dyed, he was not the Divine Light, that lighteth every Man that cometh into the World: Yet is alternatively called Chriſt, ſometimes Chriſt without Man, ſometimes Chriſt in Man, the Hope of his Glory; according to the double Reſpect he ſtood and ſtands in. Let not Men ſeparate what God has joyned, which has been too much the Practice of our Oppoſers, to draw a Line of Reflection over our Religion, as if it denied Jeſus of Nazareth to be Chriſt the Lord, becauſe we aſſerted him the Light of the World, and as ſuch, to be in Man: Whereas they who conſider him but in one Capacity, are too ſtrict with the Text, to wrong us, and ſo in the End draw the Reflection upon themſelves. But to run this Abuſe of the Holy Ghoſt, as well as us, ſo high, as therefore to ſtyle us Antichriſtian Idolaters, ſhews a Bitterneſs as well as Miſtake, that by no Means becomes a Critick upon other Men's Religion.

But that he may apply this Injuſtice home, he is pleaſed that it ſhould light upon me, and therefore he quotes a Paſſage out of my Part of the Chriſtian Quaker, tho' not the Page. I wave the Scurrility of his Introduction to it, pag. 14, 15. This is the Paſſage, as he gives it: “ The Power, Life and Light which inhabited “ that Holy Perſon, which (or who) was Born at Bethlehem, was, and is chiefly “ and eminently the Saviour, as prepared for the Work which Chriſt had to do in him. By which (ſays he) he makes the Light Within to be their Chriſt, and Jeſus of Nazareth, the prepared Inſtrument of this Chriſt.

Now by this, the Reader will have a clear Taſte of the Juſtice of this Writer.

My Words are thus laid down by me, (Chriſtian Quaker) pag. 104. chap. 21.) “ We confeſs, that though the Eternal Power, Life, Light, which inhabited that “ Holy Perſon, which was Born at Nazareth, was, and is chiefly and eminently the “ Saviour, Hoſ. 13. 4. (For there is no Saviour beſides me, ſaith God, (this he left “ out) yet that it was inſtrumentally a Saviour, as prepared and choſen for the Work “ which Chriſt had then to do in it, which was actually to the Salvation of ſome, and “ intentionally of the whole World, then, and in Ages to come; ſuitable to that Scrip“ture, Heb. 10. 5. 6. Lo I come, in the Volume of the Book it is written of me, “ to do Thy Will, O God! A Body Thou haſt prepared me.” By which it is plain with what Unfairneſs he gave my Words before: Firſt, he left out my Quotation out of Hoſea, For there is no Saviour beſides me, ſaith God, whereby it appears that the Eternal Power, Life and Light, was eminently concern'd in Man's Salvation. Secondly, He concealed that Scripture in the Concluſion of the Paragraph, out of the Hebrews, A Body haſt Thou prepared me, &c. which plainly interprets what I mean by Perſon, and by which, and it, that he is pleaſed to change for who, and He and Him, to render me at once Abſurd and Erroneous, and about which he calls me a Lewd Author, and all to Naught. This was done of Malice, doubtleſs, the better to have his evil End of me, by wringing my Words to the Senſe he deſigned they ſhould bear. Making me to divide, as well as diſtinguiſh, between Chriſt, and Jeſus of Nazareth, and Chriſt and him that was Born of the Virgin Mary, reading It, He, and Him, which referred to the Body; ſo making me to intend Jeſus of Nazareth, compleatly conſidered, when I plainly intended, from the Nature of the Words of the Text, and thoſe Words, and the Scripture cited by me, in Proof and Illuſtration of what I meant by them, the Body of Chriſt Jeſus of Nazareth.

Thus much of his Conſtruction of the Words he quotes out of the Chriſtian Quaker, before cited: But if he will allow us to ſpeak our own Mind, in our own Words, and had rather we were in the Right, than in the Wrong, which does but become an ingenious Author (tho' it thereby appear that we are not what he had ſaid us to be) then let him know, We do not Divide, or Diſtinguiſh between Chriſt, and Jeſus of Nazareth. Nor did we ever ſay, that Jeſus of Nazareth is Chriſt's Inſtrument to appear in, and by, for Man's Salvation; but that the Word took Fleſh, and this is the Chriſt, or Anointed of God: And tho' ſometimes the Term Chriſt is given to the Word, ſometimes to the Prepared Body he took, as when he is ſaid To Dye, and be Buried, and Raiſed again, &c. yet God manifeſt in the Fleſh, and Immanuel; God with us in our Nature, is that Chriſt of God, or Chriſt the Lord, that God hath, and will exalt; the Enlightener, Redeemer, Saviour of the World: Both an Offering for All, and the Mediator, and Sanctifier, of All that deſire to come to God by Him.

But he farther urges againſt us, and our Doctrine of the Light Within, as what is Fallacious on our Part, to draw in Proſelytes, and which he terms a Putid Sophiſm, pag. 21, 22. viz. Is there not a Light in every Man's Conſcience? You experience one in your own. And is God Light? And Chriſt Light? And is not God within, and Chriſt within? Now this is all very true: But when from hence they infer, God is the Light Within, it is Putid Sophiſm. God being Light, and being within Men, proves not that God is a Light within Men. God is Light, and God is within other Things as well as Men: Is then God a Light within to every Tree, every Beaſt, every Star? If this be abſurd, then God's being Light, and being within, proves but ſophiſtically that He is the Light Within. And yet this is the conſtant Method the Quakers uſe, to teach their People the Divinity of the Light Within.

Anſwer. I hope he will find no Cauſe to blame me for Imperfect, and leſs for Perverted Quotations: I cite him fairly and fully. Now, for Anſwer, I ſay, I never ſaw or heard of that Way of Reaſoning or Tampering, as he ſtiles it, that he charges upon us to make Proſelytes by. And I think I ought to be at leaſt as well verſed in our Way and Writings as himſelf. All Reaſonable People will readily allow, they have ſuch a Light, and in reading the Holy Scriptures, they find the Enlightned Pen-Men call God Light, and Chriſt Light, and are naturally led to believe, That their Light is from God the Fountain of all Light, eſpecially when they read the firſt Chapter of John, and that of his Firſt Epiſtle alſo. And it is granted by this Man, That God is in Men, and that God is a Light within Men. Indeed his Argument does not prove it, for it is not regularly formed to make ſuch a Concluſion, which is his Fault, becauſe it is of his own making: But neither is it a Sophiſm, or Sophiſtical in us, nor is the Reaſon Good that he gives againſt it, viz. Becauſe it is abſurd to ſay, That God is a Light within Trees, Beaſts, and Stars, becauſe God is within them, and God is Light; therefore it is ſo to ſay, that God is a Light within Men. For Trees, Beaſts, and Stars, &c. are not of Man's Nature and Capacity, they are not capable of ſuch a Manifeſtation of the Light of God, as Man is: God is in them after another and lower Manner, and to other Ends and Purpoſes. But why God, who is confeſt to be Light, and in Man, ſhould not be A Light then to Man, I cannot comprehend. I do not ſay that it ſtrictly follows in the Argument, but the Reaſon given againſt it is no Reaſon; and Reaſon and Scripture judge for us. For Man being a Reaſonable Creature, 'tis his Duty, and the End of his Being, to know and ſerve God the Author of it; but this he cannot do, unleſs God manifeſt himſelf unto him: And ſince this Man grants, That God is Light, and in ſome Sort in Man, to what better Purpoſe, or which Way more properly and beneficially, Can He be ſaid to be in Man, than as a Light Shining there, to give him the Knowledge of God? So that He is not only there as the Creator and Supporter of his Being, but as His Illuminator and Inſtructor to his Well-Being. The Scriptures already cited ſufficiently prove, That God is Light, and Chriſt is Light, and, that All Men are Enlightned by Him: And to be ſure it muſt be with His own Light. Now, tho' with a Fair Adverſary, one might ſay, with-1695. out Offence, That God or Chriſt is the Light within Man, yet it is not the common Way of our expreſſing our ſelves.

To be ſure we have no ſuch Meaning in that Way of Speaking, as ſome Adverſaries ſtrain our Words to, as if God and Chriſt were Comprehenſible in, and by Man, to render us Abſurd and Blaſphemous. But we rather chuſe to ſay, that God, or Chriſt, who is Light, hath lighted Man, and by the Light of Chriſt in Man, Man comes to know God and Chriſt: And that the Light in Man, is the Light of God, or of Chriſt, and not that God, or Chriſt, is the Light in Man. The Light in a Room at Noon-Day, is the Light of the Sun, but the Sun cannot ſo properly be ſaid to be in the Room, becauſe it's Light is there; for the Glorious, Unapproachable Body of it is elſewhere. I hope this will not paſs with the Sober Reader for a Putid Sophiſm.

He farther ſays, p. 24. I may not now adays, therefore, tell Quakers their own Religion is falſe, without telling them what is the Truth; leſt I ſhould Tempt them to leave Quakeriſm for Impiety and Irreligion, and not for the Service of Jeſus Chriſt.

Anſwer. We are beholding to him, that he thinks our Religion a Bar to Impiety and Irreligion; and, I wiſh neither had appeared in his oppoſing of it. The Truth he has a Mind to tell us, lyeth in a few Words, upon which he beſtows no leſs than fifteen Pages, (viz.) That the Light which God hath given to Man for Salvation, generally ſpeaking, is, beſides Creation and Providence, the Writings of the Inſpired Men of the Old and New Teſtament, which we call the Scriptures of Truth; no Light, Spirit or Grace, commonly or ordinarily opening and aſſiſting our Underſtandings in the reading of them, but that the Light which is in Men, is the Effects of the Perceptive Faculties of our Minds, that is, our Thoughts, as he alſo tells us, pag. 9. So that what we Read and Hear with our outward Eyes and Ears, is thereby reported to our Mind or Judgment, whoſe Concluſion thereupon is this Man's Light Within. But, methinks, before he had been ſo poſitive and Voluminous in his own Notion, (where he'll find very few Abettors, I believe) he ſhould have been ſo fair as to have conſider'd what I have ſaid in my Key, p. 1, 2. That ſeems to me to have more materially referred to another Light Within, than he has yet brought himſelf to. I will give the Paſſage at large as it lyeth, that it may ſpeak for it ſelf. "The Quaker's Belief and Aſſertion is, That Chriſt, who is the Word, that was with God, and was God (John 1. 4, 9. and is ſo for ever) hath enlightned every Man that cometh into the World, with his own Light; as He is that True Light, or ſuch a Light, as there is no other to be compared to him: Which is the Meaning of the Emphaſis True in the Text. And that ſuch as follow the Reproofs, Convictions and Leadings of that Light, with which he enlightens the Underſtandings and Conſciences of Men, ſhall not walk in Darkneſs: That is, in Evil and Ignorance of God; but ſhall have the Light of Life: That is, be in an Holy and Living State or Condition towards God: A State of Acceptance and Salvation, which is from Sin as well as from Wrath; (See Iſa. 49. 6. John 1. 4. 9. c. 3. 21. c. 5. 40. c. 8. 12. c. 10. 10.) And for which End Chriſt was given of God. So that they aſſert the Light of Chriſt, to be ſufficient to Save; that is, to Convince of Sin, lead out of it, and quicken the Soul in the Ways of Holineſs: And not a Natural Light, otherwiſe than as All Men, born into the World, have a Meaſure of Chriſt's Light, and ſo it may, in a Senſe, be ſaid to be Natural to all Men, becauſe all Men have it. For this Light is ſomething elſe than the bare Underſtanding Man hath as a Rational Creature: For as ſuch, Man cannot be a Light to himſelf; but has only a Capacity of ſeeing, by Means of the Light with which Chriſt, the Word, enlightneth him. For we can no more be a Mental or Intellectual Light to our ſelves, than we are an External and Corporeal Light to our ſelves: But as the Sun in the Firmament is the Light of our Bodies, ſo the Light of the Divine Word, is the Sun of our Souls; the Glorious Luminary of the Intellectual World; and they that walk in it, will, by it, be led to Bleſſedneſs, Rev. 21. 24." Of all which, he takes this imperfect Notice, The Concurrence of many Cauſes being requiſite to produce Faith, the Quakers confound theſe Inſpirations with the Light, and attribute the Efficiency of one Cauſe to another, which muſt needs Pervert all Sound Judgment of Things, and make them ſpeak Inconſiſtences: As when W. P. ſays, Man cannot be a Light to himſelf, as if the Denial of the Divinity of the Light Within, implied any ſuch Thing; and Man has only a Capacity to ſee, as if the Defect was in God's Works in Nature, and in the Scripture, and not in Man's ſeeing Faculty. Now ſuch Expreſſions ſhew his Apprehenſions are much Perverted about theſe Things.

Anſw. But this ſhews my Opponent to be either ſhallow, or worſe. I would be ſo Charitable as to think he miſtakes me, and in the Concluſion abuſeth himſelf. For why do the Quakers confound thoſe Inſpirations with the Light? We never limited all Divine Inſpirations and Operations to the Light, meerly as it is Light, as Phyſically, and by his Natural Philoſophy he ſeems to explain it. We ever meant a Principle in Man, that is not of Man, that is variouſly denominated by it's various Operations: Light from Deſcerning and Diſtinction: Spirit from Life and Power: Word, as it ſpeaks forth God's Mind to Man: Truth, in the Inward Parts, as it deals truly with Man, and would redeem him from lying Vanities: And Grace, as it is God's Gift, and not Man's Underſtanding, or Man's Merit. I ſhall not therefore quarrel with his Natural Philoſophy, p. 37, when he ſays, The Sun Generates all Life, and it's Faculties in Bodies, but not by it's Light; for we never ſaid it did, with Reference to the Light Within: Elſe all Men would have Divine Life as well as Light, which was never our Aſſertion, nor a Juſt Concluſion from that which is, it being Scripture, viz. John 1. 4. In Him, the Word, is Life, and that Life the Light of Men, not the Life of Men, but as they obey it: According to that clear and full Expreſſion of our Bleſſed Lord, John 8. 12. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me ſhall not walk in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life; that is, Life as well as Light. They that read him, will ſee who keeps neareſt to the Text, and who walks cloſeſt to the Rule and Form of Sound Words; which we hope neither he, nor any of his Abettors, ſhall ever be able to draw or drive us from.

For the Uſe he makes of thoſe Words of mine: And Man has only a Capacity to ſee (viz.) As if the Defect was in God's Works in Nature and in the Scriptures, and not in Man's ſeeing Faculties; he utterly miſtakes me: I will not ſay wilfully; but upon that he makes a great Pother, and depends the Strength of his Concluſion: For I ſpeak of Man in his Creation, and he of Man in his Fall. The Concluſion cannot be Right that is drawn from wrong Premiſes, and I hope he, when he thinks again, will think ſo too; and that his Pains, p. 36, 37. might have been ſpared. For I hope he will not think there was any Defect in Paradiſe, as there muſt have been, if Man had been defective in his Seeing Faculty; for even there he was but Man, and, as ſuch, he could not be his own Light; which is plain, in that when he Erred, he Erred from ſomething elſe than himſelf, himſelf Erring; Therefore that ſomething elſe muſt be the Divine Light he Erred from; in which if he had kept, the Subtil Inſinuations of the Serpent had never prevailed.

Man then had only the Capacity of ſeeing all Divine Objects; as Truth, Wiſdom, Goodneſs, Mercy, Juſtice, Power, &c. which were only diſcernible by the Inſhinings of this Divine Light of the Word of God. And ſince he alludes ſo ſtrictly in his Inſtances from the Creation and Natural Philoſophy, I hope he will allow me to ſay, That as the Eye of Man, though never ſo capable of ſeeing, cannot ſee any Object before it, in the Dark, unleſs an outward Light give it the Sight thereof; ſo no Man's Soul can ſee Divine Objects, though it's Eye, or Seeing Faculty were ever ſo capable, unleſs the Divine Light ſhined in it, to give unto it the Knowledge of the Glory of God therein. And I have not only my own Experience, but that of Good Men in all Ages of the World, according to the Degree of the Manifeſtation of the Divine Light, wherein they agree, and cannot err: Humility, Obedience, Love, Patience, Meekneſs, Purity, Charity, &c. are ſenſibly wrought in Men by this Divine Principle. Senſibly I ſay, for all his Inſenſible Dogmas, pag. 37, 38, 39. as that Man is not ſenſible of the Divine Agency or Inſpiration of the Almighty. For we know (ſays he) by Reaſoning, but not by Senſe or Conſcience: Abuſing that Scripture to countenance his inſenſible Aſſertion, The Wind bloweth where it liſteth, and we hear the Sound thereof, but know not whence it comes, nor whither it goes; which is not ſpoken of the Regenerate Man's not knowing how he is Regenerated, but that other Men know it not with all their Wiſdom and Knowledge, that are not Spiritually illuminated and experienced in the ſame Work: Anſwerable to that Place in the Revelations of John, That he that overcomes, ſhall have a White Stone, and a New Name, that none ſhall know but he that has it, that is, but ſuch Conquerors: For they that are overcome of the World, can never taſte or judge of the Rewards of thoſe that do overcome it.

And very ſorry I am for this Oppoſer, that he allows Man no Spiritual Senſes, or that which anſwers to our Outward Senſes; and if he does, ſurely they are to See, Hear, Smell, Taſte and Feel ſomething elſe than himſelf. How groſs then is 1695. his Poſition, p. 37. But this I may ſay, that neither is the Illuminating, or Renewing, or Regenerating, or any other Divine Inſpiration, immediately perceptible to any Senſe, inward or outward, in Human Nature; and if ſo, 'tis certain none of theſe can be a Light within us. But why it is not ſo, he has not told us, he cannot tell us, nor any Man elſe. To all which I ſhall oppoſe a few Scriptures, and then attend his Abuſe of (thoſe I cited in my Key, and) me, for the Application of them.

That there is another Light and Spirit that attend Men, than the Effects of the Perceptive Faculties of their own Minds, as this Man calls it, I urge that Paſſage in Geneſis, 6. 3 My Spirit ſhall not always ſtrive with Men. A plain Proof that God ſtrove with the Old World by his Holy Spirit, which could not be if they had it not, or were unſenſible of any ſuch Thing, Nehemiah 9. 20. It is ſaid, That God gave them his good Spirit, but they rebelled againſt it, therefore they had it. David prays that God would not take his Holy Spirit from him, which ſhews it was with him, and that not as a Prophet, but ordinarily ſpeaking; for his Tranſgreſſion was too heinous for that Dignity without a Courſe of Repentance, and a Reſtoration to his former State, which in the ſame Pſalm he prays for: But 'tis evident, as bad as he was, he had yet the Holy Spirit in that Senſe, in which we aſſert a Meaſure of it to be given to all to profit with, as the Apoſtle ſpeaks, 1 Cor. 12. 7. Elſe he could not have ſaid, And take not thy Holy Spirit from me; as much as to ſay, for if thou doſt utterly deprive me of it, I ſhall grow Dark, Hard and Impenitent, and be undone for ever.

The Lord, by the Prophet Iſaiah, proves, That his Spirit ſhould ſucceſſively attend his People; Theſe are his Words. And for me, this is my Covenant with them, ſaith the Lord, my Spirit that is upon thee, (Chriſt) and my Words which I have put in thy Mouth, ſhall not depart out of thy Mouth, nor out of the Mouth of thy Seed's Seed, ſaith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever, Ch. 59. 21. And, I pray, who are Chriſt's Seed, and Off-ſpring, but true Chriſtians? and, as ſuch, they are intituled to this Promiſe, and therefore have the Spirit of God, and the freſh and living Revelation of it, whoſe Words are Spirit and Life.

Thus the Prophet, Chap. 44. 3. I will pour Water upon him that is Thirſty, and Floods upon the dry Ground: I will pour my Spirit upon thy Seed, and my Bleſſing upon thine Off-ſpring. A moſt ample and cloſe Proof to my Point, That God gives his Spirit to Men, and that there is ſomething more than the Light of Reading and Hearing of Men and Books, or the Perceptive Faculty of the Mind, to inſtruct Men. And that, not only in extraordinary Caſes, and on ſingular and eminent Occaſions, which our Opponent allows, as to Moſes, the Prophets and Apoſtles, but ordinarily, commonly, ſucceſſively: For to that the Text plainly reaches.

The Prophet Joel is yet more comprehenſive, ch. 2. 28. And it ſhall come to paſs afterwards, that I will pour out my Spirit upon all Fleſh; Young and Old, Hand-Maids and Servants: No Age, no Sex, no Degree ſhall be exempted. The Apoſtle Peter apply'd this very Text to the Dawning of the Primitive Chriſtian Days, as then begun to be accompliſhed, Acts 2. 17. Not that that which befel the Apoſtles and Diſciples of Jeſus in that Time, was the compleat Anſwering of that Prophecy, for that was not all Fleſh. Beſides, the very ſame Apoſtle, in the ſame Sermon, Ver. 39, tells his Auditors, that were made up of no leſs than Fourteen ſeveral Nations, That the Promiſe was to them and to their Children, and to all that were afar off, whom the Lord ſhould call; So that the Gifts of the Spirit were the Fulfilling of the Goſpel-Promiſe, and conſequently the Great Goſpel-Privilege and Qualification.

The Apoſtle Paul tells us, Rom. 8, That there is an abſolute Neceſſity that People ſhould have the Spirit of God dwelling in them, and that they ſhould be led and conducted by it, or they cannot be the Children of God. Ver. 1, There is no Condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus, who walk not after the Fleſh but after the Spirit. Here it is the Chriſtian Rule.

Again, Ver. 12. But if the Spirit of him that raiſed Jeſus from the Dead, DWELL IN YOU, he that raiſed up Chriſt from the Dead, ſhall alſo quicken your Mortal Bodies, by his Spirit, that dwelleth in you: So that the Indwelling of the Spirit did quicken and comfort the Ancient Chriſtians, and was Apoſtolical Doctrine.

Again, Ver. 14, 15, 16. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God; which they cannot be if they have it not: For ye have not received ceived the Spirit of Bondage again to Fear, but the Spirit of Adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father. The Spirit it ſelf beareth Witneſs with our Spirit, that we are the Children of God; ſo that it is plain they had the Spirit. And I wonder what Witneſs Chriſtians muſt have now, that they are the Children of God, if not the ſame Spirit, ſince if this Adverſary ſay true, there is no ſuch Gift common to Chriſtians now, but only the Notices God has given to all, of his Thoughts and Mind, by Creation and Scripture. But, alas! too apparent it is that this Man knows little of the Working of God's Spirit, that ſo unſpiritually ſpeaks of it. Did not our bleſſed Lord ſay, John 3. 5, That unleſs Man be born of the Spirit, he could not enter into the Kingdom of God. Was this only for the Primitive Times? Then Men ever ſince have not been ſaveable, for they have wanted the Means of Salvation, to wit, REGENERATION. And if Regeneration be neceſſary to all, how can a Man be rationally ſaid to be born of the Spirit, and not to have the Spirit he is born of; or be (as Peter phraſeth it) a Partaker of the DIVINE Nature, 2 Pet. 1. 4. But more than this, Chriſt told his Diſciples, That the Spirit of Truth he would ſend them, though it ſhould be a Comforter to them that believed in him, and followed him, yet it ſhould Reprove the World of Sin; which could not be, if the World had not ſuch a Meaſure of the Spirit, as to reprove them in their Evil-doing. And indeed all that will be ſerious and reflect, muſt confeſs, from Experience, they have enough of it to reprove them for that which is Evil, and to bear a true and faithful Witneſs againſt every Evil Way.

Memorable is that Second Chapter of the Apoſtle, in his firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, a worldly-wiſe People, whoſe Faculties were as perceptive as our Opponent's, I doubt not, concerning the Office, Efficacy and Neceſſity of the Holy Spirit, to know God and our Duty to Him, in order to Salvation.

And what has been ſaid of the Holy Spirit, may be ſaid of the Divine Light: As one of the earlieſt Books in Scripture tells us: Job 24. 13. They are of thoſe, ſays Job, ſpeaking of the Wicked, that rebel againſt the Light. Then they had it: And if They had it, all had it: For to be ſure the Righteous were not without it.

Again, The Spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord, Prov. 20. 27, but it muſt be lighted by that Light we ſpeak of, or it is a dark Candle. Now God lights the Candle of the Wicked, much more is he the Light of the Candle of the Righteous.

Again, he ſays, How often is the Candle of the Wicked put out: Job 21. 17. Prov. 13. 9. Which ſhews it is often lighted; and if They have the Light, the Righteous, to be ſure, are not without it: For, The Way of the Juſt is a ſhining Light, which ſhines more and more to the perfect Day. Obedience to Light received, encreaſes Light. Now, if the Way of the Juſt be a ſhining Light, to be ſure the Light is Saving, or is the Way to Salvation: And ſo the beloved Diſciple has it, Revel. 21. The Nations of them that are ſaved ſhall walk in the Light.

David ſays alſo, in Proof of our Point, The Lord is my Light and my Salvation, Pſal. 27. 1. Then he had an higher and clearer Light than his own perceptive Faculties.

Again, Thy Word is a Light to my Feet, and a Lanthorn to my Paths, Pſal. 119. 105. Which was an Inward and Spiritual Word, for it was ſuch an one as he could find in his Heart, according to Moſes, Deut. 3. and the Apoſtle, Rom. 10.

David alſo, Pſal. 42, prayed, that the Lord would ſend forth his Light and his Truth, which were the ſame Thing, that it might lead and bring People to his Holy Hill and Tabernacle. This was more than Man, or what was of Man's Conſtitution or Compoſition: More than the Perceptive Faculties of the Mind.

Moreover, God declared by the Prophet Iſaiah, That he had given Chriſt for a Light to lighten the Gentiles; which was more than Man's Wit or Underſtanding, to be ſure. And tho' Chriſt was a Light in his Doctrine, Miracles and Example, yet he was and is a Light within alſo, to enlighten the Mind, as John 1. 4. 9. with many more, before obſerved. And this Light and Spirit are of the ſame Principle, or the ſame Principle that is both Spirit and Light, tho' it may be, ſtrictly ſpeaking, not both in one and the ſame Act or Operation, as has been already noted. Nevertheleſs, the Scripture makes them to have one Operation, comparing John 16. 7. with Eph. 5. 13. For the firſt makes it the Office of the Spirit to convince the World of Sin, and the latter Place tells us, That whatever is reproved is made manifeſt by the Light: And the Apoſtle gives this for the Reaſon, becauſe, 1695. becauſe, ſays he, whatever makes manifeſt is Light: An Aſſertion that can never be denied. And as true it is that it muſt be a Divine Light, that reveals Divine Truths. And becauſe it is neceſſary that all ſhould know them for their Salvation, ſince God would have all come to the Knowledge of the Truth, and be ſaved, the Conſequence muſt be good, that all have this Divine Light, more or leſs; for Salvation, tho' all don't obey it.

I might proceed to enumerate Scriptures through the Prophets, Evangeliſts and Epiſtles; but I think what I have ſaid is a double Portion: And therefore I recommend it to the candid Reader's ſerious Peruſal and Obſervation; and I doubt not but he will diſcern the Verity and Charity of our Principles, and the unjuſt Exceptions of our Opponent to them.

I come next to conſider his Cavils againſt our Citations of Scripture, and indeed againſt the Scripture it ſelf, which will not be hard to evince.

Page 41. He is angry, becauſe I ſay that Chriſt has enlightned Men with his own Light; calls this very hard Names, and ſays, 'tis the Quakers Apocrypha: But we abide by it; and are taught ſo to do by the Scriptures, that he would have the World believe we deny, and make Apocryphal. John 1. 4. In him (Chriſt) was Life, and the Life the Light of Men. Now if this be not Man's Light, and if this Light, which is the Life of the Word, be not the Light of the Word, let me be blamed: If it be, how prepoſterous muſt this Man be to uſe me ſo harſhly for a Truth ſo plain as well as important?

The next Scripture is that in Prov. 20. 27. The Spirit of Man is the Candle of the Lord, ſearching all the inward Parts of the Belly: That is, ſays he, the Spirit of Man, which God hath made, hath in it's Nature a Conſciouſneſs of all his Thoughts, Purpoſes and Counſels within him. But this Word Conſciouſneſs ſuppoſes a Knowledge, together with ſomething elſe, that gives us that Knowledge: It is the very Import of the Words: And what is that, but that Divine Light which gives Light to the Candle: For a Candle cannot light it ſelf, and by the Repetition of Sin, is ſaid to be often blown out. For tho' it cannot blow that Light out, it blows out it's Enlightnings. Thus Sin quenches the Spirit; that is, the Enlivenings and Quicknings of it, for the Spirit it ſelf cannot be quenched. Now this Note of his is ſo far from overthrowing our Uſe of this Scripture, that it eſtabliſhes it, and defeats him of the End he propoſed in oppoſing us.

Thus he abuſes us and that Paſſage of our Saviour Chriſt, If the Light that is in you be Darkneſs, how great is that Darkneſs? As if Chriſt meant any Light but that of Man's Miſtake and Preſumption, or that we could aſſert God to be that Light in us, which Chriſt ſaid might be Darkneſs: For this Man ſays, If the Light in us here mentioned was the Light that is good, the Suppoſal that it might poſſibly be Darkneſs, would be a blaſphemous Suppoſition. He is to be pity'd as well as reproved, that can rave after this Manner.

The Uſe I make of that Scripture, 2 Cor. 4. 6. God, that commanded the Light to ſhine out of Darkneſs, hath ſhined in our Hearts, to give the Light of the Knowledge of the Glory of God, in the Face of Jeſus Chriſt, was thus: That God had lighted the Hearts of Men, by breaking through the Darkneſs there, with his Divine Light. This Author, p. 43. limits this Light to the Apoſtles and Fellow-Labourers; and all the reſt are to ſee with their Eyes, and without that Divine Light in themſelves: In fine, to be concluded by their Authority, and not their own Conviction; for what he ſays centers there. Whereas the Apoſtle's Miſſion and Buſineſs, was to turn People from the Darkneſs (that was in themſelves) to the Light that had ſhined there uncomprehended: Alſo to be made manifeſt in their Preaching to the Conſciences of People; which could not be in Divine Truths without a Divine Light. I muſt leave this Way of our Opponent's treating of Scripture to my Reader's Conſideration.

Page 45 to 57. His next Abuſe is, that of John 1. 9. about which he beſtows Room for Reaſon, being no leſs than twelve Pages. He that can make more of them than theſe Three following Heads, has a better Underſtanding than mine.

1. That the Life that is come by Chriſt is, that we ſhall out-live the Grave; not that the Soul is made Spiritually alive to God, while in this World, by Divine Quicknings, to the Uſe of her Spiritual Senſations, that Sin had taken away, by bringing her under a Spiritual Lethargy or Death: Which, how agreeable it is to that Saying of Chriſt, John 8. 12. That they that follow him ſhould have the Light of Life; and, John 6. unleſs you eat my Fleſh and drink my Blood, you have no Life in you: (Which implies an Inward and Living State of the Mind towards God on this Side the Grave) I muſt alſo leave with my Conſiderate Reader, that has any Reliſh or Taſte of Divine Things.

2 The ſecond Thing he objects upon our Uſe of this Scripture, (John 1. 9.) is our making Coming into the World to refer to Man, and not to Chriſt; which, ſays he, is firſt a Redundancy of Speech, and next dangerous; for it is as if a Man came from another World into this. Now I would have this Critick know, if he can be ignorant of it, That divers Learned Proteſtant Commentators have taken that Way, as have ſome of the Fathers, and all the Tranſlators that I can compaſs, be it into the Latin Verſions, or our Vulgar European Tongues; as my Reader may pleaſe to ſee at large, in a Book of mine, called, The Spirit of Truth Vindicated, from p. 52 to p. 62. ſo that he muſt allow we are in good Company, if miſtaken; ſince ſo many Criticks and Commentators are with us; as Singular and Erroneous as he is pleaſed to repreſent us. But where is the Redundancy? Why, it is, that every Man would have ſerved without the Words coming into the World, which follow them. No Wonder he is ſo Churliſh to our Writings, that affords the Holy Scripture no more Reſpect. If he will read ſeveral Chapters of that belov'd Diſciple's Writings, and, indeed of many other of the Holy Penmen's, he may, if he pleaſe, make the like Exceptions. Thus that Saying of Job, uſed in the Liturgy, in the Office for the Dead, Man that is born of a Woman, &c. for, according to this Critick's Learning, Man had been enough, and the Addition, That is born of a Woman, dangerous; for that it implies there are Men that are not born of Women: Which I think would not mightily recommend his Skill or Judgment, as his Exception cannot juſtly impeach the Propriety of the Holy Scriptures. And if this Adverſary did believe that Chriſt made Man, he would believe he Enlightens him, as well as made him; and that the firſt Ten Verſes of that Chapter refer to his Divinity: What he was in himſelf, and what he was and is to Man, as the Word-God, by whom the whole World was made, and Man, in an excellent Manner, Enlightned, and this before any Mention is made of his Taking Fleſh, or coming of the Seed of Abraham.

3. But he would have Lighteth limited to Chriſt's Coming in the Fleſh, and that all were enlightned then by him: Now, I will not ſay, he was not a glorious Light in his Miniſtry and Miracles, in his Life and Sufferings; for if his Diſciples were by him called the Lights of the World, doubtleſs it may be better ſaid of him, their Lord and Original, That he was the Light of the World. But this hinders not that he ſhould be the Light of the World, in a more proper and immediate Manner, by his ſhining in the Underſtandings of Men, and giving them thereby the Knowledge of their Duty to God, and one to another. I muſt refer him to what I have ſaid in my former Book, upon this Head alſo; in Anſwer to one that deny'd the Pre-exiſtence of Chriſt, or that he had a Being before he was born of the Virgin Mary; in whoſe Steps this Man ſeems to tread. If he will read from Page 62 to 86, and the Reaſons and numerous Authorities, theſe may perhaps perſwade him that the 9th Verſe of the firſt of John, wholly relates to the Word before he took Fleſh, and as he is the immediate Enlightner of the Souls of Men. In him was Life, and the Life the Light of Men, Verſe 4. This was neither Sun, Moon, nor Stars; nor yet the Effect of the Perceptive Faculties of our Souls, nor yet any Outward and Miniſterial Light whatever; of all which I leave the ſober Reader to judge.

Page 52, 53. As for the groſs Abſurdity that he would run us into, of being Be-Godded and Be-Chriſted, according to our Principle, he has ſhewn ſufficiently he does not underſtand it, and therefore no Matter for his wild Conſequences, by which he would diſgrace it: But if by being Be-Chriſted, we are to underſtand Divine Kindred and Memberſhip, through true Chriſtening, which is the Anoynting, 1 John 2. 20, 27. we ſhall not ſhrink from the Word, becauſe of his Out-cries at us for it. I have already declared what we intend by being Enlightned, and that our Principle is not capable of any of the wild Inferences, this Man, through great Ignorance or Malice, charges upon it. But before I leave this Head, I muſt obſerve one Diſtinction of his, Page 54, 55, 56. That to himſelf, doubtleſs, looks very apt and determining, viz. That we are not enlightned by what God is, but what God does. This is upon my ſaying, That God enlightens Men with his own Light; calling me all to Naught for that Phraſe, as Unſcriptural, and of a meditated Temperament, to amuſe my Readers with: Rendring the Light, which we ſay true Chriſtians ought to walk by, to be no otherwiſe God's own Light, than the Sun and the Rain are his own Sun and Rain: Not of his Nature, but of his Creation 1695. tion only; that I take to be his Meaning, a little Plainer than he has expreſſed it. To which I reply, in that famous and ſuitable Text of the beloved Diſciple, 1 Joh. 1. 5, 6, 7. This then is the Meſſage which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, That God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all; if we ſay that we have Fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we lye and do not the Truth: But if we walk in the Light as he is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt his Son cleanſeth us from all Sin. Here I leave him to conſider of this Light; whether it be a Created One: Such an One, as is not what God is, but what God does; and ſhall attend his Perverſion of my preſent Uſe, and our Common Senſe of ſeveral Scriptures, cited in Favour of our Inward Principle: And then ſhall conclude my Reply to his pretended Anſwer, to that Part of my Key, which relates to the Light within.

That I may make the Point plainer to the Reader, I ſhall firſt lay down the Perverſion mentioned in my Key, then our Principle upon it, with thoſe Scriptures, he takes Occaſion to twiſt and turn from our true Senſe and End in citing them, and of which he is ſo conſcious to himſelf, that to anticipate my Reply, he gives it for me, as I ſhall anon obſerve, and not a great Way from our true Senſe.

Perverſ. The Quakers hold, That the Light within them is God, Chriſt, and the Holy Spirit; ſo that every Quaker has whole God, Chriſt and Holy Spirit in him; which is groſs Blaſphemy. Key, p. 2, 3.

By this my Reader will ſee what we except againſt, viz. The Blaſphemy of making every Quaker comprehend whole God and Chriſt, and Holy Spirit in him. Now I muſt deſire him to obſerve what our Principle ſays to this Suggeſtion.

Principle. “ This is alſo a Miſtake of their Belief: They never ſaid, That “ every Divine Illumination or Manifeſtation of Chriſt, in the Hearts of Men, was “ whole God, Chriſt, or the Spirit; whereby to be guilty of that Groſs and Blaſ-“ phemous Abſurdity, ſome would faſten upon them: But that God, who is “ Light, or the Word-Chriſt, who is Light, the Quickning Spirit, and God over “ all, bleſſed for ever, hath enlightened Mankind with a Meaſure of Saving “ Light: So that the Illumination is from Chriſt, the Divine Word; but not there“ fore whole God or Chriſt, in every Man, any more than the whole Sun or Air is
“ in every Houſe or Chamber. There are no ſuch harſh and unſcriptural Words
“ in their Writings: It is only a frightful Perverſion of ſome of their Enemies, to “ bring a Scandal upon their Holy Faith. Yet, in a Senſe, the Scriptures ſay it,
“ and that is their (the Quakers) Senſe, in which they only ſay the ſame Thing.
“ He that is with you ſhall be in you: I will not leave you Comfortleſs, I will come
“ to you: I in them, and they in us: Chriſt in us, the Hope of Glory: Unleſs “ Chriſt be in you, ye are Reprobates. Little Children, of whom I travail in Birth “ again, until Chriſt be formed in you.

This is my Explanation of our Principle, about the Light, from the Perverſions of our Adverſaries: By which the uncandid Dealing of this Man muſt be very obvious; ſince, beſides his Silence, and that he ſeems to ſhut his Eyes to our Explanation and Vindication of what we hold, from what he charges, he doubles the Perverſions, by Changing and Miſgiving the End for which the Scriptures were cited by me: For he makes us to quote them, to prove what we expreſly deny, as a falſe Charge upon us; and carries them, at leaſt beyond, if not againſt the Intent and Reaſon of their Quotations, which he knows deſerves a black Name, ſince they were never quoted to prove whole God and Chriſt to be in every Man, or to be ſo in any Man: But that God, Chriſt and the Spirit were in ſome near Manner in the People of God. For the very Perverſion runs it no farther than the People called Quakers; that every one of us are ſuggeſted to have whole God, and whole Chriſt, and the Spirit in us: Which is to improve, as I ſaid before, upon the very Perverſion.

Hear him, Pag. 58. Chriſt ſays not here, that any Man, except his Diſciples, ſhall have him in them; that Chriſt is in none but thoſe that are in him; that he is not in Reprobates, ſo not in every Man; that he was not in the Galatians; that they muſt be new Creatures that have him; ſo all againſt W. P's Purpoſe. But what was my Purpoſe, I pray? Hear the Key again.

“ Yet, in a Senſe, the Scriptures ſay it, and that is their (the Quakers) Senſe,
“ in which they only ſay the ſame Thing. What fair or wiſe Adverſary would have been guilty of ſo ill a Thing, and ſo eaſily to be detected? Is any Thing plainer than, Firſt, That every Quaker, and not every Man is in the Perverſion?

Secondly, That I deny, in the Name of that People, any ſuch Blaſphemous Principle, as that every Quaker has whole God in him, but much the contrary; explaining our Principle, of which he takes no Notice. Thirdly, That yet we own God, Chriſt and Holy Spirit to be in the People call'd Quakers; but that it is according to a Senſe: In what Senſe do I ſay it? Why, the Senſe in which the Scriptures ſay it.

Now, Reader, judge thou, and not I, what to call this Man, that with ſo much Falſhood obtrudes upon us, the untrueſt Things and unworthieſt Abuſes, for the Principles of the People call'd Quakers. And to ſhew him to himſelf yet more plainly: he has provided me with the means of doing of it, which I toucht upon before, viz. That the Quakers uſe to ſay, None but Believers have Chriſt in Union, but all others have Chriſt in them. Which at leaſt gives away the Point: For if Chriſt be in ſome Senſe or other in every Man, yet he is not ſaid by me to be in the foregoing Scriptures, in any but Believers. And he makes too bold with us alſo, in ſaying, in our Name, That Chriſt is in all Men; for we chuſe rather to expreſs our ſelves otherwiſe, as, That a Manifeſtation of Chriſt is in every Man, or that the Light of Chriſt is within every Man; and in ſo ſaying, I have, by many plain Scriptures prov'd, That we ſpeak but the Truth, and that which is every Man's Bleſſing: And it were well all would prize it, and live up to it. For that is the Gift of God to Men for their Salvation, and the Convictions of it, the Day of their Viſitation, and tho' Tradition, Form and Formality, in many Countries, as well as Wickedneſs, having darkned the Underſtandings of People, ſo that they ſeem more Solicitous about their Forms, than zealouſly obedient to this Divine Principle; yet there is none without a Senſe of the Reproofs and Convictions of it, more or leſs at one Time or other: Which cannot be without Light, ſince all that is reprov'd is made manifeſt by the Light, Eph. 5. 13. But before I cloſe this Subject, I muſt touch upon his Interpretation of ſome of thoſe Texts before cited. p. 58. 59.

He ſays this Paſſage of the Apoſtle's, Chriſt in us, the Hope of Glory, is againſt me, becauſe it was only to Believers that he wrote. Grant it, yet why may not Chriſt be a Condemner in the Conſciences of the Wicked, as well as the Hope of Glory in Believers? However, it is not againſt me, ſince I cited it only to ſhew the Enjoyment of Believers: And ſince he allows Chriſt to be in Believers, I hope his Light and Spirit are there with him, which is more than the Effects of the perceptive Powers of their Souls, or outward Miniſterial Help in the Buſineſs of Religion; a Thing he has ſo often denyed to any but the Holy Penmen, and here and there an extraordinary Perſon, that has had the Power of Miracles, to confirm the Truth of their Inſpiration: For if he has given us his Son, how much more with him ſhall he give us all Things? So that our Adverſary has herein granted what he has ſo often denyed and oppoſed.

The like in that Paſſage of the Apoſtle to the Corinthians, 2 Cor. 13. 15. Unleſs Chriſt be in you, you are Reprobates. This, ſays he, proves, no Reprobates have Chriſt in them; How then is Chriſt in every Man, if he be in none of theſe? But then ſay I, he is in all but Reprobates by this Man's Conceſſion: And we can ſay no more. For if by Reprobates we are to underſtand a Judas's State; a ſeared Conſcience; one that has abſolutely crucified to himſelf afreſh the Lord of Life and Glory, and has ſinned the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt: In ſhort, an Apoſtate or an obſtinate Oppoſer, and Perverter of the right Way of the Lord; then, I ſay, our Principle of Chriſt being in ſome Senſe in every Man (viz. as a Light lightning every Man) receives no Diſadvantage from his Objection: For, therefore, Reprobates have not Chriſt; becauſe they have finally blown out the Candle, extinguiſh'd Conſcience, and are become dead to all Senſe of Religion; which is becauſe they have outliv'd the Day of God's Love and Mercy to them: They would not be gathered; they would have none of him; they would not have this Man to reign over them. But then all others, by this Text, and this Man's arguing from it, have Chriſt in them; and ſo it makes greatly for us, ſince it plainly concludes, That if all that have not Chriſt in them are Reprobates, then thoſe that are not Reprobates have Chriſt in them; but ſuch is every Man that cometh into the World, therefore every Man that cometh into the World hath Chriſt in him. For, to be ſure, Men come not Reprobates into the World. They have a Day of Grace; God calls; his Spirit ſtrives; his Long-Suffering waiteth, as in the Days of Noah, for their Repentance. And this is that which will give the greateſt Weight in the Scale againſt the Rebellious, at the great Judgment, that they had a Talent; a Seed was ſown, Grace did appear, and all had Light, but ſuch lov'd Darkneſs rather than Light, because their Deeds were evil. The laſt Scripture he would turn upon us, is that in the Galatians; 1695. ans; My little Children, of whom I travel in Birth again until Chriſt be formed in you: Upon which he ſays, The Perſons ſpoken to then, had not Chriſt in them. Thus does this Man walk in a Circle, and contradict himſelf. One Time all but Reprobates have Chriſt; another while the Galatians, tho' not Reprobates, had him not. But when he conſiders that there is a grert Difference between a Seed, and an Ear, a Plant and a Tree, he may better underſtand the Apoſtle, and what he now ſays. For the poor Man, after ſo often allowing Chriſt to be in the People of God, ſays. Pag. 59. But neither in Believers is Chriſt a Light within. I wonder then what he is there, ſince he is the Light of the World, Joh. 1. 4. 9. and that true Light that lighteth every Man that cometh into the World; and yet not to be a Light within Man, tho' he be within Man, is ſurprizing. I ſhall leave it with my Reader, to do our Principle Juſtice; and I hope he will find Reaſon to think I have aſſerted no Errors, nor prevaricated with my Friends, nor loſt my Point, nor acted with Leger-de-main, or Meditated Temperament to deceive; and that all the Wards of my Key, after his many Strainings, Wreſtings and Forcings, keep their Places, and anſwer the End for which the Key was firſt made (viz.) To open to every Common Underſtanding, the Difference between the Principles of the People called Quakers, and the Perverſions and Miſrepreſentations of their Enemies: Wiſhing this Adverſary, for all his Scoffs, Scurrility and Abuſe, upon us and our Religion, Repentance to Salvation.

PAge 62. To their (the Quakers) Scruple about Oaths I ſhall only hint theſe few Thoughts, becauſe True Speaking is not only a Part of Honeſty, but Religion; therefore not only Honeſty, but Religion is engaged, with it's full Force to ſupport it ſelf: But if a Man engage all his Religion for the Support of a true Speech, he takes an Oath.

If this be true arguing, then we ſwear as often as we ſay Yea and Nay in Evidence; ſince we acknowledge we ſtake the Credit of our Religion and Conſcience for the Verity of it; and then methinks there needs no Diſpute in the Matter: For it is certain we do, and that Swearers can do no more: And ſince that is our Principle, it is as binding on us, as Swearing is upon thoſe that give themſelves the Liberty of Swearing, But pray let us hear what follows. I ſhall not, (ſays he) inſiſt upon the Nature of an Oath, but conſider it's Place in the Political State of Chriſt's Kingdom.

If he will not inſiſt upon the Nature of an Oath, I have no Reaſon to inſiſt upon the Uſe or Diſuſe of it at this Time; ſince here it is an arguing upon an Individuum Vagum, a Nothing. He ſhould firſt have aſcertained us, what an Oath is; and when that had been adjuſted and ſetled, then he ſhould have proved ſuch an Oath Lawful, and us unreaſonable for refuſing it upon all Accounts. However, I will both obſerve and anſwer his Notions of it.

Firſt, he ſays, He cannot underſtand how Swearing can be wholly put down, where People may Swear by Law, as in England. True, unleſs that Law be repealed, that requires it. But it is a great Bull to ſay, That they who make a Law can't repeal it. If the Legiſlative Power is pleaſed to make Yea and Nay have the Force and Acceptance of an Oath, they may have it in any Government, and that is what the People call'd Quakers deſire in this, for all of their Communion; and to ſhew him how much he is miſtaken, the higheſt Judicature in England ſits upon Honour and not Oaths, viz. The Houſe of Lords: So Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, that judge Life, are rarely, if ever, upon Oath. So that I have herein anſwered his Queſtion, p. 63. If an Order againſt all Swearing were not, Ipſo Jure, Void. He carries it higher than any Body ever did, that I have met with. It is with him the great Hinge or Axletree upon which Religion turns; and explodes my Reaſon as Falſe, that I gave for the Riſe of Oaths, viz. Want of Faith, either in him that Swears, or in him to whom the Oath is Sworn.

For, ſays he, God the Father Swears to the Son, Heb. 7. where there is infinite Faithfulneſs on both Sides.

But to this I ſay, That, ſtrictly ſpeaking, God cannot be ſaid to Swear, for he that Swears, Swears by the Greater, Heb. 6. 16. So that it is call'd Swearing, that it might ſtrike Unbelieving Man with the greater Aſſurance of God's Love to him. And tho' there was Infinite Faithfulneſs between God and Chriſt, yet it referring to Man, it is termed an Oath, to heighten and augment Man's Credit and Confidence in God, as to the Means of his Salvation, and not that God did properly Swear, or can do ſo.

But he tells us, That Chriſt anſwered upon Adjuration before a Judge, which is the way of Swearing in our Engliſh Courts.

I cannot allow it, ſince he does not prove that Chriſt Swore in his Anſwer; for all he ſaid was, Thou haſt ſaid, Mat. 26. 63. Now that is putting it back to the High Prieſt; as if he had ſaid, What need I anſwer that upon Oath, which thou thy ſelf ſay'ſt? Doſt thou firſt accuſe me, and then query to confirm it? Thou haſt ſaid. But next, if it be ſaid, That it was an Anſwer uſual, and the Propriety or Peculiarity of that Language, ſo to ſpeak, he ſhould have proved it: For as the Words are in the Scripture, there appears no Oath in them: But if it were as he ſays, which I cannot grant, yet it concludes nothing againſt us; for as he was in the State of a Servant, a Jew of the Jews, made and born under the Law, Gal. 4. 4. He was to fulfil the Righteouſneſs of it, and ſo might act as a Jew; as he did in the Inſtance of Circumciſion, the Paſſover, &c. Yet after his Reſurrection we hear nothing of an Oath, any more in Example than in Doctrine, that, with all other Cuſtoms of the Jews, that in old Time were practis'd, was, as it were, left with the Grave Cloaths behind, and he aſcended, in his Evangelical Righteouſneſs and Glory, Triumphing over Principalities and Powers, and vanquiſhing Hell, Death and the Grave, and brought in a better Hope, Sanctuary and Tabernacle, where Yea and Nay ſucceeded and ſuperſeded all Oaths. So that the very Baſis this Man builds upon is unſound, and his Premiſes precarious. How then can he build well, or conclude rightly againſt us? But he ſays, The Angels Swear, which I conceive is more than he knows; for no Body can think by his Writings he is very converſant with good Angels. However, I grant that the Angels have ſworn, but that is no Reaſon to continue Oaths among Men, if Chriſt, the Bleſſed Author of the Chriſtian Religion hath forbid them: For the Angels, as well as Men muſt worſhip him, Heb. 1. 6. and therefore Chriſt and not the Angels are to be follow'd by us; but whenever an Angel hath Sworn, it hath been in Condeſcenſion to the Incredulity and Diffidence of Man, and to heighten his Credit of the Mind and Will of God; and is therefore an Inſtance for us, becauſe it refers to a low and imperfect State, propoſed as an Expedient and Remedy againſt Untruth; which is out of the Queſtion, Truth leaving no Room for Swearing, which in it's Nature is but a Terrifying of the Mind into true Speaking; as in ſome Countries, in Default of Evidence, they uſe Racks to extort Confeſſions from the ſuſpected Parties: An Inſtance of which we have near us, in the Scotch Boots and Thummikins.

He alledges alſo, That the Apoſtles Swore; but he has not mention'd any one of them, nor any Place; However, that I may not leave my Reader as much in the Dark as he has done his, I refer him to my Book, entitul'd, The Spirit of Truth Vindicated, from page 86, to page 91. where he may ſee how much ſofter Tranſlations may be given of the Apoſtle's Expreſſions, than that of our Vulgar Verſion. Nevertheleſs, thoſe extraordinary Ways of Speaking were in extraordinary Caſes, and cannot be a Rule to others, but under the ſame Circumſtances and Authority: And till this Author has given us an Authentick Definition of an Oath, he cannot juſtly call the Apoſtle's Expreſſions, Oaths, or Proofs of Oaths; unleſs he will allow that binding any Affirmation, or Negation, by the Name of the Lord, is an Oath; but if that were the Caſe, it differs mightily, to uſe the Name of the Lord to inforce the Verity of Divine Things, and to make it a Witneſs and Voucher for us in our Low and Temporal Affairs: A Diſtinction as old as ſome of the moſt Eminent Fathers of the Primitive Ages of the Church.

But he adds, That all Chriſtians take Sacramental Oaths: Which is not True in Fact; for among the Proteſtants of the Low Countries, there is a Great People, Who in any Caſe will not Swear, as well as we, and yet we know no other Name, Blood, Power and Spirit by which we can be Saved, than That of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Again, many of the Followers of John Wickliff, would not Swear in any Caſe; and divers alſo of our Engliſh Martyrs refuſed to Swear, upon the ſame Principle. And if this Man will call to Mind, he may remember, that ſome of the Beſt of the Ancient Fathers were of the ſame Judgment; believing it Unlawful for a Chriſtian Man to take an Oath; which in my Treatiſe of Oaths may be ſeen at large.

Now, for what he alledges, Why Chriſt's Prohibition, Mat. 5. doth not extend to all Oaths, I think it will not be hard to ſhew it is ſlight, and concludes nothing againſt us.

Firſt, He ſays, the Expreſſion whereby the particular Law is ſuppos'd to forbid all Oaths, does frequently, in the Law-Books, ſignifie no more than Falſe Oaths, or Swearing otherwiſe amiſs; as may be ſeen by comparing Matth. 5. 34. with Levit. 5. 1. Eccleſ. 9. 2. Jer. 23. 10. Zach. 5. 3. Hoſ. 4. 2. But this is rather againſt him than for him; ſince if Chriſt only forbids what was not Lawful before, his Righteouſneſs riſes no higher than that of the Law of Moſes. But it is plain from the Text, Mat. 5. that Chriſt forbids ſuch Swearing as was Lawful before, and therefore more than the Texts before-mention'd expreſs.

Secondly, Page 64. He limits Chriſt's Prohibition to thoſe Oaths which had no Sacredneſs in them, but which the Phariſees thought they might make and Violate without Impiety. This alſo is a meer Conjecture, for which he offers us no Proof; the contrary being evident, as before; for Chriſt treated of Oaths that were to be perform'd to the Lord, Were they not then Sacred?

But, Thirdly, for his Third Particular, it is as unintelligible as his Gypſie Gibberiſh in Page 10. and he muſt explain it before it can be anſwerable.

His Fourth Particular is this, When he divides this Prohibition into it's Parts, Mat. 5. 35, 36. He does not divide it as againſt Swearing in all Caſes, but ſets the Bounds of his Diſtribution directly to oppoſe this corrupt Gloſs of the Phariſees; for he doth not ſay, Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid, Ye ſhall Swear in Truth, in Righteouſneſs and in Judgment; But I ſay unto you, Swear not at all; for ſo far as concern'd Swearing by God, the Phariſees Doctrine was Sound: But what does Chriſt ſay? Why I ſay unto you, Swear not all; neither by Heaven, nor by Earth, or Jeruſalem, or the Head. Directly contrary to Swearing by the Temple, the Altar, the Heavens, which the Phariſees taught to be Lawful to do, and not be bound by ſuch Kind of Oaths. Which in my Opinion is very Weak and Groſs; for if it be plain, as it is, that Chriſt forbad ſuch Oaths as Men ought not to break, but to perform to the Lord, then it was not ſuch Oaths as the Phariſees taught to be Lawful to take, and not be bound by them when they had done. So that he forbids ſuch Oaths, as he ſays, The Phariſees Doctrine was Sound in; becauſe it was what they ought not to break, but perform to the Lord: So that Chriſt was ſo far from limiting his Prohibition to the Phariſees Oaths, by Heaven, Earth, Jeruſalem, or the Head; which this Man ſays they made not Obligatory, that he forbids them, by forbidding thoſe Oaths, that according to the Ancient Doctrine of the Jewiſh-Law, Men ought not to break, but perform to the Lord; that as every Major includes it's Minor, ſo Chriſt by his Prohibition of the Uſe of Lawful Oaths, includes the Prohibition of the Practice of Unlawful Oaths.

Page 67. His Fifth Allegation is every Whit as much beſide the Matter as what he ſaid before, viz. That Chriſt did not condemn Swearing by Jeruſalem, the Throne, the Foot-Stool, &c. Holily, but as Vainly and Unholily uſed: Which is to exceed the Bounds of all other Writers; ſo very heartily does this Man love Swearing. But now I muſt tell him, that he has much wreſted the Text, and perverted the plain and obvious Senſe of it, and miſ-repreſented the Mind and Doctrine of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for it is evident to every conſiderate Reader, that Chriſt in that Chapter was not reproving what was Reproveable under the Law; nor was he exhorting his Auditors and Diſciples to live up to the Righteouſneſs of it, which was the Way of the Prophets, that were under that Diſpenſation; but Chriſt plainly introduces a New One; even the Diſpenſation of the Goſpel, the Righteouſneſs of his Kingdom; and that is the Difference between them, as in the Caſe of Killing, Adultery, &c. As well as of Swearing, Mat. 5. 21, 22, 27, 28, 33, 34. Ye have heard that it was ſaid to them of Old Time, thou ſhalt not Kill; but I ſay unto you, that whoſoever is Angry with his Brother without a Cauſe, ſhall be in Danger of the Judgment; Yea, whoſoever ſhall ſay, Thou Fool, ſhall be in Danger of Hell-Fire. Ye have heard that it was ſaid, by them of Old Time, Thou ſhalt not commit Adultery; but I ſay unto you, That whoſoever looketh upon a Woman to Luſt after her, hath committed Adultery with her already in his Heart. Again, Ye have heard that it hath been ſaid of Old Time, Thou ſhalt not Forſwear thy ſelf, but ſhalt perform thy Oaths to the Lord; but I ſay unto you, Swear not all. Now I would fain know if Chriſt's Prohibition goes no farther than Moſes's; and, if he does not intend by theſe Words, That the Righteouſneſs of the Goſpel ſhould exceed that of the Law: The Parallel runs thus: Thou ſhalt not Kill, thou ſhalt not commit Adultery, ſays Moſes: Thou ſhalt not be Angry, thou ſhalt not Luſt, ſays Chriſt. Now this was no falſe Gloſs of the Phariſees in that Time, which Chriſt reprehended or reformed, as this Adverſary would ſuppoſe; but a plain Improvement upon the Righteouſneſs of the Law, viz. Thou ſhalt not Forſwear thy ſelf, but ſhalt perform to the Lord thine Oaths, ſays Moſes. But I ſay unto you, Swear not all, ſays Chriſt; neither by Heaven, for it is God's Throne; nor by the Earth, for it is His Footſtool; neither by Jeruſalem, nor thy Head, but let your Communication be Yea, Yea; Nay, Nay; for whatſoever is more than theſe, cometh of Evil. Upon which even Beza ſays, That by Forſwearing, We are not to underſtand a Falſe Oath, but that it is Beſt not to Swear at all. And that what Speech is of an higher Nature than this, is too much, and cometh of Evil; and Tremellius, out of Maimonides, ſays, He is the Beſt Man that will upon no Account Swear. And the Annotation upon this Place, of a Tranſlation, Anno 1599, ſays, Whatever ye Vouch, Vouch it barely; and whatſoever ye Deny, Deny it barely, without any more Words; that is, Let your Affirming and Denying be Simple, and upon the Authority of your own Word and Truth, without going about to bind it by the Authority of a Greater and Holier Thing, which is not a Bare and Simple, but a Compounded Speech, and ſo more than Yea, Yea; and Nay, Nay; and therefore cometh of Evil. To which that Paſſage of the Apoſtle James aptly refers, Jam. 5. 12. But above all Things my Brethren Swear not, neither by Heaven, nor by Earth, nor by any other Oath; which is to ſay, As by nothing elſe, ſo not by God: But let your Yea, be Yea; and Nay, Nay; Leſt ye fall into Condemnation.

One would think this Man had hardly ever read the Bible, to make Oaths ſo Eſſential a Part of the Religion and Kingdom of Chriſt; when Chriſt Himſelf makes it a Part of the Righteouſneſs of His Kingdom, Not to Swear at all. Or is it Candid in him, to limit Chriſt's Prohibition to the then Falſe Gloſſes of the Phariſees, when Chriſt looks over their Heads, back to the very Decalogue, or Ten Commandments, for an Inſtance, to ſhew, by Compariſon, how much the Righteouſneſs of his Kingdom excels that of the Law, that came by Moſes. I could wiſh there was no Thing but Weakneſs to be charged upon this Man, in this Particular; but his Abilities look too conſiderable elſewhere, for that; as well as his Diſingenuity too frequent; not to conclude it of a Meditated Temperament to force the Text, rather than not have his Ends upon us: But with what Succeſs he has managed it, We muſt leave to the Judicious Reader.

His APPENDIX about Baptism, and the Lords-Supper, (ſo called) Conſidered; and the KEY, with the People called QUAKERS, Defended; againſt His Exceptions in thoſe Two Particulars.

OF Baptiſm he writes thus: Baptiſm is a Rite of Admiſſion into the Family of God, making Perſons Citizens of Heaven, and Free of the Kingdom of the Meſſias. It conſiſts of an Outward and Viſible Sign, and an Inward Spiritual Grace: Theſe are the Two Parts of the ſame Baptiſm, but not Two Baptiſms.

One would think that this Man had never read the Third of Matthew, or the Firſt of the Acts. For in the firſt John diſtinguiſhes his Baptiſm from Chriſt's, as plainly as he does his Perſon (viz.) I indeed Baptize you with Water to Repentance: But He that cometh after me, is Mightier than I, whoſe Shoes I am not worthy to bear: He ſhall Baptize you with the Holy Ghoſt, and with Fire: Which ſhews their Difference in Nature, Excellency and Efficacy. In the laſt Scripture Chriſt himſelf, juſt before His parting with His Diſciples, does very expreſly and emphatically diſtinguiſh betwixt His own Baptiſm, and the Baptiſm of John: For, ſays he, John truly Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence. I ſhall not inſiſt upon the Force of this Place and Context ſo fully, as by and by, yet nothing can well be plainer, than that Chriſt's Words imply Two Baptiſms, That the Water was John's, and the Holy Ghoſt His: And that his Intention was to leave that Diſtinction upon the Minds of His People; not only that John's and His were Two Baptiſms, but, That Water was John's, and not His. And this too after all, is granted by our Oppoſer himſelf, Page 89, where he ſays, Can any Man believe that Jeſus uſed John's Baptiſm, and not His own, in making of Diſciples? But he adds Page 78, For neither is the Viſible Part alone, or the Inviſible by it ſelf; but both in Union by the Divine Appointment: But where this Divine Appointment is, he does not tell us. Again, Page 87. John did the Outward Part, and Jeſus the Inward Part the ſame Moment. But ſurely he is miſtaken, when John tells us, The Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt was to come after, not 1695. to go along with his: And Chriſt told His Diſciples, That it was to come, (ſo that His and John's went not together) and bid them ſtay at Jeruſalem till they received it, viz. The Promiſe of the Father, which was the Pouring forth of the Holy Ghoſt; as the Firſt Chapter of the Acts informs us: And that was nigh Three Years after they had been Baptized, and Baptized others with Water: So that both did not go together, as this Man Dreams.

But he proceeds, Page 80. For John admitted Men into the Faith of the Meſſias; that is, into the State of Subjects, owing, and acknowledging Allegiance to Chriſt. And Chriſt owns this Grant and Admiſſion Valid in His Kingdom, and that they were Legally Inſtated in the Rights of His Kingdom, whom John Baptized: This being done by a Publick Authorized Herald of His Kingdom.

But it's ſtrange that John had the Power to admit Men into the Faith of Him, when at firſt he ſent his Diſciples to Him, To know if He were the Meſſiah, or they were to look for another. This is to give John the Keys of David, and to make Regeneration an Abſolute and Neceſſary Adjunct, or Concomitant of his Water-Baptiſm. But thoſe Baptized by John's Baptiſm, were ſo far from being admitted into the State of Subjects, and enjoying the Rights of Chriſt's Kingdom, that in Acts 18. Apollos is ſaid to know only John's Baptiſm. And Chap. 19. Certain Diſciples to John's Baptiſm, declared to Paul, they had not ſo much as heard if there were any ſuch Thing as the Holy Ghoſt: So that when Paul aſkt them, To what then were you Baptized, they anſwered, To John's Baptiſm, by Way of Diſtinction from Chriſt's. And the Apoſtle's Queſtion led them to that Anſwer, being founded upon a Diſtinction between the Baptiſm of John, and that of Chriſt. And laſtly, I muſt take Leave to wonder how he can think to word upon us ſo great an Untruth: As that of Chriſt's owning an Admiſſion into His Kingdom by John's Baptiſm, and that ſuch are Legally Inſtated in the Rights thereof, becauſe they were Baptized of John, when Chriſt himſelf ſays, That the Leaſt in the Kingdom of God, is Greater than John; which implies, that John himſelf was not of that Kingdom: And becauſe that cannot be underſtood of the Perſon, or Soul of John, for ſo he was certainly a Glorious Subject of it, it muſt refer to his Adminiſtration, which, He himſelf tells us, Alſo muſt Decreaſe, and Chriſt's Increaſe. Beſides, Chriſt told Nicodemus, That unleſs a Man be Born again, he cannot ſee the Kingdom of God: How then is he a Subject, and Inveſted in the Rights of that Kingdom? Again, Did John's Baptiſm Regenerate? If it did, What Need of Fire and Holy Ghoſt, that John ſaid was to come after? What Need of any Thing after John's, if it was ſo effectual, Or was he always attended with ſuch a Power as is affirmed? Where now is our Adverſary's haughty Aſſertion, That John's Diſciples, as ſuch, were the Subjects of Chriſt's Kingdom, and Legally Inveſted in the Rights thereof, when it is plain, that the Leaſt of that Kingdom is Greater than their very Baptizer, the Great Herald of the Kingdom? But that Expreſſion it ſelf gives away the Cauſe, being well conſidered; For the Forerunner ends in Him He Foreruns; and the Herald in the Preſence of the King. He has forgot ſure, who it was that ſaid, or that it was ever ſaid, The Prophets laſted till John, and he ended them, but he did not begin the Chriſtian Diſpenſation; that was Chriſt's Work. John's Baptiſm left Men in that Old World of Jewiſh Rites, where it found them; but 'tis Chriſt's that makes all Things New; New Heavens, New Earth, and New Creatures, to Inherit them.

But ſays this Author, Chriſt declares, That being Baptized with Water, was a Part of Righteouſneſs; Which it could not be, unleſs there was a Law of the Kingdom for it. As if it might not be Righteouſneſs without ſuch a Law: For with his Favour, There is as much to be ſaid for Chriſt's Circumciſion, and Eating the Paſchal Lamb, &c. Since that was to fulfil all Righteouſneſs too; and yet there was no Law of the Kingdom of Chriſt for them, unleſs this be one, That Chriſt was to fulfil the Righteouſneſs of the Law, which He did in General, to introduce the Kingdom of God. For Chriſt's fulfilling of the Law and the Prophets, of which John was the Laſt, made Way for the Kingdom to come, which was not of this World, nor are it's Rights, by Conſequence; but of it's own Nature. That Chriſt did fulfil all Righteouſneſs, in condeſcending and conforming to divers Rites, is ſo far from Ratifying, or Confirming the Practice of them, as this Man ſuggeſts, that it Diſcharges and Aboliſhes them. This appears very plain, in that Chriſt's performing of the Rites of the Law, was in Order to end them, being made under the Law for that very Purpoſe. So that His being Baptized by John, does not Eſtabliſh, or any more Confirm that Baptiſm, than His being Circumciſed after Moſes does perpetuate Circumciſion. On the contrary, it rather ends John's Baptiſm. Moſes and the Prophets were 'till John, and John was till Chriſt; both had their Times, and both their Periods in Him.

I am not He, ſays John; but John's Baptiſm is It, ſays this Opponent, which is to put John's Baptiſm in the Room of Chriſt's; and John's Miniſtry, tho' not his Perſon, in Lieu of Chriſt's. Now Moſes and the Prophets were as the Stars of the Night; John, as the Morning Star, the Forerunner of the Day. He roſe laſt, but Shined moſt: But tho' the Morning-Star be the moſt Burning and Shining of all the Cœleſtial Lights, and next to the Riſing of the Sun himſelf, yet his Time is ſhorteſt, his Light is ſoon ſwallowed up of the Sun.

Page 81. But this Man tells us, That Chriſt gave Commiſſion to His Diſciples to Baptize with Water, Mat. 28. 19. And that they did underſtand it ſo by their Practice. But is it practicable, or poſſible, that any Scripture can reaſonably be ſaid to declare an Inſtitution, or be the Commiſſion of any Thing which it does not expreſs? Now in that Text there is not a Word of Water, How then is Water-Baptiſm Inſtituted by it? I cannot help wondring, and this Man muſt allow it me, that the only Text to prove the Commiſſion of ſo Celebrated a Practice in our Times, ſhould not declare a Word of it. But I ſhall next ſhew, notwithſtanding he produces following Practice, to prove Chriſt meant, and his Diſciples underſtood it ſo, that the Text means it no more than it expreſſes it; and that Chriſt, that gave that Commiſſion, never intended it to refer to Water. This is the Text, Go ye, Teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, the Son, and Holy Ghoſt, Mat. 28. 19. Now Chriſt by this Commiſſion, muſt mean His own Baptiſm of the Spirit, and that from the Nature and Force of the Words, as well as Compariſon of them, with other Places to which they relate, and that are alſo lately Explanatory of them. The Words are not In the Name, but Into the Name of the Father, &c. Which muſt refer to the Power and Spirit of Chriſt; Water being too feeble to change and waſh a Heart, which is the Import of Baptizing into the Name or Nature of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt: That is, by the Miniſtry which is from the Spirit. So Mark 16. where Chriſt ſaith, They ſhall Caſt out Devils in my Name; that is, by my Power, or by the Virtue or Force of my Spirit, which ſhall attend you for that Work and Service, That many may be turned from the Evil of their Ways, and made Heirs of an endleſs Kingdom.

In fine, after you have received the Spirit, you ſhall Teach and Baptize, or Dip, Plunge, and Intereſt them that Believe, into the Name and Power of God, unto Holineſs, Righteouſneſs, Mercy, Truth, &c. Qualifying them to bear the Holy and Excellent Name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt.

And that this is not ſtrained, but Natural, and no Allegory upon the Text, I ſhall deſire my Reader to look forward, to the Firſt of the Acts, and the Firſt Nine Verſes; which plainly expounds this Commiſſion, and conſequently reſolves us what Baptiſm it refers to; particularly the 4th, 5th, 8th, and 9th Verſes, viz. And being aſſembled together with them, commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but wait for the Promiſe of the Father, which, ſaith he, ye have heard of me. For John truly Baptized with Water; but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt, not many Days hence. But ye ſhall receive Power after that the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you: And ye ſhall be Witneſſes unto me, both in Jeruſalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt Parts of the Earth. And when He had ſpoken theſe Things, while they beheld, He was taken up, and a Cloud received Him out of their Sight.

In which Three Things are obſervable: Firſt, That Chriſt Diſtinguiſhes his Baptiſm from John's. Secondly, That He aſſigns Water to John's, and the Holy Ghoſt to His own Baptiſm. Not that John and He had Two Water-Baptiſms, yet Two Baptiſms, but that John's was the Water-Baptiſm, and His the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt. Therefore His is not a Water-Baptiſm, but a Baptiſm contradiſtinguiſhed from that of Water, as much as the Perſon of John was from the Perſon of Chriſt.

Thirdly, by comparing the 28th of Matthew with this Place in the Acts, we may ſee that the Commiſſion in one, is to be conſtrued by the Qualification in the other, which is not expreſt at all in Mat. 28. There they are bid To Go; here they are bid To Stay; that is, Stay before you go, and have your Qualifications before you Qualify; viz. The Promiſe of the Father, to wit, The Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt; that is to ſay, Power from on High. Why, Had they been Preaching two or three Years, and been Baptized, and Baptizing with Water, that this Man ſays is followed, That Moment, with the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, and yet had not been themſelves Baptized with it, nor as yet received Power from on High to Diſciple and Baptize any into Chriſt's Kingdom, with Chriſt's Baptiſm? This muſt be ſtrange to our Opponent, and who can help it? But ſo it is, Reader. For that as one Evangeliſt, and one Part of Scripture, ſupplies and explains another, this in the Acts ſhews, that the Commiſſion in Matthew, ſuppoſes the Qualification, mentioned in the Firſt of the Acts, to precede it; elſe they were to go, before they were Qualified to Perform. If then it is Rational to ſuppoſe, that what paſt at Chriſt's Farewel, as rehearſt by the Evangeliſts, ſhould be all laid together, for our more plain and compleat Underſtanding of the Import of it, we muſt needs conclude, That the Diſciples were to ſtay at Jeruſalem, till they had received the Promiſe of the Father, that is, till they were Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt; and then the Commiſſion took Place, for them to Go and Teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt. Now then, if in Order of Time, and from the Nature of the Diſcourſe, it muſt be ſo, How is the Baptiſm in Matthew a Water-Baptiſm? John truly Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence: Then Go ye, Teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt, &c. It is plain, this is the True Order of the Diſcourſe, not only from what I have already ſaid, as to Qualification preceding Commiſſion (for they needed no ſuch to Baptize with Water, having done that Two or Three Years before, without it) But for that Baptizing ſtands alone in Mat. 28. 19. which would have been Ambiguous, had not that Paſſage in Acts 1. 5. preceded, which made it needleſs to tell us what Sort of Baptiſm they were to Baptize with, and what they were not; For John truly Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence: Therefore not with John's Baptiſm any more, but with the Baptiſm of the Spirit, Do you Go Teach all Nations, Baptizing them through the Holy Spirit, into the Name of the Father, of the Son, and Holy Ghoſt: Make them True Jews, True Iſraelites, in whom there is no Guile. And 'tis certain it was a New Scene and Part they had to Act; as much Superior to what was before, as Form is to Power, Letter to Spirit, Shadow to Subſtance. Greater Things than theſe ſhall ye do, ſaid our Bleſſed Lord, becauſe I go to my Father. I think I have not ſtrained the Text, or extorted a wrong Meaning. I write what I believe, and take to be the Genuine Senſe of the Place, without Partiality, or Paſſion. But our Adverſary will have it, that the Apoſtles uſed Water Baptiſm, in purſuance of this Commiſſion; and inſtances the Words of Peter, in the Caſe of Cornelius, for Proof thereof. The Words are theſe, Can any Man forbid Water, that theſe ſhould not be Baptized, which have received the Holy Ghoſt, as well as we? Upon which ſays our Opponent, pag. 82. If it had not been an Ordinance, any one might have forbid it; therefore the Apoſtles accounted themſelves obliged by God to do ſo; and that it was not in their Power to refuſe it, unleſs they would reſiſt God. To which I ſay, as before: Firſt, That Water-Baptiſm was John's, and not Chriſt's. Secondly, That Practice is no Inſtitution. Thirdly, That the Apoſtle Peter did but continue a Practice, introduced by John, not eaſily left among a Ceremonious People, it having obtained Reputation among them, and was the Diſcriminating Sign, or Mark, of a Change of Diſpenſation at Hand; and this Peter could not but know, after thoſe Diſtinguiſhing and Emphatical Words of His Lord and Maſter, Acts the Firſt. But the Diſciples having before been actually engaged in the Practice of John's Baptiſm, in order to call People to the Expectation of a farther Thing, continued it afterwards; not of Authority, but in their Chriſtian Liberty and Condeſcenſion, as what had a Reference to the Chriſtian Diſpenſation; inaſmuch as John, whoſe Miniſtry concluded the Prophets, became herein the Forerunner of Chriſt, whoſe Kingdom John ſaid, was at Hand, and the more Excellent Diſpenſation thereof. Laſtly, The Reaſon of Peter's Words, Can any Man forbid Water, &c. referred not to the Inſtitution, Authority, or Force of Water-Baptiſm, but to Peter's Caution about Cornelius, that was a Gentile, for fear he ſhould give any publick Diſtaſte to the Jews, whoſe Prejudices againſt the Gentiles, like ſome Predeſtinarians of our Times, excluded them any Pretence to Religion; inſomuch that we ſee Peter himſelf, without a Viſion, was not yet large enough in his Spirit, to credit Cornelius's Convictions and Devotion; as much as if he had ſaid, Why may not this Man, though a Gentile, be Baptized with Water, ſince he has received the Holy Ghoſt, which is the requiſite Qualification of a True Chriſtian; and that the Promiſe of the Father is to them that are afar off, even to all that the Lord our God ſhall call, as well as to the Seed of Abraham, after the Fleſh. So that the Reaſon of Peter's uſing thoſe Words, was not to give Authority to Water-Baptiſm, as an Ordinance of Chriſt's Kingdom, but to excuſe himſelf againſt Jewiſh Exceptions, that he feared would be ſcandalized at his owning of a Gentile, which, to them, was Unclean, Prophane and Reprobate.

His other Scripture in Defence of what he aſſerts, is Acts 9. 18. which ſays, That Paul received his Sight, and was Baptized by Ananias. But not a Word of Water, is in the Text, or the foregoing, or following Verſes. On the contrary, there is Reaſon to believe it was not meant. And Ananias putting his Hands on him, ſaid, Brother Saul, the Lord, (even JESUS that appeared unto thee in the Way as thou cameſt) hath ſent me, that thou mayſt receive thy Sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghoſt; and immediately there fell from his Eyes, as it had been Scales, and he received his Sight forthwith, and aroſe and was Baptized. Now here is, firſt, Sight and Holy Ghoſt, to be given to Saul, by the Miniſtry of Ananias: Next, he received Sight, and was Baptized. Now muſt not this be the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, ſince being fill'd with the Holy Ghoſt, and being Baptized, are, by the Text, Made One and the ſame Thing? Eſpecially ſince it is paſt all Controverſy, That there was ſuch a Thing as the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt.

His other Scripture, to prove the Authority of Water-Baptiſm, among Chriſtians, is, Acts 11. 15, 16, 17. And as I began to ſpeak, the Holy Ghoſt fell on them, as on us at the Beginning. Then remembred I the Word of the Lord, how that He ſaid, John indeed Baptized with Water, but you ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt. Foraſmuch then as God gave them the like Gift, as He did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, What was I that I could reſiſt God?

Which is ſo far from weakening, that it confirms our Senſe and Aſſertion: For the Bent of Peter's Words is to juſtify himſelf, in going to, and communing with the Uncircumciſion, and not to vindicate Water-Baptiſm. And that which he offer'd in his own Vindication to his Brethren, was, 1. His Viſion. 2. Cornelius's Righteouſneſs and Devotion. And, 3. God's owning of him, in that the Holy Ghoſt fell upon him, as it had upon them in the Beginning. Foraſmuch then, ſays Peter, as God gave them the like Gift, What was I that I could withſtand God? As if he had ſaid, How could I refuſe to own them, and have Fellowſhip with them that God own'd, and had Fellowſhip with, and Gifted and Sanctified, as well as the Believing Jews? Speaking not one Word, in his Account to the Brethren, of Water-Baptiſm: But, on the contrary, he makes it John's Way of Diſtinction from Chriſt's Baptiſm, by remembring and repeating the Words of His Lord and Maſter, viz. John indeed Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt. I appeal to every indifferent Reader, if I have not done Juſtice to the Text.

I ſhall next conſider his Exceptions to what I ſay in my Key, in Defence of our Diſuſe, or Ceſſation, of Water-Baptiſm, &c.

Page 83, 84. The firſt Reaſon he makes me give for it, is, That all Proteſtants are againſt Figures and Shadows. To which he anſwers, But Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper, being no Figures nor Shadows, all Proteſtants are for them; unleſs the Quakers are to be accounted Proteſtants, that diſown all Proteſtant Churches, and are own'd by none. This is all he quotes of mine, and this is what he ſays, on what he has quoted: So that they may be of the Nature of Shadows and Figures for all him; and conſequently Proteſtants practiſe againſt Judgment. For he only denies them to be Figures and Shadows, and leaves us there. But he had done well, if he had given us his Reaſons, and had alſo taken Notice of what I ſay, page 22 in My Key, which immediately foregoes what he has cited out of it; viz. That Practice only is no Inſtitution; and that is all he can alledge in Favour of John's Baptiſm. That which ſeems my Part to perform, tho' he preſſes it not upon me, is to ſhew, That Water Baptiſm, and the Lord's-Supper (ſo called) are of the Nature of Figures and Shadows, of which Chriſt was the Subſtance.

Now, that they are ſo, we muſt conſider, That if Chriſt was the End of John, as John renders him, Mat. 3. 11. John 3. 30. and Chriſt himſelf ſuggeſts to us, Mat. 11. 7. to 12. then Water-Baptiſm was but a Forerunner, and ſhewed forth what was to come, that which the Leaſt in the Kingdom of Heaven exceeded, and therefore not of the Kingdom, and conſequently of no longer Force in Point of Inſtitution. Tho' by being the Obſervation peculiar to John's Miniſtry, it had obtained Credit, and therefore was continued, Ex Gratiâ. But it is plain from Chriſt's own Words, The Kingdom of God came not with Obſervation, Luke 17. 20. At leaſt therefore Proteſtants ought to be Modeſt upon us, with Reſpect to the Reaſon we render for our Ceſſation of Water-Baptiſm. And tho' he ſays, We ought not to be accounted Proteſtants, that diſown all Proteſtant Churches, and are owned by none of them: I would have this Author to know, We are True Proteſtants: Proteſtants upon thoſe Reaſons, that were the firſt Motives to that Character; and can compare, in our Negatives, with any Species of Proteſtants. And do challenge this Author, without Vanity, upon that Head, begin when he Will.

At the ſame Time, we cannot but have Charity for the Perſons of Roman Catholicks, and would by that teach them the Truth and greater Excellency of our Religion.

And next, for our diſowning of all other Proteſtant Churches, and not being owned by them; firſt, it is not upon the ſame Grounds that the Roman Catholicks diſown them: And, ſecondly, Experience tells us, It is what all Sorts of Proteſtants do to one another; and therefore not ſo ſingular in us, as is ſuggeſted by this ill-willing Author.

But, he is mightily diſpleaſed with me, For being againſt all Figures in the Time of the Goſpel; adding, That we Mortals cannot think, or ſpeak, or work without Figures; diſtinguiſhing between prenunciative and commemorative Signs: Ridiculing me for ſuch an Aſſertion. But if my Reader will turn to Page 24. of my Key, cited by this Author, he will find, I only deny, under the Goſpel, the Neceſſity and Service of prenunciative or forerunning Signs; Joyning to Signs, Figures and Shadows; and promiſcuouſly uſing them to one and the ſame Purpoſe, and therefore not all Signs, but Signs of ſomething to come, and to be accompliſh'd by the Coming thereof; as the following Words, he makes another Quibble upon, plainly ſhew; viz. That the Nature of the Goſpel is Inward, Spiritual and Eternal. But he leaves out, That therefore the continuing to practiſe Figures, Signs and Shadows, as ſtill in Force, which forerun Chriſt and his Diſpenſation, make his Coming of none Effect. For then he had given too ſtrong a Reaſon for our Diſuſe, and diſappointed himſelf of the unfair Advantage he endeavours to gain upon me, by letting his Reader ſee that I did not deny the Continuance of all Signs, but prenunciative or forerunning Ones: Such as are of the Nature of Figures and Shadows, and therefore can have no Commiſſion to perpetuate them; of which I take Water-Baptiſm and the Supper to be two. For Chriſt as well as John, declares Water-Baptiſm a Forerunner of a more excellent Baptiſm. And one Thing wherein that Excellency of Chriſt's Baptiſm conſiſts, is the durableneſs of it: But if John's is to laſt as long as Chriſt's, Chriſt's does not excel John's in Duration; quite contrary to John's own Diſcrimination and Teſtimony, viz. He (Chriſt) ſhall increaſe and I decreaſe: But if it be conſidered, that this Adverſary would make me deny all Signs, as Exodus 7. 8. 9. Numb. 11. Pſal. 77. Jer. 32. Juſt as his Friend J. Faldo, and ſome of that Ingenuity, have made us to deny all Scripture Commands, becauſe ſome of us have ſaid, in Temporary and Extraordinary Caſes (as that of Jeremiah, Jonas, Amos, &c.) That which is a Command to another is no Command to us, unleſs the ſame Spirit require the ſame, or the like Thing of us; therefore the Moral Law or Decalogue is no Law or Command to us, nor are we obliged to yield Obedience to it, tho' it be general and perpetual. I ſay, they that conſider the Juſtice of my Parallel, and Injuſtice of his Inſinuation, will perceive he is not a fair Enemy, nor ought to have Credit with his Reader, to our Prejudice.

I am then no more againſt Figures than againſt Forms. We cannot, I know, live, ſpeak or act without them: But theſe are not forerunning Signs or Forms, Temporary and Shadowy Obſervations: But ſuch neceſſary and eſſential ones, as are coupl'd to our very being, and requiſite Converſe among Men.

But from this he falls hard upon me, becauſe I ſay the Goſpel is Inward, Spiritual and Eternal: For, ſays he, without many Figures, this is not Senſe, and with them, is either not true, or not to the Purpoſe. The Goſpel being the new Covenant, is neither Inward nor Outward. Will W. P. never leave talking of Inſide and Outſide of Things that have no Sides? This Language. I doubt not, will ſound harſh, as well as light, to other People's Ears, as well as ours: And truly he is a daring and an adventurous Perſon, for till now I thought Truth had an Inſide; if he had read the 31*ſt* of Jeremiah, he would have found there, that the Goſpel is an inward State, and has an Inſide; where God, ſpeaking by that Prophet, of the Goſpel, or New Covenant Time, ſays, Behold, the Days come that I will make a new Covenant with the Houſe of Iſrael, and with the Houſe of Judah: Not according to the Covenant that I made with their Fathers in the Day that I took them by the Hand, to bring them out of the Land of Egypt (which my Covenant they brake, although I was an Husband unto them, ſaith the Lord) But this ſhall be the Covenant that I will make make with the Houſe of Iſrael, After thoſe Days, ſaith the Lord, I will put my Law in their inward Parts, and write it in their Hearts; and will be their God, and they ſhall be my People. And they ſhall teach no more every Man his Neighbour, and every Man his Brother, ſaying, know the Lord: For they ſhall all know me, from the Leaſt of them to the Greateſt of them, ſaith the Lord: For I will forgive their Iniquity, and I will remember their Sin no more. Now here is Truth with both it's Sides: Truth in it's outward Appearance, according to the low and carnal State of Man: And this may be call'd comparatively, the Out-Side of Truth. Here alſo we may learn, that Truth has an Inſide; a more Spiritual and Eternal Part; and that is what I call the Goſpel-Diſpenſation: Or that this more Inward and Spiritual Appearance of the Truth, is the New-Covenant or Goſpel. What elſe did our Lord Jeſus intend by the Goſpel of the Kingdom, than the Bleſſing of the Power of God, to deliver Man from the Power of Sin and Satan, the Original of it? So the Apoſtle phraſes it, The Goſpel is the Power of God to Salvation. That is, the Power of the Kingdom of God, and that is the Goſpel of the Kingdom. Now if this be not of an Inward, Spiritual and Eternal Nature, nothing can be: Which I preſume, the Reader will, with me, think an abſurd as well as unchriſtian Concluſion.

But he ſays, It is partly Inward and partly Outward. I ſay, it is Inward, but it may be Outwardly expreſt by a Godly Converſation; and ſo far, and no otherwiſe, it may be ſaid to be outward. Nor does this weaken my Aſſertion, or the Conſequence I have obſerved from it; viz. That the Goſpel, and New Covenant, came not with Outward Obſervations; and that Water-Baptiſm was ſuch; Therefore no Ordinance of the Kingdom of the Meſſiah.

But if it be an Ordinance, as this Author ſays, p. 87. and that the Inward Part keeps Time with the Outward (for there he allows of Inſide and Outſide) then it would do ſo to as many as have the outward Part adminiſtred to them: But we have no Evidence of ſuch Concurrence of the Holy Ghoſt. We have never found it in our ſelves, nor do we ſee it in others, that are in the Practice of it, but much the contrary; in that Envy, Pride, Luxury and Covetouſneſs prevail, and little of the true Croſs of Chriſt, Self-Denial, Dying dayly, or the New Creature appears: How then does the inward Grace make up but one Baptiſm, if it accompany not Water? But of that I have already treated before; and, it is plain, 'tis but Gratis Dictum on our Adverſary's Side. He begs the Queſtion.

Laſtly, p. 90. finding himſelf a-ground about the Paſſage of the Apoſtle Paul, 1 Cor. 1. 7. For Chriſt ſent me not to Baptize but to preach the Goſpel. He endeavours to gloſs away it's Force, what he can, from the End for which I cited it, and the Apoſtle writ it. The firſt Thing he oppoſes is, That ſince Water-Baptiſm, was Peter's and his Brethren's Commiſſion, which Chriſt gave them before his Aſcenſion, to the End of the World— It is not to be imagined that Matthias and Paul were without it. But in this alſo he begs the Queſtion.

I have already ſhew'd that Commiſſion is miſtaken by him, and that Water is no Ways concern'd in that Text; and that Water-Baptiſm was John's and not Chriſt's; aud that they were not one Baptiſm, or inſeparable in their Adminiſtration. Alſo, that Practice is no Inſtitution, and that Water-Baptiſm is a prenunciative Sign, and has it's Accompliſhment in that Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, as John had in Chriſt; the two Adminiſtrators of the two Baptiſms.

But next, he ſays, P*aul ſpoke an Ellipſis, elegantly*; meaning, that he was not ſent only to Baptize, but chiefly to Preach; citing two or three Scriptures, that he imagines Parallel, and illuſtrating that Place, as Hoſ. 6. 6. I will have Mercy and not ſacrifice. And, let Women adorn themſelves, not with putting on Apparel, &c. 1 Pet. 3. 34. Now, ſays he, Theſe Places prove, that the Iſraelites were not to ſacrifice to God, and Women muſt go naked, &c. (as ſome Quakers did) with the ſame Evidence that Paul's Words teach, That Chriſt ſent him not to Baptize. He might, if he had pleaſed, have cut it all ſhort, and like what L Muggleton once ſaid of Moſes, have told us, Paul did not mean what he writ. But theſe Places are ill apply'd by this Man, for when God ſaid, He would have Mercy and not Sacrifice, he meant not to have Sacrifice at that Time, and in thoſe Caſes, wherein he called for Mercy. He would not be ſo put off, nor have Duties exchanged: That Speech is limited to, and to be interpreted by the preſent State of the People he ſpoke to, who were unqualified for Sacrifice, becauſe they were unmerciful and cruel, and the merciful God in that State would have none of their Sacrifices. What is this to the Apoſtle's Words about Baptiſm, that denies it any Part in his Commiſſion? There is no Parallel in the Caſe, but if any, it is for us rather than againſt us; for that of not putting on of Apparel, it is evident, for ſo the Apoſtle intended by ἢ ἐνδύσεως ἱματίων κόσμος, as the Words themſelves plainly import, viz. Garments of Finery and Ornament, and not uſeful Clothing.

So that the Apoſtle meant what he ſaid in the Uſe of the Word, for ſuch Apparel is not to be ever uſed by true Chriſtians.

For his ſaying, that ſome of our Women have gone naked, 'tis affirmed with Lightneſs, tho' ſome few of our Friends have gone naked, for a Sign to this Generation, in Token of God's ſtripping ſome Perſecutors of their Power, and in particular that Generation of the Clergy, that preceded the Reſtoration, which having riſen through Perſecution, forgat their Pleas, when they had Power, towards thoſe that diſſented from them, and teſtified againſt the ſame Evils in them, that they had juſtly inveighed againſt in the former Biſhops Days. And now he may ſee we are not againſt all SIGNS.

To conclude: It is plain, the Apoſtle had no Obligation upon him to this Expreſſion, from a Compariſon any had made between Water-Baptiſm and the Preaching of the Goſpel. Nor does he uſe any, tho' this Man makes him to do ſo, to juſtify his imagined Elegancy. The Occaſion of this Expreſſion, the Text ſhews, was the Vanity of ſome Diſciples, that were comparing and boaſting of their Baptizers; not a Word of Baptiſm it ſelf, to over or undervalue that Tradition. Why then does Paul take Occaſion, not only to knock them, but Baptiſm too? What had Baptiſm done to be ſo courſely treated? So Sacred an Inſtitution; the very Rite or Door of Admiſſion (ſays this Man) into the Kingdom of the Meſſiah, p. 80. Why, without Doubt, it was to let them ſee, that they had ſo little Cauſe to boaſt of their reſpective Baptizers, (for who is Paul, and who is Apollos) that they ought not to value themſelves upon that very Baptiſm, ſince it was not what he had in Commiſſion, but what he had uſed as a Tradition, that had obtined ſome Credit among them: Elſe the Apoſtle muſt not have had the ſame Commiſſion that the other Apoſtles had, who yet ſaid, he was behind none of the reſt of the Apoſtles.

Again, Baptizing, in Matth. 28. 19. was as much the Apoſtle's Commiſſion as Teaching or Preaching: Nay, the preferable Part. For though Preaching opened their Underſtandings, it was Baptiſm that gave them Admiſſion into the Kingdom of the Meſſiah; made them Subjects thereof; and inſtated them in the Rights of it: Yea, the Seal of the Covenant that God made by Chriſt with Mankind, without which no Remiſſion of Sins, or entring of God's Kingdom. Can ſuch a Baptiſm (and ſuch an one this Adverſary renders Water-Baptiſm) be no eſſential Part of Paul's Commiſſion, or not upon equal Terms with Teaching, when by it People are to be intereſted in the Sacred Name of Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt; that is, to be made, qualified, admitted and ſealed True Chriſtians, Subjects of Chriſt's Kingdom, Citizens of Heaven, and endowed with all the Privileges thereof. How little is this Man willing to allow Baptiſm to be, that he may keep it any Thing in Force, and excuſe it from the genuine Senſe of the Apoſtle's Words? Were there as much Difference between Preaching and Baptiſm, as between Mercy and Sacrifice, it might have helpt him better. But in as much as the Apoſtle denies Water-Baptiſm to be in his Commiſſion, and that it is certain he had the ſame Commiſſion the reſt had, whatever was his Practice, in Condeſcenſion (as in circumciſing of Timothy) that Baptiſm that is indeed in Chriſt's Commiſſion, Matth. 28. muſt be the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt. And this is the leſs to be doubted, ſince the ſame Apoſtle that denies Water-Baptiſm any Place in his Commiſſion (which he could never, If an Ordinance of Chriſt, and the Right of Admiſſion into the Kingdom of the Meſſiah) makes Baptiſm an Article in his Epitome of Chriſtianity, viz. That there is (Eph. 4. 5, 6.) One Lord, One Faith, One Baptiſm: One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. This Baptiſm being therefore Eſſential, muſt be that of his Commiſſion, and conſequently the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, Acts 1. 15.

But, after all, I know not what Right this Man has to argue upon the Head of Water-Baptiſm againſt us; ſince, if I miſtake him not, he is of thoſe that make Children the Subjects of that Practice, who cannot believe, nor be taught in order to it; and therefore not within the Scope and Direction of the Text. If it ſhould be ſaid, That Children may be as well Baptized as Circumciſed; I ſay, no: For Faith was not ſo perſonally required to Circumciſion as it is to Baptiſm. Nor are the Covenants or Kingdoms the ſame, to which they refer, therefore an improper and unjuſt Alluſion. Upon the whole Matter, we let fall the Baptiſm of Water, as John's, and not Chriſt's; therefore, not in Contempt of a Chriſtian Ordinance, the Lord knows, but in Honour of the Chriſtian Diſpenſation: And the rather, becauſe of the great Abuſe of it, both Sprinklers and Dippers laying, as we apprehend, a dangerous Streſs upon it: As indeed they do upon the Uſe of the Lord's-Supper; far beyond Signs, and as if they were the inward Graces themſelves: too often referring thither, rather than to the Obedience of Faith in Chriſt; and falſely quieting their uneaſy Minds under Diſobedience and Neglect of the Croſs of Jeſus, with the Performance of theſe Outward Signs of Inward Graces, the Generality of them being but too barren of any true Sign of the Power of Grace upon them. But to that Little he has ſaid about the Lord's-Supper, ſo called, I muſt ſay ſomething before I cloſe this Treatiſe. He tells us,

Page 92. The ſame, in Subſtance, may be ſaid of the Lord's Supper as of Baptiſm.

Reply. Then the ſame, in Subſtance, may ſerve in Defence of the other. He adds, Chriſt celebrates it with his Diſciples, ſignifying, That his Meaning was, they ſhould perform this Service at other Times, after his Death, by conſtraining them to do it in Remembrance of him, which is a full Inſtitution of this Service.

Reply. That which Chriſt celebrated was the Paſchal Lamb, or Paſſover, which he told his Diſciples he ſo much longed to eat with them. And this was the Jews great Anniverſary Supper, in Commemoration of their Fore-Fathers mighty Deliverance from Pharoah, and paſſing at Night out of Egypt, towards the Land that God had promiſed their Father Abraham, he would give to his Off-ſpring. And it was alſo the Concluſion or winding up of the Courſe of our Saviour's Life; the fulfilling of the Shadowy Ordinances and Miniſtration he was born under (he being the Antitype); at the Cloſe of which he was graciouſly pleaſed to intimate to them, that unwelcome and uneaſy News of his Departure and Death, by bidding them eat that Bread, and drink that Cup, and ſo do the like, as a Memorial, or in Remembrance of him, viz. his Death, 'till he came to them again.

He did thereby,

I. Inform them of his Departure and Death, by giving them a Memorial of him, which was ſo hard for them to think of.

II. He tells them, That he will not leave them Comfortleſs, he will come to them again, and he will drink New Wine with them in the Kingdom of his Father, which, in it's due Seaſon, ſhould be made manifeſt to them.

III. That they were to look to that Coming, as an Accompliſhment of that Memorial.

IV. That this muſt refer to his Spiritual Coming, as the Bread of Life; and that it was only to hold them up in their Minority, whoſe Weakneſs, Incredulity, and Doubting, were well known to him, and which, Luke 24. 11, 25. are enough obſerved; even after all they had heard and ſeen of the Power of Chriſt.

That this Practice laſted longer, I grant, but that it laſted of Authority, I find not, but rather of Weakneſs: Signs generally have a Reſemblance of the Things they ſignifie or repreſent: There ſeems none in any other Reſpect to me, ſo proper and ſuitable, as of Chriſt being the Bread that came down from Heaven, John 6. and as ſuch he came to his Diſciples ſome Time after his Aſcenſion, for as yet they were, as before obſerved, in ſeveral Reſpects, Weak, yea, Carnal, and to be ſtirred up and inſtructed in Sacred Myſteries by Outward and Senſible Things.

Page 93. As to what this Author ſays, That the Apoſtle Paul had a Commiſſion to adminiſter this Sacrament, 1 Cor. 11. to 26. It is his Miſtake; for it was not a Commiſſion but a Tradition. He tells us what he received of the Lord's Doings; but neither commands nor recommends it, only reproves Indecency, and requires more Reſpect in performing, as often as they do it. But if that Chapter be well read, the poor and mean Condition of the People he writ to, will be ſeen, to whom Signs, well underſtood, might be of Benefit. But that neither proves their Continuance under the New Covenant, nor their Service to thoſe that were come to diſcern well the Lord's Body; what it is, and what it is made of, as Chapter 10. 15, 16, 17.

Page 94, 95. But our Adverſary will have it, That Chriſt's Coming is to Judgment, at the End of all Things, and 'till then, this Sacrament, as he calls it, is to continue: Telling me, That when Chriſt ſaid, he would not drink any more of the Fruit of the Vine, 'till he ſhould drink it new, with them, in the Kingdom of his Father, Chriſt indeed means it of a Spiritual Wine, but that the Kingdom of his Father

1695. Father was Heaven, and therefore the Sign was not to ceaſe 'till that Kingdom began, which was not to be, 'till Chriſt had delivered up the Kingdom unto God, even his Father, at the End of the World.

Reply. But he has forgot, ſurely, that in the ſame Page he allows the Kingdom of God was then, among the Jews, tho' not in them, and ſo come before the End of the World. And if he would have called to Mind the firſt Sentence of John the Baptiſt's Sermon, and the Drift of the Diſciples Miniſtry, that Chriſt ſent forth, he muſt have found that at was, Repent, for the Kingdom of God, or of Heaven, is at Hand, as Matth. 3. 2. ch. 10. 7. Then not ſo far off as the End of the World. Again, the Apoſtle declared, Heb. 12. 22, 23, 24, the true Believers of his Day were come to Mount Zion, God, the Judge of all, and to the Spirits of the Juſt made perfect; and alſo that they ſat in heavenly Places in Chriſt Jeſus, which muſt be an Attainment above Signs of inviſible Grace; being the Life and Subſtance of Religion, and ſo the Period and Conſummation of Types, Shadows, and ſuch Sort of Signs or Significations as are in queſtion. They that perſonally enjoy their deareſt Friends will not repair to their Pictures, tho' drawn never ſo much to the Life, to quicken their Remembrance of them. Chriſt did promiſe his, That he would come again, he would not leave them Comfortleſs, and that he would drink of the Cup or Fruit of the Vine after a new, or other Mannner with them, even in the Kingdom of his Father. And in the Revelations, Chap. 3. he makes an Holy Proclamation, as it were with an O Yes! Behold, ſays he, I ſtand at the Door and knock; if any Man hear my Voice and open the Door, I will come in to him, and SUP with him, and he with me. This, we are not aſhamed to ſay, is our Supper, or the Supper of the Riſen and Glorified Jeſus, which the People called Quakers do acknowledge, profeſs and practice as the Lord's Supper; the True Goſpel, New Covenant Supper: The Supper of and in the Kingdom of God; which is come up in Thouſands, bleſſed be his Name, and is coming more and more among, and in the Hearts of the Children of Men. And tho' the Seed of this Kingdom be ſown in all, yet the good Ground alone knows it to grow to Advantage. Thoſe that obey the Manifeſtation of the Light of the Lord Jeſus in their Souls, the Seed of the Kingdom, are the true and ſenſible Witneſſes of it: The Government of their Hearts and Affections being upon his Shoulders, according to that bleſſed Promiſe, Iſaiah 9. 5, 6, 7. And ſuch as can ſay, Thy Kingdom is come, and thy will is done, in Earth as it is in Heaven. Even ſo come, Lord Jeſus, more and more ſet up thy Kingdom in the Souls of the Children of Men; that the Holy Will of thy Father may be done in Earth, that Mercy, and Truth, and Righteouſneſs, and Peace, may embrace and kiſs each other, ſo ſhall the Kingdoms of this World become the Kingdoms of the Lord, and of his Chriſt, who is God over all bleſſed for ever.

To the READER.

Reader,

I HAVE undertaken a Subject that I am very ſenſible requires one of more Sufficiency than I am Maſter of to treat it, as, in Truth, it deſerves, and the groaning State of Europe calls for; but ſince Bunglers may ſtumble upon the Game, as well as Maſters, though it belongs to the Skilful to hunt and catch it, I hope this Eſſay will not be charged upon me for a Fault, if it appear to be neither Chimerical nor Injurious, and may provoke abler Pens to improve and perform the Deſign with better Judgment and Succeſs. I will ſay no more in Excuſe of my ſelf, for this Undertaking, but that it is the Fruit of my ſolicitous Thoughts, for the Peace of Europe, and they muſt want Charity as much as the World needs Quiet, to be offended with me for ſo Pacifick a Propoſal. Let them cenſure my Management ſo they proſecute the Advantage of the Deſign; for 'till the Millenary Doctrine be accompliſhed, there is nothing appears to me ſo beneficial an Expedient to the Peace and Happineſs of this Quarter of the World.

An ESSAY towards the Preſent and Future PEACE of EUROPE, &c.

Sect. I. Of PEACE, and it's Advantages. Sect. I.

HE muſt not be a Man, but a Statue of Braſs or Stone, whoſe Bowels do not melt when he beholds the bloody Tragedies of this War, in Hungary, Germany, Flanders, Ireland, and at Sea: The Mortality of ſickly and languiſhing Camps and Navies, and the mighty Prey the Devouring Winds and Waves have made upon Ships and Men ſince 88. And as this with Reaſon ought to affect human Nature, and deeply Kindred, ſo there is ſomething very moving that becomes prudent Men to conſider, and that is the vaſt Charge that has accompanied that Blood, and which makes no mean Part of theſe Tragedies; Eſpecially if they deliberate upon the uncertainty of the War, that they know not how or when it will end, and that the Expence cannot be leſs, and the Hazard is as great as before. So that in the Contraries of Peace we ſee the Beauties and Benefits of it; which under it, ſuch is the Unhappineſs of Mankind, we are too apt to nauſeate, as the full Stomach loaths the Honey-Comb; and like that unfortunate Gentleman, that having a fine and a good Woman to his Wife, and ſearching his Pleaſure in forbidden and leſs agreeable Company, ſaid, when reproach'd with his Neglect of better Enjoyments, That he could love his Wife of all Women, if ſhe were not his Wife, tho' that increaſed his Obligation to prefer her. It is a great Mark of the Corruption of our Natures, and what ought to humble us extremely, and excite the Exerciſe of our Reaſon to a nobler and juſter Senſe, that we cannot ſee the Uſe and Pleaſure of our Comforts but by the Want of them. As if we could not taſte the Benefit of Health, but by the Help of Sickneſs; nor underſtand the Satisfaction of Fulneſs without the Inſtruction of Want; nor, finally, know the Comfort of Peace but by the Smart and Penance of the Vices of War: And without Diſpute that is not the leaſt Reaſon that God is pleaſed to Chaſtiſe us ſo frequently with it. What can we deſire better than Peace, but the Grace to uſe it? Peace preſerves our Poſſeſſions; We are in no Danger of Invaſions: Our Trade is free and ſafe, and we riſe and lye down without Anxiety. The Rich bring out their Hoards, and employ the poor Manufacturers: Buildings and divers Projections, for Profit and Pleaſure, go on: It excites Induſtry, which brings Wealth, as that gives the Means of Charity and Hoſpitality, not the loweſt Ornaments of a Kingdom or Commonwealth. But War, like the Froſt of 83, ſeizes all theſe Comforts at once, and ſtops the civil Channel of Society. The Rich draw in their Stock, the Poor turn Soldiers, or Thieves, or Starve: No Induſtry, no Building, no Manufactury, little Hoſpitality or Charity; but what the Peace gave, the War devours. I need ſay no more upon this Head, when the Advantages of Peace, and Miſchiefs of War are ſo many and ſenſible to every Capacity under all Governments, as either of them prevails. I ſhall proceed to the next Point. What is the beſt Means of Peace, which will conduce much to open my Way to what I have to propoſe.

Sect. II. Of the Means of Peace, which is Juſtice rather than War. Sect. II.

AS Juſtice is a Preſerver, ſo it is a better Procurer of Peace than War. Tho' Pax quæritur bello, be an uſual Saying, Peace is the End of War, and as ſuch it was taken up by O. C. for his Motto: Yet the Uſe generally made of that expreſſion ſhews us, that properly and truly ſpeaking, Men ſeek their Wills by War rather than Peace, and that as they will violate it to obtain them, ſo they will hardly be brought to think of Peace, unleſs their Appetites be ſome Way gratified. If we look over the Stories of all Times, we ſhall find the Aggreſſors generally moved by Ambition; the Pride of Conqueſt and Greatneſs of Dominion more than Right. But as thoſe Leviathans appear rarely in the World, ſo I ſhall anon endeavour to make it evident they had never been able to devour the Peace of the World, and ingroſs whole Countries as they have done, if the Propoſal I have to make for the Benefit of our preſent Age had been then in Practice. The Advantage that Juſtice has upon War is ſeen by the Succeſs of Embaſſies, that ſo often prevent War by hearing the Pleas and Memorials of Juſtice in the Hands and Mouths of the Wronged Party. Perhaps it may be in a good Degree owing to Reputation or Poverty, or ſome particular Intereſt or Conveniency of Princes and States, as much as Juſtice; but it is certain, that as War cannot in any Senſe be juſtified, but upon Wrongs received, and Right, upon Complaint, refuſed; ſo the Generality of Wars have their Riſe from ſome ſuch Pretenſion. This is better ſeen and underſtood at Home; for that which prevents a Civil War in a Nation, is that which may prevent it Abroad, viz. Juſtice; and we ſee where that is notably obſtructed, War is Kindled between the Magiſtrates and Poople in particular Kingdoms and States; which, however it may be unlawful on the Side of the People, we ſee never fails to follow, and ought to give the ſame Caution to Princes as if it were the Right of the People to do it: Tho' I muſt needs ſay, the Remedy is almoſt ever worſe than the Diſeaſe: The Aggreſſors ſeldom getting what they ſeek, or performing, if they prevail, what they promiſed: And the Blood and Poverty that uſually attend the Enterprize, weigh more on Earth, as well as in Heaven, than what they loſt or ſuffered, or what they get by endeavouring to mend their Condition, comes to: Which Diſappointment ſeems to be the Voice of Heaven, and Judgment of God againſt thoſe violent Attempts. But to return, I ſay, Juſtice is the Means of Peace, betwixt the Government and the People, and one Man and Company and another. It prevents Strife, and at laſt ends it: For beſides Shame or Fear, to contend longer, he or they being under Government, are conſtrained to bound their Deſires and Reſentment with the Satisfaction the Law gives. Thus Peace is maintain'd by Juſtice, which is a Fruit of Government, as Government, is from Society, and Society from Conſent.

Sect. II.

Sect. III.

Sect. III. GOVERNMENT, it's Riſe and End under all Models.

Government is an Expedient againſt Confuſion; a Reſtraint upon all Diſorder; Juſt Weights and an even Ballance: That one may not injure another, nor himſelf, by Intemperance.

This was at firſt without Controverſie, Patrimonial, and upon the Death of the Father or Head of the Family, the eldeſt Son, or Male of Kin ſucceeded. But Time breaking in upon this Way of Governing, as the World multiply'd, it fell under other Claims and Forms; and is as hard to trace to it's Original, as are the Copies we have of the firſt Writings of Sacred or Civil Matters. It is certain the moſt Natural and Human is that of Conſent, for that binds freely (as I may ſay) when Men hold their Liberty by true Obedience to Rules of their own making. No Man is Judge in his own Cauſe, which ends the Confuſion and Blood of ſo many Judges and Executioners. For out of Society every Man is his own King, does what he liſts, at his own Peril: But when he comes to incorporate himſelf, he ſubmits that Royalty to the Conveniency of the Whole, from whom he receives the Returns of Protection. So that he is not now his own Judge nor Avenger, neither is his Antagoniſt, but the Law, in indifferent Hands between both. And if he be Servant to others that before was free, he is alſo ſerved of others that formerly owed him no Obligation. Thus while we are not our own, every Body is ours, and we get more than we loſe, the Safety of the Society being the Safety of the Particulars that conſtitute it. So that while we ſeem to ſubmit to, and hold all we have from Society, it is by Society that we keep what we have.

Government then is the Prevention or Cure of Diſorder, and the Means of Juſtice, as that is of Peace: For this Cauſe they have Seſſions, Terms, Aſſizes and Parliaments, to over-rule Men's Paſſions and Reſentments, that they may not be Judges in their own Cauſe, nor Puniſhers of their own Wrongs, which as it is very incident to Men in their Corrupt State, ſo, for that Reaſon, they would obſerve no Meaſure; nor on the other Hand would any be eaſily reduced to their Duty. Not that Men know not what is right, their Exceſſes, and wherein they are to blame, blame: by no Means; nothing is plainer to them: But ſo depraved is Human Nature, that without Compulſion, ſome Way or other, too many would not readily be brought to do what they know is right and fit, or avoid what they are ſatisfy'd they ſhould not do: Which brings me near to the Point I have undertaken; and for the better Underſtanding of which, I have thus briefly treated of Peace, Juſtice and Government, as a neceſſary Introduction, becauſe the Ways and Methods by which Peace is preſerved in particular Governments, will help thoſe Readers, moſt concerned in my Propoſal, to conceive with what Eaſe as well as Advantage the Peace of Europe might be procured and kept; which is the End deſigned by me, with all Submiſſion to thoſe Intereſted in this little Treatiſe.

Sect. IV.

Sect. IV. Of a General Peace, or the Peace of Europe, and the Means of it.

IN my firſt Section, I ſhewed the Deſirableneſs of Peace; in my next, the Trueſt Means of it; to wit, Juſtice, Not War. And in my laſt, that this Juſtice was the Fruit of Government, as Government it ſelf was the Reſult of Society; which firſt came from a Reaſonable Deſign in Men of Peace. Now if the Soveraign Princes of Europe, who repreſent that Society, or Independent State of Men that was previous to the Obligations of Society, would, for the ſame Reaſon that engaged Men firſt into Society, viz. Love of Peace and Order, agree to meet by their Stated Deputies in a General Dyet, Eſtates, or Parliament, and there Eſtabliſh Rules of Juſtice for Soveraign Princes to obſerve one to another; and thus to meet Yearly, or once in Two or Three Years at fartheſt, or as they ſhall ſee Cauſe, and to be Stiled, The Soveraign or Imperial Dyet, Parliament, or State of Europe; before which Soveraign Aſſembly, ſhould be brought all Differences depending between one Soveraign and another, that cannot be made up by private Embaſſies, before the Seſſions begins; and that if any of the Soveraignties that Conſtitute theſe Imperial States, ſhall refuſe to ſubmit their Claim or Pretenſions to them, or to abide and perform the Judgment thereof, and ſeek their Remedy by Arms, or delay their Compliance beyond the Time prefixt in their Reſolutions, all the other Soveraignties, United as One Strength, ſhall compel the Submiſſion and Performance of the Sentence, with Damages to the Suffering Party, and Charges to the Soveraignties that obliged their Submiſſion: To be ſure Europe would quietly obtain the ſo much deſired and needed Peace, to Her harraſſed Inhabitants; no Soveraignty in Europe, having the Power, and therefore cannot ſhow the Will to diſpute the Concluſion; and, conſequently, Peace would be procured, and continued in Europe.

Sect. V.

Sect. V. Of the Cauſes of Difference, and Motives to Violate Peace.

THere appears to me but Three Things upon which Peace is broken, viz. To Keep, to Recover, or to Add. Firſt, To Keep what is One's Right, from the Invaſion of an Enemy; in which I am purely Defenſive. Secondly, To Recover, when I think my ſelf Strong enough, that which by Violence, I, or my Anceſtors have loſt, by the Arms of a Stronger Power; in which I am Offenſive: Or, Laſtly, To increaſe my Dominion by the Acquiſition of my Neighbour's Countries, as I find them Weak, and my ſelf Strong. To gratify which Paſſion, there will never want ſome Accident or other for a Pretence: And knowing my own Strength, I will be my own Judge and Carver. This Laſt will find no Room in the Imperial States: They are an unpaſſable Limit to that Ambition. But the other Two may come as ſoon as they pleaſe, and find the Juſtice of that Soveraign Court. And conſidering how few there are of thoſe Sons of Prey, and how early they ſhow themſelves, it may be not once in an Age or Two, this Expedition being Eſtabliſhed, the Ballance cannot well be broken.

Sect. VI.

Sect. VI. Of Titles, upon which thoſe Differences may ariſe.

BUT I eaſily foreſee a Queſtion that may be anſwered in our Way, and that is this; What is Right? Or elſe we can never know what is Wrong: It is very fit that this ſhould be Eſtabliſhed. But that is fitter for the Soveraign States to reſolve than me. And yet that I may lead a Way to the Matter, I ſay that Title is either by a long and undoubted Succeſſion, as the Crowns of Spain, France and England; or by Election, as the Crown of Poland, and the Empire; or by Marriage, as the Family of the Stewarts came by England; the Elector of Brandenburgh, to the Dutchy of Cleve; and we, in Ancient Time, to divers Places abroad; or by Purchaſe, as hath been frequently done in Italy and Germany; or by Conqueſt, as the Turk in Chriſtendom, the Spaniards in Flanders, formerly moſtly in the French

Sect. VI.

Hands; and the French in Burgundy, Normandy, Lorrain, French-County, &c. This laſt, Title is, Morally Speaking, only Queſtionable. It has indeed obtained a Place among the Rolls of Titles, but it was engroſs'd and recorded by the Point of the Sword, and in Bloody Characters. What cannot be controuled or reſiſted, muſt be ſubmitted to; but all the World knows the Date of the length of ſuch Empires, and that they expire with the Power of the Poſſeſſor to defend them. And yet there is a little allowed to Conqueſt to, when it has the Sanction of Articles of Peace to confirm it: Tho' that hath not always extinguiſhed the Fire, but it lies, like Embers under Aſhes, ready to kindle ſo ſoon as there is a fit Matter prepared for it. Nevertheleſs, when Conqueſt has been confirmed by a Treaty, and Concluſion of Peace, I muſt confeſs it is an Adopted Title; and if not ſo Genuine and Natural, yet being engrafted, it is fed by that which is the Security of Better Titles, Conſent. There is but one Thing more to be mentioned in this Section, and that is from what Time Titles ſhall take their Beginning, or how far back we may look to confirm or diſpute them. It would be very bold and inexcuſable in me, to determine ſo tender a Point, but be it more or leſs Time, as to the laſt General Peace at Nimeguen, or to the commencing of this War, or to the Time of the Beginning of the Treaty of Peace, I muſt ſubmit it to the Great Pretenders and Maſters in that Affair. But ſomething every Body muſt be willing to give or quit, that he may keep the reſt, and by this Eſtabliſhment, be for ever freed of the Neceſſity of loſing more.

Sect. VII.

Sect. VII. Of the Compoſition of theſe Imperial States.

THE Compoſition and Proportion of this Soveraign Part, or Imperial State, does, at the firſt Look, ſeem to carry with it no ſmall Difficulty what Votes to allow for the Inequality of the Princes and States. But with Submiſſion to better Judgments, I cannot think it invincible: For if it be poſſible to have an Eſtimate of the Yearly Value of the ſeveral Soveraign Countries, whoſe Delegates are to make up this Auguſt Aſſembly, the Determination of the Number of Perſons or Votes in the States for every Soveraignty, will not be impracticable. Now that England, France, Spain, the Empire, &c. may be pretty exactly eſtimated, is ſo plain a Caſe, by conſidering the Revenue of Lands, the Exports and Entries at the Cuſtom-Houſes, the Books of Rates, and Surveys that are in all Governments, to proportion Taxes for the Support of them, that the leaſt Inclination to the Peace of Europe, will not ſtand or halt at this Objection. I will, with Pardon on all Sides, give an Inſtance far from Exact; nor do I pretend to it, or offer it for an Eſtimate; for I do it at Random: Only this, as wide as it is from the Juſt Proportion, will give ſome Aim to my Judicious Reader, what I would be at: Remembring, I deſign not by any Computation, an Eſtimate from the Revenue of the Prince, but the Value of the Territory, the Whole being concerned as well as the Prince. And a Juſter Meaſure it is to go by, ſince one Prince may have more Revenue than another, who has much a Richer Country: Tho' in the Inſtance I am now about to make, the Caution is not ſo Neceſſary, becauſe, as I ſaid before, I pretend to no Manner of Exactneſs, but go wholly by Gueſs, being but for Example's Sake. I ſuppoſe the Empire of Germany to ſend Twelve; France, Ten; Spain, Ten; Italy, which comes to France, Eight; England, Six; Portugal, Three; Sweedland, Four; Denmark, Three; Poland, Four; Venice, Three; the Seven Provinces, Four; The Thirteen Cantons, and little Neighbouring Soveraignties, Two; Dukedoms of Holſtein and Courland, One: And if the Turks and Muſcovites are taken in, as ſeems but fit and juſt, they will make Ten a Piece more. The Whole makes Ninety. A great Preſence when they repreſent the Fourth; and now the Beſt and Wealthieſt Part of the Known World; where Religion and Learning, Civility and Arts have their Seat and Empire. But it is not abſolutely neceſſary there ſhould be always ſo many Perſons, to repreſent the larger Soveraignties; for the Votes may be given by one Man of any Soveraignty, as well as by Ten or Twelve: Tho' the fuller the Aſſembly of States is, the more Solemn, Effectual, and Free the Debates will be, and the Reſolutions muſt needs come with greater Authority. The Place of their Firſt Seſſion ſhould be Central, as much as is poſſible, afterwards as they agree.

Sect. VIII.

Sect. VIII. Of the Regulation of the Imperial States in Seſſion.

TO avoid Quarrel for Precedency, the Room may be Round, and have divers Doors to come in and go out at, to prevent Exceptions. If the whole Number be caſt into Tens, each chuſing One, they may preſide by Turns, to whom all all Speeches ſhould be addreſſed, and who ſhould collect the Senſe of the Debates, and ſtate the Queſtion for a Vote, which, in my Opinion, ſhould be by the Ballot, after the Prudent and Commendable Method of the Venetians: Which in a great Degree, prevents the ill Effects of Corruption; becauſe if any of the Delegates of that High and Mighty Eſtates could be ſo Vile, Falſe, and Diſhonourable, as to be influenced by Money, they have the Advantage of taking their Money that will give it them, and of Voting undiſcovered to the Intereſt of their Principals, and their own Inclinations; as they that do underſtand the Balloting Box do very well know. A Shrewd Stratagem, and an Experimental Remedy againſt Corruption, at leaſt Corrupting: For who will give their Money where they may ſo eaſily be Cozened, and where it is Two to One they will be ſo; for they that will take Money in ſuch Caſes, will not ſtick to Lye heartily to them that give it, rather than wrong their Country, when they know their Lye cannot be detected.

Sect. VIII.

It ſeems to me, that nothing in this Imperial Parliament ſhould paſs, but by Three Quarters of the Whole, at leaſt Seven above the Ballance. I am ſure it helps to prevent Treachery, becauſe if Money could ever be a Temptation in ſuch a Court, it would coſt a great Deal of Money to weigh down the wrong Scale. All Complaints ſhould be delivered in Writing, in the Nature of Memorials; and Journals kept by a proper Perſon, in a Trunk or Cheſt, which ſhould have as many differing Locks, as there are Tens in the States. And if there were a Clerk for each Ten, and a Pew or Table for thoſe Clerks in the Aſſembly; and at the End of every Seſſion, One out of each Ten, were appointed to Examine and Compare the Journal of thoſe Clerks, and then lock them up as I have before expreſſed, it would be clear and Satisfactory. And each Soveraignty if they pleaſe, as is but very fit, may have an Exemplification, or Copy of the ſaid Memorials, and the Journals of Proceedings upon them. The Liberty and Rules of Speech, to be ſure, they cannot fail in, who will be the Wiſeſt and Nobleſt of each Soveraignty, for it's own Honour and Safety. If any Difference can ariſe between thoſe that come from the ſame Soveraignty, that then One of the Major Number do give the Balls of that Soveraignty. I ſhould think it extreamly neceſſary, that every Soveraignty ſhould be preſent under great Penalties, and that none leave the Seſſion without Leave, till All be finiſhed; and that Neutralities in Debates ſhould by no Means be endured: For any ſuch Latitude will quickly open a Way to unfair Proceedings, and be followed by a Train, both of ſeen, and unſeen Inconveniencies. I will ſay little of the Language in which the Seſſion of the Soveraign Eſtates ſhould be held, but to be ſure it muſt be in Latin or French; The firſt would be very well for Civilians, but the laſt moſt eaſie for Men of Quality.

Sect. IX. Of the Objections that may be advanced againſt the Deſign.

Sect. IX.

I will firſt give an Anſwer to the Objections that may be offered againſt my Propoſal: And in my next and laſt Section, I ſhall endeavour to ſhew ſome of the manifold Conveniences that would follow this European League, or Confederacy.

The firſt of them is this, That the ſtrongeſt and Richeſt Soveraignty will never agree to it, and if it ſhould, there would be Danger of Corruption more than of Force one Time or other. I anſwer to the firſt Part, he is not ſtronger than all the reſt, and for that Reaſon you ſhould promote this, and compel him into it; eſpecially before he be ſo, for then, it will be too late to deal with ſuch an one. To the laſt Part of the Objection, I ſay the Way is as open now as then; and it may be the Number fewer, and as eaſily come at. However, if Men of Senſe and Honour, and Subſtance, are choſen, they will either ſcorn the Baſeneſs, or have wherewith to pay for the Knavery: At leaſt they may be watch't ſo, that one may be a check upon the other, and all prudently limited by the Soveraignty they Repreſent. In all great Points, eſpecially before a final Reſolve, they may be obliged to tranſmit to their Principals, the Merits of ſuch important Caſes depending, and receive their laſt Inſtructions: which may be done in four and Twenty Days at the moſt, as the Place of their Seſſion may be appointed.

The Second is, That it will endanger an Effeminacy by ſuch a Diſuſe of the Trade of Soldiery; That if there ſhould be any Need for it, upon any Occaſion, we ſhould be at a Loſs as they were in Holland in 72.

There can be no Danger of Effeminacy, becauſe each Soveraignty may introduce as temperate or Severe a Diſcipline in the Education of Youth, as they pleaſe, by low Living, and due Labour. Inſtruct them in Mechanical Knowledge, and in natural Philoſophy, by Operation, which is the Honour of the German Nobility.

This would make them Men: Niether Women nor Lyons: For Soldiers are t'other Extream to Effeminacy. But the Knowledge of Nature, and the uſeful as well as agreeable Operations of Art, give Men an Underſtanding of themſelves, of the World they are born into, how to be uſeful and ſerviceable, both to themſelves and others; and how to ſave and help, not injure or deſtroy. The Knowledge of Government in General; the particular Conſtitutions of Europe; and above all, of his own Country, are very recommending Accompliſhments. This fits him for the Parliament, and Council at Home, and the Courts of Princes and Services in the Imperial States abroad. At leaſt, he is a good Common-Wealths-Man, and can be uſeful to the Publick, or retire, as there may be Occaſion.

To the other Part of the Objection, Of being at a loſs for Soldiery as they were in Holland in 72. The Propoſal anſwers for it ſelf. One has War no more than the other; and will be as much to ſeek upon Occaſion. Nor is it to be thought that any one wlll keep up ſuch an Army after ſuch an Empire is on Foot, which may hazard the Safety of the reſt. However, if it be ſeen requiſit, the Queſtion may be aſkt, by Order of the Soveraign States, why ſuch an one either raiſes or keeps up a formidable Body of Troops, and he obliged forthwith to reform or Reduce them; leſt any one, by keeping up a great Body of Troops, ſhould ſurprize a Neighbour. But a ſmall Force in every other Soveraignty, as it is capable or accuſtomed to maintain, will certainly prevent that Danger and Vanquiſh any ſuch Fear.

The Third Objection is, That there will be great Want of Employment for younger Brothers of Families; and that the Poor muſt either turn Soldiers or Thieves. I have anſwer'd that in my Return to the Second Objection. We ſhall have the more Merchants and Husbandmen, or Ingenious Naturaliſts, if the Government be but any Thing Solicitous of the Education of their Youth: Which, next to the preſent and immediate Happineſs of any Country, ought of all Things, to be the Care and Skill of the Government. For ſuch as the Youth of any Country is bred, ſuch is the next Generation, and the Government in good or bad Hands.

I am come now to the laſt Objection, That Soveraign Princes and States will hereby become not Soveraign; a Thing they will never endure. But this alſo, under Correction, is a Miſtake, for they remain as Soveraign at Home as ever they were. Neither their Power over their People, nor the uſual Revenue they pay them, is diminiſhed: It may be the War Eſtabliſhment may be reduced, which will indeed of Courſe follow, or be better employed to the Advantage of the Publick. So that the Soveraignties are as they were, for none of them have now any Soveragnty over one another: And if this be called a leſſening of their Power, it muſt be only becauſe the great Fiſh can no longer eat up the little ones, and that each Soveraignty is equally defended from Injuries, and diſabled from committing them: Cedant Arma Togæ is a Glorious Sentence; the Voice of the Dove; the Olive Branch of Peace. A Bleſſing ſo great, thar when it pleaſes God to chaſtiſe us ſeverely for our Sins, it is with the Rod of War, that, for the moſt Part, he whips us: And Experience tells us none leaves deeper Marks behind it.

Sect. X. Of the real Benefits that flow from this Propoſal about Peace.

I am come to my laſt Section, in which I ſhall enumerate ſome of thoſe many real Benefits that flow from this Propoſal, for the Preſent and Future Peace of Europe.

Let it not, I pray, be the leaſt, that it prevents the Spilling of ſo much Humane and Chriſtian Blood: For a Thing ſo offenſive to God, and terrible and afflicting to Men, as that has ever been, muſt recommend our Expedient beyond all Objections. For what can a Man give in Exchange for his Life, as well as Soul? And tho' the chiefeſt in Government are ſeldom perſonally expoſed, yet it is a Duty incumbent upon them to be tender of the Lives of their People; ſince without all Doubt, they are accountable to God for the Blood that is ſpilt in their Service. So that beſides the Loſs of ſo many Lives, of importance to any Government, both for Labour and Propagation, the Cries of ſo many Widows, Parents and Fatherleſs are prevented, that cannot be very pleaſant in the Ears of any Government, and is the Natural Conſequence of War in all Government.

There is another manifeſt Benefit which redounds to Chriſtendom, by this Peaceable Expedient, The Reputation of Chriſtianity will in ſome Degree be recovered in the Sight of Infidels; which, by the many Bloody and unjuſt Wars of Chriſtians, not only with them, but one with another, hath been greatly impaired. For, to the Scandal of that Holy Profeſſion, Chriſtians, that glory in their Saviour's Name, have long devoted the Credit and Dignity of it, to their worldly Paſſions, as often as they have been excited by the Impulſes of Ambition or Revenge. They have not always been in the Right: Nor has Right been the Reaſon of War: And not only Chriſtians againſt Chriſtians, but the ſame Sort of Chriſtians have embrewed their Hands in one another's Blood: Invoking and Intereſting, all they could, the Good and Merciful God to proſper their Arms to their Brethren's Deſtruction: Yet their Saviour has told them, that he came to ſave, and not to deſtroy the Lives of Men: To give and plant Peace among Men: And if in any Senſe he may be ſaid to ſend War, it is the Holy War indeed; for it is againſt the Devil, and not the Perſons of Men. Of all his Titles this ſeems the moſt Glorious as well as comfortable for us, that he is the Prince of Peace. It is his Nature, his Office, his Work and the End and excellent Bleſſing of his Coming, who is both the Maker and Preſerver of our Peace with God. And it is very remarkable, that in all the New Teſtament he is but once called Lyon, but frequently the Lamb of God; to denote to us his Gentle, Meek and Harmleſs Nature; and that thoſe, who deſire to be the Diſciples of his Croſs and Kingdom, for they are inſeparable, muſt be like him, as St. Paul, St. Peter and St. John tell us. Nor is it ſaid the Lamb ſhall lye down with the Lyon, but the Lyon ſhall lye down with the Lamb That is, War ſhall yield to Peace, and the Soldier turn Hermite. To be ſure, Chriſtians ſhould not be apt to ſtrive, nor ſwift to Anger againſt any Body, and leſs with one another, and leaſt of all for the uncertain and fading Enjoyments of this lower World: And no Quality is exempted from this Doctrine. Here is a wide Field for the Reverend Clergy of Europe to act their Part in, who have ſo much the Poſſeſſion of Princes and People too. May they recommend and labour this pacifick Means I offer, which will end Blood, if not Strife; and then Reaſon, upon free Debate, will be Judge, and not the Sword. So that both Right and Peace, which are the Deſire and Fruit of wiſe Governments, and the choice Bleſſings of any Country, ſeem to ſucceed the Eſtabliſhment of this Propoſal.

The third Benefit is, that it ſaves Money, both to the Prince and People; and thereby prevents thoſe Grudgings and Miſunderſtandings between them that are wont to follow the devouring Expences of War; and enables both to perform Publick Acts for Learning, Charity, Manufacturies, &c. The Virtues of Government and Ornaments of Countries. Nor is this all the Advantage that follows to Soveraignties, upon this Head of Money and good Husbandry, to whoſe Service and Happineſs this ſhort Diſcourſe is dedicated; for it ſaves the great Expence that frequent and ſplendid Embaſſies require, and all their Appendages of Spies and Intelligence, which in the moſt prudent Governments, have devoured mighty Sums of Money; and that not without ſome immoral Practices alſo: Such as Corrupting of Servants to betray their Maſters, by revealing their Secrets; not to be defended by Chriſtian or Old Roman Virtue. But here, where there is nothing to fear, there is little to know, and therefore the Purchaſe is either cheap, or may be wholly ſpared. I might mention Penſions to the Widows and Orphans of ſuch as dye in Wars, and of thoſe that have been diſabled in them; which riſe high in the Revenue of ſome Countries.

Our fourth Advantage is, that the Towns, Cities and Countries, that might be laid waſte by the Rage of War, are thereby preſerved: A Bleſſing that would be very well underſtood in Flanders and Hungary, and indeed upon all the Borders of Soveraignties, which are almoſt ever the Stages of Spoil and Miſery; of which the Stories of England and Scotland do ſufficiently inform us without looking over the Water.

The fifth Benefit of this Peace, is the Eaſe and Security of Travel and Traffick: An Happineſs never underſtood ſince the Roman Empire has been broken into ſo many Soveraignties. But we may eaſily conceive the Comfort and Advantage of travelling through the Governments of Europe, by a Paſs from any of the Soveraignties of it, which this League and State of Peace will naturally make Authentick. They that have travel'd Germany, where is ſo grear a Number of Soveraignties, know the Want and Value of this Priviledge, by the many Stops and Examinations they meet with by the Way: But eſpecially ſuch as have made the great Tour of Europe. This leads to the Benefit of an Univerſal Monarchy, without the Inconveniencies that attend it: For when the whole was one Empire, tho' theſe Advantages were enjoyed, yet the ſeveral Provinces, that now make the Kingdoms and States of Europe, were under ſome Hardſhip from the great Sums of Money remitted to the Imperial Seat, and the Ambition and Avarice of their ſeveral Proconſuls and Governours, and the great Taxes they paid to the Numerous Legions of Soldiers, that they maintained for their own Subjection, who were not wont to entertain that Concern for them (being uncertainly there, and having their Fortunes to make) which their reſpective and proper Soveraigns have always ſhown for them. So that to be Ruled by Native Princes or States, with the Advantage of that Peace and Security that can only render an Univerſal Monarchy deſirable, is peculiar to our Propoſal, and for that Reaſon it is to be preferred.

Another Advantage is, The Great Security it will be to Chriſtians againſt the Inroads of the Turk, in their moſt Proſperous Fortune. For it had been impoſſible for the Port, to have prevailed ſo often, and ſo far upon Chriſtendom, but by the Careleſneſs, or Wilful Connivence, if not Aid, of ſome Chriſtian Princes. And for the ſame Reaſon, why no Chriſtian Monarch will adventure to oppoſe, or break ſuch an Union, the Grand Seignior will find himſelf obliged to concur, for the Security of what he holds in Europe: Where, with all his Strength, he would feel it an Over-Match for him. The Prayers, Tears, Treaſon, Blood and Devaſtation, that War has coſt in Chriſtendom, for theſe Two laſt Ages eſpecially, muſt add to the Credit of our Propoſal, and the Bleſſing of the Peace thereby humbly recommended.

The Seventh Advantage, of an European, Imperial Dyet, Parliament, or Eſtates, is, That it will beget and increaſe Perſonal Friendſhip between Princes and States, which tends to the Rooting up of Wars, and Planting Peace in a Deep and Fruitful Soil. For Princes have the Curioſity of ſeeing the Courts and Cities of other Countries, as well as Private Men, if they could as ſecurely and familiarly gratify their Inclinations. It were a great Motive to the Tranquility of the World, That they could freely Converſe Face to Face, and Perſonally and Reciprocally Give and Receive Marks of Civility and Kindneſs. An Hoſpitality that leaves theſe Impreſſions behind it, will hardly let Ordinary Matters prevail, to Miſtake or Quarrel one another. Their Emulation would be in the Inſtances of Goodneſs, Laws, Cuſtoms, Learning, Arts, Buildings; and in particular thoſe that relate to Charity, the True Glory of ſome Governments, where Beggars are as much a Rarity, as in other Places it would be to ſee none.

Nor is this all the Benefit that would come by this Freedom and Interview of Princes: For Natural Affection would hereby be preſerved, which we ſee little better than loſt, from the Time their Children, or Siſters, are Married into other Courts. For the preſent State and Inſincerity of Princes forbid them the Enjoyment of that Natural Comfort which is poſſeſt by Private Families: Inſomuch, that from the Time a Daughter, or Siſter, is Married to another Crown, Nature is ſubmitted to Intereſt, and that, for the moſt Part, grounded not upon Solid or Commendable Foundations, but Ambition, or Unjuſt Avarice. I ſay, this Freedom, that is the Effect of our Pacifick Propoſal, reſtores Nature to Her Juſt Right and Dignity in the Families of Princes, and them to the Comfort She brings, wherever She is preſerved in Her proper Station. Here Daughters may Perſonally intreat their Parents, and Siſters their Brothers, for a Good Underſtanding between them and their Huſbands, where Nature, not cruſh'd by Abſence, and Siniſter Intereſts, but acting by the Sight and Lively Entreaties of ſuch near Relations, is almoſt ſure to prevail. They cannot eaſily reſiſt the moſt affectionate Addreſſes of ſuch powerful Solicitors, as their Children, and Grand-Children, and their Siſters, Nephews, and Neices: And ſo backward from Children to Parents, and Siſters to Brothers, to keep up and preſerve their own Families, by a good Underſtanding between their Huſbands and them.

To conclude this Section, there is yet another Manifeſt Privilege that follows this Intercourſe and Good Underſtanding, which methinks ſhould be very moving with Princes, viz. That hereby they may chuſe Wives for themſelves, ſuch as they Love, and not by Proxy, meerly to gratify Intereſt; an ignoble Motive; and that rarely begets, or continues that Kindneſs which ought to be between Men and their Wives. A Satisfaction very few Princes ever knew, and to which all other Pleaſures ought to reſign. Which has often obliged me to think, That the Advantage of Private Men upon Princes, by Family Comforts, is a ſufficient Ballance againſt their Greater Power and Glory: The One being more in Imagination, than Real; and often Unlawful; but the other, Natural, Solid, and Commendable. Beſides, it is certain, Parents Loving Well before they are Married, which very rarely happens to Princes, has Kind and Generous Influences upon their Offſpring: Which, with their Example, makes them better Huſbands, and Wives, in their Turn. This, in great Meaſure, prevents Unlawful Love, and the Miſchiefs of thoſe Intriegues that are wont to follow them: What Hatred, Feuds, Wars, and Deſolations have, in divers Ages, flown from Unkindneſs between Princes and their Wives? What Unnatural Diviſions among their Children, and Ruin to their Families, if not Loſs of their Countries by it? Behold an Expedient to prevent it, a Natural and Efficacious One: Happy to Princes, and Happy to their People alſo. For Nature being renewed and ſtrengthned by theſe Mutual Pledges and Endearments, I have mentioned, will leave thoſe ſoft and kind Impreſſions behind in the Minds of Princes, that Court and Country will very eaſily diſcern and feel the Good Effects of: Eſpecially if they have the Wiſdom to ſhow that they Intereſt themſelves in the Proſperity of the Children and Relations of their Princes. For it does not only incline them to be Good, but engage thoſe Relations to become Powerful Suitors to their Princes for them, if any Miſunderſtanding ſhould unhappily ariſe between them and their Soveraigns: Thus ends this Section. It now reſts to conclude the Diſcourſe, in which, if I have not pleaſed my Reader, or anſwered his Expectation, it is ſome Comfort to me I meant well, and have coſt him but little Money and Time; and Brevity is an Excuſe, if not a Virtue, where the Subject is not agreeable, or is but ill proſecuted.

The CONCLUSION.

I Will conclude this My Propoſal of an European, Soveraign, or Imperial Dyet, Parliament, or Eſtates, with that which I have touch'd upon before, and which falls under the Notice of every One concerned, by coming Home to their Particular and Reſpective Experience within their own Soveraignties. That by the ſame Rules of Juſtice and Prudence, by which Parents and Maſters Govern their Families, and Magiſtrates their Cities, and Eſtates their Republicks, and Princes and Kings their Principalities and Kingdoms, Europe may Obtain and Preſerve Peace among Her Soveraignties. For Wars are the Duels of Princes; and as Government in Kingdoms and States, Prevents Men being Judges and Executioners for themſelves, over-rules Private Paſſions as to Injuries or Revenge, and ſubjects the Great as well as the Small to the Rule of Juſtice, that Power might not vanquiſh or oppreſs Right, nor one Neighbour act an Independency and Soveraignty upon another, while they have reſigned that Original Claim to the Benefit and Comfort of Society; ſo this being ſoberly weighed in the Whole, and Parts of it, it will not be hard to conceive or frame, nor yet to execute the Deſign I have here propoſed.

And for the better underſtanding and perfecting of the Idea, I here preſent to the Soveraign Princes and Eſtates of Europe, for the Safety and Tranquility of it, I muſt recommend to their Peruſals, Sir William Temple's Account of the United Provinces; which is an Inſtance and Anſwer, upon Practice, to all the Objections that can be advanced againſt the Practicability of my Propoſal: Nay, it is an Experiment that not only comes to our Caſe, but exceeds the Difficulties that can render it's Accompliſhment diſputable. For there we ſhall find Three Degrees of Soveraignties to make up every Soveraignty in the General States. I will reckon them backwards: Firſt, The States General themſelves; Then the Immediate Soveraignties that Conſtitute them, which are thoſe of the Provinces, anſwerable to the Soveraignties of Europe, that by their Deputies are to compoſe the European Dyet, Parliament, or Eſtates, in our Propoſal: And then there are the ſeveral Cities of each Province, that are ſo many Independent or Diſtinct Soveraignties, which compoſe thoſe of the Provinces, as thoſe of the Provinces do compoſe the States General at the Hague.

But I confeſs I have the Paſſion to wiſh heartily, that the Honour of Propoſing and Effecting ſo Great and Good a Deſign, might be owing to England, of all the Countries in Europe, as ſomething of the Nature of our Expedient was, in Deſign and Preparation, to the Wiſdom, Juſtice, and Valour, Of Henry the Fourth of France, whoſe Superior Qualities raiſing His Character above thoſe of His Anceſtors, or Contemporaries, deſervedly gave Him the Stile of Henry the Great. For He was upon obliging the Princes and Eſtates of Europe to a Politick Ballance, when the Spaniſh Faction, for that Reaſon, contrived, and accompliſhed His Murder, by the Hands of Ravilliac. I will not then fear to be cenſured, for propoſing an Expedient for the Preſent and Future Peace of Europe, when it was not only the Deſign, but Glory of One of the Greateſt Princes that ever Reigned in it; and is found Practicable in the Conſtitution of One of the Wiſeſt and Powerfulleſt States of it. So that to conclude, I have very Little to anſwer for in all this Affair; becauſe, if it ſucceed, I have ſo Little to deſerve: For this Great King's Example tells us it is fit to be done; and Sir William Temple's Hiſtory ſhews us, by a Surpaſſing Inſtance, That it may be done; and Europe, by Her incomparable Miſeries, makes it now Neceſſary to be done: That my Share is only thinking of it at this Juncture, and putting it into the Common Light for the Peace and Proſperity of Europe.

A VISITATION to the Jews: To the Seed of Abraham, and Houſe of Iſrael, after the Fleſh, where-ever ſcattered over the Face of the whole Earth, to whoſe Hands this cometh, Faith, Hope and Charity: Grace, Mercy, and Peace, be revealed and multiplied in the midſt of you.

MANY Times have you been freſh in my Remembrance with tender Compaſſion and ſtrong Cries to the God of your Fathers, Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, that the Time of your Captivity may come to an End, and that of your Deliverance, yea the ſet Time to favour you, may make Haſte, who were the natural Branches broken off through Unbelief, and which by Faith may come again to be engrafted, through the Circumciſion made without Hands, that the Hope of the Promiſe made to your Fathers may be manifeſted among you. Know ye, that ſo ſoon as I had looked over the * foregoing Treatiſe in Manuſcript, and obſerv'd it related to you as well as to Chriſtians, it came in my Mind to take this Opportunity to begin the Expreſſion of that Concern which hath for ſome Time reſted with me in your Regard. And eaſily foreſeeing the Objection you might be apt to make upon the Pains and Good-will of the Author of the ſaid Diſcourſe, I felt great Clearneſs to add this to his Work, to obviate the ſame, that ſo the Intent and Scope thereof may come with more Weight and Succeſs upon your Minds.

* Note, this was written by Way of Appendix, to a Book, call'd, The Harmony of the Old and New Teſtaments.

You will perhaps object, that the Author begs the Queſtion in what he concludes his Harmony from, in as much as you own not the Authority of the New Teſtament Scripture, and from Premiſes that are denied, nothing can be inferred that is concluſive upon you.

But if you have no Reaſon to deny the Authority of the New Teſtament-Writings any more than we have to deny the Authority of the Old, in which you ſo firmly believe, it is as reaſonable in us to expect you ſhould receive the Authority of the New, as that we ſhould embrace the Authority of the Old. For what have you to juſtify the Truth of thoſe Writings but the Impoſſibility of ſo many People's conſenting to delude themſelves, and being able and ſo wicked to impoſe upon their Poſterity a Fiction about the great and important Matters of Immortality.

For the Miracles recorded in the Old Teſtament-Scriptures, are as much above Reaſon, and conſequently as Incredible to worldly Men, as the Miracles Recorded in the New Teſtament-Scriptures, ſo that the Authority you have for the Old Teſtament-Writings is the Truth and Credibility of their Tradition. This, we ſay, we alſo have for ours. How could ſo many Men that you have not taxed with ill Lives, or Atheiſtical Principles, agree together to put ſo great an Impoſture upon the World, as the Pen-men of the New Teſtament-Writings muſt needs have done, if what they write were Fictions? You cannot deny, but that there was ſuch a Man as Jeſus, and that he was put to Death by your Fathers, though pretended as a Malefactor, and that he had Followers, and that thoſe Followers of his aſſerted and maintained the Doctrine of their Maſter; where is there any Confutation of what is affirmed of the Deeds and Doctrines of Jeſus by his Writers in the whole Body of your Antiquity, that he wrought none of the Miracles ſaid to be wrought by him.

Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, were Men, and ſome of them lived not the Periods of Mortality, the two firſt being reported to have been put to Death for their Maſter's Doctrines, and ſo died before their Time, by which Means many of that Generation out-lived them: How comes it, that while they were alive, their Writings were not confuted, when it ſtood thoſe Jews ſo much upon to do it? Hiſtorians make Jeſus to have wrought his Miracles, not in Secret, but among (a) the Multitudes, as his feeding Five Thouſand at one Time, (b) and Five Thouſand at another Time, with that which would have ſatisfied but a few Perſons: So that you have more than their Authority for what they ſay; for that is an Appeal to other Witneſs, by which Means his Enemies had it in their Power to have confuted them in their Days, if not true. But eſpecially in the noted Places, as of the Man born (c) Blind. The (d) Lepers cleanſed; the (e) poſſeſſed with Devils. And the Man with a (f) withered Hand. The Daughter of Jairus (g) by Name, one of your Rulers, whom he raiſed to Life. Alſo the raiſing of (h) Lazarus from the Dead after he had lain four Days in the Grave, and ſo many Jews ſaid to be by, ſeeing the Miracle: His turning (i) Water into Wine at a Marriage. The Conference with the (k) Woman of Samaria at Jacob's Well; the (l) healing the Centurion's Servant. And the High Prieſt's Servant's (m) Ear after it was cut off, &c. We may add the Story of (n) Zacharias, the Father of John the Baptiſt, the Fore-runner of Jeſus Chriſt, and of the Soldiers Parting (o) his Garments among them. And that a Bone of him was not (p) broken. And of his Reſurrection to the (q) Terror of the Keepers of his Sepulchre: And our Hiſtorian convicts the Chief Prieſts and Elders of Bribery and Forgery, who, to belye his Reſurrection to blind the People, bid the Soldiers ſay, (r) his Diſciples came by Night and ſtole him away, while they ſlept, and which they would not have mentioned if Truth had not been on their Side, for Fear of being diſproved, and puniſhed, Power as well as Wrath being on their Enemies Side; alſo I may add, the Paſſage of the (s) Shepherds, to whom the Angels appeared by Night, to bring them the good Tidings of the Birth of Chriſt, and with the Angel an Heavenly Hoſt praiſing God. And the wiſe Men (t) that came out of the Eaſt to worſhip him, and of the (u) Star that then appeared, from which a Religious and Learned Man at Cambridge, by the common and regular Rules of * Art, proves by the Diſpoſition, Harmony, and Voice of the Celeſtial Bodies, that the Meſſiah was at that Time to come, and that Jeſus was the Meſſiah. Alſo his ſending ſome of his Diſciples in ſo extraordinary a Manner to fetch the † Aſſes Colt. And to take a (x) Room for him to eat the Paſſover, and the Owner's immediate Submiſſion as to their Great Lord and Proprietor, with Abundance more, as his Conferences with the Phariſees, Sadducees, &c. in which his Writers make him ſo viſibly and convincingly to have the Better of them. And that he cured a Man who had been lame (y) Thirty Eight Years. And another Man alſo cured by two of his Diſciples, (z) Peter and John, who had been lame from his Mother's Womb, and ſate Begging at the Gate of the Temple called Beautiful. I ſay, that theſe Things, if they had been falſe, your Anceſtors, to have juſtified themſelves, would certainly not have been ſo Wanting to their own Credit, as not to have made it a Reaſon againſt the Credibility of Chriſtianity, to the Followers of Chriſt or his Apoſtles, ſince ſo many were taken with them. But nothing in any of your Antiquities undertakes to ſhew, that thoſe Hiſtorians have impoſed upon the World, in the Account they give of the Life, Doctrines, and Miracles of their Maſter. Had they done it, we had heard of it among our Evangeliſts, that before, I obſerve, reported the Objections and Endeavours of your Anceſtors to ſmother the Credit of his Reſurrection. But all they ſaid to his mighty Deeds, that they report, was, that by Beelzebub he caſt out Devils.

It is true, above 200 Years after, Tryphon the Jew, and Celſus the Gentile cavilled at the Chriſtian Religion, and at the Meanneſs of the Appearance and Manner of Chriſt's Coming, rather oppoſing his Miracles with Miracles, to abate his Authority, than diſproving of them. But they were anſwered at large by Juſtin and Origen. But not one Word of the aforeſaid Adverſaries giving this Account:

That whereas the Followers of Jeſus affirm, He cured the Blind and Lame, and particularly the Daughter of Jairus, and diſpoſſeſſed Evil Spirits, and ſuffered them to enter into an Herd of Swine, and that the Swine ran down a ſteep Hill into the Sea, and that thereupon the Gadarenes *deſired him to quit their Coaſts. Alſo about turning Water into Wine at the Marriage. Feeding the Multitudes. 1695. thority of ſo Ancient and Sacred a Tradition, as the Writings we call the New Teſtament, that are cited by the moſt eminent Writers ſince the Time of Jeſus, Ignat. Epiſt. even as early as Ignatius, the Diſciple of Polycarpus, if not of John, one of the Twelve Diſciples? Add to this the Prophecy, in the New Teſtament, is reported to have been uttered of the Future State of your Anceſtors, their Temple and City of Jeruſalem, mentioned by the Three Firſt Hiſtorians, that that Generation ſhould not paſs away before great Diſtreſſes ſhould overtake them, ſuch as had never been before, particularly Luke 21. 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, and Cap. 23. 28, 29, 30, where Jeſus bids the Women weep for themſelves and their Children, becauſe of the Diſtreſſes that ſhould fall upon Jeruſalem and that People; that tho' to be Barren was a Sort of Curſe under the Law, yet they ſhould bleſs the Womb that never bare, and the Paps that never gave Suck, becauſe of the Woes and Diſtreſſes that ſhould come upon the Childing Daughters of Jeruſalem. And indeed the Way your Fathers took to ſave themſelves (not being guided by God's Counſel) proved the very Means of their Deſtruction; for as they unreaſonably feared the Romans, crying, the Romans will come and take away our Country, and made that a Reaſon to put Jeſus to Death, that he was an Enemy to Cæſar, to ſoften Cæſar to them, ſo the Innocent Blood of Jeſus, by the Judgment of God, haſtned the Coming of the Romans, and the Obſtinacy with which they reſiſted the Romans, who would have preſerved the City, and Temple, and People, and offered them ſo to do, would they ſubmit, proved the Deſtruction of the Nation, as * Joſephus, a Jewiſh Hiſtorian confeſſeth; ſo that if our Tradition, which makes your Anceſtors to curſe themſelves and their Poſterity, ſaying to Pilate, His Blood be on us and our Children, were not true in Fact: The dreadful Things that followed, to wit, the unparallel'd Miſeries that People fell by, in that Hiſtorian expreſſed, and the long Captivity they have lain under ever ſince, has been as great and terrible as if they had put the Son of God to Death. And indeed if you did but conſider how very like to Chriſt's Parable of the Vineyard, Luke 20. 9. your Anceſtors Caſe was, it ſhould incline you to believe in that Holy Preacher of it, viz. that after the Tenants had beaten and Stoned their Lord's Servants, he ſent his Son, and they conſpired and killed him, and what Miſeries thoſe Servants drew upon themſelves thereby, which the Scripture ſays they underſtood Chriſt to have ſpoken of them. And comparing the miſerable Exit and diſmal Period your Nation made ſoon after, how can you but think he was ſent of God, and that by ſuch Doctrine he warned them of what was haſtening upon them, and that hitting their Caſe ſo exactly, as to their Anceſtors, and their Sins, and the foretelling by that very Parable, not only his own Death, but their End and Judgment, as he did afterwards more directly in the two before-cited Propheſies; and ſince that your Fathers at that Time expected the Meſſiah, and yet then were deſtroyed, inſtead of being reſtored, by the Meſſiah, ſhould you not conſider if it were not ſo, becauſe of their not knowing, but deſtroying him, when he came? I know you think (and that miſled your Fathers) that the Meſſiah ſhould be known of all Men, and come with an outward Irreſiſtible Power, and by Force overcome all the Enemies, and redeem you, and ſubject them, and that the whole Earth ſhould flow in unto him as a mighty Monarch of this World. But what then will you do with the 53d of Iſaiah, and divers other Places of the Prophets, that ſo particularly and pathetically relate to the Paſſion of the Meſſiah, how he ſhould ſuffer, &c. What Holy One (a) was that (which came ſo near, and yet) was not to ſee Corruption? What (b) Shepherd was that, which being ſmitten, the Sheep were ſcattered, though he be called God's Fellow. Who was he that was to be for a (c) Snare and Stone of Stumbling, and a Rock of Offence to the Inhabitants of Jeruſalem? But this was their Stumbling (d) Stone and Rock of Offence; they miſtook the Manner of his Appearance; they were Carnal, Worldly, and Degenerate, and they had Ideas and Notions of a Meſſiah accordingly; they looked for an outward before an inward Deliverance; and to be ſaved from the Romans, before they were ſaved from their Sins. They waited for a Meſſiah indeed, but one after their own hard Hearts and worldly Wiſdom, not after God's, and ſo knew him not when he came. He came to ſave what was loſt; firſt within and then without; they looked without firſt, and ſo fell ſhort. Thoſe that were deſtroyed by Titus Veſpaſian, you will eaſily conceive were not qualify'd to embrace the true Meſſiah: Had they feared God, and walked in his Statutes and his Judgments, had they had Hearts of Fleſh and not of Stone, they had not been ſo caſt off; they had not been deſtroyed as they were, but would have known him, that they rejected, to have been the Meſſiah. O that you you would deeply weigh that terrible Period, and lamentable and diſtinguiſhing Judgment upon you as a Nation, by the Hands of the Romans, and what it is that could provoke God to ſuch an aſtoniſhing Stroke upon his once Beloved People, if it could be any Thing ſhort of reſiſting his greateſt Meſſenger, his Meſſiah, the Chriſt and Son of God, for he hath not dealt ſo in all Reſpects with any People. And while you thus reſiſt, you will reſiſt your own Mercies, for at this Door you muſt come in, before the glorious Propheſies and Promiſes, that relate to you, are accompliſhed to you.; and I hope the Day is at Hand. Conſider with your ſelves what Sort of Meſſiah was to come according to the Scriptures, and how far the Life, Doctrine, &c. of our Saviour, accords to him; concerning which, I ſhall now hint but that one Place of Iſaiah, Cap. 61. 1. 2. 3. on which our New Teſtament-Scripture, ſays Jeſus, opening the Book, expounded it to the People, touching the Work and Office of the Meſſiah, viz. The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, becauſe the Lord hath Anointed me to preach Good Tidings to the Meek; he hath ſent me to bind up the Broken-hearted, to proclaim Liberty to the Captives, and the Opening of the Priſon to them that are bound; to proclaim the acceptable Year of the Lord, and the Day of Vengeance of our God. To Comfort all that Mourn; to appoint unto them that Mourn in Zion; to give unto them Beauty for Aſhes, the Oil of Joy for Mourning; the Garment of Praiſe for the Spirit of Heavineſs, that they might be called the Trees of Righteouſneſs; the Planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified.

By which it appears, that the inward Work was to go firſt, and the End cannot be known where the Beginning is rejected: Conſider with your ſelves, I beſeech you, how this Character agrees with that Carnal Notion your Fathers had, and you have, of the Meſſiah.

This Meſſiah was a Preacher, not a Soldier, or a worldly Conqueror, and his Work Inward and Spiritual; and had your Anceſtors been true Mourners, truly Meek, of broken Hearts, ſenſible of their Servitude to the Enemy of their own Houſes, (Sin within) and had waited for ſuch a Conſolation and Deliverer, they could not have miſſed to have ſeen and received him. For his Sermon on the (e) Mount had an exact Harmony with that Prophecy, as alſo with the Eleventh Chapter of Iſaiah, becauſe the Doctrine he preached relates to the vanquiſhing of Sin and Evil Appetites, and becoming Pure and Peaceable, Meek and Harmleſs, and Holy, in the Sight of God and Men, to which thoſe Propheſies relate; if you will give your ſelves the Time to read his Sermons, you will ſee therein an exact Draught of Piety, and Man met with in all his Infirmities, being plainly and briefly laid open, and their proper Remedies; not like an Impoſtor, which ſeeks himſelf, for he ſought not his own Glory, but denied it, and taught his Followers ſo to do, which cuts up by the Roots the very Motives and Ends of all Impoſtors. For, conſider, his Doctrine leads to Repentance, Humility, Meekneſs, Purity, Love and Charity, to the utmoſt that Mankind is capable of; but if you will look back upon thoſe that have pretended among you to be the Meſſiah, you ſhall not find them carried forth with ſuch Sort of Doctrine, as well as that they had not that Power and Spirit. For, as Iſaiah (f) Propheſied, He was of Jeſſe: He was an Enſign to the People, the Gentiles ſought to him, and his Reſt was glorious to them. For you cannot but ſee the Succeſs that followed the Diſciples of Jeſus; how greatly they multiplied, and what Power they got over Countries and Kingdoms, and the Courts and Armies of Princes; not by Arms and Policy, but Piety and Sufferings, whilſt you were driven away from your own Land, and wandred up and down in the Earth. It is true indeed you may ſay, that Mahomet became great in his Followers, yet we will not allow that Greatneſs to his Goodneſs. The Caſe vaſtly differs; one's Kingdom was of this World, the others not; one gained his Intereſt over the Hearts of Men, by the Purity, Patience, Humility, Mercy, and Charity of his Doctrine, the other by Factions, and Force. It is true, the Chriſtians in general are much degenerated, to the Scandal of Religion; but this no more debaſes the Value of the Holy Author of it, than your Fore-fathers and your Degenerating can queſtion the Reputation and Truth of Moſes your Lawgiver.

And it is to be feared ſome Terrible Criſis is at Hand, with Reference to ſuch Parts of the Chriſtian World, as have out-lived their Religion; I mean a True Zeal and Love for Religion. For they have Crucified Chriſt afreſh to themſelves, by their Shameleſs Lives, and put Him and His Holy Religion to Open Shame, viz. to Jews and Infidels. Sad for them would it be, though well for you, if their Fall 1695. ſhould be your Riſe, as your ſad Fall was their Riſe: Wherefore it is earneſtly deſired that Chriſtians would Repent and amend their Lives, and return to God with unfeigned Hearts. I ſhall conclude to you, that as your Fathers could never have fallen by ſo ſevere an Hand as they have done, ſince the Coming of Him, whom we believe to be the Meſſiah, had they been a Godly People, of Clean Hearts and Right Spirits, waiting in God's Way for Deliverance; ſo I do earneſtly deſire of God in your Behalf, that you may not loſe the Bleſſing and Comfort of your Return, by an unprepared Frame of Spirit to receive the Divine Goodneſs in the Way of his Viſitations to you. If you will but turn in your Minds, and conſider that His Divine Light Shines in you, and ſhews you the Error and Vanity of your Minds and Affections, and if you would but give up your ſelves Conſcientiouſly to obey the ſame, through the Courſe of your Lives, you would become a Tender People, and diſcern the Law of God to be written in your Hearts, which is nearer than that upon the Stone which Moſes gave your Fathers; and as by this Inward Work of the Divine Spirit, you come to have your Underſtandings opened, and Minds Seaſoned, you will quickly ſee where your Fathers miſt the Mark, and what the True Meſſiah ſhould be, and the Work that belongs to Him to do, in Reference to your Deliverance and Salvation. And Hear, and Bear, this Word, I beſeech you, from me; you can never ſee, know, or have the Happineſs of the Coming of the Meſſiah, till you come to a Prepared Frame of Mind. You muſt repent of your Sins, turn from them, and watch againſt all Temptations, not to commit them again; and in this State and Condition of Mind and Spirit, you will know a Fitting, to receive and own the Meſſiah, and enjoy the Bleſſed Benefits that accrue by Him, to all thoſe that embrace Him. He did come Sufferingly, and will come Triumphantly; but thoſe only can receive Him, and have the Comfort and Advantage of His Firſt and Second Coming, that come to know and receive Him in His Light and Spirit in their Hearts.

And I teſtify to you, and I know my Teſtimony is True, That you have a Meaſure of that Light in you, that comes from Him, and by it's Works you may know it, For it ſhews you your Sins, Convicts and Rebukes you for them, and will comfort you in your Obedience and Conformity to God's Precepts: And if you would but give your Hearts to the Holy Conduct of it, that it may lead you and guide you to God's Holy Hill (as King David prayed, Pſal. 43. 3.) you would not blame thoſe called Chriſtians, for acknowledging this Chriſt, to be God's Meſſiah; but for the manifeſt diſowning of Him by their Evil Lives, and contrary Practices to his excellent Precepts, that walk diſorderly among them. Prepare therefore to meet thy God, O Iſrael! Waſh you, O Houſe of Jacob! And make you Clean; put away the Evil of your Doings, and turn to the Lord your God, with all your Heart, and with all your Soul, that the Lord may turn away your Captivity, as the Rivers of the South. That your dry Bones may live, and the Hope that may be begotten again in you, God may anſwer, and he whom you look for will ſuddenly come, and will not tarry, and in ſuch a Way as ſhall abundantly ſatisfy you: And the Fulneſs of the Gentiles ſhall flow in, and the Glory of the God of your Fathers ſhall be great over all the Earth:

Accept this ſmall Viſitation as a Token of Love to you, the Houſe of Jacob, and Seed of Abraham, after the Fleſh; for tho' the foregoing Book was not writ on Purpoſe to you (elſe it had been in a more direct and exact Manner) but to ſhew the Harmony of Scriptures, chiefly in Reference to Chriſt, for them that believe the Writings of both Teſtaments for their Edification and Comfort; yet as the Accompliſhment of ſome of the Ancient Propheſies concerns you, you muſt needs be intereſted therein; and the ſecond Preface and this Appendix are ſent you, to intreat your Peruſal and Serious Conſideration of them. And the Great God give you Underſtanding, to diſcern the Things that are therein mentioned, which concern your Everlaſting Peace.

And now to you called Chriſtians, I direct the Concluſion of this Appendix; you have been long priviledged with the Mercies of God, as much above the Jews ſince the Death of Chriſt, as the Jews were priviledged above you under the Diſpenſation of Moſes: Be you warned by the Diſmal Puniſhment of that People, that you fall not under the ſame Sentence and Judgment. I have often, of late Time, ſorrowfully reflected upon your great Abuſe of the manifold Bleſſings of God; how little the Generality of you have of the Life and Power of Religion; how Formal, Covetous, Proud, Vain and Uncharitable you are, being Chriſtians in Name, but Crucifying to your ſelves afreſh the Lord of Life and Glory, and putting Him, and

His

1695. His Holy Religion to open Shame, by your diſagreeable Lives to His Heavenly Precepts and Examples; whereby you do Deſpite to the Spirit of God, that would teach you to deny Ungodlineſs and Worldly Luſts, and to Live Soberly, Righteouſly, and Godly in this preſent Evil World. And ſo Great and Scandalous has the Apoſtacy of many of you been, that Jews, Turks and Infidels, have been ſtumbled by your Evil Examples, againſt the Holy Name and Religion you profeſs, which is acting the Second Part of the Jewiſh Tragedy (you ſeem ſo much to abhor) upon the Saviour of the World. O Hear, Fear, and Repent, leſt you come to ſuffer the like Judgment the Jews did. God has viſited you in this Age, by the Teſtimony of a Poor People (eſpecially in theſe Nations) in the Name and Power of the Second Adam, bearing Witneſs to His Second and Spiritual Appearance in Man, to wit, As a Light Shining in the Inward Parts, who was, and is the Light of the World, and in which Light the Nations of them that are ſaved muſt walk. To this you ſhould have turned your Minds, and brought your Deeds, and conformed your Lives, which was the Path, Rule and Armour, of the Ancient Chriſtians; but you have deſpiſed their Teſtimony, and perſecuted them for it, and ſlighted the Light it ſelf, calling it by many Reproachful Names, as did the Jews, when manifeſted in Fleſh among them: So that it has often been in my Mind of late, and I have freely, on ſome publick Occaſions, declared my Fears, that as it is now about the ſame Diſtance of Time ſince the Teſtimony of the Coming of the Son of God in Spirit in our Day, as it was between the coming forth of Chriſt in His Miniſtry in the Fleſh, and the Deſtruction of Jeruſalem, (which was the moſt terrible that ever was known amongſt Men) ſo I fear Great Deſolation (without great Repentance) is at Hand, becauſe of the ſame Sin, viz. A reſiſting of the Son of God in His Light and Spirit in His Servants and your own Conſciences; oppoſing as the Jews did, Form to Power, Letter to Spirit, Ceremonies to Subſtance, and Scripture to Chriſt: Doing Deſpite to Him in His Members, with an high Hand, though He would often have gathered you, as a Hen gathereth her Chickens under her Wings: O that you may be Wiſe, and meet the Lord in the Way of His Judgments, before his fierce Wrath be kindled, and an irrevocable Sentence be ſealed againſt you, and you are utterly caſt off, and God remove the Viſitation of His Light and Truth to another People, that will receive it, in the Love of it, more than you have done.

The EPISTLE to the READER.

Reader,

BY this ſhort enſuing Treatiſe, thou wilt perceive the Subject of it, viz. The Light of Chriſt in Man, as the Manifeſtation of God's Love for Man's Happineſs. Now, for as much as this is the Peculiar Teſtimony and Characteriſtick of the People called Quakers; their Great Fundamental in Religion; That by which they have been diſtinguiſhed from other Profeſſors of Chriſtianity in their Time, and to which they refer all People about Faith, Worſhip, and Practice, both in their Miniſtry and Writings; that as the Fingers ſhoot out of the Hand, and the Branches from the Body of the Tree; ſo True Religion, in all the Parts and Articles of it, Springs from this Divine Principle in Man. And becauſe the Prejudices of ſome are very great againſt this People and their Way; and that others, who love their Seriouſneſs, and commend their Good Life, are yet, through Miſtakes, or want of Enquiry, under Jealouſie of their Unſoundneſs in ſome Points of Faith; and that there are not a few in all Perſwaſions, which deſire earneſtly to know and enjoy God in that Senſible Manner this People ſpeak of, and who ſeem to long after a State of Holineſs and Acceptance with God; but are under Doubts and Deſpondings of their attaining it, from the Want they find in themſelves of Inward Power to enable them, and are unacquainted with this Efficacious Agent, which God hath given and appointed for their Supply.

For theſe Reaſons and Motives, know, Reader, I have taken in Hand to write this Small Tract, Of the Nature and Virtue of the Light of Chriſt Within Man; what, and where it is, and for what End, and therein of the Religion of the People called Quakers; that, at the ſame Time, all People may be informed of their True Character, and what True Religion is, and the Way to it, in this Age of High Pretences, and as deep Irreligion. That ſo the Merciful Viſitation of the God of Light and Love, (more eſpecially to theſe Nations) both immediately and inſtrumentally, for the Promotion of Piety, (which is Religion indeed) may no longer be neglected by the Inhabitants thereof, but that they may come to ſee and ſay, with Heart and Mouth, This is a Diſpenſation of Love and Life from God to the World; and this Poor People, that we have ſo much deſpiſed, and ſo often trod upon, and treated as the Off-ſcouring of the Earth, are the People of God, and Children of the Moſt High. Bear with me, Reader, I know what I ſay, and am not High-Minded, but fear: For I write with Humility towards God, tho' with Confidence towards thee. Not that thou ſhouldſt believe upon my Authority, nothing leſs; for that's not to act upon Knowledge, but Truſt; but that thou ſhould'ſt try and approve what I write: For that is all I aſk, as well as all I need for thy Conviction, and my own Juſtification. The Whole, indeed, being but a Spiritual Experiment up[illegible] the Soul, and therefore ſeeks for no implicit Credit, becauſe it is Self-evident to them that will uprightly try it.

And when thou, Reader, ſhalt come to be acquainted with this Principle, and the Plain and Happy Teachings of it, thou wilt, with us, admire thou ſhould'ſt live ſo long a Stranger to that which was ſo near thee, and as much wonder that other Folks ſhould be ſo blind as not to ſee it, as formerly thou thoughteſt us Singular for obeying it. The Day, I believe, is at Hand that will declare this with an uncontroulable Authority, becauſe it will be with an unqueſtionable Evidence.

I have done, Reader, with this Preface, when I have told thee, Firſt, That I have ſtated the Principle, and opened, as God has enabled me, the Nature and Virtue of it in Religion; wherein the common Doctrines and Articles of the Chriſtian Religion, are delivered and improved; and about which, I have endeavoured to expreſs my ſelf in Plain and Proper Terms, and not in Figurative, Allegorical, or Doubtful Phraſes; That ſo I may leave no Room for an Equivocal or Double Senſe; but that the Truth of the Subject I treat upon, may appear eaſily and evidently to every common Under*ſtanding. Next, I have confirmed what I have writ, by Scripture, Reaſon, and the Effects of it upon ſo Great a People; whoſe Uniform Concurrence in the Experience and Practice thereof, through all Times and Sufferings, ſince a People, challenge the Notice and Regard of every* Serious Reader. Thirdly, I have written briefly, that ſo it might be every One's Money and Reading: And, Much in a Little is Beſt, when we ſee daily that the Richer People grow, the Leſs Money or Time they have for God or Religion: And perhaps thoſe that would not buy a large Book, may find in their Hearts to give away ſome of theſe for their Neighbour's Good, being Little and Cheap. Be Serious, Reader, be Impartial, and then be as Inquiſitive as thou canſt; and that for thine own Soul, as well as the Credit of this moſt miſunderſtood and abuſed People: And the God and Father of Lights and Spirits, ſo Bleſs thine, in the Peruſal of this Short Treatiſe, that thou may'ſt receive Real Benefit by it, to His Glory, and thine own Comfort, Which is the Deſire and End of him that wrote it; who is, in the Bonds of Chriſtian Charity, very much, and very ardently,

Chap. I.

CHAP. I. §. 1. Their Fundamental Principle. §. 2. The Nature of it. §. 3. Called by ſeveral Names. §. 4. They refer all to this, as to Faith and Practice, Miniſtry and Worſhip.

§. 1. THAT which the People call'd Quakers lay down, as a Main Fundamental in Religion, is this, That God, through Chriſt, hath placed a Principle in every Man, to inform him of his Duty, and to enable him to do it; and that thoſe that Live up to this Principle, are the People of God; and thoſe that Live in Diſobedience to it, are not God's People, whatever Name they may bear, or Profeſſion they may make of Religion. This is their Ancient, Firſt, and Standing Teſtimony: With this they began, and this they bore, and do bear to the World.

§. 2. By this Principle they underſtand ſomething that is Divine; and though in Man, yet not of Man, but of God; and that it came from Him, and leads to Him all thoſe that will be led by it.

§. 3. There are divers Ways of Speaking they have been led to uſe, by which they declare and expreſs what this Principle is, about which I think fit to Precaution the Reader, viz. They call it, The Light of Chriſt within Man, or, Light Within, which is their Ancient, and moſt General and Familiar Phraſe, alſo the (a) Manifeſtation (b) or Appearance of Chriſt (c), the (d) Witneſs of God, the (e) Seed of God, the (f) Seed of the Kingdom, (g) Wiſdom, the (h) Word in the Heart, the Grace (i) that appears to all Men, the (k) Spirit given to every Man to profit with, the (l) Truth in the Inward Parts, the (m) Spiritual Leaven, that Leavens the whole Lump of Man: Which are many of them Figurative Expreſſions, but all of them ſuch as the Holy Ghoſt hath uſed, and which will be uſed in this Treatiſe, as they are moſt frequently in the Writings and Miniſtry of this People. But that this Variety and Manner of Expreſſion may not occaſion any Miſapprehenſion or Confuſion in the Underſtanding of the Reader, I would have him know, that they always mean by theſe Terms, or Denominations, not another, but the ſame Principle, before mentioned: Which, as I ſaid, though it be in Man, is not of Man, but of God, and therefore Divine: And One in it ſelf, tho' diverſly expreſſed by the Holy Men, according to the Various Manifeſtations and Operations thereof.

§. 4. It is to this Principle of Light, Life and Grace, that this People refer all: For they ſay it is the Great Agent in Religion; That, without which, there is no Conviction, ſo no Converſion, or Regeneration; and conſequently no entring into the Kingdom of God. That is to ſay, there can be no True Sight of Sin, nor Sorrow for it, and therefore no forſaking or overcoming of it, or Remiſſion or Juſtification from it. A Neceſſary and Powerful Principle indeed, when neither Sanctification, nor Juſtification can be had without it. In ſhort, there is no becoming Virtuous, Holy and Good, without this Principle; no Acceptance with God, nor Peace of Soul, but through it. But on the contrary, that the Reaſon of ſo much Irreligion among Chriſtians, ſo much Superſtition, inſtead of Devotion, and ſo much Profeſſion without Enjoyment, and ſo little Heart-Reformation, is, becauſe People in Religion, Overlook this Principle, and leave it behind them.

They will be Religious without it, and Chriſtians without it, though this be the only Means of making them ſo indeed. So Natural is it to Man, in his Degenerate State, to prefer Sacrifice before Obedience, and to make Prayers go for Practice, and ſo flatter himſelf to hope, by Ceremonial and Bodily Service, to excuſe himſelf with God from the ſtricter Diſcipline of this Principle in the Soul, which leads Man to take up the Croſs, deny Self, and do that which God requires of him: And that is every Man's True Religion, and every ſuch Man is Truly Religious: That is, He is Holy, Humble, Patient, Meek, Merciful, Juſt, Kind, and Charitable; which they ſay, no Man can make himſelf; but that this Principle will make them all ſo, that will embrace the Convictions and Teachings of it, being the Root of all True Religion in Man, and the Good Seed from whence all Good Fruits proceed. To ſum up what they ſay upon the Nature and Virtue of it, as Contents of that which follows, they declare that this Principle is, Firſt, Divine. Secondly, Univerſal. Thirdly, Efficacious: In that it gives Man, Firſt, The Knowledge of God, and of himſelf, and therein a Sight of his Duty and Diſobedience to it.

Secondly, It begets a true Senſe and Sorrow for Sin in thoſe that ſeriouſly regard the Convictions of it.

Thirdly, It enables them to forſake Sin, and Sanctifies from it.

Fourthly, It applies God's Mercies in Chriſt for the Forgiveneſs of Sins that are paſt, unto Juſtification, upon ſuch ſincere Repentance and Obedience.

Fifthly, It gives, to the Faithful, Perſeverance unto a perfect Man, and the Aſſurance of Bleſſedneſs, World without End.

To the Truth of all which, they call in a Threefold Evidence: Firſt, The Scriptures, which give an ample Witneſs, eſpecially thoſe of the New and better Teſtament. Secondly, The Reaſonableneſs of it in it ſelf. And Laſtly, A General Experience, in great Meaſure: But particularly, Their Own, made credible by the good Fruits they have brought forth, and the Anſwer God has given to their Miniſtry: Which, to impartial Obſervers, have commended the Principle, and gives me Occaſion to abſtract their Hiſtory, in divers Particulars, for a Concluſion to this little Treatiſe.

Chap. II.

CHAP. II. §. 1. The Evidence of Scripture for this Principle, John 1. 4. 9. §. 2. Its Divinity. §. 3. All Things created by it. §. 4. What it is to Man, as to Salvation.

§. 1. I Shall begin with the Evidence of the bleſſed Scriptures of Truth, for this Divine Principle, and that under the Name of Light, the firſt and moſt common Word uſed by them, to expreſs and denominate this Principle by, as well as moſt apt and proper in this dark State of the World.

John 1. 1. In the Beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

Verſ. 3. All Things were made by Him.
Verſ. 4. In Him was Life, and that Life was the Light of Men.
Verſ. 9. That was the True Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World.

§. 2. I have begun with him, that begun his Hiſtory with him that was the Beginning of the Creation of God; the moſt beloved Diſciple, and longeſt Liver of all the Apoſtles, and he, that for excellent Knowledge and Wiſdom in Heavenly Things, is juſtly entituled John the Divine. He tells us firſt, what he was in the Beginning, viz. The Word. In the Beginning was the Word.

And though that ſhews what the Word muſt be, yet he adds and explains, that the Word was with God, and the Word was God; leſt any ſhould doubt of the Divinity of the Word, or have lower Thoughts of Him than He deſerved. The Word then, is Divine, and an apt Term it is, that the Evangeliſt ſtiles Him by, ſince it is ſo great an Expreſſion of the Wiſdom and Power of God to Men.

§. 3. All Things were made by Him. If ſo, he wants no Power. And if we were made by Him, we muſt be new made by Him too, or we can never enjoy God. His Power ſhews his Dignity, and that nothing can be too hard for ſuch a Sufficiency as made all Things, and without which nothing was made, that was made. As Man's Maker muſt be his Huſband, ſo his Creator muſt be his Redeemer alſo.

§. 4. In him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. This is our Point. The Evangeliſt firſt begins with the Nature and Being of the Word: From thence he deſcends to the Works of the Word: And laſtly, then he tells us, what the Word is, with Reſpect to Man above the reſt of the Creation, viz. The Word was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men. The Relation muſt be very near and intimate, when the very Life of the Word (that was with God, and was God) is the Light of Men: As if Men were next to the Word, and above all the reſt of his Works; for it is not ſaid ſo of any other Creature.

Man cannot want Light then; no not a Divine Light: For if this be not Divine, that is the Life of the Divine Word, there can be no ſuch Thing at all as Divine or Supernatural Light and Life. And the Text does not only prove the Divinity of the Light, but the Univerſality of it alſo, becauſe Man mentioned in it, is Mankind: Which is yet more diſtinctly expreſs'd in his 9th Verſe, That was the True Light, which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. Implying, that he that lighteth not Mankind is not that True Light; and therefore John was not that 1696.

Chap. III.

that Light, but bore witneſs of him that was, who lighteth every Man; to wit, the Word that took Fleſh: So that both the Divine Nature, and Univerſality of the Light of Chriſt within, are confirmed together.

CHAP. III. §. 1. How this Scripture is wreſted. §. 2. That 'tis a Natural Light. §. 3. That it lighteth not all. §. 4. That 'tis only the Doctrine and Life of Chriſt when in the Fleſh. All anſwered, and it's Divinity and Univerſality proved.

§. 1. BUT though there be no Paſſage or Propoſition to be found in Holy Scripture, in which Mankind is more intereſted, or that is more clearly laid down by the Holy Ghoſt, than this I have produced, yet hardly hath any Place been more induſtriouſly wreſted from it's true and plain Senſe: Eſpecially ſince this People have laid any Streſs upon it, in Defence of their Teſtimony of the Light within. Some will have it to be but a Natural Light, or a Part of Man's Nature, though it be the very Life of the Word, by which the World was made; and mention'd within thoſe Verſes, which only concern his Eternal Power and Godhead. But becauſe I would be underſtood, and treat of Things with all Plainneſs, I will open the Terms of the Objection as well as I can, and then give my Anſwer to it.

§. 2. If by Natural be meant a created Thing, as Man is, or any Thing that is requiſite to the Compoſition of Man, I deny it: The Text is expreſly againſt it; and ſays, the Light with which Man is lighted, is the Life of the Word, which was with God, and was God. But if by Natural is only intended, that the Light comes along with us into the World; or that we have it as ſure as we are born, or have Nature; and is the Light of our Nature, of our Minds and Underſtandings, and is not the Reſult of any Revelation from without, as by Angels or Men; then we mean and intend the ſame Thing. For it is Natural to Man to have a Supernatural Light, and for the Creature to be lighted by an uncreated Light, as is the Life of the Creating Word. And did People but conſider the Conſtitution of Man, it would conduce much to preſerve or deliver them from any Dilemma upon this Account. For Man can be no more a Light to his Mind, than he is to his Body: He has the Capacity of ſeeing Objects when he has the Help of Light, but cannot be a Light to himſelf, by which to ſee them. Wherefore as the Sun in the Firmament is the Light of the Body, and gives us diſcerning in our temporal Affairs; ſo the Life of the Word is the glorious Light and Sun of the Soul: Our Intellectual Luminary, that informs our Mind, and give us true Judgment and Diſtinction about thoſe Things that more immediately concern our Better, Inward and Eternal Man.

§. 3. But others will have this Text read thus, not that the Word enlightens all Mankind, but that all who are enlightned, are enlightned by him, thereby not only narrowing and abuſing the Text, but rendring God partial, and ſo Severe to his Creatures, as to leave the greateſt part of the World in Darkneſs, witout the Means or Opportunity of Salvation; though we are aſſured from the Scriptures That (a) all have Light, that Chriſt is the (b) Light of the World, and that he (c) died for all; yea, the (d) Ungodly, and that God deſires not the (e) Death of any, but rather that all ſhould Repent and come to the Knowledge of the Truth and be ſaved; and (f) that the Grace of God has appeared to all Men, &c.

§. 4. There is a Third Sort that will needs have it underſtood, not of any Illumination by a Divine Light or Spirit in Man, but by the Doctrine Chriſt preached, and the Life and Example he lived, and led in the World; and which yet neither reach'd the thouſandth Part of Mankind, nor can conſiſt with what the Apoſtle John intends in the Beginning of his Hiſtory, which wholly relates to what Chriſt was before he took Fleſh, or at leaſt, what he is to the Soul, by his immediate Inſhinings and Influences. 'Tis moſt true, Chriſt was, in a Senſe, the Light of the World, in that very Appearance, and Shined forth by his Heavenly Doctrine, many admirable Miracles, and his Self-Denying Life and Death: But ſtill that hinders not, but that he was and is That Spiritual Light, which ſhineth more or leſs, in the Hearts of the Sons and Daughters of Men. For as he was a Light in his Life and Converſation, he was only a Light in a more excellent Senſe than he ſpoke of to his Diſciples, when he ſaid, Ye are the Lights of the World. But Chriſt the Word enlightned them, and enlightens us, and enlightens all Men that come into the World; which he could not be ſaid to do, if we only Regard his Perſonal and Outward Appearance: For in that Senſe it is long ſince he was that Light, but in this he is continually ſo. In that Reſpect he is Remote, but in this Senſe he is Preſent and immediate, elſe we ſhould render the Text, That was the True Light which did lighten, inſtead of which Lighteth every Man that cometh into the World. And that the Evangeliſt might be ſo underſtood, as we ſpeak, he refers to this as an Evidence of His being the Meſſiah, and not John; for whom many People had much Reverence, for Verſ. 8. he ſaith of John, He was not that Light, but was ſent to bear Witneſs of that Light: Now comes his Proof and our Teſtimony, That was the true Light which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World; which was not John, or any elſe, but the Word that was with God, and was God. The Evangeliſt did not deſcribe him by his faſting forty Days, preaching ſo many Sermons, working ſo many Miracles, and Living ſo Holy a Life; and, after all, ſo patiently Suffering Death, (which yet Chriſt did) thereby to prove him the Light of the World; but, ſays the Evangeliſt, That was the True Light, the Word in Fleſh, the Meſſiah, and not John, or any elſe, which lighteth Every Man that cometh into the World. So that Chriſt is manifeſted and diſtinguiſhed by giving Light: And indeed ſo are all his Followers from other People, by receiving and obeying it. There are many other Scriptures, of both Teſtaments, that refer to the Light within; either expreſly, or implicitly; which, for Brevity's Sake, I ſhall wave reciting; but the Reader will find ſome Directions in the Margin, which will guide him to them.

Chap. IV.

§. 1. THE Third Thing, is the Virtue and Efficacy of this Light for the End for which God hath given it, viz. To lead and guide the Soul of Man to Bleſſedneſs. In order to which, the firſt Thing it does in and for Man, is to give him a true Sight or Diſcerning of himſelf: What he is, and what he does; that he may ſee and know his own Condition, and what Judgment to make of himſelf, with Reſpect to Religion and a future State: Of which, let us hear what the Word himſelf ſaith, that cannot Err, as John relates it, Chap. 3. 20, 21. For every one that doth Evil, hateth the Light, neither cometh to the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be Reproved. But he that doth Truth cometh to the Light, that his Deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God. A moſt pregnant Inſtance of the Virtue and Authority of the Light. Firſt, It is that which Men ought to Examine themſelves by. Secondly, It gives a true Diſcerning betwixt Good and Bad, what is of God, from what is not of God. And, Laſtly, It is a Judge, and condemneth or acquitteth, reproveth or comforteth, the Soul of Man, as he rejects or obeys it. That muſt needs be Divine and Efficacious, which is able to diſcover to Man, what is of God, from what is not of God; and which gives him a Diſtinct Knowledge, in himſelf, of what is wrought in God, from what is not wrought in God. By which it appears, that this Place does not only regard the Diſcovery of Man and his Works, but, in ſome Meaſure, it manifeſteth God, and his Works alſo, which is yet ſomething higher; for as much as it gives the obedient Man a Diſcovery of what is wrought or performed by God's Power, and after his Will, from what is the mere Workings of the Creature of himſelf. If it could not manifeſt God, it could not tell Man what was God's Mind, nor give him ſuch a grounded Senſe and Diſcerning of the Riſe, Nature, and Tendency of the Workings of his Mind or Inward Man, as is both expreſſed and abundantly implied in this Paſſage of our Saviour. And if it reveals God, to be ſure it manifeſts Chriſt, that flows and comes from God. Who then would oppoſe or ſlight this bleſſed Light?

§. 2. But that this Light doth manifeſt God, is yet Evident from Rom. 1. 19. Becauſe that which may be known of (God) is manifeſt in Men, for God hath ſhewed it unto them. An univerſal Propoſition; and we have the Apoſtle's Word for it, who was One of a Thouſand, and inſpired on purpoſe to tell us the Truth: Let it then have it's due Weight with us. If that which may be known of God is manifeſt in Men, the People called Quakers cannot, certainly, be out of the Way in Preaching up the Light within, without which, nothing can be manifeſted to the Mind of Man; as ſaith the ſame Apoſtle to the Epheſians, Eph. 5. 13. Whatſoever doth make manifeſt is Light. Well then may they call this Light within a Manifeſtation or Appearance of God, that ſheweth in and to Man, all that may be known of God. A Paſſage much like unto this, is that of the Prophet Micah, Chap. 6. 8. God hath ſhewed thee, O Man, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of thee, but to do Juſtly, and to love Mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God? God hath ſhewed, thee, O Man! It is very Emphatical. But how hath He ſhewed him? Why by his Light in the Conſcience, which the Wicked Rebel againſt, Job 24. 13. Who, for that Cauſe, know not the Ways, nor abide in the Paths thereof: For it's Way are Ways of Pleaſantneſs, and all it's Paths are Peace, to them that obey it.

§. 3. But the Light giveth the Light of Life, which is Eternal Life to them that receive and obey it. Thus, ſays the bleſſed Saviour of the World, John 8. 12. I am the Light of the World, he that followeth me ſhall not abide in Darkneſs, but ſhall have the Light of Life. Now he is the Light of the World, becauſe he lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, and they that obey that Light obey him, and therefore have the Light of Life. That is, the Light becomes Eternal Life to the Soul: That as it is the Life of the Word, which is the Light in Man, ſo it becomes the Life in Man, through his Obedience to it, as his Heavenly Light.

§. 4. Farthermore, this Light was the very Ground of the Apoſtolical Meſſage, as the Beloved Diſciple aſſures us. 1 John 1. 5, 6, 7. This then is the Meſſage, which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, That God is Light, and in him is no Darkneſs at all: If we ſay we have Fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we Lye, and do not the Truth: But if we walk in the Light, as he is in the Light, we have Fellowſhip one with another, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt cleanſeth us from all Sin. Which is ſo comprehenſive of the Virtue and Excellency of the Light, in Reference to Man, that there is little Need that more ſhould be ſaid upon it; for as much as, Firſt, It reveals God, and that God himſelf is Light. Secondly, It diſcovers Darkneſs from Light, and that there is no Fellowſhip between them. Thirdly, That Man ought to walk in the Light. Fourthly, That it is the Way to obtain Forgiveneſs of Sin, and Sanctification from it. Fifthly, That it is the Means to have Peace and Fellowſhip with God and his People; his true Church, redeemed from the Pollutions of the World.

§. 5. Some, perhaps, may Object, as indeed it hath been more than once objected upon us, That this is another Light, not that Light wherewith every Man is enlightned. But the ſame Apoſtle, in his Evangelical Hiſtory, tells us, that in the Word was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men, and that that very Light, that was the Life of the Word, was the True Light which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, John 1. 4, 9. Where is there ſo plain a Text to be found againſt the Sufficiency, as well as Univerſality of the Light within; or a Plainer for any Article of Faith in the whole Book of God? Had the Beloved Diſciple intended Two Lights, in his Evangelical Hiſtory, and his Epiſtles, to be ſure he would have noted to us his Diſtinction: But we read of none, and by the Properties aſcribed in each Writing, we have Reaſon to conclude he meant the ſame.

§. 6. But if any ſhall yet Object. That this is to be underſtood a Spiritual Light, and that ours is to be a Natural One, I ſhall deſire them to do two Things: Firſt, To prove that a Natural Light, as they phraſe it, doth manifeſt God, other than as I have before explained and allowed: Since whatever is Part of Man, in his Conſtitution, but eſpecially in his Degeneracy from God, is ſo far from yielding him the Knowledge of God, that it cannot rightly Reprove or Diſcover that which offends him, without the Light we ſpeak of: And it is granted, that what we call Divine, and ſome, Miſtakenly, call Natural Light, can do both. Secondly, If this Light be Natural, Notwithſtanding it doth manifeſt our Duty, and reprove our Diſobedience to God, they would do well to aſſign us ſome certain Medium, or Way, whereby we may truly diſcern and diſtinguiſh between the Manifeſtations and Reproofs of the Natural Light within, from thoſe of the Divine Light within, ſince they Allow the Manifeſtation of God, and Reproof of Evil, as well to the one, as to the other. Let them give us but one Scripture that diſtinguiſhes between a Natural and a Spiritual Light within. They may, with as much Reaſon, talk of a Natural and Spiritual Darkneſs within. 'Tis true, there is a natural proper Darkneſs, to wit, the Night of the Outward World; and there is a Spiritual Darkneſs, viz. The clouded and benighted Underſtandings of Men, through Diſobedience to the Light and Spirit of God: But let them aſſign us a Third, if they can. People Uſe, indeed, to ſay, improperly, of Blind Men, they are Dark, we may call a Natural or Idiot ſo, if we will: But where is there another Darkneſs of the Underſtanding, in the Things of God? If they can, I ſay, find that, in and about the Things of God, they do ſomething.

Chriſt diſtinguiſhed not between Darkneſs and Darkneſs, or Light and Light, in any ſuch Senſe; nor did any of his Diſciples: Yet both have frequently ſpoken of Darkneſs and Light. What Difference, pray, doth the Scripture put between Spiritual Darkneſs, and Darkneſs, mentioned in theſe Places, Luke 1. 7, 9. Mat. 4. 16. John 1. 5 & 3. 19. & 8. 12, 31, 46. 1 Theſ. 5. 4. 1 John 1. 6. Acts 26. 18. Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 6. 14, 22. Eph. 5. 8. Col. 1. 13. Upon the ſtricteſt Compariſon of them I find none. It is all one Spiritual Darkneſs. Neither is there ſo much as one Scripture that affords us a Diſtinction between Light within and Light within; or that there are really Two Lights from God, in Man, that regard Religion. Peruſe Mat. 4. 16. Luke 2. 32. & 15. 8. John 1. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9. & 3. 19, 20, 21. & 8. 12. Acts 26. 18. Rom. 13. 12. 2 Cor. 4. 6. & 6. 14. Eph. 5. 8, 13. Col. 1. 12. 1 Theſſ. 5. 5. 1 Tim. 6. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 9. 1 John 1. 5, 7. & 2. 8. Rev. 21. 23, 24. & 22. 5. And we believe the greateſt Oppoſer, to our Aſſertion, will not be able to ſever Light from Light, or find out two Lights within, in the Paſſages here mentioned, or any other, to direct Man in his Duty to God and his Neighbour: And if he cannot, pray let him forbear his mean Thoughts and Words of the Light of Chriſt within Man, as Man's Guide in Duty to God and Man. For as he muſt yield to us, that the Light Manifeſteth Evil, and Reproveth for it, ſo doth Chriſt himſelf teach us of the Light, John 3. 20. For every one that doth Evil hateth the Light, neither cometh unto the Light, leſt his Deeds ſhould be reproved. And the Apoſtle Paul plainly ſaith, Eph. 5. 13. But all Things that are reproved are made manifeſt by the Light; therefore there are not two diſtinct Lights within, but one and the ſame Manifeſting, Reproving, and Teaching Light within. And this the Apoſtle John, in his Firſt Epiſtle, makes plain, beyond all Exception, to all conſiderate People: Firſt, In that he calls God, Light, Chap. 1. 5. Secondly, In that he puts no Medium, or Third Thing between that Light, and Darkneſs, Verſe 6. If we ſay we have Fellowſhip with him, and walk in Darkneſs, we Lye, &c. Intimating, that Men muſt walk either in Light or Darkneſs, and not in a Third, or other State or Region. I am ſure, that which manifeſts and reproves Darkneſs, cannot be Darkneſs. This all Men muſt confeſs.

§. 7. And, as if the Apoſtle John would have anticipated their Objection, viz. 'Tis true, your Light within reproves for Evil, but it is not therefore the Divine Light which leads into higher Things, and which comes by the Goſpel; he thus expreſſeth himſelf, 1 John 2. 8, 9. The Darkneſs is paſt, and the true Light now ſhineth. He that ſaith he is in the Light, and hateth his Brother, is in Darkneſs even until now; which is not another Light than that mentioned before, Chap. 1. For as Light is put there, in Oppoſition to Darkneſs, ſo Light here, is put in Oppoſition to Darkneſs. And as the Darkneſs is the ſame, ſo muſt the Light be the ſame. Wherefore we may plainly ſee, that it is not another Light, than that which reproves a Man for hating his Brother, which brings a Man into Fellowſhip with God, and to the Blood of Cleanſing, as the next Verſe ſpeaks: Therefore that Light which reproveth a Man for hating his Brother, is of a Divine and Efficacious Nature. In ſhort, that Light which is oppoſite to, and reproves Spiritual Darkneſs, in a Man and Woman, is a Spiritual Light; but ſuch a Light is that which we Confeſs, Teſtify to, and Maintain: Therefore it is a Spiritual Light. It is alſo worth our Notice, that the Apoſtle uſeth the ſame Manner of Expreſſion here, Chap. 2. 8. The True Light ſhineth, that he doth in his Evangelical Hiſtory, Chap. 1. 9. That was the True Light; intimating the ſame Divine Word, or True Light now ſhineth; and that it is the ſame True Light in his Account, that reproveth ſuch as hate their Brethren: Conſequently, that Light that ſo reproveth them, is the True Light. And ſtrange it is, that Chriſt and his Diſciples, but eſpecially his beloved One, ſhould ſo often make that very Light, which ſtoops to the loweſt Step of Immorality, and to the Reproof of the groſſeſt Evil, to be no other than the ſame Divine Light, in a farther Degree of Manifeſtation, which brings ſuch as follow it to the Light of Life, to the Blood of Cleanſing, and to have Fellowſhip with God, and one with another: Nay, not only ſo, but the Apoſtle makes a Man's being a Child of God, to depend upon his Anſwering of this Light in a palpable and common Caſe, viz. Not hating of his Brother: And that yet any ſhould ſhut their Eyes ſo faſt againſt beholding the Virtue of it, as to conclude it a Natural and Inſufficient Light, is both Unſcriptural and Unreaſonable. Shall we ſlight it, becauſe we come ſo eaſily by it, and it is ſo Familiar and Domeſtick to us? Or make it's being ſo common an Argument to undervalue ſo Ineſtimable a Mercy? What is more common than Light and Air, and Water? And ſhould we therefore contemn them, or prize them? Prize them, certainly, as what we cannot live, nor live comfortably without. The more general the Mercy is, the greater, and therefore the greater Obligation upon Man to live humbly and thankfully for it. And to thoſe alone that do ſo, are it's Divine Secrets revealed. 1696.

CHAP. V. §. 1. The Light the ſame with the Spirit. It is of God; proved by it's Properties. §. 2. The Properties of the Spirit compared with thoſe of the Light. §. 3. The Light and Grace flow from the ſame Principle, proved by their agreeing Properties. §. 4. An Objection Anſwered. §. 5. Difference in Manifeſtation, or Operation, eſpecially in Goſpel-Times, but not in Principle, Illuſtrated. Chap. V.

Obj. BUT ſome may ſay, We could willingly allow to the Spirit and Grace of God, which ſeemed to be the peculiar Bleſſing of the New and Second Covenant, and the Fruit of the Coming of Chriſt, all that which you aſcribe to the Light within; but except it appeared to us that this Light were the ſame in Nature with the Spirit and Grace of God, we cannot eaſily bring our ſelves to believe what you ſay in Favour of the Light within.

Anſw. This Objection, at firſt Look, ſeems to carry Weight with it: But upon a juſt and ſerious Review, it will appear to have more Words than Matter, Shew than Subſtance: Yet becauſe it gives Occaſion to ſolve Scruples, that may be flung in the Way of the Simple, I ſhall attend it throughout. I ſay, then, if it appear that the Properties, aſcribed to the Light within, are the ſame with thoſe that are given to the Holy Spirit and Grace of God; and that thoſe ſeveral Terms or Epithets, are only to expreſs the divers Manifeſtations or Operations of one and the ſame Principle, then it will not, it cannot, be denied, but this Light within, is Divine and Efficacious, as we have Aſſerted it. Now, that it is of the ſame Nature with the Spirit and Grace of God, and tends to the ſame End, which is to bring People to God, let the Properties of the Light be compared with thoſe of the Spirit and Grace of God. I ſay, they are the ſame, in that, Firſt, The Light proceeds from the One Word, and One Life of that One Word, which was with God and was God, John 1. 4. & 1. 9. Secondly, It is Univerſal, it lighteth every Man. Thirdly, It giveth the Knowledge of God, and Fellowſhip with him. Rom. 1. 19. John 3. 21. 1 John 1. 5, 6. Fourthly, It manifeſteth and reproveth Evil, John 3. 20. Eph. 5. 13. Fifthly, It is made the Rule and Guide of Chriſtian Walking, Pſalm 43. 3. John 8. 12. Eph. 5. 13, 15. Sixthly, It is the Path for God's People to go in, Pſalm 119. 105. Prov. 4. 18. Iſaiah 2. 5. 1 John 1. 7. Rev. 24. 23. And the Nations of them that are ſaved, ſhall walk in the Light of the (Lamb.) Laſtly, It is the Armour of the Children of God againſt Satan, Pſalm 27. 1. The Lord is my Light, whom ſhall I fear? Rom. 13. 12. Let us put on the Armour of Light.

§. 2. Now let all this be compared with the Properties of the Holy Spirit, and their Agreement will be very manifeſt. Firſt, It proceedeth from God, becauſe it is the Spirit of God, Rom. 6. 11. Secondly, It is Univerſal. It ſtrove with the Old World, Gen. 6. 3. Then to be ſure with the New One: Every one hath a Meaſure of it given to profit withal, 1 Cor. 12. 7. Thirdly, It revealeth God, Job 32. 8. 1 Cor. 2. 10, 11. Fourthly, It reproveth Sin, John 16. 8. Fifthly, It is a Rule and Guide for the Children of God to walk by, Rom. 8. 14. Sixthly, It is alſo the Path they are to walk in, Rom. 8. 1. Gal. 5. 15. Walk in the Spirit. Laſtly, This is not all; It is likewiſe the Spiritual Weapon of a true Chriſtian, Eph. 6. 17. Take the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. After this, I hope none will deny that this Light and this Spirit muſt be of one and the ſame Nature, that work one and the ſame Effect, and tend evidently to one and the ſame Holy End.

§. 3. And what is ſaid of the Light and Spirit, may alſo, very well be ſaid of the Light and Grace of God; in that, Firſt, The Grace floweth from Chriſt, the Word, that took Fleſh, as well as the Light; for as in him was Life, and that Life the Light of Men, ſo he was full of Grace and Truth, and of his Fulneſs have all we received, and Grace for Grace, John 1. 4, 9, 14, 16. Secondly, It is Univerſal; both from this Text, and what the Apoſtle to Titus teacheth; For the Grace of God that bringeth Salvation, hath appeared to all Men, Tit. 2. 11, 12. Thirdly, It manifeſteth Evil, for if it teaches to deny Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts, it muſt needs detect them, and ſo ſays the Text. Fourthly, It revealeth Godlineſs, and conſequently it muſt manifeſt God. Fifthly, It is an Inſtructor and Guide; for, ſays the Apoſtle, It teaches to deny Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts, and to live Soberly, Righteouſly, and Godly in this preſent World, and herein a Rule of Life, Tit. 2. 11, 12. Sixthly, It is, to all that receive it, all that they can need or deſire. 2 Cor. 12. 9. My Grace is ſufficient for thee. An High Teſtimony from Heaven, to the Power of this Teaching and Saving Grace, under the ſtrongeſt Temptations.

§. 4. Obj. But there is little Mention made of the Spirit, and none of the Grace, before Chriſt's Coming, and therefore the Spirit, as ſpoken of in the Writings of the New Teſtament, and eſpecially the Grace, muſt be another, and a Nobler Thing than the Light Within.

Anſw. By no Means another Thing, but another Name, from another Manifeſtation or Operation, of the ſame Principle. It is call'd Light from the Diſtinction and Diſcerning it gives. Let there be Light, and there was Light, ſaid God in the Beginning of the Old World; ſo there is firſt Light in the Beginning of the New Creation of God in Man. It is called Spirit, becauſe it giveth Life, Senſe, Motion, and Vigour: And it is as often mentioned in the Writings of the Old as New Teſtament; which every Reader may ſee, if he will but pleaſe to look into his Scripture-Concordance. Thus God's Spirit ſtrove with the Old World, Gen. 6. 3. and with Iſrael in the Wilderneſs, Neh. 9. 30. And David aſked, in the Agony of his Soul, Whither ſhall I go from thy Spirit? Pſ. 139. 7. and the Prophets often felt it. It is ſtiled Grace, not from it's being another Principle, but becauſe it was a fuller Diſpenſation of the Virtue and Power of the ſame Divine Principle: And that being purely God's Favour and Mercy, and not Man's Merit, is aptly, and deſervedly called the Grace, Favour, or Good-Will of God, to undeſerving Man. The Wind does not always blow freſh, nor Heaven ſend down it's Rain freely, nor the Sun ſhine forth clearly; ſhall we therefore ſay, it is not of the ſame Kind of Wind, Rain or Light, when it Blows, Rains, or Shines but a little, as when it Blows, Rains, or Shines much? It is certainly the ſame in Nature and Kind; and ſo is this Bleſſed Principle, under all its ſeveral Diſpenſations, Manifeſtations and Operations, for the Benefit of Man's Soul, ever ſince the World began.

§. 5. But this is moſt freely, humbly and thankfully acknowledged by us, That the Diſpenſation of the Goſpel, was the cleareſt, fulleſt, and Nobleſt of all other; both with Regard to the Coming of Chriſt in the Fleſh, and being our One Holy Offering to God for Sin, through the Eternal Spirit; and the Breaking forth of His Light, the Effuſion of His Spirit, and Appearance of His Grace, in, and to Man, in a more Excellent Manner, after His Aſcenſion. For tho' it was not another Light, or Spirit, than that which he had given to Man in former Ages, yet it was another and Greater Meaſure; and that is the Priviledge of the Goſpel above former Diſpenſations. What before Shined but dimly, Shines ſince with 2 Cor. 3. 18. Great Glory. Then it appeared but darkly, but now with Open Face. Types, Figures and Shadows Vailed its Appearances and made them look low and faint; but John 1. 5, 17. in the Goſpel Time, the Vail is Rent, and the Hidden Glory manifeſt. It was under the Law but as a Dew, or ſmall Rain, but under the Goſpel, it may be ſaid to be poured out upon Men: According to that Gracious and Notable Promiſe of God, Joel 2. 28. by the Prophet Joel, In the latter Days I will pour out of my Spirit upon all Fleſh. Thus we ſay when it Rains plentifully, look how it pours. So God augments His Light, Grace and Spirit to theſe latter Days. They ſhall not have it ſparingly, and by ſmall Drops, but fully and freely, and overflowing too. And thus Peter, that deep and excellent Apoſtle, applies that Promiſe in Joel, on the Day of Pentecoſt, as the Beginning of the Accompliſhment of it. This is Grace, and Favour, and Goodneſs indeed. And therefore well may this Brighter Illumination, and Greater Effuſion of the Spirit, be called Grace; for as the Coming of the Son excelled that of the Servant, ſo did the Manifeſtation of the Light and Spirit of God, ſince the Coming of Chriſt, excel that of the foregoing Diſpenſations; yet ever ſufficient to Salvation, to all thoſe that walked in it. This is our Senſe of the Light, Spirit, and Grace of God: And by what is ſaid, it is evident they are One and the ſame Principle, and that He that has Light, need not want the Spirit or Grace of God, if he will but receive it, in the Love of it: For the very Principle, that is Light to ſhow him, is alſo Spirit to quicken him, and Grace to Teach, Help, and Comfort him. It is ſufficient in all Circumſtances of Life, to them that diligently mind and obey it.

CHAP. VI. §. 1. An Objection anſwered: All are not Good, tho' All are Lighted. §. 2. Another Objection anſwered, That Goſpel-Truths were known before Chriſt's Coming. §. 3. Another: The Gentiles had the Same Light, tho' not with thoſe Advantages: Prov'd from Scripture.

§. 1. Obj. BUT ſome may yet ſay, If it be as you declare, How comes it, that all who are Enlightned, are not ſo Good as they ſhould be; Or, as you ſay, this would make them?

Anſw. Becauſe People don't receive and obey it: All Men have Reaſon, but all Men are not Reaſonable. Is it the Fault of the Grain, in the Granary, that it yields no Increaſe, or of the Talent in the Napkin, that it is not improved? It is plain a Talent was given; and as plain that it was improveable; both becauſe the like Talents were actually improved by others, and, That the Juſt Judge expected His Talent with Advantage; which elſe, to be ſure, he would never have done. Now when our Objectors will tell us, whoſe Fault it was the Talent was not improved, we ſhall be ready to tell them, Why the Unprofitable Servant was not ſo Good as he ſhould have been. The Blind muſt not blame the Sun, nor Sinners tax the Grace of Inſufficiency. 'Tis Sin that darkens the Eye, and hardens the Heart, and that hinders Good Things from the Sons of Men. If we do His Will, we ſhall know of His Divine Doctrine, ſo Chriſt tells us. Men not living to what they know, cannot blame God, that they know no more. The Unfruitfulneſs is in Us, not in the Talent. 'Twere well indeed, that this were laid to Heart. But, alas! Men are too apt to follow their Senſual Appetites, rather than their Reaſonable Mind, which renders them Brutal inſtead of Rational. For the Reaſonable Part in Man, is his Spiritual Part, and that guided by the Divine λόγος, or Word, which Tertullian interprets Reaſon in the moſt Excellent Senſe, makes Man truly Reaſonable; and then it is that Man comes to offer up himſelf to God a Reaſonable Sacrifice. Then a Man indeed; a Compleat Man; Such a Man as G O D made, when he made Man in His Own Image, and gave him Paradiſe for his Habitation.

§. 2. Obj. But ſome yet object, If Mankind had always this Principle, how comes it that Goſpel-Truths were not ſo fully known before the Coming of Chriſt, to thoſe that were Obedient to it.

Anſw. Becauſe a Child is not a Grown Man, nor the Beginning the End; and yet He that is the Beginning, is alſo the End: The Principle is the ſame, tho' not the Manifeſtation. As the World has many Steps and Periods of Time towards it's End, ſo hath Man to his Perfection. They that are Faithful to what they know of the Diſpenſation of their own Day, ſhall hear the Happy Welcome, of Well done, Good and Faithful Servant. And yet many of God's People in thoſe Days, had a Proſpect of the Glory of the Latter Times, the Improvement of Religion, the Happineſs of the Church of God.

This we ſee in the Propheſie of Jacob and Moſes, concerning the Reſtoration of Iſrael by Chriſt. So David, in many of his Excellent Pſalms, expreſſing moſt Senſible and Extraordinary Enjoyments, as well as Propheſies; particularly his 2, 15, 18, 22, 23, 25, 27, 32, 36, 37, 42, 43, 45, 51, 84, &c. The Prophets are full of it, and for that Reaſon have their Name; particularly Iſaiah, Chap. 2. 9, 11. 25, 28, 32, 35, 42, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 59, 60, 61, 63, 65, 66. Jeremiah alſo, Chap. 23, 30, 31, 33. Ezekiel, Chap. 20, 34, 36, 37. Daniel, Chap. 8, 9, 10, 11, 12. Hoſea. Chap. 1, 3. Joel, Chap. 2, 3. Amos, Chap. 9. Micah, Chap. 4, 5. Zachariah, Chap. 6, 8, 9, 11, 13, 14. Malachy, Chap. 3. 4. This was not another Principle, though another Manifeſtation of the ſame Principle, nor was it common, but particular and extraordinary in the Reaſon of it.

Gen. 49. 10. Deut. 18. 15, 18.

It was the ſame Spirit that came upon Moſes, which came upon John the Baptiſt, and it was alſo the ſame Spirit that came upon Gideon and Sampſon, that fell upon Peter and Paul; but it was not the ſame Diſpenſation of that Spirit. It hath been the Way of God, to viſit and appear to Men, according to their States and Conditions, and as they have been prepared to receive him, be it more outwardly or inwardly, ſenſibly or ſpiritually. There is no Capacity too low, or too high, for this Divine Principle: For as it made and knows all, ſo it reaches unto all People. It extends to the Meaneſt, and the Higheſt cannot ſubſiſt without it. Which made David break forth in his Expoſtulations with God, Whither ſhall I go from thy Spirit, or whither ſhall I flee from thy Preſence? Pſal. 139, 7, 8, 9, 10. Implying it was every where, though not every where, nor at every Time alike. If I go to Heaven, to Hell, or beyond the Seas, even there ſhall thy Hand lead me, and thy Right Hand ſhall hold me. That is, there will this Divine Word, this Light of Men, this Spirit of God, find me, lead me, help me, and comfort me. For it is with me where ever I am, and where ever I go, in one Reſpect or other; Prov. 6. 22. When thou goeſt, it ſhall lead thee; when thou ſleepeſt, it ſhall keep thee; and when thou awakeſt, it ſhall talk with thee: And I can no more get rid of it, if I would, than of my ſelf, or my own Nature; ſo preſent is it with me, and ſo cloſe it ſticks unto me. Iſa. 43. 2. When thou paſſeſt through the Waters, I will be with thee; and through the Rivers, they ſhall not overflow thee; when thou walkeſt through the Fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt, neither ſhall the Flame kindle upon thee. David knew it, and therefore had a Great Value for it. In thy Light ſhall we ſee Light, or we ſhall be Enlightned by thy Light. Thou wilt Light my Candle; the Lord my God will Lighten my Darkneſs. Again, The Lord is my Light, whom ſhall I fear. It was his Armour againſt all Danger. It took Fear away from him, and he was undaunted, becauſe he was Safe in the Way of it. Of the ſame Bleſſed Word he ſays elſewhere, It is a Lamp unto my Feet, and a Lanthorn to my Paths. In ſhort, a Light to him in his Way to Bleſſedneſs.

§. 3. Obj. But if the Jews had this Light, it does not follow that the Gentiles had it alſo; but by your Doctrine all have it.

Anſw. Yes, and it is the Glory of this Doctrine which we profeſs, that God's Love is therein held forth to All. And beſides the Texts cited in General, and that are as Full and Poſitive as can be expreſs'd, the Apoſtle is very Particular in the
Rom. 2. 7, to 17. Second Chapter of his Epiſtle to the Romans, That the Gentiles having not the Law, did by Nature the Things contained in the Law, and were a Law unto themſelves. That is, they had not an Outward Law, Circumſtanced as the Jews had; but they had the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, and therefore might well be a Law to themſelves, that had the Law in themſelves. And ſo had the Jews too, but then they had greater Outward Helps to quicken their Obedience to it; ſuch as God afforded not unto any other Nation: And therefore the Obedience of the Gentiles, or Uncircumciſion, is ſaid to be by Nature, or Naturally, becauſe it was without thoſe Additional, External, and Extraordinary Miniſtries and Helps which the Jews had to provoke them to Duty. Which is ſo far from leſſening the Obedient Gentiles, that it exalts them in the Apoſtle's Judgment; becauſe though they had leſs Advantages than the Jews, yet the Work of the Law written in their Hearts, was made ſo much the more evident by the Good Life they lived in the World. He adds, their Conſciences bearing Witneſs (or as it may be render'd, witneſſing with them) and their Thoughts, mean While, accuſing, or elſe excuſing one another, in the Day when God ſhall judge the Secrets of all Hearts by Jeſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpel. Which preſents us with Four Things to our Point, and worth our Serious Reflection. Firſt, That the Gentiles had the Law written in their Hearts. Secondly, That their Conſcience was an allowed Witneſs or Evidence about Duty. Thirdly, That the Judgment made thereby ſhall be Confirmed by the Apoſtle's Goſpel at the Great Day, and therefore Valid and Irreverſible. Fourthly, That this could not be, if the Light of this Conſcience were not a Divine and Sufficient Light: For Conſcience truly ſpeaking, is no other than the Senſe a Man hath, or Judgment he maketh of his Duty to God, according to the Underſtanding God gives him of His Will. And that no Ill, but a True and Scriptural Uſe may be made of this Word Conſcience, I limit it to Duty, and that to a Virtuous and Holy Life, as the Apoſtle evidently doth, about which we cannot miſs, or diſpute; Read Verſes 7, 8, and 9. It was to that therefore the Apoſtles of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt deſired to be made manifeſt, for they dared to ſtand the Judgment of Conſcience, in Reference to the Doctrine they Preach'd and Preſs'd upon Men. The Beloved Diſciple alſo makes it a Judge of Man's preſent and future State, under the 1 John 3. 21, 22. Term Heart, For if our Heart Condemn us, God is greater than our Heart, and knoweth all Things. Beloved, if our Heart Condemn us not, then have we Confidence towards God. Plain and ſtrong Words: And what were they about, but whether we love God, in Deed and in Truth: And how muſt that appear? Why, in Keeping His Commandments, which is living up to what we know. And if any deſire to ſatisfy themſelves farther of the Divinity of the Gentiles, let them read Plato, Seneca, Plutarch, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, and the Gentile Writers. They will alſo find many of their Sayings, collected in the Firſt Part of a Book, called, The Chriſtian Quaker, and compared with the Teſtimonies of Scripture, not for their Authority, but Agreeableneſs. In them they may diſcern many Excellent Truths, and taſte Great Love and Devotion to Virtue: A Fruit that grows upon no Tree, but that of Life, in no Age or Nation. Some of the Moſt Eminent Writers of the Firſt Ages, ſuch as Juſtin Martyr, Origen, Clemens Alexandrinus, &c. bore them great Reſpect, and thought it no leſſening to the Reputation of Chriſtianity, that it was defended in many Gentile Authors, as well as that they uſed and urged them, to engage their Followers to the Faith, as Paul did the Athenians with their own Poets.

CHAP. VII.

§. 1. An Objection anſwer'd about the various Diſpenſations of God: The Principle the ſame. §. 2. God's Work of a Piece, and Truth the ſame under divers Shapes. §. 3. The Reaſon of the Prevalency of Idolatry. §. 4. The Quaker's Teſtimony the Beſt Antidote againſt it, viz. Walking by a Divine Principle in Man. §. 5. It was God's End in all His Manifeſtations, that Man might be God's Image and Delight.

§. 1. Obj. BUT it may be ſaid, If it were One Principle, Why ſo many Modes and Shapes of Religion, ſince the World began? For the Patriarchal, Moſaical, and Chriſtian, have their great Differences; to ſay nothing of what has befallen the Chriſtian, ſince the Publication of it to the World.

Anſw. I know not how properly they may be called divers Religions, that aſſert the True God for the Object of Worſhip; the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, for the Only Saviour; and the Light, or Spirit of Chriſt, for the Great Agent and Means of Man's Converſion, and Eternal Felicity, any more than Infancy, Youth, and Manhood, make Three Men, inſtead of Three Growths or Periods of Time, of one and the ſame Man. But paſſing that, the many Modes, or Ways of God's appearing to Men, ariſe, as hath been ſaid, from the divers States of Men, in all which, it ſeems to have been his main Deſign to prevent Idolatry and Vice, by directing their Minds to the True Object of Worſhip, and preſſing Virtue and Holineſs. So that tho' mediately he ſpoke to the Patriarchs, moſtly by Angels, in the Faſhion of Men, and by them to their Families, over and above the Illumination in themſelves; ſo to the Prophets, for the moſt Part, by the Revelation of the Holy Ghoſt in them, and by them to the Jews; And ſince the Goſpel Diſpenſation, by his Son, both Externally, by His coming in the Fleſh, and Internally, by His Spiritual Appearance in the Soul, as He is the Great Light of the World: Yet all it's Flowings mediately through others, have ſtill been from the ſame Principle, Co-operating with the Manifeſtation of it immediately in Man's own Particular.

§. 2. This is of great Weight, for our Information and Encouragement, that God's Work, in Reference to Man, is All of a Peice, and, in it ſelf, lies in a narrow Compaſs, and that His Eye has ever been upon the ſame Thing in all his Diſpenſations, viz. To make Men truly Good, by planting His Holy Awe and Fear in their Hearts: Tho' He has condeſcended, for the Hardneſs and Darkneſs of Men's Hearts, to approach, and ſpell out His Holy Mind, to them, by low and carnal Ways, as they may appear to our more Enlightned Underſtandings: Suffering Truth to put on divers Sorts of Garments, the better to reach to the low State of Men, to engage them from falſe Gods, and ill Lives; ſeeing them ſunk ſo much below their Nobler Part, and what He made them, that, like Brute Beaſts, they knew not their own Strength and Excellency.

§. 3. And if we do but well conſider the Reaſon of the Prevalency of Idolatry, upon the earlier and darker Times of the World, of which the Scripture is very particular, we ſhall find that it ariſeth from this; that it is more Senſual, and therefore calculated to pleaſe the Senſes of Men; being more Outward or Viſible, or more in their own Power to perform, than one more Spiritual in it's Object. For as their Gods were the Workmanſhip of Men's Hands, they could not prefer them, that being the Argument which did moſt of all gaul their Worſhippers, and what of all Things, for that Reaſon, they were moſt willing to forget. But their Incidency to Idolatry, and the Advantages it had upon the True Religion with them, plainly came from this, That it was more Outward and Senſual: They could ſee the Object of their Devotion, and had it in in their Power to addreſs it when they would. It was more Faſhionable too, as well as better accommodated to their Dark, and too Brutal, State. And therefore it was that God, by many Afflictions, and greater Deliverances, brought forth a People, to endear himſelf to them, that they might Remember the Hand that Saved them, and Worſhip Him, and Him only; in order to root up Idolatry, and Plant the Knowledge, and Fear of Him, in their Minds, for an Example to other Nations. Whoever reads Deuteronomy, which is a Summary of the other Four Books of Moſes, will find the frequent and earneſt Care and Concern of that Good Man for Iſrael, about this very Point; and how often that People ſlipt and laps'd, notwithſtanding God's Love, Care and Patience over them, into the Idolatrous Cuſtoms of the Nations about them. Divers other Scriptures inform us alſo, eſpecially thoſe of the Prophets, Iſaiah 44. and 45. Pſalms 37. and 115. and Jer. 10. where the Holy Ghoſt Confutes and Rebukes the People, and mocks their Idols with a ſort of Holy Diſdain.

§. 4. Now that which is fartheſt from Idolatry, and the beſt Antidote againſt it, is the Principle we have laid down, and the more People's Minds are turned and brought to it, and that they reſolve their Faith, Worſhip, and Obedience into the Holy Illuminations and Power of it, the nearer they grow to the End of their Creation, and conſequently to their Creator. They are more ſpiritually qualify'd, and become better fitted to Worſhip God as he is: Who, as we are told, by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Is a Spirit, and will be Worſhipped in Spirit and in Truth, and that they are ſuch Sort of Worſhippers which God ſeeketh to worſhip him, in this Goſpel-Day. The Hour cometh, ſaith he, and now is. That is, ſome now do ſo, but more ſhall. A plain Aſſertion in preſent, and a Promiſe and Propheſy of the Increaſe of ſuch Worſhippers in future. Which ſhews a Change intended from a Ceremonial Worſhip, and State of the Church of God, to a Spiritual One. Thus the Text; But the Time cometh, and now is, when True Worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in Spirit and in Truth. Which is as much as to ſay, when the Worſhip of God ſhall be more Inward than Outward, and ſo more ſuitable to the Nature of God, and the Nobler Part of Man, his Inſide, or his inward and better Man: For ſo thoſe bleſſed Words import, in Spirit and in Truth. In Spirit, that is, thro' the Power of the Spirit. In Truth, that is, in Realities, not in Shadows, Ceremonies, or Formalities, but in Sincerity, with and in Life, being divinely prepared and animated; which brings Man not only to offer up Right Worſhip, but alſo into Intimate Communion and Fellowſhip with God, who is a Spirit.

§. 5. And if it be duly weighed, it will appear, that God, in all his Manifeſtations of himſelf, hath ſtill come nearer and nearer to the Inſides of Men, that he might reach to their Underſtandings, and open their Hearts, and give them a plainer and nearer Acquaintance with himſelf in Spirit: And then it is that Man muſt ſeek and find the Knowledge of God for his Eternal Happineſs. Indeed, all Things, that are made, ſhew forth the Power and Wiſdom of God, and his Goodneſs too, to Mankind; and therefore many Men urge the Creation to ſilence Atheiſtical Objections: But though all thoſe Things ſhew a God, yet Man does it, above all the reſt. He is the precious Stone of the Ring, and the moſt glorious Jewel of the Globe; to whoſe reaſonable Uſe, Service, and Satisfaction, the whole ſeems to be made and dedicated. But God's Delight (by whom Man was made, we are told by the Holy Ghoſt) is in the habitable Parts of the Earth, with the Sons of Men, Prov. 8. 31. And with thoſe that are contrite in Spirit, Iſaiah 66. 1. And why is Man his Delight, but becauſe Man only, of all his Works, was of his Likeneſs. This is the intimate Relation of Man to God: Somewhat nearer than ordinary; for of all other Beings, Man only had the Honour of being his Image; and, by his Reſemblance to God, as I may ſay, came his Kindred with God and Knowledge of him. So that the neareſt and beſt Way for Man to know God, and be acquainted with him, is to ſeek him in himſelf, in his Image; and, as he finds that, he comes to find and know God. Now Man may be ſaid to be God's Image in a double Reſpect. Firſt, As he is of an Immortal Nature; and, next, as that Nature is Endued with thoſe Excellencies in ſmall, and proportionable to a Creature's Capacity, that are by Nature Infinitely and Incomparably in his Creator. For Inſtance, Wiſdom, Juſtice, Mercy, Holineſs, Patience, and the like. As Man becomes Holy, Juſt, Merciful, Patient, &c. By the Copy He will know the Original, and by the Workmanſhip in himſelf, he will be acquainted with the Holy Workman. This, Reader, is the Regeneration and New Creature we preſs, (Gal. 6. 15, 16.) and according to this Rule, we ſay, Men ought to be Religious, and walk in this World. Man, as I ſaid juſt now, is a Compoſition of both Worlds; his Body is of this, his Soul of the other World. The Body is as the Temple of the Soul, the Soul the Temple of the Word, and the Word the Great Temple and Manifeſtation of God. By the Body the Soul looks into and beholds this World, and by the Word it beholds God, and the World that is without End. Much might be ſaid of this Order of Things, and their reſpective Excellencies, but I muſt be Brief.

CHAP. VIII. §. 1. The Doctrines of Satisfaction and Juſtification Owned and Worded according to Scripture. §. 2. What Conſtructions we can't believe of them, and which is an Abuſe of them. §. 3. Chriſt Owned a Sacrifice and a Mediator. §. 4. Juſtification Twofold, from the Guilt of Sin, and from the Power and Pollution of it. §. 5. Exhortation to the Reader upon the whole.

Obj. 1. Though there be many good Things ſaid, how Chriſt appears and works in a Soul, to Awaken, Convince and Convert it; yet you ſeem not particular enough about the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt: And it is generally Rumour'd and Charged upon you by your Adverſaries, that you have little Reverence to the Doctrine of Chriſt's Satisfaction to God for our Sins, and that you do not Believe, That the Active and Paſſive Obedience of Chriſt, when he was in the World, is the alone Ground of a Sinner's Juſtification before God.

Anſw. The Doctrines of Satisfaction and Juſtification, truly underſtood, are placed in ſo ſtrict an Union, that the one is a neceſſary Conſequence of the other, and what we ſay of them, is what agrees with the Suffrage of Scripture, and for the moſt Part in the Terms of it; always believing, that in Points where there ariſes any Difficulty, be it from the Obſcurity of Expreſſion, Miſ-tranſlation, or the Duſt raiſed by the Heats of Partial Writers, or Nice Criticks, it is ever beſt to keep cloſe to the Text, and maintain Charity in the reſt. I ſhall firſt ſpeak Negatively, what we do not own, which perhaps hath given Occaſion to thoſe who have been more Haſty than Wiſe, to judge us defective, in our Belief of the Efficacy of the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt to Juſtification: As,

§. 2. Firſt, We cannot believe that Chriſt is the Cauſe, but the Effect of God's Love, according to the Teſtimony of the Beloved Diſciple, John, Chap. 3. God ſo loved the World, that he gave his only Begotten Son into the World, that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have Everlaſting Life.

Secondly, We cannot ſay, God could not have taken another Way to have ſaved Sinners, than by the Death and Sufferings of his Son, to ſatisfy his Juſtice, or that Chriſt's Death and Sufferings were a ſtrict and rigid Satisfaction for that Eternal Death and Miſery due to Man for Sin and Tranſgreſſion: for ſuch a Notion were to make God's Mercy little concerned in Man's Salvation; and indeed we are at too great a Diſtance from his Infinite Wiſdom and Power, to judge of the Liberty or Neceſſity of his Actings.

Thirdly, We cannot ſay Jeſus Chriſt was the greateſt Sinner in the World, (becauſe he bore our Sins on his Croſs, or becauſe he was made Sin for us, who knew no Sin) an Expreſſion of great Levity and Unſoundneſs, yet often ſaid by great Preachers and Profeſſors of Religion.

Fourthly, We cannot Believe that Chriſt's Death and Sufferings ſo ſatisfies God, or juſtifies Men, as that they are thereby Accepted of God: They are indeed thereby put into a State capable of being accepted of God, and through the Obedience of Faith and Sanctification of the Spirit, are in a State of Acceptance: For we can never think a Man juſtified before God, while Self-condemned; or that any Man can be in Chriſt who is not a New Creature; or that God looks upon Men otherwiſe than they are. We think it a State of Preſumption and not of Salvation, to call Jeſus Lord, and not by the Work of the Holy Ghoſt. Maſter, and he not yet Maſter of their Affections: Saviour, and they not ſaved by him from their Sins: Redeemer, and yet they not redeemed by him from their Paſſion, Pride, Covetouſneſs, Wantonneſs, Vanity, Vain Honours, Friendſhips, and Glory of this World: Which were to deceive themſelves; for God will not be mocked, ſuch as Men ſow, ſuch they muſt reap. And tho' Chriſt did Die for us, yet we muſt, by the Aſſiſtance of his Grace, work out our Salvation with Fear and Trembling: As he died for Sin, ſo we muſt Die to Sin, or we cannot be ſaid to be ſaved by the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt, or throughly juſtified and accepted with God. Thus far Negatively. Now, Poſitively, what we own as to Juſtification.

§. 3. We do Believe that Jeſus Chriſt was our Holy Sacrifice, Atonement, and Propitiation; that he bore our Iniquities, and that by his Stripes we were healed of the Wounds Adam gave us in his Fall; and that God is juſt in forgiving true Penitents upon the Credit of that Holy Offering Chriſt made of himſelf to God for us; and that what he did and ſuffered, ſatiſfied and pleaſed God, and was for the Sake of Fallen Man, that had diſpleaſed God: And that through the Offering up of himſelf once for all, through the Eternal Spirit, he hath for ever perfected thoſe (in all Times) that were ſanctified, who walked not after the Fleſh, but after the Spirit, Rom. 8. 1. Mark that.

Chap. VIII.

§. 4. In ſhort, Juſtification conſiſts of two Parts, or hath a twofold Conſideration, viz. Juſtification from the Guilt of Sin, and Juſtification from the Power and Pollution of Sin, and in this Senſe Juſtification gives a Man a full and clear Acceptance before God. For want of this latter Part it is, that ſo many Souls, Religiouſly inclined, are often under Doubts, Scruples, and Deſpondencies, notwithſtanding all that their Teachers tell them of the Extent and Efficacy of the firſt Part of Juſtification. And it is too general an Unhappineſs among the Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, that they are apt to cloak their own Active and Paſſive Diſobedience with the Active and Paſſive Obedience of Chriſt. The firſt Part of Juſtification, we do reverently and humbly acknowledge, is only for the Sake of the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt: Nothing we can do, though by the Operation of the Holy Spirit, being able to cancel Old Debts, or wipe out Old Scores: It is the Power and Efficacy of that Propitiatory Offering, upon Faith and Repentance, that juſtifies us from the Sins that are paſt; and it is the Power of Chriſt's Spirit in our Hearts, that purifies and makes us acceptable before God. For 'till the Heart of Man is purged from Sin, God will never accept of it. He Reproves, Rebukes and Condemns thoſe that entertain Sin there, and therefore ſuch cannot be ſaid to be in a Juſtified State; Condemnation and Juſtification being Contraries: So that they that hold themſelves in a Juſtified State by the Active and Paſſive Obedience of Chriſt, while they are not Actively and Paſſively Obedient to the Spirit of Chriſt Jeſus, are under a ſtrong and dangerous Deluſion; and for crying out againſt this Sin-pleaſing Imagination, not to ſay Doctrine, we are Staged and Reproached as Denyers and Deſpiſers of the Death and Sufferings of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. But be it known to ſuch, they add to Chriſt's Sufferings, and Crucifie to themſelves afreſh the Son of God, and trample the Blood of the Covenant under their Feet, that walk unholily under a Profeſſion of Juſtification; for God will not acquit the Guilty, nor juſtify the Diſobedient and Unfaithful. Such deceive themſelves, and at the Great and Final Judgment their Sentence will not be, Come ye Bleſſed, becauſe it cannot be ſaid to them, Well done Good and Faithful, for they cannot be ſo eſteemed that live and die in a Reproveable and Condemnable State; but, Go ye Curſed, &c.

§. 5. Wherefore, O my Reader! Reſt not thy ſelf wholly ſatisfied with what Chriſt has done for thee in his Bleſſed Perſon without Thee, but preſs to know his Power and Kingdom within thee, that the ſtrong Man, that has too long kept thy Houſe, may be bound, and his Goods ſpoiled, his Works deſtroy'd, and Sin ended, according to 1 John 3. 7. For which End, ſays that Beloved Diſciple, Chriſt was manifeſted, that all Things may become New: New Heavens and New Earth, in which Righteouſneſs dwells. Thus thou wilt come to glorify God in thy Body and in thy Spirit, which are his; and live to him and not to thy ſelf. Thy Love, Joy, Worſhip and Obedience; thy Life, Converſation, and Practice; thy Study, Meditation, and Devotion, will be Spiritual: For the Father and the Son will make their Abode with thee, and Chriſt will manifeſt himſelf to thee; for the Secrets of the Lord are with them that fear him: And an Holy Unction or Anointing have all thoſe, which leads them into all Truth, and they need not the Teachings of Men. They are better Taught, being Inſtructed by the Divine Oracle: No bare Hear-ſay, or Traditional Chriſtians, but freſh and living Witneſſes: Thoſe that have ſeen with their own Eyes, and heard with their own Ears, and have handled with their own Hands, the Word of Life, in the divers Operations of it, to their Souls Salvation. In this they Meet, in this they Preach, and in this they Pray and Praiſe: Behold the New Covenant fulfilled, the Church and Worſhip of Chriſt, the Great Anointed of God, and the Great Anointing of God, in his Holy High Prieſthood, and Offices in his Church!

Chap. IX.

CHAP. IX.

§. 1. A Confeſſion to Chriſt and his Work, both in Doing and Suffering. §. 2. That ought not to make void our Belief and Teſtimony of his Inward and Spiritual Appearance in the Soul. §. 3. What our Teſtimony is in the latter Reſpect: That 'tis impoſſible to be Saved by Chriſt Without us, while we reject his Work and Power Within us. §. 4. The Diſpenſation of Grace, in it's Nature and Extent. §. 5. A farther Acknowledgment to the Death and Sufferings of Chriſt. §. 6. The Concluſion, ſhewing our Adverſary's Unreaſonableneſs.

§. 1. AND leſt any ſhould ſay we are Equivocal in our Expreſſions, and Allegorize away Chriſt's Appearance in the Fleſh; meaning only thereby, our own Fleſh; and that as often as we mention him, we mean only a Myſtery, or a Myſtical Senſe of him, be it as to his Coming, Birth, Miracles, Sufferings, Death, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, Mediation and Judgment; I would yet add, to preſerve the well-diſpoſed from being ſtaggered by ſuch Suggeſtions, and to inform and reclaim ſuch as are under the Power and Prejudice of them, That, we do, we Bleſs God, Religiouſly Believe and Confeſs, to the Glory of God the Father, and the Honour of his Dear and Beloved Son, that, Jeſus Chriſt, took our Nature upon him, and was like unto us in all Things, Sin excepted: That he was born of the Virgin Mary, Suffered under Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governor, was Crucified, Dead, and Buried in the Sepuchre of Joſeph of Arimathea; Roſe again the Third Day, and Aſcended into Heaven, and ſits on the Right Hand of God, in the Power and Majeſty of his Father; who will one Day judge the World by him, even that Bleſſed Man, Chriſt Jeſus, according to their Works.

§. 2. But becauſe we ſo Believe, muſt we not believe what Chriſt ſaid, He that is with you ſhall be in you, John 14. I in them, and they in me, &c. Chap. 17. When it pleaſed God to reveal his Son in me, &c. Gal. The Myſtery hid from Ages, is Chriſt in the Gentiles the Hope of Glory, Col. 1. Unleſs Chriſt be in you, ye are Reprobates? 2 Cor. 13. Or muſt we be induſtriouſly repreſented Denyers of Chriſt's Coming in the Fleſh, and the Holy Ends of it, in all the Parts and Branches of his Doing and Suffering, only becauſe we believe and preſs the Neceſſity of Believing, Receiving and Obeying his Inward and Spiritual Appearance and Manifeſtation of himſelf, through his Light, Grace and Spirit in the Hearts and Conſciences of Men and Women, to Reprove, Convict, Convert and Change them? This we eſteem hard and unrighteous Meaſure; nor would our warm and ſharp Adverſaries be ſo dealt with by others: But to do as they would be done to, is too often no Part of their Practice, whatever it be of their Profeſſion.

§. 3. Yet we are very ready to declare to the whole World, that we cannot think Men and Women can be ſaved by their Belief of the one, without the Senſe and Experience of the other; and that is what we oppoſe, and not his Bleſſed Manifeſtation in the Fleſh. We ſay that he then overcame our Common Enemy, foil'd him in the open Field, and in our Nature triumphed over him that had overcome and triumphed over it in our Fore-father Adam and his Poſterity: And that as truly as Chriſt overcame him in our Nature, in his own Perſon, ſo, by his Divine Grace, being received and obeyed by us, he overcomes him in us: That is, he detects the Enemy by his Light in the Conſcience, and enables the Creature to reſiſt him, and all his Fiery Darts; and finally, ſo to Fight the Good Fight of Faith, as to overcome him, and lay hold on Eternal Life.

§. 4. And this is the Diſpenſation of Grace, which we declare has appeared to All, more or leſs; teaching thoſe that will receive it, to deny Ungodlineſs and worldly Luſts, and to live ſoberly, righteouſly, and godly in this preſent World; looking for (which none elſe can juſtly do) the bleſſed Hope, and glorious Appearing of the Great God, and our Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, &c. Tit. 2. 11, 12, 13. And as from the Teachings, Experience and Motion, of this Grace we miniſter to others, ſo the very Drift of our Miniſtry is to turn People's Minds to this Grace in themſelves, that all of them may up and be doing, even the good and acceptable Will of God, and work out their Salvation with Fear and Trembling, and make their High and Heavenly Calling and Election ſure; which none elſe can do, whatever be their Profeſſion, Church and Character: For ſuch as Men ſow they muſt reap; and his Servants we are whom we obey. Regeneration we muſt know, or we cannot be Children of God, and Heirs of Eternal Glory: And to be Born again, another Spirit and Principle muſt prevail, leaven, ſeaſon, and govern us, than either the Spirit of the World, or our own depraved Spirits; and this can be no other Spirit than that which dwelt in Chriſt; for unleſs that dwell in us, we can be none of his, Rom. 8. 9. And this Spirit begins in Conviction, and ends in Converſion and Perſeverance; and the one follows the other. Converſion being the Conſequence of Convictions obeyed, and Perſeverance a natural Fruit of Converſion, and being Born of God; for ſuch Sin not, becauſe the Seed of God abides in them: John 3. 7, 8. But ſuch, through Faithfulneſs, continue to the End, and obtain the Promiſe, even Everlaſting Life.

§. 5. But let my Reader take this along with him, that we do acknowledge that Chriſt, through his Holy Doing and Suffering, (for being a Son he learned Obedience) has obtained Mercy of God his Father for Mankind, and that his Obedience has an Influence to our Salvation, in all the Parts and Branches of it, ſince thereby he became a Conqueror,and led Captivity Captive, and obtained Gifts for Men, with divers great and precious Promiſes, that thereby we might be Partakers of the Divine Nature, having (firſt) eſcaped the Corruption that is in the World, through Luſt. I ſay, we do believe and confeſs, that the Active and Paſſive Obedience of Chriſt Jeſus affects our Salvation throughout, as well from the Power and Pollution of Sin, as from the Guilt, He being a Conqueror as well as a Sacrifice, and both through Suffering; Yet they that reject his Divine Gift, ſo obtained, (and which he has given to them, by which to ſee their Sin and the Sinfulneſs of it, and to repent and turn away from it, and do ſo no more; and to wait upon God for daily Strength to reſiſt the Fiery Darts of the Enemy, and to be Comforted through the Obedience of Faith in and to this Divine Grace of the Son of God) ſuch do not pleaſe God, believe truly in God, nor are they in a State of true Chriſtianity and Salvation. Woman, ſaid Chriſt, to the Samaritan, at the Well, hadſt thou known the Gift of God, and who it is that ſpeaketh to thee, &c. People know not Chriſt, and God, whom to know is Life Eternal, John 17. becauſe they are Ignorant of the Gift of God, viz. a Meaſure of the Spirit of God that is given to every one to profit with, 1 Cor. 12. 7. which reveals Chriſt and God to the Soul, Chap. 2. Fleſh and Blood cannot do it, Oxford and Cambridge cannot do it, Tongues and Philoſophy cannot do it: For they that by Wiſdom knew not God, had theſe Things for their Wiſdom. They were ſtrong, deep and accurate in them; but, alas! they were clouded, puffed up, and ſet farther off from the Inward and Saving Knowledge of God, becauſe they ſought for it in them, and thought to find God there. But the Key of David is another Thing, which ſhuts and no Man opens, and opens and no Man ſhuts; and this Key have all they that receive the Gift of God into their Hearts, and it opens to them the Knowledge of God and themſelves, and gives them a quite other Sight, Taſte and Judgment of Things than their Educational or Traditional Knowledge afforded them. This is the Beginning of the New Creation of God, and thus it is we come to be New Creatures.

And we are bold to declare, there is no other Way like this, by which People can come into Chriſt, or be true Chriſtians, or receive the Advantage that comes by the Death and Sufferings of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Wherefore we ſay, and upon good Authority, even that of our own Experience, as well as that of the Scriptures of Truth, Chriſt will prove no Saving Sacrifice for them, that refuſe to obey him for their Example. They that reject the Gift, deny the Giver inſtead of themſelves for the Giver's Sake, O that People were wiſe, that they would conſider their latter End, and the Things that make for the Peace thereof! Why ſhould they periſh in a vain Hope of Life, while Death Reigns? Of living with God, who live not to him, nor walk with him? Awake thou that ſleepeſt in thy Sin, or at beſt, in thy Self-righteouſneſs! Awake, I ſay, and Chriſt ſhall give thee Life! For he is the Lord from Heaven, the Quickning Spirit, that quickens us, by his Spirit, if we do not reſiſt it and quench it by our Diſobedience, but receive, love and obey it, in all the Holy Leadings and Teachings of it. Rom. 8. 14, 15. To which Holy Spirit I commend my Reader, that he may the better ſee where he is, and alſo come to the true Belief and Advantage of the Doings and Sufferings of our Dear and Bleſſed Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, who ſaves from the Power and Pollution, as well as Guilt of Sin, all thoſe that bear his Knocks, and open the Door of their Hearts to him, that he may come in and work a real and thorough Reformation in and for them; And ſo the Benefit, Virtue and Efficacy of his Doings and Sufferings without us,will come to be livingly & effectually applied and felt, and Fellowſhip with Chriſt in his Death and Sufferings known, according to the Doctrine of the Apoſtle; which, thoſe that live in that which made him Suffer, know not, though they profeſs to be ſaved by his Death and Sufferings. Much more might be ſaid as to this Matter, but I muſt be brief.

§. 6. To conclude this Chapter, we wonder not that we ſhould be miſtaken, miſ-conſtrued and miſ-repreſented, in what we believe and do to Salvation, ſince our Betters have been ſo treated in the Primitive Times. Nor indeed is it only about Doctrines of Religion; for our Practice in Worſhip and Diſcipline have had the ſame Succeſs. But this is what I earneſtly deſire, that however bold People are pleaſed to make with us, they would not deceive themſelves in the Great Things of their own Salvation: That while they would ſeem to own all to Chriſt, they are not found Diſowned of Chriſt in the laſt Day. Read the 7th of Matthew: It is he that hears Chriſt, the great Word of God, and does what he enjoins, what he commands, and by his Bleſſed Example recommends, that is a Wiſe Builder, that has founded his Houſe well, and built with good Materials, and whoſe Houſe will ſtand the laſt Shock and Judgment. For which Cauſe we are often plain, cloſe and earneſt with People to conſider, that Chriſt came not to ſave them in, but From their Sins; and that they that think to diſcharge and releaſe themſelves of his Yoke and Burden, his Croſs and Example, and ſecure themſelves, and Complement Chriſt with his having done all for them (while he has wrought little or nothing in them, nor they parted with any Thing for the Love of him) will finally awake in a dreadful Surprize, at the Sound of the laſt Trumpet, and at this ſad and irrevocable Sentence, Depart from me ye Workers of Iniquity, I know you not: Which terrible End may all timely avoid, by hearkening to Wiſdom's Voice, and turning at her Reproof, that ſhe may lead them in the Ways of Righteouſneſs, and in the midſt of the Paths of Judgment, that their Souls may come to inherit Subſtance; even durable Riches and Righteouſneſs in the Kingdom of the Father, World without End.

Chap. X.

CHAP. X. Of the true Worſhip of God in what it ſtands. §. 2. Of the true Miniſtry, that it is by Inſpiration. §. 3. The Scripture plain in that Caſe. §. 4. Chriſt's Miniſters, True Witneſſes, they ſpeak what they know, not by Report. §. 5. Chriſt's Miniſters Preach freely, 'tis one of their Marks.

§. 1. AS the Lord wrought effectually, by his Divine Grace, in the Hearts of this People, ſo he thereby brought them to a Divine Worſhip and Miniſtry; Chriſt's Words they came to Experience, viz. That God was a Spirit, and that he would therefore be worſhipped in the Spirit, and in the Truth, and that ſuch Worſhippers the Father would ſeek to worſhip him. For, bowing to the Convictions of the Spirit in themſelves, in their daily Courſe of Living, by which they were taught to eſchew that which was made manifeſt to them to be Evil, and to do that which was Good, they, in their aſſembling together, ſate down, and waited for the Preparation of this Holy Spirit, both to let them ſee their States and Conditions before the Lord, and to worſhip him acceptably; and as they were ſenſible of Wants, or Shortneſs, or Infirmities, ſo in the Secret of their own Hearts, Prayer would Spring to God, through Jeſus Chriſt, to help, aſſiſt and ſupply: But they did not dare to awake their Beloved before his Time; or approach the Throne of the King of Glory, till he held out his Scepter; or take Thought what they ſhould ſay, or after their own or other Men's ſtudied Words and Forms, for this were to Offer ſtrange Fire; to pray, but not by the Spirit; to aſk, but not in the Name, that is, in the Power of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who prayed, as well as ſpoke, like one having Authority, that is, Power, a Divine Energy and Force to reach and Pierce the Heavens, which he gives to all that obey his Light, Grace and Spirit, in their ſolemn Waitings upon him. So that 'tis this People's Principle, that Fire muſt come from Heaven; Life and Power from God to enable the Soul to pour out it ſelf acceptably before him. And when a Coal from his Holy Altar touches our Lips, then can we Pray and Praiſe him as we ought to do. And as this is our Principle, and that according to Scripture, ſo it is, Bleſſed be God, our Experience and Practice: And therefore it is we are ſeparated from the Worſhips of Men, under their ſeveral Forms, becauſe they do not found it in the Operation, Motion and Aſſiſtance of the Spirit of Chriſt, but the Appointment, Invention and Framing of Man, both as to Matter, Words and Time. We do not diſſent in our own Wills, and we dare not comply againſt his that has called us, and brought us to his own Spiritual Worſhip; in Obedience to whom we are what we are, in our Separation from the divers Ways of Worſhip in the World.

§. 2. And as our Worſhip ſtands in the Operation of the Spirit and Truth in our inward Parts, as before expreſſed, ſo does our Miniſtry. For as the Holy Teſtimonies of the Servants of God of Old, were from the Operation of his Bleſſed Spirit, ſo muſt thoſe of his Servants be in every Age, and that which has not the Spirit of Chriſt for it's Spring and Source, is of Man, and not of Chriſt. Chriſtian Miniſters are to miniſter what they receive: This is Scripture; now that which we receive is not our own, leſs another Man's, but the Lord's: So that we are not 1696. Chap. X. only not to Steal from our Neighbours, but we are not to Study nor ſpeak our own Words. If we are not to ſtudy what we are to ſay before Magiſtrates for our ſelves, leſs are we to ſtudy what we are to ſay for and from God to the People. We are to miniſter, as the Oracles of God; if ſo, then muſt we receive from Chriſt, God's Great Oracle, what we are to miniſter. And if we are to miniſter what we receive, then not what we Study, Collect, and beat out of our own Brains, for that is not the Mind of Chriſt, but our Imaginations, and this will not profit the People.

§. 3. This was recommended to the Corinthians by the Apoſtle Paul, 1 Cor. 14. that they ſhould ſpeak as they were moved, or as any thing was revealed to them, by the Spirit, for the Edification of the Church; for, ſays he, Ye may all Prophecy; that is, ye may all Preach to Edification, as any thing is revealed to you, for the Good of others, and as the Spirit giveth Utterance. And if the Spirit muſt give Chriſt's Miniſters their Utterance, then thoſe that are his are careful not to utter any Thing in his Name to the People, without his Spirit; and by good Conſequence, they that go before the true Guide, and utter Words without the Knowledge of the Mind of the Spirit, are none of Chriſt's Miniſters: Such, certainly, run, and God has not ſent them, and they cannot profit the People. And indeed, how ſhould they, when it is impoſſible that mere Man, with all his Parts, Arts and Acquirements, can turn People from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan to God, which is the very End and Work of the Goſpel-Miniſtry. It muſt be inſpired Men, Men gifted by God, taught and influenced by his Heavenly Spirit, that can be qualified for ſo great, ſo inward, and ſo ſpiritual a Work.

§. 4. Miniſters of Chriſt are his Witneſſes, and the Credit of a Witneſs is, that he has heard, ſeen or handled: And thus the Beloved Diſciple ſtates the Truth and Authority of their Miſſion and Miniſtry; 1 John 1. 1, 3. That which we have heard, which we have ſeen with our Eyes, which we have looked upon and our Hands have handled, that declare we unto you, that your Fellowſhip may be with us, and truly our Fellowſhip is with the Father, and with his Son Jeſus Chriſt. I ſay, if Chriſt's Miniſters are his Witneſſes, they muſt know what they ſpeak; that is, they muſt have experienced, and paſſed through thoſe States and Conditions, they Preach of, and practically know thoſe Truths they declare of to the People, or they come not in by the Door, but over the Wall, and are Thieves and Robbers. He that has the Key of David comes in at the Door, Chriſt Jeſus, and has his Admiſſion and Approbation from him, anointed by him, the alone High Prieſt of the Goſpel-Diſpenſation. He it is that Breathes, and lays his Hands upon his own Miniſters; he anoints them, and recruits their Cruiſe, and renews their Horn with Oil, that they may have it freſh and freſh, for every Occaſion and Service he calls them to, and engages them in.

§. 5. Nor is this all, but as they Receive freely, freely they Give: They do not Teach for Hire, Divine for Money, nor Preach for Gifts or Rewards. It was Chriſt's Holy Command to his Miniſters to give freely, and it is our Practice. And truly we cannot but admire that this ſhould be made a Fault, and that Preaching for Hire ſhould not be ſeen to be one; yea, a Mark of Falſe Prophets, when it has been ſo frequently and ſeverely cried out upon, by the True Prophets of God in former Times. I would not be Uncharitable, but the Guilty are deſired to call to Mind, who it was that offered Money to be made a Miniſter, and what it was for; if not to get Money and make a Trade or Livelihood by it; and what Anſwer he met with from the Apoſtle Peter, Acts 8. 18, 19, 20. The Lord Touch the Hearts of thoſe that are giving Money to be made Miniſters, in order to live by their Preaching, that they may ſee what Ground it is they build upon, and repent, and turn to the Lord, that they may find Mercy, and become living Witneſſes of his Power and Goodneſs in their own Souls; ſo may they be enabled to tell others What God has done for them, which is the Root and Ground of the true Miniſtry; and this Miniſtry it is that God does Bleſs. I could ſay much on this Subject, but let what has been ſaid ſuffice at this Time, only I cannot but obſerve, that where any Religion has a ſtrong Temptation of Gain to induce Men to be Miniſters, there is great Danger of their running faſter to that Calling, than becomes a true Goſpel-Miniſter.

§. 1. Obj. But does not this Sort of Miniſtry, and Worſhip, tend to make People careleſs, and to raiſe Spiritual Pride in others, may it not give an Occaſion to great Miſchief and Irreligion?

Anſw. By no Means, for when People are of Age, they, of Right, expect their Inheritances; and the End of all Words is to bring People to the great Word, and then the Promiſe of God is accompliſhed, They ſhall be all taught of me, from the leaſt to the greateſt, and in Righteouſneſs (pray mark that) they ſhall be eſtabliſhed, and great ſhall be their Peace. To this of the Evangelical Prophet, the Beloved Diſciple agrees, and gives a full Anſwer to the Objection: Theſe Things have I written unto you, concerning them that Seduce you: But the Anointing; which ye have received of him, abideth in you, and ye need not that any Man teach you, but as the ſame Anointing teacheth you, of all Things, and is Truth, and is no Lie: And even as it hath taught you, ye ſhall abide in him. In which, Three Things are obſervable. 1*ſt*. That he writ his Epiſtle upon an extraordinary Occaſion, viz. to prevent their Deluſion. 2*dly*. That he aſſerts a nearer and ſuperior Miniſter than himſelf, viz. The Anointing or Grace they had received; and that not only in that particular Exigency, but in all Caſes that might attend them. 3*dly*. That if they did but take Heed to the Teachings of it, they would have no Need of Man's Directions, or Fear of his Seducings. At leaſt of no Miniſtry that comes not from the Power of the Anointing: Though I rather take the Apoſtle in the higheſt Senſe of the Words: Thus alſo the Apoſtle Paul to the Theſſalonians. But as touching Brotherly Love, ye need not that I write unto you: For ye your ſelves are taught of God to love one another. 1 Theſſ. 4. 9. But Helps are uſeful, and a great Bleſſing, if from God, ſuch was John the Baptiſt's; but remember he pointed all to Chriſt, 1 John 1. 26. Lo the Lamb of God! I baptize you with Water, but he ſhall baptize you with the Holy Ghoſt and with Fire, Matt. 3. 11. And ſo the true Miniſtry does. And while People are Senſual, and under ſuch an Eclipſe, by the Interpoſition of Sin and Satan, God is pleaſed to ſend forth his Enlightning Servants to awaken and turn them from the Darkneſs to the Light in themſelves, that, through Obedience to it, they may come to be Children of the Light, John. 12. 36. And have their Fellowſhip one with another in it, and an Inheritance at laſt, with the Saints in Light for ever.

And as it is the Way God has taken to call and gather People, ſo a Living and Holy Miniſtry is of great Advantage to watch over, and build up the Young, and comfort and eſtabliſh the feeble and ſimple Ones. But ſtill I ſay, the more Inward, the leſs Outward: The more People come to be taught immediately of God, by the Light of his Word and Spirit in their Hearts, the leſs need of outward Means, read Iſa. 16. 19, 20. Which is held by all to be a Goſpel Promiſe, and the Sun and Moon there are generally underſtood to mean the external Means in the Church. Compare them with John 1. 13. Rom. 1: 19. 1 Cor. 2. 11. 15. 1 Theſſ. 4. 9: 1 John 2. 20, 27. Rev. 21. 22, 23, 24. All which Places prove what we aſſert of the Sufficiency and glorious Priviledge of Inward and Spiritual Teachings. And moſt certainly, as Men grow in Grace, and know the Anointing of the Word in themſelves, the Diſpenſation will be leſs in Words (though in Words) and more in Life; and Preaching will in great Meaſure be turned into Praiſing, and the Worſhip of God, more into walking with, than talking of God: For that is Worſhip indeed, that bows to his Will at all Times, and in all Places: The Trueſt, the Higheſt Worſhip, Man is capable of in this World. And it is that Conformity that gives Communion, and there is no Fellowſhip with God, no Light of his Countenance to be enjoyed, no Peace and Aſſurance to be had, farther than their Obedience to his Will, and a Faithfulneſs to his Word, according to the Manifeſtation of the Light thereof in the Heart.

I ſay, this is the Trueſt and Higheſt State of Worſhip; for Set Days and Places, with all the Solemnity of them, were moſt in Requeſt in the weakeſt Diſpenſation. Altars, Ark and Temples, Sabbaths and Feſtivals, &c. Are not to be found in the Writings of the New-Teſtament. There, every Day is alike, and every Place is alike; but if there were a Dedication, let it be to the Lord. Thus the Apoſtle, but he plainly ſhews a State beyond it, for to live (with him) was Chriſt, and to die was Gain; for the Life he lived, was by the Faith of the Son of God, and therefore it was not he that lived, but Chriſt that lived in him; that is, that Ruled, Conducted, and bore Sway in him, which is the true Chriſtian Life, the Superſenſual Life; the Life of Converſion and Regeneration; to which all the Diſpenſations of God, and Miniſtry of his Servants have ever tended, as the Conſummation of God's Work for Man's Happineſs. Here every Man's a Temple, and every Family a Church, and every Place, a Meeting-Place, and every Viſit a Meeting. And yet a little while and it ſhall be ſo yet more and more; and a People the Lord is now preparing to enter into this Sabbath or Degree of Reſt.

Chap. X. Not that we would be thought to undervalue Publick and Solemn Meetings: we have them all over the Nation where the Lord has called us. Yea, though but Two or Three of us be in a Corner of a Country, we meet, as the Apoſtle exhorted the Saints of his Time, and reproved ſuch as neglected to aſſemble themſelves. But yet ſhew we unto thee, O Reader, a more excellent Way of Worſhip: For many may come to thoſe Meetings, and go away Carnal, Dead and Dry; but the Worſhippers in Spirit and in Truth, whoſe Hearts bow, whoſe Minds adore the Eternal God, that is a Spirit, in and by his Spirit; ſuch as conform to his Will, and walk with him in a Spiritual Life, they are the True, Conſtant, Living and Acceptable Worſhippers; whether it be in Meetings or out of Meetings; and as with ſuch, all outward Aſſemblies are greatly comfortable, ſo alſo do we meet for a Publick Teſtimony of Religion and Worſhip, and for the Edification and Encouragement of thoſe that are yet young in the Truth, and to Call and Gather others to the Knowledge of it, who are yet going aſtray; and Bleſſed be God, it is not in Vain, ſince many are thereby added to the Church, that we hope and believe ſhall be ſaved.

Chap. XI. Chap. XI. §. 1. Againſt Tithes. §. 2. Againſt all Swearing. §. 3. Againſt War among Chriſtians. §. 4. Againſt the Salutations of the Times. §. 5. And for Plainneſs of Speech. §. 6. Againſt Mixt-Marriages. §. 7. And for plainneſs in Apparel, &c. No Sports and Paſtimes after the Manner of this World. §. 8. Of obſerving Days. §. 9. Of Care of Poor, Peace and Converſation.

§. 1. And as God has been pleaſed to call us from an Humane Miniſtry, ſo we cannot for Conſcience Sake ſupport and maintain it, and upon that Score, and not out of Humour or Covetouſneſs, we refuſe to pay Tithes, or ſuch-like pretended Dues, concerning which, many Books have been writ in our Defence: We cannot ſupport what we cannot approve, but have a Teſtimony againſt; for thereby we ſhould be found Inconſiſtent with our ſelves.

§. 2. We dare not Swear, becauſe Chriſt forbids it. Mat. 5. 34, 37. and James, his true Follower. It is needleſs as well as Evil, for the Reaſon of Swearing being Untruth, that Men's Yea was not Yea, Swearing was uſed to awe Men to Truth Speaking, and to give others Satisfaction, that what was Sworn, was True. But the true Chriſtians Yea being Yea, the End of an Oath is anſwered, and therefore the Uſe of it is Needleſs, Superfluous and cometh of Evil. The Apoſtle James taught the ſame Doctrine, and the Primitive Chriſtians practiſed it, as may be ſeen in the Book of Martyrs; as alſo the earlieſt and beſt of the Reformers.

§. 3. We alſo believe, that War ought to ceaſe, among the Followers of the Lamb Chriſt Jeſus, who taught his Diſciples to forgive and love their Enemies, and not to war againſt them, and kill them; and that therefore the Weapons of his true Followers are not Carnal but Spiritual; yea mighty, through God, to cut down Sin and Wickedneſs, and dethrone him that is the Author thereof. And as this is the moſt Chriſtian, ſo the moſt rational Way; Love and Perſwaſion having more Force than Weapons of War. Nor would the worſt of Men eaſily be brought to hurt thoſe that they really think love them. 'Tis that Love and Patience muſt in the End have the Victory.

§. 4. We dare not give worldly Honour, or uſe the frequent and Modiſh Salutations of the Times, ſeeing plainly, that Vanity, Pride, and Oſtentation, belong to them. Chriſt alſo forbad them in his Day, and made the Love of them a Mark of Declenſion from the Simplicity of purer Times; and his Diſciples, and their Followers, were obſerved to have obeyed their Maſter's Precept. It is not to diſtinguiſh our ſelves a Party, or out of Pride, Ill-Breeding or Humour, but in Obedience to the Sight and Senſe we have received from the Spirit of Chriſt, of the Evil Riſe and Tendency thereof.

§. 5. For the ſame Reaſon we have returned to the firſt Plainneſs of Speech, viz. Thou and Thee, to a ſingle Perſon, which though Men give no other to God, they will hardly endure it from us. It has been a great Teſt upon Pride, and ſhewn the Blind and weak Inſides of many. This alſo is out of pure Conſcience, whatever People may think or ſay of us for it. We may be deſpiſed, and have been ſo often, yea, very evilly entreated, but we are now better known, and People better informed. In ſhort, 'tis alſo both Scripture and Grammar, and we have Propriety of Speech for it, as well as Peace in it.

§. 6. We cannot allow of Mix'd Marriages, that is, to join with ſuch as are not of our Society; but Oppoſe and Diſown them, if at any Time any of our Profeſſion ſo groſly Err from the Rule of their Communion; yet Reſtore them upon ſincere Repentance, but not disjoin them. The Book I writ of the Riſe and Progreſs of the People called Quakers, is more full and expreſs herein.

§. 7. Plainneſs in Apparel and Furniture, is another Teſtimony peculiar to us, in the Degree we have bore it to the World: As alſo few Words, and being at a Word. Likewiſe Temperance in Food, and Abſtinence from the Recreations and Paſtimes of the World: All which we have been taught, by the Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, to be according to Godlineſs; and therefore we have long exhorted all, that their Moderation may be known unto all Men, for that the Lord was at Hand, to enter into Judgment with us for every Intemperance or Exceſs; and herein we hope we have been no ill Examples, or Scandal unto any that have a due Conſideration of Things.

§. 8. We cannot, in Conſcience to God, obſerve Holy Days, (ſo called) the Publick Faſts and Feaſts, becauſe of their Human Inſtitution and Ordination, and that; they have not a Divine Warrant, but are appointed in the Will of Man.

§. 9. Laſtly, We have been led by this Good Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt of which I have treated in this Diſcourſe, according to Primitive Practice, to have a due Care over one another, for the Preſervation of the whole Society, in a Converſation more ſuitable to their Holy Profeſſion.

Firſt, In Reſpect to a ſtrict Walking both towards thoſe that are Without, and thoſe that are Within; that their Converſation in the World, and walking in and towards the Church, may be blameleſs. That as they may be Strict in the one, ſo they may be Faithful in the other.

Secondly, That Collections be made to ſupply the Wants of the Poor, and that Care be taken of Widows and Orphans, and ſuch as are helpleſs, as well in Counſel as about Subſtance.

Thirdly, That all ſuch as are intended to Marry, if they have Parents, or are under the Direction of Guardians or Truſtees, are obliged, firſt, to declare to them their Intention, and have their Conſent before they propoſe it to one another, and the Meeting they relate to, who are alſo careful to examine their Clearneſs, and being ſatisfied with it, They are by them allowed to ſolemnize their Marriage in a Publick Select Meeting, for that Purpoſe Appointed, and not otherwiſe: Whereby all Clandeſtine and Indirect Marriages are prevented among us.

Fourthly, And to the End that this Good Order may be obſerved, for the Comfort and Edification of the Society, in the Ways of Truth and Soberneſs; Select Meetings (of Care and Buſineſs) are fixed in all Parts, where we Inhabit, which are held Monthly, and which Reſolve into Quarterly Meetings, and thoſe into one Yearly Meeting, for our better Communication one with another, in thoſe Things that maintain Piety and Charity; that God, who by his Grace, has called us to be a People, to his Praiſe, may have it from us, through his Beloved Son, and our Ever-bleſſed and Only Redeemer, Jeſus Chriſt, for He is Worthy, Worthy, Now, and Ever. Amen.

Thus, Reader, thou haſt the Character of the People called Quakers, in their Doctrine, Worſhip, Miniſtry, Practice and Diſcipline: Compare it with Scripture, and Primitive Example, and we hope thou wilt find, that this ſhort Diſcourſe hath, in good Meaſure, Anſwered the Title of it, viz.

Primitive Chriſtianity Revived, in the Principles and Practice of the People called Quakers.

A TESTIMONY to the TRUTH of GOD, As held by the People, called QUAKERS: Being a ſhort Vindication of them, from the Abuſes and Miſrepreſentations often put upon them by Envious Apoſtates, and Mercenary Adverſaries.

To the READER.

Reader,

OCcaſion having been given us, which we never ſought, we continue to improve it to the farther Explanation and Defence of our ſo much abuſed Profeſſion; that, if poſſible, People may ſee, at leaſt the more Sober and Candid, that we are not at that Diſtance from Truth, nor ſo Heterodox in our Principles, as we have been, by too many, either raſhly or intereſtedly Repreſented: But that we hold the Great Truths of Chriſtianity, according to the Holy Scriptures, and that the Realities of Religion are the Mark we preſs after, and to diſabuſe and awaken People from their falſe Hopes and Carnal Securities, under which they are too apt to Indulge themſelves, to their Irreparable Loſs; That by our ſetting Chriſtian Doctrine in a true Light, and reviving and preſſing the Neceſſity of a better Practice, They may ſee the Obligation they are under to redeem their precious Time they have loſt, by a more careful Employment of that which remains, to a better Purpoſe. In this ſhort Vindication of our miſtaken Principles, the Ingenuous Reader may eaſily diſcern how Ill we have been treated, and what Hardſhips we have laboured under, through the Prejudice of ſome, and the Unreaſonable Credulity of others, and that we are a People in Earneſt for Heaven, and in that Way our Bleſſed Lord hath trod for Us to Glory.

A Teſtimony to the Truth of GOD, &c.

BY the Obſervation we are led to make from Francis Bugg's late Book, upon the Biſhop of Norwich's giving him his Recommendatory Letter to the Clergy, &c. in his Dioceſs, to Relieve, by a Collection, the Neceſſities of that Beggarly Apoſtate; a Copy of which Letter the ſaid F. B. hath publiſhed in his ſaid Book.

And alſo by the Obſervation we have made on the Malicious Attempts of the Snake in the Graſs, in his Firſt, Second, and Third Editions, which is a diſingenuous and unjuſt Collection from F. Bugg, and ſome other Deſerters, of Things, for the moſt Part, long ſince anſwered; as alſo lately, by the Book Entituled, An Antidote, &c. (Though becauſe his Second and Third Edition have ſome Additions to his Firſt, and that being new vamped, for a better Market, he may expect a Melius inquirendum after a While: Yet ſhould we follow the Example of this Rattle-Snake, againſt the Church, of which he pretends to be a Member, (but at preſent a ſuſpended one) we might, in Retaliation, not only exceed the Cobler of Glocester, but the Scotch Eloquence, and that Maſter-Piece, the Ground of the Contempt of the Clergy.

And, laſtly, By the Obſervation we have made on the Relation ſubſcrib'd by ſome of the Norfolk Clergy, dated October the 12th, 1698. We cannot forbear thinking, that as their Confederacy is deep, ſo it aims at nothing leſs than the Ruin of us, and our Poſterity, by rendering us Blaſphemers, and Enemies to the Government, and to be treated as ſuch.

The Norfolk Relation from the Clergy aforeſaid, charges the ſaid People with Blaſphemy: Firſt, Againſt God. Secondly, Againſt Jeſus Chriſt. Thirdly, Againſt the the Holy Scriptures, with Contempt of Civil Magiſtracy, and the Ordinances which Jeſus Chriſt Inſtituted, viz. Baptiſm by Water, and the Lord's Supper by Bread and Wine. And, Laſtly, That the Light within, as taught by us, leaves us without any certain Rule, and expoſes us to the Blaſphemies aforeſaid, with many others.

Now, becauſe this Charge refers to Doctrine, rather than Fact, or particular Perſons, we think our ſelves concerned to ſay ſomething in Vindication of our Profeſſion, and to wipe off the Dirt thereby intended to be caſt upon us, in giving our Reader a plain Account of our Principles, free from the Perverſions of our Enemies.

But to manifeſt how uncharitably and unjuſtly the ſaid Clergymen have reflected upon the People called Quakers, with Reſpect to the ſaid Charge, we are contented the Reader goes no farther than their own Printed Relation, dated Nov. 12, 1698, not doubting but by that very Relation, and the Letters therewith Printed, he will meet with intire Satisfaction, with Reſpect to the Reaſonableneſs and Juſtice of the Quakers Proceedings in that Affair, and how ready they were to come to the Teſt, and to bring the pretended Charge upon the Stage, and to purge themſelves from the Guilt of the ſame: Provided they might be accommodated with what the Common Law allows Malefactors, viz. a Copy of their Indictment, but this could not be obtained. And tho' the ſaid Clergy have thought fit to print the Charge in General, without any Proof, we think our ſelves obliged to vindicate our Profeſſion, by freely declaring (as now we do, without any Mental Reſervation) our ſincere Belief of the very Things they moſt unjuſtly charge us with denying.

I. Concerning God.] Becauſe we declare, that God is a God nigh at Hand, and that he is according to his Promiſe, become the Teacher of his People by his Spirit in theſe latter Days; and that True Believers are the Temples for him to walk and dwell in, as the Apoſtle teacheth; and experiencing ſomething of the Accompliſhment of this great and glorious Truth among us, and having therefore preſſed People earneſtly to the Knowledge and Enjoyment thereof, as the Bleſſing and Glory of the latter Days; We have been ignorantly, or Maliciouſly, repreſented and treated as Hereticks and Blaſphemers, as if we owned no God in Heaven above the Stars, and confined the Holy One of Iſrael to our Beings: Whereas we believe him to be the Eternal, Incomprehenſible, Almighty, All-wiſe and Omnipreſent God, Creator and Upholder of all Things, and that he fills Heaven and Earth, and that the Heaven of Heavens cannot contain him; yet he ſaith by the Prophet Iſaiah, To that Man will I have Regard, that is poor, and of a contrite Spirit, and which trembles at my Word. So that for profeſſing that which is the very Marrow of the Chriſtian Religion, viz. Emanuel, God with us, we are repreſented Blaſphemers againſt that God; with whom we leave our innocent and ſuffering Cauſe. Iſaiah 7. 14. 40. 28. 48. 17. 66. 1, 2. 2 Cor. 6. 16. Rev. 21. 3.

II. Concerning Jeſus Chriſt.] Becauſe we believe, that the Word which was made Fleſh, and dwelt amongſt Men, and was and is the only begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth; his beloved Son, in whom he is well pleaſed, and whom we ought to hear in all Things; who taſted Death for every Man, and died for Sin, that we might die to Sin; is the great Light of the World, and full of Grace and Truth, and that he lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, and giveth them Grace for Grace, and Light for Light, and that no Man can know God and Chriſt (whom to know is Life Eternal) and themſelves in Order to true Conviction and Converſion, without Receiving and Obeying this Holy Light, and being taught by the Divine Grace; and that without it, no Remiſſion, no Juſtification, no Salvation (as the Scripture plentifully teſtifies) can be obtained. And becauſe we therefore preſs the Neceſſity of People's receiving the Inward and Spiritual Appearance of this Divine Word, in Order to a Right and beneficial Application of whatſoever he did for Man, with Reſpect to his Life, Miracles, Death, Sufferings, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion and Mediation; our Adverſaries would have us deny any Chriſt without us. Firſt, As to his Divinity, becauſe they make us to confine him too within us. Secondly, As to his Humanity, or Manhood, becauſe as he was the Son of Abraham, David, and Mary, according to the Fleſh, he can't be in us, and therefore we are Hereticks and Blaſphemers: Whereas we believe him, according to Scripture, to be the Son of Abraham, David, and Mary, after the Fleſh, and alſo God over all, bleſſed for ever. So that he that is within us, is alſo without us, even the ſame that laid down his precious Life for us, roſe again from the Dead, and ever liveth to make Interceſſion for us, being the Bleſſed and alone Mediator betwixt God and Man, and him by whom God will finally judge the World, both Quick and Dead: All which we as ſincerely and ſtedfaſtly believe, as any other 1698. ther Society of People, whatever may be ignorantly, or maliciouſly inſinuated to the contrary, either by our declared Enemies, or miſtaken Neighbours. Deut. 15. 18. Mic. 5. 2. John 1. 1, 2, 3. Rev. 22. 16.

III. Concerning the Holy Scriptures. Becauſe we aſſert the Holy Spirit to be the firſt great and general Rule and Guide of True Chriſtians, as that by which God is worſhipped, Sin detected, Conſcience convicted, Duty manifeſted, Scripture unfolded and explained, and conſequently the Rule for underſtanding the Scriptures themſelves (ſince by it they were at firſt given forth) from hence our Adverſaries are pleaſed to make us Blaſphemers of the Holy Scriptures, undervaluing their Authority, preferring our own Books before them, with more to that Purpoſe: Whereas, we, in Truth and Sincerity, believe them to be of Divine Authority, given by the Inſpiration of God, thro' Holy Men; they ſpeaking or writing them as they were moved by the Holy Ghoſt: That they are a Declaration of thoſe Things moſt ſurely believed by the Primitive Chriſtians, and that as they contain the Mind and Will of God, and are his Commands to us; ſo they, in that Reſpect. are his Declaratory Word; and therefore are obligatory on us, and are Profitable for Doctrine, Reproof, Correction and Inſtruction in Righteouſneſs, that the Man of God may be perfect, and throughly furniſhed to every good Work.

Nay, after all, ſo Unjuſt is the Charge, and ſo remote from our Belief concerning the Holy Scriptures, that we borh Love, Honour and prefer them, before all Books in the World; ever chuſing to expreſs our Belief of the Chriſtian Faith and Doctrine in the Terms thereof, and rejecting all Principles or Doctrines whatſoever, that are repugnant thereunto.

Nevertheleſs we are well perſwaded, that notwithſtanding there is ſuch an Excellency in the Holy Scriptures, as we have above declared, yet the unſtable and unlearned in Chriſt's School too often wreſt them to their own Deſtruction. And upon our Reflection on their carnal Conſtructions of them, we are made Undervaluers of Scripture it ſelf. But certain it is, that as the Lord hath been pleaſed to give us the Experience of the fulfilling of them in Meaſure, ſo it is altogether contrary to our Faith and Practice, to put any Manner of Slight or Contempt upon them, much more of being guilty, of what maliciouſly is ſuggeſted againſt us; ſince no Society of profeſt Chriſtians in the World, can have a more Reverend and Honourable Eſteem for them than we have, John 4. 24. and 16. 8. Rom. 1. 19. Luke 1. 1, 2. Tim. 3. 16, 17. 2 Pet. 3. 16.

IV. Concerning Magiſtracy.] Becauſe we have not actively complied with divers Statutes, which have been made to force an Uniformity, to what we had no Faith in, but the Teſtimony of our Conſcience againſt? and becauſe, for Conſcience Sake, we could not give thoſe Marks of Honour and Reſpect, which were and are the uſual Practice of thoſe that ſeek Honour one of another, and not that Honour which comes from God only (but meaſure and weigh Honour and Reſpect in a falſe Ballance, and deceitful Meaſure, on which, neither Magiſtrate, Ruler or People can depend) We ſay, becauſe we could not, for Conſcience Sake, give flattering Titles, &c. We have been rendered as Deſpiſers and Contemners of Magiſtracy: Whereas our Principles, often repeated upon the many Revolutions that have happened, do evidently manifeſt the contrary, as well as our peaceable Behaviour from the Beginning, under all the various Forms of Government, hath been an undeniable Plea in our Favour, when thoſe that alſo have profeſſed the ſame Principles of Non-Reſiſtance, and Paſſive Obedience, have quitted their Principles, and yet quarrel with us upon a Suppoſition that we will, in Time, write after their Copy; which, as nothing is more contrary to our Principles, Faith and Doctrine, ſo nothing can be more contrary to our conſtant Practice.

For we not only really believe Magiſtracy to be an Ordinance of God, but eſteem it an extraordinary Bleſſing, where it is a Praiſe to them that do well, and a Terror to Evil-Doers: Which that it may be ſo in this our native Land, is the fervent Deſire of our Souls, that the Bleſſing and Peace of God may be continued thereupon, Job 32. 21. John 5. 44. Acts 5. 29. 1 Pet. 2. 13. 14.

V. Concerning Baptiſm.] Becauſe we do not find in any Place in the four Evangeliſts, that Jeſus Chriſt inſtituted Baptiſm by Water, to come in the Room of Circumciſion, or to be the Baptiſm proper to his Kingdom, which ſtands in Righteouſneſs, Peace and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt; we are therefore rendred as Contemners of Chriſt's Baptiſm: Whereas the Baptiſm of Jeſus Chriſt, of which he was Lord and Adminiſtrator, according to the Nature of his Office and Kingdom, is even by John the Baptiſt declared to be that of Fire (not Water) and of the Holy Ghoſt, of which Water-Baptiſm was but the Forerunner, and is, by them that now practice it, called but the Outward and viſible Sign of the Inward and Spiritual Grace; and therefore not the Grace it ſelf; which Grace, as the Apoſtle ſaith, is ſufficient for us, and which we believe, profeſs and experience to be come by Jeſus Chriſt, who is the Subſtance of all Signs and Shadows to true Believers; he being no more a Jew or Chriſtian that is one outwardly, by the cutting or waſhing of the Fleſh; But he is a Jew or Chriſtian who is one Inwardly, and Circumciſion and Baptiſm is of the Heart, in the Spirit, and not in the Letter, whoſe Praiſe is therefore not of Men, but of God: And this Baptiſm Chriſt preferred and recommended at his Farewel to his Diſciples: In Reverence and Duty to whom, to ſay nothing of the Abuſe of Water-Baptiſm, we decline the Uſe thereof, Mark 1. 8. Luke 3. 16. John 1. 17. Acts 1. 5. Rom. 14. 17. Rom. 2. 28, 29. 1 Cor. 1. 17. 2 Cor. 12. 9.

VI. Concerning Breaking Bread, &c.] Becauſe we alſo diſuſe the Outward Ceremony of Breaking Bread and Drinking Wine, which is commonly call'd the Lord's Supper, we are therefore rendred Deniers and Contemners of the Lord's Supper; whereas the Inward and Spiritual Grace thereby ſignified. viz. That Bread which came down from Heaven, which Chriſt preferrs to the Bread the Fathers eat in the Wilderneſs (which did not keep them from Death) and that Cup which he promiſed to drink a-new with his Diſciples in his Father's Kingdom, we not only believe, but reverently partake of, to our unſpeakable Comfort, which is rightly and truly the Communion of the Body and Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, who ſaid, Except you eat the Fleſh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, you have no Life in you, John 6. 53. 63. For 'tis the Spirit that quickens, the Fleſh profits nothing: It was alſo his Promiſe to all thoſe that would open at his Knocks, viz. That he would come in, and ſup with them; which Inward and Spiritual Coming, we have both known and teſtified to; feeling the bleſſed Effects thereof in our Souls, and knowing the Outward Breaking of Bread and Drinking of Wine, in the Way commonly practiſed, is no more than it is declared to be, viz. An Outward and Viſible Sign: Why then, ſhould any contend about it, and render us Unchriſtian, for diſuſing what themſelves allow to be but an Outward and Viſible Sign? And that none can reaſonably believe to be an Eſſential Part of Religion, as is the Bread from Heaven; of which the Outward is, at beſt, but a Signification: But the Wine that Chriſt promiſed to drink with his Diſciples A-new, it ſuch an Eſſential, that without it none have, nor can have Eternal Life, Mat. 26. 29. Mark 14. 25. John. 6. 41 50, 51, 58, 63. Rev. 3. 20.

VII. Concerning the Light of Chriſt.] Becauſe we aſſert the Sufficiency of the Light Within, it being the Light of Chriſt, viz. That if Men live up to the Teaching thereof, in all Manner of Faithfulneſs and Obedience, they ſhall not abide in Darkneſs, but have the Light of Life and Salvation, and the Blood of Chriſt ſhall cleanſe them from all Sin: Our Adverſaries from thence conceive, that we undervalue the Rule of Holy Scriptures, and All Outward Means, as having no Need thereof, ſince we have ſuch a Means and Rule within us, and, that this leaves us without any certain Rule, and expoſeth us to many Blaſphemies, &c. Whereas the Light Within (or Chriſt by His Light inwardly Teaching) was never taught by us in Oppoſition to, or Contempt of any Outward Means, that God, in His Wiſdom and Providence, affords us for our Edification and Comfort, no more than did that Bleſſed Apoſtle, who ſaid, You need not that any Man teach you, but as the ſame Anointing teacheth you all Things, and is Truth, and is no Lye, John 12. 46. 1 John 1. 6, 7. 1 John 1. 2, 27.

VIII. Concerning the Father, the Word, and the Spirit.] Becauſe we have been very cautious in expreſſing our Faith concerning that Great Myſtery, eſpecially in ſuch School Terms, and Philoſophical Diſtinctions as are Unſcriptural, if not Unſound, (the Tendency whereof hath been to raiſe Frivolous Controverſies and Animoſities amongſt Men) we have, by thoſe that deſire to leſſen our Chriſtian Reputation, been repreſented as Deniers of the Trinity at large: Whereas we ever believed, and as conſtantly maintained the Truth of that Bleſſed (Holy Scripture) Three, that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit, and that theſe Three are One; the which, we both ſincerely and reverently believe, according to 1 John 5. 7. And this is ſufficient for us to believe and know, and hath a Tendency to Edification and Holineſs, when the contrary centers only in Imaginations and Strife, and Perſecution. where it runs high, and to Parties, as may be Read in Bloody Characters in the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtories.

IX. Concerning Works.] Becauſe we make Evangelical Obedience a Condition

1698. to Salvation; and Works by the Spirit wrought in us, to be an Evidence of Faith, and Holineſs of Life, to be both Neceſſary and Rewardable, it hath been inſinuated againſt us, as if we hoped to be Saved by our own Works, and ſo make them the Meritorious Cauſe of our Salvation, and conſequently Popiſh.

Whereas we know, that it is not by Works of Righteouſneſs that we can do, but by His own Free Grace is He pleaſed to accept of us through Faith in, and Obedience to, His Bleſſed Son the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, Heb. 5. 9. and 12. 14.

X. Of Chriſt's being our Example.] Becauſe in ſome Caſes we have ſaid, the Lord Jeſus was our Great Example, and that his Obedience to his Father doth not excuſe ours; but as by keeping his Commandments, he abode in his Father's Love, ſo muſt we follow his Example of Obedience, ſo abide in his Love: Some have been ſo ignorant (or that which is worſe) as to venture to ſay for us, or in our Name, that webelieve our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was, in all Things, but an Example.

Whereas we confeſs him to be ſo much more than an Example, that we believe him to be our moſt acceptable Sacrifice to God his Father, who for his Sake, will look upon Fallen Man that hath juſtly merited the Wrath of God, upon his Return by Repentance, Faith and Obedience, as if he had never ſinned at all, 1 John 2. 12. Rom. 3. 26. and 10. 9, 10. Heb. 5. 9.

XI. Concerning Freedom from Sin.] Becauſe we have urged the Neceſſity of a perfect Freedom from Sin, and a thorough Satiſfaction in Body, Soul and Spirit, whilſt on this Side the Grave, by the Operation of the Holy and Perfect Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, according to the Teſtimony of Holy Scripture, we are made ſo Preſumptuous, as to aſſert the Fulneſs of all Perfection and Happineſs to be attainable in this Life: Whereas we are not only ſenſible of thoſe Humane Infirmities that attend us, whilſt clothed with Fleſh and Blood; but know that here we can only know in Part, and ſee in Part: The Perfection of Wiſdom, Glory and Happineſs, being reſerved for another, and better World. John 8. 24, 25. Heb. 13. 20, 21. Heb. 6.

XII. Concerning Worſhip to God.] Becauſe we ſay with the Apoſtle, that Men ought to Pray, Preach, Sing, &c. with the Spirit, and that without the Preparation and Aſſiſtance of it, no Man can rightly worſhip God, (all Worſhip without it being Formal, and Carnal) From hence Ignorance or Envy ſuggeſts againſt us, that if God will not compel us by his Spirit, he muſt go without his Worſhip: Whereas nothing can be more abſurd, ſince without it no Man can truly call Jeſus Lord: Beſides, it is our Duty to wait upon him, who hath promiſed, not to compel, but fill them with Renewings of Strength, that ſo wait upon him, by which they are made capable to Worſhip him acceptably, be it in Praying, Preaching, or Praiſing of God: And how warrantable our Practice herein is from Holy Scripture, ſee Pſal. 25. 5. 37. 7. 27. 14. 130. 5, 6. Hoſea 12. 6.

XIII. Of God and Chriſt's being in Man.] Becauſe we ſay, as do the Holy Scriptures, that God is Light, and that Chriſt is Light, and that God is in Chriſt, and that Chriſt by his Light, lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, and dwelleth in them, and with them that obey him, in his Inward and Spiritual Manifeſtations: People have been told by our Adverſaries, That we believe every Man has Whole God, and Whole Chriſt in him, and conſequently ſo many Gods, and Chriſts, as Men: Whereas we aſſert nothing herein, but in the Language of the Holy Ghoſt in the Scriptures of Truth; and mean no more by it, than that as God is in Chriſt, ſo Chriſt by his Spirit and Light, dwelleth in the Hearts of his People, to comfort and conſolate them, as he doth in Wicked Men, to Reprove and Condemn them, as well as to call, Enlighten and Inſtruct them; that out of that State of Condemnation they may come, and by believing in him, may experience their Hearts cured of the Maladies Sin hath brought upon them, in order to compleat Salvation from Sin here, and from Wrath to come hereafter. 2 Cor. 5. 9. 1 John 1. 5.

XIV. Of Chriſt's Coming both in Fleſh and Spirit.] Becauſe the Tendency (generally ſpeaking) of our Miniſtry, is to preſs People to the Inward and Spiritual Appearance of Chriſt, by his Spirit and Grace in their Hearts, to give them a True Sight and Senſe of, and Sorrow for Sin, to Amendment of Life, and Practice of Holineſs: And becauſe we have often oppoſed that Doctrine of being actually juſtified by the Merits of Chriſt, whilſt actual Sinners againſt God, by living in the Pollutions of this wicked World: We are, by our Adverſaries render'd ſuch, as either deny, or undervalue the Coming of Chriſt without us, and the Force and Efficacy of his Death and Sufferings, as a Propitiation for the Sins of the whole World.

Whereas we do, and hope we ever ſhall (as we always did) confeſs to the Glory of God the Father, and the Honour of his Dear and Beloved Son, That He, to wit Jeſus Chriſt, took our Nature upon him, was like us in all Things, Sin excepted: That he was Born of the Virgin Mary, went about amongſt Men doing Good, and working many Miracles: That he was betrayed by Judas into the Hands of the Chief Prieſts, &c. That he ſuffered Death under Pontius Pilate, the Roman Governour, being Crucified between Two Thieves, and was Buried in the Sepulchre of Joſeph of Arimathea: Roſe again the Third Day from the Dead, and Aſcended into Heaven, and Sits at God's Right Hand, in the Power and Majeſty of his Father; and that by him, God the Father, will one Day judge the whole World, both of Quick and Dead, according to their Works.

XV. Concerning the Reſurrection.] Becauſe from the Authority of Holy Scripture, as well as right Reaſon, we deny the Reſurrection of the ſame groſs and corruptible Body, and are neither over Inquiſitive, nor Critical about what Bodies we ſhall have at the Reſurrection, leaving it to the Lord, to give us ſuch Bodies as he pleaſes (and with that we are well pleaſed and ſatisfied, and wiſh all others were ſo too.) From hence we are made not only Denyers of the Reſurrection of any Body at all, however Spiritual, or Glorified, but Eternal Rewards too.

Whereas, if it were true, as it is notoriouſly falſe, we were, indeed, of all Men, moſt Miſerable: But, bleſſed be God, it is ſo far from being true, that we moſt ſtedfaſtly believe, that as our Lord Jeſus Chriſt was raiſed from the Dead, by the Power of the Father, and was the firſt Fruits of the Reſurrection, ſo every Man, in his own Order, ſhall ariſe; They that have done well, to the Reſurrection of Eternal Life; but they that have done Evil, to Everlaſting Condemnation.

And becauſe we are a People, whoſe Education hath not afforded us an Accuracy of Language, ſome Paſſages may perhaps have been miſ-expreſſed, or improperly worded: As for Inſtance, One of us hath denied in his Book, the Soul to be Finite, by which he plainly meant Mortal, or Final; to die, or have an End, which Finis ſignifies, from whence Finite comes, our uncharitable Oppoſers have concluded, we hold the Soul to be Infinite, and conſequently God: Whereas the Words before and after, as well as the Nature of the Things, ſhews plainly, he only meant that it is Eternal, and ſo not Finite; that is, not Terminable, or that which ſhall come to an End.

And alſo, becauſe we have not declared our ſelves about Matters of Faith, in the many and Critical Words that Man's Wiſdom teacheth, but in the Words which the Holy Ghoſt Teacheth, we have been eſteemed either Ignorant or Equivocal and Unſound: Whereas it is really Matter of Conſcience to us, to deliver our Belief in ſuch Words as the Holy Spirit, in Scripture, teacheth; and if we add more for Illuſtration, it is from an Experience of the Work of the ſame Spirit in our ſelves, which ſeems to us the trueſt Way of Expounding Scripture, in what concerns Saving Knowledge.

XVI. Concerning Separation.] Becauſe we are ſeparated from the Publick Communion and Worſhip, it is too generally concluded, that we deny the Doctrines received by the Church, and conſequently introduce a New Religion: Whereas we differ leaſt, where we are thought to differ moſt: For, ſetting aſide ſome School Terms, we hold the Subſtance of thoſe Doctrines believed by the Church of England, as to God, Chriſt, Spirit, Scripture, Repentance, Sanctification, Remiſſion of Sin, Holy Living, and the Reſurrection of the Juſt and Unjuſt to Eternal Rewards and Puniſhments. But that wherein we differ moſt, is about Worſhip and Converſation, and the Inward Qualification of the Soul by the Work of God's Spirit thereon, in Purſuance of theſe good and generally received Doctrines. For 'tis the Spirit of God only Convinces and Converts the Soul, and makes thoſe that were Dead in Treſpaſſes and Sins, and in the Luſts, Pleaſures, and Faſhions of this World, alive to God; that is, Senſible of his Mind and Will, and of their Duty to do them; and brings to know God, and his Attributes, by the Power of them upon their own Souls; and leads to Worſhip God rightly, which is in his Spirit, and in Truth, with Hearts Sanctified by the Truth, which is a living and acceptable Worſhip, and ſtands in Power, not Formality, nor in the Traditions, and Preſcriptions of Men, in Synods and Convocations, but in the Holy Spirit. Firſt, in ſhewing us our real Wants, and then in helping our Infirmities with Sighs and Groans, and ſometimes Words, to pray for a ſuitable Supply, for which we in our Meetings wait upon God, to quicken and prepare us, that we may worſhip him Acceptably and Profitably, for they go together. Now, becauſe we are ſatisfy'd 1698. that all Worſhip to God, and Exhortations to Men, as Praying, Praiſing, and Preaching, and every other Religious Duty, ought to be Spiritually Performed; and finding ſo little of it among Profeſſors of Chriſtianity; the Spirit of God having not that Rule and Guidance of them, in their Lives and Worſhip, as It ought to have; and ſeeing them too generally ſatisfied with a Miniſtry and Worſhip of Man's making, being not qualified, nor led by God's Spirit thereunto; we cannot find that Comfort and Edification our Souls crave and want under ſo cold a Miniſtry and Worſhip. And for this Cauſe, and no Preſumptuous Contempt, or ſelfiſh Separation, or worldly Intereſts, are we, and ſtand we at this Day, a ſeparate People from the Publick Communion; and in this we can comfortably Appeal and Recommend our ſelves to God, the great and laſt Judge of the Acts and Deeds of the Sons of Men.

Laſtly, Becauſe at the Time of our Friends firſt appearing in this Age, there were a Sect of People, newly ſprang up, and truly called Ranters, that were the Reverſe to the Quakers, (for they feared and quaked at nothing, but made a Mock at Fearing of God, and at Sin, and at Hell) who pretended that Love made Fear needleſs, and that nothing was Sin, but to them that thought it ſo; and that none ſhould be Damned at laſt, whoſe extravagant Practices exactly correſponded with their Evil Principles: From hence, ſome, ignorantly, and too many maliciouſly involved us and ours with them; and many of their Exorbitances were thereby placed to our Account, tho' without the leaſt Reaſon, Truth, or Juſtice.

And becauſe ſome that were convinced of God's Truth, afterwards diſhonoured their Profeſſion, thro' their Unfaithfulneſs to it; and that ſome, out of Weakneſs, perhaps, may have improperly worded what they intended to ſay, the whole Body of our Friends have been made Criminal, and the Religion or Principles we profeſs, have been condemned, and repreſented to the World as Hereſy and Blaſphemy; an Uſage ſo Unjuſt, that doubtleſs, according to Lex Talionis, our Adverſaries would think it intolerable to be ſo treated by us.

But as we deſire not to render Evil for Evil, our Great Biſhop having taught us another Leſſon, and better Practices, ſo we deſire God Almighty to forgive our Cauſleſs Enemies, for his Son's Sake, as we moſt freely and heartily forgive them: Believing ſome may be zealouſly affected for their Educational Form of Religion, and as zealous againſt us for our Separation, and we are the more inclined to judge ſo, becauſe many of us were once in the ſame Way, and had ſuch Thoughts of thoſe that were gone before us. But it hath pleaſed the Father of Mercies, to do by many of us, as he did by Saul, that Zealous, though Miſtaken Perſecutor of the ſincere Followers of Jeſus Chriſt, Acts 9. 3, 4, 5, 6. For as we heard an unuſual Inward, but Powerful Voice, ſo we alſo had a more inward, clear, and diſtinguiſhing Sight, by the Illumination of that Light, which was more than Natural, and ſhined into our dark and ſinful Hearts, 2 Cor. 4. 6, 7. Letting us ſee them, as they really were in God's Sight, which naturally affected us with deep Sorrow, and true Humiliation; making us willing to be any Thing he would have us be, provided we might have ſome Senſe of his Love and Favour towards us. And bleſſed be his Holy and Excellent Name, we can, without Vanity, ſay, (generally ſpeaking) We were not diſobedient to that Heavenly Viſion (Acts 26. 19.) we had of Him, our Selves, the World, and that Profeſſion of Religion, where we had our Education. And ſince by that Sight God gave us, we ſaw he was Pure and Holy, and that without Holineſs none ever could, or can ſee him, to their Joy, and that we were unfit to approach his Holy Altar; yea, the whole World lay in Wickedneſs; and that Profeſſion of Religion, where we had our Education, was ſo far from having the Power of Godlineſs, that for the moſt Part it wanted the Right Form; from ſuch, therefore, we had a Divine Authority to turn away, 2 Tim. 3. 5. Which we did, not in a vaunting Mind, but with great Sorrow; wanting to know where the Great Shepherd of the Sheep fed his Flock, Can. 1. 7. For we deſired to be not of thoſe that turned aſide from the Foot-ſteps of the Flocks of the Companions. Nor was it Affectation to Popularity, Singularity, or Novelty, that induced us to a Separation; but a fervent Deſire to know the Lord, and the Work of his Tranſlating Power upon our Souls, being in Earneſt for Heaven, tho' for it we loſt all our Earthly Enjoyments, Heb. 11. 14, 15, 16.

In this Solitary and Seeking State, it pleaſed the Lord to meet with us, and gather us into Families or Religious Societies, according to Pſalm 58. 6. And though it hath been a dear Separation to us, conſidering it coſt us the Loſs, at leaſt, of all Things, and the great Sufferings and Afflictions that have attended us in this deſpiſed Way, which Men have called Hereſy, yet the Lord hath bleſſed us in it, with the Enjoyment of his Bleſſed Preſence, to our unſpeakable Joy and Comfort.

To conclude, As it hath pleaſed the Lord to bleſs us, in the Way we have hitherto been helpt to walk in, with that great Bleſſing which uſhered in the Birth of our Bleſſed Lord into the World, viz. Glory to God, Peace on Earth, and Goodwill to Men: So we earneſtly deſire the ſame upon all our Neighbours: For tho' we may not be all of one Mind in ſome Doctrinal Parts of Religion, we muſt of Neceſſity be all of one Sentiment in the Great and General Duty of Holineſs, or elſe we can never ſee God. And if that is our Principal Aim and Endeavour, we ſhall leſs fall out by the Way, about Words, Forms, and the Outſide of Things: But Univerſal Charity, which is the moſt excellent Way, and without which the beſt of Creeds is but as a ſounding Braſs, &c.) will ſilence Controverſy, and blot out all Ignominious Characters; remembring that the Great Judge, at the Laſt Day, will determine us, not according to our Names, but Natures; not our Profeſſion, but our Lives; not our bare Belief, (though of unqueſtionable Truths) but Works; for God will bring every Work to Judgment, with every ſecret Thing, whether it be Good or Evil, Eccleſ. 12. 14.

Some Conſiderations upon the BILL for the more Effectual Suppreſſing Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs: Humbly Offered.

I. IF an Act be made, containing a Creed, and that Creed be not in the Terms of Holy Scripture; Whether this may not cauſe Ambiguous Diſputes, and increaſe Diviſions and Diſunion in Affection, contrary to the Intent of the Act for exempting their Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws made Anno. 1. William and Mary.

II. If an Act be made to prevent Blaſphemy and Impious Opinions, &c. — Whether ſuch Creed-Act, ought not to be in Expreſs Terms of Holy Scripture, as being of Divine and beſt Authority?

III. Whereas the Bill enacts, That if any Perſon or Perſons, &c.. ſhall deny any of the Perſons in the Holy Trinity to be God; and makes it puniſhable by the ſame Bill: Were it not more ſafe and plain to put it in Scripture Terms, as inſtead of [Deny any one of the Perſons in the Holy Trinity to be God] To inſert, If any one ſhall deny any of the Three that bear Record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, or the Holy Ghoſt to be God. 1 John Chap. 5. Ver. 7.—— For many may believe and own the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt to be God, according to Holy Scripture, and yet ſcruple the Term Perſons, as Unſcriptural; and thereby may be, by invidious Informers, brought under Severe Suffering for a Circumſtance of Words and Terms, when they ſincerely own the Subſtance in the Terms of Holy Scripture.

IV. Seeing the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament are confeſſed to be of Divine Authority, as being given by Inſpiration from God: How can it be conſiſtent, with ſuch Confeſſion, to impoſe a Creed in Unſcriptural Terms by a Penal Act?

V. Inaſmuch as the Act made 22. Car. II. againſt Seditious Conventicles, hath been conſtrued to Affect Religious Meetings, held for the Worſhip of God in a Peaceable Manner.

May not this Act alſo be liable to Affect thoſe, whoſe Principles in this Matter are expreſly agreeable to Holy Scripture; though they don't agree with the Terms of the Act.

VI. The Bill ſeems to be made only againſt any Perſon or Perſons educated in, or at any Time profeſſing the Chriſtian Religion, within this Realm: That if any ſuch ſhall, by Writing, Printing, or adviſed Speaking, deny the Points ſpecified in the ſaid Bill, ſuch ſhall incur the Penalties therein mentioned.

Firſt, Then, conſequently, any Perſon not Educated in, or not at any Time profeſſing the Chriſtian Religion, within this Realm, may, by Writing, Printing, Teaching, or adviſed Speaking, deny any One of the Divine Perſons in the Holy Trinity, to be God, or deny the Chriſtian Religion to be True: Or the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament to be of Divine Authority.

Secondly, Such Perſons as are not Educated in, and profeſſing the Chriſtian Religion within this Realm, may, by this Act, take Liberty to make as many Proſelytes as they can, againſt the Chriſtian Religion and Profeſſion, and be exempt from the Penalties thereof.

Thirdly, Any Perſon or Perſons from beyond Sea, whether they have been Educated in the Chriſtian Religion or not, may come into this Realm, and by Writing, Printing, Teaching, or adviſedly Speaking, may deny any One of the Perſons in the Holy Trinity to be God: Or deny the Chriſtian Religion to be True: Or may deny the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament to be of Divine Authority, and yet incur no Penalty by this Act:

A DEFENCE of a Paper, Entituled GOSPEL-TRUTHS, againſt the Exceptions of the Biſhop of Cork's Teſtimony. By W. Penn.

The PREFACE.

Reader,

IT was the Wiſe Counſel of an Ancient and Grave Prelate, of the Kingdom of Ireland, at a late Viſit I made him there, to diſcourage Controverſie, and endeavour to abate Strife among Chriſtians: For, ſaid he, Heaven is a Quiet Place; there are no Quarrels there, and Religion is an Holy and Peaceable thing, and Excites to Piety and Charity, and not to Genealogies, Strife and Debates. But the Biſhop of Cork ſeems to be of another Mind, that could not paſs by ſo inoffenſive a Paper, as that ſtiled Goſpel-Truths, (given him by me in a Private Way, at a Friendly Viſit upon his own Deſire) without his Publick Animadverſions; and thoſe expreſt not with ſo much Juſtice and Charity, as might have been expected from him to his Diſſenting Neighbours.

I am, I confeſs, very ſorry my Chriſtian Viſits to the Biſhop have met with no better Returns than Controverſie: But becauſe that's his, and not my Fault, it ſhall be my Satisfaction.

I did indeed, perceiving him converſant in our Writings, and his Character to be Moderation, caſually preſent him with one of thoſe Papers; but as the Nature of it is far from Provocation, ſo my Deſign in it was purely to improve his Temper, and not to excite his Contradiction. Nor was it writ for an Exact and Compleat Account of our Belief, but Occaſionally, to prevent the Prejudices that the Attempts of a Courſe and Scurrilous Pen at Dublin, juſt before, might provoke in ſome againſt us, as to the Points touched upon in the Goſpel-Truths. And though we have been ſo unhappy as to be therein miſtaken by the Biſhop, yet it's ſome Comfort to us, that our Chriſtian Declaration hath had quite another Reception with the Generality of thoſe to whoſe Hands it has come: And I heartily wiſh, That hath not been the moſt prevailing Motive to his Undertaking. However, ſince he has been pleaſed to fault it both with Shortneſs and Error, the firſt of which we thought Healing, at leaſt Inoffenſive, I eſteem my ſelf anſwerable for it, and ſhall, with God's Aſſiſtance, Defend it againſt the Force of His Exceptions, and, I hope, with Clearneſs and Temper: For though I may be plain, as he muſt expect, I deſire to be neither Rude nor Bitter.

I aſk, Reader, but the Common Juſtice due to all Authors, eſpecially in Controverted Points of Religion, to wit, Attention and Impartiality; and then judge whether our Pacifick Paper deſerved ſo ſharp a Cenſure, and the Manner of it's being given him, ſo Publick a Return: Though I hope the Conſequence will be Good. To Almighty God I leave the Succeſs, and am in all Chriſtian Obligation,

Thy Real Friend,

Briſtol, the 23d of the 7th Month, 1698.

The

The TESTIMONY of the Biſhop of Cork, as to a PAPER, Entituled, Goſpel-Truths Held, &c. by the People called QUAKERS; And delivered to Him by an Eminent MEMBER of them.

[The PAPER was as follows.]

Sober Reader,

I*F thou had'ſt rather we ſhould be in the Right than in the Wrong; and if thou thinkeſt it but a Reaſonable Thing that we ſhould be Heard before we are Condemned, and that our Belief ought to be taken from our* Own Mouths, and not at theirs that have prejudged our Cauſe; then we intreat thee, to Read and Weigh the following Brief Account, of thoſe Things that are chiefly Received and Profeſſed among us the People called Quakers, according to the Teſtimony of the Scriptures of Truth, and the Illumination of the Holy Ghoſt, which are the Double and Agreeing Record of True Religion. Publiſhed to inform the Moderate Enquirer, and Reclaim the Prejudiced to a better Temper; which GOD grant, to His Glory, and their Peace.

I. It is our Belief, That GOD is, and that He is a Rewarder of all them that fear Him, with Eternal Rewards of Happineſs; and that thoſe that fear Him not, ſhall be turned into Hell, Heb. 11. 16. Rev. 22. 12. Rom. 2. 5, 6, 7, 8. Pſ. 9. 17.

II. That there are Three that Bear Record in Heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Spirit; and theſe Three are really One, 1 John 5. 7.

III. That the Word was made Fleſh, and dwelt among Men, and was, and is, the Only Begotten of the Father, full of Grace and Truth, His Beloved Son, in whom he is well-pleaſed, and whom we are to hear in all Things; who taſted Death for every Man, and died for Sin, that we might die to Sin, and by his Power and Spirit be raiſed up to Newneſs of Life here, and to Glory hereafter, John 1. 14. Mat. 3. 17. Heb. 2. 9.

IV. That as we are only Juſtified from the Guilt of Sin, by Chriſt the Propitiation, and not by Works of Righteouſneſs that we have done; ſo there is an abſolute Neceſſity that we receive and obey, to unfeigned Repentance, and Amendment of Life, the Holy Light and Spirit of Jeſus Chriſt, in order to obtain that Remiſſion and Juſtification from Sin: Since no Man can be Juſtified by Chriſt, who walks not after the Spirit, but after the Fleſh; for whom he Sanctifies, them he alſo Juſtifies: And if we walk in the Light, as he is Light, his Precious Blood cleanſeth us from all Sin; as well from the Pollution as Guilt of Sin, Rom. 3. 22. to 26. Chap. 8. 1, 2, 3, 4. 1 John 5. 7.

V. That Chriſt is the Great Light of the World, that lighteth every Man that cometh into the World, and is full of Grace and Truth, and giveth to all, Light for Light, and Grace for Grace; and by his Light and Grace he inwardly appears to Man, and teaches ſuch as will be taught by him, That denying Ungodlineſs and Worldly Luſts, they ſhould Live Soberly, Righteouſly, and Godly in this preſent World, John 8. 12. Chap. 1. 9, 14. Tit. 2. 11, 12.

VI. That this Principle of Light and Grace, which is God's Gift, through Chriſt to Man, is that which ſhews us our Sins, reproves us for them, and would lead all out of them that obey it, to ſerve GOD, in Fear and Love, all their Days. And they that turn not at the Reproofs thereof, and will not Repent, and Live, and Walk according to it, ſhall die in their Sins; and where Chriſt is gone, they ſhall never come, who is undefiled, and ſeparated from Sinners, Eph. 5. 13. John 16. 7. Prov. 1. 20, to 24. John 8. 24.

VII. This is that Principle by which GOD prepares the Heart to Worſhip him aright; and all the Duties of Religion, as Praying, Praiſing, and Preaching, ought to be performed through the Sanctifying Power and Aſſiſtance of it; other Worſhip being but Formal and Will-Worſhip, with which we cannot, in Conſcience, Join, nor can we Maintain or Uphold it, Rom. 8. 26. 1 Pet. 4. 10, 11.

VIII. Worſhip in this Goſpel-Day is Inward and Spiritual: For, God is a Spirit, as Chriſt teacheth, and he will Now be Worſhipped in Spirit and in Truth, being moſt ſuitable to his Divine Nature. Wherefore we wait in our Aſſemblies to feel GOD's Spirit to Open and Move upon our Hearts, before we dare offer Sacrifice to the LORD, or Preach to others, the Way of his Kingdom. That we may Preach in

1698. in Power as well as Words, and as God Promiſed, and Chriſt Ordained, Without Money, and Without Price, John 4. 23, 24. 1 Theſ. 1. 5. Iſa. 55. 1. Rev. 22. 17. Mat. 10. 8.

IX. This alſo leads us to deny all the Vain Cuſtoms and Faſhions of the World, to avoid Exceſs in all Things, that our Moderation may be ſeen of all Men, becauſe the Lord is at Hand to See and Judge us, according to our Deeds, Tit. 2. 12. Rom. 12. 2. Phil. 4. 5. Eccl. 12. 14. Mat. 16. 27. Rom. 2. 6. Rev. 20. 12.

X. We believe the Neceſſity of the One Baptiſm of Chriſt, as well as of His One Supper, which he promiſeth to Eat with thoſe that open the Door of their Hearts to him, being the Baptiſm and Supper ſignified by the Outward Signs; which, tho' we diſuſe, we Judge not thoſe that Conſcientiouſly practiſe them, Mat. 3. 11. Eph. 4. 1. 1 Pet. 3. 21, 22. John 6. Rev. 3. 20.

XI. We Honour Government; for we believe it is an Ordinance of God; and that we ought in all Things to ſubmit, by Doing or Suffering; but eſteem it a Great Bleſſing, where the Adminiſtration is a Terror to Evil Doers, and a Praiſe to them that do well. Rom. 13. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5.

This hath all along been the General Stream and Tendency both of our Miniſtry and Writings, as our Books will make appear, notwithſtanding what Ill-minded and Prejudic'd Perſons may have ſtrained to miſ-repreſent us, and our Chriſtian Profeſſion.

Friends,

I AM ſuch a Reader as in your Paper you deſire. I have Read, and Soberly Weighed the Account you give of thoſe Things, which you ſay, Are Chiefly Received and Profeſſed amongſt you. And I will exerciſe ſo much Moderation and Charity, as to lay a great Weight on that Word [Chiefly] hoping theſe are not the Only Things, or All that you Believe. I ſhould have been heartily glad to have found that you had been in the Truth, as I am well aſſured I my ſelf am; But, as I Profeſſed, when the Paper was given me, That if I took it, you muſt expect I ſhould Bear my Teſtimony Touching It, Or, Againſt It: So I muſt now tell you, I think my ſelf bound in Conſcience to perform what I then Profeſſed; and that upon more Reaſons than I will now trouble the World with. You muſt not be offended, if I ſay, You have ſuch a Way of Writing and Speaking, that it is very hard in many Matters of Religion, to know what you mean. But, as far as I underſtand you, I will candidly acknowledge what Truths you have ſufficiently or tolerably expreſt: I will ſhew you with Meekneſs, How far your Faith, if this be your Faith, comes ſhort of being Sufficient, or Chriſtian; and I will ſincerely tell you, what I apprehend to be the Cauſe of your Deluſion, and how Dangerous a Condition I really fear, nay, believe, you to be in.

And Firſt. The only Articles in which you have expreſs'd a Sufficient Chriſtian Belief, are your Sixth, which is, Touching Juſtification, and your laſt touching Government, and your Submiſſion thereto. I wiſh you may always ſtick to this Belief and Practice; and I heartily rejoyce to find you acknowledging, The Neceſſity of Chriſt, as a Propitiation, in order to Remiſſion of Sins, and Juſtifying you, as Sinners, from Guilt. 'Tis the firſt Time I have heard of it amongſt you.

As to all the reſt of your Articles, I mean thoſe which I underſtand, I muſt tell you, the Declaration of your Faith comes ſo ſhort of what is required from People to denominate them Chriſtians, that except, under each Article, you believe more than you have declar'd, you cannot be accounted Chriſtians. For firſt, in thoſe Articles of Faith, which you have thought fit to mention, you have ſet down only ſome Little Ends, I had almoſt called them Snaps of the Article. And, Secondly, Many more whole Articles, of the True Chriſtian Faith, and which are of no leſs Import, you have entirely omitted, waved, or ſuppreſſed.

You acknowledge in your Firſt Article, There is a God, and you own His Providence as to the other Life. But that He made Heaven and Earth, that He is the Almighty, and at preſent, by His Sovereign Power, moſt Wiſely, and Holily, Governs, Orders, and Suſtains All (by His Mercies, as well as Judgments, even in this World, not leaving himſelf without Witneſs) you ſay not a Word. Creation in the Beginning, and Providence as to this World at preſent, are not here acknowledged by you. We hope you believe both.

Your Second Article is wholly True; for it is expreſs Scripture, 1 John 5. 7. But it is only what the Apoſtle there had Occaſion to ſay, and what was to his Purpoſe, touching the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; far from being the Sum of what the Holy Scripture teaches of them; and therefore is not a Sufficient Confeſſion of Faith on that Head.

In your Third Article, You acknowledge indeed, The Son of God to have been made Fleſh, but neither Conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, nor Born of the Virgin Mary; ſo that it does not appear, by this your Confeſſion, but that He was at firſt an Ordinary, Corrupt, Sinful Perſon; Nay, you own Him not ſo much as Jeſus, or the Chriſt; (the Great Saviour, who delivereth from the Wrath which is to come; or the Great Prophet, Prieſt, Lord and King, of His Church:) You acknowledge him indeed, To have Dyed for Sin, but (not to mention the Articles inferrible from, and relating to, the Circumſtances of his Death.) You have not one Word of His Reſurrection from the Dead, or of His Aſcenſion into Heaven; which it may be proved, ſome of you have expreſly denied, ſaying, He is not Aſcended into Heaven; He is in us. Nor again, Of His Sitting now at the Right Hand of the Majeſty on High. And ſo you ſeem not to own any Thing of His Mediation, Interceſſion, or Appearing now in Heaven for us. Nor farther have you ſaid a Word, Of His Coming again to Judgment, at the End of the World. Thus indeed, You have here neither owned the Creation, or Diſſolution of the World; ſo that it does not appear, by this Account of your Faith, whether you do not Judge it Eternal, and ſo otherwiſe Infinite. Yet again, Not a Word of One Church, which it may be feared you ſtrike out of your Belief, becauſe you are reſolved never more to return into the Unity of the Church, but to make and maintain a Schiſm, or Party for ever. Nor farther, Have you a Word of the Reſurrection of the Dead, which divers of you have been known to deny, and others of you only ſay, It may be ſo. And Laſtly, Tho' you acknowledge Everlaſting Rewards for them that Fear God, yet, Nothing of the Everlaſting Puniſhment of Wicked Men. You mention Hell indeed (in a very Unnatural Place, viz. in your Firſt Article of the Being of God) but whether you mean thereby the Grave, as moſt commonly in Scripture is meant; or, A Place of Temporal Puniſhment after this Life, as ſome have done; Or, A State of Total Deſtruction and Annihilation, as many now a-days do, no One knows.

Upon the Whole: As to the Sum of the Chriſtian Faith, which you have been pleaſed to ſet down, there is not One Article of our Common Twelve, that you have owned intirely; and Eight at leaſt, if not more of them, that you have here totally ſuppreſſed, or waved. And how Influential to an Holy Life, thoſe which you have waved are, and therefore how Neceſſary to Salvation, I muſt require and conjure you, on your own Eternal Account, to conſider. I will only mind you of Two Paſſages out of the Scriptures of Truth, 1 Cor. 15. 16, 17. If the Dead Riſe not, (that is, if there be no Reſurrection of the Fleſh) then is not Chriſt Raiſed. And if Chriſt is not Raiſed, your Faith is Vain, you are yet in your Sins. Hence it appears All other Points of Faith are in Vain, if this be not True. The other is, Rom. 10. 9. If thou ſhalt confeſs with thy Mouth the Lord Jeſus, and ſhalt believe in thy Heart that God hath raiſed him from the Dead, thou ſhalt be Saved. This Article alone is of ſuch Force and Influence on Men's Hearts, that if believed as it ſhould be, ſuch Belief will Save Men. But both Chriſt's Reſurrection, and our own, are by you, in this Paper, left out of your Faith. I judge you not, but judge your ſelves, leſt you be Condemned of the Lord.

Your Fifth, Sixth, and Eighth Articles, treat of what you call, The Light of Chriſt Within Man: This you have never been able yet, that I could find, to make out what you mean by. For you will not allow it to be either the Natural, Rational Faculty, or Common Innate Notions, or Natural Conſcience, or Conſcience Illuminated, by the Preaching of the Goſpel, and the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt thereby: 'Till you can make us underſtand your Meaning, or indeed till you underſtand it your ſelves, (that is, till you are leſs Confuſed in this, the very Fundamental Principle, or Rule, of what you profeſs) you muſt not think of Declaring, (or Publiſhing) an Account of your Faith: See you underſtand it firſt. There are ſome Men who have a Faculty to ſpeak Things ſeemingly profound, but in the End neither themſelves, nor others, can make any Diſtinct Senſe of what they have ſaid: This we uſually call Banter. And I muſt acknowledge, as far as I can ſee, your Diſcourſe of this Light Within, is perfectly ſuch. Take Notice, We in our Preaching, require People to Look Within, as much as you do: We ſtrictly charge All to walk according to the Convictions, and Light they have received. We daily appeal unto Conſcience: But then we Teach, that Conſcience (opened by the Holy Spirit, under the Miniſtry of the Word, Acts 16. 14.) does, and muſt take in it's Light from Holy Scripture; The Commandment of the Lord is Pure, Enlightning the Eyes, Pſalm 19. 8. (viz. of the Mind, Eph. 1. 18.) Thy Word is as a Lamp to my Feet, and a Light to my Path, Pſalm 119, 105. To the Law and to the Teſtimony; If they (even Men in their Conſciences) ſpeak not according to this Word, it is becauſe there is NO LIGHT in them, Iſa. 8. 20. Now theſe Things are Intelligible. This Rule is fixt and certain, nothing of which can be ſaid of Your Light within.

In your Eighth Article you tell us, Worſhip under the Goſpel is Inward and Spiritual. If you mean hereby, that all Outward and Bodily Worſhip ought to be accompanied with an Inward and Spiritual Worſhip, it is what we daily Preach and Practice, and even in private Preſs. But if, as it would ſeem, you mean all the Worſhip GOD now requires, is from the Inward Man, or from the Spirit, this is abominably falſe: For Our Bodies are GOD's Handy-work, and Chriſt's Purchaſe, as well as our Souls: On which Reaſon, GOD, by his Apoſtle, commands, Glorify God in your Body and in your Spirit, [ἅτινα] which (in the Plural Number that is, both which) are GOD's. Not to tell you, that you your ſelves, now adays, perform ſomewhat of Bodily Worſhip. And indeed, if there be not a Worſhip of the Body, as well as of the Spirit, there can be no Publick Worſhip. This Article, therefore, muſt alſo be mended, to make it Chriſtian.

In your Ninth Article, You tell us of your Denying all the vain Cuſtoms and Faſhions of the World, as alſo Exceſs in all Things. I know no Sort of Chriſtians who teach otherwiſe; I wiſh I could ſay, I knew none (even of your ſelves) that practiſe otherwiſe. It is one Part of the Catechiſm we teach our Children, to renounce all theſe. But there are many Innocent and laudable Cuſtoms which you call Vain. Would it not almoſt make a Man's Stomach turn to hear one forbear, in Point of Conſcience, ſaying You to a ſingle Perſon, becauſe it is improper; and at the ſame Time, while he is ſpeaking to his Superior, becauſe Thou doſt, ſounds a little Rudely, to ſoften the Thou, and ſay Thee doeſt, which is commonly your People's Practice, and much more improper. Will you ever be able to prove, the Primitive Chriſtians uſed a Dialect or Dreſs different from others of their Nation and Qualities, and placed Religion in it? Does not Chriſt require Saluting even thoſe who Salute not us? And no doubt His and his Apoſtles Salutations, were in the common Form. In a Word, There is more Vanity in Singularity and Affectation, than in a moderate following a common innocent Phraſe, Garb, or Cuſtom.

In your Tenth Article you believe (you ſay) a Spiritual Baptiſm, and a Spiritual Supper and Communion; but acknowledge you diſuſe the Outward Signs, by us commonly called Sacraments: Now did not Chriſt command Water-Baptiſm: Go ye and Baptize all Nations, Matth. 28. 19, 20. The Baptiſm here commanded, was Water-Baptiſm: For Baptizing with the Spirit was GOD's Work, not the Apoſtles; and tho' the Baptiſm of the Spirit commonly accompanied Baptiſm with Water, yet not always, as in the Caſe of Simon Magus, and many others. Yet, Did not Chriſt promiſe to be with them (Preaching to all Nations, and Baptizing) to the End of the World? Farther, Did not the Apoſtles, in Obedience to Chriſt's Command, both conſtantly practiſe, and alſo require, Water-Baptiſm to all Initiated Chriſtians? Can any Man forbid Water, that theſe ſhould not be baptized which have received the Holy Ghoſt as well as we? And he [Peter] commanded they ſhould be baptized: Acts 10. 47, 48. Then as to the Outward Uſe of Bread and Wine for the Lord's Supper, can any Command be more expreſs than, This do in Remembrance of Me? Four Times repeated in the New (which you call the better) Teſtament. To which St. Paul adds, It is a ſhewing forth the Lord's Death untill he come, 1 Cor. 11. 26. Now if Chriſt and his Apoſtles have commanded this, who hath Authorized you to diſuſe it? Remember what St. Paul tells the Corinthians, he received from the Lord that which on this Subject he delivered to them, 1 Cor. 11. 23. And 'tis a ſevere Paſſage in another Epiſtle of his, Gal. 1. 8. If we, or an Angel from Heaven, preach any other Goſpel unto you, than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accurſed. That which lays aſide ſo much of the Goſpel, and ſets up a New and Variable Rule of Faith, (we know not what Light within) is Another and New Goſpel.

To draw towards a Concluſion: I have written this ſhort Paper in much and true

Compaſſion to you: It had been far eaſier to me to have ſaid more, than thus to have confined my ſelf: I look upon many of you as an harmleſs, well-meaning People, but under ſtrong Deluſions.

This your Deluded State proceeds from your making what you call The Light within you (which is in many Caſes nothing but your own Preſumptive Perſuaſion or Fancy) a Rule of Faith and Practice, Co-ordinate, if not Superior and Antecedent to the Holy Scriptures: Theſe Words in your Paper [Which are the Double and Agreeing Record of True Religion] intimate at leaſt thus much, That you will not believe what Scripture ſaith, except the Light within you dictate the ſame, and ſo make a Double Record. Now, my Friends, do not flatter your ſelves, GOD is not mocked; you muſt anſwer at the Dreadful Day of Judgment, amongſt other Points, to ſuch as theſe; and therefore examine your Conſciences before-hand.

1. Is it not your main End and Study, by pretended Mortifications, and Renouncing the World, (while there are no Sort of Men alive that more eagerly purſue it, nor have more effectual, wily, and ſecret Ways of getting Wealth than your ſelves?) Is it not, I ſay, your main Aim and End to make your ſelves a Party conſiderable, and ſuch, to which, for Reaſons of State, peculiar Privileges muſt be indulged?

2. Are not, to this Purpoſe, many of your Diſtinctive Characters, ſuch as your Different Garb, (for it is plain, not a few of your People's Cloaths, as to Materials, are more coſtly than many of ours) your Way of Speaking, yea, even your Looks and Geſtures, aſſumed rather to make your ſelves remarkable, and at firſt Sight known from other People, than out of any Perſwaſion, Senſe of Duty, or Conſcience of Obligation?

3. What reaſonable or tolerable Warrant can you plead for waving, ſuppreſſing, at leaſt, not confeſſing much the greater Part of the Chriſtian Faith, and Rejecting all Outward Poſitive Parts of Worſhip (eſpecially Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper) which have ſuch plain and repeated Evidences in Holy Scripture. Your Light within, (or Senſe and Perſwaſion which you ſay you have, and are ſure is from Chriſt) foraſmuch as, in the preſent Caſes, it dictateth againſt Holy Scripture, can never be proved even to your ſelves, much leſs to others, to be from Chriſt: But muſt rather, in all Reaſon, be reſolved to be one of the Heights or Depths of Satan transforming himſelf into an Angel of Light. And for any Perſons to yield to ſuch Conduct, (beſides or againſt Holy Scripture) is plainly to abandon themſelves to the Deluſions of the Devil.

In a Word, therefore, I again require you, as you will anſwer all your Secret Arts and High Pretenſions at Chriſt's Tribunal, that you either Embrace and Profeſs intire Chriſtian Faith, in the Points wherein I have ſhewn you to be defective; and that you receive the Chriſtian Seals or Badges, Baptiſm, and the Lord's-Supper; or elſe that you deſiſt to lay Claim to the Name of Chriſtians.

It is not for me to Judge you, but again I ſay unto you, (truly from GOD, as His Miniſter) Judge your ſelves. This is the Caſe. If Men who take away even from the Faith once delivered to the Saints, at leaſt Two Thirds, beſides many main Points of the other Third; who Equal their own Preſumptuous Conceits to the Divine Oracles, and Revelations; who uſe and diſuſe at Pleaſure, what Parts of GOD's Inſtituted Worſhip they think fit, Even the very Badges of Chriſtianity, (I will not here Interpoſe your Making Gain your Godlineſs) but if the aforeſaid Men are in a Way of Perdition, what can you conclude of your ſelves? In the Name of GOD Repent and Return: And from my Soul I pray, That GOD will pleaſe to give you Repentance.

Cork, July the
2d. 1698.

Edw. Cork and Ross.

A Defence of a Paper, entituled, Goſpel-Truths.

I Have given the Biſhop's Exceptions together at large, as he did our Paper, and ſhall now Conſider their Validity.

He is pleaſed to ſay at the Beginning of his firſt Paragraph, he is ſuch a Reader as in our Paper we deſire: Words that gave me great Hopes, of not only fair

1698. but friendly Dealing; and I heartily wiſh it had been ſo: But ſince it ſeems to me the Reverſe of his Promiſe, he muſt not take it ill from me, if I ſtop a while, and ſhew him a little to himſelf, and how much he is miſtaken in his own Temper, as well as in our Principles. For tho' he begins with the Names of Moderation, Charity, and Meekneſs, that's all: He quickly loſes Sight of them, and forgets them, with himſelf, almoſt all the Way. And unleſs my Taſte be Extremely Depraved, there is little Reliſh of thoſe Virtues in his Management, or a tolerable Temper ſhewn towards us, reſpecting either our Belief or Practice. We deſired ſuch a Reader indeed as had rather we were in the Right, than in the Wrong; One that did not Prejudge our Caſe, and would give us (and not our Enemies) the wording of our own Belief: While the Biſhop but too plainly ſhews, he would not have us in the Right, Even where he dares not ſay, (however freely he ſuggeſts it) that we are in the Wrong. Which appears,

Firſt, by his Unneceſſary Exceptions to ſuch Truths, as we have declared in our Paper (and he cannot deny) as imperfectly Expreſt, becauſe we have not ſaid all that might be ſaid, to Branch them out, or Illuſtrate them; tho' enough to be underſtood by ſuch as are not Captious.

Secondly, by Suppoſitions Incongruous, and that can have no other Service than to Expoſe us, and that in a very ill Manner.

Thirdly, by rendring us to Deny, what we don't Expreſs in our Paper: Though indeed we Believe it.

Fourthly, in not taking due Notice of what is Implied, as well as Expreſt: Which had been but Juſt.

Fifthly, in making the worſt of what is not concurrent with his Belief, and not the beſt, where we believe the ſame Thing.

Sixthly, by Groſly Miſrendring our Pretences to Strict Living.

Laſtly, by Condemning us upon Rumour. All which is more than Leaning to that Side, that had rather we were in the Wrong, than in the Right; and Conſequently not ſuch a Reader as we deſired. That this is ſo, let it but be obſerved, how he Unchriſtians us in his Third Paragraph; tho' Immediately in a Contradiction to what he juſt before Acknowledges in his Second. Nor will he allow us to be ſo much as Deiſts in his Fourth, or at moſt but very Imperfect Ones, becauſe we have not ſaid all of God, that may be aſcribed to him. In his Sixth, he ſuppoſes us capable of believing that Chriſt Came of Corrupt and Sinful Fleſh, becauſe we ſay no more in that Place, of the Manner of his Incarnation, than the Evangeliſt doth, John 1. 14. Alſo, that we are Defective, at beſt, Ambiguous, about Eternal Rewards and Puniſhments. He makes us, in his Seventh Paragraph, to Deny the Reſurrection of the Dead, at large, and without Diſtinction, though we there acknowledge a Future State, which implies it; and have not ſaid one Word againſt it; but upon all Occaſions, in Print, or otherwiſe, have Expreſt our Belief of that Branch of Chriſtian Doctrine, according to Scripture. In his Tenth, he derides our Plain (though Proper) Language, of Thou to a ſingle Perſon, though it is what he himſelf gives to God in his Prayers. In his Fourteenth and Fifteenth, he is pleaſed to ſlight and render our Stricter Living, a Trick to promote a Party, and that our Garb, Looks, and Geſtures, are more to make our ſelves Remarkable, than out of any Perſwaſion of Duty, or Conſcience: As bad a Construction as he could make. In his Sixteenth, he tells us, The Light within us, that we ſay, we have from Chriſt, is rather one of the Heighths or Depths of Satan Transformed, and that we are Abandoned to his Deluſions. So that We, and moſt of our Principles too, are ſtark Naught with the Biſhop. In his Eighteenth, and laſt Paragraph, he ſuggeſts, We take away Two Thirds of the Chriſtian Faith, beſides many Points of the other Third; and equal our Preſumptuous Conceits, to the Divine Oracles, and Revelations, and uſe, and diſuſe, at Pleaſure, what Part of God's Inſtituted Worſhip we think fit; Even the very Badges of Chriſtianity. I will not, ſays the Biſhop, interpoſe (yet ſuggeſts it) your making Gain your Godlineſs; but if the Aforeſaid Men, are in a Way to Perdition, what can you Conclude of your ſelves? In the Name of God Repent and Return. Thus the Biſhop, upon a whole People, without any other Provocation, than has been Expreſt.

I hope, after this, He will not Expect (I am ſure he ought not) that any Body ſhould think him ſuch a Reader, as we deſired, for our Goſpel-Truths, and which he promiſed us to be; or that he has treated us with the Moderation, Charity, and Meekneſs, he made us hope for; ſince none of our Adverſaries have uſed us much worſe, in ſo little a Compaſs. I heartily wiſh him a better Sight of himſelf, ſelf, as well as of us, that he may be leſs miſtaken in both another Time; for I have a Reſpect for him, and deſire not to be upon theſe Terms with him, any Longer, than he thinks fit to make it neceſſary.

The reſt of his firſt Paragraph is only a Strain of Fair and Paſtoral Promiſes, forgotten by him, and not to be remembred any more, at this Time, by me; and therefore I ſhall proceed to his Second. Only obſerve this one Thing to my Reader, and the Biſhop too, that he is pleaſed to place Moderation and Charity to our Account, becauſe he does not take us by our Word Chiefly to mean Only, or All, in Reference to the Things, by us believed: Which, under Favour, he could not do in Juſtice; and therefore he needs not bring us in Debtor for that, which is our Due, ſince no Body ever took Chiefly, for Only, any more than an Eldeſt, for an Only Son, or an Arch, for an Only Biſhop. Nor does Chiefly imply All, any more than Only; for whether It regards Things Human, or Divine, It imports the Beſt Part of any thing, but not All: The moſt valuable, that which deſerves and commands our Regard and Eſteem in the firſt Place. And I leave it with my Reader, whether Believing in God, and Chriſt, and the Holy Spirit; and Believing the Scriptures, and the Neceſſity of Holineſs, and Divine Worſhip, and finally of Eternal Rewards and Puniſhments, are not Points of Faith, Chiefly to be Received and Profeſſed by Chriſtians? And if they are ſuch, the Biſhop muſt have been Superfinely Critical, upon our Word Chiefly, as well as that he might have been a better Huſband of his Moderation and Charity, and have kept them for an Occaſion where they might have been more needed, and Conſequently better beſtowed.

His Second Paragraph allows us to have ſufficiently Expreſt our Chriſtian Belief in two Articles, but with this Cenſure, that of Eleven, we are only Clear in theſe Two, viz. Juſtification by Chriſt, And Submiſſion to the Civil Government, wiſhing we may always ſtick to this Belief, and Practice; and adds, I heartily Rejoyce to find you acknowledge the Neceſſity of Chriſt, as a Propitiation, in order to the Remiſſion of Sins, and Juſtifying you, as Sinners, from Guilt. 'Tis the firſt Time I have heard of it among you.

If ſo: It is the Biſhop's Fault, and ſeems to me, next to Impoſſible; ſince before that Paper was given him, he was pleaſed to Acknowledge he had read ſeveral of our Books; particularly, my Riſe and Progreſs of the People called Quakers, taking it out of his Pocket at that Time; alſo Robert Barclay's Apology, which States, and Vindicates our Principles at large, in which the Two Doctrines afore-mentioned, are very clearly Declared, and Maintained, notwithſtanding he ſeems to make this look like a New Diſcovery. But however, I am pleaſed, that the Biſhop is ſo, at two of the Goſpel-Truths: I am of Opinion, if he had well conſidered the Force and Comprehenſiveneſs of our Belief concerning Chriſt, that pleaſes him ſo well, he might have ſaved himſelf the Trouble of what he has publiſhed to the World upon the reſt of them: For, whoever believes in Chriſt, as a Propitiation, in order to Remiſſion of Sins, and Juſtification of Sinners from the Guilt of Sin, can hardly diſbelieve any Fundamental Article of the Chriſtian Religion; ſince, every ſuch Perſon, muſt Neceſſarily believe in God, becauſe it is with Him alone Man is to be Juſtified. To be ſure he muſt believe in Chriſt, for that is the very Propoſition. He muſt alſo believe in the Holy Ghoſt, becauſe, he is the Author of his Conviction, Repentance, and Belief. He muſt believe Heaven, and Hell, Rewards, and Puniſhment, and Conſequently the Reſurrection of the Juſt and Unjuſt: For, why ſhould he be Concerned about being freed from the Guilt of his Sin, if if he were unaccountable in another World? So that Acknowledging the Neceſſity of Chriſt, as a Propitiation, in order to the Remiſſion of Sin, comprehends the main Doctrine of Chriſtian Religion; and as ſo many Lines drawn from the Circumference to the Center, they all meet and center in Chriſt: And indeed it is as the Navel of Chriſtianity, and Characteriſtick of that Religion. I would intreat him again, to reflect well upon his own Acknowledgment, and Commendation of our Belief, concerning the End, and Benefit of Chriſt, to Mankind; and he cannot think us ſo Deficient, much leſs, under ſuch ſtrong and dangerous Deluſions, as he has been pleaſed to repreſent us.

His Third Paragraph will not ſuffer us to be Chriſtians, notwithſtanding what we have ſaid of our Belief in Chriſt, in our Paper called Goſpel-Truths. In one Senſe I ſhall eaſily agree with him, for I think nothing makes any Man a True Chriſtian, but Regeneration, the Power of the Son of God Revealed in the Soul, Converting it to God: For the Devil's Believe, and Tremble too, and yet are Devils ſtill; they Believe what is True, but they do not Truly Believe in him that is True:

1698. They know and aſſent to the Propoſitions of Truth, or Articles of Faith, and knew Him to be Chriſt too, when He came of old, and called him by His Name, but this did not make True Chriſtians Then of them: Nor yet does an Aſſent Now to all the Truths of the Goſpel, Truly Qualifie Men Chriſtians, unleſs they feel the Power of them, upon their Hearts. And I would have my Reader reflect well upon this Great and Eſſential Truth, tho' he were as Big as a Biſhop: For a New Creature is the Buſineſs; an Orthodox Life, the Croſs of Chriſt, which is the Narrow Way of Self-denyal. Yet I muſt ſay, That whoever declares, he believes in Chriſt as his Sacrifice and Sanctifier, which is to ſave both from the Guilt and Pollution of Sin, is a Profeſſor of Chriſtianity, and may reaſonably be allowed to be a Chriſtian at large. And that what we have declared, in our Third, Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Goſpel-Truth, comprehends the Belief before-mentioned, my Juſt and Sober Reader may ſatisfy himſelf in the Peruſal thereof.

His Fourth Paragraph faults our firſt Article, as he is pleaſed to call it, with great Shortneſs and Imperfection concerning our Belief of God; for tho' he ſays we own his Providence as to the other Life, yet we ſay nothing, as to the Creation of this preſent World, and Providence over it: But, with the Biſhop's Leave, He that believes in God, believes in all that's neceſſary to a Supreme Being. 'Tis what he, and all Chriſtians, take for granted, and allow, as often as they hear any one ſay, He believes in God. For not to believe Him Omnipotent, Omniſcient, and Omnipreſent, is not to believe him to be God, being inſeparable from the Divine Nature. I muſt appeal to the Biſhop, whether a ſmall Grain of Charity would not have excuſed us from his Reflection upon this Head. We have ſaid more than Moſes ſaid to Pharaoh: For beſides that, I am, is no more than, He is: We have added that He is, the Rewarder of all Men, according to their Works. We gave the Text, as it is, and the very Text ſeems expreſt for a Declaration of Faith in God, viz. He, that will come to God, muſt believe that He is, and that He is a Rewarder, of them that ſeek him. The Text does not Enumerate and Require the Belief of all the Divine Attributes, and Properties that are in God, but the bare Belief of his Being, and what He is to Mankind that fear him. And whatever the Biſhop ſays, this is enough for a Man to come to God, though not enough, it ſeems, to come to the Biſhop in the Quality of a Believer: He muſt help the Holy Ghoſt to ſpeak Properly, or we, that ſpeak after him, muſt be deficient in our Expreſſions, if not in our Belief. But when any one affirms, that Man was created by God, is he Short, Fallacious, or Equivocal, becauſe he does not ſay how God made Man, or what he made him? Is not his Body, Soul, and Spirit, his Will, Underſtanding, Memory and Affections comprized, and meant, under that Word Man? Beſides, could the Biſhop think, that while we own God's greater Providence, his leſſer could be diſbelieved by us? He that has the alone Power of Rewarding Men, in the other World, according to their Works in this, muſt certainly be the Sovereign of Both; and his Providence, in Juſtice, is to be ſo underſtood. And as it is moſt certain that we believe of God, all that the Holy Scriptures declare of him, and whatſoever is proper to that Great and Glorious Being; ſo, had we not thought it unneceſſary to be more particular, from the Common Notion all Men have of the Deity, the Biſhop could have had no Room left for the Exerciſe of his Charity.

In his Fifth Paragraph, he Blames us for being Defective in our Confeſſion of the Holy Trinity: Though we give it in the very Terms of the Holy Ghoſt, 1 John 5. 7. If this is not a ſufficient Text to prove the Trinity, that Antiquity Urges, and alſo Modern Writers of the Church of England, to prove it, I know not where to find one, in the Scripture.

It is Generally Believed the Apoſtle John gave this Declaration to the firſt Chriſtians, to prevent their being deluded by Cerinthus. How came the Biſhop then to render it but a By-Paſſage, and otherwiſe intended by the Apoſtle, than for an Article of Faith about the Trinity? Is there a Plainer, or a Fuller any where in the Writings of the New Teſtament? Three and yet One, is the Doctrine of the Trinity: And no other Apoſtle has gone ſo far, or been ſo Expreſs: Inſomuch that the Text has been doubted, and render'd Apocryphal by ſuch as do not believe the Common Doctrine of the Trinity; and Foiſted in to ſerve the Turn of Trinitarians: So plain it has been thought to their Purpoſe, even by the Anti-Trinitarians. How then is the Text defective with the Biſhop? But he ſays the Apoſtle writ it upon Occaſion: Doubtleſs he did ſo. But what other Occaſion, I pray, than that of the Holy Trinity? He adds, And it was to the Apoſtle's Purpoſe, touching the Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt: But what Purpoſe could the Apoſtle have, but that of declaring the Trinity, and yet Unity? What other Uſe does he make of it? The Biſhop muſt be very hard put to it, certainly, to ſhift of, and leſſen our Confeſſion in this Point, and rather than fail, render the Text it ſelf ſhort; which, with Submiſſion, I think is a bold Attempt in one of his Station, if he believes the Thirty Nine Articles. 1698.

The next and Sixth Paragraph, relating to our Third Goſpel-Truth, is large, and conſiſts of divers Branches, and therefore I ſhall conſider them diſtinctly and apart. In the Third Article, You acknowledge indeed the Son of God to have been made Fleſh, but neither Conceived by the Holy Ghoſt, nor Born of the Virgin Mary: So that it does not appear, by this your Confeſſion, but that He was at firſt an Ordinary, Corrupt, and Sinful Perſon. I think it is hardly to be ſuppoſed that we could intend ſo groſs a Thing, or that it is inferrible from the Manner of our expreſſing of our ſelves, in Reference to Chriſt's Manifeſtation in the Fleſh. Where Enough is ſaid, to Comprehend the Reſt, All is Meant, tho' All be not Expreſs'd: We call him the Beloved Son of God, the Only Begotten of the Father: Pray what is that ſhort of being Conceived by the Holy Ghoſt? To be ſure, it is very far from a Corrupt and Sinful Perſon, a Suppoſition as remote from what we ſaid, as from what the Biſhop promiſed, viz. Charity. He that confeſſes the Word was made Fleſh, confeſſes him made Fleſh by God, and therefore made Holy Fleſh: For God never made any corrupt or ſinful Fleſh. If the Place is read, as ſome do, viz. the Word took Fleſh, the Fleſh muſt be Holy, for he would not take, or dwell in ſinful Fleſh.

And had the Biſhop well remembred what he Acknowledged, upon our Believing Chriſt to be a Propitiation for Sin, not many Lines before, he could never have ſuggeſted ſo Unreaſonable, as well as Uncharitable a Conceit; ſince Sinful Fleſh, or a corrupt Perſon, could never be any Part of a Sacrifice for Sin: So that in commending that Part of our Belief, he has ſufficiently ſecured us againſt this Part of his Inſinuation. But the Biſhop proceeds to aggravate our Shortneſs in Expreſſion, to a ſevere Imputation, viz. That we own Him not ſo much as Jeſus, or the Chriſt.

This muſt be a great Overſight of the Biſhop, not to ſay worſe, when the very Fourth Head, about Juſtification by Chriſt, of which he declares himſelf ſo well ſatisfied, Thrice confeſſes him to be Chriſt, viz. in the Firſt, Third and Fourth Lines. Again, we call him Chriſt, in the Firſt Line of the Fifth Goſpel-Truth; likewiſe in the Firſt and Fourth Lines, of the Sixth, we call him Chriſt: We do the ſame, in the Firſt and Fifth Lines of the Eighth, and in the Firſt Line of our Tenth Goſpel-Truth. How the Biſhop came to miſs in ſo palpable a Point of Fact, in the Compaſs of One Half Side of a Sheet of Paper, I cannot imagine, and am unwilling to cenſure. Nor would I willingly think the Biſhop ſo trifling, as well as diſingenuous, as to excuſe himſelf herein, becauſe we do not call the Word, that took Fleſh by the Name of Chriſt, in that Place, ſince the Biſhop repeats it from us, out of our aforeſaid Fourth Head, about Juſtification by Chriſt, where we call him by the Name of Chriſt, as may be ſeen in the ſecond and foregoing Paragraph of his Reflections. Beſides, we have not confeſſed his Name leſs than Nine Times in that Paper. But if the Biſhop could yet inſiſt upon the Word Chriſt not being in our Third Head, I ſay the Thing is there, though the Word be not. For what is Chriſt but the Word made Fleſh, and who is the Word made Fleſh but Jeſus Chriſt? Again, who is the Beloved Son of God but Chriſt, and who elſe but Chriſt is the Beloved Son of God, and Only Begotten of the Father, full of Grace, and full of Truth: For theſe High and Diſtinguiſhing Characters are to be found in That very Head of Doctrine, where the Biſhop will not have us to acknowledge him to be Chriſt. So that unleſs a corrupt and ſinful Perſon can be full of Grace and Truth, I wonder how the Biſhop came to ſuppoſe a Thing, in our Name, ſo very groſs. But he proceeds in the ſame Paragraph, You acknowledge indeed he died for Sin, but you have not one Word of his Reſurrection from the Dead, or of his Aſcenſion into Heaven, which it may be proved ſome of you have expreſly denied, ſaying, He is not Aſcended into Heaven, He is in us; with more to this Effect. I ſhould be ſorry to Tax the Biſhop here of Abſurdity and Uncharitableneſs; but who can help it? For if Chriſt be not Riſen, He is ſtill in his Grave; He is no more. How then do we aſſert him to be a Propitiation, and the Light and Life of his People? See Goſpel-Truth, 3, 4, 5, and 6. Can that which is Dead, Sanctify and Juſtify Believers? Can the Dead give us Grace and the Holy Spirit? Or have we not ſaid ſo of Chriſt, that he is the Giver thereof? And if we have ſaid ſo, muſt not the Biſhop be extreamly beſide the Buſineſs? His Uncharitableneſs is as obvious, I will not ſay his Untruth; but I muſt pray him to reflect a little better upon what he has writ; for unleſs he would make us to mean the Grave, when we ſay, That Wicked Men ſhall never come where Chriſt is gone, Goſpel-Truth 6. he muſt allow that we acknowledge Chriſt to be in Heaven, and conſequently Aſcended. What ſhall I ſay to his Story of ſome of our Friends, whom he makes to affirm, That Chriſt is not Aſcended into Heaven; He is in us? Can it touch us, or ſhould he have ſaid it, and not have proved it? Is that fair and candid? Is it Charitable, ſuppoſing it were True, which does not appear? Or is it Juſt to inſinuate it upon the People as Dubious? But let it be never ſo True, it cannot conclude the People, if not Act of the People. The Church of England has Doctors of very different Sentiments; would the Biſhop think it fair the Common Belief of the Church ſhould thereby be concluded? It is True, and a great and comfortable Truth, That Chriſt is in us, according to 2 Cor. 13. 5. Gal. 2. 16. Col. 1. 26, 27. but not Confined to Man: He is not ſo there, as that he is no where elſe, and leaſt of all that he is not in Heaven. For the Apoſtle tells us, Eph. 4. 14. that He Aſcended far above all Heavens, that he might fill all Things; then he is in Man certainly. So that our aſſerting that Doctrine of the Indwelling of Chriſt in Man, does not make void his being elſewhere, becauſe he is every where: Tho' in Heaven moſt Gloriouſly, without Doubt, being there Glorified with the Glory that he had with the Father before the World began. And they that thus believe in Chriſt, cannot deny his being at God's Right Hand, which ſignifies according to Scripture, Phil. 2. 9, 10, 11. the higheſt Exaltation: Nor yet to be their Mediator, for that is inſeparable from his being their Propitiation. So that tho' we did not dwell upon Points, but were Conciſe in our Expreſſions, yet whatever is implied, or is implicable from any Aſſertion, Juſtice, as well as Charity, always grants; and ſo would the Biſhop have done, had they been uppermoſt in his Mind, when his Pen ran ſo faſt againſt us. I muſt own it was not writ for Criticks, but for ſuch Readers as the Biſhop ſays he was, or ſhould have been, to wit, who exerciſe Moderation and Charity; more of which, I hope he thinks as well as I, will do him no Harm.

But it diſturbs the Biſhop that we have ſaid nothing of Chriſt's Coming to Judgment, nor of the End of the World, whether it be Diſſolvable or Eternal. For the Firſt, It is implied in our making all Men Accountable to God, for their Deeds done in the Body. For the other, it was not under our Conſideration, being not objected to us. But they that ſay as much of Chriſtian Doctrine as we have done, in thoſe Eleven Heads of our Paper, did never yet, that I have heard, believe the Eternity of this World, Heb. 1. 10, 11, 12.

Yet again ſays the Biſhop, Not a Word of One Church, which it may be feared you ſtrike out of your Belief, becauſe you are reſolved never more to return into the Unity of the Church, but to make and maintain a Schiſm, or Party for ever.

Theſe are very harſh Conſtructions, beſides that they beg the Queſtion, and in my Opinion would have paſt better from a Perſon, whoſe Office was leſs concerned in Charity, than that of a Biſhop: But why, pray, Muſt Intereſt and Obſtinacy Rule our Diſſent? What's to be got by it, Profit and Preferment go the Biſhop's Way, I will not ſay he goes theirs. But why not Conſcience, tho' it were miſtaken, ſince we have been all along of the Loſing Side? Which is not uſually eſpouſed by the Men of Intereſt, nor are Men ordinarily Obſtinate againſt their Intereſt. Let us at leaſt be Honeſt Men, and allowed to mean Well, though we were miſtaken. But what Church, of the many Churches in Europe, is the Biſhop's One Church, to which he would have us return? He has not told us. Methinks he that cenſures our Shortneſs ſo much, ſhould not have been deficient himſelf in ſo Material a Point. So that if we are out of the Way, we muſt be ſo ſtill for all the Biſhop; ſince we are yet to ſeek what Church we Err from, or ſhould Repair to. But I will ſuppoſe he means his Own, by which he excludes the Lutheran and Calviniſt; the Preſbyterian, Independent and Baptiſt, as well as the People called Quakers, from being of his One Church; to ſay nothing of the Roman Catholick or Greek Churches. But unleſs the One Church, as he phraſes it, by which I underſtand him to intend the True One, may be of Two Minds, it will be difficult for him to recommend his own above the reſt, becauſe that is not only broken in Sentiments, but Practice too, and which the Biſhop knows is no longer a Secret. I might mention the Differences warmly managed between the Doctors of it, about Grace and Free-Will; one taking the Calviniſt, the other the Arminian Way; as they alſo do about the Doctrine of Satisfaction and Juſtification. Likewiſe the late Controverſy between Two Famous Men of the Church, about the Trinity, who are followed in their differing Sentiments, by great Numbers of the Learned of the Biſhop's One Church:

And for that Reaſon (if no other) I cannot be ſo well ſatisfied of his exact Correſpondence with all the Articles of that Church himſelf. And I hope I am not beſide the Buſiueſs, when I ſay, It would very well have become the Biſhop to have told us what it is he would have us believe, when he found ſo much Fault with what that Paper ſays we do believe. It would be too long, and perhaps he might think it beſides the Buſineſs, at leaſt the Brevity the Caſe requires, to give him the Reaſons of our Separation and Diſſent, or Diſagreement with the Church. I put theſe Words together, becauſe ſome were never Members of it, and ſo they could not properly be ſaid to ſeparate from it; but True it is, we may all be ſaid to Diſſent, or Diſagree; and I would think the Biſhop ſhould not be much to ſeek for the Reaſons of it. And yet where we are vulgarly apprehended to differ moſt, we Diſſent leaſt, I mean in Doctrine, which is the Reaſon ſo many have upon Occaſion ſaid, as indeed did the Biſhop at the Viſit I made him; viz. Why we believe the ſame, 'tis what we Preach as well as you. For except it be the Wording of ſome of the Articles of Faith in School-Terms, there are very few of them profeſs'd by the Church of England, to which we do not heartily Aſſent. And this I have expreſt for my ſelf, and in Behalf of my Friends, in my Key, and Primitive Chriſtianity Revived. But of this, and the more Material Reaſons of our Diſtance from the Church, I may have Occaſion to expreſs my ſelf at the Cloſure of this Vindication.

But the Biſhop proceeds in his Sixth Paragraph: Nor have you a Word of the Reſurrection of the Body, which divers of you have been known to deny, and others of you only ſay, It may be ſo. I ſhall conſider this immediately upon the next Paragraph, where he treats upon the ſame Subject, and apply my ſelf to his Concluſion of this: Laſtly, Tho' you acknowledge Everlaſting Rewards for them that fear God, yet nothing of the Everlaſting Puniſhment of Wicked Men. I think we do, and that the Biſhop aggravates his Diſingenuity to us upon this Head: For the Words of the Paper are theſe, It is our Belief that God is, and that he is a Rewarder of all them that fear him, with Eternal Rewards of Happineſs; and that thoſe that fear him not, ſhall be turned into Hell. The Scriptures are, Heb. 11. 6. Rev. 22. 12. Rom. 2, 5, 6, 7, 8. Pſalm 9. 17. Now though Eternal is not joyned to Hell, yet Juſtice as well as Candor would have underſtood it ſo, and to mean the Hell of the Damned, the Puniſhment of Evil Doers after this Life, according to the Ancient, Common Belief. But the Biſhop that ſeldom fails to make the Worſt of every Thing for us, thus comments upon our Words: You mention Hell indeed, but whether you mean thereby the Grave, as commonly in Scripture is meant, or a Place of Temporal Puniſhment after this Life, as ſome have done, or a State of Total Deſtruction and Annihilation, as many now a-days do, no One knows. But with the Biſhop's Leave, what if we mean None of theſe, may we not be in the Right for all that? For what if none of theſe are the Ancient, Common, and Scripture Belief, what will the Biſhop do then? Since One would think that One of them is the Biſhop's Hell, becauſe he gives us and his Reader no more Room for our Meaning, or any other Belief of a Hell. And either one of theſe is an Article of his Belief, or elſe he keeps the True Hell to himſelf, and was not ſo Juſt as to include that in the Queſtion with the reſt, leſt he ſhould be thereby Guilty of ſuppoſing us capable of meaning the True One in our Goſpel-Truths, viz. The Worm that never dies, the Fire that never goes out, where is Weeping and Gnaſhing of Teeth for ever. See 2 Theſſalonians 1. 9. Jude 6. 7. And which, I think, is none of the Three the Biſhop mentions. However, he abundantly ſhews his Inclination to repreſent us rather Wrong than Right, in our Belief: For if the Scriptures by us cited are conſulted, they plainly ſhew we never meant the Grave, and that they equally refer to the Future State of the Souls of Men; viz. That all ſhall receive the Recompence of their Works, and the Rewards of their Deeds, according to the Nature and Quality of them. And if the Rewards of the Righteous are Eternal, then ſo muſt thoſe of the Wicked be, or both muſt be Temporary: For the Holy Ghoſt makes no Difference as to the Duration of the one more than of the other. One Grain of a Truly Chriſtian Temper, had ſaved the Biſhop, and he me, the Trouble of this, as well as other Reflections.

I am come now to his Seventh Paragraph, the Firſt Part of which, is a heavy Complaint of our Shortneſs and Deficiency in expreſſing our ſelves. We, it ſeems, are too General in ſome Points, and Wave in others; he is pleaſed to ſay, Eight of Twelve, but Inſtances only in that of the Reſurrection; tho' he conjures us at the ſame Time, upon our Eternal Account, to conſider what he ſays. Now if being General, and keeping to the Terms of Scripture be a Fault, we are like to be more Vile with the Biſhop: For Thanks be to God, That Only, is our Creed, and with Good Reaſon too; ſince it is fit That ſhould only conclude, and be the Creed of Chriſtians, which the Holy Ghoſt could only propoſe, and require us to believe. For if the Comment is made the Creed inſtead of the Text, from that Time we believe not in God, but in Man. I heartily wiſh none had been Wiſe above what is written, and that Generals had concluded Chriſtians: Then Charity had been better Maintained, and Piety promoted: Wheras Strains, or Refines upon the Text, have thrown us into thoſe Labyrinths of Controverſie, that the Zeal which ſhould have been imployed to ſuppreſs Sin in all it's Branches, has too generally been uſed to fire one Party upon another, till Practice, which is Religion indeed, was blown up by the Generality. So much for our Shortneſs or Wavering, as the Biſhop calls it.

I ſhall now attend his only Neceſſary Point of Eight, that he thought fit to mention, which, he ſays, we either ſuppreſs, or wave, viz. The Reſurrection of the Dead: I confeſs I did not think that any Body would have been ſo Uncharitable to us, after our Acknowledging the Future State of the Juſt and Unjuſt, ſince that implies it, and every Medium to it. However I will attend what the Biſhop urges for Proof of what we don't deny, but always muſt the Slander of doing ſo. I will (ſays he) only mind you of Two Paſſages out of the Scripture of Truth, 1 Cor. 15. 16, 17. If the Dead Riſe not, your Faith is Vain, you are yet in your Sins. Hence it appears (ſays the Biſhop) all other Points of Faith are in Vain, if this be not True. And ſo ſay I, as well as the Biſhop, and ſhall always ſay as he ſays, while he ſays no more than the Text ſays: For who can think, that allows himſelf to think, that we ſhould not believe an Immortality, who have expoſed our ſelves, and ſuffered ſo much, that we may obtain an Happy One. But the Queſtion is not whethet the Dead Riſe, But with what Bodies? For if the Dead Riſe not, then may we ſay with the Apoſtle, Verſe 19. in the ſame Chapter, We are of all Men moſt Miſerable. So that the Reſurrection of the Dead is out of all Diſpute with us: But with What Body, will, I believe, be One, till the Dead Riſe.

Here it is we are Cautious, and tread Softly; remembring what the Apoſtle ſays to the Curious and Inquiſitive upon this Head, Ver. 35, 36, 37, 38. But ſome Man will ſay, How are the Dead Raiſed up, And with what Bodies do they come? Thou Fool, thou Soweſt not that Body which ſhall be, but bare Grain.—— But God giveth it a Body as it hath pleaſed him, and to every Seed his own Body. Here is the Ground of our Caution, which the Biſhop is pleaſed to call Suppreſſing, and others denying of the Reſurrection. We have indeed been Negative to the Groſs Conceit of People concerning the Riſing of this Carnal Body we carry about us, which better agrees with the Alcoran of Mahomet, than the Goſpel of Chriſt. But that there is a Reſurrection of the Juſt and Unjuſt to Rewards and Puniſhments, we have ever believed. And indeed we cannot but wonder that any ſhould be diſpleaſed with us, for being Pleaſed with that which God is pleaſed to give us. Bodies we ſhall have, but not the ſame, ſays the Apoſtle, and ſo believes the Quaker; but God giveth every one a Body as pleaſeth him, and that pleaſeth us, whoever it diſpleaſeth: For we had rather be called Fools Ten Times by the Biſhop, than Once by the Apoſtle, which we think we ſhould deſerve, if we ſhould dare to ſtretch the Text, or preſume to define the Secret.

The other Scripture urged by the Biſhop, in Defence of what we never oppoſed, is Rom. 10. 9. If thou ſhalt confeſs with thy Mouth the Lord Jeſus, and believe in thine Heart, that God hath raiſed him from the Dead, thou ſhalt be ſaved. He adds, Thoſe who believe this as they ſhould do, ſhall be Saved. But, that we have left out both Chriſt's Reſurrection, and our own in our Faith. In the Firſt Part of his Note, I agree with him, that all who Rightly believe the Text, will be Saved: For that muſt be by the Illumination and Working of the Saving Power of Chriſt in the Heart, that he can ſo believe. But that we have left out Chriſt's Reſurrection and our own, is a Miſtake already obſerved, becauſe they are both plainly implied; one in our Belief of Chriſt's being a Propitiation for Sin, and the Light, Life and Strength of his People, and in giving us his Grace and Holy Spirit, which that which is Dead cannot do: And our own Reſurrection is ſufficiently ſecured, in our declared Belief of Rewards and Puniſhments; tho' the Mode of it be not expreſt: Nor was there any Reaſon for ſaying more upon that Head, with Reſpect to the Occaſion of our Papers being publiſhed.

I am now come to the Biſhop's Eighth Paragraph, which comprehends his Exceptions to Three of our Goſpel-Truths, viz. the 5th, 6th, and 7th, which wholly relate to the Doctrine of the Light of Chriſt Within Man. And I am truly ſorry to find the Biſhop at ſo great a Loſs, as that Paragraph ſhews him, about ſo Excellent and Evident a Principle; and which ſo very much concerns him, and indeed All Men, to know. And that my Reader may inform himſelf throughly in this Matter, I muſt deſire him to look back, and read thoſe Three Goſpel-Truths, and compare them with the Biſhop's Eighth Paragraph, and he will make himſelf much a better Judge of the Validity of the Biſhop's Anſwer, and my Reply, and which of us Two keeps cloſeſt to the Doctrine and Language of the Holy Scriptures, that he in the ſame Paragraph ſeems ſo much to Reſpect.

His Firſt Exception in this Paragraph, is at our Incapacity: For he ſays, We have never been able yet, that he could find, to make out what we mean by the Light of Chriſt Within. Perhaps the Biſhop has never ſought, or has ſought amiſs; which as Great and Learned Men as himſelf, have done before now, and ſo miſt what they have ſought for: And then it cannot be a Wonder, that he has not found out what we mean by the Light of Chriſt in Man. But that a Biſhop ſhould repreſent this an unintelligible Doctrine, after reading ſo diſtinct and plain an Account of it in Robert Barclay's Apology, not to mention divers other Books; and which is of greater Authority, the Scriptures of Truth, is no ordinary Surpriſe to me. Has the Biſhop forgot the Firſt of John, and the 4th, 9th, and 16th Verſes, where ſpeaking of the Word-God, he ſays, In Him was Life, and the Life was the Light of Men.

This is that Light of Chriſt the Quakers aſſert, and deſire to turn the Minds of all People to: For all muſt have it, if it be the Light of All, as the Text plainly tells us it is. The Ninth Verſe is yet more expreſs, viz. That was the True Light which lighteth every Man that cometh into the World; than which, nothing can be more expreſt to our Purpoſe. And that the Biſhop ſhould feel no Share in this Glorious Light of Men, renders him very unfit, methinks, for an Overſeer of them.

I know ſome read this Text otherwiſe, as indeed he did to me in Cork, viz. That was the True Light, That Coming into the World lighteth all Men; referring the Word Coming to Chriſt, and not to Man. But all the Verſions I ever met with, and I have ſeen more than Twenty, render the Verſe as it is in our Engliſh Tranſlations: And all Criticks and Commentatots, except the Followers of Socinus, Read and Render it as we do. And while we have ſo much Company, and ſo great Authority, I think we need not be Solicitous about the Succeſs of this Point. But beſides that the foregoing Verſe tells us, that the Divine Life of the Word-God, is the Light of Men, which ſhews all Mankind have it in them (for it is the Light of their Minds, and not of their Bodies) it is impoſſible that Interpretation ſhould be True in a ſtrict Senſe: For the Coming of Chriſt in that Bleſſed Manifeſtation, was to the Jews only: He ſays it himſelf, He was not ſent but to the Loſt Sheep of the Houſe of Iſrael, Mat. 13. 24. Again, He came unto his own, and his own received him not, John 1. 11. And within that narrow Compaſs he could not be ſaid to be the Light of all Mankind that had, did, and ſhould come into the World, for ſo both the 4th and 9th Verſe plainly import, viz. The Light of Mankind, without Reſtriction to This or That Manifeſtation of God to Men.

But the Biſhop is ſtill at a Loſs what to make of this Light, and what we would be at; For, ſays he, You will not allow it to be either the Natural Rational Faculty, or Common Innate Notions, or Natural Conſcience, or Conſcience Illuminated, by the Preaching of the Goſpel, and the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt thereby. We ſay, we would have it to be what the Scriptures ſay it to be, viz. the Light of Chriſt, the Son of God, who called himſelf, John 8. 12. the Light of the World; and if ſo, then Every Man's Light; the Light of every Mind and Underſtanding, and conſequently the Light of Chriſt Within; too hard it ſeems for the Biſhop to comprehend, and yet ſo very eaſie, to the meaneſt Capacity, that obſerves the Diſcoveries and Convictions of it in their own Hearts.

But ſince it is, as he rightly terms it, a Fundamental with us, we will follow the Biſhop, in his Enquiries a little farther. We ſay firſt then, It is not the Natural Rational Faculty of Man; for then it would be Man, or a Part of his Compoſition, meerly as Man: But that It is not, but a Manifeſtation in the Soul of Man, of Chriſt, the Word God, the Light of the World, the Second Adam, the Lord from Heaven, the Quickning Spirit, who was full of Grace and Truth, and of whom Man hath received Grace for Grace: To wit, a Talent, a Proportion ſuitable to his Want and Capacity, to Convince and Convert him, to Renew and Reſtore him from his great Lapſe unto God, his Bleſſed Maker, again. In ſhort, our Natural Rational 1698. Faculty is our Sight, but not our Light: That, by which we diſcern and judge what the Divine Light ſhews us, viz. Good from Evil, and Error from Truth. But as the Eye of the Body is the Senſible Faculty of ſeeing external Objects, through the Diſcovery that an External Light (as the Sun in the Firmament) makes to the Eye, but is not That Light it ſelf; ſo does the Rational Faculty of the Soul ſee Spiritual or Immaterial Objects, through the Illumination of the Light of Chriſt Within, but is by no Means, That Light it ſelf, any more than the Eye is the Sun; or John the Baptiſt, was our Bleſſed Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt, that was but Servant and Fore-runner of his Bleſſed Manifeſtation in the Fleſh.

As for the Biſhop's Innate Notions and Natural Conſcience, if by them he means Impreſſions or Principles, which are born and come with us into the World, viz. the Law of God in the Heart of Man, I muſt tell him, firſt, that this is not the Language of the Law and Teſtimony he refers us to in the ſame Paragraph: And next, that as the Work is not the Workman, ſo they are not properly the Light of Chriſt, but the Bleſſed Fruit and Effect of the Light of Chriſt, the Word-God in Man, which Shines in the Heart, and gives him the Knowledge of God, and of his Duty to Him. So that the Innate Notions, or Inward Knowledge we have of God, is from This True Light that lighteth every Man coming into the World, but is not that Light it ſelf. Juſt ſo the Biſhop's Natural Conſcience, muſt only mean a Capacity that Man has by Nature; that is, in his Creation, of making a Judgment of himſelf, his Duty, and Actions, according to the Judgment of God manifeſted to him by the Light of Chriſt Within. Not that ſuch a Capacity is that Light, but that it ſees or underſtands, by the Inſhining of the Divine Light, the Things that belong to Man's Duty and Peace.

Nor is it Conſcience illuminated, By the Preaching of the Goſpel, and the Operation of the Holy Ghoſt thereon, which is the laſt of the Biſhop's Conſtructions; but That very Principle of Life and Light, which illuminates the Conſcience, and was the very Spring and Force of the Apoſtolical Miniſtry, and of the Conviction and Converſion of their Hearers; and which opened their Hearts to receive the Goſpel when Preach'd unto them. In ſhort, this Excellent Principle is in Man, but not of Man, but of God: The Nature of it is to diſcover Sin, reprove for it, and lead out of it, all ſuch as Love and Obey the Convictions thereof. It is a Principle of Divine Life, that Quickens the Obedient Heart to Newneſs of Life: It Raiſes the Mind above the World to God, and Searches out and Reveals the Deep Things of God to the Humble and Waiting Soul. And be it known to the Biſhop, and all that with him profeſs Ignorance about what we mean by the Light of Chriſt Within Man, This is It I have been treating of; and I have writ, I bleſs Almighty GOD, my own Experience, the Taſte and Reliſh I have had of it's Excellency and Sufficiency, in the Courſe of far the greater and beſt Part of my Life.

But the Biſhop muſt excuſe me, if I ſay, I cannot but take it very ill at his Hands, to forbid us in his following Words, to pretend to give an Account of what we Believe, unleſs we can make him underſtand our Meaning: And becauſe he does not penetrate our Senſe, to call our Way of Wording that Bleſſed Principle of the Light of Chriſt in Man, a Perfect Banter. This to me is one of the ſevereſt Perſecutions, becauſe Spiritual Things, are only to be Spiritually diſcerned and underſtood. I would fain know how a Regenerate Man can poſſibly make a Carnal Man underſtand the New Birth? It is certainly the Gift of God to underſtand Divine Truths, as well as Rightly to Believe. So that ſuppoſing our Aſſertion of the Nature, Power, and Excellency of the Light of Chriſt in Man to be True, not to have Leave to ſay ſo, unleſs we could make every Man rightly take our Senſe and Meaning, Whether he be Spiritually Diſcerning or not, looks Antichriſtian as well as Unreaſonable. We ſpeak Wiſdom, ſays the Apoſtle, among them that are Perfect, 1 Cor. 7. 6. It ſeems others underſtood him not, muſt he therefore not have wrote of the Things of God? The very Preaching of the Goſpel was Fooliſhneſs to the Wiſelings of the Jews, and Greeks; they could make neither Head nor Tail of it, by their Way of judging of Truth: Muſt not the Goſpel therefore be Preach'd? When the Apoſtle Paul Preach'd to the Athenians, ſome of the Men of the Gown, the Philoſophers of that Time, oppoſed and deſpiſed him, ſaying, What will this Babbler ſay? But had they known what he meant, we cannot think they would have ſaid ſo to Him. Was the Apoſtle then, or the Athenians in Fault, that they did not underſtand Him? Or, was it Bantering as well as Babbling, becauſe he did not make them underſtand his Meaning; which is only the Work of the Holy Ghoſt to do? Who was it, I pray, that ſaid, The World by Wiſdom knew not God? And can we ſuppoſe any Thing elſe blinded the Scribes and Phariſees, and the High-Prieſt of the Jews, from diſcerning the Meſſiah when He came? For they wanted not Academical Learning, if that could have enlightned them; nor yet the Scriptures, but they Reſiſted the Holy Ghoſt, their only True Interpreter, and ſo ſtumbled and fell. Let the Biſhop alſo have a Care.

In the Second Chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, he will find that the Apoſtle ſpake the Wiſdom of God in a Myſtery, which the Princes of the World knew not, with all their Wiſdom: For the Things of God, ſays the Apoſtle, knoweth no Man, but the Spirit of God; by which thoſe Chriſtians knew thoſe Things that were freely given to them of God. Which Things alſo we ſpeak, ſays He, not in the Words which Man's Wiſdom teacheth, but which the Holy Ghoſt teacheth, comparing Spiritual Things with Spiritual. But the Natural Man receiveth not the Things of the Spirit of God, for they are fooliſhneſs unto him: Neither can he know them, becauſe they are Spiritually diſcerned. Now, according to the Biſhop's Treatment of us, the Apoſtle ought not to have writ of Faith and Salvation, unleſs he could have made all that read his Writings underſtand his Meaning. And it muſt be a perfect Banter, to talk of ſpeaking Wiſdom in a Myſtery, and not in the Terms that Man's Wiſdom teacheth.

But the Lord Jeſus Chriſt was of another Mind, when he ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of Heaven and Earth, becauſe thou haſt hid theſe Things (the Truths of the Kingdom) from the Wiſe and Prudent, and Revealed them unto Babes: Even ſo, Father, for ſo it ſeemed Good in thy Sight. It is hence, beyond all Diſpute, that God hideth the Myſteries of his Kingdom from the Wiſdom of Man, while Simplicity and Sincerity fail not to Reach and Underſtand them. Here it was that poor Nicodemus was abſolutely at a Loſs for Chriſt's Meaning, when Chriſt ſaid, Unleſs a Man be Born again, he can in no wiſe enter the Kingdom of God, John 3. Inſomuch as he aſked Chriſt, upon his Diſcourſe of the New Birth, How can theſe Things be? At which Chriſt ſeems to admire, in a Sort of Reproof upon Nicodemus, Art thou a Maſter of Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe Things? As much as to ſay, Art thou, a Man of thy Station in the Church of God, Ignorant in the Way to Heaven? Whoever reads that notable Interview between Chriſt and Nicodemus, will find that Chriſt reſolves the Matter into Two Births, That which is born of the Fleſh, and that which is Born of the Spirit, and theſe are Contrary: And therefore no Wonder if they differ in their Underſtanding of the Holy Scriptures, being a Declaration of the Faith and Experience, as well as Doctrine and Practice of the Servants of God that were Enlightned and Born of the Holy Ghoſt. Nor is this all; for they that are Born of the Fleſh, Perſecute them that are Born after the Spirit: So that when they can no longer commit Violence upon their Perſons and Eſtates, they will Perſecute them with their Tongues and Pens: They are Hereticks, Blaſphemers, Illiterate and Ignorant, yet Preſumptuous; Enemies to Cæſar, and Diſobedient to Government, if they will not give God's Due unto Man, viz. Conſcience. And if they chuſe to deliver themſelves in Scripture Stile, and ſpeak earneſtly of the Neceſſity of the Work of the Spirit of God, in order to an Experimental and Saving Knowledge of the Truth, declared in Holy Scripture; and that Chriſt's Miniſters are made by the Holy Ghoſt, and not by Human Learning; and that the Worſhip, which is acceptable to God, muſt be in the Spirit and in the Truth; that is, with Clean Hearts and Right Spirits, Kindled and Inflamed with the Holy Spirit of God: They muſt be called Enthuſiaſts, Unintelligible, Men of Cant and Banter. And here I leave the Biſhop, upon this Paragraph, deſiring him to Conſider, whether his Knowledge of God the Father, and Jeſus Chriſt, whom rightly to know, is Life Eternal, John 17. be by the Revelation of the Son of God in his own Soul, ſince Chriſt himſelf Teacheth and Affirmeth, that no Man knows the Father but the Son, and He to whom the Son Reveals Him: I ſhould be glad to ſee the Biſhop's Evidence for this Knowledge. For in the Concluſion of this Paragraph, he turns us to the Scriptures, who, in the Beginning of it, makes us Unintelligible and Banterers in Religion, for Expreſſing Ours in the Terms of It; which may well merit the Biſhop's Serious Reflection.

His Ninth Paragraph refers to our Eighth Article, as he calls it, of which he cites theſe Eight Words only, Worſhip, under the Goſpel, is Inward and Spiritual; upon which, he ſays, If you mean, that Outward Worſhip ought to be performed with Inward and Spiritual Worſhip, 'tis what we Preach, Preſs, and Practice; but if (as it would ſeem) you mean that all the Worſhip, God now requires, is from the Inward Man, or from the Spirit; this is abominably falſe; for our Bodies are God's 1698. Handy-work, and God, by the Apoſtle, Commands, Glorify God in your Body, and in your Spirit, which are God's. Not to tell you, that you your ſelves, now a-days, perform ſomewhat of Bodily Worſhip. Indeed we do, and Ever did, and Ever ſhall, I hope, while we have Bodies to Worſhip God in. We are ſo far from denying the Body what Share is due to it, that with the Apoſtle, 1 Cor. 6. 19. we ſay, What, know ye not that your Bodies are the Temples of the Holy Ghoſt, which is in you, which ye have of God, and you are not your own? Of which I would have the Biſhop well Conſider: For, if our very Bodies are under the Influence of the Holy Ghoſt, how much more reaſonable is it to believe, that It dwells in our Souls, and that our Hearts muſt be prepared, and animated by the Holy Spirit, in all our Devotion towards God. But two Things I muſt Remark to the Biſhop, Firſt, That we did not give him the leaſt Occaſion to ſuſpect we deny'd Bodily Worſhip, as appears by the Goſpel-Truth now in Queſtion: For 'tis plain there, by theſe Words, Worſhip in this Day is Inward and Spiritual, That we only diſtinguiſh'd between Goſpel Worſhip, and the Ceremonial, and Pompous Worſhip of the Law; and that by Spiritual Worſhip, we underſtand Praying, Praiſing, and Preaching by the Preparation and Sanctification of the Spirit of God; which the Biſhop does not, and, I hope, dares not, Deny: Yet Unkindly, and I think Unjuſtly, brings in His as it would ſeem, to make us by an Uncharitable Innuendo look to his Reader, as if we denied Bodily Worſhip. And yet, to avoid ſo hard a Chapter, as Maintaining this Aſperſion would prove to the Biſhop, he is forced to confeſs that now a-days we perform ſomewhat of Bodily Worſhip; as if we did not perform any formerly, and but a little now: Which ſhews not that Candour, that his Character owes us, and but too plainly tells every Impartial Reader, how much more Mind he has that we ſhould be in the Wrong than in the Right. I muſt Confeſs we have leſs Pomp and Gaudineſs in our Worſhip, as well as in our Cloaths, than is the Cuſtom of ſome other Churches, and think it our Happineſs, that we are freed from ſuch an Unprofitable as well as Unſuitable Incumbrance. Whatever It be, 'tis ſuch as we believe God by his Holy Spirit hath led us into: And tho' it be not ſo Entertaining to thoſe who are governed more by their outward Senſes than their Souls, yet, I hope it will be allowed us to be Grave, Solemn, and Fervent.

The other Remark I make upon the Biſhop's Exceptions is this, That the Spiritual Worſhip he there allows of, ſeems to be but the Worſhip of Man's Spirit, and not of the Spirit of God, working upon the Spirit of Man. I would not Imitate him, leſt I ſhould be Uncharitable too: For if my Reader can make more of it, he has my Conſent; but that ſeems to me to be the Biſhop's Interpretation upon Chriſt's Words, cited by us, on this Occaſion, viz. God will be Worſhipped in Spirit and in Truth: Though there is a Truth in that alſo, yet this not being ſo peculiar to the Goſpel-Diſpenſation, could not be the Extent of Chriſt's Words, whoſe Drift certainly was, to draw Men's Minds to a more Inward and Spiritual Worſhip: Not only to have leſs Ceremony than was Practis'd among the Jews, but to feel more of the Power and Spirit of God in our Adoration and Praiſes, than belonged to the Former Diſpenſation; and, with which, I heartily wiſh the Biſhop a better Acquaintance. Upon the whole Matter, I am apt to think my Reader believes with me, he might as well have ſpared his Pains upon us, about the firſt Part of this Goſpel-Truth, as he is Silent of the latter, viz. That we may Preach in Power as well as Words, and as God Promiſed, and Chriſt Ordained, without Money and without Price.

The Biſhop, in his Tenth Paragraph, is pleaſed to Endeavour to leſſen the Authority and Credit of our Ninth Goſpel-Truth, relating to the vain Faſhions and Cuſtoms of the World. His Words are theſe: You tell us of denying all the vain Cuſtoms and Faſhions of the World, as alſo Exceſs in all Things; I know of no Sort of Chriſtians who teach otherwiſe: I wiſh I knew none (even of your Selves) that practis'd otherwiſe; it is one Part of our Catechiſm we teach our Children. He firſt Concurs with our Doctrine, for he ſays, he knows none that Preaches otherwiſe; and that they do the like in their Catechiſm. So far, then, he allows us to be ſound. But he wiſhes he knew none (even of Us) that Practice otherwiſe. This is a Sort of Charge, and being not prov'd, looks like a Calumny. Some, perhaps, do not walk quite ſo ſtrictly as becomes them, to their Profeſſion; but are they own'd by us therein? Or Indulged it ſelf? If not, what are we to Conclude but that the Biſhop's Inſinuation is to Ballance Accounts with us for the Failures of his own People? But, pray are our Exceſſes equal, or the Numbers, that in proportion do tranſgreſs? I would not have him Comfort himſelf with his Uncharitableneſs to his honeſt and friendly Neighbours: As it will not excuſe his leſs exact Friends, that any of ours live larger than they profeſs, ſo it cannot juſtly affect our Body, where ſo few are faulty, when 'tis ſo well known that ſuch are ſure to meet with due Reproof.

But he adds, that There are many Innocent and Laudable Cuſtoms; We call Vain: This is all in a Heap, and a Reflection by Wholeſale. I can truly tell him, I know of none; and if he had been more particular, ſo would I too: Perhaps he thought Generals beſt to make his Reflection Safe: But if it were my Place to be Plaintiff, I could treat the Biſhop with a large Catalogue of very Offenſive Cuſtoms, that would concern him to think upon. However, he is pleaſed to be particular upon us in one of them, which almoſt turns his Stomach, he ſays, to think of, viz. Would it not make a Man's Stomach turn, to hear one forbear, in Point of Conſcience, ſaying, [you] to a ſingle Perſon, becauſe it is improper; and at the ſame Time, while he is talking to his Superior, becauſe Thou doſt ſounds a little Rudely, to ſoften the Thou, and ſay Thee doeſt, which is commonly your People's Practice. It is pity the Biſhop could find nothing elſe to obſerve from us, that might have better edified us and his Readers: Yet if this be that, among the Laudable Cuſtoms which we call Vain, which is moſt Offenſive to his Stomach, it ſhews him to have a very weak one. However, a weak Stomach is better than a weak Head, and ſuch an one I ſhould take mine to be, if my Inſtances were no more to the Purpoſe and my Reader's Inſtruction.

But I have ſomewhat to ſay to the Biſhop, before I leave him, upon the Old Topick of Sincerity and Charity, in this Reflection, as I have had in moſt of the other, viz. That he makes the Ground of our Conſcientiouſneſs, about the ſaying of You to a ſingle Perſon, to be only Propriety of Speech; which he (I was going to ſay) in his Conſcience muſt know is not ſo: But that the true Reaſon of it is, firſt, That it is the Language of the Scriptures of Truth; and next, That the Original of You, to a ſingle Perſon, was Pride and Flattery, being a Plural Honour to a Single Perſon; given firſt to Potentates, and then gradually to all Subordinate Ranks of People. In Ancient and Unmixt Tongues, Thou to a Single Perſon is kept ſtill, as alſo among the Common People of the preſent Languages, and particularly in that Kingdom where he is a Biſhop. I refer him to a Book, entituled, No Croſs no Crown, where he will find other Reaſons for our Tenderneſs in that Matter than he alledges, or we have Room for here; though the Biſhop confines us to Propriety, as the only Reaſon of our Practice, that he might the better Laſh us with the Impropriety of Thee for Thou; which yet he might have ſpared, ſince nothing is more common with all People, than to take the like Freedom in Speech, in Caſes as well as Tenſes; not excepting the Learned themſelves. But be it ſo, we keep Numbers, and intend not clipping of Caſes, and that's Our Point, though not the Biſhop's it ſeems; which it ſhould have been, would he have been juſt to us upon the Queſtion. As for the Levity and Scorn, with which he is pleaſed to treat us upon this Head, I ſhall only ſay, it unbecame him, and Confirms us more than it Expoſes us, whatever it does Him.

But I confeſs, I am ſurpriz'd, to find a Man of his Character, and Pretenſions, propoſe ſo looſe a Queſtion as that with which he cloſes this Paragraph, viz. Will you ever be able to prove, the Primitive Chriſtians uſed a Dialect or Dreſs, different from others of their Nation or Quality, and placed Religion in it? Does not Chriſt require Saluting thoſe that Salute not us? And no Doubt, He, and his Apoſtles Salutations were in the Common Form. Doubtleſs, we are able, moſt eaſily and fully: And 'tis admirable to conceive how he could be ignorant of theſe Proofs, who ought to be ſo well read in Scripture and Antiquity. I beſeech you therefore, Brethren, ſays the Apoſtle, by the Mercies of God, that you preſent your Bodies a Living Sacrifice, Holy, Acceptable unto God, which is your Reaſonable Service: And be not Conformed to this World, but be ye Transformed by the Renewing of your Minds, Rom. 12. 1, 2. Again, the Apoſtle Peter, Chap. 1. 13, 14. Exhorts the Believers, to Gird up the Loins of their Minds, and be Sober, as Obedient Children, not Faſhioning themſelves, according to the former Luſts in their Ignorance; which was the Cuſtom of their Country. And Chap. 3. 3, 4. Whoſe Adorning let it not be that of Plaiting the Hair, and of Wearing of Gold, or of Putting on of Apparel: But let it be the Hidden Man of the Heart, in that which is not Corruptible, even the Ornament of a Meek and Quiet Spirit, which is, in the Sight of God, of great Price. Thus the Apoſtolical Counſel to the Churches. But for all this, the Biſhop 1698. ſhop of Cork cannot tell how to think We are able to prove, that the Primitive Chriſtians differed in their Dreſs, from other People in their Country and Quality. Nor was this only the Strictneſs of that Time; for the ſame Apoſtle adds, Verſe 4, as an Argument to Enforce his Advice; for, After this Manner, ſays he, in the Old Time, the Holy Women alſo, who truſted in God, Adorned themſelves. But can a Man of his Letters, really be at a Loſs for a Proof of the Singularity of Primitive Chriſtians, in Dreſs, Speech and Behaviour? Or is it to try whether we have any to reſolve his Queſtion? Or taking our Illiterature for Granted, that he puts upon us? I beſeech him to Converſe with Ouzelius upon Minutius Fælix, and he will tell him that the firſt Chriſtians were taxed, and deſpiſed for Ill-bred in Manners, Unpoliſh'd in Speech, Unfaſhionable in Behaviour; in fine, Ruſticks and Clowns: As the Chriſtians Ironically return'd their Scorners the Stile of Well-bred and Eloquent. This, and much more, he cites out of Arnobius, Lactantius, Theodoret, &c. and Jerome writing to Celantia and Demetias, Noble Women of that Time, ſets them a Singular Form of Life from that of the People of their Quality: And Paulinus Biſhop of Nola, was ſo far from pleading for Chriſtians Temporizing with the People of their own Nation, or Quality, according to the Biſhop of Cork, that he ſharply reproves Sulpitius Severus for It, in a Letter to him; as the Learned Caſoubon, in his Diſcourſe of Uſe and Cuſtoms, obſerves. If the Biſhop would look into the Conſtitutions, that go under the Name of Clemens Romanus, with Tertullian, Gregory Naz. Clemens Alexandrinus, Auſtin, Gregory the Great, and other Ancients, he would perceive the Care and Zeal of thoſe Eminent Men to ſuppreſs the Educations and Cuſtoms of the Gentiles, and to encourage and recommend the Simplicity and Moderation of the Manners and Behaviour of the firſt Chriſtians, which Machiavel, in his 2d Book of Diſputations, takes Notice of, and is none of the leaſt Proofs to our Point.

And to finiſh my Authorities, paſſing by Petrus Belonius, Gratian, Cardan, Luther, &c. I muſt recommend to the Biſhop the Hiſtory of the Waldenſes, (an Early People, if not Succeſſive from the Primitive Times) written by one Perrin, more eſpecially concerning their Faith, Worſhip, and Diſcipline; and there he may, if he pleaſe, obſerve the Simplicity, Plainneſs and Diſtinction of that People from the Cuſtoms of the Countries they lived in, and thoſe that have the Name of Reformed Ones now.

But he tells us, Chriſt and his Apoſtles had Salutations; and I tell him, ſo have We. But he will have it that Chriſt and his Apoſtles Saluted after the Faſhion of the Country they were in; which is ſooner ſaid than prov'd. For Chriſt aſk'd the Jews, How can you believe that receive Honour one of another, and ſeek not the Honour that cometh from God Only? Now this certainly muſt be Unlawful to Give or Receive, which hinders true Faith. And what was this Honour, but Salutations after the Faſhions of the Times? As the Text ſhews, Matth. 23. and for Calling, and being Called of Men Rabbi, Chriſt was ſo far from Commanding, or Imitating them in ſuch Things, that He expreſſly forbids It. But the Meaning of Chriſt's Saying, Matth. 5. And if ye Salute Your Brethren only, what do ye more than Others? Do not even the Publicans ſo? Is this; That in all Acts of Love, Mercy and Goodneſs, they were to Exceed the Practice of that Time: They were to take more Notice of, and to look more kindly and friendly upon All Men. But in another Senſe, He that bid them Salute Enemies as well as Friends, alſo forbids his Diſciples to Salute any Man, or call any Man Rabbi or Maſter; for that One was their Lord and Maſter, and they were all Brethren, Matth. 23. 6, 7, 8. and Luke 10. 4. And between ſuch Relations Worldly Honours were of no Uſe, as well as of no Value. And did a Primitive Spirit Prevail in thoſe that ſo much pretend to be the Succeſſors of the Apoſtles, we ſhould ſee them more Exemplary in Self-denyal and Holineſs; Encouraging, and not Undervaluing and Brow-beating the Serious and Conſcientious. But Trees are known by their Fruit; for Grapes are not gathered of Thorns, nor Figs of Thiſtles.

In the mean Time, if my Reader pleaſe to peruſe the Ninth and Tenth Chapters of that Book, entituled, No Croſs, No Crown, he will, I hope, be ſatisfied, that we are for Honour, Reſpect and Civility, according to Scripture; tho' Non-conformiſts to the Empty and Troubleſome Ceremonies of the Times, left by Us, not of Rudeneſs, but Conviction; and forborn of Duty, and no otherwiſe of Choice. For, Humanly Speaking, that Contradiction to Cuſtom cannot be pleaſant to us. I have detained my Reader longer upon this Head than I expected, or perhaps he deſired: I ſhall therefore proceed to the Biſhop's next Paragraph, which contains his Exceptions to our Tenth Goſpel-Truth about Baptiſm and the Supper, and the laſt he has to take Notice of, the Eleventh about Government, being by him already granted in the Beginning of his Paper.

He begins thus: In your Tenth Article you believe a Spiritual Baptiſm, and a Spiritual Supper and Communion, but acknowledge, you diſuſe the outward Signs, by us commonly called Sacraments: Now did not Chriſt command Water-Baptiſm? Go ye and Baptize all Nations, Matth. 28. 19, 20.

He goes on, The Baptiſm here commanded was Water-Baptiſm: His Reaſons are, firſt, That Baptizing with the Spirit was God's Work, not the Apoſtles. 2dly, Primitive Practice, Acts 10. 47, 48. in Cornelius's Caſe; Who can forbid Water? But this is alſo gratis dictum: For the firſt Reaſon is no Reaſon, ſince it is not true: And the ſecond ſeems to me Defective and Short. I am very ſenſible of the Diſadvantage I am under, and that I touch a tender Place, and what I ſay upon this Head, as alſo anon upon the Supper, will be againſt Wind and Tide with the Generality. But, as I hope I ſhall expreſs my ſelf Reverently as well as Plainly, upon this Occaſion, ſo I beſeech my Reader, for His Own Sake as well as Ours, not to Prejudge us; as I am ſure he will not, if he be a Searcher after Truth, and that I charitably ſuppoſe of him.

I ſay then, the Biſhop's firſt Reaſon is not true; for God, by the Apoſtles, did Baptize Believers with the Holy Ghoſt. It fell upon them, through the Powerful Preaching of the Word: Thus, Acts 10. 44. While Peter yet ſpake theſe Words, the Holy Ghoſt fell on all them which heard the Word. By which, it is evident that Peter, in that Sermon, was the Miniſter of the Spiritual Baptiſm to Cornelius and his Company.

And Peter gives this Account to thoſe of the Circumciſion at Jeruſalem, Acts 11. 15. And as I began to ſpeak, the Holy Spirit fell on them as on us, at the Beginning: Then remembred I the Word of the Lord, how that he ſaid, John indeed Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Spirit. So that Peter evidently declares the Gift of the Spirit by the Miniſtry of the Goſpel, to be the Baptiſm of Chriſt, or the Baptiſm of the Holy Spirit and Fire, which Chriſt promiſed at his Aſcenſion into Heaven.

But the Apoſtle Paul puts this Matter beyond all Doubt, in his Excellent Account he gives of his Converſion and Commiſſion to King Agrippa, Acts 26. where my Reader will find theſe Words dropping from the Mouth of the Lord Jeſus to Saul; Delivering thee from the People, and from the Gentiles, to whom now I ſend thee, to open their Eyes, and to turn them from Darkneſs to Light, and from the Power of Satan unto God, that they may receive Forgiveneſs of Sins, and an Inheritance among them which are Sanctified through Faith that is in Me, Verſe 17, 18. Now if this could be done without the Holy Ghoſt, let my Reader Judge. 'Twas with the Holy Ghoſt that Peter's Hearers were Prick'd to the Heart, and fitted to receive more of it: And it was by the ſame Holy Ghoſt that Paul's Hearers had the Eyes of their Minds opened, to ſee the Myſteries of God's Kingdom, and by which they were Converted from Darkneſs to Light, that they might receive the Forgiveneſs of their Sins, and Inheritance among them which are Sanctified. So that the very End and Benefit of the Apoſtolical Miniſtry was Converting, that is, Baptizing them into Chriſtianity; in the Nature, Power and Life of It, by the Holy Ghoſt.

Now, for the Biſhop's Second Reaſon, viz. Practice: I ſay it is granted that Water-Baptiſm having got Place among them by John's Miniſtry, the Fore-runner, it held after Chriſt's Coming; but that was Ex Gratiâ, and of Condeſcenſion, not of Commiſſion; for that properly ceaſes when his Miniſtration begins, of which John's was but the Fore-runner. For Moſes and the Prophets were 'till John, and John 'till Chriſt. And this, John, the Water-Baptiſt, tells us, Matth. 3. 11. I indeed Baptize you with Water unto Repentance, but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, He ſhall Baptize you with the Holy Ghoſt and with Fire, ſee Mark 1. 8. Luke 3. 16. Here's a different Baptiſm and Baptizer, the Servant and the Maſter, the Water and the Holy Ghoſt. One Tranſient, the Other Permanent: One the End of the Jewiſh, and the Other the Beginning of the Goſpel Diſpenſation. Wherefore, ſays our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, The leaſt in the Kingdom of Heaven is Greater than John, Matth. 11. 11. Why, is not John in Heaven? No Doubt of it at all, and a Glorious Saint too: But the Leaſt in Chriſt's Diſpenſation, viz. The Kingdom of God in the Soul, the Work of Chriſt, the Baptizer with the Holy Ghoſt and Fire, is Greater than John, as to the Nature of his Adminiſtration. See John 1698. 3. 30, 31. He muſt Increaſe, but I muſt Decreaſe. What! John Decreaſe, or his Miniſtry? His Miniſtration certainly, which he calls Earthly in Compariſon of Chriſt's. So that the Baptiſt, in his Watery Diſpenſation, did but Fore-run Chriſt, in Reference to the Kingdom that he was to ſet up in Men. He pointed to Chriſt, and ſhewed what Chriſt was to do, viz. to Waſh, Fan, and Throughly Purge his Floor; that is, His People, and Sanctifie them throughout, by his Spiritual Baptiſm, according to the Apoſtle, in Body, Soul and Spirit; 1 Theſſ. 5. 23. So that in ſhort, Practice, Properly, can be no Inſtitution, where the Thing Practiſed has no Commiſſion, which I ſuppoſe the Biſhop will not think fit to deny: But, ſays he, It has a Commiſſion, Matth. 28. 19. which is, under Favour, but his Say-ſo; and that I think it is no more, I do with all Humility and Submiſſion, ſay, Firſt, I cannot tell how to reconcile it to Good Senſe, or Common Uſage, in Sacred or Civil Matters, that any thing ſhould be in Force by a Commiſſion that is not ſo much as once named in the Commiſſion. I ſay, to me, it does not appear Congruous any more than Cogent, or obliging. And this is the Cauſe in Hand: For there is not a Word of Water in the Text alledged for Water; nor yet in the Context. And unleſs there were no other Baptiſm than that of Water, as there are ſeveral, it muſt at leaſt be allowed to be a Queſtion, what Baptiſm Chriſt meant in that Commiſſion, when he ſaid, Go ye therefore and Teach all Nations, Baptizing them in the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt.

But it may be returned upon me; nor does the Text ſay it is the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, and ſo the Biſhop is upon equal Terms with me. Grant it, that the Word Holy Ghoſt is not literally joyned to Baptizing, any more than the Word Water in that Part: But if I am able to ſhew that the Thing is there, and that the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt was the Subject of Chriſt's Diſcourſe, when he gave that Commiſſion at his Farewel, I preſume it will be granted me, that Chriſt intended a Spiritual, and not a Water Baptiſm; and that is what I ſhall do, I hope, with much Clearneſs. Firſt the Fact, and then my Arguments. Matthew, the Evangeliſt, large in his Hiſtory upon other Points, ſeems ſhort and abrupt in the Context of this Commiſſion, as the Reader may obſerve. And as it is uſual for one Evangeliſt to explain another, which was the great Wiſdom, as well as Goodneſs of God, that thoſe Chriſtian Memorials might come with leſs Suſpicion to the World of any Human Contrivance; So Luke ſupplies the Shortneſs of the other Evangeliſt in his Context to this Commiſſion. Luke 24. 45 to 50, particularly the 47, 48, 49, Verſes. And that Repentance and Remiſſion of Sins ſhould be Preached in his Name, among all Nations, beginning at Jeruſalem. And ye are Witneſſes of theſe Things. And behold I ſend the Promiſe of my Father upon you: But tarry ye in the City of Jeruſalem until ye be endued with Power from on High. Where, as it is plain that this Evangeliſt in his Account of Chriſt's Commiſſion, to wit, the Work Chriſt gave his Diſciples to do, Names no Baptizing at all, though that which it Implies, in my Senſe of the Word, is there, viz. The Promiſe of the Father, which is the Power from on High They were to tarry at Jeruſalem for. So is there not one Word of Water here mentioned, to induce us to think that Chriſt intended to give it any Place in his Commiſſion. In ſhort, it appears that the Diſciples were to be Qualified before they were to go forth as His Witneſſes, and that this Qualification is the Promiſe of the Father, that he would quickly ſend them. Now I muſt deſire my Reader to turn to the Acts of this Evangeliſt, Chap. 1. 4, 5. where he farther opens the Manner and Matter of Chriſt's Diſcourſe, and Farewel to his Diſciples: And (Chriſt) being Aſſembled with them, commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but Wait for the Promiſe of the Father, which, ſaith He, ye have learnt of me: For, John truly Baptized with Water, but ye ſhall be Baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many Days hence. It can be, methinks, no longer a Doubt what Baptiſm it is that Chriſt's Words, Matth. 28. 19. refers to, ſince we ſee not only that Chriſt diſtinguiſhes between John's Baptiſm and His Own, and between Water and Holy Ghoſt; but alſo he aſſigns Water-Baptiſm to John, as his Baptiſm, and not Chriſt's, and thereby declares the Holy Ghoſt to be his own Baptiſm, and none of John's, and which yet is no more than what John had ſaid before.

So that comparing both Texts together, Matth. 28. 19. and Acts 1. 4, 5, we may ſee, if we pleaſe, that the Commiſſion in the one, is to be explained by the Qualifications in the other, which was omitted by the firſt Evangeliſt. There They are bid to Go, here They are bid to Stay: That is to ſay, Stay, before you Go, and receive your Qualifications before you go to Qualify, viz. the Promiſe of the Father; that is, the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt, which is followed by the Power from on High, Verſe 8. And indeed, had we not this expreſs Force on our Side from the Text it ſelf, the Word Therefore, in the Commiſſion, (referring plainly to the foregoing Verſe, as the Reaſon of what follows) juſtifies our Senſe. For whereas the Biſhop has objected againſt our Aſſertion, that it muſt not be a Spiritual Baptiſm, becauſe that was the Work of God, and not of the Apoſtles: It is plain that our Lord takes off the Force of his Exception, ſince the Reaſon why he bid them Go, &c. is, becauſe, ſays he, all Power in Heaven and in Earth is given unto me. Verſe 18, as much as if he had ſaid, Go, do all that I have ſaid unto you, and be not Doubting or Fearful, about the Performance of It, for All Power in Heaven and Earth is given unto me that bid you Go, and Lo I am with you always, even unto the End of the World, Which need not have been ſaid, as an Encouragement to them, in Reference to Water-Baptiſm, ſince that was practiſed by them, as well as by John's Diſciples, long before.

Nor is this all; for the very Text, duly conſidered, will not have It to be Water, ſince that could Baptize none Into the Name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghoſt, and ſo the Biſhop knows the Greek Text runs, εἰς τὸ ὄνομα. For they that are Baptized Into the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, muſt be Baptized with the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt. Since it is to become their Likeneſs, and bear their Image, which is Holineſs. And had not the Apoſtles underſtood their Commiſſion as I render it, when they had Baptized with Water they would certainly have uſed the Terms that bore the Force of their Commiſſion, viz. In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt; of which there is not one Inſtance in all the Scripture.

But that which farther ſhews that Water cannot be underſtood to be meant in the Apoſtolical Commiſſion, is, that one of the Greateſt of the Apoſtles, he that came behind (and was added to, by) none of them, denies It, 1 Cor. 1. 27. to be any Part of his Commiſſion; for, ſays he, Chriſt ſent me not to Baptize but to Preach the Goſpel: And thanks God for that Reaſon, in the foregoing Verſes, that he had Baptized ſo few: Which to be ſure he ought not to have done; but on the Contrary, to have been ſorry he had Baptized no more, had Water-Baptiſm been Part of the Apoſtolical Commiſſion, Matth. 28. 19. Again, this Eminent Apoſtle, the Great Grand-father [not to ſay God-Father] of Gentile-Chriſtians, delivered to them for Doctrine, Eph. 4. 5. that there was but One Lord, One Faith, and One Baptiſm. And if ſo, That muſt be the Baptiſm of Fire and of the Holy Ghoſt, which is Chriſt's Baptiſm, and Proper to the Goſpel-Diſpenſation. Now, could any other make a Man a True Chriſtian, or a Child of God then? Nor can any be ſo now without It. That Baptiſm therefore, without which a Man cannot be a True Jew, or Chriſtian, or of the Circumciſion made without Hands, that Worſhip God in the Spirit, and hath no Confidence in the Fleſh, muſt needs be the One Baptiſm; but ſuch is the Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt: Therefore the Spiritual Baptiſm is the Apoſtle's One Baptiſm, Rom. 2. 28, 29. Phil. 3. 3. Again; the One Baptiſm muſt be Chriſt's Baptiſm, but Chriſt's is the Baptiſm of the Spirit, therefore That, and not Water-Baptiſm, muſt be the One Baptiſm that's in Force, according to the Apoſtle. As John was the Fore-runner of Chriſt, ſo was Water, of the Holy Ghoſt: But that which Foreruns, in Nature Ceaſes, and that which ſucceeds, of Courſe Remains: Therefore the Baptiſm of the Spirit, is the One Needful, and Permanent Baptiſm.

Yet farther; If it be Goſpel, That he is not a Jew that is one Outward, nor that Circumciſion that is Outward in the Fleſh; but that he is a Jew that is one Inward, and that is Circumciſion that is of the Heart, in the Spirit, and not in the Letter; whoſe Praiſe is not of Men, but of God, as Rom. 2. 28, 29. Then unanſwerably, He is not a Chriſtian that is one Outward, nor is that Baptiſm that is of the Fleſh: But he is a Chriſtian that is one Inwardly, and that is Baptiſm that is of the Heart, in the Spirit; whoſe Praiſe is not of Men but of God. For indeed in all Ages Men cry him down, as a Slighter of God's Ordinances; but his Praiſe, however, is of God, let Men ſay what they will; and this is the Inward Chriſtian's Comfort, in all Undervaluings and Reflections he meets with from Outſide Chriſtians. For it's not to be thought that the Apoſtle meant or deſigned to undervalue one Obſervation, as that of Circumciſion, becauſe it is Outward, and ſet up another Outward Obſervation inſtead of it, viz. Water-Baptiſm.

Again, If in Chriſt Jeſus, neither Circumciſion availeth any Thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but a New Creature; as ſaith the ſame Apoſtle, Gal. 6. 15. Then by the ſame Reaſon, neither being baptized with Water availeth any Thing, nor being not baptized with Water, but a New Creature. I will repeat the Apoſtle's Diſcourſe at large upon this Subject, in the ſame Chapter, becauſe it is very Inſtructing, and ſeems Deciſive in this Caſe; As many, ſays he, as deſire to make a fair Shew in the Fleſh, they conſtrain you to be Circumciſed; only leſt they ſhould ſuffer Perſecution for the Croſs of Chriſt. It ſeems they were Outſide People, that laid Streſs upon Outſide Things; or ſomething elſe inſtead of the Croſs of Chriſt; for they Temporized in this Matter, to ſhun the Shame and Perſecution that then attended the Chriſtians Croſs: Which ſtood partly in laying down of outward Obſervations; and which they that deſire to make a fair Shew in the Fleſh ſtand moſt for. But the Apoſtle goes on; For (ſays he) neither they themſelves who are Circumciſed keep the Law, but deſire to have you Circumciſed, that they may Glory in your Fleſh. They were not exact in the other Parts of the Law, it ſeems, as ſtrict as they ſeemed to be for this Sacramental Practice, which is the Caſe of too many now: Yet they preſt it, that they might glory and value themſelves upon gaining others to be conformable to them, whether to excuſe their Compliance with Cuſtom, that they might avoid Perſecution, or out of Love to Ceremonial Religion.

But, ſays that clear-ſighted and plain-dealing Apoſtle, God forbid that I ſhould Glory, ſave in the Croſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, whereby the World is Crucified unto me, and I unto the World. If he rejoyced in nothing but in the Croſs of Chriſt, then in no other Elementary Rite, Service or Ordinance, any more than in Circumciſion.

But he proceeds: For in Chriſt Jeſus, neither Circumciſion availeth any Thing, nor Uncircumciſion, but a New Creature. That is to ſay, for according to Chriſt Jeſus, or in the Religion of Chriſt Jeſus, neither Circumciſion nor Uncircumciſion availeth, but a New Creature, a Regenerate Soul; One born again by the Spirit of God: For the Apoſtle, in theſe Excellent Words, not only ſtrikes at Circumciſion, but all Outward and Elementary Obſervations: Neither This, nor That Outward Thing availeth in the Chriſtian Religion, or according to Chriſt Jeſus, but a New Creature: He does not ſay, but Water-Baptiſm, as ſome would have it, who tell us that It ſucceeds Circumciſion by Divine Inſtitution, by no Means: But that which availeth with Chriſt, and in the Religion of Chriſt Jeſus, is a New Creature, a New Man, one Changed, Regenerated, or Born again by the Word and Baptiſm of the Holy Ghoſt. And, ſays the Apoſtle, (to confirm them in this Doctrine of Inward Circumciſion, that is of the Heart, in the Spirit; which is the ſame Thing with the Baptiſm of the Spirit) As many as walk according to this Rule, Peace ſhall be upon them. So that We, the poor deſpiſed Quakers, take Comfort in this Apoſtolical Benediction, and can ſay, to God's Glory, his Peace has been upon us in our Belief and Confeſſion of his Bleſſed Doctrine of the New Creature. It is what we have Aimed at, and has been the Great Drift of our Teſtimony ſince we were a People; and in order to it, we have directed all to the Gift of God's Grace in themſelves, that by believing in it, and reſigning up their Wills and Affections, and whole Man to the Teaching and Conduct of it, they may be leavened and ſanctified by it, throughout; by which the State of the New Creature, which is Chriſtianity indeed, will be Experienced, though it was and is a Myſtery to the World.

As for the Apoſtle Peter's Queſtion, Acts 10. 48. Can any Man forbid Water, that theſe ſhould not be Baptized, which have received the Holy Ghoſt as well as we? It imports, with Submiſſion, no more than this; That Peter well knowing the Narrowneſs of his Country-Men's Spirits, was Cautious leſt his Latitude ſhould diſtaſte them: For the Gentiles being Unholineſs to the Jews, and even Peter himſelf without a Viſion from God, too narrow Spirited for the Convictions and Devotion of that Excellent Centurion, Cornelius, it behoved him to ask if any Body had any Thing to ſay, Why they might not be Baptized as well as the Jews, being Proſelytes to the Chriſtian Profeſſion? In all which he ſeems more concerned to ſave his Own Credit, than to recommend, or eſtabliſh that of Water-Baptiſm. As if he had ſaid, Why ſhould this Cuſtom be forbidden to the Gentiles more than the Jews? But this will not warrant the Practice in General, becauſe Practice is No Inſtitution, and that there appears no Command to make it one. So that asking who can forbid what was not commanded, ſtrengthens his Queſtion, inſtead of weakening it, ſince what was done of Condeſcenſion, could not have been forbid upon Authority. There needed not ſo much Care or Strictneſs in the Matter. And indeed, the Apoſtles themſelves ſeem not to have been ſo clear about the aboliſhing of the Jewiſh Obſervations, as appears by the Want Peter had of a Viſion, his own Apprehenſion of the Straightneſs of his Brethren, and their calling him to Account for what he had done, as may be ſeen in the ſame Chapter.

But I confeſs I cannot ſee why the Biſhop ſhould aſſume the Power of Unchriſtianing us, for not practiſing of that which he himſelf practices ſo unſcripturally, and that according to the Sentiments of a conſiderable Part of Chriſtendom; having not one Text of Scripture, to prove that Sprinkling of Water in the Face, was the Water-Baptiſm, or, that Children were the Subjects of Water-Baptiſm in the Firſt Times. And yet this is all the Baptiſm the Biſhop practices, who ſeems ſo ſevere upon us. I think our forbearing of Water-Baptiſm, from a Belief and Senſe of the coming of the Inviſible Grace, ſignified by that Viſible Sign, cannot be reputed ſuch a Slight to Water-Baptiſm, as preſuming to alter the Manner and Subſtance of it's Firſt Inſtitution: For then it was in the River Jordan, now in a Baſon; it was then unto Repentance, now, to Children uncapable of Repentance. But that which perhaps miſled the Doctors of the Declining Church firſt into this Practice, being at the Diſtance of ſome Hundreds of Years from the Apoſtolical Times, might be the Suppoſition that Water-Baptiſm came in the Place of Circumciſion, and that being to Children, ſo might Water-Baptiſm too. But they forgot (among other Things, which even before that Time were crept into the Church, without Precept, or Evangelical Example) that Repentance was not made a Condition to Circumciſion, as it was to Water-Baptiſm. I would beſeech the Biſhop to tread ſoftly in this Matter; for if Water-Baptiſm ſhould indeed prove a Badge of Chriſtianity, he would be at a Loſs for one that would paſs currant in Scripture. Thus much for this Point.

What I have ſaid upon this Head of Water-Baptiſm, may ſerve alſo for what is commonly called The Lord's Supper, which the Biſhop reproves us for omitting to practiſe; urging Luke 22. 19. This do in Remembrance of me. And the Apoſtles Words, 1 Cor. 11. 24, 25. It is True indeed, Chriſt ſaid, when He Eat it with His Diſciples, That they ſhould do it in Remembrance of Him till He came. And this ſeems much more of the Nature of a Commiſſion, than that cited by the Biſhop for Water-Baptiſm: But the Limitation Chriſt gives to the Practice of it, and a Right and Proper Conſideration of the Import of His Words, and the Nature of the Thing, will beſt lead us to underſtand his Mind therein.

Firſt, This was alſo a Jewiſh Practice, as well as Water-Baptiſm, and ſo in Nature of no Goſpel-Inſtitution, but Temporary in it's Uſe.

Secondly, Chriſt ſeems by this, to break, or open to them, what was ſo hard for them to bear, to wit, His Departure and Death, by a Token of Memorial till he ſhould come to them again.

Thirdly, Chriſt takes Occaſion from thence, to ſhew forth to His Diſciples the Myſtical Supper they ſhould Eat, and the Fellowſhip they ſhould have with him, when he came again.

Now we believe this Coming was Spiritual, ſuitable to that Saying of his, I will drink no more of this Fruit of the Vine, till I drink it New with you in the Kingdom of my Father: And ſome here ſhall not taſte of Death, till they ſee the Son of Man coming in his Kingdom, Matt. 16. 28. Again, He that dwelleth with you, ſhall be in you, John 14. I in them, and they in me, Chap. 17. All which plainly imports a Spiritual Coming. Alſo Rev. 3. 20. Behold I ſtand at the Door and knock, if any Man hear my Voice, and open the Door, I will come in to him, and will ſup with him, and he with me, which was ſaid near Forty Years after his Aſcenſion. Now ſince this is acknowledged to be an Outward Sign of an Inward and Inviſible Grace, what can Outward Bread and Wine more properly Signifie and Reſemble, than an Inward Supper? And if ſo, the Words may Reaſonably be read thus, Eat this Supper of Outward Bread and Wine, till I come into, and Sup with you, and be your Supper, that am the Bread and Wine from Heaven which Nouriſhes the Soul unto Eternal Life.

Fourthly, The Kingdom of God being Spiritual, and in the Soul, ſuch ſhould be the Ordinances of that Kingdom. Now Chriſt tells the Phariſees, Luke 17. 20. The Kingdom of God is Within. And the Apoſtle Paul, Rom. 14. 17. ſaith, The Kingdom of God is not Meat and Drink, but Righteouſneſs, and Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt: But the Outward Supper is Meat and Drink, and therefore not of the Kingdom of God, which is not Meat and Drink, but Righteouſneſs, Peace and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt. And this was made Uſe of by Chriſt, in the State of Humiliation, before his Death, and the pouring forth of the Holy Ghoſt, to faſten upon his Diſciples that were Weak, and of Little Faith, the Remembrance of him, till they ſhould know him with them, and in them, by His Spiritual Appearance (as He was the Lord from Heaven, the Quickning Spirit) according to his Promiſe. For if the Scripture be conſulted, we ſhall not only find that Chriſt Reproves the Apoſtles for their Infidelity in him, but after all the Example, Precepts and Miracles they ſaw by him, and that he had ſo very lately left them with ſuch Aſſurances of 1698. his coming to them again; yet when Mary, &c. brought them the Tidings of His Reſurrection, it is ſaid Luke 24. 10, 11. Their Words ſeemed to the Diſciples as Idle Tales, and they believed them not. Which ſufficiently ſhews the low State they were in, or that at leaſt they needed a Sign or Token, as that of the Supper to Commemorate Him. But this Reaſon, which is yet True, does not Credit it's Continuation; for when the Spirit was come, or Chriſt in his Spiritual Appearance, their Eyes were opened, and they ſaw then it was the Spirit that Quickens, the Fleſh profiteth nothing, John 6. 63.

Fifthly, Moſt certainly Chriſt meant no leſs, when he preach'd himſelf the Bread that came down from Heaven, John 6. 31. to 52. and that they that would have Life Eternal, muſt Eat his Fleſh, and drink his Blood; That is, they muſt feed upon Spiritual Food; Not the Outward, but Inward Supper; the Thing ſignified, and Subſtance it ſelf. For Chriſt oppoſes himſelf, who is the Bread of God, to the Bread their Fathers Eat in the Wilderneſs, who were Dead, which was of an Elementary Nature; therefore it can never be that ſuch Bread as periſheth, ſhould be the Bread of the Evangelical Supper, when Chriſt by Compariſon, undervalues it to the Bread he had to give them.

Sixthly, Our Bleſſed Lord, Mark 7. 18. taught, That it was not that which went into the Man, that defileth the Man, becauſe it went but into his Body, and not into his Heart; and if ſo, the Argument is undeniable, that it is not that which goeth into the Man, that is, into his Body, and not into his Heart, that Sanctifieth the Man: But Material Bread and Wine goeth only into the Body, and not into the Heart; therefore they cannot Sanctifie. The Import of Chriſt's Words is plainly this, Meats and Drinks neither Defile nor Sanctifie; they neither Benefit nor Harm any one upon a Spiritual Account: Conſequently Elementary Bread and Wine cannot be the Evangelical Supper, but a Figure of it, which is ended in Chriſt the Bread of God, that cometh down from Heaven, John 6. 31, 32, 48, 49, 50. That a Man may Eat of, and not Dye: The Subſtance of all Shadows; for ſaith the Apoſtle, the Body is of Chriſt; and where that is, our Lord tells us, Luke 13. 37. the Eagles are gathered together: Where the Apoſtles Wiſe Men, 1 Cor. 10. 15. ſeek for the True Supper, which Nouriſhes the Souls unto Eternal Life.

Seventhly, But the Biſhop will have this Supper four Times repeated in the Scripture of the New Teſtament, beſides that of the Apoſtle Paul, which muſt be his Miſtake ——— ſince there is no Command to practice it beyond that very Time, but in Luke 22. 19. if there it ſelf. For tho' his Eating of the Paſſover is there related, as alſo in Mark and Luke, it was but Once done; and the Command, This do in Remembrance of me, is only Once Related among the Evangeliſts, as well as it is Once Commanded. And would we be ſtrict with the Biſhop, we need not allow him that Command to reach farther than the preſent Time in which it was given; for This Do, or, Take Eat, are equally in the Preſent Tenſe, for thereby you ſhew forth my Death. And the following Words, viz. I will Drink no more of This Fruit of the Vine, until that Day when I Drink it New with you in my Father's Kingdom, Mat. 26. 29. farther explains it. Thus Mark has it, 14. 25. Verily I ſay unto you, I will Drink no more of the Fruit of the Vine, until that Day that I Drink it New in the Kingdom of God. Luke 22. 18. gives it thus, I ſay unto you, I will not Drink of the Fruit of the Vine till the Kingdom of God ſhall come. Now it is plain that Chriſt refers them to the Spiritual Supper, which we Prefer and Practice, and which is the Supper Signified by that of Outward Bread and Wine, that was to ſerve till the Kingdom of God came, and then he would Communicate with them in a Way Suitable to his Kingdom: Which Kingdom as before ſaid, is not Meat and Drink, but Righteouſneſs, Peace, and Joy in the Holy Ghoſt. And as the ſame Apoſtle has it, 1 Cor. 4. 20. The Kingdom of God is not in Word but in Power; of which Power, and it's coming from on High upon the Apoſtles, Read Acts 1, 6, 7, 8.

For when they aſked Chriſt, Lord wilt thou at this Time Reſtore the Kingdom again to Iſrael, and that He told them, 'Twas not for them to know the Times or the Seaſons which the Father had put into his own Power. He alſo adds, But ye ſhall receive Power after the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you, and ye ſhall be Witneſſes unto me, both in Jeruſalem and Judea, and in Samaria, and in the uttermoſt Parts of the Earth. This Power was the Kingdom of God, For it ſtands in Power, ſays the Apoſtle; but it ſeems he thought fit to wave their Queſtion, as to a direct Anſwer, and left it a Secret to be revealed unto them, when the Holy Ghoſt ſhould come, and the Power from on High ſhould fall upon them: And thus he takes his Leave of them, and is immediately received by a Cloud out of their Sight.

Before I conclude this Paragraph, I would obſerve, Firſt, That it was the Paſſover and Cuſtom of the Jews, which, properly ſpeaking, we conceive hath no Juſt Plea to continue as a Goſpel-Ordinance, or Inſtitution, ſince it was a Type of Him to come, and therefore ended, as to Inſtitution, by His Coming.

Secondly, That the Evangeliſt John, the Beloved Diſciple, that lay in the Boſom of Chriſt, does not ſo much as mention it, or Water-Baptiſm, as left by Chriſt, to be continued by His Followers. Concerning the Spirit's Baptiſm, tho' he uſes not the Word Baptiſm, he is very full, John 14th, 16th, and 17th Chapters, where he tells them, That he would ſend them the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, to lead them into all Truth, and that he would dwell with them for ever. I ſay it ſeems very improbable, if not incredible, that what the Biſhop ſtiles the Badges of Chriſtianity, in his 17th Paragraph, ſhould be wholly forgotten by ſo Great an Apoſtle of Chriſtianity.

Thirdly, And as the Beloved Diſciple ſays nothing of theſe Viſible Signs, which the Biſhop calls the Badges of Chriſtianity, ſo neither are they made an Article of any of the Ancient Creeds Extant, which certainly does not make for their Credit or Authority: Since had they been of that Importance they are now by ſome eſteemed, we cannot think they would have been forgot by the Compilers of thoſe Creeds.

Fourthly, The Apoſtle Paul, though he repeats the Tradition he received of the Lord's Supper, that Night he was betrayed, does not injoyn it; but as often as the Corinthians did it, he tells them, they ſhould Do it in Remembrance of Chriſt: Which is as far from commanding it, as it would be, if the Biſhop ſhould ſay to his Friend, As often as he comes to Cork, he ſhould come and Eat with him, an Obligation upon that Perſon to come often to Cork. So that tho' the Apoſtle bids them, that as often as they did it, they ſhould Do it in Remembrance of Chriſt, yet he does not thereby bid them do it often, if at all.

Fifthly, And whereas the Biſhop would make it a freſh Revelation to the Apoſtle, when he ſays, for I have received of the Lord, that which alſo I delivered unto you, I muſt diſſent from Him. I cannot apprehend that means any more than this, That what Account he had received of Chriſt's Eating the Supper with His Diſciples, the Night before He was Betrayed, the ſame alſo he had Delivered unto them: For what Need could there be of an Immediate Revelation, for ſo late a Fact, ſo well Witneſſed by the Diſciples? But if my Reader will peruſe that Part of the Chapter which relates to the Supper, he will find the Streſs lies upon Remembring of the Lord, which is indeed our Daily, Indiſpenſible Duty; and he that lives without it, may be ſaid to Live without God in the World; of which thoſe Corinthians at that Time ſeemed ſo Inſenſible, and as ſuch are ſeverely reproved by the Apoſtle, being Irreverent, Greedy, and Drunken, hardly fit for the Sign, and leſs able to diſcern the Thing Signified.

Sixthly, Nor does the Apoſtle ſeem to recommend this Practice, but rather reprehend the Abuſe of it; and if my Reader will look back to the foregoing Chapter, from the Beginning to the 18th Verſe, he may find a more Spiritual Supper, and Myſtical Bread and Cup hinted at by the Apoſtle, as well as Mat. 26. 29. Rev. 3. 20. by our Lord Jeſus Chriſt Himſelf: Which is indeed very Copiouſly expreſs'd by Luke, in the Parable of the Supper, Chap. 14. from the 16th to the 24th Verſe, where One that was at Meat with Chriſt, ſpeaking of the Bleſſedneſs of Eating of Bread in the Kingdom of God, Chriſt takes Occaſion to ſhew forth the Goſpel-Supper by a Parable, viz. A certain Man made a Great Supper, and bid many, but they refuſed, upon divers Pretences, and came not; He ſent out a Second and Third Time to invite an Inferiour Sort of Gueſts, and they came to the Supper, that is, they Received the Goſpel, which is the Power of God to Salvation; and the Evidence, as well as Means of it: Which Chriſt in the 27th Verſe farther expreſſes thus, viz. And whoſoever doth not bear my Croſs, and follow me, cannot be my Diſciple. Now the Croſs of Chriſt, the ſame Apoſtle alſo ſays, Is the Power of God, 1 Cor. 1. 18. All which refers to an Inward and Spiritual Work, and Supper, and that they who Receive Chriſt in Spirit, Sup with Him in Spirit, being the Partakers of His Spiritual Supper, which Chriſt promiſes, and prepares for all thoſe that Open at His Knocks, the Door of their Hearts unto Him, Rev. 3.

Seventhly, But beſides what I have ſaid, both from Scripture, and the Nature of the Thing, in Proof of Chriſt's Spiritual Supper, and Defence of our Diſuſe of the Viſible Sign, the Biſhop himſelf does the ſame Thing, in relation to another Ordinance: For our Lord Jeſus Chriſt did as Solemnly Command His Diſciples to Waſh one another's Feet, as to Eat the Supper. The Paſſage is large and edifying, and I muſt recommend it to my Reader, to peruſe in his Bible, John 13. but that Part of it which more ſtrictly concerns this Point, between the Biſhop and me, I ſhall repeat here, Verſes 12, 13, 14, 15. So after He had waſhed their Feet, and taken His Garments, and was ſet down again, He ſaid unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Maſter and Lord, and ye ſay well; for ſo I am; if I then, your Lord and Maſter, have waſhed your Feet, ye alſo ought to waſh one another's Feet! For I have given you an Example, that ye ſhould do as I have done to you. Thus Chriſt Commanded His Diſciples, not only by His Authority but Example. Now does the Biſhop and his Friends follow Chriſt's Example, and obey this Precept? He and they know they do not. What muſt I infer from thence, that the Biſhop is No Chriſtian? I ſuppoſe he would take it very ill from me, tho' he has treated me and my Friends after that Sort. But I will ſhew him a better Example, and ſuppoſe he thinks, that if Chriſtian Miniſters and People walk Humbly towards God, and one with another, they fulfil this Commandment, tho' they diſuſe the Sign, by which the Lord Jeſus expreſs'd and recommended Humility to His Followers: Now that which excuſes the Biſhop, in Reference to this Ordinance of Waſhing of Feet, will alſo excuſe our Diſuſe of the Supper, viz. Our Eating of the Spiritual Bread and Wine of the Kingdom; the Thing Signified by the Outward Supper. But it is an Error incident to Frail Man, to prefer the Practice of thoſe Things that have a Shew of Religion, and have leaſt of Uneaſineſs, and of the Nature of the Croſs of Chriſt in their Performance. Juſt thus it is eaſier to Receive the Supper, than to be Humble, if not eaſier than to Waſh Feet: For one is but a Memorial of Chriſt, but the other perhaps is a Reproach of preſent Practice, and to be ſure a Command to Mortification and Self-Denial, the hardeſt Leſſon in Religion. And who knows but for that Reaſon it has been drop'd ſo long; ſince it muſt be very uneaſie for People to continue a Cuſtom, to which their Daily Practice is ſo Viſible a Contradiction: Though I hear the Roman Biſhop mocks the Text Once a Year.

Eighthly, But in Relation to the Supper, we farther ſay, the Practice is varied; Then they Sat; now One Sort Stands; Another Walks; a Third Kneels, a Fourth Lies down upon the Ground, as in the Eaſt-Countries. The Romans have One Opinion, the Greeks another; and the Lutherans and Calviniſts divide, to Great Bitterneſs, in their Sentiments about It.

Ninthly, Again, In thoſe Days they were Diſciples, ſuch as followed CHRIST, now All are admitted that profeſs Chriſtianity, tho' they do not follow Him, or forſake any Thing for His Name-Sake, or keep any of His Holy Precepts, Matthew the 5th, 6th, and 7th Chapters.

Tenthly, Nor is this All we have to ſay, to juſtifie our Diſuſe of this Practice: It is too much Look'd at, and Relied upon by the People: And indeed is become a Kind of Proteſtant Extream Unction; for if the Generality of them can but have it Adminiſtred juſt before they Die, they are apt to preſume upon it for an Acceptance in the other World. And indeed it is very frequent, if not Natural, for many Men to excuſe their Diſobedience by Sacrifice; and where Ceremonies, or Shadowy Services are continued, People reſt upon the Obſervance of them, and Indulge themſelves in the Neglect of the Doctrine of the Croſs of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt. I need not look far, nor yet the Biſhop, for a Proof of what I ſay; we can hardly miſs, which Way ſo ever we throw our Eyes, the more is the Pity: And as this is no ſmall Abuſe of Primitive Practice, ſo no ſmall Argument for our Diſuſe of it. For when the Brazen-Serpent was Over-valued by the Jews, God, that had commanded it, for their Benefit, ſtirred up Hezekiah to deſtroy it.

Eleventhly, Beſides, theſe Things are become Matter of Gain, and made a Sacerdotal Revenue, not to ſay Merchandize; which has alſo help'd to Scandalize People of Tender Conſciences, who think it a Prophanation of Religion, to ſuffer any Part of it to be Exciſed to the People, that ought to be Free.

Twelfthly, But paſſing that by at preſent, and ſuppoſing Water-Baptiſm and the Supper were not Antiquated, but ſtill in Force, Who is there Qualified to Adminiſter them? Who has Received a Commiſſion, or the Mind of the Holy Ghoſt, and Power from on High to perform theſe Things? For if thoſe that hold they are in Force, have no Divine Force or Authority, to Qualifie them to Adminiſter them, there will be but a Lifeleſs Imitation, inſtead of an Edifying Reality. Which leads me to what I promiſed long ſince, That I would at the Cloſe of this Diſcourſe, ſay ſomething of the True Ground of our Difference and Diſſent.

I ſay then, that where we are ſuppoſed to differ moſt, we differ leaſt; and where we are believed to differ leaſt, we moſt of all differ: Which I explain thus. It's generally thought, that we do not hold the Common Doctrines of Chriſtianity, but have introduced New and Erroneous Ones in Lieu thereof: Whereas we plainly and entirely Believe, the Truths contained in the Creed, that is commonly called The Apoſtles; which is very Comprehenſive as well as Ancient. But that which hath affected our Minds moſt, and engaged us in this Separation, was the Great Carnality and Emptineſs both of Miniſters and People, under their Profeſſion of Religion: They having hardly the Form of Godlineſs, but generally ſpeaking, denying the Power thereof; from whom, the Scripture warns Believers to turn away.

Next, Miniſters being made ſuch, and Preaching, and the People Worſhipping without the Spirit, confining the Operations of it to the Firſt or Apoſtolical Times, as if theſe did not want them as much, or that Chriſt would be leſs Propitious, where His Gifts were not leſs needful. I ſay, an Humane and Lifeleſs Miniſtry, and Worſhip, together with the Great Worldlineſs of Profeſſors, have occaſioned our Separation; and the Perſecution that has commonly followed it, hath abundantly confirmed our Judgment in that Matter. Hence it was we Retired our ſelves to wait upon God together, according to the Gift of His Holy Spirit, and as the Apoſtle Paul exhorted the Athenians, Acts 17. We felt after Him (with our Souls) if by any Means we might find Him, and hear what God the Lord would ſay unto us, who ſpeaks Peace unto His People, and His Saints; but let them never turn to Folly any more. We could not, I ſay, tell how to think that ſuch as God had never ſent, but Ran of themſelves, and were made Miniſters by Humane Learning and Authority, not knowing the Work of the Spirit to their Own Regeneration, could poſſibly Profit, or Edifie the People unto their Regeneration: And yet that is the very Work and End of the True Goſpel-Miniſtry; for no Man can guide another in the Way he never trod.

Beſides, we apprehended the Miniſtry was very much a Temporal Preferment, and therefore few were to be found among them, that did not court the Better Places; I mean thoſe that gave the Greateſt Pay, and by thoſe Methods mounted to Worldly Wealth and Honour, as the Reſt of the World did: Turning Alms into Dues, and by Law, Making Gifts Rents; and vexing thoſe extreamly, that for Conſcience-Sake could not uphold them: Which we thought very Foreign to a Primitive and Apoſtolical Spirit; and Short of a True and Through Reformation. This is not ſaid with any Diſreſpect to their Perſons, or yet Calling, ſimply conſidered; For he that deſires the Office of a Biſhop, certainly deſires a Good Thing; but the Holy Ghoſt in thoſe Days, had the Making of them; and the Good Thing then was their Service, and not Revenue, or Worldly Dignity. They were then not only No Lords, (One being their Lord) but they Lorded it not over God's Clergy or Heritage, which was the People in thoſe Days, for ſo the Word κλήρων ſignifies, tho' it is now aſcribed to the Miniſtry. Then the Ground of Propheſie, or Miniſtry, was the Revelation of the Spirit, in thoſe Ancient Aſſemblies, as may be read 1 Cor. 14. 29, 30, 31, 32. For All might Propheſy, that is, Preach, as the Spirit of God moved upon their Spirit, and gave them Utterance, both for Reproof, Inſtruction, and Conſolation: Now Study, Collection, and Memory.

In thoſe Days they Preach'd their Own Experience of the Work of God upon their Hearts, but moſt now Preach of the Experiences of Others, recorded in Scriptures, but according to their own and others Human Apprehenſions. To be brief, we Ground our Conviction, Converſion, Miniſtry, Prayer and Praiſe, upon the Light and Spirit of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, as the Powerful and Effectual Spring of our Religious Performances, and that alone which prepares the Soul, and Enables it to Perform thoſe reſpective Services and Duties in a Manner Acceptable to God. And that Miniſtry and Worſhip which ſtands not in the Spirit, and is not performed in the Preparation and Inſpiration thereof, but according to the Compilings, Traditions and Precepts of Men, we cannot allow to be Primitive and Evangelical, and conſequently cannot joyn in them. And we are ſatisfied that it is the good Pleaſure of God, that all who profeſs the Name of his Dear, and only Begotten, and Well-beloved Son, ſhould Acquaint themſelves with the Spirit of His Son in their own Hearts, in it's Reproof, Inſtruction, Conviction and Conſolation, that they may become Spiritually Minded, ſuch as mind Spiritual Things more than Earthly Ones; and that Daily ſow to the Spirit; that is, bring forth the Fruits of the Spirit, and become the Children of God, who are led by the Spirit of God. Now the Fruit of the Spirit is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-Suffering, Gentleneſs, Goodneſs, Faith, Meekneſs, Temperance: Againſt ſuch there is no Law. And they that are Chriſt's, have Crucified the Fleſh, with the Affections and Luſts thereof. But the Works of the Fleſh are manifeſt, which are theſe, Adultery, Fornication, Uncleanneſs, Laſciviouſneſs, Idolatry, Witchcraft, Hatred, Variance, Emulations, Wrath, Strife, 1698. Seditions, Hereſies, Envyings, Murder, Drunkenneſs, Revilings, and ſuch like: Of which I told you before, as alſo in Time paſt, that they which do ſuch Things, ſhall not Inherit the Kingdom of God, Rom. 8. 6. 14. Gal. 5. 16, to 24. Chap. 6. 7, 8. And under theſe Marks and Directions all People may examine themſelves, and know their Birth, Family, and Inheritance, whether they are the Off ſpring of God, and True Chriſtians, or Children of the Evil One: Thoſe that are Born of the Spirit, for whom is reſerved an Inheritance with the Saints in Light, or the Seed of Evil Doers; for whom is reſerved the Blackneſs of Darkneſs for ever. And truly it ſeems juſt with God, that thoſe who love Darkneſs better than Light in this World, ſhould have their Fill of it in the next; from which, God Almighty Redeem Thee, Reader, that thou mayſt walk in His Bleſſed Light, as He is in the Light, then thou wilt have Fellowſhip with the Children of Light, and the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt (the Great Atonement) ſhall Cleanſe thee from all Sin, 1 John 1. 5, 6, 7. yea, from the Filthineſs both of Fleſh and Spirit; and being Sanctified throughout in Body and Spirit, thou may'ſt live to ſerve God in the Newneſs of His Holy Spirit, Rom. 7. 6. and come to be made a New Man; that is another Man: From a Proud, an Humble Man; from a Paſſionate, a Patient Man; from a Rough, a Meek Man; and of a Cruel, Covetous, Unjuſt, Laſcivious, Intemperate, Vain and Ungodly Man, thou may'ſt become a Merciful, Liberal, Juſt, Chaſte, Sober, and Godly Man. And where this Change, this New Birth, or New Creature is not known, Sacrifices avail nothing, Religion is but Formality, and the Peace of God will never be their Recompence of Reward. But they that walk after this Bleſſed Unerring Rule of the New Covenant, Peace be on them, and Mercy, and upon the Iſrael of God, Gal. 6. 15, 16. who are the Circumciſion made without Hands, in putting off the Body of the Sins of the Fleſh, by the Circumciſion of Chriſt, Col. 3. 11. even that of the Heart, in the Spirit, whoſe Praiſe is not of Men, but of God, Rom. 2. 29. And who therefore Worſhip God in the Spirit, and have no Confidence in the Fleſh, Phil. 3. 3. that is, in Fleſhly Ordinances, or the Obſervation of Figures and Signs compounded of Outward Elements, which repreſent Heavenly Things: Wherefore the Apoſtle exhorted and commanded, Col. 2. 16, 17. Let no Man judge you in Meat or in Drink, or in reſpect of an Holy Day, &c. which are Shadows of Things to come, but the Body is of Chriſt; that is, Chriſt is the Subſtance of all outward Repreſentations, and they that have Chriſt, have the End of all thoſe Things: Who, Reader, we Labour and Pray, may be better known, received and obeyed, by the Profeſſors of His Holy Name and Religion. That as He is Given of God to be our Prieſt, Prophet, and King, we may all Know, Feel and Enjoy Him ſuch in our ſelves, and then the Kingdom of God will be come in us, and His Will done in our Earth, as it is in Heaven: Which God Grant, I moſt humbly beſeech Him.

For the Concluſion of the Biſhop's Paper, it is either Repetition or Reflection; the one needs no Anſwer, and the other wants a Defence. However, I will not have it ſaid that I either wave or ſuppreſs it, and therefore without any Reflection I will conſider his: Which ſhould have no Weight with my Reader, but againſt him.

He ſays in his 12th Paragraph, He pities us, thinking many of us Harmleſs and Well-Meaning, but under the Power of Strong Deluſions. And in his 13th Paragraph he gives us his Senſe of the Cauſe thereof, viz. That we make the Light Within, a Rule of Faith and Practice, Co-Ordinate, if not Superiour and Antecedent to the Holy Scripture. To prove which to be our Sentiment, he cites theſe Words out of our Goſpel-Truths, where ſpeaking of the Holy Spirit, and the Scriptures, we ſay, They are the Double and Agreeing Record of True Religion. Now if the Light and Spirit agree with the Scripture, there is no fear of contradicting the Scripture, and ſo we can have nothing to anſwer for on our Account of that Expreſſion, for what agrees with the Scripture, Eſtabliſhes it, inſtead of ſlighting or ſuperſeding the Authority of it.

And tho' we uſed no ſuch Words as Co-Ordinate, much leſs Superior and Antecedent, which is the Biſhop's Gloſs, to render our moſt True and In-offenſive Expreſſion ſuſpected, and make Way to faſten his ſuppoſed Strong Deluſions upon us, I will be very frank with him in this Matter, That we Believe the Scripture to be the Declaration of the Mind of the Holy Ghoſt, and therefore not Superiour to the Holy Ghoſt, but Credited, Confirmed, and Expounded by the Holy Ghoſt; ſo that without the Illumination of it, the Scripture cannot be underſtood by them that read it. The Grammatical and Critical Senſe of the Words, and Alluſions therein may be underſtood, but the Inſide and Spiritual Signification of them, is a Riddle to thoſe that are not Spiritually inſtructed therein, tho' they were never ſuch Grammarians or Linguiſts.

Again, Chriſt ſays, He that loves the Light, brings his Deeds to the Light, to ſee if they are wrought in God, John 3. 21. which was before the New Teſtament Scripture was in being; and this makes it both Rule and Judge of the Life and Deeds of Men. What ſays the Biſhop to this? Alſo John 14, 15, and 16th Chapters, Chriſt promiſes, The Spirit to lead them, his People, into all Truth, and this was not the Scripture, but ſomething at leaſt Co-Ordinate, if not Superiour and Antecedent to the Scripture, which is more than we ſaid before. Alſo the Apoſtle Paul tells the Romans, Chap 8. That as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the Sons of God: Then the Spirit is to Lead Believers, or they cannot be the Children of God. And that which Leads, Rules; and that which Rules, is a Rule to them that follow it. And the ſame Apoſtle referr'd the Galatians, Chap. 6. 15, 16. to the Rule of the New Creature to walk by, and that muſt be the Spirit, which begets the New Creature, viz. Chriſt formed in them, of whom he tells them, Chap. 4. 19. He travelled in Birth again. And the Beloved Diſciple expreſly ſays to the Chriſtians, in his Firſt Epiſtle, Chap 2. 20. That they had an Unction from the Holy One, and they knew all Things; that is, all Things they had to Believe, Know and Practice. And Verſe 27. he adds, But the Anointing which ye have received abideth in you, and ye need not that any Man teach you, but as the ſame Anointing teacheth you of All Things, and is Truth. If the Biſhop will break through all theſe Scriptures to undervalue the Light and Spirit of Chriſt (for no other Light or Spirit do we Aſſert, Recommend People to, or Contend for) that he might render us Guilty of Strong Deluſions, I cannot help it, but muſt be truly ſorry for him. But I beſeech him to have a Care that he does not, like the Jews of Old, undervalue, and indeed Blaſpheme againſt the Holy Light and Spirit of God, by miſ-calling the Fruits and Effects of it's Power, Strong Deluſions, and Transformations of Satan: For God will not hold ſuch Guiltleſs, in His Great and Terrible Day of Judgment.

And after all, the Beſt and Firſt Reformers and Martyrs, as well as Fathers, concur in our Aſſertion and Teſtimony: As Zuinglius, Luther, Melancthon, Calvin, Beza, Bucer, Peter Martyr, and Eraſmus too. Alſo our own Excellent Martyrs, viz. Lambert, Rogers, Philpot, Bradford, Hooper, Woodman, &c. That the Double and Agreeing Teſtimony of the Spirit of God Within, and the Scriptures of Truth Without, is the Rule and Judge of Faith, Doctrine and Practice; yea, that the Spirit is given to Believers, to be the Rule and Judge, by which they are to underſtand the True Senſe and Meaning of the Scriptures. Now let the Reader judge who gives the Trueſt Honour to the Scripture, the Biſhop, or the People called Quakers? They ſay the Scriptures have a Double Record, that is, the Evidence of the Spirit of Truth in the Hearts of Believers, as well as their Own: Or the Biſhop, who by his Way of Treating us, and our Principle, will allow us no other Evidence of their Truth, but themſelves. For to ſay the Evidence of the Spirit of God, with that of the Scripture, make a Double and Agreeing Teſtimony, is with him to undervalue the Scripture, and the Ground, in his Apprehenſion, of our Strong Deluſions. It muſt be my Turn to pity the Biſhop, and truly I do it with all my Heart, to ſee him ſtrain ſo Sound, as well as inoffenſive an Expreſſion, as that which he makes the Reaſon of our Deluſion, that he might have an Occaſion to leſſen our Credit with the Profeſſors of Chriſtianity, and eſpecially Proteſtants. Can it Diſhonour the Scripture, to aſſert the Evidence of the Principal and Author of the Scrripture, to back the Authority of the Scripture? Or doth not he rather leſſen the Authority of Scripture, that will not allow us another Evidence of the Truth of Scripture than it's own, for fear of Co-ordinacy, which was not ſo much as once intended to be inſinuated by us, nor do the Words import any ſuch Thing; yet it had been no ſtrong, nor any Deluſion at all, to give the Holy Ghoſt the Preference. But I ſhall keep to the Terms of the Paper, whatever the Biſhop is pleaſed to do; knowing that whoever concludes an Argument in Terms, not in the Queſtion, nor plainly deduceable from the Premiſes, is not A Fair Dealer in Controverſie: In which the Biſhop, if he pleaſes, may reaſonably enough think himſelf more than once concern'd.

Bleſſed be God we have known the Power and Efficacy of this Holy Light and Spirit of Chriſt in our ſelves, and being in good Meaſure Witneſſes thereof, we do not only ſpeak by Report, but by Experience. We had the Scriptures in the Days of our Ignorance, and Worldly-Mindedneſs, but diſregarding the Reproofs and Inſtruction of the Light of Jeſus in our Hearts, we never could come to know the Power of thoſe Truths the Scripture declares of. But when it pleaſed God, in the Riches of his Love, to cauſe His Bleſſed Light, that had Shined in Darkneſs, and the Darkneſs comprehended it not, to Shine out of Darkneſs, and give us the Know-

1698. ledge of Himſelf in the Face (or through the Manifeſtation) of His Son Jeſus Chriſt, we ſaw and bewailed our ſelves, and by an unfeigned Sorrow and Repentance, returned as Penitent Prodigals, towards our Father's Houſe ; and in this Turn, we were brought to Die daily to that Love and Satisfaction we once had in the Glory, Pleaſures, Honours, Friendſhips and Diverſions of the World, which now became Burdenſome, more than ever they were pleaſing to us.

Hence it was, and from no Siniſter Ends or Self-righteous Conceits, that we became an altered and a diſtinguiſhed People, in our Behaviour, Garb and Converſation : More Retired, Watchful, Silent and Plain, than formerly ; equally avoiding Luxury and Avarice. I ſay, it was the Work of God's Spirit upon our Hearts, who by his Light gave us to ſee the juſt Difference of Things, and to diſtinguiſh between that which pleaſed Him, and that which pleaſed Him not. And this Holy Pattern he gave us in the Light of his beloved Son, which we deſign to follow, as did the Holy Ancients ; and is a full Anſwer to the Biſhop's Unfriendly Queries upon our diſtinguiſhing Behaviour, in his 14th and 15th Paragraphs, as if it were not out of Fear towards God, or upon a Conſcientious Bottom, but to ſerve a worldly Turn ? For he aſks us, Is it not your main Aim, End and Study, by pretended Mortifications, to make your ſelves a Party Conſiderable ? Again, Are not to this Purpoſe your Different Garb, Speech, Looks and Geſtures, and to make your ſelves Remarkable, rather than out of a Senſe of Duty, or Conſcience of Obligation ? Which, as it is the worſt Conſtruction that the moſt Irreligious and Prophane could make upon our Behaviour, ſo I beſeech God to forgive the Biſhop, and make him ſenſible how little ſuch Treatment of ſtrict and ſober Living advances the Common Cauſe of Religion, and how much it indulges thoſe that know no Reins or Check to their Exceſſes in his own Church. But to go no farther than the Biſhop and his Clergy, pray who diſtinguiſh themſelves more by their Garb from other People than they ? Tho' I cannot ſay as much of their Behaviour. So indeed did the Chemarims, or black Coats of Old, and thoſe that wore long Robes in our Saviour's Time, but, as I take it, they went not without his Cenſure, while I think the Biſhop will find none in Scripture againſt our Plainneſs. But the Biſhop's Pontifical Robes, do, in my Opinion, look much more like Singularity and a Sight than ours ; for our Garb is like other Men's, only freed of their Superfluity. In ſhort, I wiſh him a better Underſtanding of the true Grounds of our ſtricter Conduct, and Where and Who they are that make a Trade of Religion ; that if he has any Shot left againſt Mercenary Religioniſts, he may not miſs the Mark next Time, but may make it his main Aim, End and Study, to Expoſe Hirelings and Hypocrites in their Proper Colours : And ſome are of Opinion he need not go far to find too many of them.

It is ſtrange the Biſhop ſhould be ſo unſenſible of the Advantage he gives me by his Queries, and what a wide Door he opens to a Severe Retaliation ; but I deſire to be Modeſt, and to be Silent upon ſuch Advantages, is, I think, to be abundantly ſo.

Howbeit, I muſt take Notice of one Expreſſion, for it may too ſeriouſly affect us not to be obſerved to him. When he aſks, If it be not our main End and Study, by pretended Mortifications, to make our ſelves a Party Conſiderable ? He adds, and ſuch to which, for Reaſons of State, Peculiar Privileges muſt be indulged. If this were not more than Mockery, I ſhould wave my Notice ; but calling the Meaning of the Government in Queſtion about the Liberty of Conſcience we enjoy, He muſt forgive me if I beſtow a few Remarks upon that Expreſſion. It ſeems then our Liberty flows not from the Inclination of the Government to Liberty, leſs from Compaſſion, and leaſt of all from Juſtice and a Chriſtian Principle. Which Motives carry with them a Proſpect of the Continuance of Liberty, if not for Liberty's Sake. But the Biſhop believes no ſuch Thing, and if he would not have us of his Mind, he did weakly to tell us ſo. Well, then, we are all of us to take his Advertiſement, that our Liberty holds but by ſlender Threads, and a Reaſon of State, and not of Nature, Right or Chriſtianity ; which certainly is not to beſpeak this Conſiderable Party to the Advantage of the Government : And for which I think the Biſhop a very moderate Stateſman, and the Government as little beholding to his Politicks as we are to his Charity. However, we will have a better Opinion of our Superiors Regard to Liberty, and conclude that their Inclination equals their Diſcretion, and that their Judgment, as well as Prudence, is on that Side. Let the Biſhop ſay what he pleaſes. And tho' he deſerves it not at my Hands, I could almoſt perſwade my ſelf to think that he does not begrudge us, and means not ſo looſly as he writes. But be it as it will, That God that has up- held us by his free Spirit to this Day, through many and great Afflictions, we firmly believe will ſuffer nothing to attend us, that ſhall not in the Concluſion work for his Glory and our Good, if we continue ſtedfaſt to the End, in the bleſſed Way of Righteouſneſs, wherein he has ſo often and ſignally Owned and Preſerved us; notwithſtanding the Violence of Open Enemies, and the Treacherous and Reſtleſs Endeavours of Falſe Friends.

His Sixteenth Paragraph multiplies Reflection, as before Obſerved, and Repeats what I have already largely anſwered; particularly that we own the Chriſtian Faith, which he makes us to Wave, Suppreſs, or at leaſt not to Confeſs; and have expreſſed it even in the Paper, he has faulted ſo much of Shortneſs, and that more fully, in all Points, than in the Creed commonly called the Athanaſian; except that about the Trinity, which ſeems to me leſs plain by that Copious Way taken to explain it.

He alſo ſays, We Reject all Outward, Poſitive Parts of Worſhip, which we deny: For we own and uſe Prayer, Preaching, and Praiſing in the Spirit, without which they cannot be Owned or Joyned with; for they cannot be ſo performed to Edification by a true Chriſtian Worſhipper; ſince God, who is a Spirit, will be worſhipped in Spirit, and in Truth, which Chriſt's Spirit muſt enable us to perform: And ſuch Worſhippers Only, God the Father ſeeks to Worſhip him: Implying he regards not other Worſhippers.

But Eſpecially, the Biſhop ſays, we reject Baptiſm and the Supper. We ſay, we do not Reject but Diſuſe the Signs, becauſe we felt the Inviſible Graces in our Souls they were Signs and Shadows of; and therefore not in Diſreſpect to the Signs, but in Reverence to the Divine Subſtance they ſhew forth, we diſcontinue their Uſe among us. They obtained Place in the Infancy and Twy-Light of the Church; in her more weak and Ceremonious Time, directing, as I may ſay, that Interregnum between the Law and the Goſpel, before the Diſpenſation of the Holy Ghoſt had Fully obtained Place and Pre-heminence in the Church. But of this I have been already very particular.

He grows warm in his 17th Paragraph and Epiſcopal; for he ſays, In a Word, I again Require you, as you will anſwer all your Secret Arts and Pretenſions at Chriſt's Tribunal, that you either Embrace and Profeſs the Entire Chriſtian Truth, in the Points wherein I have ſhewn you to be Defective; and that you receive the Chriſtian Seals or Badges, Baptiſm and the Lord's Supper; or elſe that you Deſiſt to lay Claim to the Name of Chriſtians.

But firſt I muſt return the Biſhop his Secret Arts and Pretenſions, In all which he is grievouſly miſtaken. For either I do not underſtand his Meaning, or I abhor it. Next, be it known to him, we Wave not, we Suppreſs not, but heartily Embrace and Profeſs, before the whole World, all Points of Chriſtian Doctrine, according to the Mind of the Holy Ghoſt, as I have amply ſignify'd before upon this Subject: And where the Biſhop takes Leave of the Text, he muſt excuſe me if I leave him to keep Company with it. We did not Entitle our Paper All Goſpel-Truths; but Goſpel-Truths, which extended ſo far as we were Tax'd with Error about thoſe Truths: And yet he muſt have but a little Charity that will not allow a Believer and Follower of thoſe Truths to be a Chriſtian. Nor indeed has the Biſhop given us the Articles of Faith he ſays we Wave or Suppreſs, or told us his own, or that One Church's Faith he would have us receive, as I have complained already. But that the Biſhop ſhould forbid us ſo much as to lay Claim to the Name of Chriſtians, unleſs we will Practice what he calls the Seals or Badges of Chriſtianity (which divers Churches in Chriſtendom think he miſuſes) is very Uncharitable and Dogmatical. But, beſides what I have ſaid at large in our Excuſe and Defence in that Matter, he produces not one Scripture that calls them either Seals or Badges. But yet there are other Things that are ſo repreſented by our bleſſed Saviour and his Apoſtles, which he takes no Notice of. As Matth. 16. 24. where, they that will be reputed Chriſt's Diſciples muſt take up his Croſs and follow him. Chriſt's Croſs is a Chriſtian's Badge and Seal of Diſcipleſhip. Again, John 13. 35. He ſaid to his Diſciples, By this ſhall all Men know that ye are my Diſciples, if ye love one another. Likewiſe Matth. 25. 34, 35, 36. The diſtinguiſhing Character of the Laſt Day is not Water-Baptiſm and the Outward Supper, but Love, Mercy and Compaſſion; Bowels and Charity; not being Aſhamed or Afraid of Owning and Helping the Lord's Servants in their Afflictions, viz. I was an Hungry and ye gave Me Meat: I was Thirſty and ye gave Me Drink: I was a Stranger and ye took Me in: Naked and ye Cloathed Me: I was Sick and ye Viſited Me: I was in Priſon and ye came unto Me. This is the Chriſtian Badge that will be Recognized by our Lord

Jeſus Chriſt at the Laſt Day: We have his own Word for it. In all which he is ſo far from mentioning either of the other Badges, that, Luke 13. he brings in the Unhappy, that are on his Left-hand, uſing this Argument to engage him to receive them into Bleſſedneſs, viz We have eaten and drank in thy Preſence, and thou haſt taught in our Streets. A plain Inſtance they had the Uſe of ſuch Ordinances as the Biſhop reputes Badges of Chriſtianity; but it is as plain that ſuch Pleas would not do: For behold the Lord Jeſus ſays unto them in the Parable, I know you not, depart from me, ye workers of Iniquity! I recommend the Peruſal of the following Verſes to my Reader, which confirm my Senſe of the Text: For He ſpoke to an outſide People, that counted themſelves the People of God, and were Obſervers of Meats and Drinks, and Divers Waſhings: And that which was Doctrine and Caution then, is Doctrine and Caution now; for Truths holds the ſame to the End.

I might add Holineſs for a Characteriſtick, without which no Man ſhall ever ſee the Lord: and that neither Circumciſion availeth any Thing nor Uncircumciſion, but a New Creature, Gal. 5. 6. Alſo the Fruits of the Spirit, Chap. 5. among which there is not one Word about Water-Baptiſm or the Outward Supper, with many more Paſſages that are Cloſe and Cogent.

His Eighteenth and laſt Paragraph tells us, He will not judge us, and yet his whole Paper is but one Continued Judgment of us. But, from God, as he ſays, and, as his Miniſter, he bids us judge our ſelves. Firſt, We thank God we are before-hand with the Biſhop, having Judged our ſelves, and that by the Judgment of God upon us, and ſo have Right to Judge others according to that Judgment: Secondly, We have no Proof that the Biſhop ſpeaks from God to us: Nor can I tell how he ſhould, that does not acknowledge the Inſpeaking Word of God in the Soul. Thirdly, For his being God's Miniſter, he has not ſhewn us his Commiſſion yet, and I fear it will not be from Heaven whenever he does. But if my Reader will take the Pains of peruſing this very Paragraph, he will not only ſee a Judging Spirit, but that the Biſhop holds out abuſing us to the laſt, rendring us as bad as bad can be, viz. That we Subvert the Faith once delivered to the Saints, and equal our Conceits to the Divine Oracles, Uſing and Diſuſing what Parts of God's Inſtituted Worſhip we pleaſe; adding, I will not Interpoſe your making Gain your Godlineſs. But, as I have already taken ample Notice of this Charge, ſo I ſhall ſay no more of his Irreligious Slant at our Sincerity than this, That I cannot pretend to tell the Biſhop what Tribe of Men, in Chriſtendom, it is that have long made Gain their Godlineſs, and the Pretence of it their Worldly Inheritance; ſince he has been ſo much more Senſibly Inſtructed in this Affair than my ſelf: But one Thing I am ſure of, that if Gain and not Godlineſs was our Motive to be the People we are, we mightily Miſtook our Way when we left the Biſhops: For Afflictions, Spoils, Priſons, Baniſhments, yea, and Death it ſelf, have attended us, ſince God was pleaſed to manifeſt his Truth to us: And if under all thoſe Calamities that have followed us ſince we were a People, for the Sake of our Unfaſhionable Profeſſion, the Biſhop or any elſe is ſo Unnatural, as to envy us the Bleſſing of God upon our honeſt Induſtry, and to render that which is an Effect of God's Goodneſs, the Reaſon and End of our Religion, God forgive them. I could enlarge upon this Topick, but Time would fail, and the Diſcourſe ſwell beyond Bounds, as indeed it hath already, beyond my Expectation; for which I ſhould Excuſe my ſelf to my Reader, but that it was not Simply from the Regard I had to the Biſhop's Sheet, ſince that could not have deſerved this Notice from me, but might have been anſwered as Conciſely as that was written, had I only conſidered his Undertaking and Treatment, and not my Reader's Satisfaction, in the better Knowledge of our ſo much Miſrepreſented Perſwaſion: Eſpecially in a Nation, where of late I had Occaſion ſo Generally to Travel, and the Biſhop's Paper hath been, I ſuppoſe, as Generally Diſpers'd. I owe it therefore to My Profeſſion, to My Self, and to the Country, to Vindicate the One, and to Expreſs my Chriſtian Regard and Acknowledgement to the Other; having received a more than common Civility from the Inhabitants in General: To whom I wiſh, as to my own Soul, the Saving Knowledge of the Truth, as it is in Jeſus: That Chriſtians Indeed, and at Heart They may be, to the Glory of God their Creator, and the Eternal Salvation of their Souls, through Jeſus Chriſt, the alone Redeemer, to whom with the Father, by the Holy Ghoſt, be all Honour and Glory, Thankſgiving and Praiſe, World without End.
